A little later the Mail and Express, Col. Elliott F. Shepard's paper, came out in an editorial asserting that Collis was right, and the Advocate and Ingersoll wrong. Colonel Shepard attempted to prove that Lincoln was a church-member. But the only proof adduced was a deliberate forgery, executed by the pious editor himself. He quoted from Townsend's "Library of National, State, and Individual Records" a letter which Rev. Dr. Smith, formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church of Springfield, Ill., which Lincoln sometimes attended, wrote to Lincoln's partner, W. H. Herndon. This letter, as penned by Dr. Smith, and as it appears in Townsend's work, contained the following words: "Mr. Lincoln became a member of my congregation."

As there is but one copy of Townsend's work in existence (it is simply a set of scrap-books stowed away in Columbia College), the editor of the Mail and Express thought a forgery would not be detected, and so he expunged the word congregation and forged the word church, making the passage read as follows: "Mr. Lincoln became a member of my church." After presenting the forgery the editor coolly adds: "So that General Collis was right at first when he asserted that Mr. Lincoln was 'a member of a Christian church,' Colonel Ingersoll notwithstanding."

A reader of the Advocate has taken its editor to task for not accepting Colonel Shepard's "correction." He says:

I have expected you, ever since that was published, to correct your mistake. Now that you have got home, I hope you will attend to it, as it is very important.

To the above Mr. Buckley thus spiritedly replies:

You will wait a long time for us to correct that proposition. We positively know that Mr. Lincoln never was a member of a Christian church. He stated this himself on various occasions to Bishop Simpson and others. We also believe that the Rev. James Smith never claimed that Mr. Lincoln was a member of his church.

But while Mr. Buckley is so ready to admit that Lincoln was not a church-member, he spurns the claim that he died a Freethinker. With his characteristic good manners he refers to "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" in the following courteous language:

An Infidel ranter has issued a book, which, with a show of fairness, gives a long list of witnesses to Lincoln's Christianity, and a much longer list of those who witness to his Infidelity; but in analyzing them he proceeds on the principle that every one who says that Mr. Lincoln ever changed from the Freethinking, coarse Infidelity of his early life, and became a man of prayer, and believed that Jesus Christ was a teacher come from God, is a liar; and everyone who says that he always remained an Infidel tells the truth. A more grotesque pretense of analysis of testimony was never seen."

He omits the name of the book and its author, lest some reader of his paper should procure a copy and discover his misrepresentations. He implicitly asserts that the only answer I make to the Christian witnesses is a simple denial, when he knows that the testimony of every witness is carefully reviewed and refuted by convincing proofs that neither the editor of the Advocate nor any other Christian claimant can overthrow. Not to go over the whole ground again, take the testimony of his Methodist witness, the Western Christian Advocate. This witness testified as follows:

On the day of the receipt of the capitulation of Lee, as we learn from a friend intimate with the late President Lincoln, the cabinet meeting was held an hour earlier than usual. Neither the president nor any member was able for a time to give utterance to his feelings. At the suggestion of Mr. Lincoln, all dropped on their knees and offered in silence and in tears their humble and heartfelt acknowledgment to the almighty for the triumph he had granted to the national cause.

In answer to this evidence, I presented a letter from Hon. Hugh McCulloch, a member of the cabinet, containing the following explicit denial:

The description of what occurred at the executive mansion when the intelligence was received of the surrender of the Confederate forces, which you quote from the Western Christian Advocate, is not only absolutely groundless, but absurd. After I became secretary of the treasury, I was present at every cabinet meeting, and I never saw Mr. Lincoln or any of his ministers upon his knees or in tears.

The proof adduced in answer to the other witnesses was equally conclusive.

That Lincoln was, during a portion of his life, a Freethinker is admitted by Mr. Buckley and every other claimant. That he was an unbeliever up to the time he assumed the presidency is generally conceded. All that is claimed is that he changed his views after going to Washington. Did he change his belief after going there, as claimed? In refutation of this claim his private secretary, Col. John G. Nicolay, thus testifies:

Mr. Lincoln did not, to my knowledge, in any way change his religious ideas, opinions, or beliefs from the time he left Springfield till the day of his death.

Leonard Swett, who placed him in nomination for president, writes:

You ask me whether he [Lincoln] changed his religious opinions toward the close of his life. I think not.

His lifelong friend and executor, Judge David Davis, after his assassination, thus wrote:

He had no faith in the Christian sense of the term.

Another lifelong friend, Judge Nelson, writes:

In religion Mr. Lincoln was about of the same belief as Bob Ingersoll, and there is no account of his ever having changed. He went to church a few times with his family while he was president, but so far as I have been able to find out he remained an unbeliever. . . . I asked him once about his fervent Thanksgiving message and twitted him with being an unbeliever in what was published. "Oh," said he, "that is some of Seward's nonsense, and it pleases the fools."

Hon. John B. Alley, member of Congress from Massachusetts, and one of his closest and most valued friends, says:

In his religious views Mr. Lincoln was very nearly what we would call a Freethinker.

Col. Ward H. Lamon, his biographer, the man who was delegated to conduct the living Lincoln to Washington, who was at his side during all the eventful days that he remained there, and who with Judge Davis and General Hunter was selected to carry the remains of the dead president back to Springfield, thus writes regarding his belief:

Indefinite expressions about "Divine Providence," the "justice of God," the "favor of the Most High," were easy and not inconsistent with his religious notions. In this, accordingly, he indulged freely; but never in all that time did he let fall from his lips or his pen an expression which remotely implied the slightest faith in Jesus as the son of God and the savior of man.

Listen to the testimony of the grief-stricken wife, uttered immediately after his death:

Mr. Lincoln had no hope, and no faith, in the usual acceptance of those words.

This and the testimony of a hundred other witnesses that this "ranting Infidel" has produced shows that Mr. Buckley is as far from the truth in asserting that Lincoln was a Christian as Colonel Shepard was in asserting that he was a church-member.

The apparent frankness of this Methodist editor in affirming that Lincoln was not a church-member is, aside from the motives that inspired it, admitted and commended. But a spirit of fairness and candor is so foreign to the editorial columns of the Advocate that one naturally looks for some other motive than an inherent desire to reveal the truth. What was the motive in this case? Why is the editor of the Advocate, while so tenaciously claiming that Lincoln was a Christian, so eager to show that he was not a church-member? Because in doing this he plucks a feather from the cap of Methodism's great rival, Presbyterianism. To admit that Lincoln was a church-member is to admit that he was a member of the Presbyterian church. Had he attended the Methodist church instead of the Presbyterian church, the admission that he was not a church-member would never have graced the columns of the Advocate. J. E. REMSBURG.

Some Gentle Hints.

AN APPEAL IN POETRY.

The following poetical appeal won for its author, the editor of the Rocky Mountain Celt, the prize of $1,000 offered for the best appeal poem to newspaper subscribers to pay up their subscriptions:

Lives of poor men oft remind us
Honest men won't stand a chance.
The more we work there grows behind us
Bigger patches on our pants.

On our pants, once new and glossy,
Now are stripes of different hue,
All because subscribers linger
And won't pay us what is due.

Then let all be up and doing;
Send your mite, however small,
Or, when the snows of winter strike us,
We shall have no pants at all.

A NEW GAME WORTH TRYING.

There is a new game called "Editors Delight," remarks a contemporary, and is played in this wise: Take a sheet of ordinary writing paper, fold carefully, and enclose a banknote sufficiently large to pay all arrears and one year in advance. What adds handsomely to the game is to send along the name of a new subscriber or two accompanied by the cash. Keep an eye on the editor if he smiles—then the trick works like a charm. Try it once.—Logan Nation.

The Freethinkers' International Congress.

A good many of the Freethinkers of the country grabbed old Father Time by the forelock and pulled it so vigorously that they got into Chicago several days ahead of the meeting, and did up the odd corners of the World's Fair, so as to have that off their minds and to be left free to attend to the more important work of the Congress. The Editor of our "Children's Corner" was on hand bright and early and held little congresses of her own at her quarters when she was not on the Fair grounds. Messrs. Putnam and Charlesworth's rooms were besieged early and late, and they had small chance to be idle. They made a rather unfair division of the labor of showing visitors around, Mr. Putnam assiduously attending to the wants of the ladies and Mr. Charlesworth to the less pleasant task of installing the male visitors in suitable quarters. Among the earliest arrivals were Dr. Foote, Captain Adams, T. B. Wakeman, Charles Watts, and John E. Remsburg. There were visitors from South Dakota, Arizona, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, New York, Massachusetts, Indiana, and Mrs. P. Van Houter, eighty years old, came all the way from California, all alone. She left her husband at home to take care of things. He wanted to come, she said, but then, some men had no sense. He was too old to make the journey. There were Mr. Adams, Mr. Kendall, Mr. Crouch, Mr. Thorpe—who had a little present for Watson Heston—Mr. Bogard, Mr. and Mrs. Pfaff, Mr. Simpson, Mr. Campbell, and about forty more who wanted their TRUTH SEEKER, but didn't leave their names. The first thing they asked was, "Howdy?" and the next was, "Where is your brother?" When the Man With the Badge-pin reads this his bosom will probably swell with pride, but he needn't write, for the compositors here have forgotten how to decipher his penmanship, which his wife picks out for him on a typewriter.

Previous to the assembling of the Congress the Freethought Federation had the good fortune to encounter some of the Christian bigots and find the opportunity for a nice little legal fight. They bearded the bigot in his own den with some TRUTH SEEKER books, like "Old Testament Stories," "Crimes of Preachers," "Religion a Curse," etc., and the aforesaid bigot had no more sense than to resort to physical force to suppress opposition. It all occurred before THE TRUTH SEEKER scribe got there, and Mr. Charlesworth has sent us the following account of it:

FREETHOUGHT FEDERATION OF AMERICA.

SUIT TO RECOVER $10,000 DAMAGES.

The Federation has entered into litigation for the purpose of vindicating at law the rights of Freethought in a place of public resort. We feel that Freethought, as a principle, has far too long been content with the position assigned to us by the religious world; we have therefore entered upon a determined course to test "the powers that be" and find out, if possible, what jurisdiction they have in matters pertaining to the rights of the general public. President Bonney, of the World's Fair Congress Auxiliary, has not only refused to grant us the privilege of holding our Congress in the Art Institute, but also took upon himself the right to trample upon individual rights in a dastardly manner indeed. A Freethinker, Edwin D. Betts, had obtained a concession from Secretary Carpenter, of the Art Institute, to put up a stand for the sale of Freethought literature in the hall set aside for such purposes. He was also under contract to give twenty-five per cent. of his receipts from the sale of his books to the authorities in charge. The Federation had supplied him with some books, among them being Putnam's "Religion a Curse, Religion a Disease, Religion a Lie," "Crimes of Preachers," and the "Bible Picture Book." There were also a few leaflets from the American Secular Union. Everything progressed favorably until the preachers began to flock around the little stand, and upon learning the nature of the works exposed for sale in the hall among religious texts and tracts, they gave vent to their indignation by complaining to Mr. Bonney, and demanded they be excluded from the hall, and Mr. Bonney himself, a pious fanatic of the Wana-maker brand, complied with the request of his brethren in God, and at once ordered Betts from the place under pain of immediate arrest.

An officer was called in and ordered to arrest him, but the policeman evidently knew how far his authority extended in the matter, and refused to do so, telling Bonney "that he should use his own judgment in the matter." Failing in his purpose here, he next ordered his assistants to remove the table and books by force, an order with which they readily complied. The table was removed and its contents covered up. Acting upon our advice, Betts removed the cover and again exposed his stock of books for sale. We promised him all the assistance we could give in vindicating his rights in the place. It was not long before Secretary Carpenter, under instructions from Bonney, took away the table and its contents by force, and dumped them into a corner.

The Art Institute was built by public subscription; as such it belongs to the public, and in this action Bonney and his associates have not only violated the rights of the public in a public hall, but they have also committed a flagrant breach of the contract they had made with Betts. They have committed an outrageous wrong upon the man, and in addition to this they have confiscated his property, and Chief Bonney, together with Carpenter, are defendants in a suit to recover $5,000 damages from each. The Federation will stand by Betts to the last. We are determined to defend him and if possible to punish Mr. Bonney for his illegal conduct. The Federation has supplied the funds to fight the case, and we shall fight it to the end. C. Stuart Beatty, president of the Chicago Secular Union, has charge of the case for Betts.

The hall at 517 West Madison street was sufficiently decorated to remove even the gloom of a rainy day; flags of all nations hanging around, between festoons of our national colors, with an American flag of sufficient size to suit anybody's patriotism draping the front of the stage. The Liberals of Boulder, Col., sent a magnificent banner, emblazoned on both sides, which, suspended in the center of the hall, caught and held the attention of everybody. There was music galore, everyone was glad to be there and to see everyone else, and the actors at the religious congress could have learned several lessons in good manners and good nature had they remained to attend.

Sunday morning the hall was early crowded with visitors from all over the country. It was soon evident that more Freethinkers were to get together at this Congress than ever before in this country. On the platform, beaming benignantly upon the audience, were S. P. Putnam, T. B. Wakeman, Dr. Foote, Jr., Captain Adams, Miss Wixon, Mrs. Freeman, John R. Charlesworth, Charles Watts, and Franklin Steiner. Judge Waite opened the Congress after a piano selection by John J. I. Remsburg. Mr. Waite's address was a criticism of the religious congress, which had developed various religious feuds. That congress had, he said, left it for us to show the evil in all religions, which had developed into a gigantic trust, to the detriment of the people of the country. The Congress had assembled to hasten the day of downfall of this trust. He referred to the fight between the Federation of Freethought and Mr. Bonney over THE TRUTH SEEKER books, and thought that Mr. Bonney had made an error almost equal to some of the mistakes of Moses. He adverted to the prosecutions of the Seventh Day Adventists, saying the Protestants had, for the sake of a temporary advantage over the Freethinkers, laid the foundation of Catholic rule.

After a few words of more direct welcome to the city, Mr. Waite read a letter from Colonel Ingersoll regretting that business engagements prevented him from attending the Congress.

Mr. Putnam's welcoming address was also a criticism of the bigotry exhibited in the religious congress, which excluded even Christians from their deliberations. He said:

Freethought is as broad as the universe. As Harriet Martineau defines it, it is "the unfenced universe." That is the universe in which I believe, a universe without fences, without creeds and without chains.

The ringing words of Thomas Paine are the platform of Freethought. Words so beautiful and sublime that they will never cease to inspire the human race—"The world is my country, and to do good is my religion." But even more wonderful in their far-reaching meaning are these profoundly significant declarations: When one said, "Where liberty is there is my country," with deeper insight Paine replied, "Where liberty is not, there is my country." Paine recognized the eternal battle of liberty. There is always conflict. We cannot escape it. We must fight. It is forced upon us. There is wrong in the world, there is injustice and suffering, and we must do our best to relieve mankind of these burdens.

There has just been held a Parliament of Religions. It professes to be harmonious and to unite the world. But it excludes the Freethinker and it excludes the Christian. Every religion under the sun can defend its tenets, no matter how barbarous. But the Seventh Day Adventist is not allowed to make a plea for human rights, nor the Freethinker to make a plea for human reason. All who partake in the Parliament must be believers in something. They must have a religion, a faith. But he who stands for the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of our country, and for science, is not allowed a voice.

Is that harmony? Is that progress? Is that civilization? Even when by a fair commercial transaction, paying for the privilege, we had secured a place for the sale of Freethought literature in the Art Institute, we were threatened with arrest, our books were seized and thrown into the waste basket, with the remark, "We will not have such blasphemous stuff sold in this building." Is this liberty? Is this American citizenship? Is this justice?

Freethought must meet the combat; the combat for freedom fought through all the ages and not ended yet. But Freethought in its nature is not destructive. It means the highest and grandest progress of man. It is liberty! It is human brotherhood! We know not the fatherhood of God. God we cannot find in earth or heaven. But man is ever present with us, and man we must help. With man we must work. With man, each for all and all for each, we win the victory and a paradise on the bosom of this green earth itself. We look not above but beyond to the golden to-morrows of humanity.

Freethought is science. It is all the truth that man can attain. Freethought is humanity. Its goal is the noblest virtues of which the mind of man is capable.

We recognize the priceless treasures of the past. Every age has toiled for us. We are all together—the past and the present—and as the universal world through vast periods has given us the glory of to-day—so we should return to humanity the splendid gift and labor not for ourselves but for all the future.

Wherever we are, in the wilderness blazing the pathway of human progress, on the picket-line or in the grand army with music and banners floating, still in our hearts shall ring the voices and songs of poets and martyrs, while before us shall ever shine the glorious rays of the morning.

Captain R. C. Adams followed Mr. Putnam. His address was an advocacy of American union regardless of boundary lines. He was quite willing to haul down the flag of the Canadian Secular Union and work under the banner of his American brethren when that could be brought about. He also advocated commercial union between the two countries, and wanted this Congress to be the pioneer of such affiliation, as well as of the time when all the countries of the world should be united. He indirectly jumped on the Comstock postal laws, saying the mails should be free. He told of a visit to E. H. Heywood, both when he was serving his time, and upon his liberation, and wanted to rush along the time when such outrages were impossible. He also wanted Liberals to do some constructive work, leading the people out of the hovels of superstition into the palaces of reason.

Jens L. Christensen was to welcome the Germans, but, owing to the serious illness of his wife, could not attend. Herman Boppe was substituted and spoke a few words in German, and judging from the applause, about half the audience could understand his eloquent words.

Charles Watts brought greeting from G. W. Foote, who had sent a letter to read, but which had failed to arrive. He also read a letter from George Jacob Holyoake, prefacing it with a few words describing the situation in England. Mr. Watts, as a disciple of Mr. Holyoake, was a Secularist, pure and simple, not depreciating other reforms, but emphasizing above all others the more important work of Secularism or Freethought. After reading Mr. Holyoake's letter, which was characteristic, Mr. Watts delivered the greeting to American Freethinkers from seven thousand members of the English Secular Union. Mr. Holyoake wrote:

TO THE INTERNATIONAL FREETHOUGHT CONGRESS OF CHICAGO, Ladies and Gentlemen: I am far enough away to be a Mahatma, but I have no pretensions that way. I know no ghosts, I see no spirits, and, like the Prophet Esdras, can only address you on "things of this world, and such as pass before me in daily life." Mr. Charles Watts, the representative of Free and Secular thought from Great Britain, who will deliver this message for me, is known as an Unsettler of Opinion. That is the name given to those whose aim is to substitute new opinion for old—better for bad. The American poet Whittier owned that he once turned the crank of an opinion mill. I have worked in a similar way a good portion of my life; and, provided good material is used and the work turned out with good finish, opinion-making is as honest and useful a business as any going; and I hope your Chicago Congress will increase the demand for such produce.

In these days, when competition of all kinds is admitted on all hands to be more incessant, sharper, and more engrossing than ever, prudent people are obliged to be more economical than formerly in order to live. Every day there is less and less time to believe in creeds, and that of Christianity is the most ponderous, complex, and conflicting in the world. The Moslem creed is better suited to the exigencies of business—you believe in Allah and have done with it. It takes threefold more time to believe in three gods than to believe in one. It takes even preachers—who have nothing else to do—years to adjust the preferential claims of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to the ruinous neglect of secular duties—not to mention original sin, incarnation, salvation by faith, and other engrossing perplexities, which absorb an unconscionable amount of time. Therefore, whoever assists in simplifying Christianity and reducing its time-wasting tenets economizes human life and acts in accordance with the spirit of the age. Our English delegate therefore comes to you as an apostle of mental economy and progress.

For myself, I pray, in such imperfect way vouchsafed to me, that your International Congress may advance the principles of intellectual brevity and truth which they represent.

With greetings and regards, I am,

Very faithfully yours, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

The Committee on Credentials was then appointed, consisting of Franklin Steiner, Reuben Rush, and Herman Wettstein.

A soothing melody was then played upon the piano by young Mr. Remsburg, while a contribution was taken up. Adjourned to 3 o'clock.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

Mr. Waite first announced the Committees on Resolutions and Auditing, and Captain Adams, while waiting for the Edelweiss Zither Club, filled in the time with compliments to the German contingent. The club came in in the middle of one of his prettiest sentences, and blushed. The Zitherites were forced to play two tunes, and then Herman Boppe talked to the audience. Mr. Boppe is editor of the Milwaukee Freidenker and Die Moral der Republikanischen Weltanschauung, the first of which we know to be a fine publication and the latter we believe to be.

Mr. Boppe is a fluent speaker, fine looking, and held the attention of the audience even though some of them did not understand all he said. In English his speech reads, partially:

THE MORALS OF THE REPUBLICAN CONCEPTION OF THE WORLD.

This essay was an elaborate and convincing series of arguments for a determined and enthusiastic campaign against every sort of superstition, against the so-called hydra of revealed religions and against every compromise at the cost of self-esteem for present gains, and a warm appeal for united aggressive action to all Freethinkers and Liberals against bigotry, dozing pseudo-tolerance, and blindfolding from the hands of the church saints.

In his introduction Mr. Boppe quoted a passage from the German philosopher Arthur Schopenhauer, where the benefits and harms accruing to human kind from revealed religion are weighed against each other, the balance showing that religion is a very useful complement to the temporal power wielded by despots and monarchs who claim divine authority, and an obvious obstruction to the progress of the subjects in the direction of humanity, liberty, and happiness. How did it happen, though, that Schopenhauer was in favor of monarchical governments?

Mr. Boppe showed that this great pessimist was sometimes inconsistent with his judgments, a fact that cannot be explained away. Nevertheless, Mr. Boppe continued, though Schopenhauer was wrong about his preference for monarchy, he was right in his judgment about religion. "Indeed, it is natural that revealed religion and absolute monarchy must stand and fall together. Both are powers that originated in a remote past when mankind was still imbued with childish conceptions, and when the yoke of ignorance pressed heavily upon the nations." The Christian religion, the vaunted religion of love and charity, the religion of the lowly and miserable, is praised by the very class of people who abuse it in every way in order to continue their usurped privileges and authority. It has inculcated to its adherents a conception of the world and of this earthly life that, as experience and history show was more a curse than a blessing, more an obstacle than a compass to the state of bliss and happiness which its servants, the clergy, hold out to the down-trodden miserable.

Then Mr. Boppe gave his view of the dark aspects that the Christian-Jewish conception of the world presents to the liberal, unbiased man of culture. The "modern" conception of the universe (Weltanschauung) he said, was not properly called so, for various reasons; he preferred the appellation "republican," for the reason that the era that was dawning upon mankind was imbued with republicanism first, last, and at all times, and that the old or Christian-Jewish conception had lost its foothold not only among the educated, but just as much among the large masses who are in favor of republican institutions. It was true that there were among the former still many, even of the most reputed leaders in society and statesmanship, who, from ignoble interests or from indifference still cling to that old conception, defend it against the new aggressive spirit of the reformers, and view it often with favor, albeit they do not believe in it themselves. Mr. Boppe threw a couple of side glances upon some of the representatives of this multifarious group of guardians of the faith and good morals. So he chastised with well-placed sarcasm the illustrious monarch of all the Germans, emperor William, for such witty sayings as, "Suprema lex, regis voluntas," "Hoc volo, sic jubeo," "Sit pro ratione voluntas." Another sarcastic mention he made of the liberalizing journalistic press, which attempts to be tolerant where no application of tolerance is called for. And a well deserved charge of sarcasm Mr. Boppe inflicted upon the attempt of the saints to close the World's Fair on Sundays.

In the course of holding up into the proper light for comparison the two conceptions of the world and life, namely, the Christian-Jewish and the republican or modern, Mr. Boppe touched upon the much-argued question of the moral responsibility of man. To the contrary assertions of the religionists notwithstanding, he affirmed and showed conclusively that the republican conception of the universe and of life does not abolish or diminish in any way the law of responsibility for human actions. Nor does science intend to abolish or diminish it. He quoted a number of passages from Schopenhauer and others in corroboration of his positions. But, on the contrary, Mr. Boppe went on, the moral responsibility founded upon the new "Weltanschauung" assumes a much more exalted character such as no revealed religion is able to impress upon the ethics of a church, because it urges man to do the right and good for his own earthly sake, not for the promise of future reward, nor does it forbid the wrong and bad actions with the threats of eternal cruel punishments.

On the one side, said Mr. Boppe, we thus find belief, authority, and thoughtless habits, with an arbitrary supreme monarch behind it who forbids criticism, abhors thinking, investigation, development, and liberty; on the other, everything that leads to independence, freedom, republicanism, progress, and knowledge; this is the dilemma from which thinking mankind is to emerge sooner or later. In passing to the critique of the Jewish-Christian Decalog Mr. Boppe showed the barbarous position in which the female sex has been placed by the old conception of the universe and reviewed the practical application the churches and princes had made of the Ten Commandments. He quoted a number of German philosophers of the best repute in the course of the lecture, among whom may be mentioned, beside Schopenhauer, Bertha von Suttner, Victor Scheffel, Johannes Scherr, B. von Carneri, Carl Heinzen, and, as a matter of course, our own esteemed Robert G. Ingersoll. Mr. Boppe wound up with an earnest, hearty appeal to all Freethinkers for a greater display of courage, manliness, and energy as against the hitherto lame spirit of dread indifference and heartlessness.

He was followed by Mr. Wakeman with an address on "Christianity and After."

Mr. Wakeman said:

The World's Fair and the immense secular civilization it represents, shows that already the "religions" represented in the Congress of all Religions have really outgrown their creeds, and become sentimental aspirations for a better future. Unfortunately their creeds in becoming discredited, have become fossils and retard these higher aspirations for the future which are supposed to be based upon them. In this regard even Christianity is no exception. Evolution shows that it too, as to its early history and the creeds which grew out of it, is a hopeless fossil. All of the true life which it had, has passed into the higher and newer forms of sentiment, thought, and action. Upon these newer forms which may be condensed into the new Trinity, Liberty, Science and Humanity, Freethought and Secularism has taken its stand and presents them as the foundations of civilization in the place of theology, whether Fetichistic, Polytheistic or Monotheistic. It takes this position not at all out of mere wantonness, but from the firm conviction that this new Trinity of Liberty, Science and Humanity only can furnish the condition, the means and the motives of the higher progress and civilization.

This conviction arises from the fact that Evolution has hopelessly discredited the histories and creeds of every one of the old religions. In this age Progress is dragging them around like so many dead bodies—simply out of ancient habit and affection for them—much as mother-monkeys persist in carrying their dead offspring. The dead past cannot become a solid and healthy foundation for the future until it is buried—and buried intelligently and scientifically, pursuant to the law of evolution—and the true is recognized in its place.

Liberals do not, or at least need not, attack Christianity as was done fifty years ago, as a bundle of frauds, but as an outgrown stage of illusions, which now evolution applied to mythologic history happily explains. The same laws of evolution which, under Niebuhr, Grote and Kuenen, explains the early religions of Rome, Greece, and Palestine, explains the subsequent success of Christianity.

What then was Christianity? Evolution answers that it was a temporary phase of the messianic belief and craze of some of the Hebrews in which they believed that the kingdom of the heavens was to be introduced on earth by their Christ among the generation then living. It was in its origin a purely temporal and temporary arrangement. The attempt to extend it to the Gentiles by Paul gave it only an enlargement of territory and numbers, but did not change the nature of the original craze, as anyone may see by his first epistle to the Thessalonians. The attempt to measure or guide the evolution of civilization around the planet by this temporary hallucination—utterly baseless in fact and utterly impractical now—is the crowning absurdity of our age. The first glance through the telescope of Galileo proved that there was no kingdom of the heavens and remanded the whole scheme to the realm of the utterly impossible. Early Christianity was simply a messianic craze of no more possible validity than that of our modern Millerites and Adventists, who periodically sit around in their night-shirts waiting for the angel Gabriel to come down from these heavens, as Christ said he would, and blow his big horn to resurrect the dead.

The folly of basing upon or mixing up the actualities of life with these crazy phantasies is wicked beyond expression in this age of science and evolution. Akin to this illusion is the delusion that a personal Christ did come and speak and act as is represented in the so-called gospels. Evolution explodes the whole story. The Messianic Apocalyptic literature, of which only one specimen, the Revelation, appears in the New Testament, gives the start of belief that Christ would and then that he did come, but only in the spirit, as in the first, the gospel of Mark, at the baptism, at the walking on the sea, at the transfiguration, and at the ascension. Peter, Paul, Stephen, John, etc., never saw him, except as in "Epiphany," a "materialized" Messiah. Then they wrote letters, then the "driftwood" gospels were evolved to make the story credible to those who had not these visions, especially to the Greeks. Read the Revelation and the letters and then the gospels, and you will get the true order of the way in which the craze originated and was propagated, and then sought to be proved by gospels made out of prophecies, miracles supposed to refer to a Messiah, and to which many poor fellows who sought to play that role before the destruction of Jerusalem contributed by acts, etc., attributed to the synthetic name, "Jesus, the Christ."

Thus Jesus Christ, as a definite person, passes from history, as the positiv school has for years contended. To continue to use this ideal character, as though it was of our age and perfect and sufficient as a model or guide, or that some sort of belief about him, or it is in any way anything but an obstructive waste of brain effort, thought, and feeling is to sacrifice the present and future to the past.

This Christ conception may be useful as an ideal, if properly used as a symbol of the higher union and integrative progress of mankind. But all of the old views and creeds about it are deadly obstructive, and must be replaced by the new, true, and all-sufficient foundation of which verifiable science is the corner-stone.

And then, what after? We answer in the three phrases of the glorious Thomas Paine: "The Age of Reason," "The Religion of Humanity," "The United States of the World"—that is to say the era not of superstition but of human providence, cooperation, and welfare—the higher integration lifting Humanity above all "the religions." To prepare for and to aid the incoming of this new era is the fundamental purpose of Freethought, Secularism, and of every interest and sentiment which has brought this Congress here.

May its deliberations and influence be a memorable step of progress toward the realization of that era throughout the world.

Professor Montegazza's work, "The Physiology of Woman," the poems of Miss Ada Negri, the rising Lombard poetess, "The Myths of the Bible," by Emile Ferrier, and all the works of St. George Mivart have been added to the papal "Index," hence must not be read by lay people.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

The well-known Spanish Freethinker, Sr. Ramón Chies, editor of Las Dominicales, is very ill.

A new Freethought society, Ljus och Frihet (Light and Liberty), has been formed in Finspong, Sweden.

Victor E. Lennstrand, although he cannot be present at our Congress at Chicago, will send a paper on the Freethought movement of Sweden.

M. Tartarin, founder and president of the Freethought Society of Argenteuil, France, was cremated April 13th. Over six hundred persons followed his remains to the crematory.

Victor E. Lennstrand delivers lectures nearly every day in various towns in Sweden. The meetings are all well attended and numerous are the signatures to the protest list.

The "Penny Fund" of the French Freethought Federation amounts to 833 francs, while the money subscribed for the Freethinkers' Home amounted to 742 francs for the month of July.

Our friend Edward Scwella has been ill again—this time from an attack of sciatica. We hope the Austrian Freethought champion is well by this time and hewing away at orthodoxy.

The Freethinkers of the department Seine-et-Oise, which includes the city of Paris, held an anti-clerical congress at the Masonic Temple at Versailles on July 2d. The congress was numerously attended.

We are the recipient of the latest, the May circular of Comité d'Études Morales. The circular contains the revised manuscript of "The Astronomic Origin of the World," which is to form Chapter I in "Principles of Scientific Materialism."

Of 4,735 Congregationalist sky-pilots in England, 1,050 have received no "call" from the Lord as embodied in a congregation. Perhaps a few of these idle workmen in Mr. G. Hovah's vineyard will be compelled to saw cordwood or engage in some other useful occupation; at least we hope so.

A heavy mortgage has settled on the roof of the church in Newton, Ireland. To induce it to leave a grand prize-game will take place on the Lord's day, September 10th. He that throws the most ayes will get $25; he that throws least, $15. Entrance fee, three pence per ticket, to be devoted to paying the debt.

August 19th and 20th were sad days for mankind. Ninety young girls, pupils of parochial schools, took the white veil in the cloister of Notre Dame. Ninety young people forever lost to coming generations, society, and the state. And yet church schools are not taxed. They benefit mankind, society, and state, our Solons exclaim to defend their boodle legislation.

During the late dry season in Italy it was a spectacle of every-day occurrence to see processions of peasants, dressed in thick clothing and carrying iron chains and heavy stones, calling upon the saints to send a little rain. These processions were ordered by the priests, who, let it be remembered, carried neither chains nor stones, nor dressed themselves as were they to undertake an Arctic expedition.

According to the "World Almanac," 1893, the population of the United States is 62,622,000. The total of members of all churches, 20,400,000, which leaves to the world and the devil 42,132,000 individuals. And yet every day we are told we are a "Christian nation." Still, perhaps this little is due to the fact that there is church property worth $450,000,000 untaxed in this country. Freethinkers, organize and wipe off that shame!

In the state prison of Lansing, Kan., there are at present 418 prisoners. Of these 102 are Methodists, 90 Baptists, 80 Catholics, 68 Christians, 31 Presbyterians, 29 United Brethren, 9 Episcopalians, 7 Congregationalists, and 2 Quakers. The parents of 344 prisoners were church-members, and the same number of prisoners had attended Sunday-school. What does it say in the "cornerstone of civilization," the holy word of God? "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Letters of Friends.

The Truth Seeker and Heston are Needed.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed check for $5. for two years' subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER, in continuation of my present subscription. We need your help in the battle for free speech and free mails, and Freethought needs the aid of Heston. Yours truly, HENRY M. PARKHURST.

Vindicating Paine.

GREEN ISLAND, N. Y., Aug. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed I send check for $6, $3 of which is for the paper another year, the other $3 for the Monthly Truth Seeker Library. My object in subscribing for that is because I see something of the vindication of Paine in it. I had some talk with a minister, who said he had been told that Paine was a drunken sot, and everything bad. I want to show the minister that Paine was not so bad as the Christians have made him out to be. Yours respectfully, HIRAM WILBUR.

A Challenge to Ingersoll

DORCHESTER, WIS., Aug. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As the name of your paper claims, you are after the truth. I therefore in the interest of truth send a challenge to any Infidel in these United States of America to meet me in an open and public discussion on scriptural truths. I will defend the pure gospel doctrine against any and all comers.

I am not a preacher, but a Freethinker, as I live in a free country. But I believe in scripture, and what is more, I profess to know what it teaches us. The Bible is not the book of mystery some would make it out to be, but a book of good, sound information.

Especially should I like to meet Mr. R. G. Ingersoll. If he thinks a poor old soldier is not able to cope with him in a field where so little cash would be realized, the challenge is good against any other gentleman of these United States of America.

Respectfully, A. F. F. JENSEN, Commander H. F. Pruyn Post 168, Department of Wisconsin, G. A. R.

[There is no doubt that our Christian friend can be accommodated by the Freethinkers of Wisconsin. He thinks he is a Freethinker because he "lives in a free country"! But does he? And are the Sabbatarian bigots Freethinkers because they live in America?—ED. T. S.]

Samos Parsons.

SAN JOSE, CAL., June 14, E. M. 293.

MR. EDITOR: I see in THE TRUTH SEEKER of June 10th that friends of Samos Parsons neglected to notify you of the death of that brave old man, and that you learned the news only from the Investigator. We plead guilty to the charge of negligence.

The friends of Samos Parsons embrace everybody who ever knew him. He commanded the confidence and respect of all men, of whatever creed or no creed—saint and sinner alike. The inclosed tribute from his children, received by us June 2d, brought to us the first sad news. Although the family had previously notified us of his declining health, still we were surprised.

To those who have personally met this manly man nothing can be said. To those who have not had that pleasure it is only necessary to say that language can never pay a just tribute to his worth. "None knew him but to love him, none named him but to praise."

On coming to this city to mail his last donations to Freethought friends, he spent an hour with us—the last hour. And I cannot describe the pleasure, the supreme satisfaction, it gave this noble man to distribute those amounts, aggregating $200, among the friends of the cause he so dearly loved—the cause of Humanity. He only manifested uneasiness in not being able to do more.

What an example for Liberals to emulate!

This brave hero has reached his journey's end, Freethought has lost a staunch supporter, the human race a friend, the family a loving father. But the tireless worshiper of liberty, Samos Parsons, has found that dreamless, painless, peaceful rest that marks the end of each and all.

The family has our heartfelt sympathy. To the departed lover of truth and hater of wrong, farewell. L. R. TITUS.

"Old Testament Stories" On Their Travels.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Sept. 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $6—$3 for the Truth Seeker Library, 1893; $2 for these works: "Martyrdom of Man," "Infidel Death-Beds," "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" "Poverty, Its Cause and Cure," by M. C. H.; "Large or Small Families?" "Why Do Men Starve?" "The Land Question;" $1 to International Congress of Freethinkers. I have the "Old Testament Stories." It has been going around from one to another—perhaps one hundred had a look at it—but could not induce any to buy or send for one. Still, there are many of them that read the Bible with their eyes open. I have also "Superstition in All Ages," in German and English. It is fun to see how Catholics get taken in on that.

I have been away from home, and in looking over accumulated TRUTH SEEKERS I found in July 29th what Mr. Ingersoll said on the Chinese. While reading, I could not help thinking some parson had got the better of him. I am in California over forty years; have worked for Chinese; they have worked for me; have been in their slums, business houses, restaurants, theaters, and had them as tenants. Mr. Ingersoll makes a great mistake by comparing them with the Moors of Spain and Huguenots of France. The Moors and Huguenots were the better classes, the intelligent of those countries. They were for Spain and France—it was their home. To come in contact with them was elevating. With the Chinese in this country it is the opposite; to come in contact with them is degrading. The Chinese have no interest in America, except what money they can make. WM. RENNER.

A Seven Years' Siege.

MOSCA, COL., Sept. 14, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Nearly seven years ago I first set foot in the San Luis valley. I have had my experience of "pioneering;" lived in this country when it was a howling wilderness (literally "howling," if we count coyotes), and I now see it transformed, as if by magic; but it is the modern magic of almost omnipotent labor. Away for miles in every direction (this valley is a vast, level plain, and is larger than the state of Massachusetts, including Boston) can be seen cultivated farms. I thought I saw its future as plainly as I think I can that of the orthodox religion, and I see that it will take a great deal longer to subdue Christianity than to cultivate the wildest parts of the globe. But what a lovely picture the change makes! Look over this immense San Luis, now a thickly populated farming community.

My pioneering has indeed been a novelty blended with severity. Who is it that has said a lecturer is good for nothing—except to talk. In these seven years I have succeeded in subduing 270 acres out of 320. Bronzed, toughened, healthy by physical toil, I am now ready again to strike for mental liberty everywhere I can get a hearing, on every platform free enough for free speech, all along the Pacific coast. The rest of my days I want to spend, I am anxious to spend among Freethinkers, doing our Freethought work. I hereby notify my Ukiah, Cal., friends who have kindly extended me a call to deliver them a course of lectures, that I will be with them shortly after my arrival in Elsinore, where I may be addressed in future.

Change the address, please, of my copy of your paper from Mosca, Col., to Elsinore, Cal. Let me hear from Liberals of California, Oregon, and Washington. I hope to meet many old friends in those states, people that I used to greet in Michigan, Minnesota, Massachusetts, and elsewhere.

The first week of October will find us flying toward the setting sun.

W. F. JAMIESON.

Letters From a Protestant.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19, 1892.

To ARCHBISHOP RYAN, Philadelphia, Dear Sir: I wish to call your attention to the following extract, taken from to-day's World:

The Catholic church has always been the friend of popular education. Common schools, for the instruction of the masses of the people, were first founded by the church, and the progress of knowledge is in accordance with her long-settled policy. When I hear of antagonism between educational institutions, I feel that there should be instead the antagonism of emulation only.

You are credited with the authorship of the above remarks. Can it be possible that a man of your acknowledged attainments, and living in the very center of a highly cultured community, could have the effrontery to utter such untruthful sentiments! Pray, where does, or has, the practice of your church been to institute schools for the education of the masses? In what part of Europe, if you please? I am a reader of history and am a little familiar with current events of the day as portrayed in the newspapers, and I am at a loss to find any country in Europe that is dominated by your hierarchy that supports or endows any such institutions. Take Italy to-day, for instance—the head-center of your boasted church—and what is the condition of its masses in comparison with any other nationality in Europe where your system is not dominant? Look at Spain and Portugal, also Ireland. Why not meet the question in manly fashion and do less dodging?

Your system is despotic, and no man knows it better than yourself. Your motto is, "Ignorance is the mother of devotion." Devotion to what? To images and pictures which your hierarchy set up to be worshiped in lieu of the unseen; and hence idolatry is practiced as a substitute for true worship; hence it is that ignorance lends a charm to your system. In proportion that education and intelligence prevail images and idolatry are ignored. Out, I say, upon such nonsense. You restrain your people from reading the Bible; even your own version does not circulate generally among them. Your church is purely despotic in its spirit and practice, consequently there can be no affinity between it and its Protestant opponents. We don't want any intermeddling with our schools by your church. No! no! let us alone, I pray you, and we will agree to let you severely alone. Mind your own business and teach your subjects what you please in your so-called religion and all will be well. Yours respectfully, G. W. W.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19, 1893.

To CARDINAL GIBBONS, Baltimore: Pray who are you that in this nineteenth century presume to talk so arrogantly?

Heavens! "Upon what meat has this our Caesar fed that he has grown so great?"

Presuming that the enclosed printed slip cut from a daily paper of September 13th contains your utterances, I would respectfully ask by what authority you dare arraign the motives and acts of the people of Rome for unveiling a statue erected in that city to the memory of a poor monk whom your infamous hierarchy burnt at the stake in the year 1600, for the monstrous crime of being a skeptic and daring in that age of darkness and intimidation to avow his disbelief in the absurd dogmas of transubstantiation and immaculate conception. For promulgating these views with honest intent he was hounded throughout Europe until at last, when he thought he was at rest in Venice, your devilish machine, the Inquisition, called him to account for the belief and expression of his opinions, and without right or reason condemned him to the stake and burnt his poor body on February 17, 1600. Oh, what a victory was this!

Now, pray consider where this outrage took place; in the city of Rome, the head-center of the papacy. And where, after the lapse of three centuries, was this statue erected? In the city of Rome. And what is the moral of this event? It is manifest to my mind that the emancipation of Italy from the thralldom of the papacy has given the Italian mind time and opportunity to reflect over the horrible crime of burning a poor, helpless monk for a simple expression of opinion, and after the lapse of three centuries they propose to do justice to his memory by daring to avow a man's inalienable right to his opinions, whatever they may be. This is all there is in it, and you and your machine may howl and bluster as much as you please. You can't alter the decrees that the people of Rome have put forth. That act was nothing more than a confession of pain and sorrow that their ancestors were so lost to every impulse of honor and independence of spirit when they stood by and suffered the perpetration of that dastardly outrage in the year 1600.

Romanism has become so thoroughly demoralized that I confess my surprise that a gentleman of your keen susceptibilities could any longer adhere to it, but perhaps the force and impulse of early training (and other causes) may justify your continued attachment to it.

This letter is prompted by no other feeling than one of honest indignation at your terrible arraignment of those people in Rome who have dared to offend your princely dignity. G. W. W.

Thinks the Populists More Pious Than Other Parties.

JEANNETTE, PA., Aug. 27, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In looking over your paper of a week ago I was surprised to read the letter of one of our so-called Freethinker friends, who protested against the way in which you handled the third party. If I am not mistaken, this person seems to be a Populist first and a Freethinker, last, and in my estimation cannot be very much of a Freethinker. What we need at this time are Freethinkers to the backbone, and not hypocrites. I would like to know what good it would do for us to support the third party, they being more in favor of uniting church and state than either the Republican or Democratic parties? And I believe this is the worst we have to fear from any party. Time after time I have seen where some one would exhort Mr. Ingersoll to lead this party, but he can see things in a much different light, and does not intend to make himself the footstool of schemers. In their preamble they ask for the blessing of God on their efforts, which shows that superstition is at the head, and the head will rule the body. I never can believe the third party will be a success among Freethinkers, as in this preamble they smell danger. One scheme after another has been tried by the religionists of this country to get a party in power whom they could control, but thank goodness they have not succeeded, and I hope never will. If anyone doubts my reasoning, let them watch the daily papers, and they will see for themselves whether I am right or not. The Catholics have a leader in the form of foxy McGlynn, while the ideas of Mrs. Lease in her lecture at Mount Gretna, Pa., would satisfy any sane person as to what party has her in hand. Here is one sentence spoken by her, which is a fair sample of the whole address: "The ministers of the gospel should be interested in this revolution for the cause of Jesus Christ and humanity. The time has come when politics must be discussed from the pulpit." McGlynn was to have been present, but did not put in an appearance. A nice pair of leaders for Freethinkers to follow. But, Mr. Schemer, you had better try some other plan than trying to intimidate the editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER to conform to your wishes by cutting off your paltry subscription. You have a wide-awake class to deal with when trying to ensnare us in your net, and your action if carried out by you would only show you up in your true form of a snake in the grass, as you appear to me to be too well educated to be ignorant of what harm you are trying to do. Your action would only cement Freethinkers more close together, and show them that the old Christian devil (who goes around seeking whom he may devour) is not dead yet. But, my friend, he has no power over us, as we are not citizens of his country, but are Freethinkers in thought and acts, and so cannot be third parties.

J. ADAMSON.

About the Cotton Picker.

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I see in your paper of Aug. 26th, my letter written to you July 27th, or previously. The situation is now different. At the time I wrote it, which was certainly some months previous to the date printed, the company was selling shares at $10 each, and the prospect was very bright for continuing the sale and an advance in the price.

Sometime about the commencement of the panic, the market for shares became very dull and but few or none were sold since, as the company did not reduce its price. But those who had bought shares were not all as firm believers as I am in the future of the Lone Star Cotton-Picking Machine Company. Some of them commenced to sell at any price they could get. I bought a considerable number at $4 per share, but none at any less price. Under the circumstances, I should not be willing to take money at the rate of $10 per share, to make a present to THE TRUTH SEEKER, when I know of parties who will sell stock at about a third of that price. I believe in the future prosperity of the company as much as ever. I mean to have THE TRUTH SEEKER, and Miss Wixon, and Mr. Watson Heston have one or more of the shares, if I have to make a present of them myself. I think sometime that they will be worth more than $100 each. But there is no hurry, and I may write you again. I would like that you should have as much as five or ten shares each, enough to amount to a handsome set out. I suppose if you make a life subscriber of me, while I give you the shares, you would feel better than for me to give them outright. I am now seventy years old.

I think I ought to say something about the Lone Star cotton-picking machine being shown in the World's Fair in the Texas exhibit. When I wrote, the intention was to exhibit it there, but these circumstances prevented: In the fall of 1890, the first machine made, which cost $20,000, was exhibited in Texas and worked well. The next fall, in 1891, there were eight machines, somewhat altered from the first one, which worked imperfectly in September and October, but were fixed and worked well in November and December. In the fall of 1892 about 35 machines were ready to work, but the picking spindles—of which there were 144 in each machine—commenced to break in the small gear that made them revolve, it being the wettest fall in the cotton belt for about twenty years or more. The inventor therefore concluded to remodel the machine, which he did, putting in 308 spindles instead of 144. This machine has been tried this year, and has picked 20 pounds in a minute, which is nearly twice what the older machine will do. It was also twice as strong, and weighs about 1,100 pounds, or about 200 pounds more than the other. As it was finished too late to put it into the World's Fair, the inventor absolutely refused to have it sent from Waco, Tex., where it now is. A good many boxes of last year's cotton crop plants, with the cotton on the bolls, are now at Waco, and I furnished some of the money to pay an expert, who is now on the way from New York, to give it a thorough examination and see it work. A friend, interested with me, who furnished more money than I did, has been to Texas several times and has seen the new machine work, speaks of it in the highest terms. The company is practically out of debt, and will have enough money to pay for 500 machines without selling a share of stock.

I believe every word of the above.

HENRY N. STONE.

The Physical Basis of Mind.

BLUFFTON, IND., Sept. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Materialistic philosophers divide the things of the known universe into force and matter. This classification is admissible for the sake of convenience and ready explanation, but is in fact erroneous.

So-called force never exists apart from matter.

Force is not an entity, consequently does not exist.

On close examination we find nothing but matter and its motion.

Latent force, so-called, is simply matter in a state of comparative rest, which, however, is capable of taking on a degree of action that may be communicated to the surrounding medium and cause more or less motion.

Whenever a substance of high stability undergoes change into one of less, there is always imparted to the adjacent medium a certain degree of motion. Thus, when a quantity of coal is consumed in the furnace of an engine, matter possessing great action is changed into a different condition containing less action, thence this difference of motion is transmitted to the water in the boiler, and ultimately throughout the entire machine.

There is never the least degree of motion in matter lost.

The smallest conceivable particle that matter has been divided into is called an atom. This is a particle so small that it does not admit of further division. Two or more of the atoms in close union constitute a molecule. This division of matter is of course only arbitrary, yet very useful to the chemist in combining certain proportional quantities.

The molecules, or infinitely small particles composing all material things, are in a state of perpetual vibration.

Every molecule in the universe has a certain peculiar action, differing from all others, except those of like kind, and not the least degree of this motion ever becomes actually lost. When coal or wood burns there is a union of the oxygen of the atmosphere and the carbon in the fuel producing a differently appearing substance altogether. The physical characteristics of both the oxygen and carbon entirely disappear, and the resulting product is carbonic acid gas. Now, the oxygen and carbon molecules have combined and taken on an entirely different appearance. Why? Because they no longer vibrate as they did. Besides, the "carbonic acid gas" has much less action than the aggregate motion of the oxygen and carbon molecules previous to their union. What has become, then, of this apparently lost motion? It has been transmitted to the molecules of the surrounding medium, and elevated their motion to that condition, which, when affecting our sense of temperature, we recognize as heat.

On the same principle electricity is generated. When there is union of two heterogeneous (unlike) bodies the molecular action of each differs from the other, consequently their motions do not harmonize, but antagonize; as the result of this antagonism a new mode of motion arises which we have learned to know as electricity, which phenomenon is nothing more or less than a peculiar mode of motion in matter.

Homogeneous (like) bodies do not generate electricity, because their motions harmonize.

Light is another phenomenon of matter, being a molecular vibration in straight lines.

The light of the sun is the vibratory action of that body communicated to the molecules of a subtle ether intervening between that great luminary and earth, through which medium waves of motion incessantly roll from the sun to the eyes of mankind. The heat rays are produced when the light ray comes in contact with the earth's atmosphere. The vibratory motion of the air molecules affects the light wave and a new action is generated, called heat.

The telegraph, telephone, phonograph, electric light, etc., are all operated on this same principle of motion in matter, in illustration of which we will refer to the modus operandi of the electric light.

Electricity having been generated and its circuit established, passes through the wire into a delicate carbon film placed by means of a closed glass bulb in vacuo. Now, there is no light seen along the wire, but just as soon as the electricity reaches the carbon thread a flash of light appears. Electricity is a certain molecular motion, but not of a character to produce light.

The molecules of the carbon film also have a distinct action of their own, and essentially different from the mode of motion called electricity, consequently when the two meet they antagonize each other and set up a different mode of action, which is communicated to the ether surrounding the carbon and thence to the eye, and we at once have the phenomenon of light. Each phenomenon in matter has its own peculiar mode of molecular action.

The motions of the different bodies in nature are constantly encroaching on each other, the stronger overcoming the weaker, and consequent change of form follows. Some elements are particularly characteristic of this kind of behavior, among which is oxygen. This element is ever on the alert, and myriads are the changes it incessantly brings about by its constant effort of overcoming the motion of other bodies by the action of its own. Even though it has to combine with other substances and for the time being lose its own identity, it will do it rather than forego the opportunity. The reader must not confuse the vibratory action of the primary elements whereby their individuality is maintained, with those that affect the senses and produce change of form. We have now considered the actions relating to the various appearances in matter, and come to the proper place to discuss the relations between the material movements and mind.

Philosophy has long since established the fact that the mind never takes direct cognizance of material objects, but only perceives the impressions which the external world is capable of producing in consciousness.

There is nothing reaches out from the senses to material objects whereby we have knowledge of them, neither is there anything materialistic passes from external objects into the brain by way of the senses. Consequently, the only relation existing between external nature and mind is the power matter possesses of arousing a conscious state in the cells of the cortex of the brain, and consists in a wave of motion passing between the external objects and the brain, in the molecules of the nerve cells of which a corresponding movement is produced. These molecular vibrations, established in the nerve cells, become permanent; the oftener they are repeated the more permanent their movements become. It is in this way the infant builds up a state of consciousness and obtains a knowledge of its surroundings. The first few weeks after birth no nerve cells at all exist in the intellectual region of the brain, but in time a few, small, rudimentary cells appear. During the growth and development of the child there is a direct relation existing between the cell growth and the intellectual attainments. This is well exemplified in the lower animals where there is an accurate correspondence between the mental scale of the animal and the brain cell in its cerebrum. The superior and anterior portion of the cerebrum is the region of mind. This has been removed experimentally in animals, whereupon they lose all mental power, nothing remaining except the reflex and automatic movements due to the action of the spine and lower brain centers.

The same facts hold true in the intellectual region of the human being, in which disease has impaired or destroyed the mind regions.

Individuals of low intellectual power and idiots have very few cells in the mind territory.

Loss of mind in elderly people, called "senile dementia," is accompanied by the disappearance of the nerve cells in the region of thought, and the diminution of cells is in direct relation to the degree of the dementia. Men of extraordinary intellectual capacity during life show on examination in death a mind region rich in brain cells. Who can then doubt that the mental propensities depend directly on the cellular elements when there is such an accurate correspondence? No brain cells, no mind! Numerous brain cells, great intellect! etc. The multitudinous material movements which perpetually roll from the many external objects through the senses into the nerve cells, cause their molecules to vibrate after a certain peculiar manner. The oftener the act is repeated the more permanent the oscillations. This is the conscious operation whereby we are cognizant of an impression, and when originally made is called a perception. Myriads of these become fixed in the molecules of the nerve cells, caused by the infinitude of molecular waves rolling through the senses from the external world. This is the stage of perceptions, or recording office, where the symbolic representations are recorded of external objects. These perceptions for the greater part lie quiet, but as soon as a wave of motion rolls through the nerve molecules so soon the identical perceptions are reproduced. When a movement passes over the cells, either from internal or external cause, many of them are agitated and will take on the action they possessed when the original perception was made. When this takes place, from internal cause or from a general wave, the perceptions revived become conceptions, because they are now evolved directly from the brain molecules and do not depend, like the perceptions, on a wave movement from without. At this stage we begin to enter the domain of thought, where there is a relation and correlation of the many perceptions.

Man selects numerous promiscuous perceptions and arrives at a conclusion or projects an idea having no direct correspondence in the attributes of matter. Here arises imagination, and the superstitious have no trouble in selecting such perceptive attributes that when found together will make the conception of a most hideous monster, which never had or could have any material correspondence. No wonder that the ignorant fail to make logical combinations of sense-attributes, but conceive all sorts of fanciful and monstrous imagery. Not until education enables them to judge logically and see the reason for their conclusions will the gods, demons, and spirits disappear from their imaginations. Their imagery, though formed from the attributes of matter, is of such preposterous construction that its very character and appearance is a foul outrage on honest nature.

Those making claims to a spiritual body after death must see from the preceding facts that there is only matter and its motion in the universe, so far as our senses have been affected, and accordingly if a spirit exists it must consist of common matter. If it does not consist of matter, it cannot exist at all. A spirit cannot consist of nothing, and consequently is unable to impress our senses.

However, a spiritualistic nothing comes about as near the Christian's deity and angelic spirits as I can conceive. Every concept possessed by human beings is composed of such attributes that their physical counterpart can be found in matter and its relations. All thoughts, however abstract, are based on the outer world. When the brain ceases to act, where is the soul? It's at the same place as the electric light when the electricity is turned off; it ceases to manifest. But what about the will power? There is no such state as absolute freedom of will. Every so-called voluntary act is governed by motif. When one determines to do this, that, or the other act there always precedes a motif which becomes the instigator or cause of the action, which is no more free than a muscle is free to act without a stimulant of some character. Absolute freedom of will is an absurdity and impossibility. Freedom of will implies condition or state in matter without cause. If a man can commit a so-called voluntary act uncaused, then there is no reason why we should seek a cause for anything.

Nothing composed of anything other than matter can exist. Consequently, how can anyone make a claim that spirits exist unless they are capable of giving us a knowledge of their existence through our senses? But this they are unable to do unless they are material, and if material they are not spiritual. The only manner in which spirits, demons, etc., have found their way into the sky has been through the fancies of some infatuated and morbid imagination, on the same principle that a man with delirium projects the objects of his delusions into the outer world. He sees them in his mind, but refers them to the outside through the power of experience. If a spirit, then, is unable to affect our senses, we have no right in claiming a knowledge of their existence. We have no right to go any farther than the facts and probabilities warrant us. Most of the premises, put forth by those who believe by faith rather than by conclusions based on evidence, can at once be dismissed as absurd in the estimation of all logical thinkers.

W. W.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The World Would Be the Better for It.

If men cared less for wealth and fame,
And less for battlefields and glory;
If writ in human hearts a name
Seemed better than in song and story;
If men, instead of nursing pride,
Would learn to hate and to abhor it;
If more relied
On love to guide—
The world would be the better for it.

If men dealt less in stocks and lands,
And more in bonds and deeds of fraternal;
If love's work had more willing hands,
To link this world with the supernal;
If men stored up love's oil and wine,
And on bruised human hearts would pour it;
If "yours" and "mine"
Would once combine—
The world would be the better for it.

If more would act the play of life,
And fewer spoil it in rehearsal;
If bigotry would sheathe its knife
Till good became more universal;
If custom, gray with ages grown,
Had fewer blind men to adore it;
If talent shone
In good alone—
The world would be the better for it.

If men were wise in little things
Affecting less in all their dealings;
If hearts had fewer rusted strings
To isolate their kindred feelings;
If men, when wrong beats down the right,
Would strike together to restore it;
If right made might
In every fight—
The world would be the better for it.

—W. H. Cobb, in Ex.

Cultivate Your Intellect.

Why should young Liberals cultivate their minds by the study of the natural sciences, namely: Natural philosophy, natural history, astronomy, and geology? Because to do so will secure them against superstition, especially religious superstition, that destroys human health, life and property—that has already destroyed the lives of millions of men and women, called Infidels, heretics, and witches. These men of great minds are now honored for their intellectual achievements.

Young Liberals should cultivate their intellects, because by the agency of the human intellect the creations came that have marked the progress of man from the infancy of the world to the present day. They should cultivate their minds because of the pleasure to be derived from it. This gem of thought is from a favorite author: "Intellect uncultivated has but few pleasures, and these are low and gross. But the pleasures of cultivated intellect are among the most refined and noble as well as the most ecstatic that enter into and form a part of human happiness. To the man of truly cultivated power of thought there are a thousand voices that speak the rich language of instruction and wisdom, to which the uncultivated ear is totally deaf. . . . Yet more than this. It is his to be surrounded by the greatest and best minds which have reared their monumental piles upon the soil of intellect, as his companions." Great is the joy of such a companionship. Most gratifying is an association with the minds of the great and good. Rich, deep, and pure are the pleasures of cultivated intellect. They cannot well be told; they are to be felt. Is not, then, the cultivation of our intellects an object worthy of attention? Intellectual cultivation is a progressive work. The powers of the mind unfold with their exertion. Each successive effort adds to the mind's power. Every new thought gleaned confers upon it a new strength. Every struggle for truth, every effort for a clearer light, every strife for a noble victory, every resistance of error, every toil-earned discovery, every drop of brain-sweat adds something to the power, brilliancy, and treasury of the intellect.

Young Liberals should study, because the cultivated intellect is a never-failing source of pleasure to its friends and companions. Says a lecturer: "A cultivated intellect is a mine of wealth sparkling with instruction. It has an attractive force which draws around itself the minds of others, and delights them with its companionship. Its words are rich with the magic powers of thought. It charms the ear with its varied harmony of rich and glowing language. It ravishes the heart with its recitals of the poetry of passion and love. It fires the imagination with the flights of its fancy and the gorgeous drapery of its figures. It captivates the judgment by the justness of its opinions, the cogency of its reason, and the comprehensiveness of its views. Who that has ever enjoyed the companionship of a truly cultivated intellect knows not its power to please and instruct the mind, to captivate and ravish the heart? How full of interest is the conversation of a truly intelligent man or woman! How eagerly do we seek the company of such, and how long do we enjoy it before we tire! Great are the charms which the cultivated intellect has for its companions." Then should not our young Liberals cultivate theirs?

Our young friends should strive to improve their minds, because it will increase their power to do good in the world. Unjust laws are grinding the face of the poor. Existing religious institutions are opposed to the well-being of the masses of the people. Old errors are blinding the public mind and veiling the understanding of humanity from the light of truth. Ignorance is palsying human energies and dwarfing human powers. The whirlpool of intemperance is swallowing up thousands. Cultivated intellect must apply the lever of reform to these evils and remove them. The world must be reformed, improvements made, laws enacted, institutions abolished and established, discoveries made, education carried to the masses, justice administered, science taught, and religious creeds exterminated by cultivated intellect.

Some may ask: "How can I cultivate my intellect? I am poor, and have not the means to procure an education." Has poverty robbed you of your intellectual powers? Has it not sharpened them? Gold will decorate the body, but it can not adorn the mind. The poorer you are, the more and greater stimulants to action, and fewer inducements to idleness. Have you not time? Not time to think! How can you help thinking? I will say this: "The will is the way." The youth who believes it impossible to get an education is deficient in courage and energy. If our young Liberals wish, when they grow up, to help exterminate the creeds that are keeping the world in ignorance, they should now begin to cultivate their minds.

The above is written for the Corner by
A FRIEND OF YOUNG LIBERALS.

Correspondence.

FROM A FREETHINKER.

ASTORIA, ILL., Sept. 14, 1893.
TO THE READERS OF THE TRUTH SEEKER: This is my first letter to THE TRUTH SEEKER. Please don't put this in the waste-basket, as I intend making Freethinking my life-work, and may write quite often. I have read THE TRUTH SEEKER quite often. There are many interesting things in it. I go to school, and I mean to get a good education that I may be able to do the work which I have undertaken. ROSS FRAZIER.

[May our friend persevere in his determination and become a bright and shining light in the ranks of Freethought.—ED. C. C.]

ROANOKE, Mo., Sept. 11, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Will you permit another stranger to enter your cosy parlor for a few minutes' chat. I never saw THE TRUTH SEEKER until I went to Mr. Walton's. I always take pleasure in reading the Children's Corner. I am eleven years old. I go to school every day. I study United States history, geography, B grammar, fourth reader, B spelling, and third part of arithmetic.

I have five brothers. I am the only girl. I have four brothers older than myself and one younger. My father subscribed for THE TRUTH SEEKER. I like it very much. For fear of your waste-basket, I will close. I remain as ever your little Freethinker friend, AGNES FINNELL.

[Agnes is no longer a stranger, but one of the family, from whom we shall always be glad to hear.—ED. C. C.]

HOOKSBURG, O., Sept. 10, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner, and I hope it will not be the last. My father takes a good many papers, but he thinks THE TRUTH SEEKER is the best. I like to read the Children's Corner very much.

My age is fourteen. I have three sisters and three brothers. My youngest brother we have not named. I would like for some of your Corner correspondents to send us a name, as we are unable to find one to suit.

I hardly ever go to church. There are several churches around here holding prayer-meetings and Sunday-schools. I went once or twice, and was disgusted, so did not care to go again. I would like to correspond with some of the girls of the Corner.

As my letter is getting long I will close, hoping to see this in print.

From your friend. DE ETNA HOOPER.

[Now, let us all try and see if we can find a name for that baby.—ED. C. C.]

ROANOKE, Mo., Sept. 10, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Will you permit me to take a peep into the Corner, as I wish to get acquainted with your pleasant little family of Freethinkers. I was nine years old on the sixth ult. I am the youngest of three sisters. I have one brother dead, but none living. We go to Sunday-school and church most every Sunday. Papa and mamma go with us sometimes. There can be no harm in hearing what they have to say, though I do not believe any of their fish stories, all the same. My teacher says God takes care of everybody. This may be true, but some people are very badly taken care of. I am told that God loves everybody. Why does he not make everyone happy? My teacher says that God wants us to love our enemies and be kind to them. If this is true, why does he talk about burning his enemies? My teacher says that Jesus at one time lived on the earth, and that the people all saw him. She wanted everyone in her class that believed this to hold up their hands. I thought she might be mistaken about it. I did not hold up my hand. Pa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER as far back as I can remember. He says the preachers do not think well of it because it is opposed to their trade. It keeps people from believing what they say about some things. I hope you will publish my letter, unless you think it of no account. For the present I must close. I remain,
Your little Freethinking friend,

LIZZIE WALTON.

[A very good letter, and we shall be glad to hear from Lizzie often.—ED. C. C.]

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.
Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE; OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of The World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
Single numbers sold at prices quoted.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A Nineteenth Century Novel.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with a little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroine. The narrative is, in the main, a history of a working-girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business-men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrites. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.
Price, 15 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York City

SHALL THE BIBLE BE READ IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

By R. B. Westbrook, A.M.

Third Thousand.

Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.
The Earth.
The Chemical Aspect.
The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.
Genesis—The Garden of Eden.
The Deluge.
The Scriptural God—The Creation.
The Creation of God—Abraham.
Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.
Samuel the Kingmaker.
God Save the King.
Jehovah Takes a Rest.
The End of National Life.
The Christian Era.
Organic Life—Vegetable.
Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.
The Muscular Tissues.
The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,
In General.
By the Lungs.
By the Skin.
By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.
The Elementary Substances.
Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.
The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.
The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.
Rational Review.
Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.
The Planetary Gods.
Every Man His Own God.
Tables Gateways to Knowledge.
Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.
Rules for Human Conduct.
ILLUSTRATIONS.
Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.
Map of Theological Retrogression.
Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—
The Jewish Sabbath—The
Christian Scriptures and the
Sabbath—Examination of
Sunday Arguments—Origin
of the Christian Sabbath—
Testimony of the Christian
Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony
of Christian Reformers,
Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS. AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality
Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things in Immortality of Matter, Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Force, Man,
Infinity of Matter, Brain and Mind,
Value of Matter, Thought,
Motion, Consciousness,
Form, Seat of the Soul,
Immutability of Natural Innate Ideas,
Laws, The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Personal Continuity,
Laws, Vital Force,
The Heavens, The Soul of Brutes
Periods of the Creation Free Will,
of the Earth, Morality,
Original Generation, Concluding Observa-
Secular Generation, tions.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism
Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism;
Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism
and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible
Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the
"Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal
Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent
Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood
Salvation; The Things That Remain.
Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.
We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this.
The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.
Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it:
"This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."
In two volumes, cloth, gilt-lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.
Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science.
In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment;
Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius.
Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer.
Every page glows with passion and throbs with life.
Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin.
In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Li- tiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Abs- on; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism
In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MENTAL HEALING; A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power. By Leander Edmund Whipple. New York: The Metaphysical Publishing Company. Cloth, price, $2.50.

Some idea of the range of this work may be given in a summary of chapter headings: Metaphysical Healing—Its Nature and Scope; Metaphysics versus Hypnotism—Is Mind Cure Mesmerism? The Potency of Metaphysics in Surgery—Does Mental Healing Claim to Replace Surgery? The Progress of the Age—Universal Ether and Telepathy; Intelligence and Sensation—the Office of the Senses; Mental Action—the Process of Thought; The Physical Reflection of Thought—Its Expression on the Body; The Mental Origin of Disease—Thought Images; Curative Influences—What Is a Mental Cure? The Physical Effects of Anger—How Mental Action Causes Disease; The Influence of Fear in Sickness—Discordant Emotion and Its Results; Illustrative Cases—Cures That Have Been Effected—Various Effects of Fright; Muscular and Inflammatory Conditions—Heart Disease, Fevers, and Colds; The Common Ground of Healing Methods—Why Do Conflicting Theories Heal? Conclusion—the Importance of the Movement.

Mr. Whipple proceeds upon the assumption that the body is an adjunct of the mind, that the five senses are insufficient and misleading in their guidance, and that disease—"whatever its name or nature—must originate in some mental activity afterwards registered in the body, where the mode of action is outwardly expressed." There is in the work very little of "Divine Will" talk and similar theological rubbish of the old style, and it is a well-printed and attractive work, and will undoubtedly be welcomed by those of our readers whose mental habits and inclination lead them into the domain of metaphysical research.

DIRECT LEGISLATION BY THE CITIZENSHIP THROUGH THE INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM. By J. W. Sullivan. New York: True Nationalist Publishing Company. Paper covers. Price, 25 cents.

The author of this work, Mr. J. W. Sullivan, for a long time associated with Hugh O. Pentecost on the Twentieth Century, may truly be said to be the father of the initiative and referendum, as advocated in this country. Although many had preceded him as American adherents of the idea, it remained for his propaganda to secure for this political cult wide consideration and extended favor. What it has accomplished in civilized Switzerland he has shown in these pages; what it could do in the semi-savage sections of the United States he is endeavoring to show in the pages of contemporaneous history. Regarding the reception accorded "Direct Legislation," the publishers say in an "advertisement" dated last April:

"This book has completed its first year. . . . It has received the stamp of high approval for correctness in fact and principle from such well-known Swiss publicists as Carl Bürkli, Louis Wuarin, Th. Curti, and Michael Flürsheim. It has been made the subject of favorable review by prominent Swiss journals, notably the Zurich daily Post, the leading newspaper of German Switzerland, which devoted to it several columns in three successive issues, and the Journal de Genève, the leading newspaper of French Switzerland, which also accorded it unusual space and attention. It has been reviewed at length in Italian, German, Belgian, French, Canadian, and Australian papers, the one verdict being that it has supplied a hitherto vacant place in the literature of political science. It has demonstrated the possibility of the universal republic. It has convinced hosts of Americans that the middleman in lawmaking must go. It has brought to the author hundreds of letters from men of all classes in America, who commend its spirit and express their readiness to assist in carrying out its object. It has helped, through some of its readers who went to the Omaha national convention with the purpose in view, to place a direct legislation plank in the People's Party platform. It has informed and encouraged the delegates who last fall, at the St. Louis and Philadelphia general conventions, brought the Knights of Labor and the American Federation of Labor to the decision that they would help to establish direct legislation."

THE SOCIAL CONTRACT; OR, PRINCIPLES OF POLITICAL LAW. Also, A Project for a Perpetual Peace. By Jean Jacques Rousseau, Citizen of Geneva. Translated from the original French. New York: Peter Eckler, 35 Fulton street. Cloth, $1.

Rousseau left his impress on the race. His thoughts became the thoughts of the noblest, most clear-seeing leaders of the French and American revolutions. Subjected to penury, the victim of misconception and persecution, voted crazy by those who could not themselves be insane, because they could not think, he planted the seeds of religious and political liberty in thousands of brains, and made us all the legatees of his priceless wealth of heart and intellect. But, of course, Rousseau was only human and his age was one of religious darkness; hence we need not be surprised to find him advocating principles that are to-day repugnant to every correct thinker. For instance, on page 196 of the "Social Contract," are found these paragraphs:

"There is a profession of faith, therefore, purely political; the articles of which it is in the province of the sovereign to ascertain, not precisely as articles of religion, but as the sentiments due to society, without which it is impossible to be a good citizen, a faithful subject. Without compelling anyone to adopt these sentiments, the sovereign may also equitably banish him from the society; not, indeed, as impious, but as unsocial, as incapable of having a sincere regard to justice, and of sacrificing his life, if required, to his duty. Again, should anyone, after having made a public profession of such sentiments, betray his disbelief of them by his misconduct, he may equitably be punished with death, having committed the greatest of all crimes, that of belying his heart in the face of the laws. The tenets of political religion should be few and simple; they should be laid down also with precision, and without explication and comment: The existence of a powerful, intelligent, beneficent, prescient, and provident deity; a future state; the reward of the virtuous, and the punishment of the wicked; the sacred nature of the social contract, and of the laws. These should be its positive tenets. As to those of a negative kind, I would confine myself solely to one by forbidding persecution."

We hardly realize how far this age of scientific knowledge is removed from the old centuries of speculation until we are brought face to face with a Rousseau speaking in all seriousness of the possibility of "compelling one to adopt sentiments" which his intellect cannot assimilate! Then think of the conception of justice which a philosopher must have had who advocated the death penalty as a punishment for one who, under pain of banishment otherwise, had made a profession of belief in dogmas which he subsequently renounced! And this philosopher was Rousseau! If he had progressed no further than this, in what quagmires of superstition and crime were the masses of his compatriots sunk? After this, Rousseau would forbid persecution! The paragraphs I have quoted might have been transferred from the columns of the Christian Statesman or Christian Nation. Yes, we have in this age and this country an active, aggressive and powerful party whose scheme of "political religion" differs scarcely a particle from that of Jean Jacques Rousseau, and this party is the enemy immediately in our front. The age in which he lived excuses Rousseau—is there any excuse for the God-in-the-Constitution reactionaries?

Mr. Eckler has done his part of the work well; the printing and bookbinding are a credit to those crafts, as are all his publications.

MONEY: CO-OPERATIVE BANKING AND EXCHANGE. By William H. Van Ornum, Chicago: Charles H. Kerr & Co., 175 Monroe street. Paper covers. Price, 25 cents.

On the title-page of this pamphlet it is declared that it shows "An easy, practical, and permanent relief from financial difficulties, and one which can be applied immediately." Quoting approvingly Francis A. Walker's definition of money, "That which passes freely from hand to hand throughout the community in final discharge of debts and full payment for commodities, being accepted without reference to the character or credit of the person who offers it and without the intention of the person who receives it to consume it, or enjoy it, or apply it to any other use than in turn to tender it to others in discharge of debts or payment for commodities," Mr. Van Ornum proceeds to state his objections to interest, to the ten per cent. tax, to private banks of issue, government monopoly of currency, money hoarding, metal coinage, national bank currency, gold and silver certificates, private bank outputs, and greenbacks. The remainder and bulk of the pamphlet is devoted to the advocacy of co-operative banking associations which can be formed, the author claims, in every city, town, or county, and be composed of business and professional men, farmers, and workingmen. "Each member to be rated for credit according to his financial and productive ability and personal prob-ity." These associations to make no profit, "discount no notes, deal in no securities, engage in no speculations, exact no interest, or in any way risk the money or credit of [their] members." Running expenses to be paid by the members in the ratio of their credits, and these expenses "probably will not exceed from two to three-tenths of one per cent. annually." Mr. Van Ornum avers that the banks have repeatedly demonstrated the feasibility of this plan, the clearing houses of New York, Philadelphia, and Chicago having resorted to this expedient in emergencies. Inasmuch as the government has not attempted to enforce the ten per cent. tax upon the clearing houses which have engaged in this enterprise our pamphleteer claims that it is estopped from pressing the application of it upon the co-operative banking associations. Yet, should the law be imposed, through a strained interpretation, upon the associations, their advocate thinks that their credits could hold their own against the bankers' money, because of the much less cost of issue—absence of interest, etc. In an appendix, forms of organization, by-laws, etc., are given.

Short Notes About Books.

The question, Was Abraham Lincoln a Christian? is settled forever. Mr. Remsburg in this book presents all the important testimony which bears upon the question pro and con, and conclusively shows that Lincoln was not a Christian. In his preface the author says: "In proving Lincoln a disbeliever, he (the author) does not presume to have proved Christianity false or Freethought true; but he has shown that some Christians are not honest and that an honest man may be a Freethinker."

All who know Mr. Remsburg's mental temperament know that he is specially fitted for a work of this character, and they also know that any statement made by him is made upon the authority of facts which are indisputable. This book will need no successor. The mission which its author undertook is accomplished. The Christian church must pluck the diamond of Lincoln's name from its crown, for it is out of place in such a setting.

While Mr. Remsburg's book is necessarily made up largely from other sources, there is an originality about it characteristic of the author. An air pervades it that shows that he thoroughly appreciated his subject and thoroughly enjoyed his labor. The Freethinker may confidently claim Abraham Lincoln as a disbeliever in the divine character of Christianity and an infidel to the Christian superstitions, and he can find in this book an array of facts to support his claim that his Christian opponents cannot overthrow.

The testimony of a few interested editors cannot, for a moment, stand against the evidence of scores of personal friends and associates who knew Mr. Lincoln intimately for years and who were in a way to know his private opinions.—Boston Investigator.

Another author who appears to have misdirected his talents is Mr. John E. Remsburg. He has written a book of 336 pages to prove that Abraham Lincoln was a Freethinker, and was therefore not deserving of what the author evidently considers to have been the stigma placed upon Mr. Lincoln's honesty and mental strength by those false friends who insisted that the martyr president died a Christian. Mr. Remsburg has been at the trouble to hunt evidence for fifteen years, gathering testimony from more than one hundred witnesses to the effect that if Mr. Lincoln had any convictions whatever on the subject of religion, they were on the side of Freethinking—a conclusion which can be of no particular importance to Christianity, to Freethinking, or to history. New York: The Truth Seeker Company.—Buffalo Express.

"An Agnostic's View of the Resurrection," by "Don Allen" (New York: Truth Seeker Company; 161 pp., 3s. 6d.), is a thoughtful examination of the supernatural allegations of the orthodox theory. The writer has "nothing to say against the personal character of the man Jesus," but only attacks "some of the superstitions that have always been associated with his name." His own theory is that "the body of Jesus was, by the orders of Pilate, taken out of the sepulcher in which it was laid; that the Roman guards were accessories to the fact when it occurred; that it was secreted elsewhere in order to quiet the tumult that had been raised on account of the crucifixion; that it had the effect for which it was intended, and that is all there was of this pretended resurrection." This simple but sweeping explanation is reasoned out in a conversational manner.—Amos Waters, in Watts's Literary Guide.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS. By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Gems of Thought.

ALL my fears and cares are of this world; if there is another, an honest man has nothing to fear from it.—Burns.

GREATNESS is not the gift of majorities; it cannot be thrust upon any man; men cannot give it to another; they can give place and power, but not greatness. The place does not make the man, nor the scepter the king. Greatness is from within.—Ingersoll.

THE age is dull and mean. Men creep, Not walk; with blood too pale and tame To pay the debt they owe to shame; Buy cheap, sell dear; eat, drink, and sleep Down-pillowed, deaf to moaning want; Pay tithes for soul-insurance; keep Six days to Mammon, one to Cant. —Whittier.

JUSTICE to the state requires that every religious corporation or society owning real estate should bear its proportionate share or quota of taxation. Otherwise this burden must be distributed among and assumed by the general taxpayers.—Address of Gilbert R. Hawes, Esq., of the New York bar.

IT [Christianity] surged up from below, from the dregs of the world; it arose among an obscure sect of local fanatics, even in its own narrow provincial birthplace; and it brought with it, to cultivated Rome and Hellas, the common ideas and practices of the less civilized medium in which it had its origin.—Grant Allen.

MR. PAINE in his person was about five feet ten inches high, and rather athletic; he was broad shouldered, and latterly stooped a little. His eye, of which the painter could hardly convey the exquisite meaning, was full, brilliant, and singularly piercing; it had in it the muse of fire. . . . His manners were easy and gracious; his knowledge was universal and boundless; in private company and among friends his conversation had every fascination that anecdote, novelty, and truth could give it.—Chas. Rickman.

If ever one is inclined to doubt the danger of priestcraft, a visit to India ought to dispel such doubts. He will find in the Brahmins a typical priesthood, and he will see how their unquestioned rule has degraded the people, until they seem without the power of clear thinking or wide feeling. . . . The pious give, not because their brothers have need, but to please the god; and it is nothing to them if their gifts are consumed by the priests or wasted on worthless objects. The priests give as priests—either to attract worshippers to their temple or to deliver their own souls.—Samuel A. Barnett.

CHRIST was sent to the "lost sheep of the house of Israel," but he failed to win their confidence, for we read that "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." He then undertook to "show light to the Gentiles," and be "the light of the world;" but after eighteen hundred years of the teaching of his faith it has failed to reach two-thirds of the world; and among the one-third, where it has been preached, the majority of the people have rejected its claims. However, his name may be professed, Christ himself, not being in touch with the genius of our time, has failed to become a living factor in modern life.—Charles Watts.

RELIGION has filled the world with contentions, quarrels, wars, and terrible bloodshed. The worshippers of one god have waged war against the worshippers of some other god, and each has tried to their utmost to exterminate their opponents. Men have thus become deadly enemies to each other when they should have remained friends and brothers. They have spilt each other's blood, mutilated each other's bodies, and made corpses of millions of their fellow-beings while madly following the monsters of their own creation, and have made perfect demons of themselves. Yes, the worship of gods has made devils of men.—M. Babcock.

It is only the coward and the charlatan who is afraid to face the ordeal of debate. A sincere man, confident in the strength of his convictions, will gladly face discussion; if he feels that his opponent's case is more than he can answer, he will be led to think further, and perhaps reconsider his position. If he be a sincere man he will not hide or stifle the doubt or the opinion he cannot refute; for, if he did so, he would cease to be sincere. It is a true man's duty to pursue a doubt, grapple with it, and conquer it—or let it conquer him. To shut your ears, however, to the arguments you are unable to meet, is the resort of a coward. And the very worst kind of deception is the deception of self. Hence nothing but good results can flow from the calm, dispassionate comparison of different opinions, or the sincere testing and discussing of different views.—Fred. er. ck Ryan.

Not for Parsons.

WHAT strikes me as the funniest
Among some funny things,
Is that the fallen angels
Failed to use their wings. —Life.

E. N. CHOIR: "Is your church supported by voluntary contributions?" Dr. Howlet: "No, sah; by in-voluntary contributions. It's jess like drawin' teef ter git der cash outen my congregation."—Puck.

PREACHER (arriving drenched): "What shall I do, Mrs. McGregor? I am wet through and through." Old Scotch woman: "Get into the pulpit as sune as ye can. You'll be dhry eno' there."—London Freethinker.

FATHER: "Here I'm giving you an expensive legal education in hopes that you may eventually occupy a position on the bench, and you spend your time going to prize fights and horse-races." Son: "It's a necessary part of my studies, governor. I want to be a police justice same day."—Puck.

It is especially incumbent upon men of eminence to set an example of moral strictness in personal conduct. The distinguished slugger, Mr. Corbett, appears properly to appreciate his duty to society in this respect, and so he refused yesterday to violate the sanctity of the day by signing on Sunday the contract he had concluded with Mitchell to break the law by engaging in a prize-fight. He put the business aside for a secular day.—New York World.

AN Italian prince who had a Sicilian cook was once traveling to his provincial estates, taking with him his cook, together with his entire kitchen force, without which, so fond was he of the delicacies they were wont to prepare, he rarely, if ever, traveled. At a point where the narrow path along the precipice turned the angle of a projecting rock the prince, at the head of his long cavalcade, heard a shriek and the splash of a body falling into the torrent far below. With a face white with horror he pulled up, and looking back, exclaimed: "The cook! the cook! Oh, do not tell me it is the cook!" "No, your excellency," cried a voice from the rear; "it is Don Prædomeo." The prince heaved a sigh of intense relief, then said: "Ah, only the chaplain! Thank God!"—London Freethinker.

I'M GLAD SALVATION'S FREE.

I'm a seeker for salvation, and I never miss a meeting,
For well I know eternity is long, and time is fleeting.
I am very poor in pocket, but 'twould fill my soul with sorrow
To scrimp myself in giving, so long as I can borrow.
There's the fund for pastor's salary, the mission fund for Asia,
The special spring collection for the blacks of Polynesia,
The organ fund, the building fund—our church, though built but recently,
Is really getting rather small to worship God in decently.
But I'm glad salvation's free,
Oh! I'm glad salvation's free!
Salvation's free for you and me—
I'm glad salvation's free!

There's the fund for aged preachers, the League for Spreading Piety,
The Sabbath-school, the Epworth League, the Ladies' Aid Society;
The Blue Cross and the Yellow Cross, the choir (I love it best of all)—
And each must hold its summer fair, and each its berry festival;
The tickets in the aggregate cost more than I can spare for them;
For though I help donate the food I have to pay full fare for them;
And each one has its special fund for saving heathen brothers;
You're not exempt from any, though you've given to all the others.
But I'm glad salvation's free,
Oh! I'm glad salvation's free!
Salvation's free for you and me—
I'm glad salvation's free!

Collections carry off my cash and leave me often penniless;
My name is pledged on sixty cards—I know it can't be many less—
For homes for deaf-and-dumb and blind, evangelizing Exquimaux,
For sending men to Africa and other men to rescue those;
Donations for the pastor, for his wife and wife's relations, sir;
The pew-rent and the Christmas tree have put me on short rations, sir;
My salary is mortgaged many months into futurity,
And where my clothes are coming from is veiled in dim obscurity.
But, I'm glad salvation's free,
Oh! I'm glad salvation's free!
Salvation's free for you and me—
I'm glad salvation's free!
E. Frank Lintaber, in Puck.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.
6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By O. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
1 " The Church Robbing the People.	5 " Missionaries.
2 " Thanksgivings.	1 " The Lord's Instruments.
3 " Sabbath Laws.	25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
4 " Children and the Church.	1 " The Church and Slavery.
5 " Woman and the Church.	2 " Priests and Politics.
6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.	4 " Ireland and the Church.
7 " Studies in Natural History.	9 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
8 " The Bible and Science.	1 " The Uses of the Cross.
9 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
10 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9 " Persecutions of the Church.
11 " The Atonement Scheme.	19 " Some Allegories.
12 " The Lord and His Works.	3 " Heaven.
13 " Prayer.	6 " Hell.
14 " The Creeds.	7 " Miscellaneous.
15 " Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker Company

POPE'S AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PATENTS Terms Easy.

Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and Reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. RAGGER & CO., Attys., Washington, D.C.

DROPSY TREATED FREE

Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 85 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

THE "Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position. beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $28; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels, $15. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries. Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.5, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Etched (teas only):

"The Time to be Happy is Now."

50 cents extra.
The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $8, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch case net $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, R. chelle, Ill.
P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only.

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J., and say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.
Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

ZEKE DOES SOME DRAWING.

Thou also, son of man, take thee a tile, and lay it before thee, and portray upon it the city, even Jerusalem:—Ezek. iv, 1.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature—i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MENTAL HEALING.

A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power.

By LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

A Book to explain the correct idea of Mental Healing, and what may be reasonably expected to result from an understanding of its principles. Price, $2.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFERENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the Initiative and Referendum.

By J. W. SULLIVAN.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHOLERA, DIPHTHERIA, Dysentery, Piles, Quinsy, Catarrh. The Antidote for $1. Agents wanted. Dr. G. H. MILLER, 2,333 Hickory street, St. Louis, Mo., former address 1,441 South Twelfth street, Denver, Col. 20428

A NEW WORK BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

Water of Life

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

News of the Week.

YELLOW fever is spreading at Brunswick, Ga.

THE floods in Japan left seventy thousand people homeless.

IN England, striking Staffordshire miners were rioting last week.

PRAIRIE fires in Oklahoma and the Cherokee Strip have destroyed several lives recently.

THE feeling in England against the House of Lords, though smouldering, is very strong.

ON Oct. 1st. a case of cholera was reported at Eau Claire, Wis., but there is room for doubt.

FILIBUSTERING against the repeal of the silver purchasing clause of the Sherman Act continues in the Senate.

EMILE ZOLA is engaged upon a new novel—"Lourdes"—which will first appear in the New York Herald.

THE Barbers' Sunday-closing law of Michigan is being tested in the courts, on the appeal of a Detroit barber.

AT Wichita, Judge Reed pronounced the Kansas eight hour law unconstitutional, it being in restraint of liberty of action.

ON Sept. 22nd. at the Kiel Observatory, Professor Charlivis of Nice, discovered three new planets of the eleventh magnitude.

ON Sept. 25th., Dona Maria Aurelia Mendonca, daughter of the Brazilian minister at Washington, died at South Wilton, Conn.

FIVE non-union sailors were blown up with dynamite in San Francisco Sept. 24th. Several union sailors have been arrested on suspicion.

THE Russian coast-defense armor-clad vessel Roosalka went to the bottom in the gulf of Finland with her entire crew of two hundred men.

FOREIGN men-of-war in the harbor of Rio Janeiro interfered to prevent the further bombardment of the city by the fleet of the rebel Admiral Mello.

THE Salvation Army will hold a Columbian Congress in New York, Nov. 12—18th. Twenty-six states, and Sweden, Germany and India will be represented.

ON Sept. 28th. four congresses opened at the World's Fair—the Sunday Rest Congress, Congress of Missions, Congress of Evolutionists, and the Ethical Congress.

IN a breach of promise case in a Boston court, Judge Barker ordered that no report of the case or comment is to be made by any newspaper until the case is ended.

ON Sept. 29th. the Michigamme river broke into the Mansfield iron mine near Crystal Falls, Mich. and twenty-eight miners were drowned. The disaster had been expected.

FOR some time a sharp controversy over the free parochial school question has been going on between Rev. Patrick Corrigan and Rev. Dr. Joseph J. Synnott, champion of Bishop Wigger.

THE concerted and prolonged attack upon the Minnesota coal combine is bearing fruit. It has abolished its central office and discharged its head officer. Dealers are selling coal cheaper.

AN attempt was made on Sept. 23rd. at Barcelona, Spain, to kill Captain-General Martinez de Campos. Two bombs were thrown, and one soldier was killed and several persons were injured, including De Campos.

THE appointment of James J. Van Alen of Newport, as ambassador to Italy, has created a great stir in the political world. It is alleged that he is a mere society dabbler and that his appointment is the result of a pre-election arrangement.

RIOTS in Hamburg because of the attempts of the authorities to cleanse certain quarters of the city. Cholera threatens to be epidemic but the poorer classes fail to recognize the need of sanitary precautions. One policeman was killed in the riot.

PRESIDENT BONNEY of the World's Congress Auxiliary has positively refused to permit the Freethought Congress to be held in a room in the Art Institute building. The Freethought Federation has brought suit for ten thousand dollars damages.

THE last three weeks were signalized by several very bad railroad accidents in the United States. One of the latest reported was at Kingsbury, Ind., when a head-on collision between the Toronto and Montreal express on the Grand Trunk resulted in the death of eleven persons and the serious injury of twenty-two others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 41. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, October 14, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

New Publications.

New Publications.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

By Samuel P. Putnam.

dedicated to the American Congress, of 1892, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Free-thought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits
Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for
His Processes Are Egregiously Slow,
They Are Egregiously Wasteful,
They Often Serve No Use,
They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

Rensburg's Book on Lincoln Now Ready.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN: WAS HE A CHRISTIAN?

By John E. Rensburg.

One of the most noted controversies of the century has been waged over the question of Abraham Lincoln's religious belief. Soon after the remains of America's most illustrious son were laid to rest at Springfield, one of his biographers, Dr. H. H. Hall, put forward the claim that he was a Christian. The claim was promptly denied by the dead statesman's friends, but only to be renewed again, and again denied. And thus for a quarter of a century the question of Lincoln's belief has been tossed like a ball between two sides.

For fifteen years Mr. Rensburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

NOTED WITNESSES.

Hon. W. H. Herndon, Col. Ward H. Lamon, Hon. John T. Stuart, Col. James H. Matheny, Col. John G. Nicolay, Judge David Davis, Col. Jesse W. Fell, Hon. Leonard Swett, Dr. William Jayne, Judge Stephen T. Logan, Joshua P. Speed, Hon. Jesse K. Dubois, Hon. Joseph Gillespie, Dr. C. H. Ray, Col. F. S. Rutherford, Judge Robert Leachman, Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Leonard W. Volk, Joseph Jefferson, Hon. E. B. Washburne, Hon. E. M. Haines, Hon. James T. Tully, Hon. M. B. Field, Hon. Geo. W. Julian, Hon. John B. Alley, Hon. Hugh McCulloch, Gen. M. M. Trumbull, Rev. David Swift, Rev. Robert Collyer, Judge Jesse W. Weik, Hon. J. P. Usher, Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, Rev. Salmon P. Chase, Wm. H. Seward, Hon. John Covode, Hon. A. J. Grover, Hon. W. H. Wakefield, Gen. D. W. Wilder, Judge Aaron Goodrich, Judge James M. Nelson, Rev. Edward Eggleston, Rev. John W. Chadwick, Donn Platt, H. K. Magie, Dennis F. Hanks, Mrs. Sarah Lincoln, Mrs. Mary Lincoln.

The foregoing and sixty other reputable witnesses testify that the greatest man born on this continent was a Freethinker.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR

Liberal and Ethical Societies, for Schools and
the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PEN PICTURES OF THE WORLD'S FAIR.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

A Full Description of the Fair, Invaluable as a Guide-Book and still more Invaluable to those who cannot attend. It tells WHAT TO SEE and WHERE TO SEE IT; gives rates of admission to the various attractions of the Fair and cost of living in Chicago, with other useful information to the visitor.

It is, besides being a complete Guide-Book, the best description of the Fair yet given—poetic, beautiful, accurate. It describes the inauguration ceremonies, gives the director-general's address, the efforts to close the Fair Sundays and the triumph of the Sunday-openers; describes the various buildings and what they contain, and is, all in all, the very best picture of the Fair that can be painted with a pen.

ILLUSTRATED.

A MAP OF JACKSON PARK, enabling the visitor to make his way around, and the stay-at-home to see where he went.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE FAIR, enabling one to comprehend at a glance the magnitude of the Exposition, the greatest ever known to the present time.

PICTURES OF ALL THE PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS:

Woman's Building.	Art Palace.	Fisheries Building.
Administration Building.	Manufactures and Liberal	Agricultural Building.
Electrical Building.	Arts Building.	Transportation Building.
Machinery Hall.	Mines and Mining Building.	Horticultural Building.
	Forestry Building.

A visitor to the Fair says of this book—reading it in THE TRUTH SEEKER—that it is charming and to one who has seen the Fair vastly entertaining.

Single copy, 25 cents. Five copies for $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

FACTS AND FICTIONS OF LIFE.

CONTENTS.

Preface.	Sex in Brain.
The Fictions of Fiction.	Heredity in Its Relations to a Double Standard of
A Day in Court.	Morals.
Thrown in With the City's Dead.	Divorce and the Proposed National Law
An Irresponsible Educated Class.	Lawsuit or Legacy.
The Moral Responsibility of Woman in Heredity.	Common Sense in Surgery.
Woman as an Annex.

At the Woman's Congress at Chicago Helen Gardener delivered as an address one of the chapters of this book. The Chicago Times said of it and her: "But the last address, dealing with the most delicate of the problems of reform, clear, unhesitant, modest, but uncompromising, was listened to with breathless interest by the audience. It was 'Heredity in Its Relation to a Double Standard of Morals,' and it was delivered by the one woman of all others best qualified to speak upon that subject—Helen Gardener. Petite, graceful, eloquent with the burden of her thought, Miss Gardener enchaind every auditor, and when she had finished received a perfect ovation, which her courage and devotion had so worthily won. The evening session was highly interesting, but that of the morning will be set down on the tablet of the memory of those present as one of the distinctively great features of the week's congress."

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EVERY Woman Ought to Read It. Every LIBERAL Woman
and Man Will Want It.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE.

By Matilda Joslyn Gage.

This is Mrs. Gage's latest and crowning work. It is THE book to show how the church has enslaved woman and kept and keeps her in an inferior position. A glance at its contents will show this:

The first chapter—the Matriarchate—shows that under the old civilizations woman had freedom, but that the tendency of Christianity from the first was to restrict her liberty. In this chapter Mrs. Gage claims that to the Matriarchate—or Mother-rule—the world is indebted for its first conception of inherent rights.

Chapter II deals with the theological dogmas of original sin and celibacy. Woman, by the church, was not regarded as a human being; marriage was looked upon as vile; wives were sold as slaves; women driven to suicide; the influence of the church was unfavorable to virtue. The celibacy of the clergy produced degrading sensuality, and woman was the victim of these brutes.

Chapter III is on The Canon Law, showing how the church controlled woman by making the legitimacy of marriage depend upon its own control of the ceremony. Ancient civilization gave place to Christian barbarism, the clergy became a distinct body—at once a "holy" and an unholy caste. Learning was prohibited to women, husbands prohibited from leaving them more than one-third of their property; daughters could be disinherited, sons could not. The Reformation effected no change.

Chapter IV—Marquette—is on Feudalism and its degradation of women, the rights of "lords spiritual," the immorality of the heads of the church, baptism of nude women in the early Christian church. It also deals with some of the later-day abuses of females, like our Northwestern pineries, the English debaucheries, governmental crime-makers, etc.

Chapter V—Witchcraft. In the days of this phase of religious insanity Mrs. Gage shows how the possession of even a little learning was sufficient cause to suspect a woman of witchcraft, that to keep a pet was dangerous, so rabid were the clergy not to suffer a witch to live. This persecution for witchcraft was a continuance of the church's policy for obtaining universal dominion over mankind. Women physicians of the Middle Ages were persecuted, and the "Pilgrim Fathers" continued it in America. The first synod convened in America was to try a woman for heresy, and others were stripped and whipped for not agreeing with the clergy.

The chapter on "Wives" shows how the disruption of the Roman empire was unfavorable to the personal and proprietary rights of woman—that the sale of daughters was practiced in England seven hundred years after it was Christianized—that the practice of buying wives was regulated by law—that women were not permitted to read the Bible—that they were not admitted as witnesses—that civil marriage is opposed by the church.

In Chapter VII is shown how polygamy was sustained by the Christian church, that the first synod of the reformation convened to sanction this institution, that Luther and the other "principal reformers" favored it, as well as the American Board of Foreign Missions. The Mormon theocracy is shown to be similar to that of other Christian sects.

In the last three chapters Mrs. Gage treats of the opposition of the church to the amelioration of woman's sufferings as interference with her "course," of woman's degradation by the church to labor for slaves, of woman's "inferiority," as taught by the church to-day, and of how little value Christianity has been and is to civilization.

The work is a burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It is also extremely valuable as history. No woman, it seems to us, can read it and remain a supporter of the religious institution which has crushed her individuality, her mentality, and degraded her person. To the woman's cause it opens an Age of Reason. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do.

In cloth, $2; in half-leather binding, $3. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 41. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, October 14, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY. - - - - - OCTOBER 14, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Has the Time Come to Go Into the Church?

A writer in an English journal which is in some ways slightly Liberal complains that certain ethical questions upon which, as he thinks, some of the leaders of the Freethought party took a wrong position, have prevented the reunion of the Freethinkers and the churchmen which was otherwise rendered possible and desirable by the abandonment of a number of fundamental doctrinal dogmas by the church.

Referring to the English church and English religious thought, this writer says—"The wisest of the public teachers of the day are those who would reconstitute the church with its endowments rather than confiscate both. Assuredly it would be better, after having destroyed the ideas of original sin, the atonement of Christ, and the supernaturalism of scripture, if we were to attempt to fall into line with sensible people of like views to our own, rather than to carry on a war of interminable negotiations. The next generation, I trust, will try to capture the churches, now that dogma is a mere tradition." It would be exceedingly difficult to take a more superficial view than this of the age-old conflict between the authoritarian and the libertarian ideas. And the position is one of extremest peril for Freethought. Although conditions in England and the United States differ greatly, in some respects, the divergence is not sufficiently radical to make our observations upon church doctrines and methods valueless in England.

Destroyed the ideas of original sin, the atonement of Christ, and the supernaturalism of scripture? What is the extent of this destruction? To be sure, they were destroyed, in one sense, when the first Freethinker showed their falsity, but in a wider and truer sense they are not yet destroyed. The masses of Christianity are not yet converted to rationalism on these points. Let us be practical, let us keep our arms in our hands yet a little longer, at least until we have heard from the interior counties and know for certain that the line officers and the rank and file of the army of unnaturalism have indorsed the articles of capitulation signed by some of the field officers. This they have not done yet, as every man knows who has broken away from his coterie of cultured associates and gone out among the common people, even for a little while. Delude ourselves with false hopes and treacherous security as we may try to do, the opinions of a few thousand educated men and women do not mark the advance line of human liberty. The masses indicate that, especially in a democracy, and in the most practical manner. The politician, no matter how advanced his own religious views, is not inclined to antagonize those of the men who put him in office.

But original sin, the atonement, and the supernaturalism of the Bible are not the universally accepted fundamental dogmas of churchianity. These are the belief in God and the immortality of the soul. These yet hold the churches in the league of anti-naturalism; these are the final tests of orthodoxy; these no man can abjure and remain in or enter any Christian church and retain his self-respect.

We are not engaged in a war of "interminable negotiations." We are, of all men and women, positive and constructive. We would build the home, society, industry, the state, upon the broad affirmative grounds of sympathy, justice, equality of rights and opportunities, liberty of thought and utterance. Our goal is a society in which the New Idea shall be welcomed, not banned and damned, starved and imprisoned, as it has ever been where the church was dominant, as it will ever be where acceptance of dogmas about gods and other worlds give the acceptor special privileges and opportunities.

It is utter folly to cry, Peace, peace until the equality of rights of the citizen, regardless of his views upon any and all dogmas, is recognized and respected. There has never been an hour since July 4, 1776, when this equality of rights was in greater peril than it is at present. The union of church and state is more nearly complete to-day than ever before in this country. Our only hope lies in the inactivity of legislators. Necessarily, they are, on the average, less given to superstition than are their constituents. Many of them see the danger that confronts the nation, and they would much prefer not to vote further aid and privileges to the church, not to plunge still deeper the dagger of religious domination into the vitals of liberty. But they are afraid of the influence of the ministers with the masses, and so many of them are prepared to do the bidding of the ecclesiastics when it comes to the pinch, but they will postpone the evil day as long as they can with safety to their seats. They are time-servers and cowards, but their hesitancy has its value; it gives us time to do more educational work among the better classes of the people. There would be no hope for us if these fence-riding legislators should get down now on the side where are massed the ranks of our enemies. May blind luck save us from the country-wide referendum of superstition; it would seem that nothing else can, for Liberal people are serenely sleeping over an ecclesiastical volcano. And then men who are supposed to be leaders in the cause of Freethought tell us to fall into line with the church, cease our negative warfare, and be "benefited" by the "conquest" we have made!

Conquest!

Conquest, when the God-myth is accepted by all but a handful of thinkers and scientists.

Conquest, when the churches least touched by modern ideas concerning the minor religious dogmas which are mentioned by the Englishman are the churches with the enormously large memberships, such as the Catholic and the Methodist.

Conquest, when of every fifty business and professional men and politicians who in their minds reject Christianity, not more than one dare avow his convictions, and nine of every ten give money more or less liberally for the support of the church.

Conquest, when the church auxiliary societies, such as the Young Men's Christian Association, the Society of Christian Endeavor, and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which have gathered into their ranks millions of the young and susceptible, are the admirable training grounds of the parent church, where misinterpretations of the Bible and false notions of history are sedulously inculcated and where plastic minds are cunningly moulded by deft clerical hands to the end that they will readily accept the modernized but none the less dangerous principles of church-and-state union.

Conquest, when the Demands of Liberalism, embodying the simple principles of religious freedom which until recently were supposed to be unalterably fixed in the organic law of the nation and to be the faithfully recognized rule of practice in our federal courts, are contemptuously spurned by the national law-making body as they had been heretofore and are yet flouted by every state in the Union.

Conquest, when the God-in-the-Constitution party, the Sabbath Observance Unions, and other affiliated organizations are pushing their propaganda so vigorously and so successfully that each year Sunday becomes in law more and more the priests' private property and the liberty of the citizen consequently and synchronously grows less and less.

Conquest, when a great international festival, the World's Fair, is practically closed on Sunday, the judicial decisions in favor of opening being based on careful evasions of the real principle at stake, the Constitution-guaranteed religious liberty and equality of the citizens.

Conquest, when the Supreme Court of the United States unanimously declares that this is a "Christian nation," thus, unreservedly and officially, as the tribunal of last resort and in the name of the whole people, accepting the fundamental dictum of the Covenanter party, accepting the keystone of the arch of the penitentiary of church supremacy.

No, the battle against ecclesiastical tyranny has not been won. Nothing but the dissensions of the Roman, Greek, and Protestant churches safeguards religious liberty in Europe.

In America, the immediate danger, and the present oppression, comes from the Protestant churches. Foolish as fanatical, they are striving to make the state the executive arm of Protestantism, forgetful of the fact that the hope of religious liberty in the world is the spirit of the Protestant revolt against church uniformity, and of the further fact that their success, as foreshadowed by the decision of the Supreme Court, can be only temporary, for Catholicism will surely seize all the ground they win from Liberty. They are pulling its chestnuts out of the fire. If they succeed, they put their own necks and the necks of the Freethinkers in the Catholic halter.

No, we cannot go into the liberal Protestant camp. We can form no such alliance, if alliance and not surrender is meant. We stand squarely upon the ground of absolute separation of church and state. With the Adventists and all other Christians who will work for the priestless state we can cheerfully and gladly join forces. All forms of religion and anti-religion must stand through voluntary support or fall because of the lack of it. Sunday, as well as all the other days of the week, must belong to the individual, not to the church or any other organization.

The church is aggressive and invasive in numberless ways, but just now she is concentrating her forces to wrench from us the last vestige of Sunday liberty. This issue is the overshadowing one to-day. If ecclesiasticism wins here it will win elsewhere. There can be no compromise. No faltering, no sleeping on duty. The Freethought Federation has before it a struggle which will be desperate and long-protracted. Every Liberal who wants to be free and to leave his children free will give to it all possible aid and comfort.

The Intolerable Gall of Some Christians.

On August 13th a meeting was held in the United Presbyterian church of Denison, Kan., to protest against the reopening of the post-office in that town on Sunday. "In May a resolution was passed in the convention of the Christian Endeavorers, which met in this place, expressing a desire on the part of the Christian patrons to have no distribution of mail on Sunday. This fact was made known to the general superintendent of mails and he ordered that no distribution be made. But a remonstrance was gotten up against the closing. It was signed by one hundred and fifty persons; the petition for closing, by two hundred and ninety-five. The chief clerk came up from Kansas City and went over the papers. The result was a compromise, it being ordered that there be one distribution on Sunday instead of two as heretofore. This made the clerics and their followers awful mad—"mad" is the word. In the language of the Christian Statesman, "This fired the Christian people." They held a mass-meeting and vented their wrath about the reopening in speechmaking and resolutions. The first of the latter reads: "Because it is in opposition to the wishes of the majority of the post-office patrons." This is very much to be doubted. It seems to us that four hundred and fifty names on the petition and remonstrance represents a much larger population than Denison has. There is reasonable ground for the supposition that one of the reasons why the chief clerk ordered the Sunday reopening of the office was because he found that the Christians had been up to their old tricks—as in the petitions for closing the World's Fair—of stuffing their paper with the names of children.

Another resolution reads: "Because we consider it an outrage upon our American liberty." Yes, we have no doubt it was an outrage upon the "liberty" of these bigots. With them "American liberty" is a synonym for "Christian liberty," about which they prate so much, and which means their right to think, speak, and act as they please and compel all other people to do the same. This is just what "Christian liberty" means and it is just what "American liberty" means when on the impudent lips of a God-in-the-Constitution perverter. What business is it of these insolent meddlers if the one hundred and fifty business men and others who signed the remonstrance do get their mail on Sunday? That is their business, and there is not the least danger that they will attempt to force the Sunday-worshippers to go to the post-office on Sunday. The bigots can get their mail such days as they choose, and what is their right is the right of every patron. But they are not satisfied with this equality of rights and opportunities, they never have been and never will be. They fear competition as a thief does a detective, for they are thieves, shamelessly robbing the citizen of his time, and, consequently, of his property, for "time is money." These clerics have a vivid realization of this; Sunday is the day they earn most of their money, and it makes them furious when men permit work, recreation, or reading to keep them away from the preachers' places of business.

Here is another of the resolutions: "Because it is contrary to the divine law, without which obedience to all human law would cease." Ah! what becomes of the pretense of many of the most cunning leaders in the Sabbatarian movement that they seek only to secure a "civil" day of rest? They are not trying to enforce religious dogmas by law, they say, but only to secure a "civil" resting time for the poor laboring man. Their belated country followers have again given them away by their parrot talk about "divine law." And yet there can be no doubt that the Denison ministers, at least, know that Sunday is not the Sabbath of the Bible, and that the only "divine law" they have enjoining its observance is the arbitrary edict of the Catholic church. But that makes no difference to the invasive hypocrites; anything is good enough to conjure with, so only it protects their craft against the competition of intellect and honest labor.

Agents Wanted.

We believe that not only can good be done but money made by any Liberal who will canvass for our book "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." In fact we know one man who worked at it but a few hours weekly and sold nearly fifty copies in a month. The price is low; everybody knows the Old Testament stories, and nearly everybody would like a book applying nineteenth-century wit and knowledge to them. People like to laugh. Reverence for the Old Testament tales has largely disappeared and jokes at the expense of Jonah and Joseph and Esau and Samson and David, and the other worthies of unsavory reputation, are keenly appreciated. It seems to us that the book will sell at sight. It does here in the store. Liberals out of employment will find this a good way to make an honest dollar.

Terms to agents sent upon application.

The Manhattan Liberal Club resumed its meetings Friday evening, October 6th. A full house listened to the presentation of "The Silver Question," by Henry Nichols. Friday evening, October 13th, "Christianity and After," by T. B. Wakeman.

Mohammed Alexander Russell Webb is pushing with vigor and tact the propaganda of the religion of Islam. He recently gave a lecture at Chickering Hall in this city, in which he briefly sketched the life of Mohammed, disproved many Christian misrepresentations regarding Mohammedanism and its founder, and incidentally but most effectually laid out Joseph Cook. Bombastes Cook had asserted that Webb had advocated polygamy in the Congress of Religions at Chicago, and had been hissed down by the audience. Webb had not said anything in defense of polygamy, and the truth of the matter about the hissing was that it was directed against a clerical opponent of the Mohammedan missionary who attacked Mr. Webb in a most outrageous manner. Mr. Webb is a very pleasant speaker.

We desire to call the attention of readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the benefits of subscribing to the Truth Seeker Monthly Library. The yearly subscription is only $3, and subscribers to the Library receive a paper-bound copy of each book issued in it; or, if they desire the books in cloth binding, subscribers can remit the difference in price between paper and cloth binding, and get the books in the latter shape. So far this year subscribers to the Library have received "Paine Vindicated," by Colonel Ingersoll, price 15 cents; the "Creation of God," by Dr. Hartmann, price 50 cents; the "Resurrection of Jesus," by Don Allen, price 40 cents; "Crimes of Preachers," price 25 cents; the "Handbook of Freethought," by W. S. Bell, price 50 cents; "Religion a Curse," by S. P. Putnam, price 25 cents; "Design Argument Fallacies," price 15 cents; "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," price 25 cents, and "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" price 50 cents. Other books besides are in preparation. One of these, we may mention, is "Pleasure and Progress," by A. M. Lorentz, LL.B., of which further notice will shortly be made. Send $3 and receive at once the books already published, and, as they appear, those which will be published between now and January, '94.

Churchly Purpose and Performance.

The Wisconsin State Sabbath Association will hold a two weeks series of meetings, beginning the middle of October.

September 24th, a "Sabbath committee" was organized at Wooster, O. Professor Seelye, son of Dr. J. H. Seelye, of Amherst, is chairman.

Dean Hart, of Denver, succeeded in his crusade against Sunday theaters. Of course, the Denver preachers are happy in thus cutting off competition in salary-earning.

The summonses issued in connection with the prosecution of Sunday traders at Yarmouth are lithographed, showing that they are kept in stock ready to be issued wholesale.—London Freethinker.

Exeter Nonconformists are up in arms against the Sunday League's excursions to Devonshire. The railways are being called upon to stop this wholesale desecration of the Sabbath.—London Freethinker.

The "News Worth Telling" compiler of the Christian Statesman narrates how, in Lawrence county, Pa., a correspondent of that paper, in conjunction with other bigots, closed a colored people's picnic because an admission fee was charged and cigars and other articles sold on Sunday.

Representatives of the various brotherhoods of railway employees on the "Big Four" met last Sabbath [Sunday] at Terre Haute to consult in regard to the strike now in progress on that road. We greatly regret to see these labor unions using the Sabbath for their business meetings, a custom which greatly weakens the protests that engineers, firemen, and brakemen have made in their national conventions against Sunday work.—Christian Statesman.

Properly, the Parliament is nothing more than a conference between the religions of the world, so that all may understand the claims and the defenses of each. Christianity can well afford to sustain such a comparison; and we believe that the outcome of the Parliament will be that instead of deepening "true brotherhood among the religions of the world"—to use the gushing phrase of the committee's prospectus—it will show that Christianity is in the world for conquest of false faiths, not for communion with them, and that it can have no fellowship with the superstitions and idolatries of the ethnic religions.—The Watchman.

The English chaplain at Victoria, in Mashonaland, has been inciting to the slaughter of the Matabele people. He says they are murderers, and "the divine command should be imperatively carried out at this time." But as he goes on to add, "Mashonaland is indeed a rich country, and will be one of the richest of our colonial possessions," it is pretty evident that he wants the Matabele exterminated for the same reason as Moses urged the divine command to slaughter the Canaanites—that the chosen people might possess their land. The missionary is always the forerunner of annexation. He preaches peace and opens the way for plunder.—London Freethinker.

The Catholics never tire of boasting of how they established religious liberty in Maryland. The fact is that they had to do it in order to secure liberty for themselves. England was at that time Episcopal, not papal; and in providing for liberty of conscience in Maryland the second Lord Baltimore, himself a papist, simply secured the colony against the otherwise probable establishment of the Church of England, or of Presbyterianism. Indeed, the greater part of the Maryland colonists were Presbyterians, and not papists; and as Presbyterianism was at that time striving for political ascendancy in England, and was already the established religion of Scotland, a guarantee of religious liberty was on the part of Lord Baltimore only a measure of self-defense.—American Sentinel.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 25.—Thomas Leyden, the ex-priest of New Jersey, spoke at Minneapolis last night, and his address was of such a character that the Roman Catholics of St. Paul determined not to let him speak here. The streets around the market house where he was billed to speak to-night were filled with an excited mob, armed with clubs, stones, eggs, and firearms, as early as 7 o'clock. While the crowd was surging around one of the entrances the market master came out and read a letter from City Clerk Prendergast, in which he peremptorily refused to allow Mr. Leyden the use of the hall on the ground that it was public property, a part of the taxes on which were paid by Roman Catholic citizens.—Daily papers. The city clerk's reason was valid, but how about the untaxed churches?

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5th.—Rev John T. James, who got notoriety by smashing liquor exhibits at the World's Fair, was in the police court to-day, charged with throwing a brick through a $300 plate glass window, destroying about $150 of stock in the liquor store of Chas. Kraemer on Seventh street, and very nearly inflicting serious injury upon Kraemer's wife and child. "Why did you do this?" the court asked the prisoner. "Because I am opposed to the rum traffic, and I want to break it up if possible," was his response. "Do you think this sort of business is going to stop it?" asked the judge. "Yes, sir, it will stop it if it becomes a general business throughout the country." "Well, it won't," "I only obeyed the spirit of God in my heart," the prisoner said. "But there is nothing in the spirit to show that you have a right to destroy the property of others," said the court. "I don't recognize whisky as property." The court committed the prisoner to the workhouse for examination as to his sanity.—New York World.

A year ago I was not only suspended from the church but was excommunicated. I saw very little chance of a change. As much despair as I felt, I never meant to change myself. I did not think there could be a change to benefit me until there had been a half-dozen eminently respectable funerals, which may be interpreted that I did not think I could be restored until a half-dozen eminent persons—possibly in the church—should die. I thought that if the Lord saw fit in spite of my growing years to restore me, he, in that sweet and gentle way of his, might gather up some of those eminently respectable and venerable persons. I would not have you think I wished their death, but, you know, there are some persons at whose death no one would grieve, and, as I said in a meeting a few years ago, if the czar of Russia should die I would not feel called upon to wear crêpe on my hat. Like the Lord, however, I would rather see the conversion of the wicked than their death. But the restoration has come about without so many eminently respectable funerals. There were several, and perhaps those who were left began to think there was some fatality about it, and came in out of the wet to save themselves. I was not particularly anxious about going to Rome. It took me a long time to make up my mind, but I am now glad that I decided to go.—Dr. McGlynn.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

Charles Bradlaugh is to have a statue at Northampton.

L. Ramón Chies, the great Spanish Freethinker, is slowly recovering from his illness.

One of the leaders of the Italian Peace Association is Marquis Pandolfi, the prominent Freethinker.

The church in Hungary owns over three and a quarter million acres of land, while the state has but four million acres.

The church of All Hallows in London still possesses an income originally given to it for the purpose of buying fagots for burning heretics.

D. Luis Herrera, editor of La Razón, Caracas, has been subject to a brutal assault by a number of priests who held a street parade in honor of some kind of saint.

The well-known poetess and Freethought writer, Angela Lopez de Agala, has entered upon her sentence of imprisonment at Barcelona, Spain, for blasphemy uttered in an article of hers published in the Nueva Catorra.

Times must be pretty hard in Spain. The salary of such of the clergy who have an income of more than $1,000 has been reduced 10 to 20 per cent. The pope has sanctioned the reduction, most likely fearing that did the clergy resist they would get nothing at all.

The good St. Ann is doing great business this year, hence the demands for her relics are increasing. It has been estimated by some impious person that the relics of St. Ann's material body are now so numerous that they will form at least three good-sized St. Anns.

Of the 287,000,000 inhabitants of British India 207,000,000 believe in the Vedas, 57,000,000 are Mohammedans, 9,000,000 nature worshipers, 7,000,000 Buddhists, 2,000,000 Sikhs, 1,400,000 Jains, 89,000 Parsees, 17,000 Jews. Here is a chance for Christian missionaries.

Mary Magdalen was possessed of devils, but a young girl at Gif, near Paris, is possessed of 28,000 devils. The doctor, M. Dumont, says she suffers from epileptic hysteria, but the archbishop of Versailles sustains the priest, and has given him permission to drive out every one of the 28,000 devils.

M. Benoit Malon, the founder of the Revue Socialiste, who died September 13th, at the age of fifty-two, was a Freethinking Socialist of the literary and intellectual class. He was one of the founders of the International and a member of the Commune of 1871, and has left many works on the economics, religion, morality, and history of the Socialist movement.

The Catholic church is keeping up its reputation as the "best" soul-saving concern. In the reform and industrial schools in England run by Catholics the mortality is 17.3 per cent among boys and 13.1 per cent among girls; while in Protestant schools of same kind the mortality is respectively 2.9 and 9.5 per cent. The more orthodoxy, the less science; the less science, the more deaths.

The Montreal Labor Congress thinks that there is taught too much catechism and too little grammar in the public schools of Quebec. The congress wants a council of public education elected by the people and under the management of a responsible minister. This proposed educational policy is "impious" according to ecclesiastical opinion, and the labor organizations are now roasted from every Catholic pulpit in Quebec.

New York and Brooklyn Freethinkers had better apply to a certain church in latter city in case they get a touch of cholera. A consignment of several bones of St. Rosalie have arrived in Brooklyn. St.

Rosalie was a female who flourished several hundred years ago in Italy. When she got crazy, she went to live in a cave, where she subsisted on grass until her death, when she began curing cholera. Considering the spreading of cholera in Europe, it seems to us rather inhuman to deprive the old continent of her valuable services just when they are most needed.

It is funny to hear Christians crow about their tolerance, as shown in the assembling of the Parliament of Religions, when we know they refused to the Freethinkers not alone participation in the proceedings, but even the use of the hall. And after all what is the parliament anyway, but simply the result of a fit of tolerance. No, give me the pagan Romans for tolerance. They kept a permanent "parliament" in their Pantheon where gods of all nations were set up for worship. But the bigoted Christians kicked against having Jesus adjoining the holy crowd, and for that reason were persecuted by some of the best Roman emperors.

The bigoted King Oscar II. of Sweden has, ever since the Freethought movement of Sweden started, shown himself to be a mere puppet in the hands of the clergy. His latest move is a bill punishing blasphemy. Ridicule of the Bible, the sacraments, and religious service; public expression of contempt for the Christian faith, and active opposition to same; unchristian life; employment of means destined to make members of the state church leave the same or partake in the services of other faiths (in Sweden a child born of parents either belonging to the state church or not actively identified with other religious faiths is considered by the state as belonging to the state church)—all these "crimes" to be punished with imprisonment. This nice document, which savors more of the Dark Ages than of our time, has been considered by the supreme court of Sweden and declared no good. Of course this bill will be indorsed by the sky-pilot glorification meeting at Upsala, but the Swedish congress is not so simple as King Oscar imagines; hence the beautiful inquisition document will be simply a legislative still-born.

In the public schools of France the Bible, catechism, prayers, etc., have no home, according to the law of March 28, 1882. Education is strictly secular. It is to Jules Ferry that France owes this great progress in civilization. About five hundred different text-books on ethics are used. Each school district has the liberty to select one of these books found on the lists of the yearly state teacher's conference. Among the most popular works of this kind are: Liard's "Lectures morales et littéraires" (Moral and Literary Lectures), which is used in forty-one departments (counties); Josts and Bräunig's "Lectures pratiques" (Practical Lectures), used in eighty departments; and Bruno's "Le Tour de la France par deux Enfants" (the Tour of France by Two Children), used in seventy-three departments, and which has reached the two hundred and nineteenth edition. The nearest Bruno comes to teaching religion in his book is the statement that we should show reverence to "la cause première" (the first cause). Liard does not mention the subject with one word, nor does Mm. Gréville in her book for the use of girls' schools. La Comite d'Études Morales, president Jean-Paul-Cu, and which has working members in most all countries, and is officially recognized by the Freethinkers of France, Belgium, and Spain, has under preparation a series of works which finally will be reproduced in a more popular form for the use of schools.

The Cause in the State of Washington.

The financial depression is keenly felt throughout the state; and when it becomes a serious study how to obtain any kind of employment whereby to earn the necessities of life for loved ones; when property-owners fail to pay grocer, butcher, and baker on account of non-receipt of rents—which the tenants have no possible means of paying, and the banks have stopped payment; when merchants, in spite of the discharge of clerks and every possible retrenchment, are offering their goods at actual cost, and for lack of cash find no buyers; when city and county treasurers, having been bulldozed or coaxed to loan funds to bankers and political sharks and finding no prospect of any return of the funds, have gobbled up all remaining cash and absconded; when bank cashiers and presidents rival each other in wrecking the bank and defrauding the depositors, it is not much to be wondered at that the contributions to the Washington Secular Union are meagre in the extreme, and that no appeals for payment of dues have been sent out by the secretary.

But despite this lamentable condition of things—with over fifteen hundred unemployed men in the city—the Tacoma Secular Union has heroically held its own. We have held our regular weekly (Tuesday evening) meetings, given a free lecture every Sunday evening, kept up our dramatic class, and two months ago inaugurated our Infidel Sunday-school. Our average attendance is twenty-eight children and thirty adults. We have music, singing, lessons in natural philosophy, and end with calisthenics (under the able tuition of Prof. O. H. Fhurburg, the most successful teacher of calisthenics and gymnastics in the entire West). Our Sunday-school grows in numbers and interest, and is doing effective work in adding to the number of members of the union.

A year and four months of lecturing every Sunday evening, added to other duties, necessitated my calling a halt. My health failed and I announced postponement of lectures for one month. Will resume on second Sunday in October. Regular weekly meeting, dramatic class, and Sunday-school continue without intermission.

I much regret that poverty precludes the possibility of my attending the Congress at Chicago, and ask especial consideration of all who do attend of the suggestions made in my letter of greeting.

C. B. REYNOLDS,

Sec. Washington Secular Union.

Tacoma, Wash.

Lectures and Meetings.

COLONEL INGERSOLL'S LECTURE DATES.

The people along the line of the following towns will, during October, be made happy by a visit by Colonel Ingersoll, who will speak on the following dates:

Oct. 15 St. Louis, Mo.	Oct. 22 Kansas City, Mo.
" 16 Springfield, Ill.	" 23 St. Joseph, "
" 17 Quincy, "	" 25 Lincoln, Neb.
" 19 Omaha, Neb.	" 27 Sioux City, Ia.
" 20 Council Bluffs, Ia.	" 29 Chicago, Ill.
" 21 Atchison, Kan.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York. Its lectures for October are:

October 13th.—"Christianity and After:" T. B. Wakeman.
October 20th.—"Freethought and Morality:" S. P. Putnam.
October 27th.—"Arbitration:" Albert Day.
E. B. Foote, Jr., Presiding Officer.

J. E. REMSBURG goes to Wisconsin after the Congress. His appointments are as follows:

Lodi, Oct. 14	West Salem, Oct. 16
Hillsborough, "	15

As previously announced in our columns, John R. Charlesworth will commence a tour Eastward. The following appointments are on his list, and friends along the route desiring lectures should address him at once:

Oct. 15 Cincinnati, O.	Nov. 3 Manhattan Liberal Club, New York.
" 19 Golden Pond, Ky.	" 5 Newark, N. J.
" 20 "	" 19 Boston, Mass.
" 21 "
" 22 "

THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN will lecture before the Newark Liberal League, Sunday, October 15th.

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Society holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Fraternity Rooms, Bedford avenue and South Second street.

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, will meet on and after October 17th in the Skerrett Building, northeast corner of Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock.

October 17th.—P. J. Lackensteen (a native Hindoo), "The Religion of the Hindoos."
October 24th.—Miss Constance MacKenzie, "Effects of Education on Character."
October 31st.—Rev. Wm. I. Nichols, "Unitarianism; Its History and Principles."
November 7th.—Miss Voltairine de Cleyre. (Subject to be announced hereafter.)
November 14th.—Dr. Francis Emily White, "A Study in Sociology."
November 21st.—Ida C. Craddock, "Survivals of Sex Worship in Christianity and Paganism. What Christianity Has Done for the Marital Relation."
November 28th.—Mrs. C. B. Kilgore, "The Congress of Religions."

THE fifth Annual Convention of the Oregon State Secular Union will be held in Red Men's hall, corner of Second and Salmon street, Portland, Ore., October 20th, 21st, and 22d. Entertainment will be provided for visiting Liberals by the members of the First Secular church of Portland and therefore those who expect to attend will please inform the secretary, Katie Kehm Smith, Oregon City, Ore. There will be important business before the Convention that should interest every Liberal in the state. Let the attendance be large. An interesting program will be provided. By order of the executive committee.

The Freethinkers' International Congress.

The evening session of the first day brought out a large number of local people as well as visitors, and the hall was crowded. Moses Harman appeared upon the scene, erect, white-haired, talkative, and well aware that he had been a martyr. Mr. Betts placed pictures of Paine and Ingersoll, which he afterwards tried to sell, at the wings, and when they were in place the Zither Club played a fine "selection," followed by young Rensburg on the piano. He in turn was followed by his father who had found "Five Hundred Flaws in Christ's Credentials," but had time to tell of only forty or so. However, these were enough for the purpose, and the audience applauded his effort heartily.

When Mr. Rensburg had dethroned Jesus, a big bundle was put on the table, a cloth laid over it, a package of manuscript piled on top, and behind it appeared Mr. L. K. Washburn. Mr. Washburn is as finished a speaker as he is charming gentleman and jolly companion, and the audience literally fell in love with him. It was well that his wife accompanied him.

After a collection had been taken, Mr. Watts, rosy and strong in physique, incisive and eloquent in speech, gave the multitude who had waited to hear him one of his old-time, rousing addresses. Mr. Watts's return to old England has not, apparently, injured his Americanism, and he is as much in love with some of the institutions of this country as ever. And the people were as glad to see him as he was to meet them.

Mr. John R. Charlesworth succeeded Mr. Watts with an address on "Freethought—What It Implies, Its Power and Results." Few speakers could have held an audience at the hour of night Mr. Charlesworth began to speak, but the people, at first attracted by his resonant voice and evident earnestness of purpose, listened later to his most effective and convincing arguments with real appreciation, notwithstanding the hands on the clock were going toward the figure 12.

MONDAY MORNING.

Mr. Putnam started the Congress going Monday morning, as Mr. Waite, who was slated to preside, did not appear until late. When he finally came in, and promptly objected to things in general, and in particular as to the way the certificates had been prepared, Charlesworth interrupted him and explained how it was that room had been left for only one of the three presidents of the Congress to sign at a time. Mr. Putnam said all three signatures should ornament the paper, and a motion to that effect was about to be carried when Mr. Waite avowed that he would not sign them anyway. A motion that all present were to be considered delegates was carried.

Mr. Steiner, of Committee on Credentials, read the following as partial list of delegates present:

MASSACHUSETTS.

L. K. Washburn, Boston. W. B. Clark, Worcester.
Ernest Mendum, " Susan H. Wixon, Fall River.
Dr. C. H. Simms, " "

MICHIGAN.

Wm. C. Decker, Crawford. H. W. Gillette, Bonny.
G. J. Beck, Dowagiac. Alex Campbell, Elk Rapids.
Melvin A. Root, Bay City. Albert Barwis, Wexford.

MISSOURI.

Wm. Cook, Savannah. G. G. Beck, St. Joseph.

NEW YORK.

Geo. H. Look, Plattsburg. Ira Adams, North Java.
Wm. S. Galloway, " E. M. Macdonald,
T. B. Wakeman, New York. New York.

OHIO.

Chas. R. Kimberly, H. A. Pierce, Dayton.
Fincastle. S. M. Bowers,
John M. Carrigan, Dayton. North Baltimore.
B. A. Roloson, Delphos. W. J. Dutton, Elba.
Miss Nora B. Roloson, " Sol. Benson, Brandywine.
A. Zimmerman, Beach City. Dora Brundage, Delphos.
G. B. Vanness, J. W. Harrington,
Mechanicsburg. Cincinnati.

INDIANA.

Mrs. Sara J. Guild, W. W. Wilson, Spiceland.
Indianapolis. Fred Garing, North Judson.
Mrs. L. G. Shelley, " Geo. W. Wright, Kentland.

CALIFORNIA.

Mrs. Paulina Van Hoeter, Dr. J. L. York, San José.
Grass Valley. H. W. Youmans, Oakland.
John Sunter, French Gulch.

ARIZONA.

Geo. N. Adams, Aravapa. Dr. R. V. Tripp, St. Thomas.

MINNESOTA.

B. Peabody, Utica. E. C. Sly, Edina Mills.
L. K. Johnson, Steele. James Geddes, Delavan.
J. L. Johnson, " Otto J. Knipps, Adrian.
J. W. Hasmer, Janesville.

NEBRASKA.

H. B. Smith, Gordon. C. F. W. Marquardt, Norfolk.
C. W. Smith, " C. W. Goff, Kearney.

ILLINOIS.

H. Wettstein, Byron. S. P. Putnam, Chicago.
W. J. Adams, Chicago. C. B. Waite, "
F. Lelzenburger, " Philip Bregstone, "
W. H. Snelson, " A. M. Freeman, "
Anna Foster, " E. A. Stevens, "
A. C. Richwald, " Mrs. C. V. Webb, "
Emanuel Auspate, " B. W. Carrington, "
George Black, " Jens L. Christensen, "
Geo. Borst, " Henry Steinbock, "
Mrs. M. A. Freeman, " Washington I. Fox, Capron.
Emma Geschefsky, " Dr. P. C. Mosier, Homer.
J. C. Hart, " Joseph Haigh, Chebana.
C. G. Bastwick, " John Steves, Durand.
S. J. Livingston, " Marc Rowe, Redmon.
W. O. Davies, " N. S. Hazen, Rock Island.
Geo. Harris, " A. G. Templeton, Harney.
S. Murray, " James Tuttle, Atlanta.
J. R. Charlesworth, " T. D. Tuttle, "

IOWA.

A. H. Petty, Correctionville. Edward Grey, Brigham.
H. B. Smith, Glidden. Thos. Garth, M. D., Clarion.
Chas. McCauley, What Cheer. J. C. Brown, Shenandoah.
H. P. Miles, Sioux City. J. W. Humphrey, Shenandoah.
J. M. Peck, Sr., Ottumwa. Mrs. Humphrey, Shenandoah.
J. W. Dayton, " John Mahara, Charles City.
Franklin Steiner, Des Moines. G. A. F. De Lespinasse, Orange City.
J. A. Greenhill, Clinton.

A. A. Raymond, B. Thorpe, Beaver Dam, Wis.
Fon du Lac, Wis. M. V. Dadisman, "
Voltaire de Cleve, Philadelphia, Pa. Luray, Va.
D. G. Crow, Fort Clark, Tex. Jas. A. Conant, "
David S. Sincare, Philadelphia, Pa. Ft. Fairfield, Me.
Wm. McDonald, Washington, D. C. John Aird, Seattle, Wash.
Paran Davis, Longly, Ont. Gustave Angerstein, " Frederick, Md. A. Peterson, Tacoma, Wash.
N. D. McDonald, Chas. Watts, "
Cheyenne, Wyo. Birmingham, England.
Mrs. Lewis Moffett, J. E. Rensburg, "
Seward, Neb. Atchison, Kan.
T. G. Ruffhead, J. I. Shaw, Waco, Tex.
Williamsport, Pa. E. W. Crouch, Huron, S. D.
A. G. Langburg, Golden Pond, Ky. J. T. Bogard, " Grove City, Fla. W. G. Mellinger, " T. J. McKinney, Cumberland, Md. Max Thurman, "
Hoxie, Kan. Neenah, Wis.
J. P. Jasper, Wisconsin. W. C. Sturoc, "
M. E. Hibbard, Sunapee, N. H.
Curtis Bay, Md. A. C. Humphrey, "
Jas. White, Sub Rosa, Ark. Atchison, Kan.
D. A. Blodgett, T. G. Humphrey, "
Grand Rapids, Mich. Atchison, Kan.
A. W. Miller, Portland, Ore.

The treasurer's report not being ready, Mr. Charlesworth read the credentials of foreign delegates. These have all been printed in THE TRUTH SEEKER. A letter from J. Hacker was read, urging that Colonel Ingersoll be run for president of these United States. Mr. Hacker closed his epistle with poetry. Mr. C. B. Reynolds sent the following:

TACOMA, WASH.

TO THE CONGRESS OF LIBERALS ASSEMBLED AT CHICAGO, ILL., Greeting: May the glorious gathering inspire each and all present with a spirit of emulation in carrying out the grand principle of Liberalism, "Seeking individual happiness by promoting the general good," and so making secondary all personal ambition, prejudice, and pet hobbies, devote their every energy to securing harmony, and formulating a practical plan of work that shall advance the cause we love.

I respectfully suggest that the establishment of local Infidel Sunday-schools would do infinitely more to advance the cause of Liberalism than any Infidel university which at best could only result in waste of funds much needed for more practical purposes.

Even now the children of intelligent Liberals attending existing universities are doing effective missionary work, arousing Christian fellow-students to discussion and investigation—leavening the lump.

To gather all the Infidel children into an Infidel university would be to give over the Christian students at existing universities to bigotry and superstition.

The education that would be afforded by local Infidel Sunday-schools would better qualify for missionary work, not alone those who may attend a university, but also those who have to work in factories, shops, and stores. For want of such schools thousands of children of Infidels are attending Christian Sunday-schools, their young minds poisoned with superstition. Surely the pressing need of some plan to promote the establishment of local Infidel Sunday schools deserves the best thought and earnest consideration of the Congress.

All Liberals have felt the need of some stronger tie, some closer bond of union, something to insure greater degree of interest in each other's welfare. In this connection, it is a just cause of reproach against us that we make no provision for the destitute widows and orphans of Liberals.

Would not the formation of a coöperative insurance and benefit society, something like the "Ancient Order of United Workmen," supply both demands?

Why not shorten the oratorical pyrotechnics and devote time to formulating and perfecting plans for supplying these great needs?

Fraternally yours, ever for reason, right and truth,
C. B. REYNOLDS, Sec. Wash. Secular Union.

J. Spencer Ellis, of Secular Thought, wrote that he could not attend the Congress, and regretted it. Mr. Louis Levine sent a poem which the secretary of the Congress lost before the reporter could get it, and Mr. S. F. Benson, of Pierson, Ia., set forth his views as to organization and the best method of accomplishing the same.

The next thing on the program was the reception of foreign delegates, but as Mr. Watts was the only one who presented his person to the gaze of the multitude, and the credentials and proxies of the others having been read out of order, there was nothing to do but ask Mrs. Kinsella to sing a song, which she did sweetly. Mr. Waite called for Mr. Hoover, but that person not being present, the time was filled up on earnest solicitation from the chair by a man from the West who evidently valued himself too highly to want to talk to a small audience. All he wanted, he said, was to show himself, and this was a good time to do it—hey? He had been visiting his relatives, and O dear! dear! What a time had had. The people of the East were narrow. See? But they must take a good square look at him (the entertainer). He believed in the free coinage of silver. Anyone one who didn't want politics in this Congress should not come himself. Free-thought talk was namby-pamby. Materialism was too narrow. See? He (the entertainer) had traveled up and down the Pacific coast and traveled through Australia. He couldn't get supported by the hardshell Liberals, so he talked Spiritualism. He wanted all the help he could get. See?

The entertainer then sang in minstrel tones—"The Bible leads to glory," repeated that all he desired was to show himself—see? see?—and asked to be permitted to retire in a tone which signified that he wanted the audience to tell him to go on. But he was allowed to go, and Mr. Putnam read the following message to the Congress from Saladin:

TWO PETTICOATS, KATE'S AND ANN'S.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I should, today, have dearly liked to have been with you in person. Consider that I am so; for heart and soul I am with you, and with all everywhere whose hammers go to break the fetters that priestcraft has riveted on the limbs of the human race. Since heart and soul I am with you, mind not that my poor tenement of clay is far away from you, on a different continent of the globe. Our brother-in-the-cause, Samuel P. Putnam, has generously volunteered to give you his voice for mine; and in my few remarks I venture to make to you you have my essential presence.

I need not advise you that in America the only enemy to our cause that is really formidable is the church of Rome. The other church which you have there—and which essentially you inherited from England—is a poor thing, a mere tag or tassel to Ann Boleyn's petticoat. Christendom is a matter of petticoats; the old section stood by that of Henry VIII's consort Catherine of Aragon, the new section by that of the same Henry's illicit flame, Ann Boleyn. A third petticoat was not without effect, viz., that of Luther's deflowered nun, Catherine Von Bora.

Who was Henry VIII? According to Prof. Edwin Johnson, he is the second authentic English king, all the other English kings before him save one not having been born from the womb of woman but from the heads of monks. Many kings, I feel certain, have been conceived and gestated in and have been born of a monk's head. All our really romantic and magnificent ones, like Arthur and Alfred, have been so born. By the bye, "born of the womb of the Virgin Mary" means born of the head of a monk—a highly respectable parentage!

But to return to Henry VIII. of the six Janets. There are sundry obscure points in the reign of this sovereign. Even Fronde has failed to clear them up. But the school board of these advanced files of time has come to the rescue, and re Henry VIII. the crooked has been made straight and the rough way made smooth. Here is a school-board essay on the bluff father of Queen Bess:

"King Henry VIII. was the greatest widower that ever lived. He was born at Anno Domino in the year 1066. He had five hundred and ten wives besides children. The first was beheaded, and afterwards executed; the second was revoked, she never smiled again, but she said the word Calais would be found on her heart after her death.

"The greatest man in this reign was Sir Garret Wolsey. He was surnamed the boy bachelor. He was born at the age of fifteen unmarried.

"Henry VIII. was succeeded on the throne by his great-grandmother, the beautiful and accomplished Mary Queen of Scots, sometimes known as the Lady of the Lake, or the Lay of the Last Minstrel."

If the school board sage in Standard IV. will permit me to say so, there is just one point he has not satisfactorily elucidated. Henry VIII. is generally accounted the founder of the Church of England. Did he himself belong to the church he founded; or, did he remain to the last a Roman Catholic? Let us see. His (Henry VIII.) last will, which bears date Dec. 30, 1546, runs altogether in the strain of the old religion, excepting the title that he gives himself of being the supreme head of the Church of England immediately under God. He professes his belief in the real presence of Christ in the sacrament of the altar; he "instantly desires" the prayers of the blessed virgin Mary, and of "all the holy company of heaven;" he directs altars to be erected, and masses to be offered for the repose of his soul, while the world shall endure, and he assigns a sum of one thousand marks to be distributed in alms on the day of his burial, ordering his executors to "move the poor people to pray heartily unto God for the remission of his offenses and the wealth of his soul." (Dodd's "Church History," vol. i., p. 320.)

What do you think of that? The Roman Catholic church had two presidents—God and the Pope—both of them unmarried. The Anglican church had also two—God and Henry Tudor—one unmarried, the other not. This seems to have been all the difference as far as Henry VIII. was concerned. D'Aubigné has written a bigish book about the Reformation, far too big a book to have been devoted to a pious disturbance over a petticoat. If there be a row about "religion" or anything else, be sure there is a lady in it. The only thing that remains to be asked is "Who is she?"

The Church of England is founded upon two petticoats—that of Kate and that of Ann. Kate's, to Henry VIII., was not as nice as Ann's—hence the Church of England, a big thing to come out of a petticoat. The effect could hardly have been more decisiv had the garters and slippers been thrown in. Never such a row over a petticoat since Achilles, Hector, and the rest of them danced a bloody reel for ten terrible years over that of Helen of Troy. Of course, vide Genesis, the greatest and primal row of all was brought about by a petticoat. But no! Petticoat, indeed! The lady in Genesis brought about the primal row before she had taken to wearing as much as an apron of fig leaves. This first Janet before she had even a petticoat let us into a scrape out of which we have not got, even to this hour.

Eve, minus a petticoat, got Adam kicked out of Eden. Ann, with one, got the papists kicked out of Westminster Abbey. In a sense, there have been a good many attempts to get us, Adam's representatives, back into Eden. If all reports be true, there was, some eighteen centuries ago, a considerable rumpus in Palestine with a view to effecting that end. But let that pass. There have also been attempts on the part of the papists to get back into Westminster Abbey. By them there has been a good deal of praying with that object, and that counts for much. But they do more than pray. Inside the Abbey there is the tomb of a "saint," a Saxon flapdoodle mythos, yeleft Edward the Confessor. On a certain day of the year certain of the papists must visit this tomb or burst. That day is the 13th of October. It is the feast of Edward the Confessor. From this it would appear that this famished fable had a feast (with a big F) only once a year. What he feasted on on that day I know not. He must have been one of the leanest of saints. Even a boa constrictor requires a feast more than once a year. However, on the anniversary of his "feast" the Scarlet Lady tucks up her red skirts and walks into Westminster Abbey without saying to the Protestant frump, "By your leave, madam." Recently the Universe, the Scarlet Lady's high-flying and holy organ in the press, plumed itself on the unwonted and consoling sight of the Catholics reassembled in the Abbey from which some three centuries ago they had been driven in the row over the rival petticoats of Kate and Ann.

The Universe proceeds: "The fane, forcibly reft from the purposes of its foundation, polluted by the rude steps of unbelievers"—that is, of those who sided with Ann's petticoat against Kate's—"and desecrated by unworthy worship for so long, received for a time a congregation such as it once welcomed. It was the Feast of Edward the Confessor; and from the neighboring temple of SS. Peter and Paul, when high mass had been sung, the entire gathering of the devout, headed by their pastors, made pilgrimage to the shrine of the canonized s. v. reign. There they prayed and besought the king that the England he loved might be brought back to the true faith." The weekly Register gave the names of the Romish ecclesiastics present, and described the procession of "tensured monks and pilgrims" who visited the Abbey, "fervently kissed the shrine of the saint, and pressed their rosaries to it, in spite of the protest of the vergers that 'visitors are requested not to touch the tomb.'"

Fancy going to his tomb to pray to a dead man to restore to dominancy in England what should long ago have been a dead faith! Still, praying to men who are dead and to gods who never lived has done wonders in the interests of priestcraft. It has caused the dupe to lift up his eyes to his "father which art in heaven" while his brother, or friar, which art on earth, picked his pocket. All the heavy pocket-picking in the world has been done in the name of the Lord.

The time draweth near when Kate's petticoat, the one that was favored by Pope Leo X., shall triumph over Ann's, the one that was favored by Henry VIII. The Catholics shall yet recover Westminster abbey and be able to make a kirk or mill of it. At all events, it is not Protestants that shall keep them out. The star of Ann's petticoat is in the wane. Never in that region of the world nominally "Christian" did aggressiv and defiant Rationalism close and grapple with the battalions of the cross as she does to-day.

Never since the Reformation era did the Scarlet Woman flaunt her skirts so proudly in the great cities of both the Eastern and Western hemispheres. Protestantism has no geographical area that she did not win by the zealous fanaticism of her first rush. The Protestant countries of the sixteenth century are the Protestant countries of to-day, and no new ones have been added thereto. Nay, and the old ones are rent and riven; and the seed sown by Luther and Spalatin, by Huss and Calvin, by Wycliffe and Sawtree, by Knox and Melville, has grown up almost choked with Romish weeds and Rationalist tares. The mentation and the aspiration of the fifteenth century were not identical with those that actuate the nineteenth. The floods of human folly have worn other channels, the currents of human tendency have torn their way through other rocks and over other shoals.

The old battlefields are deserted, and only through the mists of departed time we can descry them, with their rank grasses, broken and shapeless weapons, half-obiterated trenches, and dull mounds marking more or less dishonored graves. The battalions have reeled and surged into other fields; and there, with other weapons and with other battle-cries, the often-changing, but never-ending, tide of human conflict ebbs and flows. Guns are yet planted on the ramparts and there is a rattle and blaze of musketry from the crenels of the old half-way fort between Rome and Rationalism; but the shot and shell fall wide of the mark. Formerly, the old fort was in the center of operations; now it is on the extreme left flank; and miles away the real conflict rages. The half-way house is tottering to its fall. The emergency to meet which it was built has passed away. Its giants are dead, its heroes are no more; its prestige is over, and "Ichabod" is inscribed over its gateway. A shabby despotism three centuries ago, it modified a terrible despotism, and thereby justified its existence; but now, Why cumbereth it the ground? Hardly taking it into account in military strategy, up on the side of the windy hill the banners wave and the troops are ranking, the forces of Rationalism and Rome; and with them and no other rests the balance between victory and defeat in the death-struggle of these latter ages.

The whole thing very much depends upon the holy trinity of £ s. d. Henry VIII., awarded the confiscated lands of the church to such of the English nobles as would assist him against Leo. This settled the matter. It was upon this sort of thing "the Reformation" depended for its success. A few obstinate persons like a religion by which they are likely to be burnt or hanged; but the great majority of persons select a religion that will pay. And, if it will only pay, all trifles like doctrinal differences can be squared. Illustrativ of this a story was wont to be told by Dan. O'Connell, who, as a devout Catholic, made a pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Thomas of Canterbury every year. "On my first visit," said O'Connell, "I did not know the exact spot where the saint fell martyred, but the verger showed it me. I knelt down and kissed the stone which had received his life-blood. The verger, in horror, told me that he would be dismissed if the dean saw that he allowed any 'popish work' there. I, to console him, asked him his fee, and he said a shilling. I gave him half a crown, saying the additional one-and-sixpence was for his fright. He thanked me and, having carefully looked out into the grounds, he said, 'He's not there, sir; you may kiss it again for nothing. When a real gentleman comes, I let him do as he likes.' The 'real gentleman' can 'do as he likes' with the sanctities—if he only pays."

Into Westminster Abbey itself Romanism marches, waving Kate's petticoat over Ann's. So much for the England of Wycliffe! But Rome, an enemy of far other mettle than Protestantism, confronts you, ranked under far other standards than the petticoats of Ann Boleyn and Kate Von Bora. By and by when, on the 13th of October, you invade Westminster Abbey you may find the contents bill of the Agnostic Journal and THE TRUTH SEEKER posted upon the tomb of your Edward the Confessor and not automaton Anglican vergers whimpering to you "not to touch;" but, instead of these, the descendants of the Ingersolls, the Macdonalds, the Washburns, the Putnams, the Huxleys, the Spencers, the Julians, the Laings, the Momeris, and "a host which no man can number," prepared to fight with you a bloodless but tremendous Armageddon for the mastery of the world. Rome, there is your danger, there your ides of March! conqueror for two thousand years, there you will be conquered! There, in your red raiment of murder, you shall lie, unpitied and abhorred! Yours shall be a tomb more horrible and unhallowed than that of Tamerlane, and your bastard daughter, Protestantism, who predeceased you, shall lie unhonored by your side! No one shall come to weep under the curse and the upas upon your grave! The finger-posts of history shall point to it with an index painted in blood! The numberless, the infinit multitude whose bodies you consigned to slaughter, and whose souls you sent to the damned with hatred and imprecation shall haunt it evermore! The sun shall shine down on it with disc blushing red as the seas of gore that you shed, and the moon shall turn from it in shame! Write it vast on the vault of heaven, write it in hieroglyphics of fire, write the new Prophecy of Capys—"Rome shall perish, and reason rule the world."

W. STEWART ROSS, (SALADIN).

MONDAY AFTERNOON.

In the afternoon the first thing was the letter from G. W. Foote, president of the National Secular Society of England, which Mr. Putnam read as subjoined:

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE INTERNATIONAL FREETHOUGHT CONGRESS AT CHICAGO, Ladies and Gentlemen: It is with profound regret that I find myself unable to take a personal part in your proceedings. To say nothing of the trip across the Atlantic, with its lazy life in immaculate air, and its freedom from letters, morning and evening newspapers, and other blessings of civilization—I should have rejoiced to meet face to face a number of brave American Freethinkers, and above all to spend an hour in the society of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, whose name is a household word among the Freethinkers of England. We think of him as a brilliant intellect and a beloved personality, and many of us would meet death more resignedly if we could only see him in the flesh, and hear but once the accents of his living eloquence.

There is no need to trouble you with the reasons of my absence. The long and the short of the story is, that I cannot very well leave England in the present state of our party's affairs. Happily you have amongst you my friend and colleague, Mr. Charles Watts, a vice-president of our society, who is authorized to represent us at your Congress and who enjoys our complete confidence in that capacity. At the risk of making him blush—though I admit that the bloom of his modesty has been brushed off by the rough hand of experience—I venture to say that he is an excellent specimen of the John Bull; with a sound mind in a sound body, a broad back for the world's burdens, and a ready smile for its frowns: added to which he is a very fine speaker and an extremely skilful debater. With him to represent us, we shall cut something more than a passable figure at your Congress. And now I must ask you to take your eyes off Mr. Watts and let him recover from his confusion.

I do not, however, cease blowing the trumpet of old England. This is the land of Darwin, of Mill, of Huxley, of Herbert Spencer; the land of Byron and Shelley; the land of Charles Bradlaugh, the hero of a hundred fights for freedom; the land of the author of the "Age of Reason." Like Shakspeare's yeomen at Agincourt, the limbs of Thomas Paine were made in England. He was one of the greatest of the founders of the United States of America, but we produced him—the dedicated champion of liberty of thought and the rights man, from whose pen there fell the sentence which eclipses the shibboleths of all the creeds, a sentence worthy to be written in star-fire on the brow of night—"The world is my country, mankind are my brethren, and to do good is my religion."

Yes, Old England may hold up her head even in an International Freethought Congress, not in braggadocia, but with a feeling that she has a right there, that her place is neither an usurpation nor a concession.

English Freethought—I regret to say it in one sense, I rejoice to say it in another—is far wider than the limits of the National Secular Society. It is a leaven in the general mind. It creeps into books, magazines, and newspapers. It effects the very churches. There are clergymen here, filling theological chairs at universities, who are more drastic though less pointed than Thomas Paine himself in their treatment of the Old Testament. Even in Scotland, the land of John Knox, there are Professor Bruce and Professor Dods, whose writings would have raised every hair on the heads of the early opponents of Thomas Paine. Yet they are allowed to sit peacefully in their chairs. The church cannot afford to turn them out. It turned out Professor Robertson Smith some years ago, and let him loose upon the world unmuzzled. Having learnt a little wisdom, it now prefers to keep its heretical professors, and only asks them to draw it as mild as they can.

The National Secular Society is really an organization of militant Freethinkers. We take the odium of our principles, we propagate them boldly, and we do it with success. A very large proportion of the most active workers in all advanced movements have passed through our ranks. We are the recruiters of the army of progress. It is our conviction that to rescue men from the thrall of superstition is to liberate their intelligence for the solution of all the problems of society. Fruitful thought is impossible while the mind is chloroformed by religion. And the proof of this is to be found in the list of those who have sown germinating ideas in the soil of our civilization.

The organization of Freethought in England, under the National Secular Society, is, I believe, more complete than it is in any other country in the world. Branches of this society are planted in most of the large towns. In some places they have their own halls, despite the infamous law which prevents Freethought societies, as such, from holding any property. A notable feature of our work in London is the outdoor propaganda. During the summer months, in the public parks and other open spaces, our speakers address crowds of people. And we find this good for the speakers themselves. It was Emerson who said that a course of mobs is excellent training for an orator. You must interest an outdoor meeting, or it melts away, and you are left to waste your sweetness on the desert air; whereas a man cannot decently leave a meeting within four walls unless he enjoys the advantage of a seat near the door.

The word "secular" is here associated in the public mind with a certain policy of public education. It implies the banishment of religion from our state-supported schools. According to our education acts, the Bible can be read and commented upon in such schools, but "denominational" teaching, as they call it, is forbidden. This is clearly a compromise. It is a treaty between Christian sects. But there is always more or less quarreling over the matter; for here, as elsewhere, the Christians are a happy family; and this quarreling has made many persons who are not Freethinkers sick of the very name of religious education. A great battle is imminent over this question, and theology will be defeated. If it be true, as John Ruskin said, that the way to empty jails is to fill schools, it is no less true that the way to empty churches is to keep religion out of the schools. The priests know this as well as we do. They will fight with the savage instinct of self-preservation. But they will be beaten. With a free press and platform, and a popular legislature and government, it is impossible for any combination of churches to stem the tide of progress.

In England, as in America, churches, tabernacles, and all sorts of bethels are exempted from taxation. This is a virtual endowment of religion by the state, and against the foundation principles of a free commonwealth. Religion, like other forms of opinion, is a personal matter. Those who are whole need not a physician, and should not be taxed to support one. If a man wants a spiritual doctor, let him pay for attendance and physic. Happily this principle was adopted by the wise founders of the American Constitution. Religion is not directly established in the United States; in Great Britain it has a splendid position and magnificent endowments. The Church of England has a total income of about ten millions ($50,000,000) a year, which exceeds the total amount devoted to education; that is, we spend more to make children candidates for heaven than we spend to make them citizens of earth. It is certain, however, that this legacy from Feudalism is doomed to extinction. The Irish church was disestablished by Mr. Gladstone; the Welsh church has already received warning; the Scotch church is preparing for its last fight, and the English church is aware that, though it will go last, its days are numbered. One by one the relics of Feudalism are undermined and overthrown. The time is not so far distant when England will be a true republic. The old country will then, I hope, be knit more closely with the great republic of the West, which shares our blood, speaks our language, and inherits our literature; the republic that was sanctified by the blood of freedom shed for liberty, that was ennobled by the sword of Washington and the pen of Thomas Paine, that destroyed the curse of slavery at the cost of an unparalleled sacrifice, and produced in Walt Whitman the poet of the new democracy, who sounded loud and clear the réveille of the great new day of humanity.

In the light of that dawn how poor and petty are the artificial distinctions of nationality, race, and creed! In hoping to be knit more closely to the great republic of the West, we also hope to be knit more closely to our eastern neighbors in the united states of Europe. It is in this spirit that we salute the first International Congress of Freethinkers ever held in America. We see in it a fresh promise of human brotherhood. The thinkers, the seekers for truth, the lovers of liberty and equality, the haters of priestcraft and privilege, in every land on earth belong to the same fraternity. They waft a message to each other across frontiers and seas; a message of courage for the sometimes hard and bitter present, a message of hope for the grand and glorious future.

G. W. FOOTE,

President National Secular Society, England

W. S. Bell was next on the program, but he is in New York studying phrenology and not at Chicago. J. H. Burnham sent his speech, as he could not attend owing to the illness of his wife. Mr. Charlesworth read the speech, which was good, and which THE TRUTH SEEKER hopes to print shortly. Mr. Herman Wettstein read an essay which will interest students. He is an original investigator in the field of metaphysical speculation, and those who like that kind of mental exercise will find him a valuable teacher.

David S. Cincose followed Mr. Wettstein. Mr. Cincose's claim to distinction is that he is colored, has been a Baptist preacher, and is now an Infidel converted by THE TRUTH SEEKER. In Philadelphia, where he resides, he is called the "Colored Bob Ingersoll." Mr. Cincose made a pleasant little reminiscent speech and a favorable impression upon the audience.

TUESDAY MORNING.

Tuesday morning was devoted to Federation work. Mr. Charlesworth read his report, as follows:

FREETHOUGHT FEDERATION OF AMERICA.—SECRETARY'S REPORT.

In presenting this report of the work done by the Federation for the past year, it is my purpose to preface it with a brief review of the circumstances which have called it into being, and made its existence necessary. It is a significant fact that for some years past the Freethinkers of America had become very indifferent regarding an active propagation of their principles and ideas; nor has this state of things entirely passed away to-day—a fact to be deplored by those who for years have been laboring with untiring energy to secure the emancipation of conscience and the redemption of humanity. The United States of America has been looked upon by the world as a great democratic institution, whose government was purely secular in character and whose Constitution was a safeguard from any attempts that might be made to change the meaning and character of the federal government. Whatever may have been the feeling of constitutional safety held by the Freethinkers of America, they must not forget that in times of a national crisis constitutional methods are entirely discarded and overthrown, an illustration of which is afforded by the late Civil War.

The Constitution of a country stands as a safeguard to the minority, as a protection against the oppression of the majority that may be in power; but of late the legislators of the United States have shown a remarkable aptitude for discarding the Constitution altogether from their deliberations. This sense of security, or constitutional safety, no longer prevails, for while the Freethinkers as a body have shown such indifference upon national issues, the orthodox people have been more active in their efforts, and have gradually been forging chains to bind down the boasted liberties of the American nation. The Freethinkers of this country will remember the many attempts that have been made, within the last few years, to amend the Constitution in a manner directly calculated to incorporate in the laws of the federal government enactments that should distinctly recognize the Christian system of religion as our national religion, and sought by the law of the land to enforce an observance of that religion upon all alike. In this respect I have only to remind you of the effort of the God-in-the-Constitution party, and the several attempts to enact religious laws, instanced by the introduction into Congress of the Blair Sunday bill and the Blair Educational bill; and furthermore, I would wish you to bear in mind that these bills were defeated by a small majority. I cite these instances merely to remind you of the ever increasing activity of the church to control, for their own purposes, our national legislature; and to show also the pressing necessity of organized action upon the part of Freethinkers to resist and oppose them.

The efforts of the church party to change the secular character of our government had not met with much success, except, perhaps, in certain localities by the enactment of Sunday-observance laws through the assemblies of certain states; but even these cannot be enforced rigidly without spirited opposition by individuals, and even societies, who are opposed to any such laws. But at length, by persistent effort, they met with success, when, by extensive lobbying at Washington, by forged petitions and perjury of the grossest kind, they induced Congress, during the session of 1892, to enact a law closing the World's Fair on Sunday. The methods resorted to in order to accomplish this, though vile in the extreme, served to gain their end, and with them "the end justified the means." Throughout the earlier part of this controversy the Freethinkers were apparently contented over the matter. They felt sure that Congress would never violate the national Constitution, so comparatively nothing was done to oppose the step and Congress asserted itself greater than the Constitution, for it violated the spirit and letter of that document by enacting and declaring it a law of the land that the World's Fair should be closed on Sunday.

It was then that the promoters of the Federation, fully alive to the dangers that menaced the nation from all sides, at the hands of priestcraft, determined at once to establish an organization of Freethinkers for purely political purposes, a step which had frequently been urged by the leaders of our party for years past. They realized that no lasting good would ever be accomplished by simply calling together Freethinkers in convention, and passing resolution after resolution without laying down a sure foundation to carry on the work effectively and well. Congress ignored all our resolutions. In most instances, they were never heard of more when the meeting which passed them had dispersed. We felt that our work lay in Washington. We must go to the national capital, to the legislature itself, and compel the representatives to give ear to the voice of the people. The influence we possessed must be there, and kept up by a continual warfare against church politics at the ballot-box.

We felt that the Freethought party, to be successful, must be a voting party, and use the suffrage we ourselves possess, in a manner calculated to benefit us as a whole, and not in an individual sense.

These sentiments were held not by ourselves alone, but by the greatest living representatives of Freethought in America. In proof of this I will refer you to a symposium of Liberalism, published in the Truth Seeker Annual for 1889. In that symposium a series of fourteen questions, affecting the greatest interests of our cause, were propounded to the leaders of the party. It is only one of these questions that I shall speak of here, and which will corroborate the statements I have made, and justify us in the course we have adopted. The seventh question was, "Should Liberals vote on Liberal issues?" The answer given to this query by the greatest representative of Freethought in America, Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, is as follows:

"I think that, other things being anywhere near equal, Liberals should vote for men who believe in liberty, men who believe in giving to others the rights they claim for themselves; that is to say, for civilized men, for men of some breadth of mind. Liberals should do what they can to do away with all the theological absurdities."

Helen H. Gardener says: "Most assuredly, if they are persons or citizens."

Samuel P. Putnam: "Liberals should always vote on Liberal issues."

Charles Watts: "Yes, for by so doing they can make themselves felt politically. Politics properly understood are means to an end, that end being the possession by the people of their rights as citizens."

E. A. Stevens: "Certainly, if they do not, they are not Liberals. The only difficulty would be to define satisfactorily what are 'Liberal issues.'"

Parker Pillsbury: "Surely, if they may write and speak upon them. I do not see why not."

Robert C. Adams: "Liberals should vote on Liberal issues, and procure as many partial reforms as possible, even though their full desires may not be attainable."

J. D. Shaw: "By all means."

F. M. Holland: "There seems to be no excuse for a Liberal who does not vote regularly and take all possible pains to find out how the candidates stand on Liberal issues."

Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.: "It is yet somewhat premature to endeavor to force Liberal issues (the Nine Demands) into politics and while other important issues predominate, it is not practicable to get Liberals to vote as a unit."

Lucy N. Colman: "Wherever there are ten persons, or even five, who agree upon five points, they would find their strength much increased by organization, and if they believe in voting at all, they should vote on Liberal issues."

J. H. Burnham: "I do not understand what is meant in this question, and hence cannot place myself on record. Liberals should vote on all questions when principle is involved in that vote."

L. K. Washburn: "Liberals ought to vote as they think."

Ella Gibson: "I will pass that over, as I cannot vote, by saying, I think they should never vote for men and measures that they know are directly opposed to Liberalism."

Susan H. Wixon: "Upon what issues should Liberals vote, if not upon Liberal ones? It should be considered not only a privilege, but a bounden duty, to sustain by ballot all Liberal and unsectarian projects that aim for the true elevation of the people."

John Peck: "At the present time we should lose more than we would gain. Increased burdens require increased strength—we must not try to do too much at once."

W. S. Bell: "I have no interest in politics."

Mrs. M. A. Freeman: "In this republic the ballot is the expression of individualism. The voice of the ballot is the voice of the people. Said Thomas Jefferson: 'If the people are silent under oppression it is lethargy—the forerunner of death to public liberty.' The people, then, should always speak, and on the side of liberty—the Liberals should organize a new party with the Nine Demands for its platform."

Dr. Juliet H. Severance: "They should vote on Liberal issues, if at all. The laws are the means used to prevent the freedom of speech, of the press, of transit by rail, right of occupation on Sunday, and other aggressive infringements upon Liberty, of which we so justly complain."

Elmina D. Slenker: "What is a vote but expressing one's opinion publicly? Should not Liberals then, by all means, vote on Liberal issues? I say, yes, every time."

John R. Kelso: "I do think that Liberals should vote on Liberal issues."

G. H. Daves: "Liberals should vote on Liberal issues, if they expect to get equal rights with the Christian."

Thus we see that of the twenty-four Liberal leaders, twenty of them urged the necessity of Liberals voting on Liberal issues, and one of them even urged the necessity of a new Freethought political party. There is now no question as to the necessity of such an organization, for if rightly used, it will give the Liberals the opportunity they desire to vote on Liberal issues. With this object in view a meeting of Freethinkers was called in this city, on September 4th, 1892. That meeting was well attended, and several of the states in close proximity to Illinois were represented. At that meeting the Federation was duly and formally organized without one dissentient voice, its objects and principles were declared, its officers duly elected, and from that day its work commenced. The result of its labors since that time have been very satisfactory to those at its head, owing to the noble and generous support it has received throughout the country, and I trust that in giving you this report of our year's work, you will find much therein to meet with your approbation.

Following immediately upon the adjournment of that meeting, preparations were commenced for the president of the Federation to conduct in its behalf an active campaign at the national capital, to try and induce Congress to repeal the clause in the World's Fair Appropriation Bill, closing the gates of that institution on the so-called Sabbath. The president labored incessantly while in Washington, both by argument before the Congressional committee, and by the distribution of Freethought political literature. With lectures around the district his labors at Washington extended over a period of three months, and our warmest thanks are tendered to those generous hearts who so nobly responded to our appeals for financial aid, and which enabled him to conduct his part in that great and memorable fight for constitutional rights. Though unsuccessful in our main object, still valuable work was done there, for it has raised up a great and ever increasing agitation against church or religious legislation. In order to assist the president in his work, your secretary immediately commenced a tour throughout the United States, with several thousand petition sheets, against closing the World's Fair on Sunday. To these about twelve thousand signatures were secured and promptly forwarded to the president, who in turn presented them before the proper authorities.

The president's work at Washington did not cease until Congress itself had adjourned, and though not thoroughly satisfied with the results thereof, he left the battle ground with feelings of contentment over a bounden duty done. We went into this fight because we believed we were in the right and we could not turn our backs toward the enemy because they were more powerful and better equipped than we. The Federation never wavered for an instant. We resolved to fight whether we won or lost. Five thousand of the World's Fair Leaflets, published by the Truth Seeker Company, were purchased by the Federation and distributed at our meetings, and circulated throughout the various towns and cities along our line of travel. Being now fully aroused to the dangers that surrounded our rights as citizens of this republic, and learning that some few local elections along our line of travel had yet to take place, we resolved to concentrate all our efforts in that direction. The success gained by Liberals in the field of politics where the principles of the Federation have been employed has been very satisfactory indeed. In Crookston, Minn., the Freethinkers have been singularly successful. We have a strong auxiliary of the Federation in this Northwestern town, comprised of the most enterprising business men to be found therein, whom we confidently hope may achieve greater victories yet in their future labors. In this district, the Congressman is a Freethinker, also the judge of the district court, the prosecuting attorney, the deputy treasurer, and several others of the county officials; this has been accomplished by an heroic few, who labored without ceasing for the supremacy of their principles and for just rights to all. This shows what Freethinkers may accomplish as a political power, by perseverance and determination.

Perhaps the greatest achievement of our labors, in this line of work, was in the town of Selma, Cal. I gave three lectures in this place, in March of this year. While there, it came to my knowledge that an election, for the purpose of incorporating the township, was to take place on the day following. It was regarded as a scheme concocted by the Methodist Church for the sole purpose of obtaining entire control in the town. Learning this, I at once centered all my energies against the church, urging the electors not to give their votes to the church candidates, should the vote for incorporation pass. The vote did pass, the church got her candidates into the political arena, but only to meet with a disastrous failure and a crushing defeat, for not one on its whole ticket was elected. This was success, sure and certain, and one which may be kept up, provided the Freethinkers will only stand together, and vote for Liberal issues.

In various other parts of the country the Freethinkers are in a good position for effective political work, in the states of Washington, Colorado, Kansas, Illinois, and others. A sufficient reason exists why we should continue in our present work persistently and well; and in but a few years, we may hold a larger part of the balance of political power in the country, and eventually be able to turn the tide of a national election. The present is a favorable opportunity for the realization of our hopes. The gradual disintegration of political parties affords us the greatest possible opening for carrying our plans to a successful issue.

In addition to this work, the president and myself have traversed the entire country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the borders of Canada in the North to the Indian river in the South. During our travels we secured members for the Federation in nearly every state and territory. In some instances our most sanguine expectations have been surpassed, and in others we have met with slight disappointments—not that no members, but because no more, could be secured. The Federation has now a grand membership of 3,437, all pledged to promote its interests and to assist in the realization of its hopes. Of these the golden state of California heads the list with 903; Iowa comes next with 374; Illinois, 359; Colorado, 213; Washington, 182; New York, 181; Minnesota, 165; Connecticut, 141; Kansas, 109; Indiana, 97; Oregon, 168; Ohio, 91; Idaho, 82; Pennsylvania, 77; Nebraska, 55; Utah, 77; Tennessee, 49; Missouri, 42; Maine, 38; North Dakota, 22; Montana, 32; Arkansas, 19; Texas, 38; New Mexico, 8; Virginia, 3; Florida, 2; Maryland, 2; Massachusetts, 1; New Jersey, 1; New Hampshire, 1; British Columbia, 3.

This roll of membership, mustering nearly three and a half thousands, gathered together in one year, should be regarded as a good omen by those who may succeed us, and may by good work in the fields among the friends of our cause be doubled, if not trebled, during the ensuing year; and at the election of 1896 we may with good taste select the candidate whom we will support for national honors.

In addition to the five thousand World's Fair leaflets, the Federation has also published and distributed free of cost one thousand pamphlets on Liberal political organization, by Mr. Putnam; one thousand circulars on the Freethought Federation; and two thousand copies of Mr. Putnam's argument before the Congressional committee at Washington, entitled, "Holydays and Holidays." This literature has in the main been distributed by mail to those of our friends who have so generously contributed to the funds of the Federation. Since our return to Chicago, in May last, we have, with the exception of a few lectures given in the East, directed our attentions to the present Congress up to this present time.

In concluding this report, I may say that the prospects are exceedingly bright for the better success of the Federation. We have endeavored, to the best of our ability, to fulfill the promises we have made, and faithfully perform the responsible duties imposed upon us by our acceptance of office. Whether such performance is satisfactory to the members of the Federation or otherwise, they alone must be the judges.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH, Sec'y.

The report was accepted, on motion of E. A. Stevens, with unbounded satisfaction, after which the treasurer's report was read, as follows:

TREASURER'S REPORT.

In furnishing you with this report of the financial standing of the Federation, I am pleased to say that, since its inauguration on the 4th of September last, it has met with a generous support from the hands of its members and friends. I am also pleased to note the quick response which its members have made to our appeals, a fact which alone has conduced toward the work it has successfully accomplished.

As the names of individual subscribers, together with the amounts subscribed, have been published in the Liberal journals from time to time, I have deemed it advisable in this report to give in condensed form a financial statement of its receipts and expenditures month by month. I would say, however, that if anyone having subscribed to the Federation whose name has not yet been published, will only inform us of the fact, we will rectify the matter immediately. But in the case of the special fund, given to the president to aid him in his work at Washington, I have made out a full and separate list of the subscribers, together with the amounts they have subscribed for the purpose of publication, as this had not as yet been done.

The following are the receipts and expenses of the Federation month by month. During the month of September, 1892, the receipts were:

Sept. Receipts.....$48 54	Apr. Balance on hand$52 11
Disbursements.. 46 94	Subscriptions.... 9 45
Balance..... 1 60	Total..... 61 56
	Disbursements.. 54 15
Oct. Balance on hand 1 60	Balance..... 7 41
Subscriptions.... 30 75
Total..... 32 35	May. Balance on hand 7 41
Disbursements.. 2 63	Subscriptions.... 59 50
Balance.... 29 72	Total..... 66 91
	Disbursements.. 25 00
Nov. Balance on hand 29 72	Balance.... 41 91
Subscriptions.... 83 32
Total.....113 04	Jun. Balance on hand 41 91
Disbursements..135 61	Subscriptions.... 57 00
Balance due..... 22 57	Total..... 98 91
	Disbursements.. 43 33
Dec. Subscriptions... 70 78	Balance.... 55 58
Disbursements.. 33 60
Balance due..... 22 57	July Balance on hand 15 58
Total indebtedness 56 17	Subscriptions....142 25
Subscriptions.... 70 78	Total.....197 83
Indebtedness.... 56 17	Disbursements..128 52
Balance..... 14 61	Balance.... 69 31
Jan., 1893. Balance	Aug. Balance on hand 69 31
on hand..... 14 61	Subscriptions....149 50
Subscriptions.... 29 00	Total.....218 81
Total..... 43 61	Disbursements.. 98 00
Disbursements.. 9 00	Balance....125 81
Balance.... 34 61	Sep. Balance on hand 125 81
Feb. Balance on hand 34 61	Subscriptions....260 17
Subscriptions.... 17 75	Total.....385 98
Total..... 52 36	Disbursements..224 01
Disbursements.. 25	Balance....161 97
Balance.... 52 11
Mar. Balance on hand 52 11	The total receipts from Subscriptions....	September 4th, 1892, to
Total..... 52 11	September 23d, 1893, have
Disbursements..	been:
Balance.... 52 11	Receipts.....953 01
	Total disbursements
	for same time..796 01
	Balance on hand up to
	Sept. 23, 1893..169 97

Of these disbursements the sum of $135.33 has been spent in the publication of Freethought literature, as given in the report of the secretary. This literature has all been distributed free of cost, both by mail and express. It has, for the most part, been distributed through the secretary's office, the cost of which, together with postage stamps, wrappers, cards, express charges, etc., has amounted to $97.99. In addition to this a further sum of $200 has been given to the secretary for four months' work in Chicago, while arranging and organizing this Congress; also the sum of $50 for his expenses consequent upon the organization of the Federation in September last, making a total to secretary of $347.99. The cost for the president's office, for postage and general expenses, has been $52 60. The cost of treasurer's office has been as follows:

For postage.....$ 8 59
Exchange on checks..... 1 00
Book and letter file..... 1 50
Hall rent and advertising meeting for Sept. 4, 1892. 13 25
Total.....$24 34

The Federation has contributed toward the expenses of this Congress the sum of $85. There has also been expended for Federation badges the sum of $60, and a further sum of $5 for a press seal. For office rent in Chicago, $24; for printing, stationery, etc.—such as letter-heads and envelopes—$36.75; for sundries, $41.23. These sundries including gold paper seals, large envelopes, ink, and other articles of stationery.

The financial support given to us is very satisfactory indeed, and we trust that the expenditure of the moneys intrusted to our hands has been carried out in a manner satisfactory to you. With a cash balance in hand of $161.97, we are able to commence the new year with better prospects than the last, and we hope to continue in the line of work we have adopted, which, by your continued support, we will do thoroughly and well.

Respectfully submitted, GEO. L. ROBERTSON.

SPECIAL FUND FOR PUTNAM AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

W. B. Clark.....$2 00	W. B. Bowers..... 1 00
F. D. Rexford..... 3 00	H. Jones..... 1 00
J. D. Powers..... 5 00	D. C. McKillip..... 25
Chas. C. Janny..... 10 00	R. E. Dunphy..... 1 00
Liberals of Blackhawk 10 00	Waler Bros. & Co..... 25
Andrew Beveridge.... 2 00	G. H. Purdy..... 2 00
Dr. Wetmore..... 5 00	S. Brewer..... 1 00
E. Wickersham..... 1 00	Dexter K. Cole..... 5 00

Eli Taylor..... 1 00	Mrs. C. Schofield.... 1 00
John T. Dewitt..... 5 00	John A. Calder..... 5 00
Wm. Case..... 10 00	E. H. Balston..... 2 00
Mrs. Burns..... 5 00	John Vernon..... 2 00
W. W. West..... 5 00	W. Whittick..... 5 00
Mr. Carpenter..... 1 00	H. L. Wilson..... 1 00
Jos. Haigh..... 1 00	H. Wettstein..... 1 00
J. Deming..... 1 00	H. T. Ebers..... 2 50
John Johnson..... 1 00	J. S. Martin..... 2 00
Mrs. John Fisher..... 1 00	Robert Gunther..... 2 00
Mrs. Wm. Higginbotham..... 1 00	Tempe, Arizona, Lib-erals..... 5 00
Abram Schell..... 5 00	Messrs. Hubbel & Endicott..... 5 00
Dell Barker..... 1 00	Dr. Carter..... 2 00
Mrs. M. Pfefferle..... 1 00	S. Newkirk..... 1 00
J. M. Doan..... 1 00	F. Schornhost..... 1 00
J. D. Bernardi..... 2 00	Mrs. L. P. Langly.... 1 00
Ralph Helm..... 3 00	J. M. Hubbard..... 1 00
J. T. Johnson..... 5 00	Georgetown Liberals 8 00
H. Ferguson..... 1 00	H. M. Fish..... 50
Chas. D. Lane..... 50 00	B. Anderson..... 3 00
John Diamond..... 10 00	B. Rosenthal..... 1 00
B. B. Rockwood..... 5 00	E. N. Dunkel..... 4 50
P. Greville..... 2 50	Bogard & Rhodes..... 5 00
Mr. Cooper..... 3 50	G. Hogan..... 1 00
J. Hudson..... 1 00	J. Robinette..... 1 00
N. B. Parnell..... 20 00	Minneapolis Liberals 9 00
O. T. Davis..... 10 00	F. M..... 1 00
John Bumbacker..... 5 00	Denver Liberals..... 12 00
Mabel W. Tarbell..... 10 00	Reno Liberals..... 5 00
E. A. White..... 1 00	Missoula Liberals..... 7 00
Mrs. De Lespinasse.. 2 00	J. W. Long..... 5 00
Peter Fletcher..... 2 00	Mr. Ferguson..... 5 00
John C. Blaisdell..... 1 00	C. W. Crosby..... 1 00
Jas. Turner..... 2 00	Daniel Crosby..... 2 00
Wm. Cook..... 5 00	J. L. Larkin..... 1 00
Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.. 5 00	H. P. Anderson..... 2 00
Mr. Hitchcock..... 10 00	Thomas Scott..... 5 00
C. Close..... 1 00	J. Vostrovsky..... 5 00
Liberals of Crookston 4 00	S. Sharp..... 10 00
W. H. De Voe..... 2 00	Nellie Newkirk..... 1 00
S. G. Cooper..... 2 00	M. S. Palmer..... 5 00
T. Cameron..... 1 00	R. Peterson..... 25 00
Chas. Nickell..... 1 00	M. H. Coffin..... 1 00
H. Langell..... 1 00	Palouse Liberals..... 5 25
T. J. Kinny..... 1 00	Geo. N. Adams..... 10 00
Max Müller..... 2 50	J. H. Dibble..... 1 00
P. Pritt..... 3 50	P. Schwartz..... 5 00
S. G. Gilmore..... 1 00	John Kane..... 2 00
J. H. Handy..... 10 00	T. J. Griffin..... 25
C. Chope..... 5 00	John E. Jones..... 2 00
Ed. Wegner..... 5 00	M. A. Hewitt..... 2 00
R. W. Barcroft..... 5 00	C. H. Crosby..... 1 00
Mrs. S. M. Brady..... 1 00	H. S. Crosby..... 1 00
Mrs. S. B. Miller..... 2 00	J. B. Johnson..... 1 00
L. Moffit..... 5 00	Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.. 5 00
H. L. Boyes..... 2 00	Total.....$509 00
A. Brickman..... 2 50
G. Dickman..... 1 00
H. P. Brands..... 1 00

DISBURSEMENTS ON SPECIAL FUND.

Stationary and stamps.....$18 25
Express charges..... 3 25
Distribution of pamphlets..... 2 00
Expenses from San Francisco to Washington.....125 00
For printing pamphlets..... 23 00
Samuel P. Putnam's expenses for three months at Washington.....337 50
Total.....$509 00

The treasurer's report was accepted without reference, and Treasurer Robertson was thanked for his services. The Liberals of Boulder, Col., specially mentioning Dr. L. Z. Coman, were also thanked for the banner. The banner was hung on the stage and excited much admiration. In response to a call from the audience Mr. Wakeman beamingly explained the significance of the letters U. M. L. The motto Universal Mental Liberty was first suggested in THE TRUTH SEEKER about ten years ago, and had since been generally adopted. Mr. Wakeman went on also to explain the Bruno Calendar, or era, and when he closed it was voted that the Freethought Federation adopt that method of dating its correspondence. Three cheers were given for the date and the Federation.

Next came the election of officers of the Federation and the following were unanimously elected by acclamation:

President—Samuel P. Putnam.
Vice-Presidents—N. F. Griswold, Meriden, Conn., J. M. Peck, Ottumwa, Ia., Franklin Steiner, I. J. Porter, and B. A. Rollosen, of Delphos, O.
Secretary—John R. Charlesworth.
Treasurer—E. C. Reichwald, of Chicago.
Mr. Putnam made a neat little speech of acceptance, and the meeting adjourned.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

In the afternoon, Franklin Steiner spoke his piece, and spoke it so well that we shall print it in full, soon. Mr. Steiner is filled with youthful zeal, and works with heart and head. The people like him, and if nothing happens he has a long career of usefulness and honor before him. He was followed by A. T. Jones, the Seventh Day Adventist, who gave instances of Christian encroachments upon liberty.

Captain Adams and T. B. Wakeman also spoke upon the methods of Freethought work. In the evening the Bohemians had the floor, with the addition of S. P. Putnam. Mr. Zdrubeb spoke in his native tongue. J. J. Kral related in English how Freethought prospered in Bohemia, and the Edelweiss Zither Club and the Bohemian orchestra filled the hall with sweet harmony, under the influence of which Mr. Putnam made the speech of the Congress on "The Rights of Man." In introducing, Captain Adams gracefully said that in him the Liberals had a great combination—poet, author, orator, organizer—and that, contrary to an old adage, he did all things well. It was owing to him that the Congress was the rousing success it was. Aided by his able Lieutenant Charlesworth, he had engineered it and the credit was due to him. And as between the two organizations, he said the only rivalry that should exist was the rivalry of effective service.

Owing either to the music or the splendid audience, or perhaps to native genius, Mr. Putnam made this evening the most impassioned and oratorical address of the Congress. His words went home to the hearts of his hearers, and he was wildly cheered. But his speech was by no means exclusively sound. The solid matter was there, and what he said impressed the audience vividly and deeply. It was full of facts as one of A. T. Jones's, with the logic of Watts, and an eloquence all his own. It should be a campaign document for the Federation, and we will print it soon.

WEDNESDAY.

Wednesday was Woman's Day, and completely did women fill it. There was not a man on the platform, and the only service the despised biped could render the ladies was to loan them hats with which to take up a collection. Mrs. Severance occupied the chair most of the time, and was a much more severe ruler than Captain Adams, or Mr. Putnam, or Mr. Waite. The speakers all wore dresses, had charming manners, and interspersed their denunciations of man with considerable sense. It is to be regretted, however, that when the women—that is, the majority of them—do get up to say something, they will not go straight ahead with their work instead of devoting the greater portion of their time to the side issue of male depravity. If man is really the horrible creature they picture him, the world would be full of old maids and bachelors rather than filled with millions of happy homes.

Mattie P. Krekel and Katie Kehm Smith did not attend, much to the regret of all. Susan H. Wixon, Lillie D. White, Voltairine de Cleyre, Mrs. M. A. Freeman, Sarah Ames, and Mrs. Webb were the speakers. Miss Wixon kept straight to the point, and told what progress woman has made in the past four hundred years. Mrs. White's address was upon the "Coming Woman," and Mrs. Severance talked about marriage, to the grief of many, who objected to her plain words. Miss Wixon's address will be given to our readers just as soon as space permits. Voltairine de Cleyre's address on Mary Wollstonecraft, the apostle of Woman's Freedom, was a fine tribute, and deserves a wider circulation than the walls of Henschel's academy.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The Secular Union used the morning session for its regular annual meeting. The secretary read her report, containing several covert attacks upon the Federation, which was in very bad taste, as the Federation had done nothing to deserve such treatment. The work done during the past year had been the organization of a mass meeting in Chicago, anent Sunday closing of the Fair, the distribution of several circulars, and the writing of fifty or sixty letters to papers. Future work, the secretary thought, should be in favor of church taxation and against Sunday laws. The secretary said the Union had no enemies but the Christians, and ought to prosper.

Otto Wettstein read the treasurer's report, showing receipts of $619.85 and expenditures of $484.33. The report was referred to an auditing committee, which did not report. The treasurer thought that considering that this was the first year the Union had had a competitor, it had done well.

Mr. Waite reported as his part of the work the writing of a letter to the Senate, which he was willing to read. Upon request he did so.

Mr. Waite said he did not want to be president again, but upon unanimous request of all present, the old officers were reelected.

After this business had been concluded, to the great satisfaction of everybody, Otto Wettstein read an address, which we shall print in extenso. It wouldn't have been Otto if he had not poked his Spiritualist brethren in the ribs, but they will have a chance to hit back, and Mr. Perry can prepare the materials for his warpaint.

(REPORT OF CONGRESS CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.)

Readers will aid the cause by forwarding us names of their friends who might be interested in sample copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Letters of Friends.

The Dear Old Truth Seeker.

PAXTON, ILL., Sept. 30, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I send postal note for $3 to renew my subscription to the dear old TRUTH SEEKER. Please send to

REUBEN NEWKIRK.

A Good Example.

GRANITE, MONT., Sept. 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find postal note for $3, and twenty-five cents in stamps, for which please renew my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER and send "Crimes of Preachers," and oblige,

CHAS. C. MITCHELL.

Home For Aged Liberals.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Sept. 21, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I see in THE TRUTH SEEKER of recent date a proposition to build a home for aged Liberals. If such a home should be commenced I will give $25, providing the home be managed always by a Liberal. JOHN M. ANDERSON.

Clerical Half Fares.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: If you are searching for the truth, here is a blank form that should be an eye opener for the poor laboring mechanic.

Why should these clergymen ride for half fare on all the railroads, so long as there is no half pay pew rents? Oh! poor mechanic; he is bled on both sides of this creedism; when will he wake up?

Yours truly, COMMERCIAL TRAVELER.

Young Men's Christian Association Beaten.

DENVER, COL., Sept. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In an article or editorial of September 9th, headed, "Everything Christian Trying to Shirk Taxes," you say: "And the property of the Young Men's Christian Association will probably not aid the revenues of the state in the future." Having been a member of the Ninth General Assembly, I am in a position to state that while the bill spoken of passed the Senate, it was "killed" in the house by a handsome majority. CHARLES ROTH.

Was Born An Agnostic.

PETALUMA, CAL., Sept. 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1.50 for THE TRUTH SEEKER for six months. I like the paper very well. I was born an Agnostic in a most superstitious country, the north of Italy. From infancy I could not believe that a God could be so cruel as to send people that he had created to hell. My spirit, if I have any spirit, rebelled, and in place of loving him I sincerely hated all forms of Gods and Holy Ghosts, and particularly the traitor, Pius IX.

Yours truly, as a friend of liberty,

JOSEPH BARALLI.

Push the Sale of Freethought Literature.

CLAY CENTER, KANS., Sept. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The books I ordered came to hand O. K. Accept thanks. I am still making an effort to take orders for "Old Testament Stories," and sell Freethought literature.

At present it is pretty hard times financially, and difficult to sell anything. But later on the farmers will have to sell grain, etc., and that will put more money in circulation, and then a person will stand a better chance to sell books. Selling Freethought literature throughout the country does a wonderful deal of good for universal mental liberty, as it is destroying the Christian religious superstition. Rev. H. B. Vennum of Industry, Kans., especially, can testify to that effect, as he is losing from his little flock right along, and not adding any to it. J. B. WISE.

Farm Products are Cheaper in Kansas than in New York.

HAZELTON, KAN., July 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find postal order for $6. Extend my subscription one year, and enter M. A. Reynolds as a subscriber to the Truth Seeker Monthly Library. Our financial system must be changed soon, or we cannot pay taxes much longer on our land.

We are delivering our wheat at the depot for forty cents per bushel. Eggs and butter, both good and fresh, are ten cents per dozen and pound in goods. One week ago this day they offered Mrs. Reynolds two cents per pound for live fowls. She returned them to the yard, but might as well have delivered them, as we cannot eat them. We cannot sell anything for money unless at a great sacrifice. It would be a blessing to the human family if every grain of gold and every national bank were off the earth. They are in company with the churches. God help the bottom dog. A. B. REYNOLDS.

The Trinity Solved.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., March 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: It has always been a puzzle to me to know just how to solve the question of the Trinity, "Three in one and one in three," but at last I have seen the problem solved beyond a question of doubt. I chanced to be present, this morning, to see an anatomical operation performed on an immense cat-fish. He was decapitated, his body laid open to view, and it was soon learned that he had but lately swallowed a large fish for an early morning meal, and fish No. 2 also had relieved the sea of a still smaller fish, probably for his supper the night before. While this is a fish story, it is smaller than the old fish story of the Trinity, yet contains a little natural truth, while the old one seems rather too much of a fish story for one not filled with ignorant faith to believe.

Which one of the trio of fishes was the father or the son or the other fellow, I know not, yet there was three in one, and the outer one might have represented three. Verily I believe. A. D. S.

A Splendid Miracle Suggested.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Sept. 30, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: For inclosure please continue sending your good paper (at the expiration of which I expect to be able to do a little better).

Times are still very hard, and I see there are about five hundred thousand men idle in New York and Chicago alone, unable to support their families. I would suggest that these unemployed petition Mr. Jehovah to direct his son, Mr. Christos, to pay a daily visit to these cities and feed the hungry on a few loaves and fishes until the crisis is over. If he fed five thousand men, besides women and children, on five loaves and two fishes, five hundred bakers in those two cities could easily be found to donate one loaf daily for his lordship's son to feed these five hundred thousand unemployed and their wives and children. The basketsful of fragments—about twelve thousand—would be good food for their goats, cats, dogs, chickens, etc., and all would be happy. And just think how many of these thousands of unbelieving Thomases would thus be converted, and Jehovah's vis-à-vis would be deprived of a good deal of fuel for his patent furnace.

ERWIN AUFFURTH.

Will Shock the Young Christians.

PALO ALTO, CAL., Sept. 24, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I note your "Agents Wanted," and I write you for a trial. I think I can make a go of it. I have been here since April, 1892, and have got acquainted pretty well. I get the paper from a dealer, who keeps it hid for me, as he is afraid of publicity, but I now have a chance to do something with it. I donated carpenter work toward a free reading room, and have worked it out, but have discovered that it is a Young Men's Christian Association affair. But all right. I will put in all my papers just the same. This place is only one mile from the Stanford university, where there are several hundred students, and a great many of them live here. We have had a building boom for the past year, but things are winding up in that line now. Among the workingmen Freethought is uppermost, but there are some church-goers. I myself never even received infant baptism, consequently I am free from all religions. I am not contaminated in the least with it. It has been a curse to me; it broke up my family that I worked hard to raise, and expected a great blessing with in my old days, but the hell on earth, to live with the damnable harangue of parrot teachings by the preachers who had more influence with my family than I had, who raised and supported them, drove me from home, and I am now afloat on my own hook.

I think this is the best field for your works I ever saw. JAMES KENNEDY.

A Preacher Wants to Know.

LEADVILLE, COL., Sept. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed newspaper clipping, which goes to prove what Freethinkers have always claimed—that ministers know very little about things in general:

The following letter was sent out by Dr. Tupper this week to some twenty leading citizens of Denver:

"DENVER, Sept. 13, 1893.

"My Dear Sir: At the request of representative business men of our city, I shall speak at the First Baptist Church on the evening of September 24th, on, 'The Bright Side of Our Present and Future.'"

"It would gratify me to receive from you, as well as from a few other of our citizens, any information which might aid in making my address effective. Will you kindly answer early, as fully as your time may permit, the following questions:

"1. Do you contemplate with hope Colorado's future?"

"2. On what do you base your answer to question 1?"

"3. Were congressional legislation to go against silver, and our state interests be thus injured, on what industries must Colorado rely, and what prospects have these industries?"

"4. What of the future of Denver in particular?"

—Denver Times, Sept. 16, 1893.

Now, here is a man who is going to preach about the hard times, and he hasn't got sense enough or talent enough to make a decent address without sending out a circular to the business men in order to get enough pointers to make people believe he is greatly interested in their welfare. If he was rightly interested for the good of the people he would know how to make an address without the assistance of anyone. Freethought lecturers are and have been addressing the people on the silver question, and do it on the impulse of the moment, and make a good speech. Now, why can't any other person who has a fair education do the same? In closing I will say Good luck to THE TRUTH SEEKER, which I buy every week from the newsdealer here. I should have said good luck to all Freethinkers and all their journals.

J. C. SUTHERLAND.

Labor Should Recognize Its Real Enemy.

FORT WORTH, TEX., Sept. 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: My countryman, Mr. H. Sandberg, in last week's TRUTH SEEKER ventures to criticize Robert G. Ingersoll for defending the poor Chinese. Undoubtedly it is difficult to live in California without imbibing some of the prevalent prejudice against the Chinese. Brother Sandberg in his letter speaks of "Chinese slave labor," but seems to forget the great system of wage-slavery prevalent in the United States. Why should slaves be jealous of each other because they belong to a different race or nationality? Why not endeavor to abolish the present system of wage-slavery, founded on the devil-take-the-hindmost principle, instead of oppressing and abusing those whom plutocracy can a little more successfully enslave and rob—the Chinese? Do you not believe in the brotherhood of man, Brother Sandberg? If the Chinese do not receive a just compensation for their labor, is that a reason for debarring them from making a living in this country? If the Chinese work for nothing almost, then even a poor man can afford to hire a servant.

It is justice, not oppression, that we should advocate if the Chinese receive not a just compensation for their work. To prevent the workingman from realizing his true situation and from asserting his rights, plutocracy endeavors to draw our attention to the "degraded Chinese." When plutocracy is dethroned the Chinese question will take care of itself.

Chinese opium is bad, and Chinese gambling dens are unquestionably repulsive, but no more so than the Christian tobacco, whisky, and gambling dens. It is far more important that we abolish opium, tobacco, intoxicants, gambling dens, and wage-slavery than to abolish the Chinaman. The Chinese are far more useful to a country and much less harmful to it than are the plutocrats.

A. W. DELLQVIST.

Roman Catholic Office-holders Dangerous.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Instead of founding a university or college, we had better try to increase the circulation of THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator. I furnished a brick for the Investigator building at Boston. I have helped to increase the circulation of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and have got a few subscribers; but I give timely notice, if those Democratic free-traders' communications are printed in Freethought papers on the eve of a presidential election, I, for one, will withdraw my subscription and also my friends'. I, for one, do not write politics to your paper, nor do we want politics or political leaders to lead Liberals, and any Liberal who attempts to lead Liberals will make a mistake. I for one do not forget last fall how those Jesuits advised the Liberals to vote the Democratic ticket. They know that Democracy in this country means popery, and those people know that the pope and the contents of the Vatican will be dumped in America, for there is no other country that will allow an old, superannuated pauper to rule, dictate, and rob their country. I have heard people assert that Roman Catholic officials, holding office in New York city, donate millions of dollars to support the pope, and the Catholic priests openly boasted that they elected Grover Cleveland because Harrison's secretary of the interior refused to give any more money to educate Indian children in Romanism. Now, sir, if Liberals want to help the pope they are welcome to vote the Democratic ticket or any other ticket, but keep their damnable politics out of non-sectarian papers. They should be sent to the World or Times, Sun or Post. They are Simon-pure free-traders. Now, in conclusion, I hope the Democrats will have free trade and free soup-houses. They voted for it, and they should have it. Free trade and free importation of pauper cheap labor is ruining our once prosperous country. The next war in this country will not be waged against the rich, but it will be against Roman Catholic, office-holding Democrats, who, through their Jesuitical leaders, colonized all our large cities to rule and rob the people.

Respectfully, W. W. MORRIS.

Why Don't We Organize?

NEW YORK, Sept. 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Every Thursday evening I hurry home from work to enjoy looking over THE TRUTH SEEKER, and a great treat it is. But I would like to know what the Freethinkers of New York City are doing in the way of organizing. If we simply write each other letters and peruse Freethought papers we cannot expect to accomplish much. Organize is the word. Form clubs for various purposes. Some of the churches in this city, such as St. Francis Xavier, St. Monicas, etc., show their power and successfully attract young people by forming boat clubs, athletic, baseball, football, outing, and other clubs. Why do they do this? It attracts the young men and keeps them in contact with the church. They make a noise and the world knows they exist. What are the Liberals doing? Why don't they come out and show themselves? Fly our banners on every occasion. This is a great and glorious town wherein the Sunday-closing law is used to the greatest advantage. If there is any other place on earth that can make a better (or worse) showing let us hear from it. The church demands the closing of the saloons Sundays. (The reverend gentlemen have their beer and wine cellars stocked.) The Prohibitionist demands the same because he does not drink—in the open. The police likewise want the saloons closed (at the front) for revenue only. As for the liberty-loving mortals, they drink their beer or claret at meals as much on Sunday as any other day. It is a great all-around law that kills several birds with one stone, but it has its humorous side, as has also a little incident that occurred in a restaurant I dropped into one Friday not long ago. An old white-haired woman, whose tottering steps and pinched face were sorrowful to see, came in begging for something to eat. The cashier left his post, and, going to the kitchen, wrapped up a nice sandwich for her. She invoked the blessings of God Almighty on him and mumbled thanks as she left the store. But she was not gone long. Judging from the way the screen doors flew back, the loud voice, and the strength with which she threw the sandwich back on the counter, new life was hers. "Shure, what do you take me for?" she shouted. "I'm a Catholic, I am. If you can't giv me fish you can keep yer old mate." She didn't get fish. Mr. Thos. W. B. Thomson, of Washington, in a recent letter to me suggests a column in THE TRUTH SEEKER devoted to business pointers to Freethinkers, in this way putting a good many on the road to prosperity, which I think is a very good idea.

Keep up the good work. Never weary in well-doing.

Fraternally yours,
FREDERICK HOCHBRUNN.

A Christian Phrenologist on Paine.

SALT LAKE CITY, U., Mar. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: On receipt of my last TRUTH SEEKER I carried it on a visit with me to my brother's house. While there the thought occurred to me to ask him his opinion of Thomas Paine from the portrait printed in the advertisement of his works in the columns of this journal. I will here state that my brother, J. M. Thompson, is a well-read and experienced phrenologist. He is also a very religious man and a pious Mormon. I may add, I am neither. J. M., as it happened, was not acquainted with the likeness of Paine, and therefore, as I covered up the name below it, he had no idea who the subject was. After looking at Paine's picture a few moments he gave the subjoined delineation of the great patriot, as well as his consent to its publication in THE TRUTH SEEKER, even after I told him the likeness was Paine's. I am sure your many readers will be interested in

PAINE'S PHRENOLOGY.

In bodily organization this subject resembles his mother. He is adapted to light and refined employment. He possesses good recuperative powers and greatly enjoys social pleasures, including those of the table and the wine glass. He has great energy and force of character, quarrelsome when aroused, a fluent talker, and a brilliant writer; a man of pronounced opinions and ambitious to promulgate them, and apt to state his views in a too harsh and aggressiv manner. He is a wonderfully close observer, always remembering the faces of those he has once met, and readily recalls their names, where he has met them, and the circumstances connected with the incident, so that, again meeting persons whom he may have seen but once, he will, in five or ten years after, at once recognize them, call their names, and likely mention some incident of the first meeting, thus winning them to his friendship.

I fear he leads a more or less convivial life. In spite of his faults, by virtue of his strong social nature and those qualities of memory I have just described, he wins most men to be his friends.

He is full of history, and draws useful lessons from historical information. He has a full share of abstract reasoning powers and philosophical talent, but he reasons chiefly from analogy and comparison. He is preeminently a fighting critic, fearlessly assailing whatever is not in harmony with his way of thinking. He reads people intuitively and is gifted in penetrating the motives and intentions of others.

Benevolence is one of his characteristics, for beneath all his force, harshness, and sarcasm there must be a kindly heart and a humanitarian purpose.

With necessary training he would have been a military leader, though not a general of the first rank. He would have been successful as an engineer of military works. As a civil engineer he would have succeeded and skilfully managed the construction of a suspension bridge. He appreciates money values, has a decided commercial side to his character, and, under ordinary circumstances, would have become a man of considerable wealth.

He has a fair development of the religious faculties, but the head slopes too rapidly from the base to crown to show sufficient size of the religious organs for them to exert a controlling influence over his life. As to the strength of moral faculties, owing to the disposition of the hair, I am not able to judge; but I can say he is a man of lofty character, and one not at all likely to stoop to mean or unjust acts.

My brother knows very little of the life of Paine. That he was the author of several Radical books and a somewhat conspicuous figure in the Revolutionary war, is about the extent of the information he had of the illustrious patriot and reformer. He was very much, and pardonably, pleased when I told him that Paine was a civil engineer and that he invented the arched iron bridge.

Yours fraternally, A. B. T.

The Fearful Fruits of Revivalism.

JAMESTOWN, PA., Feb. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose a clipping, copied from the Greenville Argus:

The little town of Farmdale, O., over in the neighboring county of Trumbull, is seeing more exciting times than it has for years.

For a short time an evangelist of the ultra type has been holding forth in Farmdale. The meetings were largely attended, and the interest ran high. The evangelist was of the violent type, and succeeded in making some of his followers as much of extremists as himself. The excitement culminated last week when Mr. and Mrs. Gleason became insane on religion. About a year ago their son was drowned, and the distressing circumstance was of course a terrible blow to the parents. Over the loss of their only child the sorrow-stricken parents brooded until their minds were in a ripe condition to be carried away by any excitement. They were regular attendants at the meetings already referred to, and became absorbed in the work. Last week, at the same time, their minds gave away, and they are now raving mad.

The passengers of the Nypamo main line express No. 7, known as the "Bob Tail," which leaves Shenango at 7:23 A.M., witnessed a sad sight Saturday morning when the train stopped at Burg Hill. Mr. and Mrs. Gleason were put on board to be taken to the asylum at Newburg, a suburb of Cleveland. The unfortunate couple fought their attendants savagely, and had to be strapped to the car seats, all the time shrieking and talking about religion in general and the meetings in particular.

A day or so after Mr. Gleason and wife became insane, another attendant of the meetings went crazy. The residents of the neighborhood then concluded it was time for the evangelist to go, and go he did, though somewhat against his will. He bought a ticket on the Lake Shore to Amasa, as if Greenville was his destination, but took a train in the opposite direction.

The meetings spoken of were held near Kinsmen Center (instead of Farmdale) in the Methodist church. It and the Presbyterian are dominant there. The whole affair is a very melancholy one, and should make such propagandism infamous for ages to come. The writer has been well acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Gleason for many years. They were both members of the Methodist church, but he had begun to think a little and, of course, was watched. Socials were held at his house; the clerics went there during meeting, insisting on his going, taking advantage of the circumstance of the loss of their only son last July. On the fatal evening when they both became raving maniacs, the Rev. Mr. Pollard discoursed long and fervently on his own loss of children, etc., the whole occasion bearing fruit to the effect that a once happy home is broken up and its inmates ruined for life. News has just come that Thompson Gleason is dead. What shall I say? He told me just a few days before he became entangled in the fatal maelstrom that he had read Ingersoll some, and would read more, but his wife would burn every Liberal book he brought home. How glad I feel that I said to him: "Leave the church! It is a foe to all progress, all reform." But it is all over now! You Methodists, you Presbyterians, what have you been doing here for humanity for the last fifty years? As a result of your false hell-fire teaching a woman became insane and drowned three of her children in a spring near by. You failed to heed the admonition. You turned your backs upon the Anti-slavery apostles, sent among you, in the past; you are doing the same to-day to the advocates of Freethought and reform, and stand by creed and dogma as of old. Is it not time to call a halt? Especially you Methodists, your past wrongs are fearful. You turned your backs upon the American slave, notwithstanding it meant chains and dungeon, theft and robbery, piracy and murder, with all their fearful concomitants. You have tried to make man the subject of fear and terror here, and given him the promise of hell hereafter. JERRY BROOKWAY.

Appreciated by the Vets.

LEAVENWORTH, KAN., Sept. 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your paper is read and appreciated by many of the veterans in blue. There are about twenty-five hundred men here, and of these about two hundred are Catholics and the same number attend the Protestant divine service, and the remainder are more or less Liberally inclined.

The new church which the government is building is nearly completed. From three corners of the tower, near the top, projecting out toward Franklin avenue, are three dragons, each with a chain around his neck three or four feet long, and fastened to the stonework above. The sight is very suggestive of the superstition of the Dark Ages. The people's money would much better have been expended in a more practical way for the benefit of the old soldier.

I think Brother Benson suggests the one thing that is needful at the present time for the advancement of the cause of Science and Freethought. We must have a plan of organization, both local and general, and if there is not room for it, we must make room. And if there are too many churches and societies now which have outlived their usefulness (if they were ever useful), we must make a new departure and form a society that will be superior in every way, so that it will draw the people away from a number of the old-fogy institutions and cause them to drop into a state of innocuous desuetude.

Such a society should be scientific, moral, and literary in character, and be made socially attractive.

People must have somewhere to go on Sundays and the long winter evenings, and if there is no other attractive place, they go to church or Sunday-school, and learn what ignorant people believed thousands of years ago, instead of what men of science in this age have proved to be true. I have given this subject some thought, and it seems to me that a county organization would best meet the requirements of the case. Let a plan be formulated with constitution, by-laws, and order of business (not too complicated), and let this plan be printed in a five or ten cent pamphlet, so that each county society could adopt it.

The county society might then be a basis or a starting point from which smaller societies could be organized in townships or villages. Then every Liberal lecturer should be an organizer of county societies, and a county lecturer could organize sub-societies or other county societies.

A circulating library should be a substantial feature of every county society.

I would not suggest any state organization, but that each county every year send one delegate to a social, camp-meeting, picnic, convention in midsummer, first in one part of the United States and the next year in another. Our policy should be conciliatory. We should attend religious meetings and ask our neighbors who differ with us to come to our meetings, and be sure to treat them kindly when they do come. I do not wish to dictate. I only suggest, but something of this kind must be done before we can hope to win the masses from their idols. In the interest of man I believe the hour is come for a combined, organized, forward movement all along the line, and I for one am willing to do my humble share in the work.

I do not wish to occupy too much of your space, but if this is favorably received, I may in the future point out some of the advantages of a systematic campaign against organized ignorance and superstition.

CHAS. C. MILLARD.

Questions to Worry Good, Pious People.

Sept. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I subscribed some ago for a religious monthly paper printed in Chicago. I was then a Christian and not acquainted with THE TRUTH SEEKER, but one of my friends, who is taking your grand paper, gave me a copy, and the old superstition had to give room for the use of my senses. I wrote to the editor of the religious paper, named Hydræsten (the "Shepherd's Voice"), asked what I owed, and told him not to send me his paper any more. I also asked if he did not think that it would be just as natural for our savior to be a daughter of God and without a mother, as to be a son of God and without a father. He or his wife sent me in reply a letter containing many prayers, quotations from the Bible, and other nonsense. I was bound to write again, and asked him honestly to answer my question, but have not heard anything from him yet. I send you the following, a translation of my last letter to him, thinking that it possibly may find room in the corner of your valuable paper:

MRS. TRAUBBERG: I have received your welcome letter dated the 25th of June. Its contents seem to prove that the devil has taken firm hold of me, but therein you are mistaken. You are trying to scare me with hell. I do not believe that there is such a place. Is your god there? If he is everywhere, he must be in hell, and be obliged to bear with it the best he can. Do you think that God created man with passions and feelings, endowed us with thinking power, and at the same time built a hell to put us in, because we made use of what he gave us, according to our abilities?

What do you think about the pagans? They in their belief die just as happy as the Christians; will they be sent to hell? They do not believe in Jesus Christ, the only one by whom we can be saved, and must therefore, according to the teaching in the Bible, be damned. What became of all those people that lived in this country from the time of Christ until it was discovered by Columbus in 1492?

Some time ago, before I got the use of my common sense, which was weakened by years of faith in the Lord and his two comrades, I wrote and asked Mr. Traubberg to let me know his honest opinion in regard to the lot of the above-mentioned heathen, but the answer has not yet arrived. You tell me to read the New Testament. Why not also read in the Old, and thereby learn how God recommended slavery, polygamy, and other things, which nowadays are not found very praiseworthy? Do you think the spirit of God dictated all that stuff in the Old Testament that will cause every virtuous woman to blush? If he did, I would not give much for his literature. If he did not guide the pen that wrote the Old Testament, may it not also be possible that he never had anything to do with the composition of the New Testament?

Yes, I have for a long time possessed a Bible, and have studied it a good deal. How do you account for the contradictory statements in the New Testament in regard to the genealogy of Christ? If any of them at all are true only one can be correct. Is it necessary to exercise our faith and believe them both to be true in order to go to heaven? I like very much to buy a good book for sixty cents, but please send me one of Ingersoll's. I do not think the reading of religious and other unnatural books will help our digestion the least. I understand you mean to do me good, and am therefore thankful, but religion is a bad medicine. You are talking about heaven and hell as if you had been there yourself or in some other way received reliable information—the Bible is no authority on that subject. What do you think about the prophecies? Are they all fulfilled? How many days was Jesus in his grave? It is written somewhere in the Bible, as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of the whale, so shall the son of man be three days and three nights in the grave, or words to that effect. I understand the son of man spent only one day and two nights in his grave. This and other similar prophecies are knocking themselves in the head. You say I cannot spare $1 per year as payment for Hydræsten. I am now taking THE TRUTH SEEKER, a Freethought paper, which you must have heard something about, and I pay for it $3 per year. I always give a cripple or a blind person when I meet one some of my hard-earned money, as I believe that that will do him more good than many prayers. I could use the sacraments, you say? Is it soon nineteen hundred years since the person whose flesh you want me to eat, was born without a father? If you take the remains of a lord's supper and leave it in an unguarded place, why, then the rats will come and eat it, and thereby be entitled to the same glory as the superstitious two-legged god-and-man eaters.

Inclosed find the fifteen cents I owe you. If you can spare time in working for my salvation, please answer my questions in an honest way, and show me the erroneousness of the statements I, in all haste, have made.

P. HERTZBERG.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Friendly Visitor.

He comes, and with sardonic grin,
He rubs his hands in glee;
"Ah, ha!" he says, "I find you in—Tis you I'm glad to see."

"But just one minute, I've to stay—
Why, what a cosy place!
I'm glad I ventured out to-day,
To look upon your face."

"Now, what is fresh?—and what's the news?
What have you under way?
It is so dull I've had the blues
Since all of yesterday."

He fumbles o'er your books, and states
He has no time to read!
Of books and papers, and their rates,
He does not see the need.

And thus he gabbles, slow and fast—
You watch the clock and sigh;
While he relates his history past,
To be at ease you try.

He tells of what he means to do,
Of all his little plans;—
"Your manuscript," he says, "looks new"—
It, furtively, he scans.

You shortly ask if he e'er knew
That time is precious gold;
"O yes," he says, "that's very true,
I know that fact of old!"

When two good hours have passed away,
He thinks he'd better go;
But says he'll call some other day,
And hopes you'll not say, "no."

Your heart then gives a joyful leap,
And lip and eye both smile;
Impatient words you hold and keep Within your mind the while.

"O, by the way," he says, "I'll wait!—
To meet a man I must—
At twelve o'clock—it is not late—
You will not care, I trust."

"And, not to hinder you, proceed
With what you have to do;
This magazine I now can read,
This album, too, look through."

So down he sits another hour,
Then, walks he to and fro,
Until you ask if any power
Will make that man to go.

He really starts to leave at last,
And opens wide the door;
Then closes it, and holds it fast,
To speak—"just one word more!"

You groan in spirit all this time,
Your heart is troubled sore—
You wish he'd seek another clime,
This horrid, "friendly" bore.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

The Editor of the Corner in Chicago.

DEAR FRIENDS: It is too stormy to go out this morning, and I will improve the time by writing some letters, first of all, to our friends of the fireside Corner. Arriving in this city on Thursday morning in company with my sister, we went immediately to the pleasant locality where Mr. Charlesworth had kindly engaged rooms for us. There we were met by Mr. Charlesworth and Mr. S. P. Putnam, and felt at once that we were among dear friends.

As tired as we were from a long railway journey, we started immediately for the one point of attraction—the World's Fair. Of course you have all read friend Putnam's "Pen Pictures of the Fair," and it is excellent, but no description is adequate. The beautiful White City is beyond description. It certainly rivals the City of the New Jerusalem, and has a million times more visitors, as well as interest, and deservedly, too. All conveniences to the grounds are crowded by eager sightseers. It is amusing to note the throng waiting for trains to Jackson Park—men with hats on the back of their heads, eyes rolling "every which way," women with bonnets awry, wisps of hair lifted and tossed by the wind, some carrying heavy babies, for the most part well-behaved, and little boys and girls arrayed in their best, all bent on one particular object—seeing the Fair.

The first building we visited was the Mines and Mining, which is very interesting, showing collections from our own and many foreign countries. In the Colorado section, we saw the Aspen "Silver Queen;" and the Montana section contains the statue of Justice in silver. There are pagodas and pavilions from different states, each containing separate collections, some extremely interesting. There are lovely specimens of onyx from Mexico, and the handsomest petrified wood, in sections of trees, highly polished, that I have ever seen. One might spend many, many days in this department with pleasure and profit.

We were some time in the Electricity Building, where are many wonderful and unique exhibits—dynamoes, batteries, etc. I was much interested in the Kinetograph, and in the application of the phonograph to common social and business uses. We walked, talked, and looked, seeing so much that we were almost bewildered, and glad to get to 308 Washington Boulevard at night, where we received several callers.

Yesterday, we followed the crowd again to the Fair grounds, and passed another interesting day, visiting among other exhibits, the strange homes of the ancient cliff dwellers. This place is in imitation of a Colorado cañon. The cliff homes are reproduced just as their ruins have been discovered. In the museum attached are many curious cooking utensils, and other implements used by people who have been dead probably a thousand years, and whose skeletons and mummified remains are shown in glass cases. A lecture on the cliff-dwellers makes this exhibition of particular interest. A herd of wild animals adds to the realistic vision. Among deer, elk, sheep, moose, and other creatures, was a pet donkey, who shared our lunch, and, then grew so particularly fond of our company, that he followed us everywhere. The frequent application of his nose to our basket showed, however, that he was more attached to its contents than to us.

In the Anthropological building there is much to hold the visitor's attention. All sorts of ancient things relating to man may be seen here, and no end of gods of various devices. You can take your choice among these heathen deities, which are held in as great reverence by their devotees as is the great I Am of Christians.

A visit to the Forestry Building brings to view the forest products of the world, especially of our own country, and the variety and beauty is magnificent.

During this day we called, in company with Mr. Charles P. Adams, of Pawtucket, on Hon. Frederick and Mrs. Douglas, in the Haytien Building, where they are pleasantly located. Mr. Douglas is one of the wonderful men of the country, the charm of his personality impressing vividly everyone with whom he comes in contact.

The great International Congress of Freethinkers begins to-morrow, and I trust the rain will be over by that time, although Freethought cannot be affected by water. Already the Liberals are gathering. Mr. J. G. Kendall, of Edelstein, Pa., and Mr. E. C. Sly, of Minneapolis, have just called, and also Prof. J. H. Cook, whom you all know by reputation. Mrs. P. Van Houten, nearly four score, and as bright as a new coin, has come all the way from California to attend this Congress. For vigor, energy, strength of purpose, keen minds, and good looks the attendants of this great convention will certainly be noted. Mr. Remsburg is located in the next house, and the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER has rooms in this house, also Mr. and Mrs. Pfaff and Mr. and Mrs. Lang, of Pennsylvania. Among others, we had the pleasure of meeting Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Stevens last evening. S. H. W.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 30, 1893.

Correspondence.

St. Joseph, Mo., Sept. 21, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Seeing that your correspondents are few, I thought, perhaps, a letter from me would be acceptable. I live with my uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Stephens, who take THE TRUTH SEEKER. I enjoy reading it very much.

We have "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text Book," "All in a Life Time," and several other books from THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, which we read with great pleasure.

We live in the country, but I go to school in town. As it is too far for me to walk, I go on the street cars.

I attend the Unitarian Sunday-school. We haven't a very large school, but all that come take a good deal of interest in it.

We seldom have lessons in our class, but talk on subjects which we are all interested in, and each one gives her opinions on it. Sometimes our teacher reads a pretty poem or an instructive story to us.

The Sunday-school and church are going to give a supper next Monday evening. We have invited our preacher and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, of Kansas City, to be present. He comes up every Sunday evening to preach here. About five of the Sunday-school girls, including myself, are to wait on the table. The supper is free.

I spent two weeks of my vacation this summer in Wathena, Kan., and while there I attended a German Catholic church. The priest called the teachers of the public schools devils, and said the children who went to them were heathens. He also said that parents who send their children to the public schools were sending them to hell, and I suppose all of those Catholics who were listening to him believed all he said—at least, they looked as if they did.

I would like to see a letter in THE TRUTH SEEKER from one of Mr. Cooter's daughters.

Well, as my letter is getting rather long, I will quit for this time.

Hoping to see the number of letters increasing in the Children's Corner, and that mine will be among them, I am your Liberal and true friend, NORA MCCOY.

[We would be pleased to hear from Nora often. She is a sensible and observing girl.—Ed. C. C.]

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 324 pp., boards, $1.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A Nineteenth Century Novel.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with a little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroine. The narrative is, in the main, a history of a working-girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business-men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrites. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price, 25 cents. Add ess

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed. Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
28 Lafayette place, New York City

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the Master Key to Popery, etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.
Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Facilities—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—
The Jewish Sabbath—The
Christian Scriptures and the
Sabbath—Examination of
Sunday Arguments Origin
of the Christian Sabbath—
Testimony of the Christian
Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony
of Christian Reformers,
Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification: The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality
Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter. The Fitness of Things in Immortality of Matter. Nature (Teleology).
Infinity of Matter. M.A.R. Brain and Mind.
Value of Matter. Thought.
Motion. Consciousness.
Form. Seat of the Soul.
Immutability of Natural. Innate Ideas.
Laws. The Idea of God.
Universality of Natural. Personal Continuance
Laws. Vital Force.
The Heavens. The Soul of Brutes
Periods of the Creation. Free Will.
of the Earth. Morality.
Original Generation. Concluding Observa-
Secular Generation. tions.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism
Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism;
Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism
and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible
Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the
"Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal
Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent
Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood
Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Just Out.—25 Cents—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this.
The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

BOOKS

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it:
"This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 80 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science.
In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment;
Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius.
Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer.
Every page glows with passion and throbs with life.

Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin.

In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story." Is
This Your Son, My Lord? In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Litiousness of the Pro-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Abs-on; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attitudes at Contingency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism

In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.
Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. Paper, 50 cents.

Pushed by Unseen Hands. SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth $1. Paper, 50 cents.

A Thoughtless Yes.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boiler House Mystery—The Time-Link of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in the Interest of and Owned by the Whole People.

By HON. THOMAS E. HILL,

of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms," "The Hill Banking System," and other works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted.

This book is "just in time," is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.
By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Not for Parsons.

CLERICUS: "Do you believe 'heaven lies about us in our infancy?'" CYNICUS: "Yes, and that it always will, so long as infant damnation stays in the creed."

FIGGS: "Joblots is getting to be a crank. He has started a remonstrance against opening any more new streets in his ward." DIGGS: "How is he interested?" FIGGS: "He has got it into his head that they intend to keep them open on Sunday."

BRIDGET: "The new neighbors next door wants to cut their grass, and they say as would ye be so kind as to lend them your sickle." PURITANICAL MISTRESS: "Lend my sickle to cut grass on the Sabbath! Tell them, Bridget, that we haven't any."—Brooklyn Life.

"NEVER again," said Mr. Dolan, "not even if I get to be as rich as the Vanderbilts, will I take me clothes till a Chinese laundry." "An' phy not?" asked Mrs. Dolan. "Because I hav a suspicion that the wrothin' he puts an the ticket is somethin' personal. An' be the looks av it it's mighty uncomplementary."

THE good pastor: "I noticed that you looked pleased when I denounced certain members of our congregation for visiting bad places, deacon, but I could not understand why you threw up your hand in such a peculiar way and slapped your knee." The deacon: "Oh, that was because you reminded me of where I left my umbrella."—Judge.GABE SNODGRASS recently applied to the Rev. Aminidab Bledso, of the Blue Light Austin Tabernacle, for some pecuniary assistance. "I jess can't do it," replied Parson Bledso; "I has to s'port my pore ole mudder." "But yer pore ole mudder says you don't do nuffin' for her." "Well, den, if I don't do nuffin' for my pore ole mudder, what's de use ob an outsider like you tryin' ter make me shell out."—Texas Siftings.A PUGNACIOUS minister of this city once in a while trips up. This time he was talking about Labor day. He spoke about the dignity of labor in one unctuous paragraph, and of the curse of God, which imposed labor upon Adam, in another. Politicians and preachers sometimes curse their opponents into prominence, but for the first time in our short experience have we had our attention called to the alleged fact that God cursed dignity into labor. The modern spirit has secured at least a temporary lodgment in this gentleman's mind, and mixed him and his dogmas promiscuously.—Progressive Age (Minneapolis).MABEL shows a distressingly logical mind for a little girl. The second day after school began, she came straggling home late in the afternoon, with unmistakable signs of having spent the day in play. "Mabel," said her mother sternly, "haven't you been to school?" "No'm," answered Mabel. "Where have you been?" "To Patty's house, playin' in the gooseberry bushes." When she was asked how she came to do so naughty a thing, she explained as follows: "You said God could do anything; so I just asked him to excuse me for not goin' to-day, and to make you not mind about it. An', of course, he did."—New York World.THE mountain circuit rider met me at the foot of Hurricane Gap in the Pine mountains, and we rode along together, and about a mile from where the roads forked we were stopped by a mountaineer, with a Winchester, whom the preacher knew. He presented me in due form, and when the nativ knew I was an "outsider," he didn't hesitate to talk. "I just stopped yer," he said to the preacher, "ter ax yer to come up to the house in the mornin'." "Anybody sick?" inquired the preacher. "No," and the mountaineer hesitated. "You know you have been a talkin' ter me fer a long time erbout gittin' religion, an' I been a holdin' off?" The preacher nodded and looked pleased, for there was a tone of penitence in the nativ's voice. "Well, I've erbout made up my mind that I've got ter the p'nt when somethin's got ter be done. Jim Gullins come by my place this mornin' an' killed one uv my dogs when I was away, an' you've heerd me say what I thought of Jim Gullins many a time afore this?" The preacher nodded sorrowfully this time. "Well, I'm goin' down to see Jim now," continued the mountaineer, "an' if I git him, I'll be ready to jine the meetin' house when you come up in the mornin' an' ef Jim gets me, you'll hav a funeral to preach, so's you won't lose nothin' by it nohow. I must be gittin' along; good-bye," and, slinging his Winchester into the hollow of his arm, he hurried away through the thicket, leaving the circuit rider and me sitting on our horses in the road completely knocked out by the suddenness of it all, and the peculiarity.—Exchange.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES.

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

- 1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake..... 5
- 4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization..... 25
- Underwood..... 10
- 7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller..... 10
- 8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 10
- 9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall..... 10
- 10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
- 11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
- 12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait..... 25
- 13 Essays on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
- 14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 15 Were Adam and Eve Our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 16 Why Do Men Starve? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 18 A Plea for Atheism. Charles Bradlaugh..... 10
- 19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake..... 5
- 20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of William Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
- 21 Defense of Secular Principles. C. Watts..... 5
- 22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
- 23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
- 24 Moral Value of the Bible. Charles Watts..... 5
- 25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts..... 5
- 26 Christianity: Its Nature and Influence on Civilization. Charles Watts..... 5
- 28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake..... 5
- 29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
- 30 Philosophy of Secularism. Charles Watts..... 5
- 38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H..... 10
- 42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. C. Watts..... 10
- 43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. C. Watts..... 5
- 44 Logic of Death: or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? By G. J. Holyoake..... 10
- 47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5

MANNA SERIES.

- 1 Original Manna for "God's Chosen."..... 5
- 3 New Life of David. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
- 6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
- 7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
- 8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
- 9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
- 10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
- 11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
- 12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake..... 10
- 13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake..... 10
- 14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H..... 10
- 15 Luridous Aspects of Christianity. A. H..... 10
- 16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
- 18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh..... 5
- 19 New Life of Abraham. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
- 21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz..... 10

On orders for Iron-Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.
The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.
Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 25 cents.My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.
For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

IN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
At Morristown, N. J.This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.
In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.The Clergyman's Victims.
A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR
THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER.

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, 10 cents.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, 10 cents.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

BY
AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
Price, 75 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, 25 cents.

THOMAS PAINE;

WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMESON.

This little book goes down to the very bedrock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATION.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

Gems of Thought.

SPEEDY end to Superstition, a gentle one if you can contrive it, but an end. What can it profit any mortal to adopt locutions and imaginations which do not correspond to fact; which no sane mortal can deliberately adopt in his soul as true?—Thomas Carlyle.

WHAT is heresy that it should be so heavily punished? Why is it that society will condone many offenses, pardon many vicious practices, and yet have such scant mercy for the open heretic, who is treated as though he were some horrid monster to be feared, hated, and if possible, exterminated?—Charles Bradlaugh.

THERE is one mind common to all individual men. Every man is an inlet to the same and to all of the same. He that is once admitted to the right of reason is made a freeman of the whole estate. What Plato has thought, he may think; what a saint has felt, he may feel; what at any time has befallen any man, he can understand. Who hath access to this universal mind is a party to all that is or can be done, for this is the only and sovereign agent.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

THE first to urge extension of the principles of independence to the enslaved negro; the first to arraign monarchy, and to point out the danger of its survival in presidency; the first to propose articles of a more thorough nationality to the new-born states; the first to advocate international arbitration; the first to expose the absurdity and criminality of duelling; the first to suggest more rational ideas of marriage and divorce; the first to advocate national and international copyright; the first to plead for the animals; the first to demand justice for women—what brilliant would our modern reformers have contributed to a coronet for that man's [Paine's] brow, had he not presently worshiped the God of his fathers after the way that theologians call "heresy."—Moncure D. Conway.

TIME indeed works wonders. As theologians have no useful knowledge of their own, they adopt the terminology of astronomy and geology. Now they can no longer suppress the truth, or proscribe the study of the works of philosophers, they embrace the theory of evolution, and endeavor to give it a theological explanation. Perhaps, after all, there is some hope for those theologians who have endeavored to make the flat earth of the Bible into the globe recognized by modern science, and to extend six thousand years into myriads of ages. The theologians could bury Darwin in their sacred temple with sacred rites, but happily they could not bury his teachings, or obliterate his declaration that their way of looking at nature was content to be with the eye of an uneducated savage!—Charles Watts.

SOCRATES tells us that "All we know is nothing." Well, this much I do know—that a man wrote the book of Genesis, and so, of course, the first and most important of human beings which he creates therein is man. Then poor woman comes in, at the far-end of all, and is at once assigned her place, that of being man's helpmate; in other words, his slave. And so throughout the Old and New Testament, down to the time when St. Paul bade "wives submit themselves to their husbands," etc., the creed has been sedulously fostered that man is the superior being, woman the inferior; that in him are vested all human rights, while in her are vested only such of these as he may choose to give her. That creed has survived the wars of religion and the ravages of time, and to this hour it is taught to the girl and boy, the woman and the man, with sedulous zeal, and nowhere more so than from the pulpit. With what awful result? I answer, "the degradation of woman."—Lady Florence Dixie.

WHEN the Puritans left England it was for dear liberty's sake, but when they reached this continent and had established themselves they practiced the same tyranny for which they had fled their native land. So it is with Joseph Cook. He would not allow Father O'Gorman to pray in the public schools, nor present his ideal of Christ. That would be tyranny. It would be opening the way for the Catholic conquest of the republic. Yes, if the Catholic was allowed to say prayers and present Christ as he idealizes him, the pope would soon be in America and Christianity would be doomed! Yet this same Mr. Cook would practice the same tyranny of which he accuses the Catholic. He would say his prayers, and make the Catholic hear them or stay out of school. He would hold up his ideal of Christ, if it ostracized every Catholic, every Jew, every Buddhist, every Unitarian, and every Agnostic in the republic. He would do this, and rather than cut off his arm, or cut out his tongue,—Minneapolis Progressive Age.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By O. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

—THE— FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

The Illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work
2 " The Church robbing the People.	5 " Missionaries.
3 " Thanksgiving.	1 " The Lord's Instruments.
6 " Sabbath Laws.	25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14 " Children and the Church.	1 " The Church and Slavery.
10 " Woman and the Church.	2 " Priests and Politics.
6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.	4 " Ireland and the Church.
4 " Studies in Natural History.	4 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
3 " The Bible and Science.	1 " The Uses of the Cross.
15 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4 " Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1 " Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9 " Persecutions of the Church.
4 " The Atonement Scheme.	12 " Some Allegories.
4 " The Lord and His Works.	3 " Heaven.
2 " Prayer.	6 " Hell.
10 " The Creeds.	7 " Miscellaneous.
1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Art at Heston as a portrait painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of his volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the truth of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity, and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Viceroyants of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MAGIC LANTERNS

And STEREOPTICONS, all prices. Views illustrating every subject for PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS, etc. A profitable business for a man with a small capital. Also, Lanterns for Home Amusement. 250 page Catalogue free. McALLISTER, Mfg. Opticians, 49 Nassau St., N.Y. 13 COW39

CHOLERA, DIPHTHERIA, Dysentery. Piles, Quinsy, Catarrh. The Antidote for $1. Agents wanted. Dr. G. H. MILLER, 2333 Hickory street, St. Louis, Mo. former address, 1441 South Twelfth street, Denver, Col. 10128

$1.50 AMERICAN WATCH

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 30 days; is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED. Has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lantern Pinion, 240 beats to minute; No key required to wind and set; weight 4 oz., exactly like our Patent for $1.50, 3 for $4.00, 12 for $15.00, by express. Mention paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CHARM. AGENTS & Storekeepers send for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE. ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 CORTLAND ST., NEW YORK CITY.

THE "Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more. Regular Grade American Watches. Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; alto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels, $15. In finer cases, add as above. Ladies' American Gold Watches. All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more. All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free. Sundries. Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spec. aces, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.5, $1.50, $2 to $3. The Colonel Ingersoll. Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Etched (teas only): "The Time to be Happy is Now," 50 cents extra. The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30. Diamonds. 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepared (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free. OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill. P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST.
For Men Only.

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J., and say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Fellows is an Infallible.

ZEKE GETS INSPIRED.

Moreover take thou unto thee an iron pan, and set it for a wall of iron between thee and the city: and set thy face against it, and it shall be besieged, and thou shalt lay siege against it. This shall be a sign to the house of Israel.—Ezek. iv, 3.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

an attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.
Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone — its martyrdom — in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MENTAL HEALING.

A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power.

By LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

A Book to explain the correct idea of Mental Healing, and what may be reasonably expected to result from an understanding of its principles. Price, $2.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFERENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the Initiative and Referendum,

By J. W. SULLIVAN.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. RABCOCK Price, 15 cts

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

Water of Life

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

News of the Week.

BISMARCK is very sick.

CHOLERA is on the increase in Spain.

THE Brazilian rebellion appears to be gaining strength daily.

THE time for completing the eleventh census has been extended to June 30, 1894.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Unionist leader in the British House of Commons, is visiting the United States.

ON October 2d there was heavy fighting at Melilla, Morocco, between the Spanish garrison and the Moors.

JERSEY CITY preachers and elders have organized the Christian vote against gamblers and the liquor trade.

A. OAKLEY HALL, ex-mayor of New York, was counsel for Emma Goldman, revolutionist, accused of inciting to riot.

NEARLY all the Democratic state conventions indorse the position of the administration on the Sherman law repeal issue.

RIOTING on October 5th, near Indianapolis, Ind., between Big Four workmen and railway special police. One man killed.

MEMORIAL services in honor of Charles Stewart Parnell were held in Dublin, October 8th. It was the second anniversary of his death.

THE mining troubles at Coal Creek, Tenn., have been terminated by the return of the men to work. The companies have reduced rents.

THOMAS MAN, associate of John Burns and Keir Hardie, in the English labor movement, is about to take holy orders in the English church.

A NATIONAL convention of Spiritualists was held at Chicago Sept. 27, 1893, and a national organization perfected, with H. D. Barrett, of Lily Dale, N. Y., president.

THERE is trouble in the British colonies in South Africa. The Matabele attack and kill the Mashona, who are at work in the mines of the British South African Company.

EUGENE POST, a dentist of New York, was fined $250 in special sessions court for practicing dentistry without a license. He was prosecuted by the New York Dental Society.

THE Canadian government refuses to impose further restrictions on Chinese immigration. Neither the letter nor spirit of the treaty obligations can be violated, it is held.

ON October 1st a tremendous hurricane swept in from the gulf of Mexico, destroying several island villages and fishing settlements below New Orleans. Over two thousand lives were lost.

There is much dissatisfaction in France over the proposed fête of the officers of the Russian fleet. It is felt among the radicals that a really free country can have no fraternity with such a despotism as Russia.

CHICAGO DAY, October 9th, at the World's Fair, witnessed the greatest attendance at any exhibition in one day. Over seven hundred thousand persons entered the grounds. There were many accidents.

A LARGE number of the titled women of England are writing for the press. Among these are the duchesses of Cleveland, Rutland, Sutherland, and Bedford, the countess of Carlisle and Lady Constance Howard.

RUSTEM PASHA, Turkish ambassador to England, declares that there is no such thing as religious persecution in Turkey. He says that the so-called "Armenian" troubles have their root in the American college of Marsoven.

PALLAS, the Spanish revolutionist, who attempted to murder Captain-General Martinez de Campos, by throwing two bombs at him, was executed at Barcelona on October 6th. He was shot with his back to the firing party.

JUDGE SHEPARD, of the Bowie county, Tex., district court, has declared more than one thousand marriages in that county illegal because of irregularity in issuing licenses by the county clerk. An appeal to the Texas supreme court will be taken.

THE great English coal strike continues. Coal is $12 per ton in London. One and a half millions of wage earners are affected, fifty per cent. of whom are entirely out of work. In some towns soup and bread is being doled out every other day, and school children are getting breakfast each day. Nothing like such disaster and suffering has ever before been known in England.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 42. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, October 21, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

"POPISH IN ALL BUT NAME!"
(Archdeacon Farrar on the Church of England.)

HUNGERING FOR PAPAL NOURISHMENT—ATTITUDE OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND TOWARD THE MOTHER CHURCH.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

IT WILL
CORNER
THE PARSON.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts
Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent
Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor Study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.
Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:
"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . .
All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible;
and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditionalism—Where is now thy God?"
Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

By Samuel P. Putnam.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1892, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore. Free-thought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignment ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits
Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for His Processes Are Egregiously Slow, They Are Egregiously Wasteful, They Often Serve No Use, They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

Remsburg's Book on Lincoln Now Ready.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN: WAS HE A CHRISTIAN?

By John E. Remsburg.

One of the most noted controversies of the century has been waged over the question of Abraham Lincoln's religious belief. Soon after the remains of America's most illustrious son were laid to rest at Springfield, one of his biographers, Dr. Holland, put forward the claim that he was a Christian. The claim was promptly denied by the dead statesman's friends, but only to be renewed again, and again denied. And thus for a quarter of a century the question of Lincoln's belief has been tossed like a battle-dore from side to side.

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

NOTED WITNESSES.

Hon. W. H. Herndon, Col. Ward H. Lamon, Hon. John T. Stuart, Col. James H. Matheny, Col. John G. Nicolay, Judge David Davis, Col. Jesse W. Fell, Hon. Leonard Swett, Dr. William Jayne, Judge Stephen T. Logan, Joshua F. Speed, Hon. Jesse K. Dubois, Hon. Joseph Gillespie, Dr. C. H. Ray, Col. F. S. Rutherford, Judge Robert Leachman, Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Leonard W. Volk, Joseph Jefferson, Hon. E. B. Washburne, Hon. E. M. Haines, Hon. James Tuttle, Hon. M. B. Field, Hon. Geo. W. Julian, Hon. John B. Alley, Hon. Hugh McCulloch, Gen. M. M. Prumbull, Rev. David Swing, Rev. Robert Collyer, Judge Jesse W. Weik, Hon. J. P. Usher, Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, Salmon P. Chase, Wm. H. Seward, Hon. John Covode, Hon. A. J. Grover, Hon. W. H. T. Wakefield, Gen. D. W. Wilder, Judge Aaron Goodrich, Judge James M. Nelson, Rev. Edward Eggleston, Rev. John W. Chadwick, Donn Piatt, R. K. Magie, Dennis F. Hanks, Mrs. Sarah Lincoln, Mrs. Mary Lincoln.

The foregoing and sixty other reputable witnesses testify that the greatest man born on this continent was a Freethinker.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF
ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS
FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies,
for Schools and
the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

PEN PICTURES OF THE WORLD'S FAIR.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

A Full Description of the Fair, Invaluable as a Guide-Book and still more invaluable to those who cannot attend. It tells WHAT TO SEE and WHERE TO SEE IT; gives rates of admission to the various attractions of the Fair and cost of living in Chicago, with other useful information to the visitor.

It is, besides being a complete Guide-Book, the best description of the Fair yet given—poetic, beautiful, accurate. It describes the inauguration ceremonies, gives the director-general's address, the efforts to close the Fair Sundays and the triumph of the Sunday-openers; describes the various buildings and what they contain, and is, all in all, the very best picture of the Fair that can be painted with a pen.

ILLUSTRATED.

A MAP OF JACKSON PARK, enabling the visitor to make his way around, and the stay-at-home to see where he went.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE FAIR, enabling one to comprehend at a glance the magnitude of the Exposition, the greatest ever known to the present time.

PICTURES OF ALL THE PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS:

Woman's Building.	Art Palace.	Fisheries Building.
Administration Building.	Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building.	Agricultural Building.
Electrical Building.	Mines and Mining Building.	Transportation Building.
Machinery Hall.	Forestry Building.	Horticultural Building.

A visitor to the Fair says of this book—reading it in THE TRUTH SEEKER—that it is charming and to one who has seen the Fair vastly entertaining.

Single copy, 25 cents. Five copies for $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

FACTS AND FICTIONS OF LIFE.

CONTENTS.

Preface.	Sex in Brain.
The Fictions of Fiction.	Heredity in Its Relations to a Double Standard of Morals.
A Day in Court.	Divorce and the Proposed National Law.
Thrown in With the City's Dead.	Lawsuit or Legacy.
An Irresponsible Educated Class.	The Moral Responsibility of Woman in Heredity.
The Moral Responsibility of Woman in Heredity.	Common Sense in Surgery.
Woman as an Annex.

At the Woman's Congress at Chicago Helen Gardener delivered as an address one of the chapters of this book. The Chicago Times said of it and her: "But the last address, dealing with the most delicate of the problems of reform, clear, unhesitant, modest, but uncompromising, was listened to with breathless interest by the audience. It was 'Heredity in Its Relation to a Double Standard of Morals,' and it was delivered by the one woman of all others best qualified to speak upon that subject—Helen Gardener. Petite, graceful, eloquent with the burden of her thought, Miss Gardener enchaind every auditor, and when she had finished received a perfect ovation, which her courage and devotion had so worthily won. The evening session was highly interesting, but that of the morning will be set down on the tablet of the memory of those present as one of the distinctively great features of the week's congress."

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EVERY Woman Ought to Read It. Every LIBERAL Woman
and Man Will Want It.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE.

By Matilda Joselyn Gage.

This is Mrs. Gage's latest and crowning work. It is THE book to show how the church has enslaved woman and kept and keeps her in an inferior position. A glance at its contents will show this:

The first chapter—the Matriarchate—shows that under the old civilizations woman had great freedom, but that the tendency of Christianity from the first was to restrict her liberty. In this chapter Mrs. Gage claims that to the Matriarchate—or Mother-rule—the world is indebted for its first conception of inherent rights.

Chapter II deals with the theological dogmas of original sin and celibacy. Woman, by the church, was not regarded as a human being; marriage was looked upon as vile; wives were sold as slaves; women driven to suicide; the influence of the church was unfavorable to virtue. The celibacy of the clergy produced degrading sensuality, and woman was the victim of these brutes.

Chapter III is on The Canon Law, showing how the church controlled woman by making the legitimacy of marriage depend upon its own control of the ceremony. Ancient civilization gave place to Christian barbarism, the clergy became a distinct body—at once a "holy" and an unholy caste. Learning was prohibited to women, husbands prohibited from leaving them more than one-third of their property; daughters could be disinherited, sons could not. The Reformation effected no change.

Chapter IV—Marquette—is on Feudalism and its degradation of women, the rights of "lords spiritual," the immorality of the heads of the church, baptism of nude women in the early Christian church. It also deals with some of the later-day abuses of females, like our Northwestern pineries, the English debaucheries, governmental crime-makers, etc.

Chapter V—Witchcraft. In the days of this phase of religious insanity Mrs. Gage shows how the possession of even a little learning was sufficient cause to suspect a woman of witchcraft, that to keep a pet was dangerous, so rabid were the clergy not to suffer a witch to live. This persecution for witchcraft was a continuance of the church's policy for obtaining universal dominion over mankind. Women physicians of the Middle Ages were persecuted, and the "Pilgrim Fathers" continued it in America. The first synod convened in America was to try a woman for heresy, and others were stripped and whipped for not agreeing with the clergy.

The chapter on "Wives" shows how the disruption of the Roman empire was unfavorable to the personal and proprietary rights of woman—that the sale of daughters was practiced in England seven hundred years after it was Christianized—that the practice of buying wives was regulated by law—that women were not permitted to read the Bible—that they were not admitted as witnesses—that civil marriage is opposed by the church.

In Chapter VII is shown how polygamy was sustained by the Christian church, that the first synod of the Reformation convened to sanction this institution, that Luther and the other "principal reformers" favored it, as well as the American Board of Foreign Missions. The Mormon theocracy is shown to be similar to that of other Christian sects.

In the last three chapters Mrs. Gage treats of the opposition of the church to the amelioration of woman's sufferings as interference with her "curse," of woman's degradation by the church to labor for slaves, of woman's "inferiority," as taught by the church to-day, and of how little value Christianity has been and is to civilization.

The work is a burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It is also extremely valuable as history. No woman, it seems to us, can read it and remain a supporter of the religious institution which has crushed her individuality, her mentality, and degraded her person. To the woman's cause it opens an Age of Reason. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do.

In cloth, $5; in half-leather binding, $8. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 42. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, October 21, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - OCTOBER 21, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

Is It to be a "Civil", a "Moral", or a "Religious" Sabbath?

What is the basis of the theocratic assault upon our liberties by means of Sunday laws? Are we to be oppressed in the name of "rest," or of "morality," or of Christianity? We know, of course, that Christians are the ones who are engineering the movement for the practical union of church and state, but we are not yet fully informed as to what is the principle upon which they will seek to justify to the conscience and common sense of mankind their attempt to make the United States a "Christian nation" constitutionally and in statute law and fact, as the Supreme Court asserts that it is traditionally and in common law. Certainly we do not need to be told what they privately hold to be a full justification of their conduct and a perfectly valid reason why the citizen should be compelled to abstain from work and play on Sunday when he does not refrain voluntarily. It is their idea that "the earth is the Lord's", and that, as he is inconveniently absent just now, they, as his only representatives, are under an imperative obligation to take charge of it for him, incidentally to their own temporal and eternal advantage. This is the real foundation of the Covenanter demand for "Sabbath" laws. All the rest is sham and pretense. But the men, or, rather, the brightest of the men, who are at the head of this Constitution-subverting and liberty-destroying crusade are painfully aware that the people of this country, careless as they are of their liberties, have yet at least a lingering prejudice against a union of church and state and are likely to be opposed to the passage of any law or the adoption of any constitutional amendment which frankly rests on religious dogma. Hence they have cast about for a secular cloak with which to cover their sacerdotal intentions. They have found two; one is called "rest" and the other is labelled "morals." The first is getting to be quite thin all over and in several places there are large holes. Consequently the "moral" cloak is now quite popular with some of the theocrats. This change we can readily understand. When a party has a weak platform it soon gives way under the assaults of the opposing parties and must be continually patched or an entirely new one substituted for it. Even if the platform remains unchanged the arguments used to support it must undergo constant modification. As we have said, this is understandable, but what are we to think when the champions of Sunday laws, vociferously disclaiming all intention or desire to unite church and state, in one breath demand such laws on purely human grounds, in the name of overworked labor, and in the next seek to justify them on the ground that the "Sabbath" is "a moral institution"? And why is the keeping of Sunday a moral obligation? Because, they answer, "as the Sabbath involves a great moral principle, God put it in the very heart of the Decalog." There, if that is not beating the devil of theocracy around the stump with a vengeance, what would you call it?

We will range here a few of the contradictory utterances of those who are at the head of the God-in-the-Constitution movement. They are all taken from the columns of the Christian Statesman, the official organ of the Sabbath observers, and the excerpts are editorials, contributed articles, and selections, as severally indicated. We begin with the disclaimers of a desire to combine church and state, taking next those which advance the "rest" theory, and finally those claiming the "moral" sanction for Sunday laws:

"The legislated exemption of church property from taxation is a vital, dangerous, and iniquitous form of union of church and state.

"History shows that where religious sects have been allowed to take public lands or public money they have become gorged with wealth and forced a union of church and state. It also shows that whatever religion has been wedded to the state, individual conscience has been debauched and a gigantic, tyrannical political machine has been instituted. The present practical relation between church and state in this country is not satisfactory, because in an important sense it is not essential separation."—Rev. James M. King.

"This brings us to our second practical problem in the relations of the nation to religion, namely, that it is now clear that in addition to maintaining our national separation of church and state, we must forbid such a union in the states before Utah and New Mexico can safely be admitted, and we must also cut off such informal but real unions of church and state as are seen in a case like that of New York, where millions of public money have been given to Catholics for purely sectarian uses. All Protestants have relinquished appropriations for their Indian schools because it is seen that if any sect is so helped by the government all must be, including Catholics, so making a dangerous opening for sectarian partialities and conflicts. To correct the evils just named, and especially to prevent the use of public money for parochial schools, there has been introduced in Congress the following proposed sixteenth amendment to the national Constitution:

'No state shall pass any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or use its property or credit, or any money raised by taxation, or authorize either to be used for the purpose of founding, maintaining, or aiding by appropriation, payment for services, expenses, or otherwise, any church, religious denomination or religious society, or any institution, society, or undertaking, which is wholly or in part under sectarian or ecclesiastical control.'—Editorial.

These two excerpts sound well, but how much do they mean, in the minds of those who give utterance to them? And the proposed amendment—how far is it intended to go? Will it shut chaplains out of the legislatures and the penal and reformatory institutions? Will it prevent the reading of the Bible, the utterance of prayers, and the singing of religious songs in the public schools? Will it take out of the school readers all selections embodying or inculcating Theistic and Christian dogmas? If not, why not? These are perfectly fair and wholly legitimate questions and we distinctly ask the Christian Statesman to answer them. If it objects to answering, will it tell us why it does not desire to help make the differences between the Secularists and the Theocrats clear and unmistakable? It will not do to say that this amendment is aimed at the sects, in the narrow meaning of that term, for the Statesman has put itself on record otherwise by admitting that this amendment is rendered necessary chiefly by reason of the existence and demands of the Catholic church, and if the Catholic church is a sect then the Protestant is also, and it is just as much a union of church and state and just as undeniably an outrage to have the Protestant Bible read in the common schools, which are maintained by money raised by the taxation of all the people, Catholics included, as it would be to appropriate the public funds, which are contributed to by Protestants, for the maintenance or aid of parochial schools, in which the Catholic Bible finds a place.

Now for some of the "rest"-day arguments and claims:

"How far can the civil law take cognizance of the Sabbath and enforce special observance? Just so far as the civil necessities of the citizens demand. If the majority of citizens desire to refrain from labor on the Fourth of July and Washington's birthday for purposes of recreation or patriotic observances, they may require such general refraining from labor as shall not put them at a disadvantage in the matter of competition. If the majority of men in a republic wish to rest one day in seven, it is wholly legitimate for them to require the minority to so demean themselves as to make possible that rest. Upon this simple foundation rests our so-called Sabbath legislation. This is no more a restraint upon personal liberty than the laws which govern public parks or national banks."—The Interior.

Note the disingenuousness of this! It is true that most people refrain from work on the Fourth of July, but are those who choose to labor punished by fine and imprisonment for so doing? And is not the Fourth of July the day for recreation, and the most boisterous, ear-splitting, and often dangerous recreation, at that? But the Sabbatarian would not only punish men who labor on Sunday but would also absolutely forbid recreation. Where is the parallel between the Fourth of July and Washington's birthday, and the Sunday which the theocrats would force upon us at the point of the "civil" sword? The above excerpt from the Interior is a fair sample of "rest-day" sophistry.

"Reformers, too, need to be more careful not to feed the prejudices that work against us by unguarded statements in which voluntary and compulsory aspects of Sabbath reform and other Christian reforms are mixed together. Let us say it so plainly that no one can misunderstand, that in Sabbath laws we forbid work, but do not compel worship, that, though the 'Christian nation' in its Sabbath law recognizes man's duty to worship, as also in Thanksgiving proclamations, in neither does it enforce worship by pains and penalties. This distinction has been made widely familiar by the use of the term 'Civil Sabbath' about which there has been of late some needless cavil. We do not know of any Sabbath reform advocate in our country who does not believe there are two aspects of Sabbath observance—call them two 'arms' or use some other illustration if preferred—one aspect, our duty to God, to be 'in the spirit on the Lord's day,' and in his church as well, an aspect universally conceded to be of voluntary observance, so far as law is concerned, belonging to the realm of religious liberty; the other aspect, one in which civil law can be properly invoked, the suspension of all work, save works of necessity and mercy, in order to provide freedom for worship and from labor. Civil law enforces duties to man and punishes crimes against man, but Americans generally believe it should not use civil pains and penalties to enforce what is only a duty to God nor to punish what is only a sin against God."—Editorial.

Why should "reformers" be "careful" not to make "unguarded statements" about Sunday observance? Why the use of the word "unguarded," when, if there is no intention to "enforce worship," either "incorrect," "inaccurate," or "untruthful" would have been the right word to qualify "statements"?

Again, what is meant by the assertion that the "Christian nation" "recognizes man's duty to worship"? You are talking of a "civil" Sunday; then why drag in assumptions about the "duty" of worship? The "civil" state can know nothing of any duty to worship; its sole province is to protect each citizen in his right to worship or to abstain from worship, as he sees fit. That he may have opportunity to worship it is not necessary that his neighbor shall abstain from work or recreation. If it was, what would he do about the Wednesday evening prayer-meeting or the revival effort?

The first excerpt which we put in our third category is taken by the Christian Statesman from Rev. George Guirey's "The Hallowed Day," and is placed under the caption, "Where the Doctors Differ," along with the before-quoted paragraph from The Interior:

"But all this controversy and confusion comes from treating the Sabbath as a 'civil' and a 'religious institution,' when in fact it is neither the one nor the other in the restricted sense of these terms. It is the body to which they both belong. We do not call the arm the body, nor the limb the tree; yet the arm is a part of the body, and the limb is a part of the tree. A religious dogma is an after-thought; it belongs to a remedial system which was devised after the fall of man, for the purpose of restoring him to peace and harmony with his maker; but the Sabbath is a moral institution, which goes back of all religious rites, and lies deep at the foundation of moral duty. As the Sabbath involves a great moral principle, God put it in the very heart of the Decalogue. Hence it is within the domain of both civil law and religious obligation, just as much as the law against murder, theft, adultery, or any of the other commandments."

"Sunday legislation, therefore, is not an infringement on the rights of anyone; and if every state in the Union should enact a law compelling all men to observe the Lord's day, no man could truthfully say the state was legislating in favor of any religion, because the state would only be performing a moral duty, which she owed to every citizen. A man is morally bound to keep the Sabbath holy, not because he is a Christian, but because he is a man. God makes no distinction among men on this account. This law is older than the nation, the Jew, or the Christian. It is not made especially for any class or creed. It was made for man. . . . And this law of God makes it the moral duty of every man to keep the day holy. When the state made God's moral code the basis of civil law, it rightly considered the observance of the Sabbath day a moral obligation within the jurisdiction of civil law, and binding upon every citizen, no matter what his religion might be, but conceding to him the privilege of keeping the Sabbath according to his own belief as Jew or Christian."

Presumably the Christian Statesman accepts this as all true, for, a few weeks later, it closes an editorial with these words:

"What needs chief emphasis on this theme, however, is that politics, no less than persons, owe allegiance to the Decalog and the Golden Rule. In repudiating the famous statement to the contrary the nation came to self-consciousness as 'a moral person.'"

Leaving politics for a moment and entering the domain of theology, is not this talk about the "afterthoughts" of an all-powerful and infinitely wise God rich beyond measure? "A religious dogma is an afterthought; it belongs to a remedial system which was devised after the fall of man, for the purpose of restoring him to peace and harmony with his maker." But silly as it is, it is an admission that moral duties antedated religion, and is in keeping with the reverend author's earlier concession that religion holds only the relation to morals that the arm does to the body.

If such advocates of Sabbatarianism as this Rev. Mr. Guirney are honest, how stupid they are! A man who will seriously contend that Sunday observance cannot be enforced on religious grounds but may be on moral ones and then proceeds to argue,—or, rather, assumes without argument,—that the Sabbath, being a moral institution, involves a great moral principle and because of this "God put it in the very heart of the Decalog," therefore it may be, nay, must be, enforced by the state, is either lacking in moral rectilinearity or is intellectually deficient to a startling degree. When it is assumed that any institution has been recognized by God and a command to reverence it put by him in a sacred law-book you have formulated a religious dogma, concerning the truth of which there may be the widest divergence of opinion. Because Mr. Guirey believes that the "Sabbath is a moral institution" and that, being such, "God put it in the very heart of the Decalog," is the very reason which stands immovably in the way of its enforcement by the civil powers. What certain men believe regarding a given day and their opinion concerning God's view of this day are not the concern of the state; it has no call to force their belief or their opinion about God's belief upon those who have different views of the whole matter. Any state that attempts to do so has to that extent ceased to be a civil and become an ecclesiastical state. In other words, we have a union of church and state. Calling "the Sabbath" a moral instead of a religious institution does not make its forced observance any the less a crime.

Civil law is a plant of very slow growth. Society had recognized and punished the crimes of murder, theft, etc., ages before any state had reached the conclusion that the "observance of the Sabbath day [was] a moral obligation within the jurisdiction of civil law." To Constantine and the Catholic church we are indebted for the legal Sunday, and to-day we behold the edifying spectacle of the Covenanter striking madly at "the scarlet woman of Rome" with one hand while with the other he wields a legal bludgeon to beat into submission those who do not accept as God's Sabbath the pagan-born Sunday she gave him.

To conclude as we began: Is the observance of Sunday to be enforced in the name of rest or of morals or of religion?

Christian Self-Sacrifice.

The Presbyterian Interior sapiently remarks, anent the World's Parliament of Religions, that "no anti-Christian faith has offered to lay its sacred scriptures beside the Bible for comparison; no contrasted creed, however it may boast of righteousness, has proposed a single new ethical conception not found in Christianity, . . . and no religion has presented to us a record of such continuous and tender self-sacrifice as that of the Christian believer." Like the party organ on the morning after election, the Christian attorney understands the art of claiming everything, sagely trusting that a large number of people will not take the trouble to compare the early claims with the later and corrected returns. In accepting the invitation to participate in the Parliament of Religions, did not the "anti-Christian faiths" lay their "sacred scriptures beside the Bible for comparison"? Inasmuch as Christianity had long ago appropriated as its own the ethical conceptions of the earlier religions, it is not to be wondered at that at the Congress the elder faiths did not present any "new" concepts. And "self-sacrifice"? Christians, like all other people, have sought to avoid what appeared to them the greater of two evils. The more finely-organized have been messengers of mercy to the suffering because the agonies of the innocent and helpless were harder for these sympathizing ones to bear than the pains and losses they incurred in the work of alleviation. In this they differed in no degree from other people of like sensitiveness, but when it is remembered that for centuries no one was permitted to live outside the church, is it to be considered marvelous that the church has such a large sum of benevolence, of "self-sacrifice," to her credit? But there were millions not so highly developed, and these also engaged in the work of "charity." They did good deeds that they might get the offered reward, eternal life, and escape the alternative punishment, eternal suffering. As the dyspeptic foregoes the momentary pleasure accompanying the eating of a piece of mince pie, that he may escape the night of horror which would follow such indulgence, so uncounted millions of Christians have abstained from the harmless as well as the hurtful pleasures of this short life that they might enjoy the everlasting felicity which they had been led to believe would follow such "sacrifice."

But this is not all there is of Christian sacrifice. Following out its idea that heaven was to be gained and hell avoided by abjuring the pleasures as well as the sins of earth, and that the church alone was qualified to detect and measure sin, and define truth, it zealously proceeded to sacrifice the sinful and errant in order to save their souls and the souls of others who might otherwise be cast into the bottomless pit through following sinful example and accepting false teaching. Necessarily, heretical doctrine was regarded as more dangerous than a bad life, and so special efforts were made to dig it out of the corrupt heart of man. The more horrible the sufferings of the heretic the greater the deterrent influence of his punishment. His short-lived body was tortured that his immortal soul might be ransomed. Let him die in lingering agony; so only can be saved the souls of others.

Beyond measure or realization by the people of this age has been the suffering caused by the sacrificial offerings of the Christian church upon the altar of superstition. Material civilization has been retarded, heartlessness nourished, the intellect of man has been dwarfed, hypocrisy encouraged and rewarded, and an unnatural and pernicious ethical code imposed upon the race. Well could the world have dispensed with the self-sacrifices of the best of the church's children if it had been permitted to keep to the end of the normal life of men the reformers and scientific thinkers and investigators whom that church murdered that its creed might live. We have had enough of Christian "love"; what we need is knowledge and justice. When we have these human love will do all that can be done to lessen the pain inseparable from sentient existence. We do not need the dogmas nor the ethics of Christianity; the first are false and the second are anti-natural and cruel.

Another Politico-Christian Scheme.

General Wheeler, a representative of Georgia in Congress, has introduced this resolution:

"In order to commemorate the beginning of the twentieth century of the existence of the Christian religion and by appropriate ceremonies to express the profound reverence and thanks of the people for the advanced civilization and inestimable blessings vouchsafed to mankind by Christian teachings and example, a World's Exposition shall be held in the city of New York, commencing as soon after Jan. 1, 1900, as the legislature of New York shall prescribe, and continuing through as much of said year as may be provided by said legislature; that the president of the United States shall, upon receiving official notice from the governor of the state of New York that said state has enacted a law accepting the responsibility intrusted to it by this act, issue a proclamation inviting the nations of the earth to participate in said exposition; that unless the state of New York enacts a law accepting said trust within three months after the next meeting of the legislature of said state this measure shall be void and of no effect."

A "World's Exposition" which could properly embrace only Christian nations (so-called) would be a novelty indeed. The essential narrowness of the Christian idea is well exemplified in this proposition to ask the entire world to take part in a World's Exposition for the glorification of Christianity, when only about a third of the population of the globe is nominally Christian. What a lop-sided conception of the material resources, and of the thoughts of the people, of his mother earth a child would get who should depend for his education upon such a "World's Exposition"! Yet, as before said, the idea is essentially and typically Christian.

But such a spectacle of religious insularity would be merely amusing, considered simply as a Christian show and bragging arena. It is not as such, however, that the friends of religious liberty can be content to view it. We can but regard this as another proposed step in the direction of the fusion of church and state. Congress has constitutionally and rightfully nothing to do with any celebration of the glories or alleged glories of Christianity or of any other religion. Neither has the legislature of the state of New York. Such a World's Exposition could be justly called only by those intrusted with the affairs of the various Christian churches. If the clerical and lay members of these Christian churches have self-respect they will indignantly spurn any offer of the United States or of any state to take religion under the wing of political patronage. It is tantamount to saying that the Christian religion needs the official countenance and financial support of the state. Will Christians admit this? Will they confess, by accepting General Wheeler's scheme, that the religion of Jesus (that is, of God), is inadequate of itself to cope with the powers of sin? Especially will Protestants thus put themselves on record by accepting the aid of the tem poreal power in their war with Satan? We shall soon know.

In the meantime it is imperatively necessary for Freethinkers to be sharply on the alert. It is not the hour for sleep. We must keep ourselves posted as to the whereabouts of this resolution. Let all friends of religious liberty watch carefully in the dailies for any allusions to the progress of this latest traitorous scheme of the Congressional allies of the God-in-the-Constitution schemers. We shall be obliged to those of our readers who send us clippings from any papers which speak editorially about this matter. The utterances of the religious press, for or against, will be particularly welcome.

Agents Wanted.

We believe that not only can good be done but money made by any Liberal who will canvass for our book "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." In fact we know one man who worked at it but a few hours weekly and sold nearly fifty copies in a month. The price is low; everybody knows the Old Testament stories, and nearly everybody would like a book applying nineteenth-century wit and knowledge to them. People like to laugh. Reverence for the Old Testament tales has largely disappeared and jokes at the expense of Jonah and Joseph and Esau and Samson and David, and the other worthies of unsavory reputation, are keenly appreciated. It seems to us that the book will sell at sight. It does here in the store. Liberals out of employment will find this a good way to make an honest dollar.

Terms to agents sent upon application.

We desire to call the attention of readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the benefits of subscribing to the Truth Seeker Monthly Library. The yearly subscription is only $3, and subscribers to the Library receive a paper-bound copy of each book issued in it; or, if they desire the books in cloth binding, subscribers can remit the difference in price between paper and cloth binding, and get the books in the latter shape. So far this year subscribers to the Library have received "Paine Vindicated," by Colonel Ingersoll, price 15 cents; the "Creation of God," by Dr. Hartmann, price 50 cents; the "Resurrection of Jesus," by Don Allen, price 40 cents; "Crimes of Preachers," price 25 cents; the "Handbook of Freethought," by W. S. Bell, price 50 cents; "Religion a Curse," by S. P. Putnam, price 25 cents; "Design Argument Fallacies," price 15 cents; "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," price 25 cents, and "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" price 50 cents. Other books besides are in preparation. One of these, we may mention, is "Pleasure and Progress," by A. M. Lorentz, LL.B., of which further notice will shortly be made. Send $3 and receive at once the books already published, and, as they appear, those which will be published between now and January, '94.

Freethought Progress.

On Oct. 3rd. the London Federation of Secular Societies opened meetings for the training of young speakers.

The attorney-general of Kansas has rendered an opinion to the effect that the secretary of state cannot issue a charter to the American Protective Association, because, as he says, it seeks to abridge the religious rights of some citizens.—Ma l and Express.

It is gratifying to know that Freethought has now a monthly organ in the West Indies, and Señor Emanuel dos Santos, of Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, is to be congratulated upon the way in which he sustains his monthly Progress. The number before us opens with a vigorous paper on "The Mission of Freethought."—London Freethinker.

We are pleased to note from Progress that there are also signs of Freethought in Jamaica, where Mr. A. M. Mould has published "A Plea for the Agnostic." We know that seeds of Freethought were sown both in Jamaica and Trinidad by certain of her majesty's soldiers who are also enrolled in the Army of Freethought, and who are now occupied with similar work in another portion of the British colonies.—London Freethinker.

The Bradlaugh birthday celebration at the Hall of Science on Tuesday evening was a distinct success. The large meeting included most of the cream of the Freethought party in London. Mr. Foote took the chair, and delivered the opening speech. He was followed by Mr. R. Forder and Mr. G. Standing, whose remarks were much appreciated. The last speaker was Mr. Leslie Johnson, formerly of North Shields, where he sat on the school board and the town council. Mr. Johnson's bright and earnest speech was very warmly applauded.—London Freethinker.

When the Rev. Mr. Noyes expresses the hope or the conviction that the belief is mistaken and that the heathen will be saved without the preaching of the gospel, he knocks out the underpinning of the whole missionary system. If they are to have a future probation under angelic instruction, the necessity of converting them to Christianity on earth is not imperative; they can be left to the mercy of God, and no responsibility for their fate will rest on people who are already converted. Thus Mr. Noyes destroys the argument on which the missionary society of the Congregationalists relies for its practical maintenance. If his view prevails, it must prepare to go out of business; the reason for its existence is gone.—New York Sun.

Churchly Purpose and Performance.

In the Stillwater, Minnesota, penitentiary, several standard works of fiction and Ingersoll's writings, have been forbidden circulation. The Prison Mirror has undergone change of editorial control, and is now distressingly pious.

Several preachers are condemning the Parliament of Religions. One prominent divine says that it tended to degrade Christianity. We do not believe Christianity can be degraded. The beautiful and brilliant diamond is not degraded when the ugly black lump of coal is laid beside it; but it sparkles all the brighter in contrast.—Independent.

Among the results of the Parliament of Religions these may be noted: No Anti-Christian faith has offered to lay its sacred scriptures beside the Bible for comparison; no contrasted creed, however it may boast of righteousness, has proposed a single new ethical conception not found in Christianity; no philosophy has offered to us a nobler conception of God than that we have obtained from the Old and New Testaments: no hope richer and more consoling has been suggested than the hope of an immortality of holiness; and no religion has presented to us a record of such continuous and tender self sacrifice as that of the Christian believer. And it is especially noticeable that most of the men who eulogized alien faiths were those who personally owed their intellectual quickening and their morals both to contact with Christianity.—The Interior.

O white-robed Pontiff of eternal Rome! thee do we hail as the living embodiment of our enrapturing dream. Thou hast handed on from generation to generation the sacred torch of cosmic thought; thou hast kept alive the flame of cosmic love. Thy name is inherited from prehistoric mysteries; thy mission is the preservation of the heritage of doctrine which unites the best thought of the flower of the Aryan and Semitic nations; thy home is amid the traditions of universal empire; we dare to see in thy triple crown the symbol of a unity in which Jew and Christian and pagan can alike participate; and we hail thee once more as the apostle of cosmic unity, the king of the first great brotherhood of the world. Hail to thee! and hail still more to the divine master who taught and crowned thee!—Merwin-Marie Snell, in Parliament of Religions.

Among other papers, the Christian Commonwealth is prohibited in Turkey. This might, perhaps, be taken as a compliment, but it puts our pious contemporary into a holy rage. It denounces the "unspeakable Turk," and hints that a war would be a very good thing to teach him civilization. This is extremely funny in a professional champion of the meek and lowly Jesus; and especially so when it is remembered that less than a hundred years ago many papers were dealt with after the fashion of the "unspeakable Turk" in Christian England, and that many men and women were rotting in jails for selling Paine's "Age of Reason." It is wonderful to see, when Christians are dragged forward a few steps on the road of civilization, with what ferocity they turn upon other religionists who still stand in the old orthodox position.—London Freethinker.

At a missionary meeting in Paris, a poor blind woman put twenty-seven francs into the plate. "You cannot afford so much," said the man who was holding the plate. "Yes, sir, I can," she answered. On being pressed to tell why she could give so much, she said: "I am blind, and I said to my fellow straw-workers, 'How much money do you spend in the year for oil for your lamps when it is too dark to work nights?' They added it up in their minds, and found it was twenty-seven francs. So," said the poor woman, "I found that I save twenty-seven francs in the year because I am blind, and do not need a lamp; and I give it to send light to the dark heathen lands."

[Christianity is assuredly welcome to all the credit it can get from such instances of "love," manifested in obedience to the behests of the blindest credulity, and densest ignorance of what foreign peoples are and need.—Ed. T. S.]

If some sentimentalists deduce that because of the culture and urbanity of representative teachers the pagan religions may, after all, be sufficient for these races which have been nurtured in them, and that therefore Christian missions are superfluous, it is enough to say, in reply, that nowhere in the expositions submitted to the Parliament was there in the pagan system found any place for the fundamental fact of sin, or for the equally fundamental fact of salvation through a divine agency already in existence for that achievement. The utter incompetency of the pagan faiths to touch the depths of human nature and develop a high morality among the people; their utter want of any sources of spiritual nourishment and heart comfort for men and women suffering beyond expression because of sin and hopelessness—these will make missions imperative so long as Christians believe that Christ came to be the savior of the world.—Stephen J. Herben, in Christian Advocate.

In this sense the Christian religion is essentially intolerant. She cannot grant that other religions have come from God or that this has come from man. When the time comes that those who stand for the Christian cause assent to the position that the religion which they profess is, in origin and character, one with the great world religions, only contending that it is a later and more advanced product of human evolution, Christianity will have changed its essential character. It will no longer be the cause which produced martyrs. It will no longer be the religion of the apostles and fathers. It was the intolerant aggressiveness of Christianity which brought down upon it the hand of persecution. If it had been willing to live on terms of equality with other systems, courtously conceding to them a legitimate place in the economy of the universe, it would easily have become a legalized system in the Roman world. But it would engage in no such compromise. It would not agree to "live and let live." It could never be hindered from asserting that it alone was right and all the rest were wrong.—Living Church (Protestant Episcopal).

But yesterday I very nearly received my quietus. We have Sunday open-air discussions here (Belfast), in which for some time past I took a prominent part. On Sunday week an English speaker, who did not realize how strong political feeling runs here, made a passing reference to Home Rule, and the meeting nearly resulted in a riot. Yesterday I put in an appearance, and was soon surrounded by an angry crowd. Cries of "Away with the Atheist, the Home Ruler, the Socialist, the Infidel," etc., were raised, and in a very short time I was set upon by as many of a mob of thousands as could get at me. Their numbers were probably my safety, for I escaped, through the interposition of the police, with a cut in the head and bruises all over me. None very serious, however. The spirit animating Belfast Christians does not seem to differ much in character from that of the Inquisitors in Spain. After I and others had been chased, the mob held an enthusiastic and victorious meeting, and declared themselves in favor of "civil and religious liberty" for all; and the Sabbath is not to be broken without the accompaniment of broken heads.—W. M. Knox in Agnostic Journal.

The third conference of Russian ecclesiastics and others interested in the extirpation of Stundists, which was to have met in August, seems to have been indefinitely postponed. The reason of the postponement is rumored to be the unwillingness of one or two of the chief ecclesiastical dignitaries in the synod to identify themselves with more drastic measures than are at the present time in force. As far as it goes this is a hopeful sign. No answer has been returned by the Russian bishops addressed by the Evangelical Alliance on behalf of the persecuted Stundists. The Alliance letter, a most courteous document, was sent to Russia in the early spring and bore the signatures of leading Christian ministers both in England and the United States. The Russian bishops have simply ignored it up till now. Advice from the province of Elizabetopol, in Transcaucasia, state that for a month past, the arrivals of banished Stundists have not been so numerous as during the spring and early summer. We regret to hear that there is a good deal of disunion among the brethren exiled to Elizabetopol, and it has even come to our ears that one or two of them have consented to be spies on the others. Be this as it may, the police show an extraordinary omniscience of their actions. The Stundists here are still prohibited from worshiping in their own houses.—Independent.

Milton.

I face the sounding sea-beach and behold
How the voluminous billows roll and run,
Upheaving and subsiding, while the sun
Shines through sheeted emerald far unrolled,
And the ninth wave, slow gathering fold by fold
All its loose flowing garments into one,
Plunges upon the shore, and floods the dim
Pale reach of sands, and changes them to gold.
So in majestic cadence rise and fall
The mighty undulations of thy song,
O sightless bard, England's Mæonides!
And ever and anon high over all
Uplifted, a ninth wave superb and strong,
Floods all the soul with its melodious seas.

—H. W. Longfellow.

MILTON.

A vision of Tartarus, hades, hell,
With hideous fiends that writhe and curse and rail
With awful roar and groan and moan and wail,
With lurid flame and smoke and sulphur smell,
The roar, the groan, the moan, the awful knell
Of every hope; nothing can here prevail
Against the curse, pronounced on all who fail
To understand the creed of Calvin well.
This is the burden of that wondrous song
That in majestic verse thou hast arrayed
Which alone reveals thy grand and wondrous mind,
Believing which, the world insane with wrong
Would suffer all the horrors thou'st portrayed,
And like thyself be blind, forever blind.
Grand Rapids, Mich. C. C. MCCARTHY.

An Opportunity For the Fool-killer.

The Ministerial Alliance of Denver has prepared a memorial citing the existing financial distress and the great legalized sins of the nation and petitioning the president to set aside a day when the people shall pray that the nation shall be rightly guided in its present sore distress.—News item.

It seems as though even a preacher would know better than to speak of the sins of a nation. Corporations, or public bodies of any kind, are generally supposed to have no souls, and hence cannot commit the great crime in the eyes of the preachers—sin. However, this being a Christian nation, perhaps it can commit Christian sins. Does anyone know where the fool-killer is at the present time?

The Freethinkers' International Congress.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Captain Adams, as chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, read the following:

Resolved, That as in 1776 the patriots of America declared their independence of the king, we, the Freethinkers of the world assembled in convention in Chicago in the year 1893, do hereby declare our independence of the church.

We denounce the church for securing unjust and injurious laws and customs, among which are the following:

Exemption to itself from the payment of taxes.
The use of public money for its ministers and sectarian institutions.

The use of the Bible and religious instruction in the public schools.

The appointment by government of religious festivals and fasts.

The observance of the Christian Sabbath.

The control of birth registration, marriage ceremonies, and burial rites.

The enforcement of edicts of Christian morality that are opposed to natural morality.

The oppression of those who do not accept its dogmas.

We therefore reaffirm the Nine Demands of Liberalism as expressed in the Constitution adopted by the National Liberal League at Philadelphia, July 1, 1876, and we pledge ourselves to make every possible effort for the emancipation of this continent and of the world from the political religions and social tyranny of the Christian church.

Resolved, That this Congress recognizes and affirms the supreme value of a right education; and that for the complete establishment and triumph of Freethought principles reliance should not be placed solely upon present semi-Christian instrumentalities, however well furnished and in accordance with advanced methods, but that Freethinkers hereafter should endeavor to establish and maintain schools upon a purely secular and Freethought basis.

Therefore, with ample means and endowments, which it is hoped will sometime be at the service of Freethought, it should be one of the ultimate objects of Freethinkers to establish a Freethought university, and for this purpose the subject should be thoroughly discussed, and the interest and generosity of Liberals aroused; also, as preliminary to such great educational institutions, science Sunday-schools should be established wherever possible, together with Freethought reading-rooms, libraries, lecture courses, social and literary clubs. The time has come for Freethought to depend on its own independent agencies for the future education of the race.

WHEREAS, It has been the blessing of the civilized world that the press has almost wholly taken the place of the pulpit as the means of general communication among people, and has become a factor of enormous power in modern life; therefore be it

Resolved, That, as a matter of vital necessity, those journals devoted to the spread of Freethought should be thoroughly supported, for without such journals it is impossible to carry on the work in any direction; it is impossible to agitate or educate, to keep open the lecture fields, or hold successful congresses. The influence of such journals in its very nature is far-reaching, radical, and constructiv, since it constantly presents Freethought from all over the world in its most varied, interesting, and advancing aspects. It is urged upon every true friend of Freethought to support these journals—both by subscribing himself and obtaining by personal effort the subscriptions of others in his vicinity—and it is earnestly desired that during the coming year a vast combined movement should be made by the thousands now subscribing for THE TRUTH SEEKER, the Investigator, the Iron Clad Age, Secular Thought, the Freethinkers' Magazine, and Independent Pulpit, to double the subscription lists of these papers. In this way will be made one of the greatest advances for Freethought, one which will be permanent and extensive, co-operating with and making vastly more powerful all the other means of intellectual, moral, social, and political progress which is the supreme purpose and spirit of Freethought.

Resolved, That we renew the demands of former conventions of Liberal people in the United States for a strictly secular, impartial enforcement of all laws by the people through officers paid by and strictly responsible to the people and to no one else. That we, therefore; condemn all lynchings, mob laws, Pinkerton, white caps, Comstock, Parkhurst, Gerry, and all similar irresponsible amateur or sectarian societies and agencies, as utterly false in principle and opposed to orderly government by the people. That the very existence of such methods is a precedent fraught with danger, a constant menace to our government—state and federal—an inevitable cause of distrust and demoralization to all lawful administration of the laws, and a natural source of blackmailing and corruption. That the temporary good which is to be accomplished by their irresponsible substitutes for the law, whether instigated by mobs or snobs, or bigots or monopolists, is sure, in the long run, to be exceeded by the evils resulting from them.

Resolved, That we not only express our sympathies with the working and producing people of our country, but that we will aid them in every way in our power. That in so doing we call their attention to the fact that in this country and all over the world the churches are supported and run by the oppressors and monopolists, who use them as their allies and assistants. That any real economic or industrial emancipation of the people is practically impossible without their intellectual and religious emancipation. That the medicine-man and the chief, the king and the bishop, the emperor and the pope, the monopolist and the priest, the plutocrat and his church, are everywhere but twin systems of authority—the two halves of one whole of temporal and spiritual oppression—by which the masses of the people are repressed, robbed, stupefied, and degraded.

Resolved, That we look with anxiety and alarm at the new departure which has been taken by the various de-

He wanted it located in his town, and to show that he at least meant business, he would give forty acres of land, and the citizens of Kearney would raise from ten to twenty thousand dollars. Kearney, he said, was the geographical center of the country, and is a fine city of over ten thousand inhabitants. It had been suggested in THE TRUTH SEEKER that such an institution be called the Ingersoll University, and though by Colonel Ingersoll himself some other name had been selected, it might still be called after America's greatest genius. Mr. Goff would give money wherever the university might be located, but he wouldn't give five cents for any institution with a preacher or a prayer inside its walls. He was an Agnostic, and had been since eighteen years of age, though no one could hurt his feelings by calling him an Infidel or Atheist.

Mr. Goff's proposition was referred to the presidents and governing boards of the three national Freethought organizations on the American continent.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Thursday evening was filled in with music by young Mr. Remsburg, songs by Mrs. Kinsella, who throughout the Congress obligingly filled gaps with her sweet voice; addresses by Mr. Shaw and Mr. Hourwich. Mr. Shaw entertained and instructed the audience with a history of Liberalism in Texas and it is to be hoped he will print it in the Pulpit. Mr. Hourwich told about Freethought in Russia and his address follows. It was worth listening to and is worth reading:

"FREETHOUGHT IN RUSSIA!"

The title may sound to you somewhat like the old story of "The History of Snakes in Ireland." And yet, I venture to say, Americans have the least reasons to look overbearing upon Russia. You have noticed the proud inscription over the likeness of Franklin in the Electricity Building: Rapuit fulmen caelo sceptrumque tyrannis. The grandsons of the founders of this republic seem to be very anxious to return the thunders to heaven and the scepter to the tyrants. The Congress of Religions appears to me an attempt on the part of the rulers of this country "to invent a God, if he does not exist." Then the touching newspaper recitals of the preparations which were going on in the capitol for the meeting of the prospective president-apparent, Grover II.; all these columns of gossip on what Mrs. Cleveland told Mrs. Lamont, etc., does it not remind one of the old-fashioned court chronicle of some small duchy in Middle Germany? What does it matter me what is the weight of Miss Cleveland No. 2; what do I care for Mr. Cleveland's disappointment?

Mrs. Cleveland is a young woman, and the event is nothing but natural. I agree with the reporter that Mr. Cleveland has become unfit for a lawn tennis player, still there is nothing extraordinary in his being a father. No European newspaper would indulge in that bosh. If the American newspaper offers such stuff to the public, it proves that there is a demand for it. The little grandsons of the great-grandfathers of this republic seem to have come to the conclusion that if there is no king, he must be invented. It is this spirit of servility that has made possible the disgraceful alliance between the republic and the Russian czar, an alliance the only object of which is to grind down the Russian Freethinker.

Yes, there is a Russian Freethinker; and though he has never enjoyed the opportunity of the American Liberal, yet he is the salt of the earth in Russia; he forms the public opinion of Russia, and not those official attorneys of the czar, who have boasted in this city of the progress achieved through the exertions of their crowned client.

I think it will not be without interest to consider first what is the relation between church and state in Russia. That the church is only one among the state institutions in Russia, is known, I presume, to everybody. But I do not think the American public is fully informed upon the methods by which the authority of the church is supported in Russia. I shall read you just a few quotations from the Russian Criminal Code:

"Whosoever dare to cast vituperation upon God glorified in the Trinity or upon our most chaste lady god-mother and virgin Maria, or upon the venerable cross of partments of the government of the United States, inaugurating a state religious movement, and especially at the action of Congress, commencing a system of religious legislation.

HOW THE CONGRESS APPEARED TO AN ARTIST FROM THE DUCH CASU.

Objectionable as were the state Sunday laws, a United States Sunday law is a hundredfold more objectionable, since it transfers the responsibility from a particular community or aggregation of communities to the whole people of the United States.

Resolved, That we stand committed to the most unrelenting opposition to all such laws, and to every law looking however remotely toward a union of church and state.

Resolved, That the action of the highest executive of this nation in proclaiming as law the decree formulated in secret session by the United States Senate whereby political refugees will be delivered to the tender mercies of Russian jurisdiction on accusation of Russian police courts was an act derogatory to manhood and contrary to all American precedents and concepts of liberty and justice and deserves the condemnation of all fair-minded men and women.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Mr. Wakeman, ere he departed for New York, wanted to congratulate the Congress not only upon its own greatness but upon its great good sense in passing such magnificent resolutions.

C. V. Goff, of Kearney, Neb., called attention to the proposition to build a Freethought University.

our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, or upon the immaterial powers of heaven, or upon the saints or their images," in case this crime be committed, . . . "in a public place and before an audience, more or less numerous, shall be sentenced to deprivation of all civil rights and hard labor for the term of from six to eight years." (Section 176.)

The consequence of hard labor is exile for life to Siberia.

"Whoever has committed the same crime, not in public, nor before a numerous audience, but in the presence of witnesses with the intent to shake their faith or to seduce them, shall be sentenced to deprivation of all civil rights and exile to the remotest parts of Siberia for life-time." (Sec. 177.)

The same punishments are meted out for "the vituperation of the Christian or orthodox church, abusing the holy scriptures," etc. (Sec. 178.)

The witnesses of such crimes who have failed to report them to the authorities are subject to arrest or imprisonment for a term not exceeding eight months." (Sec. 179.)

The same punishment awaits the blasphemous wrongdoer who dares to give expression to such ungodly opinions in a book, or pamphlet, as well as to the one who distributes the book. (Sec. 181.)

"Whoever has succeeded in diverting a Christian of the orthodox or any other denomination, into the Jewish, Mohammedan, or any other non-Christian faith, shall be sentenced to hard labor for the term of from eight to ten years." (Sec. 184.)

Those so converted are deprived of their civil rights, and a guardianship is instituted over their estates." (Sec. 185.)

Exile and imprisonment are also kept in store for those who will convert an orthodox Christian into any other Christian faith. (Sec. 186-189.)

But the following statute is the most remarkable:

"Whoever, being aware of the fact that his wife, or children, or other persons intrusted by law to his care and guardianship, have in mind apostasy from the orthodox faith, will fail to exert himself to divert them from such intent, and to avail himself of the power delegated to him by law to prevent them from carrying out that intent, shall be sentenced to arrest for not less than three days, nor more than three months." (Sec. 192.)

And yet the Russian government has the face to boast of its tolerance!

Of course, in the case of all such laws the question arises whether they are not obliterated in practical life.

To that I will say: They are and they are not obliterated, according to whether the culprit belongs to the higher or to the lower classes of society.

Tens of thousands of peasants are persecuted for apostasy from the orthodox Greek church, imprisoned, exiled, ruined. The great majority of them are simply Protestant enthusiasts, trying to embody in their everyday life the teachings of the first Christian apostles. But there are among them complete Atheists, opposed to all forms of authority, religious as well as political. Their permanent residence is in the mines and in the wilds of Siberia.

As to the educated classes, the policy of the government is different. Not that persecution is entirely out of the question—not by any means, no! During the reign of Alexander II., alias the "Czar-Liberator," Adrian Pushkin was held twenty years in the dungeons of the Solovetzky Monastery, on an island in the White sea, for no other offense than having founded a new mystic sect of "Men-gods." Still, it was an easy task for the government to persecute religious mysticism, that had scarcely a score of adherents.

But the case is entirely different with regard to Atheism. To persecute Atheists would mean to persecute the whole educated class, Russian officials themselves included. There is a certain amount of official hypocrisy with the servants of the pious czar, but no educated Russian would make a secret of his infidelity.

The defeat of religion is entirely due to the activity of the Nihilists, which began, during the sixties, in the enthusiastic propaganda of the theory of evolution and culminated in the propaganda of political revolution. It is needless to go into details. Suffice it to say that if the Nihilists failed to revolutionize the institutions of their country, they have produced a complete revolution in the minds of their countrymen.

The Russian is consistent. Having rejected religion, he has also rejected the religious foundations of ethics. And here the question of the relations between man and woman is of paramount importance. Marriage is in Russia a religious institution. Divorce is not recognized by Russian law, except for adultery, precisely as in New York. But the Russian makes no fetish of the law. The first Russian female students were also the first pioneers of freedom for woman. In proud contempt they disregarded the attacks of the Comstocks of their time, until finally they have brought it to a complete change of public opinion. Nowadays Mrs. Manasseina, the well-known writer on physiology, has lost nothing in public respect for having separated from her husband and married Professor Tarcharoff without caring a whit for legal formalities.

Thirty years ago, when our glorious Tchernysheffsky announced the gospel of emancipation in his "What Is To Be Done?" he was denounced, like Brother Moses Harman to day; he was imprisoned and spent twenty-one years in jail and in Siberia. To-day his ideas have become a matter of course.

But, as I have said, the Russian is consistent. Having done away with tradition in religion and ethics, he went one step further and declared war on authority in political and economic life. And here he has offered an object lesson to those who think that a moral life is impossible without a religious belief. With the Russian Nihilist Socialism took the place of religion. In the name of this worldly religion the Russian Nihilist has presented to our business-like nineteenth century examples of devotion and self-sacrifice which bring us back to the times of the first martyrs of Christianity.

I remember a discussion on this very topic which I once had with an English gentleman, a strong adherent of Christianity. He denied, as usual, that morality of the higher type can be built up on a philosophical basis. I quoted the example of the Nihilist martyr, giving away his life for his neighbor. "But he may have been actuated by desire of glory." "What do you think of a man who was executed under the name of 'Unknown,' because he refused to tell his name, lest it might give a clue to the persecution of his associates? The man who died on the scaffold under the name of 'Unknown' was certainly moved by anything but the desire of glory." The gentleman conceded that this martyr, though an infidel, had doubtless been accorded a place in the Christian kingdom of heaven.

I have nothing more to say. I have attempted to show that the movement which is going on to-day here in America has already a history in Russia. I consider, therefore, the hundreds of educated Russians driven to these shores by the political and religious intolerance of their government as an element of progress in this country. But that is precisely the reason they are not wanted by the Pharisees of this country. Here lies the explanation of the union between this plutocratic republic and the autocratic czar. To this union we must oppose a union between the Freethinkers of America and the radicals of Russia.

Therefore, before all things, down with the Russian-American treaty for the extradition of Russian political refugees!

ISAAC A. HOURWICH.

Friday, the delegates visited the World's Fair. About a hundred met at the Administration Building, and proceeded in twos to the temporary mecca of heresy, the Paine picture in the Government Building. Mr. Charlesworth had preceded them, with the intention of obtaining permission for a speech in front of the portrait. He met with a refusal, which was afterward softened to permission to have a short service. Mr. Remsburg had the honor of doing the talking while recalling Paine's services to the country as one of the framers of our system of government and workers for independence. Mr. Hunt, who has charge of the state department exhibits, sent up this note:

Don't let your demonstration be too long or too conspicuous. Remember the picture is exhibited by the government—not by a sect.

G. HUNT.

Mr. Remsburg graciously cut it short, and the audience scattered around the grounds to see the Fair. The day was rainy and cold, and sight-seeing was confined to the exhibits in the building.

Saturday was also devoted to sight-seeing, till evening, when a dinner, erroneously called a banquet, was on the program. About one hundred and thirty sat down to tables, which did not groan, because the price was small. The service was also in proportion, and lucky was he who had a knife and fork at the same time. But as some were used to knives and others to forks, by dividing up the table ware substantial progress was finally made.

Captain Adams presided in his usual charming manner. The captain is an unusually graceful chairman. He says the right thing at about the right time, and this habit, united with unusual good sense and sound attainments, makes the captain a leader of great worth. He ought to be forced to the front much oftener than his native modesty now permits. The only one who stood alongside Captain Adams as a judiciary officer was Mr. Putnam, also a captain. When enthusiasm and money were wanted, it was Putnam who wielded the gavel. No one could escape the contagion of that man's boundless good nature and zeal. He extracted half dollars from pockets used to yielding pennies, and he made the audience as hilarious and happy as himself. They couldn't help it. They just caught it.

But to return to the over mutton of the dinner. Captain Adams, began proceedings by recalling the banquet at which Charles Lamb wanted to know if there were no minister present to say grace. Finding there was none, Lamb earnestly said: "Let us thank God." Being in the same predicament as the fellow at the feast, Captain Adams used the old lady's benediction of the food she was to eat:

Let grace be here and grace be there,
And all around the table;
Let each one take a spoon and fork,
And feed as best he's able.

There being little to eat, the dinner was soon done. With nothing but coffee to drink, the orators were easily kept within bounds, time being called on one only. The first toast was "Freethought, the Motor of Progress." Mr. Waite rose first. In coming along the street, he said, he came by D. L. Moody's place of business, and was handed an advertising card bearing the legend, "Get right with God." But as he had never injured God's reputation, the advice was wasted. And this led him to remark that the preachers earned only about ten per cent. of their salaries in teaching ethics, the other ninety per cent. being purely waste. Mr. Waite went on to say that the Freethinker's Congress, as far as it had gone, was a good one. That he had had a good time. That the Federation and the Union had chosen good officers, in which view he believed Brother Putnam would agree. He had heard Brothers Wakeman and Menden mentioned as possibly good presidential timber for the Union; so he had nominated both. He desired to please, but he couldn't see why he should object to himself more than to them. The most of those present, he said, would never meet each other again in this world, but if they met in another he hoped it would be as Freethinkers.

Mr. Putnam was second speaker to this toast. The Freethought Federation, he said, was the light artillery of Freethought, and he was glad that the other corps of the Freethought army was willing to work with it. Freethought was the motor of all social progress, and while orthodoxy opposed it he wanted all the friends possible. There is a big fight on hand, and we must use the ballot. He knew from his experience at Washington that had not the church used ballots Congress would not have voted to close the Fair on Sundays. Some of the Congressmen he personally knew were bulldozed by the church. We must fight it through every channel, at the ballot-box and in the courts. On the moral side we should establish science schools, and he hoped to see the Freethought university under way soon. He also rejoiced at the splendid harmony which the Congress had developed, and advised the delegates to eat, drink, and shake hands.

Mrs. Ames, when called upon, said it was cruel to ask her to speak further, but as the men had been cruel to the women for so many ages, she would try to bear this additional burden. The gist of her remarks was that the church was in its dotage; the government granted the old lady all the favors she asked, and the speaker trusted that when the Freethinkers did come into power they would not enact retaliatory legislation.

Judge Hilton, of Oklahoma, said he had been a Freethinker but four or five years. He agreed with Mrs. Ames, and was more than charmed with the gentlemen of a new religion—the true one—a religion which always sought the society of ladies. He should look back upon this night as Rasselas upon the happy valley. Freethought was felt even in Oklahoma. The people had forsaken the old religion on Sunday. The way to test Freethinkers is when they use the ballot. He thought, too, that a Freethought university should be built.

After music by the Edelweiss Club, Captain Adams said that as progress depended upon the printing-press, a machine that the old ecclesiastics said they must destroy or it would destroy them, he offered the toast: "The Liberal Press, the Greatest Disseminator of Freethought." The captain had intended, he said, to ask Mr. Mendum, as the publisher of the oldest Freethought journal, to first respond to this, but he was unable to be present. And, continued the captain, as Mr. Macdonald of THE TRUTH SEEKER was more addicted to putting his thoughts into deeds than words he would ask Miss Wixon, another TRUTH SEEKER editor, to respond. Miss Wixon said:

The Liberal press is an educator; it is one of the greatest educating forces in the world. It is the people's schoolmaster. Without it the cause of Freethought would languish and sink into obscurity. It sends around the world messages of hope and encouragement, strengthens the weak and despondent, inspires the earnest worker with new energy and zeal, and is the promoter of everything that tends to the happiness of the human race. Its bright and broadening influence is felt to the uttermost parts of the earth, and wherever it has gone it has left an impression of truth and goodness. Thousands owe their emancipation from the slavery of superstition to the efforts of the Liberal press.

Through this medium we get an interchange of ideas and a knowledge of what is going on in the Liberal world. In this way heart meets heart, and hand meets hand in true fraternal greeting.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, since its inception, has kept steadily onward in the path of progress and reform. True to its principles it has never wavered from its purpose—that of seeking and following truth wherever she leads the way, knowing that the truth can lead no one astray. And whatever new fields of science and progress open in the future, you may rest assured THE TRUTH SEEKER will be there, ready to gather new facts as they arise and place them before its readers in their true light.

If you will pardon an allusion to my own department in THE TRUTH SEEKER, the Children's Corner, I would like to say that it is an important feature of the Liberal press. That which is done for the children is done for the world. Train a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it. If we would have Freethinkers in the future we must begin with the children. Imbue them with the principles of freedom and those principles will remain through life.

Thousands of letters from children and parents all over America, Canada, England, and other countries, testify to the value of Liberal ideas to the young.

Finally, let me say that our thanks are due those who have so gallantly sustained THE TRUTH SEEKER by their sympathy and financial support. Without their clear heads, strong hands, and true hearts we can do little; while we have their aid and friendship we can meet all foes bravely. Hence, we ask only a continuance of their favors, and promise the same faithfulness to our common interests in the future as has characterized our efforts in the past.

Dr. Foote, Sr., Moses Harman, and Dr. Pritchard, of Sierra Valley, Cal., also responded to this toast.

The succeeding toast was "To the Liberal Orators." Mr. Remsburg was the first to respond. He spoke, he said, for the radical Freethinkers, those who had always been in the front of the fight, and who had been condemned by the pretentious and pretended friends of Freethought. Freethought, said Mr. Remsburg, is both constructiv and destructiv, and while we could applaud Comte we could also admire Voltaire. The constructiv work of an Adler merits approbation, but much more the satire and wit that fall from the lips of an Ingersoll. He indorsed the Nine Demands, but went farther. He not only demanded the taxation of churches, but he demanded also their damnation. He would abolish chaplaincies and chaplains as well. He would repeal Sunday laws, but he would do more—demolish Sunday itself. A God who could only make one day in seven holy was but a seventh-rate God, and of but little consequence. He would discontinue appropriations to religious institutions, and the institutions also. Joe Cook told the truth once—the only time that had come to the speaker's knowledge. Cook said, "Destroy the Sabbath, and you destroy the church." Mr. Remsburg had been saying that for fifteen years. And he would not only throw the Bible out of our public schools, but would destroy it entirely as a religious work. Its influence was almost wholly bad. This country is not big enough for religion and Freethought, and the radical Freethinkers were in the fight for all time. Mr. Remsburg waxed gloriously eloquent on this theme. and the room rang to his voice and to the applause evoked. He was, in fact, unusually brilliant all through the Congress, probably inspired by the presence of Mrs. Remsburg, who had come five hundred miles to hear him lecture, for the first time in all the years he has been in the field.

Voltaire de Cleyre followed Mr. Remsburg and made a little speech breathing defiance of law. Freethought orators, she said, ought to stir up opposition to all despotism. They ought to make Freethinkers really free, and not war upon a book or an idea of God. They ought to break laws, and she for one proposed to break all laws which conflicted with her conscience. Miss de Cleyre's speech offended a great many, and was not accepted as a proper exposition of the duty of Liberal orators.

Mr. Charlesworth told stories of his experience in the lecture field, and pleasantly removed the disagreeable impression produced by the previous speaker. He closed by saying that he was a destructionist, as is a farmer who destroys noxious weeds that nourishing plants may grow, and he proposed to keep at it all his life.

Mrs. Freeman spoke to the sentiment, "Woman's Day." When President Cleveland and his friends had a public dinner, she said, Mrs. Cleveland sat in the gallery. Freethinkers did not follow that precedent, and the women ought to feel gratified. Woman demanded her share of the apple, not simply the core, and she proposed to get it. But there never was and there never will be a woman with wings, and there never was a woman who wanted wings. So the men need not worry about losing the women. Where she went, the man followed. All woman wanted was a chance to grow. She wouldn't harm the men, for they are her boys.

The dinner broke up about midnight, with a benediction from Mr. Waite, as the oldest of the three presidents present.

SUNDAY MORNING.

The regular sessions were resumed Sunday morning, with Mr. Putnam in the chair in one of his happiest moods, and the collection was correspondingly large. The audience filled the hall clear back to the bookstands of THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator, and crowded our Seventh-Day Advent friend, who was there selling religious liberty literature.

Moses Harman was invited to say a few words, and he went on for a long time, referring occasionally to a manuscript which he had no chance to read, as he kept thinking of things to say. His talk was mainly a repetition of what he has so often said in Lucifer. In regard to the present status of his case he had heard through a marshal that the prosecuting officers at Topeka didn't want any more to do with him, but he didn't purpose the fight should die. With him it was lay on Macduff, and blest be him who first cries, Hold, enough! He said that Lucifer took precedence over the Independent Pulpit and the Freethinker's Magazine, and he still wanted subscribers, but wouldn't be an organ of anybody. He was the center of his universe, and when he moved six feet the universe moved six feet too.

Mr. Harman was succeeded by Mr. Remsburg, who sustained the audience by recalling the men and women who were working for Freethought twenty-five years ago, reading the names from a paper published then, called the Liberal.

At the request of his friend, Captain Putnam, he would show what the Methodist church had done for the slave. His speech was full of facts and quotations from Methodist documents, and will be printed in good time as a chapter in one of his forthcoming volumes. It made a splendid speech.

Mrs. Freeman followed and won great applause for her wit and earnestness.

Reuben Rush, a young orator from Boston, made some criticisms upon the indifference of some Freethinkers, and incidentally made himself famous with those who heard him. In the words of one admiring auditor, Reuben is a rattler! What the cause of Freethought has most to fear, said Mr. Rush, is the apathy in the ranks. There are a great many Freethinkers in the country, and yet but comparatively little work was done. The most of them seemed to think there is nothing to do, that Christianity is a dying creed, a fossil. But that view, he thought, is decidedly erroneous. Christianity is not a fossil when it dictates nominations, controls elections, and make demands upon the public treasury. It has fat offices to confer, and will die hard. Freethinkers had a foe unworthy their steel, but a cause worthy of their best efforts. They should attack the church at all points. He had been to the legislature of Massachusetts and induced the committee on taxation to report favorably a bill assessing church property, and though the bill was killed in general session, it was the best result ever attained in Massachusetts. It was a result of work instead of talk. The church had lost its grip on the intelligence of the community, but still retained a mighty good hold upon the ignorance of the country.

Mr. Rush further urged Freethinkers to subscribe for all the Freethought journals and flood the country with Liberal literature as Christians do with tracts. It was much better than passing resolutions. The papers were not supported as they deserved. If you take one paper, said this enthusiast, take another, or get some one else to take it. Monroe is dead, but the Ironclad Age still lives. THE TRUTH SEEKER is better than ever, and who has not admired the art of Heston? Bennett is dead, but THE TRUTH SEEKER lives. And for sixty-four years the Investigator has been fighting your battles and mine. Seaver and Mendum are gone, but Washburn is here. With this he left the interests of the papers in the hands of the people, and expected them to do their duty. We fight, he concluded, as best we know, and follow where the star of victory leads.

Mr. Rush was a revelation to the audience, and they gave him tremendous applause.

J. H. Cook, of Columbus, Kan., was invited to say a few words. He was listened to attentively for the work he has done in the past, for he is now old and feeble. But the effort he had made to attend the Congress was appreciated. At a previous session it had become known that he was suffering from poverty, and to attend had broken into his "cremation fund" to pay the fare. Twenty-five dollars were raised for him by Mr. Charlesworth in many fewer minutes. This Sunday morning, after his talk, $30 or $40 more were thrown upon the stage for him. It did the old man a world of good, and never was money better spent.

John H. Copeland, president of the Texas Press Association, was called upon and responded nicely. Mr. Cook rose again and mentioned the Health Monthly and that forced Dr. Foote to the front. The doctor denounced the preaching of Christian sentiments over the remains of Richard A. Proctor, the astronomer. Ingersoll, he said, should pronounce that man's eulogy. When Dr. Foote concluded, Mr. Remsburg, who seems to know everything, explained why it was that Talmage was chosen. George W. Childs had paid for the monument, and so when Mr. Proctor's daughter Mary proposed to ask Colonel Ingersoll to honor her father, the Philadelphia benefactor and bigot had the power to thwart her desire. Mr. Childs lost caste with that audience in short order.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

The proceedings were opened by a piano duet by two sweet girls—each sweeter than the other—the Misses Johnstone, of Chicago, readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER. They had to repeat, and the audience would have liked to keep them on the stage if they hadn't known a musical note. At the morning session Miss Decker lost her watch, and Mr. Louis K. Johnson returned it in the afternoon. Such an act (Mr. Johnson's, not Miss Decker's) was never known at a religious congress, and the parties felicitated themselves greatly thereupon. After the music, Mr. Steiner read some resolutions by Mr. Betts, who was pushed into fame by being robbed of his Truth Seeker literature at the Art Institute. The resolutions were properly referred, and never heard of again. Mrs. Freeman read a communication from San Antonio condemning the action of Mr. Bonney in the Betts affair, and then Miss Wixon made a speech, which we will print sometime. Miss Wixon got great applause. She always does. She was the most popular woman at the Congress, and pushed the men pretty hard too as a favorite. She was followed by Messrs. Steiner and Washburn, with addresses too long to print here.

SUNDAY EVENING.

A long letter from W. H. Lamaster was first read, followed by a humorous theological song by Mr. Glass. Captain Adams was the first speaker. His was a mighty good speech and we regret that the manuscript which he was to make from his notes has not arrived. The post-office is probably to blame.

While the captain was speaking, the Judas of Freethought, who is now engaged on a Chicago sheet at about thirty pieces of silver per week, sneaked in, probably to see if he couldn't find something as a text for an editorial lie. But there was evidently too much truth being spoken to make the atmosphere congenial to him and he sneaked out again.

Mr. Adams was followed by Mr. Charlesworth, who said, among other things, these:

Many false impressions exist to-day concerning the meaning and implications of the word Freethought. Christians are prone to claim that they are Freethinkers as much as we are; they claim that their belief in the Christian creed is just as much the result of their freethought as our belief may be the result of our freethought. This claim is not tenable. A devout believer can no more think freely upon natural science and philosophy than a railroad could be built to the planet Jupiter. No man can think freely upon any subject when at the same time he holds a preconceived belief in the subject he is examining. A Christian may claim that he has impartially examined all the evidences adduced in favor of his belief but when he starts out upon his investigation with a belief in God, Jesus, the Bible, et al, his examination can only be a partial one, for if any fact is presented to him which seems to contradict his idea of the God theory, he will reject the fact, and will not even investigate his theory. His thoughts are not free to examine any given fact so long as he implicitly believes in a theory contrary thereto. If a Christian wishes to impartially examine the evidences of his creed, he must give up his God, his Bible, his Jesus, and everything connected with them. If he can do this, and then after his examination return to them again, all well and good, but if he cannot do so let him have the honesty of his opinions and the courage to express them to the world, thereby taking his place among the leaders of the world's thought. We have too much policy, so-called, amongst us to-day, a policy in which man's sympathies extend no further than his cash-box. It is a sad thing that all men should not recognize that truth is a thing to be shouted from the house-tops; it should be written across the horizon of the universe; it should be painted across the front of every pulpit; it should be stamped on every human heart that all men may become partakers thereof. Freethought, in its most essential characteristic, is just thought; to think freely we must think justly, and to think justly it is necessary that we should divest our minds of all prejudice whatsoever. The honest, conscientious Freethinker is just as ready to abandon a conclusion when he perceives it to be false, as he is to accept a new truth no matter how much it may clash with his previous convictions. Freethought is not a new thing. It has existed in all ages, even as we understand it to-day—the right to question the dogmatic assertions of a corrupt clergy. Still it has never existed as a recognized right.

When any statement is made to a Freethinker purporting to have emanated from a supernatural source, his caution becomes redoubled for he knows full well that the power of proving it does not lie within the pale of human demonstration, and he usually requires that the person making such a claim shall give some extraordinary proof of the truth of his assertion. To say that it came by a miracle is no explanation at all. There is no subject upon which mankind has been deceived so much as upon miracles. The great mass of society being profoundly ignorant as to what really constitutes a miracle, it has laid them open to the jugglery and deception of the priesthood in all ages and in all parts of the world. A miracle pre-supposes the setting aside, or the suspension, of some particular law of nature; for if it happens in the ordinary course of natural events it cannot be a miracle. The crowning glory of science in this nineteenth century was when she demonstrated the immutability of the laws of nature. They are implacable and unalterable, hence, we claim that no such thing as a miracle has occurred in any age of the world. Tell the people that these miracles occurred years ago and they are likely to pass as a truth. Tell them that two thousand years ago, a child was born of a virgin, and they will believe it; but tell them that it happened yesterday, and in your own district, and they will say "Seeing is believing." They will tell you that the age of miracles is past. Yes, and I will tell you something more, and that is, that the age of the belief in miracles is fast passing also. Hume remarked in his "Essay on Miracles" that he had never known a miracle to happen, but he had known men to lie, and he would rather believe that some men had lied than believe in a miracle.

It has been said that "There is no such thing as Freethought." In a sense this is true, for our every thought is governed by the conditions that surround us. Climate and circumstances are the supreme schoolmasters of the human race. It is these that have taught us to think and act so that the great human family may profit by our lives; to live and to do, that our lives may become everlasting monuments of respect to those who shall follow after us.

Mr. Putnam came next and his closing speech was about thus:

The issue before us in the years to come is broad and deep. We are not only opposed to the union of church and state, but we are opposed to the church itself and for what it represents in human history.

We are anti-Christian, and we must be anti-Christian if we favor human progress.

What is Christianity? We cannot give it a private definition to suit ourselves. We must define it by its own documents—its Bibles, and creeds, and deeds; by what it has done and what from a thousand pulpits and for a thousand years it has declared itself to be.

Christianity is not morality, it is not good conduct, it is not character; for no priest of that faith has ever admitted that an Atheist might be a Christian, however noble his actions. One might be a hero, a martyr, he might die for his country and serve humanity, and yet he is not a Christian, nor is there a single Christian clergyman that will declare him so to be. The golden rule is not Christianity, for the Freethinker accepts the golden rule equally with the Christian, and what orthodox preacher has ever declared that simply to obey the golden rule will save a man?

Christianity is not essentially conduct, but a creed. It is at heart a belief. Without a certain belief no one can be a Christian, no matter what his conduct may be. Conduct is incidental to Christianity and not its essence.

He that believeth, shall be saved; he that believeth not, shall be damned. This has ever been the Shibboleth of the church, and without that the church would cease to be. It is founded upon faith, and not upon any system of morality.

This is the issue first of all between the Freethinker and the churches, an issue which touches the very heart of human advancement and happiness. It is not faith, but character that should be supremely insisted upon; not belief but practice, not creed but works. It is not what a man thinks, but what he is, that is of the greatest importance. Accept this dogma, says the Christian. Act the best you can, says the Freethinker. This is the radical difference. Our platform is that of the poet, who says:

"For modes of faith let graceless zealots fight,
He can't be wrong whose life is in the right."

But what is the Christian's belief? Is it a helpful belief? Is it a beautiful one, a consoling one? True or false, will it add to human weal, or decrease human woe?

The fundamental article of the Christian's creed is total depravity. This is announced by every orthodox church. There is no division on this point. To be a Christian one must believe in the absolute worthlessness of human nature; that man is a total wreck; that his conduct counts for nothing so long as he is simply himself. The Christian declares that the little child, smiling upon its mother's breast, is worthy of everlasting condemnation, simply because he has been born into this world, simply because he is a human being.

Take away total depravity, and the corner-stone of the Christian church vanishes and it tumbles to its ruin.

The logical result of the doctrine of total depravity is the doctrine of vicarious atonement, and a more immoral doctrine was never preached. Man cannot be saved by his own merits, but by the merits of "another." "Lay your deadly doing down" is the Christian's song. Don't try to do, only believe. I heard an orthodox revivalist declare that one might come to the gates of heaven with ten thousand murders on his soul, and all he need to do was to fling them off upon Jesus and enter the golden gates. This is the orthodox plan of salvation, and is vital to Christianity. One may commit crimes all his life, and at the last moment by an act of faith be wafted to the bliss of paradise.

Total depravity, and vicarious atonement, and what next? The doctrine of eternal hell. This is the necessary outcome, for if a man is totally depraved, and cannot be redeemed except by the merits of Jesus through faith, then those outside the pale of faith must be everlastingly damned; and this includes the vast majority of the human race. Jesus said: "Many are called, but few chosen," and unless one is chosen he is lost. Again, the founder of the church declares: "Straight is the road, and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it; while broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be who go in thereat." Thus logically and historically the church is committed to the dreadful doctrine of an eternal hell.

If there ever was a doctrine which has crushed the human heart, which has filled this world with agony and tears, which has been the ally of tyranny and superstition, it is the doctrine of an eternal hell. I abhor it with every fiber of my being.

When, therefore, I say that I am an anti-Christian, I do not mean to say that I am in any manner opposed to any good thing which incidentally belongs to the Christian religion as to all other religions; but I mean to say that I am in unceasing hostility to these essential, fundamental dogmas of the Christian creed—total depravity, vicarious sacrifice and eternal hell. I regard these doctrines as utterly destructive of human hope and progress. They are the outcome of savage terror and ignorance. They are opposed to reason, to every noble aspiration, and the enlightenment of mankind. In the interest of truth, of virtue, of humanity, of liberty, I oppose them to the bitter end; and when these doctrines are removed from men's minds there will not be left any foundation for the Christian religion. It will then die, and the churches will become like vanishing clouds in the horizon of humanity's onward march.

What does Freethought represent as opposed to the great dogmas of the Christian church? It represents first of all liberty and the worth of human nature; that man should be a free being and use his faculties to the utmost. Freedom is the sweetest boon of human life. Without it there is no virtue, no truth, no manhood, no grandeur of action. Freethought compels to no mental conclusion; it only insists upon individual independence; the absence of outward authority in the Bible or church, or priest. Do not be afraid; judge for yourself; be true to yourself, before all men, before the gods if there be any. Don't bow down to anything less than the sublime light of your own being.

This is the first grand word of Freethought; the first issue against the debasing creeds of the churches.

The second grand word is Liberalism or human brotherhood, in spite of infinite diversities of thought. We cannot agree in thought. We cannot see things alike. Truth is manifold, many-sided. Truth cannot be a common platform of human opinion; but there can be a common platform of human endeavor. We can have the same purpose. We can be animated by the same humanity; we can be inspired by the same motives. We know what is for human happiness, what good deeds are, what kindnesses, what justice is, what generosity, what magnanimity, what benevolence, what sincerity, what truthfulness are, and joining hands, and standing together in these things, we care not for the varying creeds. They are unessential. Christianity is not universal brotherhood. Jesus said, "I came not to bring peace on earth, but a sword." Christianity has drawn the sword, and slain millions simply to enforce its creed. Freethought flings aside the sword, and would unite the whole human race in one grand and splendid brotherhood.

Again, Freethought is Secularism—politically and philosophically. It means a secular government—that is, a government totally separated from the church. Secularism is the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of our country. It is the glorious principles of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Franklin, and Paine. It is a government of the people, and for the people. It is the rights of man.

Philosophically, Secularism affirms the grandeur of this present existence, that it does not depend for its value or interest or beauty upon any life to come, but in itself without reference to anything before or after is of supreme importance. The time to be happy is now; the place to be happy is here. There may be a life to come; but if so, that life is one with this life. It is the same kind of a life. Death is simply an evolution, and not a break in the eternal unity. Only by and through the worth of this life can we reach the glory of any future life. And if there is a God, he is not on some remote throne, but is a living presence, glorious in this world as in any other. Do the duty which lies next to you. That is the grandest duty, says Secularism. Man should be educated in life. He should be trained physically, mentally, and morally. He should attain practical knowledge, and be able to act as well as to think. He should be a soldier of nature and humanity, and win the battle here. The philosophy of Secularism means fruitfulness. It means invention, discovery, art, the laws of health, good citizenship, wise parentage, happy homes, golden harvest fields, and universal justice, prosperity, and attainments.

Freethought also means not only Liberalism and Secularism, but Infidelity—a terrible word, no doubt, but we accept the word and affirm the glory of Infidelity. Infidelity means doubt, question, inquiry, denial, and only by this path has man attained wisdom. Doubt is the beginning of wisdom, says Aristotle. Doubt, says Descartes, the father of modern philosophy. Doubt, says science, in all its researches. If Columbus had not doubted he would not have discovered America. If Copernicus had not doubted he would not have unfolded the grandeur of the heavens. If Newton had not doubted he would not have revealed the universality of law.

But doubt is the beginning, not the end; the necessary beginning of all truth and all discovery to the human mind. The end, the goal, of scientific doubt is wisdom, virtue, progress, civilization. It is the conquest of nature, the building of a paradise, the jewel of this earth with a thousand industries; the plowing of the soil, the planting of the seed, and the reaping of the harvest. Infidelity clears away the rubbish, brings man out of the caverns, confronts him with the blue sky, the rolling sea, and tells him to venture forth and win the prize—not through the favor of any god, but with his own strength and sublime energies.

Thus Freethought is manifold, universal, broad, and deep, as all of human life, of human hope, of human aspiration. It is intellectual, moral, social, political, industrial. It collects every truth and every aspiration from history. It applauds every virtue and celebrates every heroism. It examines, judges, and selects from all that man has done or man has thought. It unfolds the wealth of this earth; it follows the shining pathway of the stars. Wherever knowledge is possible there is its onward march.

From this magnificent, this animating Congress we go forth upon the fields of time with brilliant hopes. With nobler fellowship, with grander impulses, we can continue the mighty conflict, handed down to us from the immortal past, dark and terrific at times, but now opening to sunny heights and splendid victories, so that afar we see the day of triumph, the flag above the cross, truth above superstition, reason above faith, character above belief, manhood above the priesthood, science above the church, civilization above barbarism, and humanity above God—

"Good and great and wise and beautiful and free."

On motion of Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr., a vote of thanks was given to the Edelweiss Zither Club, the Bohemian Orchestra, Mrs. Kinsella, John J. I. Remsburg, Prof. J. H. Cook, the Misses Johnston, and others who aided the Congress with music.

And so the Congress concluded, successful in numbers, in speakers, and above all in good-fellowship. THE TRUTH SEEKER Editor never saw so many of his readers together before, and he thanks every one of them for their kind words and the sincere friendship shown. Likewise, for the generous patronage at his bookstand, and for the subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER. In his mind's eye there linger the images of a hundred faces of friends he had known before by correspondence, but who now have a living reality to be conjured before him from the pages of their welcome letters. Good luck and good health be with them always! Here's to them and the Cause in a goblet of water! a good deal clearer than they found in Chicago, unless they paid extra for it. May the next convention be as jolly and leave as many pleasant remembrances!

Immediately following the report of the first proceedings of the Congress we received the following letter:

EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: The pen wounds worse than the sword. Be more careful how you wield it. Your statement in regard to Mr. Van Hoeter's not coming to the Congress is wrong. Mr. Van Hoeter did not want to come, for the reason that his health is not reliable. This shows his good sense. But where was your good sense when you wrote those lines about me and my husband? What is the matter with you? MRS. P. VAN HOETER.

Such things as this have a tendency to make us careful. Never again will we joke with an old lady, unless we can get someone to make a map of the joke, and have it explained in advance, thus avoiding possible marital complications.

But seriously speaking, Mr. Joseph Van Hoeter is one of the most energetic workers in the Freethought cause that we have. He and his worthy wife, the latter coming all the way to Chicago to attend the late International Congress of Freethinkers, have many times rendered efficient service to Freethought and have bravely held aloft its banner under all circumstances. Although advanced in years, the hearts of this Liberal couple still throb with the impulses of youth, and we trust there are yet many bright years in store for them.

After the Ball.

THREE DISTINGUISHED LECTURERS IN THE STREETS OF CAIRO, MIDWAY PLAISANCE, WORLD'S FAIR.

Lectures and Meetings.

COLONEL INGERSOLL'S LECTURE DATES.

The people along the line of the following towns will, during October, be made happy by a visit by Colonel Ingersoll, who will speak on the following dates:

Oct. 21 Atchison, Kan.	Oct. 25 Lincoln, Neb.
" 22 Kansas City, Mo.	" 27 Sioux City, Ia.
" 23 St. Joseph, "	" 29 Chicago, Ill.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York. Its lectures for October are:

October 20th.—"Freethought and Morality;" S. P. Putnam.

October 27th.—"Arbitration;" Albert Dav. E. B. Foote, Jr., Presiding Officer.

As previously announced in our columns, John R. Charlesworth will commence a tour Eastward. The following appointments are on his list, and friends along the route desiring lectures should address him at once:

Nov. 3 Manhattan Liberal Club, New York.	Nov. 19 Boston, Mass.
" 5 Newark, N. J.	" 26 Philadelphia, Pa.
" 12 East Dennis, Mass.	Dec. 3 Alliance, O.
" 14, 15, Osterville, "	" 14, 15, 16, Waterloo, Ind.
" 16 Cotuit, "	" 17 Chicago, Ill.

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Society holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Sixth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of Lectures for October:

October 22d.—Dr. T. R. Kinget, "The Most Vital Practical Question of the Hour."

October 29th.—Mr. S. P. Putnam, "The Bible and Modern Thought."

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, will meet on and after October 17th in the Skerrett Building, northeast corner of Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock.

October 24th.—Miss Constance MacKenzie, "Effects of Education on Character."

October 31st.—Rev. Wm. I. Nichols, "Unitarianism; Its History and Principles."

CHARLES WATTS will lecture for Friendship Liberal League, Philadelphia (cor. Broad and Wood streets), Sunday, October 22d, at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. Liberals are cordially invited to attend these lectures.

NEWARK LIBERAL LEAGUE, Sunday, October 22d: Frank W. Wilson, "Hard Times; Their Cause and Cure"

Letters of Friends.

A Family Necessity.

OTTAWA, KAN., Oct. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find money order for $1 to extend subscription on THE TRUTH SEEKER. I can't do without the paper very well. Having taken it so long, it has become a family necessity and we would be lonesome without it.

Yours truly, SALEM FOUTS.

Must Have the Paper.

SCRANTON, PA., Oct. 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find my check for $4, for one year's subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER, also for price of one copy of "Crimes of Preachers," one copy of "Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures," one copy of "The Clergyman's Victims," one copy of "Priestly Celibacy Exposed," and one copy of "The Confessional," which all please send to my address. We think we cannot do without the paper, and look for it every week with pleasure.

GEO. H. MERRITT.

A Hundred Years' Sentence.

LISLE, N. Y., Oct. 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As my time on the grand old TRUTH SEEKER runs out the 6th of this month, you will please find inclosed post-office order for $3. I must not skip a number. Last week's issue was a great treat. It was a pleasure to look on the grand old faces of those veterans who have fought for the good of the human race. Not only veterans, but young workers likewise. We owe a great deal to them. Hoping those yet with us may live long and THE TRUTH SEEKER flourish for a hundred years, I am,

Sincerely yours, R. H. GLOVER.

Would Be Afraid of His God.

MORRIS, MICH., Sept. 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As my subscription to that noble old paper, THE TRUTH SEEKER, expires to day, I must renew, so find inclosed draft for $5—$3 for the paper, and the remainder for the "Creation of God," by Dr. Jacob Harman, and "Martyrdom of Man," by Winwood Reade.

We have had John E. Remsburg here. He delivered two lectures—one on Paine and the other on "The Divinity of Christ." I think he set some of them to thinking. One gentleman said he would not dare to talk as Mr. Remsburg did; he would be afraid God would strike him dead.

C. DANSBY.

This One Liked the Portraits.

TORONTO, ONT., Oct. 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: You must excuse me for being so long in remitting for the grand TRUTH SEEKER, for I am getting old. I think that THE TRUTH SEEKER is like old rum, improving by age. Always glad to see it, and this number (Sept. 30, 1893) is grand with such an array of men who have already fallen in the ranks of Freethought and others who are still nobly filling up the ranks. Now that I have been a reader of the paper for twenty years and when I see D. M. Bennett on the front, and with Thomas Paine and R. G. Ingersoll, I am overjoyed indeed.

Please find inclosed postal order for $3.

W. JOHNSTON.

John Would Have Been Ashamed of the Minister.

RUSHVILLE, ILL., Oct. 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please send my paper to Rushville, Ill.

I came here about a month ago. This is one of the oldest towns in the state. It is one of those old church towns, and in those towns you can find but very little progress. I thought when I came here I should hear something new, but it's the same thing over. The minister tried to preach about a man called John the Baptist. I think John would have been ashamed of the effort had he been there. I suppose most of the congregation thought it was a grand sermon.

I want THE TRUTH SEEKER. I am not afraid of it, and when I become delinquent let me know. I like Watson Heston's pictures—in fact, most everything in the paper suits me. I can't agree with all of them, but I like your method of handling the various subjects.

I am, yours in the work,

D. W. BETTOR.

Take Particular Notice.

THREE RIVERS, MICH., Sept. 30, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I want to know if the undersigned thinker is insane when he claims that every firm believer in the plain declarations of Jesus Christ—"by whom the world was made"—will be able to create worlds also? Jesus declared thus to his followers: "The works that I do, the same shall ye do also, and greater."

Now, as we may reasonably view that promise or declaration as the word of God, given through the mediumship of "the only begotten son," it follows as a matter of fact that if a real follower of Christ Jesus shall, or can, do the same kind of works that he, the son, did, such worker must positively have in possession the same creative and divine attributes that he, Jesus Christ, possessed—it being a logical conclusion that the so-called son of God must have possessed every attribute of God, his father.

If, then, the followers of the son will be, or are, like him, and he is like God, said followers are also like God, said followers will be like God also and thus able to create everything in the same way in which a supposed Mosaic or man-made God ever did or ever can create anything hereafter.

The above reasonings are founded upon and supported by records claimed to be "the infallible word of God." Who will be able, therefore, to declare truthfully the same to be irrational, or as emanating from an insane mind? There is one of two things certain: First, if a man, or a soul of man, cannot create or ever make worlds like the one we inhabit, then the words of Jesus Christ and of St. John also are false and irrational; second, if true that he can, then all of his disciples who claim to be Christians will be Gods at some future time, or never be as he was, doing the same works he did—i. e., make worlds.

I think we should analyze the sayings or declarations of Jesus, the son of man (as he often and rightly claimed to be), from a rational standpoint. So declares

ELISHA D. BLAKEMAN.

Impartial Treatment of All Soothsayers.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In this evening's News I have read that there is to be a celebration of the feast of Saint or Mr. Anthony. Who the gentleman is the Lord only knows, and I don't think he cares a continental; but the saint appears to be held up as a patron who is to do some people a great deal of good, and pilgrims, who worship at his shrine and give liberally of their money, will be cured of all their diseases. Besides, he will intercede for culprits who have transgressed the laws of man as well as God. Now there is one fact, and that is, folks who employ people to pray for them to dead gods and dead saints, instead of praying for themselves, have got to pay their money. After the capitalists have rung their bells on a Monday morning for the toiling men to work and sweat all the week for a mere pittance, barely sufficient to support their families, it is barefaced robbery for the clergymen, disciples of dead saints, to ring the slaves of superstition into church on a Sunday morning to pay out a part of their hard earnings. All the clergymen's stock in trade is dead gods, dead saints, witches, ghosts, and spirits. That kind of stock don't require any capital but cheek and wind. All the clergymen of every persuasion are living on and supported by people who believe that Christ was God, son, and ghost, and that he died and went to hades, was toasted and browned by his satanic majesty the devil. Now, sir, there have been laws to punish astrologers and fortune-tellers for predicting future events, and I think if such people are punished for getting money under false pretenses it is about time to arrest all persons who preach such blasphemy to get an easy living by robbing the poor and innocent. I believe in education, not only sufficient to read and spell correctly, but to educate them out of the fear of dead gods, dead saints, and dead beats, and a heaven filled with reprobates and a devil that could not be killed by God, saint, or sinner, nor flooded out by old Noah, the drunkard.

Respectfully, W. W. MORRIS.

Open the Eyes of the Priest-Befooled Masses.

CONCORD, N. C., Oct. 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am, of late, indebted to you, or some one else, for two copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER, for which please accept my thanks. I am an isolated Infidel, of first water, and have to endure much mental punishment from the orthodox Christians. I sent, a few weeks since, a Boston Investigator to a lady friend, for whom I had done much in my days of prosperity, before the war, but who, when I got poor, turned the cold shoulder on me, she having plenty, inherited. She wrote me: "I want you to send me no more of your Infidel literature." She is a Presbyterian, and believes (I suppose) that the Christian's God made rich folks and ladies of far better dust than he did the poor folks. I wrote her that Abraham Lincoln was an Infidel, and wanted in November, 1863, to stop the war by arbitration, but Jefferson Davis, a Christian, wanted to fight it out, and kill thousands of innocent fathers, brothers, husbands, and sons, and leave the land full of widows and orphans mourning for lost friends. I have not heard from this orthodox Presbyterian woman since. I offered to send her some good Infidel books to set her right, but have received no reply.

In the midst of hard times and scarcity of money, a young man by the name of Arthur Butts came to this town with his panorama of scriptural scenes, and exhibited them three nights, and raked in the shakels, some $150. Pretty good for three nights during a money panic. His tent was on Methodist grounds and free of state or town tax. Had some enterprising man brought a managerie of foreign animals to town to educate the children he would have had to pay tax, and a heavy tax, but this disciple of the meek and mythical Jesus, goes scot free of tax. How inconsistent, how absurd! Whither are we drifting? When, oh when, will Reason claim her throne in the human brain and myths and superstition be relegated to the background, where they should be? It behooves us Infidels to sow broadcast in the land leaflets to show the masses, who never heard of Voltaire, Thomas Paine, THE TRUTH SEEKER, or the Boston Investigator, that there are men who are striving to counterbalance the pernicious teachings of the designing and fat-salaried preachers, who live by peddling myths and superstition to church-chained white slaves. I wish I had a thousand such leaflets. I would distribute them broadcast in this county. Religion is a fashionable humbug, and the Bible is a fabrication and a fraud, gotten up by designing priests.

J. W. MAHAFFY.

They Fear to Face the Freethought Batteries.

CALISTOGA, CAL., Oct. 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am one of those individuals whom Christians say are living in just plain darkness now, but will be cast into outer darkness when I'm dead. I take pleasure in giving to some other likewise shaded souls some of the light that has been given me by a rising, religious lawyer. This lawyer and I belong to a debating club, which meets every Friday night. Every meeting we select by vote a subject for the meeting two weeks ahead. This lawyer said to me one day that he and I would debate the religious question in the club. I told him all right. In a few days it was a meeting night. In meeting I offered quite a number of religious subjects, and a bigoted chair threw them out without a vote and contrary to the rules. The reasons given were that it was "bad policy," "caused ill-will," etc. I got up and used some plain language about the bigotry of the club and the cowardice of its religious members, and told them that the club was organized for the purpose of debating all questions—religious, political, and civil.

One of the other members offered this resolution: "Resolved, that God created the heavens and earth."

My worthy religious lawyer got up, and in a bantering way said: "Will you accept that—will you debate that with me?"

I said I would. This was to come off two weeks from that date. During the week immediately following, it was noised about town that there was to be a religious discussion. Soon good Christians began to make kind, loving, generous threats against that club and its members.

My antagonist, in the time he had, had discovered that he had a hard case to prove. At our next meeting, only a week after he had so boldly challenged me, he arose and said that he "flatly, positively refused to debate with me on account of his incompetency, and of its being bad policy." He said he would not debate the question with me unless I gave him a year for preparation.

I arose and told the club that since he flatly refused, since he was more politic than honest, more religious than brave, all I could do was to allow him to retract his own challenge. He had already crawled in the hole, and wanted to get up (before I had hardly sat down) and drag the hole in with him. I told him it was no use. He was safe. He ought to be satisfied.

Such light as I have received I freely give to my Liberal friends. Christians do not believe that "he who fights and runs away," etc.; they believe he who runs away never has to fight.

A man in town had a rattlesnake in a box in the middle of the street one day, and was surrounded by a crowd, mostly Christians—they are in the majority here. I came along (and I never see a crowd of Christians that my "blasphemous tongue" does not want to wag). So I said: "Is there any Christian in this crowd who has faith enough to pick up that snake?" The skeptics in the crowd looked up to see whence came that doubting voice, and seeing, smiled. Not one of those Christians showed by a single muscle of his face that he heard. I guess they didn't hear. "Having ears to hear, and eyes to see, they heard and saw not, lest they should hear and see and be converted."

Yours for Freethought,

R. A. GRIGSBY.

Church Growth—Justice for Woman.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: It is often asked "Is Christianity losing its hold upon the people?" Dr. J. M. Buckley, editor of the Christian Advocate, tells us that "Sunday traveling was never so common; devotion to amusements was never so intense; absorption of the people in general questions never more complete; political activity never greater; the fibers that bind the church together are relaxed, and its energies, such as are available, absorbed in 'enterprises' and 'causes,' while the growth in grace and the conversion of souls receives only the remnants of attention. The general report is that prayer meetings are dull and slimly attended, and the signs of spirituality few and occasional."

Is not this quite a confession? Well, it is said that "confession is good for the soul." The doctor undoubtedly is conversant with the facts. Surely there is a great intellectual unrest among all the people, and dull and drowsy sermons, the very commonplace platitudes of "the chosen few," utterly fail to satisfy the brain hunger of the women and children who chiefly occupy the pews. Rev. Anna H. Shaw stated at the Women's Christian Temperance Union convention held in this city last week before an audience of twelve hundred people that "Three-fourths of the church was composed of women." Yet, in the face of this, we are reminded by a statement from H. E. Carroll, LL.D., of Plainfield, N. J., "that the churches have had a net increase over the increase of population of seventeen per cent., while the Catholic church has had a net increase of 1,910,000 or twenty-nine per cent. The Methodist Episcopal church increased its edifices from 17,561 in 1880 to 22,844 in 1890, a net gain of 5,283, and the valuation rose in the same period from $64,131,000 to $96,783,000, or fifty per cent. Yet despite the fact (if a fact) that the membership of the churches increases, crime increases also. How will our good sister, Rev. Anna H.

Shaw, account for this? When almost all the criminals of our "Free America" are Christian criminals, there must be a big mistake somewhere!

Syracuse has 107,000 population. Has seventy churches, and has one thousand licensed places that "giv strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy heart." Perhaps it is a pretty close estimate to say there are one thousand disreputable women in this "Salt city," the central city of the state, the city of conventions.

If the Christians will reform their own lives—pay taxes upon millions of untaxed property, church property—be as honest as the liquor dealers—then humble citizens, who now take no stock in their untruthful professions, may possibly concede to them—although it is late—a tribute of respect; but so long as a poor woman and five helpless children are compelled to seek shelter in the street, or the parks, with weeping clouds for coverlets, because they cannot pay taxes, while churches go scot free, my respect for such dishonest Christians is below par. The very churches the women support deprive her of a voice in their councils, in the deliberations of the church conventions. It is not many years since she had no voice in the church. Each woman, twenty-one years old, as a matter of justice and right, should be able to vote. And if not, why not? Helen H. Gardener cannot vote; the vagabond of the gutter can. The forty thousand women who went to war, who gave water on many a battle field to the boys in blue, who in the hospitals tenderly dressed the wounds of some dear mother's only son, and administered comfort when hope's bright star was fading, cannot vote; but the fellow who can not read his ballot, cannot write his own name, is, in the eyes of the law, a person competent to vote.

The time will come when justice and the white ribboners will be married at the ballot-box, when women will have equal rights with men. It is only a scoundrel who now wishes to deprive another of every right he claims for himself.

ROBERT R. JONES.

He Prophesieth.

WHITEHALL, WIS., Sept. 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have been an interested reader of your paper for a long time now, although never a subscriber for two reasons, first poverty, second, the liberality of Liberals from whom I have borrowed.

The pages devoted to Letters from Friends have always been first to claim my attention, next the exquisite poetry that appears occasionally, then the leaders, and finally the advertisements of Liberal books, upon which I frequently find myself gazing with covetous eye.

I love to scan the Letters from Friends. They thrill me with a hope that at some time in the (how distant?) future Free-thought, free mental man- and womanhood with all the grand significance that the terms imply, may be the common property of all; a hope that some day the shackles of the superstitions, barbarisms, and bigotry of antiquity may be stricken from the poor dupes of a crafty, blood-sucking priesthood, and that the glorious sunlight of intelligent reason and common "hoss" sense, may penetrate the mental dust and cobwebs of benighted faith in a crucified Anarchist, and shed its vitalizing, fructifying rays in a halo of intellectual splendor in and upon and round about every son and daughter of man; yes, priest and all. "The merciful man is the man who has mercy on a beast."

I have been looking a long time for the millennium; it has not yet arrived. Are we drifting toward it? Not very rapidly, as it appears to me; rather the opposite, if anything.

You know that it is said that every cloud has a silver lining; it may be in the main true, but the cloud gathering, that has gathered, has no such lining for the friends of mental liberty. No, the silver is only in the form of shekels for the "howly fathers;" it makes a most excellent hilt for a stiletto, and is at par yet with them. They can use them, the handles, for a lining to their "cloaks," and we are not to see their "silver lining," until their time comes to strike. Then, stand from under!

Ah! no. The millennium has not yet arrived, and notwithstanding the encouraging words of some of your correspondents, unless the American people are awakened to a true realization of the facts of the matter, it is still a long way off.

Is it not high time that the alarm was sounded? Is it not a duty that we owe ourselves and friends, for our own liberty and theirs, to call attention to this lowering cloud, so ominous and threatening to the cause of mental emancipation that we hold so dear? Freethinkers, we have all of us become so accustomed to sitting idly by, while the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER and a few noble souls like him have been shouldering all the responsibilities, and bearing the brunt of the battle, as private and general both, that we have become lax and indolent, and while we slept in imaginary security, Catholicism has silently, stealthily, insidiously, like a vast army of moles, been secretly undermining the very foundations of our American institutions, and is already busily engaged in sapping the vitality of our free schools, and those liberties purchased at the cost of so much of the most noble blood of the land—not lamb—to the end that we may be forced eventually to contribute to the lining of their cloaks. Had I ever been a Catholic, which I am too old to ever become, and should say these words, I should expect soon to be numbered with the Dr. Cronins and a host of other patriotic Americans who have mysteriously disappeared, and whose mangled remains were never found even in a Chicago sewer.

Why, Mr. Editor, only a few years ago, in your day and mine, we knew only the dictionary definition of such words as cardinal, bishop, archbishop, holy see, etc., but one must needs be young, indeed, who does not understand them now; we have more than a plenty of them now, right here among us. While we have been dreaming, they have knocked the persimmon and captured the United States.

Read between the lines of the daily press items, and you will discover how it has been accomplished. From year to year their institutions have been gradually encroaching upon ours, silently yet steadily, so as not to awaken a suspicion of the real intention until all is in readiness, and the tentacles of the octopus have all within their grasp, then the play begins. First, a terrible hullabaloo with Dr. McGlynn, in which some very fine acting was so skilfully done that very few Catholics even were able to see through the farce. When Mr. Corrigan does finally take his cue from Mr. Pecci's encyclical Mgr. Sattoli says mass, and is dined and rubbed the other way of his hair, jealousies are banished and explained away, and the barriers to the "supreme authority" are all removed, and Mgr. Sattoli is the high-cocklorum in America: Curtain.

Scene Second: Mr. Pecci gone to glory; the slate as it stands now is brought forth; "Mgr." elected pope of Rome; asked to take his seat in the Vatican; "No, they are building one for him here," and he will remain here and dispense holy water from Washington: Grand tableau, but this is not the end, the pope of Rome is here, in America to-day! What think you? E PLURIBUS UNUM.

A Presbyterian Well Answered.

WERNERSVILLE, PA., June 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Last winter, while undergoing repairs at a sanitarium, I met a red-hot and still heating Presbyterian, there for the same purpose.

He approached me on the soul subject sharply, and we had a number of tilts on theological topics; but he didn't seem to know when he had enough and continued the discussion by letter long after leaving the place. I read a reply to one of his letters to some of my Liberal friends, and they liked it so well they requested me to send a copy to you for publication in THE TRUTH SEEKER. Believing it might do the cause some good, I comply with their wishes. Should you deem it worthy of a place in your columns, I, too, should be pleased to see it there. Nevertheless, not my will nor theirs, but thine be done.

Yours fraternally, L. R. SMITH.

WERNERSVILLE, PA., May 10, 1893.

MR. P. C. N., Dear Sir and Friend: Your kind and interesting favor of April 16th has been received and perused with pleasure. Permit me to thank you for the interest thus evinced by you in my physical and spiritual welfare.

My spiritual or mental condition remains unchanged. I am still inclined to think that happiness depends more upon good health than upon religion. Conditions of mind affect the body, and conditions of the body affect the mind. This is a fact recognized by the leading lights in the medical profession generally. Dr. Foote says, "No man can have dyspepsia and be a very good Christian." And Dr. Weir Mitchell, quoting from a learned divine, says: "Consumptives are generally hopeful, but the sick liver predicts damnation. No man, however secure he may be in mind as to his future life, ever dies a triumphant death with disease below the diaphragm." You say you are assured by your doctor and you have reason to believe you will get well again, and in consequence you feel happy. This is enough to make you happy, or any other sick and suffering man. You should be. Under the same circumstances I should be just as happy as you are, or the most religious enthusiast that walks the earth, and I don't claim to have any religion at all. You say God has been very good to you since you have been there and has blessed you in many ways. While consoling yourself with this reflection, it may be well for you to bear in mind that this same God, who is said to be no respecter of persons, and who, according to the Bible, "doeth all things" and doeth them well, while he has been so good to you and blessed you in so many different ways, has at the same time been very bad to thousands of his other creatures, aye, millions of men, and cursed them in as many or more ways than he has blessed you. I quote from your letter verbatim et literatim—"I know my soul is saved forever. I have the witness of the spirit within me, and all is peace with me and I am ready to be called home at any time when it is the good Lord's will to do so." Now, to know that much and to feel that way must be very gratifying and consoling, especially to a sick and suffering man, and a thing greatly to be desired by all; and I would very much like to know as much and feel that way too. But if I am ever taken that way, or am fortunate enough to reach this sublime state of human perfection to which you claim to have attained, so knowing, so believing, and so feeling, I assure you I shall immediately abandon all efforts tending to prolong my stay here and yield quietly, trustingly, and gracefully to the evident will of my creator.

I am surprised that anyone claiming to be a Christian and to believe all in the Bible should, when sick, seem so anxious and try so hard to keep from dying. Paul is credited with saying, "For me to live is Christ, but to die is gain." Now, if I felt and believed that way, the sooner I could die, it seems to me, the better it would be. But try as hard as I may, I can't believe and feel that or your way. According to the Bible, it is through the grace of God that I am what I am. If he has given me insufficient credulity, or withholds evidence that would compel my belief, can I be justly blamed for my unbelief? While God has given you the elevating evidence of your soul's eternal salvation, other souls, possibly as precious, have been unceremoniously sent to eternal torment. From others, perhaps as earnest, honest, and deserving, this long-sought evidence has been withheld and they are still in unhappy suspense, without a ray of hope. Perhaps you believe and feel as you do because God has had mercy on you, and I believe as I do because he has hardened me, in accordance with Rom. ix, 18, and Dan. iv, 17—"Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy and whom he will he hardeneth." "The Most High ruleth in the kingdoms of men and giveth it to whomsoever he will."

This seems to be a way he has of doing things among men, I suppose, his wonders to perform. Yes, I believe in God; but not in such an individual as the Bible defines or represents him to be. Perhaps two Bible texts will be sufficient to clearly show you why: "God is angry with the wicked every day" (Ps. vii, 11). "Anger resteth in the bosom of fools" (Eccles. vii, 9). These Bible declarations, or testimonies, by you believed, plainly establish the status of the Bible God or Jehovah of the Jews, and fix it entirely too low in the scale of intelligence to command my credence or acceptance.

With regard to his so-called son Jesus, or Christ, or both, the story as given in Matthew about his conception and birth seems to me too silly and sickening for any sane and sensible person to believe for a moment. It is a libel on the name of God—as I view it—who in the Christian creed is defined as a being without body, passion, or parts, to suppose that he would or could personally participate in a transaction leading to such a result, or perform an act followed by such consequences. The whole story is founded upon a dream that Joseph, a highly interested party, claims to have had regarding the paternity of his intended wife's son.

Dreams are very thin things and not accepted to-day as evidence in any courts of a civilized land. How extremely absurd that this old tradition or musty legend that had its origin over eighteen hundred years ago in a very ignorant and superstitious epoch should be believed in this enlightened and investigating age. According to Jewish law, stoning to death was the penalty to be paid by any unmarried woman found in Mary's condition. How easy for Joseph to concoct a story of that kind and successfully palm it off on the densely ignorant and gullible masses to cover crime and save the life of the woman he loved. It worked like a charm. The majority evidently believed it then, and strange to say, many do even now. It is quite likely Joseph had heard of the Hindoo god Krishna, who was born, it was claimed, under the same circumstances as Christ and crucified for the sins of the world, and whose birth and death antedate Christ's at least a thousand years. Many erudite investigators and advanced thinkers opine that the whole Christian system of religion has been largely borrowed and formulated from the much older and, in many respects, similar system of the ancient Hindoos, whose crucified savior was Krishna (see "The World's Sixteen Crucified Saviors," by Kersey Graves). Mary, mother of Jesus, and the only person whose evidence as to his paternity could be relied upon as valuable and conclusive, is as silent as a snail upon the subject.

Jesus is reported as repeatedly calling himself the son of man. Did not he know who he was? If the salvation of the world depends upon belief in this outrageously unreasonable ghost story, which seems to me like a fairy tale, why did not Mary and Christ vouch for its truth, and leave the statement over their own signatures? But not one word written by either has ever come down to us. If God is all-wise, he must have known then, and does know now, that many of his incredulous creatures could not, and do not, believe this silly story, and therefore must be forever lost. If he is all-powerful, and can do whatever he wills, why don't he speak and tell his anxious creatures the whole truth regarding this important matter, and all other matters involving their present and future good. There is just as much reason why he should speak to men to-day as there was that he should have spoken to some of his special pets in the past; and should he kindly condescend to do so, he would have a far more decent and respectable class to talk to than some of the men he then addressed.

Instance: Cowardly and ungallant Adam of Eden notoriety; drunken Noah of flood fame; lying deceiver, Abraham; murderer Moses, the master magician, who, at the simple sight of a golden calf, got mad and broke all the commandments at once by a slight of hand trick; wholesale slaughterer of men, women, and children, boss butcher, General Joshua; first-class scamp and cheat, jockey Jacob; the seeming sot, incestuous, low, lascivious Lot; polygamous, death-dealing, dancing David, who stole Uriah's wife and deprived him of his life; his more than much-married son, sinful Solomon, and the beastly and vindictive Elisha, at whose cursing and prayer to God two she-bears tore to pieces forty-two school-children because they, in sportiv play and youthful innocence, said to the queer-looking man with no hair on his head, "Go up, thou bald head." See account in 2 Kings ii, 23, 24. Now I am bald-headed myself; but when the fact is mentioned, it does not make me mad enough to curse anyone about it, and I am not bad enough to pray anyone to death for such a trivial matter.

That a man called Christ may have once lived and been crucified for some claimed crime committed, may be true, although I am aware of no record of it outside of the scriptures, which are very contradictory and unreliable, written, nobody knows where, by whom, or when. But if a man by this name ever lived and so died, I am inclined to think his death had no more to do with man's redemption and salvation than the death of Zoroaster, Buddha, Confucius, Mohammed, Thomas Paine, Joseph Smith the Mormon, or General Andrew Jackson.

My estimate of the efficiency of prayer is so well expressed by Stephenson's poem, "Our Father In Heaven," that I inclose it to you, hoping it will help you as much, and much more, in your search after truth than the two tracts, "I Have My Ticket" and "The Way to Salvation," you so kindly sent, did me. I shall be happy to hear from you again at any time, and be pleased to meet you.

Yours, for the speedy coming of the kingdom of Truth to the minds of all men, and the universal reign of reason and common sense, when all superstitiously originated fabrications regarding gods and ghosts shall be forever relegated to regions remarkably remote, L. R. SMITH.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

A Child Asleep.

A living jewel, fair and white,
It lay in slumber deep,
No object touched my throbbing heart
Like this sweet child asleep.

What hopes and fears, what loving plans
Are clustered round his way,
All grief and pain from his dear life,
Our human hands would stay.

Yet, what is true and what is best,
We may not always know;
Sometimes, from out the darkest cloud,
The brightest stars doth glow.

Thus storm and shade may o'er his path
Evince the clearer light,
In which, with letters, silver-tipped,
Shall written be the Right.

Unconscious now of harm or wrong,
He sleeps in innocence,
Unknowing aught of life's alarms,
Its ills or recompense.

And when, at length, his hands take up
The work of life's great trust,
We only ask that he shall be
A truthful man and just.

Wise to direct, calm to control,
And gentle as the dove,
May all his days be crowned as now,
With shining gems of love.

Chicago, Ill.

S. H. W.

Editor of the Corner in Chicago.

DEAR FRIENDS: The great International Congress of Freethinkers is over and gone. It has become a thing of the past. Yet it has made its mark, and will be remembered for a long, long while. Having read the proceedings of the Congress, you will have perceived that it was a very lively one. The addresses were keen, incisive, pithy, and telling. But there is no need of repeating that which you have already read.

The social side of the Congress was very pleasant indeed. It was delightful to meet so many charming friends from different parts of the country, and it was an added pleasure to hear them say they enjoy a peep into the Children's Corner. Mrs. Lindall, of Columbus, O., was just the same as when we saw her last, three years ago, at our Liberal Women's Convention in Washington. Aaron Davis, from Maryland, who celebrates the anniversary of Paine's birthday as often as it comes around, at his home, was as genial as one might know him to be from his letters. Mr. Henry Lewis, of Denver; Mr. McKenna, Mr. Marden, Dr. Morrow and Mrs. Morrow, and many others were newly-found friends, whose faces are impressed upon the mind, while our many old-time friends grow dearer at every meeting.

There were present some of our Cornerites who have grown into young men and young women in these passing years. There were Ollie and Ida Johnson, with their parents, whose presence was an inspiration, and John J. I. Remsburg, who rendered beautiful instrumental and vocal music; Marie Lumley, from Bath-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., and others. Among the younger truth seekers present was little Charley Bradlaugh Charlesworth, a dear little fellow that we wanted to take home with us. As he lay sleeping in an alcove, he unconsciously furnished a text for a discourse, and, when awake in Mrs. Charlesworth's arms, his bright eyes and dimpled face made as lovely a picture as one would care to look upon.

There is much to say regarding the great convention, but others can tell it better and more concisely, perhaps. Not a day passed that thoughts of our big family of the Corner did not come into mind, and we wished it were possible to see them all, young and old, together. What a picture it would be! and what a happy greeting on all sides.

We, my sister and I, have spent days at Jackson park, seeing and enjoying everything. When not at the Fair, we have visited objects of interest in the city. One day we went to Benton Harbor, ninety-seven miles distant. The railroad ride through a lovely country is interesting and pleasant. But, if we may be pardoned the suggestion, it would be quite in order to improve the depot at that place, for it is at present a very forlorn and uninviting building. Rough, and without a chair, it is not quite attractive enough for one to wish to spend the day right there. The people don't seem to know where their neighbors live, and apparently measure distances by "I guess so," and "I don't know." While waiting in that dismal station, a woman came down the road, seemingly in great distress, moaning, gasping, and grimacing in what appeared to be dreadful torture. Now, see what imagination can do. Inquiry revealed the statement that the sufferer supposed she had a pin in her ear! She was on her way to see a physician. As good luck would have it, she met the doctor right there.

"Oh, I am dying, doctor!" she ejaculated. "My head is whirling, buzzing, singing, bursting! Oh, such agony! Lord! Lord!—pin in ear—pin!—pin!—get it out!—oh! oh! oh!"

"What're ye doing with a pin in your ear?" growled the doctor.

"I was picking out my ear with it. Oh, I shall die! I shall die!—I know I shall!"

The doctor adjusted his spectacles, examined the ear, probed it, and commenced laughing. "There's no pin there, you idiot," said he. "Go along home and stop howling."

"No pin there, doctor?"

"No."

Immediately the complaints ceased, the face assumed a composed appearance, the woman tied her bonnet strings and walked off homeward.

"Such fools!" exclaimed the doctor. "Pin in her ear, indeed! Well it is for some folks that the fool-killer does not come around oftener. Imagination is superb. It helps the profession wonderfully."

We returned to Chicago by steamboat from St. Joe, eighty miles across the lake, arriving in time to see the fireworks at the Fair grounds from the water side. That was the close of "Chicago day," and the attendance was that day at the Fair more than 713,000 people, besides a thousand or more deadheads.

One of our visits was to the immense stock-yards of this city—the largest in the known world. It is a great scene of life and activity there. Thousands of bleating sheep, brown-eyed cattle, fat hogs, and handsome horses are all about in numberless pens, while mounted cowboys ride hither and thither, and drovers, in slouched hats, with trousers tucked in the tops of long boots and holding whips in their hands, stand about, chewing tobacco, and talk learnedly of steers and calves. The receipts the day before, copied from the bulletin, were as follows:

Cattle.....	9,915
Calves.....	922
Hogs.....	15,218
Sheep.....	17,957
Horses.....	299

While the shipments were:

Cattle.....	2,705
Hogs.....	5,235
Sheep.....	2,281
Horses.....	191

This is about the average of daily work in this line.

The stock-yards contain twenty miles of alleys, and streets connect these cattle-pens with the loading and unloading chutes of as many railroads. The yards can accommodate 50,000 cattle, 200,000 hogs, 30,000 sheep, and 40,000 horses.

The attempt to witness the process of killing and dressing the animals made me sick. I shall always shudder as the scene is recalled. The dazed, trembling, but unresisting creatures driven to their death. The brutal, red-handed murderers dealing death-blows to the poor, dumb, helpless, inoffensive creatures, tearing the quivering flesh ere the heart has ceased beating. Oh, it is too dreadful! too horrible! It is enough to make one forswear the use of meat forever, and become a vegetarian for life. Children are taught to be kind to animals, and yet it is certain that some of them must grow up to become assassins and butchers of the same. We are half cannibals, I do believe, when we feast on these poor four-footed children, capable of affection and devotion to their betrayers and murderers.

The great American two-legged hog stood by and laughed at a pale-faced woman, sickened at the sight of blood, and said: "This ere one firm kills and dresses 20,000 hogs a day—did ye know it?"—adding, "and they kill more'n 3,000,000 of different kinds of stock in a year." If you like meat, and must continue to eat it, don't ever go near the slaughter-houses of the stock yard.

In company with two sweet school-girls, Mabel Vanetter and Ida Hay, we visited the Skinner school, which is under the charge of Mrs. Hawley, an excellent teacher and greatly beloved by her pupils. Corporal punishment is not known in Chicago schools. No teacher is allowed to degrade herself or himself by striking a child. For sixteen years the Bible has not been read in Chicago schools, or a prayer been offered there, and the children are moral, intelligent, obedient, and grow into good citizens. If Chicago can get along without the Bible and prayers in her schools—and it is proven that she can—what need of them in any school in the United States? There is no need of them whatever, and every city and town would do well to follow Chicago's splendid example.

We are indebted to Mrs. George Robertson for a lovely drive to Lincoln park and around town, which we shall always remember. Mrs. Robertson is a true, broad-minded Liberal, and so is her good husband and the little children, who make of home a heaven on earth, and are the jewels in the refined gold of worthy and noble lives.

An evening at the American Health Institute of Dr. George Dutton, at 8 Ada street, was extremely pleasant and interesting. The feature of the evening was a lecture on phrenology by Professor Windsor, of Washington, D. C., who emphasized the facts of mental science in a marled degree. Dr. Dutton is doing good work in Chicago by teaching rational doctrines regarding health and disease. His school is, as a medical institute, gauged on broad lines of progress, and is destined, no doubt, to accomplish much good.

Chicago is a great city. It is the London of the New World, destined to be the greatest city on the whole earth. It makes one dizzy to look upward and downward, from the top of its highest building—two hundred and eighty-five feet—twenty stories high. It has one street nineteen miles in length, and a lake frontage of twenty-two miles. Everything is on a large scale of magnificence, and something to be admired is seen on every side. It is a center attracting all nationalities. It has the glory of holding the great Columbian Exposition, and also of the first international Congress of Freethinkers in America, where Freethought and free speech asserted their rights undisturbed by the minions of superstition and bigotry.

Chicago, Ill.

S. H. W.

Correspondence.

SHERMAN, MICH., Sept. 21, 1893.

MISS WIXON, My Dear Friend: It has been a long time since I have written to you, and as I feel a trifle ashamed of the members of the Children's Corner when I see the scarcity of letters, I will help add a mite.

Last winter I received a letter from a girl by the name of ——. I answered the letter, but have not heard from her since. Perhaps the foolish description of myself which I gave her disgusted or frightened her. But really it was not true as all. Instead, I am five feet five and a half inches in height; weigh one hundred and seventeen pounds; have gray eyes, medium complexion, brown hair—though when I said I have unmercifully large feet I told the truth. But they say large feet denote an equally large understanding, and consequently I am very proud of my feet. I wear number four and a half and number five shoes.

Miss Wixon, since last I wrote I have lost one of my dearest and nearest friends on earth—my grandma. The funeral was a source of great wonderment to the neighborhood. We had no sermon, according to her wish.

Now, Miss Wixon, do not some of the Liberals believe in a hereafter, and do not some of them have a God of their own that they worship? And do you not think that nearly everyone has a God of some description? And isn't nature a glorious thing, at whose shrine each and everyone of us should pay homage!

Near the window by which I am writing stands a large dahlia that is loaded with pink balls of blossom, that are, to all appearance, enjoying the rain, which is pouring down to the utmost. They fill the place of the roses of the spring and early summer, and perfectly, too, I think, for the rose is too fleeting to please me. I can never get anyone to agree with me in thinking the dahlia is the prettiest, however. What is your opinion, Miss Wixon? My favorite flowers are the carnation and pansy.

In THE TRUTH SEEKER of September 9th I read Laura Hoffman's letter. I like it very much, and would like to know her, also George J. I. Remsburg. But, Laura, I go to Sunday-school every Sunday, and I have a good deal of fun out of it, too. I have a dispute with my Bible-class teacher nearly every Sunday, and that is fun.

I would like to know Laura's favorite authors. Of all I dislike Dickens most. His works are fully as bad as the Bible; i. e., they are equally tiresome. How do you like Scott's poems. I admire the "Lady of the Lake" very much. A while ago I wrote a letter to one of our leading papers, which contains "A Young Folk's Department," defending our cause. It was returned to me with a letter from the editor stating reasons for not publishing. He was, of course, afraid of the opinion of his pious customers and subscribers, but admitted what I said was true. It was the head editor who rejected the letter, but the sub-editor who wrote. He was very gentlemanly, was he not? Most people in his position would have tossed it in the wastebasket without further ado.

Well, I must close, or this will deserve a prominent position in the wastebasket. But first I must tell you what I've been doing since I wrote last. I went to the town school last winter, have studied hard and failed at two teacher's examinations. But I am not eighteen, or rather seventeen, so could not teach anyhow. I am about fifteen years old.

Well, good-bye. Three cheers for liberty of thought and speech.

Yours truly, AURORA SOUTHWICK.

[We are delighted to hear from Aurora once more. We have not time to answer all her questions now, but will say nature is good enough for anyone's consideration and reverence. In regard to the examination, Aurora will have better luck next time. —Ed. C. C.]

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances.

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.

(Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—
The Jewish Sabbath—The
Christian Scriptures and the
Sabbath—Examination of
Sunday Arguments—Origin
of the Christian Sabbath—
Testimony of the Christian
Fathers—The Sabbath during
the Middle Ages—The
Puritan Sabbath—Testimony
of Christian Reformers,
Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS. AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was

the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth;

Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment

Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting

the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone;

Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The

Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards?

The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern

Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested?

Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality
Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things;

Immortality of Matter, Nature (Teleology);

Immortality of Force, Man;

Infinity of Matter, Brain and Mind,

Value of Matter, Thought,

Motion, Consciousness,

Form, Seat of the Soul,

Immutability of Natural Innate Ideas,

Laws, The Idea of God,

Universality of Natural Personal Continuity

Laws, Vital Force,

The Heavens, The Soul of Brutes

Periods of the Creation Free Will,

of the Earth, Morality,

Original Generation, Concluding Observtations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles awry."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism
falsely preached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism;
Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism
and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible
Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the
"Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal
Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent
Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood
Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life.

Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin.

In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Liars' Confessions of the Protestant Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism.

In paper, 25 cents.

See all of these works address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said: of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Short Notes About Books.

Last week's TRUTH SEEKER must be a source of pride both to its publishers and its hosts of readers. No pains or expense was spared to make it a number that may be well termed souvenir. It is printed on heavy book paper, and is embellished with a galaxy of portraits representing the advanced and matured minds of the century. Orthodoxy can never produce a comparative array.—Iron Clad Age.

The Chicago correspondence of Samuel P. Putnam, published in the New York TRUTH SEEKER, has been issued in a large pamphlet, profusely illustrated, under the title of "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair." The letters are not only useful as a guide to the most interesting points of the great Exposition, but they are written in a fascinating style, and no one who takes up the pamphlet will lay it down until he has read it all, unless he desires to prolong the pleasure by biting his drink in two.—Snohomish Eye.

"Was Abraham Lincoln a Christian?" by John E. Remsburg, from the Truth Seeker Company, New York, gathers all the evidence possible in the negative of that question, but while denying that the great war president professed Christianity, or anything else, the book at the same time goes on to show what an eminent example Lincoln was of the lofty self-sacrifice of character which is the heart of Christianity. In fact, it is not satisfied till it calls him "the gentlest, purest, noblest character in human history."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A good thing to take with you to the World's Fair, to preserve after you have been there as a reminder of the good things you have seen, or to give an excellent idea of the pleasures you will miss if you are unable to visit Chicago this fall, is "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," by Samuel P. Putnam. It will give you a vast deal of useful information, a thousand and one facts, and plenty of interesting statistics concerning the various departments. Truth Seeker Company, publishers, 28 Lafayette place, New York.—Maine Coast Cottager.

"Handbook of Freethought." Published by The Truth Seeker Company, New York. Price 50 cents. Author, W. S. Bell. Passion and deep-rooted resentment is as much in vogue with the Freethinker as it is with the bigoted Christian, as much of their writings prove, and I was agreeably surprised not finding in this work any evidence of this. Mr. Bell in many places may shock the believer, but in no case is abuse found. The history of persecution and the wars of religions are graphically presented. The wars of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries between Catholics and Protestants are presented with all their horrors. The authority of the Bible is questioned. The Freethinker has an able champion in this work.—Newsman.

"Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" by John E. Remsburg, is a new book issued by the Truth Seeker Company, of New York. It proves very conclusively the negative of the proposition contained in the title. For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is overwhelming, and which must put the question of Lincoln's belief at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that he was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he presents the testimony of more than one hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers and many of his most intimate friends.—Pittsburg Post.

Mr. J. E. Remsburg has completed and placed before the public his new book on Abraham Lincoln. The purport of this work is to prove conclusively from Mr. Lincoln's own life and words that he was not a Christian but a Deist, as were Thomas Paine and Voltaire. There has been much discussion on this subject since Colonel Ingersoll's lecture was first delivered. Mr. Remsburg is an analyst. His clear and forcible statements depend upon facts only for their foundation. The reader is not wearied with long sentences of fanciful structure. Where truth of history is aimed at, the writer of books needs not lights and shadows, flights of fancy or poetical imagery. Mr. Remsburg is remarkable for condensation. It is this that makes him so admired by many who wish to arrive at facts without loss of time or confusion of ideas. All the Christian testimony in existence concerning this subject is produced, made to proclaim its utmost, and then examined, weighed, and rated at its true value. The book is a most interesting one.—Ironclad Age.

In a book of 336 pages, under the caption "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" John E. Remsburg seeks to show by the testimony of many who knew the martyred president intimately that he was not. How the interests of humanity can be subserved by the collection and publication of this testimony it will be difficult to conceive. It is clearly the intent and purpose of the author to promote the interests of Freethought by this attempt to show that one of the greatest characters of American history was in full accord with the principles promulgated by Freethinkers, notwithstanding his contention to the contrary.

Granting that Lincoln was an unbeliever, can it be said that society will be benefited by the knowledge, or that the doctrines of Christianity will shine the less grandly? All but the most radical Freethinkers acknowledge that Christianity is the true foundation upon which the well-being of humanity rests. Remove it completely and the moral fabric of society falls to the ground. By those who are interested in Freethought this book will no doubt be read with pleasure, for much of the proofs adduced appear to be irrefutable.—San Francisco Post.

"The Creation of God," by Dr. Jacob Hartmann (New York: Truth Seeker Company; 432 pp., 4s. 6d.), is a good book somewhat spoiled in the making. There is a mass of useful science of vital interest—the author is in arms against alcoholic as well as theologic spirits—a sturdy enthusiasm for truth against credulity and its monopolists, and a general honesty of opinion throughout. Dr. Hartmann's reasoning is plain, his motives are admirable, and his abilities for instruction are undeniable. But occasionally his pages are deflected by undue "raciness," which, although entirely clean, has the street-corner effect; and more frequently the style is a trifle too fervid and florid. The absence of restraint is regrettable in the witness of so many excellent qualities. Chapter V. on "Genesis: The Creation," for instance, bristles with acute points, which are only blunted with such a conclusion as "There is not an intelligent priest living who is ass big enough to believe any such nonsense." Again, "Solomon started chock full of wisdom;" when "full of wisdom" would have been equally forcible, and more mannerly. In justice, allowance is to be made for the transatlantic taste, which, however, does not always commend itself to the literary judgments of our own country.—Watts's Lit. Guide.

One of the most noted controversies of the century has been waged over the question of ex-President Lincoln's belief as far as religion is concerned. Soon after his remains were laid to rest at Springfield, Dr. Holland, one of his biographers, put forth the claim that he was a Christian.

This claim was denied, reaffirmed, denied again, and so the controversy continues. Like a shuttlecock being tossed from battledore to battledore was the question waged, until Mr. Remsburg took it up to satisfy himself. For fifteen years he collected his material, and to his own satisfaction proves that "Honest Old Abe," who controlled the destinies of the nation during the dark days of the Rebellion, was a Freethinker.

He presents an apparently very strong array of testimony in support of his views, giving the evidence of at least a hundred persons, intimate associates, among whom is no less a personage than Mrs. Lincoln, the wife of the great man.

Mr. Remsburg claims that in 1835 Lincoln wrote a small book on Infidelity, in which he contested the idea that Jesus Christ was the true and only begotten son of God, as the Christian world believes.

Later on, when he was a candidate for Congress, one of the arguments used against his election was that he did not believe in Christianity, and that he had openly proclaimed that Jesus was an illegitimate child.

The author also gives the testimony of twenty witnesses that Lincoln died a Christian, ten of whom admit that he had been an unbeliever during a portion of his life.

It is an interesting work, on account of the object of the author's arguments. Everything concerning "Old Abe" is read with interest by the American people, but it is a question whether they are ready to accept the doctrines put forth in this book, and believe that the president whose name ranks second to none of those who have reached that high elevation did not believe in the existence of a God.—Philadelphia Item.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER.

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;
OR
THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE
AND THEOLOGY.By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,
with a preface by
R. G. INGERSOLL.This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.
Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENTIN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
At Morristown, N. J.This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.
In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the
Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in the Interest of and Owned by the Whole People.By HON. THOMAS E. HILL, of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms,"
"The Hill Banking System," and other works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted.

This book is "just in time," is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.Hard Knocks
at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.
Price, 20 cents, six for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—
AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
Cloth, 75 cents.PULPIT, PEW,
and CRADLE.

By HELEN H. GARDNER.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.Every Woman Should Read It andKnow Her Enemies and Her Friends.
Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A Nineteenth Century Novel.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with a little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroine. The narrative is, in the main, a history of a working-girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business-men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrites. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world.
Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Not for Parsons.

TEACHER: Yes, Willie; every day will be Sunday in heaven. Willie: Well, what day will they hold their Sunday-school picnics on?—Puck.CODLING: Why did you speak to that howlid twamp, old fel? Gilley: Why shouldn't I, chappie? He isn't in twade, and he doesn't work faw a living.—Judge.

"Do you think that sending Bibles to the heathen is productive of good results?" "Most assuredly. Our publishing house makes a clear profit of thirty-seven cents on each Bible."

"Did you pass the hat, deacon?" "Yes." "What's in it?" "Well, fort'nitly, parson, the linin' is still thar. First time it ever happened, parson. I reckon the boys is gettin' religious at last."—London Freethinker.

Just previous to giving out the hymn, the minister said: "The storm outside is raging so violently that I will ask the sexton to be kind enough to close the doors and windows. It will give us all a greater sense of security. The congregation will now sing 'I would not live away, I ask not to stay.'"

"I HEAR dat you is dissatisfied wif de new ministah," said one colored resident of a suburban town. "Well, I dunno but we is. Dah am a chu'h'mitte cidin ob his kace now." "What wuz de surkim-tances?" "Pofanety. De foks woz talkin' 'bout bildin' er dam 'cross little ribber dat go by de town, an' de ministah he com an' put his oar in." "What did he say?" "Hea said he didn't blebe de ribbah was wuf a dam, an' dat's de p'int da' is 'cidin on."

THE magpie devours the corn and grain; so does the parson. The magpie takes the wool from the sheep's back; so does the parson. The magpie devours alike the young animal and the eggs; so does the parson. The magpie's clack is everlastingly going; so is the parson's. The magpie repeats by rote words that are taught it; so does the parson. The magpie is always skipping, and hopping, and peeping into other's nests; so is the parson. The magpie's color is partly black and partly white; so is the parson's. The magpie's greediness, impatience, and cruelty are proverbial; so are those of the parson.—William Corbett.THIS story is told of a formerly well-known eminent divine of Boston, who was also president of a railroad. He had occasion to go out into the railroad yard one day and witnessed the unloading of a car-load of rails. The men were pitching them over in a careless manner, and, as in those days they were very expensive, he remonstrated with the workmen. One of the men gently told him to go to hades—the polite expression used to describe the torrid zone of the hereafter for the wicked. "Oh, shame!" said the ex-clergyman; "that's the last place you ought to send me to." "Faix, I think you are right," replied the workman; "there's no doubt but it will be the last place you'll go to!"—Boston Evening Telegram.

OLD Pete Robinson, who lived at Worsham, Va., was a pious negro, who jogged along with his wife for many years, naming a new baby every year until seventeen unbleached olive blanches bore scriptural names. Then came a surprise. One morning the Presbyterian minister, while taking his constitutional, met Pete. "Good-morning, Peter. You seem to be very much pleased with something." "Yes, sah, I is. You see, de ole 'oman 'creased de family las' night." "Ah, indeed!" "Yes, sah, dar's two mo' little lam's ov de Lord." "Indeed! And what will you name them?" "Gwine name 'em both arter de Lord; gwine call 'em Messiah an' Halloway!" "Messiah and Halloway! Where did you get that name Halloway?" "Hi, man! Don't de Lord's pra'r say, 'Halloway be thy name?'"

A SUNDAY or two ago, at a Methodist chapel in one of the pit districts of Staffordshire, a worthy "local," after preaching very earnestly for about three-quarters of an hour, had tired his audience, and yet showed no sign of drawing his discourse to a close; indeed, he had just got past "secondly." A number of the congregation had been sleeping for some time; but one brawny miner was wide awake, and apparently in a state of great uneasiness. After repeatedly looking at his watch and then at the preacher, the miner groped for his stick and hat, and then proceeded to make his way out of the chapel. The preacher just then had got warmed up to his subject. He had been advising his hearers to beware of the pitfalls by which they were surrounded. "Stop, sinner!" he shouted. "Pause!" "A' can't stop onny longer," exclaimed the miner, who had just got to the door. "Y've preached well-nigh an hour, and if a' stop, our Peg'll be kicking up a row when a' get whome."—London Freethinker.

Gems of Thought.

ALL that Shakspeare says of the king, yonder slip of a boy that reads in the corner feels to be true of himself. We sympathize in the great moments of history, in the great discoveries, the great resistances, the great propensities of men—because there law was enacted, the sea was searched, the land was found, or the blow was struck, for us, as we ourselves in that place would have done or applauded.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

THE ordinary human idea is that when you burn a body you simply annihilate it; and on that account early Christians preferred burial to cremation, because they thought they stood thereby a better chance at the resurrection. It is true they allowed that the divine omnipotence could make new bodies for the martyrs who were burnt; but for themselves, they seem to have preferred on the average to go on afresh with their old familiar ones.—Grant Allen.

A WIDE-SPREAD feeling against controversy is fostered throughout Christendom, and a simple love of truth is looked upon as out of harmony with modern progress. A late writer in a widely-circulated Eastern journal deprecates the existence of "the man who argues." He evidently was not conscious that he argued against argument! Confutes himself with the utmost complacency, and states his personal preferences as a superior kind of argument!—W. F. Jamieson.

IF we engraft in law the first day "Sabbath," then, indeed, as all law, it must be enforced. Besides injustice to very good and honorable people, we should know we have no right to enforce God's law upon the people that dwell on the earth, presuming it to be the Sabbath day, which we all know quite well it is not. As well might we enact a law to compel all men to be baptized, or fix in law what may constitute a Christian, or by law create Christians.—James A. De Moss, Disciple.

THE old idea of development of a series of beings similar in order to the steps of a ladder, has given place to the new process which resembles a tree with its trunk, its branches, and its leaves. In our opinion, evolution is not merely a speculation, but the expression of known facts, and the best and most scientific explanation that has been given of those facts. It is no longer regarded as a heresy, one to be pelted at with Bible texts; neither is it an instrument in the hands of any Providence for confirming the truths of the orthodox religion.—Charles Watts.

THE church is losing her hold upon the intellect of the world, and it has become necessary to once more appropriate to herself the products of the labor of our common humanity. As she now credits herself with the overthrow of American slavery and the elevation of woman, so does she attempt to make us believe that the temperance movement owes its inception and development to her teachings and labor, and the precepts of her sacred book. No more impudent and unfounded claim was ever made, not even either of those above-mentioned, brazen as they are.—E. C. Walker.

THE pursuit of pleasure is the persistent purpose of every individual. If he voluntarily undergoes a pain, it is only to avoid other greater pains. If he voluntarily foregoes a pleasure, it is only to secure other greater pleasures. If he abstains from gluttony to-day, it is to preserve capacity for gustatory delights to-morrow. If he shuns the riotous joys of vice, it is to preserve qualification for the sweeter joys of virtue. If he submits to the painful operation of a surgeon now, it is to prevent the agonies of disease in the future. If he practices self-denial in this life, it is to escape the terrors of the life to come.—A. M. Lorentz.

THE theory of evolution encourages no millennial anticipations. If, for millions of years, our globe has taken the upward road, yet, sometime, the summit will be reached and the downward route will be commenced. The most daring imagination will hardly venture upon the suggestion that the power and the intelligence of man can ever arrest the procession of the great year. Moreover the cosmic nature born with us, and, to a large extent, necessary for our maintenance, is the outcome of millions of years of severe training, and it would be folly to imagine that a few centuries will suffice to subdue its masterfulness to purely ethical ends. Ethical nature may count upon having to reckon with a tenacious and powerful enemy as long as the world lasts. But, on the other hand, I see no limit to the extent to which intelligence and will, guided by sound principles of investigation, and organizing in common effort, may modify the conditions of existence for a period longer than that now covered by history.—Huxley.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c., 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Port. Pap., 50c.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port., $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

—THE— FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

The Illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2 represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	The Church Robbing the People.	5	Missionaries.
3	Thanksgiving.	1	The Lord's Instruments.
6	Sabbath Laws.	25	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	Children and the Church.	1	The Church and Slavery.
10	Woman and the Church.	2	Priests and Politics.
6	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	Ireland and the Church.
4	Studies in Natural History.	2	Church's Idea of Civilization.
3	The Bible and Science.	1	The Uses of the Cross.
15	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	Pietism in Our Penitentiaries.	9	Persecutions of the Church.
4	The Atonement Scheme.	12	Some Allegories.
2	The Lord and His Works.	3	Heaven.
4	Prayer.	6	Hell.
10	The Creeds.	7	Miscellaneous.
1	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Art at Heston as a portrait painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of his volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the unfairness of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

P. ics, board covers, $2; cloth, $2 50.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PATENTS OBTAINED.
Terms Easy.
Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and Reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. BAKER & CO., Atty's, Washington, D.C.

CHOLERA, DIPHTHERIA, Dysentery, Piles, Quinsy, Catarrh. The Antidote for $1. Agents wanted. Dr. G. H. MILLER, 2,333 Hickory street, St. Louis, Mo., former address 1,441 South Twelfth street, Denver, Col. 20t28

THE "Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.
Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels, $15. In finer cases, add as above.
Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.
 All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.
Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.50; table spoons, $2.00; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.
The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Etched (teas only):
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
 50 cents extra.
The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30. Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.
OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
 P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" tree with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidence of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.,
and say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.
Dr. Fellows is an Infidel.

ZEKE GETS INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT HIS RATIONS.

*"A Digest of Science."THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.
Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Bunboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature — i.e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone — its martyrdom — in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phoenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America. Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE PHILOSOPHY

OF

MENTAL HEALING.

A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power.

By LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

A Book to explain the correct idea of Mental Healing, and what may be reasonably expected to result from an understanding of its principles. Price, $2.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFERENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the Initiative and Referendum.

By J. W. SULLIVAN.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW WORK

BY

ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

$75.00 to $250.00 can be made MONTHLY working for B. F. JOHNSON & CO., Richmond, Va.

MEDICAL.

If you need a medicine pay attention to something which will cure you. It is known as

The Water of Life,

and is adapted to curing, more especially, all forms of Stomach, Liver, Kidney, and Bladder troubles. By injecting this water it will heal all sorts of inflammations of the internal organs, such cases as Piles, Typhoid and other fevers, Bowel diseases, Uterine, and other forms of Female Complaints. It is a Blood Purifier, and is an excellent remedy for Catarrh and Lung and Throat inflammations. It will heal the nerves, restoring lost vigor of mind and body, creating a good appetite and producing sound sleep. It acts steadily upon the urine, cleansing the blood by means of the kidneys, and acts mildly upon the bowels, thereby producing bodily habits which are so essential to good health. This is sold absolutely pure, as it is pumped from the spring, without the addition of any drug whatever. It is Nature's Remedy, pure and simple, and not a manufactured article. The success it has achieved has come mostly from its friends who have been cured by using it. Send for a pamphlet free, containing photo-engraved letters and recommendations from those who have used it, giving a forty-page history and all particulars about this remarkable water, to

Water of Life

J. R. PERRY, Manager,

6m12 34 South Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

News of the Week.

ENGLAND seems likely to have another war with the Zulus.

DEPRESSION in Wall street gives promise of another monetary panic.

PREPARATIONS continue in Spain for a formidable expedition against the Moors.

A STATE protective association has been organized by the liquor-dealers of Washington.

JOHN WANAMAKER, late state-in-church postmaster-general, spent his vacation preaching.

THE relations between Catholics and Protestants in Germany are becoming decidedly strained.

MORE than twenty-two thousand persons were fed by the Chicago relief committee one day recently.

PRESIDENT PRIXOTO of Brazil has at last gotten together two small fleets to oppose the rebel Admiral Mello.

IN the international yacht race between the English yacht Valkyrie and the American yacht Vigilant the latter won.

THE Union Pacific railroad, one of the greatest railway systems in the country, has gone into the hands of a receiver.

AT Leadville, one thousand men have resumed work, the result of a conference between the mine owners and the miners.

THE battle of "physical endurance" in the Senate over the Sherman law repeal bill continues to drag its weary way along.

THE president of Guatemala has declared himself dictator, dissolved the extra session of Congress, and ordered a new election.

IT is said that the people of Norway are becoming quite temperate under the operation of the "Gothenberg" plan of government liquor control.

THE Bar Association of New York denounces the nomination of Judge Isaac H. Maynard by the New York Democrats for judge of the court of appeals.

AUSTRALIA is a very young human hive, and yet it is already sending out colonies. In Paraguay 450,000 acres have been secured upon which to locate a communistic association.

THE largest attendance of any day of the World's Fair at Philadelphia in 1876 was 217,526; at the Paris Exposition of 1889, it was 397,150, and at Chicago this year it was 713,000.

THE Flint-Glass Workers' Union has ordered a strike in the sixteen factories of the United States Glass Company. The company had announced its determination to be non-union hereafter.

TWO sections of a World's Fair excursion train, westward bound, came together near Jackson, Mich. The air-brakes had failed to work. Thirteen persons were killed and twenty-three injured.

NEW postal card machinery is being made for the government contractors. A new rotary press will deliver eight cards at a time. Four counting and packing machines will do the work of eighty girls.

PRINCETON COLLEGE students who engaged in a hazing affair lately are in imminent danger of imprisonment, Judge Abbot having charged the Mercer county grand jury very strongly in the matter.

THE House of Representatives has passed the Tucker bill repealing the federal elections law. The Democrats and Populists voted solidly for repeal; the Republicans, solidly against. The vote was two to one for repeal.

DEBATE has opened in the Reichsrath (Austro-Hungary) on the government's action in declaring Prague in a state of siege. The Young Czechs are very bitter in their denunciations, while the German Liberals are neutral.

THE English colliery strike is ended at last. The men accepted the mediation of the mayors of the cities in the mining district and will go to work with their old pay but agreeing to accept a ten per cent reduction in December.

THE new French Chamber consists of 581 members. Of these, 350 are Moderate Republicans, 60 Monarchists, and 50 Socialists, while the remaining 120 are described as "Radical-Socialists," although they are much subdivided.

JUDGE GARY, who presided at the trial of the Chicago agitators, Parsons, Lingg, Fielden, et al, has been renominated for judge of the supreme court by the Chicago Republicans, but the Democrats refused to put his name on their ticket, notwithstanding the recommendation of the Bar Association and their practice in former years.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 43. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, October 28, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

WHAT EDUCATION IS DOING FOR SUPERSTITION.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By

G. W. FROST.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot,

Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Heth- ington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vainani, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents

Christianity a Fiction.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

THE
Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

—o—
Ancient Voices
from the Spirit
Realm disclose the most Startling Revelations.

—o—
Proving Christianity
to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed- rock of human liberty.

Price, - - - 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to pro- fessed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in sci- entific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adapta- tion or to those of beauty, everywhere through- out organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of natural- ism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.

The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.

Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.

Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.

Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illus- trated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

New Publications.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

By Samuel P. Putnam.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1892, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Free-thought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits
Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for
His Processes Are Egregiously Slow,
They Are Egregiously Wasteful,
They Often Serve No Use,
They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

Rensburg's Book on Lincoln Now Ready.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN: WAS HE A CHRISTIAN?

By John E. Rensburg.

One of the most noted controversies of the century has been waged over the question of Abraham Lincoln's religious belief. Soon after the remains of America's most illustrious son were laid to rest at Springfield, one of his biographers, Dr. Holland, put forward the claim that he was a Christian. The claim was promptly denied by the dead statesman's friends, but only to be renewed again, and again denied. And thus for a quarter of a century the question of Lincoln's belief has been tossed like a battle-dore from side to side.

For fifteen years Mr. Rensburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

NOTED WITNESSES.

Hon. W. H. Herndon, Col. Ward H. Lamon, Hon. John T. Stuart, Col. James H. Matheny, Col. John G. Nicolay, Judge David Davis, Col. Jesse W. Fell, Hon. Leonard Swett, Dr. William Jayne, Judge Stephen T. Logan, Joshua F. Speed, Hon. Jesse K. Dubois, Hon. Joseph Gillespie, Dr. C. H. Ray, Col. F. S. Rutherford, Judge Robert Leachman, Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Leonard W. Volk, Joseph Jefferson, Hon. E. B. Washburne, Hon. E. M. Haines, Hon. James T. Tuttle, Hon. M. B. Field, Hon. Geo. W. Julian, Hon. John B. Alley, Hon. Hugh McCulloch, Gen. M. M. Trumbull, Rev. David Swing, Rev. Robert Collyer, Judge Jesse W. Weik, Hon. J. P. Usher, Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, Salmon P. Chase, Wm. H. Seward, Hon. John Covode, Hon. A. J. Grover, Hon. W. H. T. Wakefield, Gen. D. W. Wilder, Judge Aaron Goodrich, Judge James M. Nelson, Rev. Edward Eggleston, Rev. John W. Chadwick, Donn Piatt, H. K. Magie, Dennis F. Hanks, Mrs. Sarah Lincoln, Mrs. Mary Lincoln.

The foregoing and sixty other reputable witnesses testify that the greatest man born on this continent was a Freethinker.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR

Liberal and Ethical Societies,
for Schools and
the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and ment journeys. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

PEN PICTURES OF THE WORLD'S FAIR.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

A Full Description of the Fair, Invaluable as a Guide-Book and still more Invaluable to those who cannot attend. It tells WHAT TO SEE and WHERE TO SEE IT; gives rates of admission to the various attractions of the Fair and cost of living in Chicago, with other useful information to the visitor.

It is, besides being a complete Guide-Book, the best description of the Fair yet given—poetic, beautiful, accurate. It describes the inauguration ceremonies, gives the director-general's address, the efforts to close the Fair Sundays and the triumph of the Sunday-openers; describes the various buildings and what they contain, and is, all in all, the very best picture of the Fair that can be painted with a pen.

ILLUSTRATED.

A MAP OF JACKSON PARK, enabling the visitor to make his way around, and the stay-at-home to see where he went.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE FAIR, enabling one to comprehend at a glance the magnitude of the Exposition, the greatest ever known to the present time.

PICTURES OF ALL THE PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS:

Woman's Building.
Administration Building.
Electrical Building.
Machinery Hall.

Art Palace.
Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building.
Mines and Mining Building.
Forestry Building.

Fisheries Building.
Agricultural Building.
Transportation Building.
Horticultural Building.

A visitor to the Fair says of this book—reading it in THE TRUTH SEEKER—that it is charming and to one who has seen the Fair vastly entertaining.

Single copy, 25 cents. Five copies for $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

FACTS AND FICTIONS OF LIFE.

CONTENTS.

Preface.
The Fictions of Fiction.
A Day in Court.
Thrown in With the City's Dead.
An Irresponsible Educated Class.
The Moral Responsibility of Woman in Heredity.
Woman as an Annex.

Sex in Brain.
Heredity in Its Relations to a Double Standard of Morals.
Divorce and the Proposed National Law.
Lawsuit or Legacy.
Common Sense in Surgery.

At the Woman's Congress at Chicago Helen Gardener delivered as an address one of the chapters of this book. The Chicago Times said of it and her: "But the last address, dealing with the most delicate of the problems of reform, clear, unhesitant, modest, but uncompromising, was listened to with breathless interest by the audience. It was 'Heredity in Its Relation to a Double Standard of Morals,' and it was delivered by the one woman of all others best qualified to speak upon that subject—Helen Gardener. Petite, graceful, eloquent with the burden of her thought, Miss Gardener enchaind every auditor, and when she had finished received a perfect ovation, which her courage and devotion had so worthily won. The evening session was highly interesting, but that of the morning will be set down on the tablet of the memory of those present as one of the distinctively great features of the week's congress."

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EVERY Woman Ought to Read It. Every LIBERAL Woman
and Man Will Want It.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE.

By Matilda Joselyn Gage.

This is Mrs. Gage's latest and crowning work. It is THE book to show how the church has enslaved woman and kept and keeps her in an inferior position. A glance at its contents will show this:

The first chapter—the Matriarchate—shows that under the old civilizations woman had great freedom, but that the tendency of Christianity from the first was to restrict her liberty. In this chapter Mrs. Gage claims that to the Matriarchate—or Mother-rule—the world is indebted for its first conception of inherent rights.

Chapter II deals with the theological dogmas of original sin and celibacy. Woman, by the church, was not regarded as a human being; marriage was looked upon as vile; wives were sold as slaves; women driven to suicide; the influence of the church was unfavorable to virtue. The celibacy of the clergy produced "degrading sensuality, and woman was the victim of these brutes."

Chapter III is on The Canon Law, showing how the church controlled woman by making the legitimacy of marriage depend upon its own control of the ceremony. Ancient civilization gave place to Christian barbarism, the clergy became a distinct body—at once a "holy" and an unholy caste. Learning was prohibited to women, husbands prohibited from leaving them more than one-third of their property; daughters could be disinherited, sons could not. The Reformation effected no change.

Chapter IV—Marquette—is on Feudalism and its degradation of women, the rights of "lords spiritual," the immorality of the heads of the church, baptism of nude women in the early Christian church. It also deals with some of the later-day abuses of females, like our Northwestern pineries, the English debaucheries, governmental crime-makers, etc.

Chapter V—Witchcraft. In the days of this phase of religious insanity Mrs. Gage shows how the possession of even a little learning was sufficient cause to suspect a woman of witchcraft, that to keep a pet was dangerous, so rabid were the clergy not to suffer a witch to live. This persecution for witchcraft was a continuance of the church's policy for obtaining universal dominion over mankind. Women physicians of the Middle Ages were persecuted, and the "Pilgrim Fathers" continued it in America. The first synod convened in America was to try a woman for heresy, and others were stripped and whipped for not agreeing with the clergy.

The chapter on "Wives" shows how the disruption of the Roman empire was unfavorable to the personal and proprietary rights of woman—that the sale of daughters was practiced in England seven hundred years after it was Christianized—that the practice of buying wives was regulated by law—that women were not permitted to read the Bible—that they were not admitted as witnesses—that civil marriage is opposed by the church.

In Chapter VII is shown how polygamy was sustained by the Christian church, that the first synod of the Reformation convened to sanction this institution, that Luther and the other "principal reformers" favored it, as well as the American Board of Foreign Missions. The Mormon theocracy is shown to be similar to that of other Christian sects.

In the last three chapters Mrs. Gage treats of the opposition of the church to the amelioration of woman's sufferings as interference with her "curse," of woman's degradation by the church to laborer unfit for slaves, of woman's "inferiority," as taught by the church to-day, and of how little value Christianity has been and is to civilization.

The work is a burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It is also extremely valuable as history. No woman, it seems to us, can read it and remain a supporter of the religious institution which has crushed her individuality, her mentality, and degraded her person. To the woman's cause it opens an Age of Reason. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do.

In cloth, $2; in half-leather binding, $3. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 43. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, October 28, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - OCTOBER 28, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

What One Court Knows About God's Intentions and Man's Needs.

We mean no reflection upon the intelligence of Freethinkers when we say that but few of them know to how great an extent their liberties have been adjudicated away by the judges they have helped, directly or indirectly, to put upon the bench. In the hard struggle for existence few have time to keep in that close touch with current events which is implied in the aphorism that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." The physical necessities of life must be provided, and after that is done there is generally little time left in which to search in the public prints for the news which is of real importance, and which, alas, is more often obscured or omitted than given the place its gravity merits. The Freethought paper should watch every movement of the enemy, and give its readers the fullest information possible concerning the aggressions of the church. But there are the courts and legislatures of more than forty states to keep under surveillance, saying nothing of Congress and the federal courts and the tribunals of thousands of cities and towns, and often news of the most vital import escapes the scant scrutiny which the inadequate force that can be employed is able to give to the papers and periodicals which are accessible, saying nothing of the court transactions in the more distant states, which frequently are not chronicled in the Eastern dailies. Freethinkers in all parts of the country can help the cause much by sending us news of the kind indicated. We want the particulars of every trespass of the church upon the equal rights of the citizen. To comment intelligently and warn judiciously, it is necessary that we have the facts connected with every attempt to force Christian theology and Christian morality down the throats of Liberals and other dissentients. Judicial decisions are of far more than ordinary value, that is, if quoted correctly and in extenso, for they mark the light to which the dirty flood of theocracy has swept, showing us how far the principle of church and state union is recognized in the law which we are expected to obey.

So much by way of prelude.

In 1892 the supreme court of Nebraska unanimously decided that Sunday base ball playing was in violation of the Sunday law of the state. The decision was read by Chief Justice Maxwell, who, together with his associates, should not be forgotten by the voting Freethinkers and Adventists of Nebraska. This judicial opinion is a curiosity in its way, and for illogic which ends in puerility, and cant which degenerates into impudence and culminates in outrage, it cannot be surpassed. In its labored effort to prove that because the human body needs rest, Sunday laws are necessary and just, this learned court says:

"The human body, considered as a machine, is the most perfect mechanism of which we have any knowledge. If properly cared for and treated, it will, in ordinary cases where there are no hereditary defects, retain its vitality and vigor to old age; but every movement of the body or action of the brain involves waste of the vital force, and this the creator has provided shall, to a great extent, be replenished during sleep. Hence it is necessary to spend about one-third of our time in sleep. While it is true that the reserve force of life is so great in many persons as to enable them to live for a time with less than the normal amount of sleep required, yet, if continued for any considerable time, the general health will be affected, and to entirely abstain from sleep for a week or more, as in cases of certain fevers, like the typhoid, almost unavoidably results in temporary insanity, if not death. But the recuperation from sleep in most cases does not restore full tone to the system, and Sunday is like an oasis in the journey of life where each traveler may be refreshed and become more able to continue the performance of his duties or labors. As a natural consequence, if the vitality of the body is permitted steadily to decrease without being replenished, life will be proportionately shortened. Therefore, if a person labors continuously at hard and exacting labor without rest for many years, his health is liable to be impaired and he become prematurely old."

These judges seem to think that not only are their views of rest something superior to those of the ordinary citizen, but that they may rightfully compel him to conform his actions to their notions instead of following his own predilections. One would suppose that these lawyers imagined that the base ball player was compelled to engage in that sport on Sunday, and that they should be credited with an act of charity in interposing the law of the state between him and his heartless taskmasters. It does not appear to have occurred to them that he may have wished to play ball on Sunday, and that if he did they had no business to deny him the opportunity to gratify his wish. And the presumption is that he played voluntarily; otherwise he would have appealed to the public or to the courts for relief.

If the fact that the body needs rest justifies the existence of a law compelling people to refrain from labor and recreation on certain days whether they wish or do not wish so to do, then the citizen should be forced to pass a certain number of hours in bed each night regardless of his own preferences in the matter. The court avers that God has provided for the recuperation of physical energies by means of sleep. But it is well known that many people do not give themselves anywhere near enough sleep at any time, while others turn day into night and night into day. Following the court's illogical argument to its logical conclusion we see at once that these disregards of nature's law should be brought up with a sharp turn by a statute law, "in that case made and provided." And these philanthropic judges do not seem to understand that one of the most important elements in rest is change. Mere idleness is itself a very wearying kind of work. What active, industrious man or woman is there who has not oftentimes felt, when forced by pious surroundings or uncivil law to total cessation of action, that Sunday was the most tiresome day of the week? The body needs change first of all. Many different kinds of labor during the day are less exhausting than one, other things being equal. The same is true of the weekly task or tasks. And the work which the man enjoys, the toil in which he has an interest, is far less wearing upon the system than is uncongenial labor in which he feels that he must engage in order to live,—no, it does not exhaust so much, even, as does enforced idleness. But the church and her servile judges take no account of any of these things; in the interest of God (i. e., of the preachers), they are bound to ignore the real needs and the initiative of men and women. No matter if to the players and the spectators alike the Sunday ball game is a rest for both body and mind, it must be stopped nevertheless. The masters, the clergy, know that they mean "worship" when they say "rest," and the servants, the judges, are in duty bound to so interpret law as to gratify the desires of "heaven's ambassadors," so they talk learnedly about the needs of the body and the "creator's intentions" and then complacently shut the door of law in the face of justice.

"No doubt one of the objects of the creator in establishing the Sabbath as a day of rest was to provide for restoring and retaining, as far as possible, health and strength and perfect action of the body."

Judge Maxwell is much better informed concerning the "objects of the creator" than he is regarding the inhibitions of the United States Constitution and the requirements of equity. The people of Nebraska should eagerly embrace their first opportunity to give him a chance to enter the ministry. He would be at home there, but he is too much given to special pleading to honor even the chair of a justice of the peace, much less the supreme court bench.

"Every person of observation knows that the man who labors seven days in the week continuously for any considerable length of time lacks the spring and elasticity of action of another of like years and naturally active habits who rests on Sunday. Experience has also shown that men will accomplish more labor in a series of years by working six days in the week than by continuous application."

All of which may be true and yet furnish no valid excuse for Sunday laws. Involuntary labor is slavery, but that is not the thing in dispute. The sole question at issue is whether the state, at the behest of the church or otherwise, can compel those who wish to labor or those who wish to play on Sunday to abstain therefrom. We maintain that it cannot in justice do anything of the kind; that such interference with citizens' rights is unconstitutional and iniquitous.

"Sunday is to be a day of rest. Wordly cares are to be laid aside, and the worries of business or pleasure thrown off. How gladly the tired laborer, workman, farmer, merchant, manufacturer, attorney, and judge welcome Sunday as a day of rest and on the succeeding Monday enter upon their respective labors with renewed strength and vigor. The idler and trifler may complain of the loss of time from resting on Sunday, but the active intelligent worker knows that thereby he has increased his capital stock of health and chances of longevity."

But if the brain worker finds that his "capital stock of health and chances of longevity" are increased by working in his garden or orchard on Sunday, what then? If the over-worked mechanic or salesman believes that his health is improved by watching a game of ball, a cricket match, or a regatta on Sunday, what then, again? The feelings and beliefs of these men are of much more importance to them than the opinion of the Nebraska Supreme Court, and they are, moreover, feelings and beliefs with which no court has any business to meddle. And it is highly probable that no court would think of meddling were it not for the insolent demands of the clerics. Of course the minds of many judges are still saturated with superstition, and so, moved partly by their dread of hell and partly by their fears of the pious electors, they turn their backs on equity and interpret law to please the blackcoats.

"Christ sought to apply the Sabbath to its appropriate use. The Jewish religion at that time consisted largely of outward ceremonies, which were performed with a rigor never intended by the author of the Mosaic law. It is evident that great reliance was placed upon these outward ceremonies. Christ, however, while not condemning many of these ceremonies, intended to show that the mere observance of these was not sufficient; that the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath; and in effect, therefore, that works of charity, mercy, and necessity not only could, but if necessary, should, be performed on that day. He recognized the Sabbath, however, as a day of rest set apart by the creator. After his death and resurrection, his disciples, to commemorate that event, changed the day to the first day of the week, and that day is now observed by the great body of his followers throughout the world, and is recognized by both the common and statute law."

Is the foregoing an exegesis of scripture or is it a homily on law? How long since judges in America were made expositors of Bible texts, interpreters of the will of God, and elucidators of the teachings of Jesus? Is this opinion of Judge Maxwell's authoritative? Is it binding upon the consciences of all good Nebraskans? Will they go to hell, or to jail, or both, if they fail to agree with Dogberry? To jail, certainly, if they do not observe the "Sabbath" of Judge Maxwell. By the way, to what "disciples" does this man allude when he says that they changed the "Sabbath" to the first day of the week? Does he mean the immediate followers of Jesus, those whom he had induced to believe in his mission, and who were living on earth when he died? If so, where is his honor's evidence in support of the assumption? A lawyer should not eschew evidence entirely, even if he is merely a cheap pettifogger for superstition. "After his death and resurrection, his disciples, to commemorate the event, changed the day to the first day of the week," we are judicially assured. Which "event," the death or the resurrection? In either case, why? What had either the death or the resurrection to do with the Sabbath? God, according to all the authorities which Judge Maxwell has consulted, made Saturday, the seventh day of the week, the everlasting Sabbath of his people. Who had authority to change it? The ignorant followers of a Jewish agitator? Even if they did change it, how could they make the observance of a false Sabbath obligatory upon us? Could they abrogate the fiat of God? Does not this judge, who has the audacity to try to read a church dogma into our jurisprudence, in plain defiance of our national Magna Charta, know that it was not until the fourth century that Sunday was "recognized" by the state as a day of "rest," and then only for a part of the people? Does he not know that in that famous Sunday decree of the murderous Constantine, issued in March, 321, no reference whatever was made either to the death or the resurrection of Jesus, Constantine contenting himself with calling the day Dies Solis, "The day of the sun"?

The court continues:

"In this state the right of everyone to worship God according to the dictates of his own judgment and conscience is recognized, and hence permits those who prefer to keep the seventh in place of the first day of the week to do so. The law, both human and divine, being thus in favor of abstaining from sporting, etc., on Sunday, is a reasonable requirement and should be enforced. The deliberate violation of such a law there is reason to believe in many cases is but the commencement of a series of offenses that lead to infamy and ruin; and in any event the influence upon the participants themselves has a tendency to break down the moral sense and make them less worthy citizens."

The right to worship on Saturday is reluctantly conceded, and the worshipers are generously exempted from punishment unless, having rested on Saturday they venture to work on Sunday, in which case they are fined and sent to prison, as witness the Adventists in Arkansas, Tennessee, and Maryland. Right to worship? Yes, sometimes, but the right not to worship; the right to work or play? No! That is another story. "The law, both human and divine, being thus in favor of abstaining from sporting, etc., on Sunday, is a reasonable requirement and should be enforced." What stupidity! Does not this judicial marplot comprehend the fact that he, a judge of an American court, administering the law in a country where church and state are decreed to be wholly and forever separate, has no business to officially know anything about "divine" law? And does he not know, further, that he, as head of the highest tribunal in his state, is there, not necessarily to ascertain if men have violated a state statute, but rather to determine whether the statute is in harmony with the state Bill of Rights and the federal Constitution? The judge of a lower court may have no discretion; he may be able to say only: "This is the law; you have broken it; I must sentence you." But the supreme court is not so bound; it can pass beyond the offender and inquire as to the equity and constitutionality of the law that has been violated. The judges of this court should not hide behind a legislative statute, much less behind the Bible or a rotting parchment of Constantine the assassin.

What right has this judge to assume that the "deliberate violation" of the Sunday law is but the beginning "of a series of offenses that lead to infamy and ruin"? What right has he to declare that "the influence upon the participants themselves has a tendency to break down the moral sense and make them less worthy citizens"? Who is the more infamous; the citizen who attends to his own business on all the days of the week and lets that of his neighbor alone, or the judge who steals in the name of law and God one-seventh of his neighbor's time? Who is the less worthy citizen, the man who works, if it so please him, on Sunday, or the judge who sits in the pew of the self-righteous on that day and then on Monday in the court room does all that he can to trample down and destroy the equal religious and civil rights of the people? There are tens of thousands of men and women who pay no more attention to the Sunday laws that disgrace our states than they do to the fantastic tales of the Arabian Nights, and these men and women are morally more than the peers of the best Sabbatharians in the land. Their ever-increasing freedom from superstition constantly adds to their good qualities as citizens, neighbors, and friends. It is not necessary that a man should be a shivering slave of gods and afraid of his own shadow on Sunday in order to be enduringly decent.

This Nebraska decision closes with these words:

"The fact that the defendants were some distance away from the residence of any person can make no difference. It did not change the nature of the offense nor excuse the act. It was a violation of the law just the same."

You see, the "offense" was one of lese majesté; God's kingly dignity was insulted. It is admitted by the minis—no, we mean by the judge—that the equal rights of no citizen were invaded. The fact that the ball players "were some distance away from the residence of any person makes no difference." Of course it "makes no difference." Nobody but a dolt ever supposed that it was intended to punish the players because they had injured some person or persons. That would have been a trifling matter, good only for a pretext. The complainant was a myth called "God" and back of him were the parsons, anxious, as usual, to drive all competitors off the field and out of the world.

"Keep your children away from the priest or he will make them the enemies of mankind."

The Wonderful Love of the Church for the Poor.

"A Social Reform Club has been organized in New York, under the leadership of D. Stanton Coit. The object of this club is the salvation of 'Darkest New York' without the use of 'banners, drums, or prayer.' From an interview with Mr. Coit we take the following: 'Every inhabitant of the ward may join my club. Anarchists even will be welcomed provided they indorse our subjects. First of all, we will establish coal depots. We will buy coal at wholesale and sell it, say, for five cents a pail where now the poor are forced to pay twelve and fifteen. Coal the people must have to keep them alive, and our co-operative store will furnish it to them at cost price. At this and other stores we intend establishing, we will sell such staples as coffee and bread and meat; in fact, all the necessities in the way of groceries. At the wash houses, which will be centrally located, the poor will be able to do their washing for, say, five cents. For this they get all the utensils, water, soap, etc., so that a woman who does washing for a living will have work done in a couple of hours that it would take her a day to finish at home. The swimming baths will be open all the year, and will be free. We will also establish a public kitchen, at which families that live in small quarters can cook their meals.' It does not take much of a prophet to foretell what will be the result of this work. The attempt to lift men out of vice, poverty, and filth without attempting to lift them up to God will never succeed. Practically, Mr. Coit says: 'We can do this thing better without God than with him.' If Mr. Coit's idea is simply to give away fuel, clothing, and food he will succeed. The inhabitants of the Tenth ward will take all he will be able to give away. The Herald calls this work 'Salvation by Soap.' We beg to call attention to some ancient words of Holy Writ which say: 'For though thou wash thee with niter, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord.'"—Rev. A. S. Gumbert, Boston, in Christian Statesman.

How much the church loves the poor and unfortunate is vividly revealed by Mr. Gumbert. She would prefer that they should be "always with us" if the alternative is their uplifting through other agencies than those she patronizes. "The attempt to lift man out of vice, poverty, and filth without attempting to lift them up to God will never succeed." The shameless, heartless cant of that! If God wants them raised why does he not do it? Is he limited in power? Does he not know how to do it? Why does he let generation after generation wallow in filth, rot with vice, and starve at last and be tumbled into unmarked graves in Potter's Field? It is to be presumed that Mr. Gumbert can answer all these questions glibly and with perfect satisfaction to—preachers. Note the narrowness of the man and his creed: When a man with some grains of practical sense in his head proposes to form a club among the poor so that its members can furnish themselves with a few of the necessities of life at cost this attorney for the ghosts sneeringly prophesies failure for the enterprise because the projector of it has failed to brand "In God We Trust" on the coal shovels and stencil on the flour sacks, "For Christ's Sake." He remarks that the inhabitants of the Tenth ward will take all Mr. Coit will be able to give away. The clerical intellect does not seem to be able to understand the difference between giving away and furnishing articles at cost of production and distribution. It is very fitting that the representative of the church which has elevated charity to the position of the most exalted of virtues should jeer at something which he mistakes for charity, when it is undertaken by one without the temple.

Was there ever a reform, of small or of great promise, that the ministers could not find texts in the Bible with which to damn it? To defend slavery or censure reform without prayer, the Bible is equally useful.

We are told that Mr. Coit practically says, "We can do this thing better without God than with him," which is no doubt true. "God" is merely a euphemism for "church," and every student of history knows that it has always been a stumbling-block in the way of progress. Friends of the laboring man who get angry because Liberal lecturers and writers keep pounding away at the church will possibly sometime get their eyes opened enough to see that the Freethinkers were right, and then they will realize the futility of attempting to secure justice in a state composed chiefly of believers in Christian dogmas and morals.

Four Good Books for German Freethinkers.

We can supply, in the German language, the following four books which everyone knows to be good:

"The Mistakes of Moses," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

"Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen H. Gardner, 50 cents.

"The Gods," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 25 cents.

"Miracles and Miracle-Workers," by John Peck, 20 cents.

These are neatly printed, bound in paper covers, and are complete. Our German-reading friends should circulate these widely.

Has Mr. Ellis Been Converted?

The following queer teaching for a Freethinker is from the "Boys' and Girls" department of Secular Thought of October 7th:

"Those who deny man's fallen and sinful state, and teach that the human race is constantly progressing, have many difficult things to explain. . . ."

"There is no true progress except where God is feared and his word is obeyed. The dream of human advancement without God is a delusion and a snare. Assyria, Babylon, Egypt, and Rome show how wickedness ends in desolation. And every nation that lives to-day without God and his word is a standing proof of the same truth. But let the gospel reach the most degraded nation on earth and immediately there is progress, improvement, prosperity, and civilization. T. DARLEY ALLEN."

We should like to know what church Mr. Ellis has joined?

Agents Wanted.

We believe that not only can good be done but money made by any Liberal who will canvass for our book "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." In fact we know one man who worked at it but a few hours weekly and sold nearly fifty copies in a month. The price is low; everybody knows the Old Testament stories, and nearly everybody would like a book applying nineteenth-century wit and knowledge to them. People like to laugh. Reverence for the Old Testament tales has largely disappeared and jokes at the expense of Jonah and Joseph and Esau and Samson and David, and the other worthies of unsavory reputation, are keenly appreciated. It seems to us that the book will sell at sight. It does here in the store. Liberals out of employment will find this a good way to make an honest dollar.

Terms to agents sent upon application.

"STROMSBURG, NEB., Oct. 22.—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Osceola, the county seat of Polk county, resolved itself last night into a White Cap committee to chastise several young women of that city whose morals did not meet the approval of the union. Decoys were used, and five young women were terribly beaten, one becoming insensible. Two of the victims escaped from their captors after their clothes had been torn off in the struggle. The White Caps were composed of prominent people of the city. Eleven of them were recognized and arrested. They will have a preliminary examination to-morrow. Several are in jail."

The mobocratic spirit is not confined to the South, and the resolution against lynching adopted by the Freethought Federation may be read and pondered with profit in all parts of the country. These Woman's Christian Temperance Union females had better cut out the second section of their corporate name; the man of whose name it is a derivativ set the example for a different treatment of unfortunate women, as they will know if they take the trouble to read their New Testaments, if they have any. The dear Christian people are great sticklers for law when it embodies their narrow notions, but when it comes to regulating the morals of their neighbors they all at once become as oblivious to "law and order," and humanity, as the most ignorant, irresponsible, and frenzied savages.

What a "present help" God is! "Ask and ye shall receive"—death, if man cannot save. In the late terrible railroad accident at Battle Creek, Mrs. Charles Van Dusen was held in one of the wrecked cars. Her body hung out of the window, but "her limbs were pinioned by the heavy framework of the seat. Thus held, roasting from her feet up, she pleaded and begged for the help that those outside were powerless to give." Then she folded her hands and prayed; "this drove the crowd frantic," but they could not save her. "Despite her terrible agony she retained consciousness to the last, and as the flames crept up, and surrounded her she called out her name and address and those of her friends to be notified. 'I am a teacher in the Methodist Sunday-school at Sprout Brock, N. Y.,' she cried; 'say I died like a Christian.' Then the side of the car gave out, and she fell back into the flames." This poor woman's pitiful prayer does not appear to have driven God frantic, as it did the crowd, which proves that man is less cruel than God, or that God is a myth, and prayer is a futile manifestation of superstition. Christianity is a baleful and accursed delusion. When this tortured Christian teacher appealed for help to those gathered about they suffered intolerably because they could not rescue her. Let us suppose, however, that they could have saved her, but would not. Christians no less than Infidels would have denounced them for their atrocious heartlessness, and if they had escaped lynching they would have been fortunate.

Yet if Christianity is true God could have saved his child and servant, but he coldly refused to pass her "through the fire unhurt." What have the Christians to say of his criminal inaction? Will they denounce him as they would have denounced men? Or will they grovel in the dust and abjectly mumble "Thy will be done"? Are their brains paralyzed and withered into utter nothingness by the poison of supernaturalism?

We do not wish to precipitate another panic or "object-lesson" upon the country, but it is perfectly true that there are a number of our subscribers whose time has expired who have not paid us. And it is perfectly true also that there are some people down-town to whom we owe money whom we have not paid. But it will be perfectly easy to even this thing up if those subscribers will stop at the post-office and buy a money order for $3 and mail it here. If they meet a neighbor on their way who doesn't take the paper but wants it, make the money order $5 and it goes for a year to both. But please remember that the down-town fellows here are hard up.

The Devil Necessary to Preachers.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: I am a poor, broken-down preacher. I have worked in the gooseberry patch of the Lord for nigh on to thirty-five years, and helped to bury many a goose snatched from the beggarly elements of sin and folly.

But now my profession is gone. The devil is dead! The goose that laid the golden egg (the heathen call it "aig") is gone from the pulpit, and this knocks the life-interest out of preaching. It also knocks the devil out of my bread and butter.

I believe in dreams. So does my congregation. I taught them in that faith. I had to, because Joseph dreamt about Mary. So much the worse. You see, I dreamt one night that I saw the angel Gabriel and the angel Mike, and the angel Abraham catch the old boy peeping over the gates of paradise to see if any of the United States Senators had slipped in past St. Peter; and they ran out and caught Satan by the tail, and held him while Gabriel broke one of his horns off and stabbed him in the belly six times, and ripped him up the back and tore his liver out in true heavenly style; and he kicked the bucket several times like the devil, and then died soon after.

The dream was so vivid that I told it to my congregation, and they told it all over town, and everybody believes it just as firmly as I do myself, and now my pews are empty.

They all go on the plan of "No devil, no need to pray any more, or pay any more, or listen to what the preacher has to say any more."

I tell you, Mr. Editor, my church lost its very foundation—ground-work—basis—lost the whole system and entrails out of the plan of redemption when the people thought the devil was dead.

I wish I had not told them. I wish I had not dreamed it. I wish I could persuade them that dreams do not amount to anything, only when people dream such things that help to keep the devil and the church united and brings in the preacher's salary sure pop.

Oh, what will become of the Christian and pagan church, if the common people get to believing in my dream! Oh, what shall we do to be saved, and get paid for telling the people what to do to be saved, if the devil is really dead? O dear old devil, come back to life, or we poor preachers will have short pickings from this on!

Who is going to pay us to preach about heaven and glory and golden harps, if the news gets out that the big bugaboo is dead? They may come and listen to the preaching, to be sure, but they won't pay in worth a continental, so they won't.

Oh, dear, dear! if somebody does not come and assure me that the dear old devil is still alive and helping us to drive sinners into the fold—scaring them in, so to speak—I shall go rip-roaring crazy and stab myself in the belly with a fence-rail!

J. Ward Diehl, of Watsontown, Pa., advised me to write to THE TRUTH SEEKER, as you fellows have been after the devil with a sharp stick for ever so long, and know all about him.

I must have him back again! I must re-establish the old faith in my dear congregation that the blessed old boy is still healthy, and standing behind the church to catch the people that do not pay in promptly and feed poor preachers on yellow-legged chickens.

You might as well expect a watch to run and keep correct time without a mainspring as to expect a church to go on collecting nickels from Christians without a good reliable devil.

Oh, give me back the devil, or my profession is gone up the spout forever! Ex-REV. JACOB HUFF.
Grand Junction, Col.

The Rise of Christ.

[A more original or succinct account of this event has rarely been given. Its origin is as singular as the account itself. The writer is a doctor of law of great attainments, and holding an official position in a well-known English town, himself a Conservative and a leader of Conservatives, who are mostly as bigoted in piety as in politics. Yet the bold writer casts the following extraordinary statement into the midst of them. It was done in the course of an argument in favor of their political prejudices against Mr. Gladstone's great Home Rule bill. It would seem that there must be greater latitudinarianism in the center of political orthodoxy than is commonly supposed. The learned doctor's kinsmen were related to Thomas Paine's great friend, Olio Rickman. This may account for the courage and thoroughness of the opinions which follow, but this does not diminish the strangeness of their expression under the circumstances I have named.—G. J. HOLYOAKE.]

The Christian superstition consists of a huge mass of legendary tales incrusting a small nucleus of fact, which, of itself, would have been too insignificant to be termed historical, but which may be conjectured to have been about as follows: The successors of Alexander the Great had long been waging desultory wars against the Semitic Syrian tribes, including the Jews, all refractory to the spread of Greek culture. To this kind of warfare the Romans succeeded, after they had absorbed various dominions carved out of the Macedonians' empire. Judea was vanquished by Pompey and received Roman governors. But a state of dissaffection and unrest prolonged itself for long after, much as the same condition has continued in Ireland after its absorption by Great Britain. A young man inspired with these species of dissaffection, but in whom mental excitement had passed the bounds of sanity, became possessed of the hallucination that he was destined to overthrow the Roman rule and re-establish the ancient kingdom of David. He was a home-ruler of his age and nation. His attempt of course failed. He was impaled upon a cross, but whether his wounds were mortal has been doubted, and, for the present purpose, the question is unimportant. What is of importance is that among the excited and credulous populace of the Levant he obtained a following, and this destructive superstition, to borrow the words of the Roman historian, continued to ferment, expanded about the close of the Antonine era into great dimensions, and installed itself as the state religion. But its triumph was bought by the ruin of ancient civilization. The thousand years of its unquestioned supremacy, from Constantine until the invention of printing and the dawn of the Reformation, are known as the Dark Ages. Thought in every form of development was prostrate under the Christian faith. The Protestant Reformation made the first breach in the huge edifice of medieval superstition. It is not needful to value this event higher than by saying that it made the first great rift in the dark pall of superstition and credulity, and that the rays of nature and reason streamed in upon men through the rents and fissures which the Reformation had made, and have kindled the torch of progress upon various fields of human activity, scientific, political, and economical.

Churchly Purpose and Performance.

It is quite suggestive that the associate of Melville Stone in his very dubious Associated Press schemes, is Victor Lawson (nee Larsen), of the Chicago Record, the Chicago daily which has the doubtful distinction among the papers of that city of opposing the Sunday opening of the Fair. Lawson is one of the two members of the local directory who voted to accept the impudent condition which Congress sought to impose.

In any case, efforts should be made locally and nationally to stop this un-Christian, un-American, unnecessary Sunday work in the mails. In scores of towns local appeals to conscience and humanity, and then by petition, to the Postmaster-General, have resulted in the Sabbath-closing of the post-office. Let this be done all along the line. And where the office cannot be closed at once, let all who claim to be Christian or humane be urged to have no part in the Sunday work on either side of the delivery windows. Let postal employees insist on their rights of conscience in the courts. And let us renew the mighty petition to Congress against Sunday mails and Sunday trains, a petition which represented an even larger constituency (more Catholics and more labor unions) than the victorious World's Fair petition. Those petitions can be brought out of Congressional archives anew whenever the people are ready to re-inforce them by a broadside of letters. Let the Woman's Christian Temperance Union once more lead on in this reform, and let all the friends of the Lord's day and the rest day follow up our series of victories in the World's Fair contest with this one of yet more permanent benefit. "Awake, awake, Deborah; arise, Barak, and lead thy captivity captive."—Christian Statesman.

Communications.

Idiocy in Finance.

Our friend, John Peck, in his "Friendly Chat with Brayton and Reed," remarks that he has "written quite a little on land, financial and tariff reforms, and that he enters into THE TRUTH SEEKER discussion on finance in order that people may not be led away from the truth." This motive is entirely praiseworthy, but one should take due care that he is not in error himself, before attempting to instruct others. This Mr. Peck has neglected to do. When, for instance, he changed the phraseology of Mr. Brayton's assertion that "one man's right is as good to get and hold property as another's," into the statement that "one man's right to rob and plunder is as good as another's," he does not change the sense in the slightest degree, for no man has a "right" to work injustice against another. "When a half-dozen men can meet anywhere and stop the output of coal," and thus raise, arbitrarily and needlessly, the price thereof, they are transgressing the law of justice under cover of the law, which by taxing unused coal lands at farm land rates, enables them to keep the production of coal in their own hands. So also of the Senator who can "touch a button and send oil up fifty per cent." If the oil land held out of use by the Standard Oil Company were taxed at its real value, there would soon be more oil producers, because even the vast wealth of that monopoly would be inadequate to stand the huge expense. Again, when Mr. Peck says that "Ernest Seyd came over from England with half a million dollars, bought out the American Congress and demonetized silver, making the bonds payable in gold, thus adding millions to their value," he pays a poor compliment to his countryman, flies in the face of logic, and states what is not a fact. For in the first place, the average American congressman has too high an estimation of his own worth to allow himself to be bribed with about a four-hundredth part of half a million dollars. Next, there was no occasion to spend money to bring about the so-called demonetization of silver, for that metal, being undervalued some three per cent by the ratio of 15.98 to 1, had not been coined for many years, had in fact demonetized itself, being worth more as bullion than as coin. Besides, such silver as had been coined up to 1873 was not demonetized, but passed at its face value as it always had. Lastly, no well informed person now believes, or has ever believed, that Ernest Seyd, or any other person, has ever brought the amount stated, or any other, for any such purpose as the bribing of the American Congress. This will appear the moment Mr. Peck attempts to marshal his proofs, for there are none now, and none have ever existed. The charge arose in the superheated brains of those who believe that those who differ with them cannot possibly differ from conviction, and that therefore they must necessarily have been bribed to do what they knew was wrong.

Mr. Peck says further that the effect of Ernest Seyd's half million dollars was to make the bonds payable in gold, to which it may be replied that the conditions of sale demanded that they should be paid in "coin." Which everyone knew—there being no silver coin in existence, or very little—meant gold coin; and the only doubt which ever arose in the minds of the people, arose from the inflation of the currency, first, by the issues of greenbacks, and later, by the addition of the notes of the national banks at the close of the war, when the necessities of the South for currency would probably have brought the greenbacks up to par. Silver had nothing whatever to do with the case.

Mr. Peck falls into so many misstatements of fact that it would be impossible to correct them all without making unconscionable demands on THE TRUTH SEEKER'S space. I will therefore turn my attention from the dogmatic to the supposedly argumentative portions of the gentleman's paper. "Wherever paper money has been tried, it has produced prosperous times, as it did here in 1865," we are told. The so-called prosperous times were caused—not by paper money, but by the withdrawal of something like two millions of men from industrial pursuits into the army, thus reducing the pressure for employment and raising wages. But these wages were largely fictitious, for the depreciation of the paper money of the country had caused prices of commodities to rise to about double their normal amount. So it is advisable to divide wages by two if one wishes to compare the wages of 1865 with those of the present time. Again, when France paid Germany that $1,100,000, did she pay with "full legal-tender paper money" or with money made of metal? Of course with metal money, or at least with commodities measured by a currency having an intrinsic basis, which simply proves that all money must finally be judged by some generally recognized standard, no matter what the fiat of the power which created it might have been or may be. Mr. Peck says that he thinks that paper is more valuable than gold, because we can do better without the latter than without the former. Mr. Peck has chosen his terms badly, for he evidently refers to utility and not to value. A discussor of financial questions should be more careful. He thinks also that Congress can make a paper dollar perform all the functions of a gold one, which is true only to a limited extent. If Congress puts out no more paper dollars than would equal the amount of gold that would circulate if there were no paper notes, such paper money will be equal to gold. But this is so, not because of the Congressional fiat, but on account of the need of the country for a circulating medium. When a gold dollar, bought with paper dollars made by Congress, costs $2.85, which would buy the most, a gold dollar or a paper one?

When Mr. Peck says that it does not matter what the material may be of which money is made, if it be convenient, he makes convenience the standard by which money is judged instead of value, which latter is the prime consideration among civilized people, and the assertion is simply ridiculous. But Mr. Peck can be more absurd still, as he clearly shows by the following: "We want to know the length of a stick of timber, and lay on the rule. The rule need not be of gold or silver in order to measure accurately." This would work all right if no exchange of the measure for the commodity ever took place; but suppose Mr. Peck were asked to exchange the thing measured for the yard-stick with which the measuring was done. What would probably be his answer? So of his two cows—one worth $50 and the other $20—which he says have not their value affected, no matter what kind of money is paid for them, because "the money simply expresses the value of the cows, which is the true function of money." If Mr. Peck were offered Confederate money in exchange for his cows, it is probable that he would muster up intelligence enough to decline the offer, although the fiat lunatic might point out in Mr. Peck's essay the assertion that such money, being called dollars, sufficed to accurately measure the value of his bovines. And he thinks he has been thinking when he writes thus, too.

So of Mr. Peck's remarks anent the trade dollar, which had more silver in it than the standard dollar contains, but which, nevertheless, would pass only for its bullion worth. Is it possible that Mr. Peck does not know that the trade dollars were not exchangeable at the public treasuries for any other kind of money, while the standard dollars are so exchangeable for any kind of money? This is all that made the latter worth one hundred cents while the former was worth only eighty-five cents, not sixty, as Mr. Peck states. The government coined the trade dollars to order, and never was responsible for their redemption.

"I am leading you along just as I would a Christian, from the errors of superstition into the broad light of truth and reason," quoth Mr. Peck, whereas it turns out upon investigation that Mr. Peck bases quite as many conclusions regarding money upon hearsay, surmise, and preconceived notions, as the Christian does of his alleged arguments in favor of the fiat creation of material things by the supposed Almighty. Truly saith Mr. Peck when he remarks that the trouble arises from the fact that "men do not arrive at conclusions by a course of reasoning, but derive their financial as well as their theological beliefs through accidental contact with those who hold them." Mr. Peck should shun in the future any contact with bi-metallic or silver fiends of any grade. E. O. ROSCOE.

Mythology and Economics.

It was refreshing to get a word from that sturdy foe of religious shams and intolerance, John Peck, upon the subject of land, labor, and finance. He speaks with no uncertain meaning, and his brain seems as clear upon our great industrial misdirections as upon the mythologic impositions. It is not my purpose, however, to recall his general arguments; but simply to point out a mischievous superstition which seems to have escaped his attention, the "legal tender" fantasy.

Now, really what has this to do with his sound and admirable presentation of the finance question? If the government affects the circulating medium as to stability of its purchasing power, it is solely because the credit of the nation is supposed to be good. The early issue of treasury notes were not legal tender either full or partial. Nor are national bank notes, silver or even gold certificates. Yet all of these pass in preference to coin. Our greenback declined to forty cents on the dollar, while the now-legal tender treasury note remained at a premium with gold, simply because the government did not refuse to receive it in payment of duties.

The greenbacks were raised at par, simply because of John Sherman's questionable action in offering to receive them in payment of duties. They are not even now a legal tender for the bonded debt. This completely shows that legal tender or fiat gives no purchasing power to money, and gives to it no assistance in effecting exchanges, or measuring values. It is simply related to the theological conception of morals, with legal enforcement—powerless for good; almost omnipotent for evil. Within this generation it has canceled millions of debt in forty cent dollars. In the same time it has created billions of debt, public and private, at an average of fifty, which the law compels to be paid at one hundred. The greenback certainly furnishes no argument in favor of legal tender. It enables the financier to exact two days' labor for every one received, two bushels of wheat for each bushel had. The benefit of the greenback issue would have been greater, and the evil of it would have been far less, had it been a simple treasury note, like the first issue.

Our United States Supreme Court sunk itself to a low level when it decided the legal-tender law applicable to paper money. The Constitution expressly prohibits the states from making anything but gold and silver a legal tender, or from impairing the validity of contracts, both of which this does. But if paper can be made a constitutional legal tender, then the states are compelled to enforce powers specifically prohibited to them.

The logic of that court in rendering such decision hardly rises to a level with that of "the citizen of African descent," who, wishing to purchase a horse, offered his note in payment, and, when asked what he would pay in when the note was due, replied, "Why, gib you another note, ob course." Were our bank notes legal tender, the banks need only "gib another note." The gold and silver certificates could be cancelled by another certificate. Could warehouse certificates be made legal tender—and they sometimes perform the functions of money—they could be satisfied by being duplicated. They would soon become valueless in commerce, however, and only perform the office of canceling debts, without the power to convey any actual wealth.

But it is said: We must have legal tender money, in order to collect debts. I do not think that laws for forcibly collecting debts necessary to any healthy business; but a legal tender is not needed to the enforcement of such a collection. If a man fails to pay a debt, it can in no case be collected except from his assets. Whatever is found in his possession, not exempt from attachment, could be taken and accounted for, not at a price realized at a forced sale, but at the current market rate, not in legal tender, but in current money. Legal tender compels the debtor to sacrifice his goods to get current money, and then his money to get legal tender.

Gold and silver certificates are good enough currency, and without law would circulate for the commercial value of those metals. They might not keep at a parity, but that would work no hardship to anyone. An unvarying standard of value is a patent impossibility. Without the legal standard, gold and silver coin would pass at their market value, relative to other commodities. The most stable and imperishable metal perhaps would be at once recognized by commerce as the most suitable single standard, and by that all other values would be determined, but would not be required in the discharge of debt, and therefore could not be monopolized.

Legal tender has no effect in determining the purchasing power of money. Its only operation is against the lender in a forced loan, and against the borrower in a forced sale to convert his assets into legal money at whatever loss. Neither of these powers are necessary in any reciprocal and equitable exchange, and can be excused only in the exigencies of war, when all "laws are silent"—they are the relics of the most barbarous despotisms.

There can be no excuse for the principle even as regards metallic money, which is supposed to represent value and to contain it as well. If gold is the nearest to the invariable standard of value, it needs no law to make it so. That a law is required by its friends, is proof that it is not invariable in the absence of law, and that the law can work only injustice and promote advantage-taking.

So far as I know I was the first to point out the pernicious working of legal tender money. In 1848, reviewing Edward Kellogg's "Labor and Other Capital," I suggested that notwithstanding his able discussion of the subject he had by no means made it clear that the great evil of our monetary system "does not rest in the assumption of the government to make any one thing a legal tender to the exclusion of all others, thereby making it subject to monopoly and to work oppressively upon the unsuspecting and unfortunate."

Legal tender laws in finance are what union of state and church is in politics, and quite as subversive of human interest and progress, and the priesthood of mammon and the worship of the almighty (legal tender) dollar are not less blighting to human hope than is the priesthood and worship of religious creeds and idols. Profit, rent, and interest, by enabling the land- and money-holder to plunder labor through economic superstitions are twin brothers to tithes and church livings and the "gain of godliness" generally. But for the first the last would fail and intolerance and persecution ceasing to be profitable would cease to be.

Then let the "search light of science" be turned full upon existing relations of land to labor, of money to exchange. It has been effectual in banishing the owls and bats, the goblins and ghouls of superstition; it will drive the devouring beasts of privileged power and demonic class rule, to the utter darkness of their barbaric dens.

J. K. INGALLS.

Mr. Brayton Again Enlightened.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: I think "The Rich Man Defended" needs an answer. No doubt abler men will answer it, but every question, the more it is discussed from all sides, the better it will become understood. When we closer examine the claim that all men have equal right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, we will find that this principle is a dead letter, a delusion, at present. To exemplify it, take two new-born infants, one from a rich family and the other from a poor one. A person may find no difference between them, and could not tell one from the other. The rich man's baby, say a boy, is brought up with the best nursing, most constant care, under the advice of the highly learned doctors; it receives the best-selected food, is dressed in the costliest cloths, and lives in the latest-improved, ventilated house with the greatest comfort; he will be sent to school, college, and university, at whatever cost. Afterward this favored one can follow any pursuit to his taste, or idle his lifetime away in following recreations, from pleasures to pleasures, good or bad ones as the inclination may lead, the result—the idle brain will become the devil's workshop; for this reason there are many times more bad men and criminals among the rich than we hear of or imagine. Now, consider the lot which awaits the poor man's baby son. It is unavoidably neglected, because his mother has to do her housework, or, worse still, work for a living. In sickness the doctor cannot be called except when it is oftentimes too late, or they must go to the dispensary. What do the doctors there care whether the sick baby lives or one more goes in death to the grave, which, after all, I think is best for such a little human being. If he lives and grows up, he will have to go to school as long as the law requires, but not longer, for he will have to go to work, and bring home his small earnings to pool into the family's expenses. All this time and even through all his lifetime, he may not get even enough bad food, and is insufficiently clothed and unhealthily housed. If he has learned a trade, is frugal, and has saved some money in a savings bank, how often has it not happened that just such a rich, pampered person of the above class has made away with it? For these rich men constitute and are the custodians of the poor man's savings. Of course I do not say that all rich men are bad, but they are not my idols.

Now, every intelligent man knows that education promotes knowledge, and knowledge as well as wealth is power; therefore, in the face of these facts, where does the equal right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness come in? Not in fact, not in theory, nor even in a court of law, as we are made to believe, for do we not see the rich man's influence will generally get him free of his accused crime, while the poor man has little or no influence and few friends to help; with no dilatory justice he is sent to prison.

From what I read in the papers I believe there are more rich women shoplifters than poor ones, but not one in ten is prosecuted to the end. Where, then, is boasted equality?

In time of war the government calls for volunteers; if not enough are forthcoming, then it takes recourse to conscription. Why not pursue the same way with the sinews of war, money? Why not ask for contributions, or if it fails, take the money by force, the same as is done with men? Is not wealth better esteemed and protected than poor blood? The poor man has to go to war; the rich man buys his substitute; and when they return they also have to help pay the borrowed money, and are always comparatively higher taxed than the rich which latter class are too well known here as the tax dodgers.

The government enacted a homestead law. It has done great good, but how much more of the land has not gone to the rich railroad schemer?

Has Mr. Brayton ever heard and considered how many hundred millions of dollars the government has and does still lend to the banks, to the rich men, without interest? And not one dollar the poor man can borrow from it. What right has a government to help a rich man establish a big plant, a big concern, with the damned tariff tax wrung from all others of us citizens?

Then when full grown these big concerns combine themselves into so-called trusts to suppress all competition and dictate their own prices in buying and selling their products to us consumers.

Why and by what moral right does a just government help the already rich—the manufacturers, the mine owners, the sugar planters, the bankers and capitalists—to become millionaires? What can be the motive of our legislators in making such unjust laws? They are not stupid as a class. Is it not that they are shareholders in these concerns, and therefore legislate for their own interest, and the majority of the people are wilfully ignorant? There are many more of Mr. Brayton's mind, that the rich man's money built up all our industries, but know not that they have done it with the people's money. It would be better we had ten small factories for every very large one, and ten owners for them instead of one. If these factories and mills were built and grew up in a natural way according to the laws of demand and supply we would not hear so often of strikes and over-production.

I do not blame the rich men as men, I blame the government, our legislators, for it. I blame society itself, for it cannot rotate out of its established custom; it has no desire for innovation else it would have changed it long ago for the better welfare of all. No one will deny that it would be desirable to have no paupers, no beggars; that that country is the most contented and happy where the wealth is most equally distributed among its citizens. To bring about or near to us such a state we need, in my opinion, two kinds of taxes only, and all others, every one now in existence, should be abolished. For our local, city, county, and state expenses, a tax on ground value, all improvements freed; and for our general government expenses, a graded income tax, which is the most just tax, because borne only by those able to pay. Our present tax system is a shame for this age of civilization.

New York Sept. 2, 1893. FREDERICK KOEZLY.

The Church's Attitude to Labor.

Regarding the church's attitude toward the laboring class, Bishop Fallows said, in his address before the Labor Congress at Chicago, as reported in the Chicago Tribune of August 30th:

I want the laboring man to get rid of the idea that the church in any way or manner stands opposed to the progress and welfare of the laboring man.

That is just what you want, and just what the church wants, but it is not what the laboring man wants. What the laboring man wants, is to get that idea inground and grained in the very fibers of his being. The laboring man has labored too long under a delusion, the outrageous delusion, the outrageous, damnable lie, that the church is the friend of the laborer.

The church a friend of labor! The church has always taught the oppressed to "Love your masters." Serve those that are in authority, for they are placed there by God. I have failed to find a single passage in the Bible which teaches self-improvement, unless that passage was ascribed to Satan. Satan taught to eat of the fruit of the tree of knowledge; but the church teaches, and has ever taught, "Partake not, lest ye be damned."

The laborer has enough, and more than enough, to do to support himself and family, and yet, let me ask, who supports the church? Who builds her architecture—her fine edifices, her mammoth cathedrals, her giant tabernacles? Who frescoes her walls, beautifies her cornices, carpets her aisles? Who purchases her sites, her building material, her stained glass, her gold and silver fixtures? Who fills her coffers? Answer comes from a million tongues,—the laborer. The hollow, sepulchral-voiced answer comes, rumbling up as from the bowels of the earth, from the ghastly lips of the tortured, delving miner there,—the laborer. The answer comes, mingled with sighs and tears, laden with the noxious fumes of the kitchen and the wash-tub, permeated with hunger's groans, in a voice in which is heard the heart-throbs of woe, the hard breathing of despair, the ebbing blood of want,— the laborer. Answer comes from the sewing girl, the factory girl, the servant girl,—the laborer. Answer comes from the professor in the college and the drudge in the hovel,—the laborer.

While the laborer is clothed in rags and fed upon husks which swine might well refuse to eat, his master, his God-sent master (I came near saying his God-damned master), is clothed in purple and fine linen and fares sumptuously every day.

The poor must give up their pittance. And who is benefited by this blood money?—for it is blood money. Money which is wrung from the toil-hardened hands of labor is stained with the laborer's heart's blood. It is robbery—downright and damnable robbery. He who takes from another money, or the equivalent thereof, without giving an equivalent in return is a robber. Then the church is a robber, for she takes moneys and buildings and lands; she takes the works of art, sculptures and paintings; she takes finely caparisoned horses and equipages—but why enumerate? She takes any and every thing with a moneyed value, and in return she gives—nothing. And who is the gainer? An insignificant handful of lazy, lying hypocrites—the clergy. And the clergy is the friend of labor, is it? Ah, my laboring friend, do not fool yourself. The clergyman will eat up your sustenance, prey upon your purse-strings, and in the end seduce your wife and daughter; then leave you with your life blasted for this world and in your soul a fiendish fear that you will be damned for all eternity.

Bishop Fallows said, to prove that the ministers of the church were not antagonistic to the real interests of the laboring class, that no less than nine ministers were down as speakers on the program. Certainly; we expected them to force themselves forward with their usual arrogance; we expected them to be present to retard with their presence and their lies all endeavors for advancement. We did not expect the power of the church to be unfelt; and so long as the church wields a power in the land, so long may we expect the bigots to put themselves forward undesired and unasked to retard all progression toward the relief of labor. It has ever been the case. No improvement, no advancement, was ever attempted but the church put her veto upon it. To be sure, when some bold spirit established a scientific fact in spite of the church and her creed, in spite of her dignitaries and dogmas, then the church cried, "We did it! We did it!"

Of all the achievements of science, all the improvements in nature, all the wonders that have been brought to light in the heavens above or in the earth beneath, the church says, "We did it." "Jesus wept," and well he might. Was there ever a more contemptible, more damnable lie? Thus, she robs the laborer, not only of his hard earned pittance, but she filches from his honest brow his laurels also. Who felled our forests, which for centuries had stood in majestic beauty undisturbed by the echo of the woodman's ax sounding through the moss-strewn aisles? Who cleared those extensive jungles, and made them fit for man to inhabit? Who builds our cities, builds our bridges, digs our canals, makes our railroads? Who delves to the heart of the mountain to bring her treasures thence? Who dives to the depth of the restless deep to snatch from its hungry maw deposits precious to human needs? Who gives to commerce its impetus? None but a liar or a fool would say the church.

It is the sons and daughters of labor.

The church has been a blood-sucking parasite, attached to the most vulnerable part of the body of labor, ever since the beginning of the Dark Ages. The church is, and has ever been, an incubus upon labor; and yet she claims to be the very power that rolls the wheels of time. She has ever held the laboring classes in a grip of iron; and thus she ever will, until science and Freethought crush the heads of the hydra-headed monster.

The Tribune, in its account of the Labor Congress, says; "There were no professional agitators present; they would have found the atmosphere uncongenial. . . . The church was well represented; for no less than nine ministers were present to take active part in the proceedings."

I want to ask any candid man or woman which had the best right there, the honest agitators or the dishonest ministers?

The Tribune plainly shows its colors; but I do not believe its colors are the colors of the Congress. My opinion is, with the body of the Congress, that the ministers were there, like the skunk in the hen-house, barely by sufferance. They were there to mingle their foul, contaminating breath with the pure breath of honest toil. No doubt they had a call from God to be there, and had I been there, had felt a call to kick the fat part of their anatom out of the hall, and the rest of their worthless carcasses with it.

Bishop Fallows said: "Fellow-laborers, we are with you, and the church is ready to stretch out the hand of helpfulness to help every person if he is starving." Ah, indeed! No doubt the bishop will tell you that when starvation stared thousands of people in the face in Chicago (now and in weeks back) the church, the Christian church, was the first to come forward and offer aid to the suffering. But it was not the goody-goody Christians; it was the despised Jew. He set the example. The despised Jew, who is scourged from one land and driven from another; who is persecuted in every land; who has been a hissing and a by-word to all Christian sects for eighteen hundred years. He is the first to come forward to offer succor; but, mark my words, the church will rob him of the honor. The church will say, as she ever has, "We did it."

The three worst enemies of labor are: the clergy, monopoly, and class legislation. These are the worst, and of the three the clergy stands at the head.

JAMES POE CRYDER.

Happiness, and the Way to be Happy.

"Pleasure and Progress." By Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B. New York: The Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents. This is No. 34 of the Truth Seeker Library.

It is to be hoped that no one who may note the title of this book and the name of the author will be deterred from procuring and reading the volume merely because the author is not already famous in literature. Every writer has to begin, and sometimes the maiden effort is the best of all. In this instance, Dr. Lorentz could easily write many books which would each be greatly inferior to this, and yet all of them be well worth reading. However, we need not waste time in conjecturing what he will do hereafter for our instruction and entertainment. Sufficient for to-day is the delight thereof when it is of such refined and exquisite nature as that furnished by "Pleasure and Progress."

On the title-page of this book the author states that it is "An attempt to prove that the pursuit of pleasure is the sine qua non of intellectual, moral, and social development, and that the promotion of pleasure is the duty of philanthropy and statesmanship." In the preface he very neatly and succinctly indicates the purpose he had in view when he began his task and the methods he pursued in accomplishing it. This often tedious and profitless portion of a book is made to speak as a living personality, informed with intellect and feeling in touch with nature at her best. "This book is written for the people by one of them. Its purpose is to promote the highest happiness of humanity. In its pages I assail not persons but practices. I respect persons for their good intentions, even while I ridicule their beliefs. I may be convicted of error but certainly not of malice. It is because I love humanity that I hate the conditions that in my judgment retard its progress. If I succeed in impressing useful truths, I shall be happy. If anybody demonstrates that I am in error, I will esteem him as my benefactor."

Book I., analyzing "Pleasure," is subdivided into seven chapters. These treat respectively of the Sources of Pleasure, Material Pleasures, Ideal Pleasures, Social Pleasures, the Pleasures of the Savage, the Barbarian, and the Civilized, Genesis of Religions, and Christianity.

Book II., devoted to "Intellectual Development," consists of Chapter I., outlining the Purpose of Life; Chapter II., which, under the head of Material Pleasures, tells us about the Appetites and Health, and Sensations and Knowledge; Chapters III., IV., and V. explain the nature of Ideal Pleasures, under the sub-heads of Knowledge, Reason, and Character; Chapter VI. takes us into the realm of Social Pleasures, and Chapter VII. deals with Pedagogical Despotism.

Book III., teaching the science of Moral Development, has Chapter I., Morality; Chapter II., Material Pleasures—Prudence; Chapter III., Material Pleasures—Refinement; Chapter IV., Ideal Pleasures—Foresight; Chapter V., Ideal Pleasures—Civilization, under which we find a sketch of Civilization, and Christianity and Civilization; Chapter VI., under the general caption of Social Pleasures, discourses upon the Power of Public Opinion, and Sympathy, while Chapter VII. speaks frankly of Vice Caused by Restraint.

In Book IV. the reader is taken into the world of Social Development. Chapter I., entitled Progress, deals with the Law of Individual Sovereignty; Chapter II. has three sections, one devoted to Protection, another to Capitalism, and the third to Socialism; Chapter III. tells of the Condition of Agriculture; Chapter IV. shows the relations of the Public Schools to Socialism; Chapter V. sets the metes and bounds of the Province of Government, and in Chapter VI. Dr. Lorentz gives us his opinion as to what is the Cause and what is the Consequence of and the Remedy for Our Social Disorder.

Writing most graphically of ideal pleasures, our author necessarily has something interesting to say of illusions. He gives many instances of the same, and we reproduce here one paragraph which narrates three incidents illustrating the fact that an idea may perfectly counterfeit reality:

Even when awake an idea will counterfeit reality, if it attracts the attention to a degree that causes insensibility of surroundings. A friend of mine heard a lecturer describing a hunting scene so vividly that persons in the audience rose to see the flight of the game and the pursuit of the hounds. Similar effects were produced by a preacher's graphic description of a storm at sea. Among his auditors was a sailor, who arose and trumpeted out the commands appropriate on a ship in distress. More delightful than either of these instances is one related by Sir John Herschel. A village blacksmith became the happy possessor of a long but interesting story. During a series of summer evenings, he sat on his anvil and read it aloud to a crowd of open-mouthed listeners. The events of the story excited universal interest. The perplexities of the heroine elicited universal sympathy. The achievements of the hero provoked universal approval. Finally when there was a union of the hero and heroine, who in the vicissitudes of the story are unwillingly separated, the enthusiastic villagers procured the key of the church and rang the bell in jubilee. Now in all these cases, the persons who escaped deception did so only because they retained a consciousness of surroundings. They saw the incompatibility between a stage and a hunting ground, between boisterous breakers and a crowded church, between a grimy shop and the romantic situation in which occurs the rapturous reunion of two lovers.

Of theology's wild conjectures this is good:

We see clearly now, I think, that error and truth respectively result from poverty and opulence in facts. In the path of life facts are like guide-posts. He who has them can reach his destination with dispatch. But he whose store of facts is small is confused by conjecture. He is constrained to rely on persons of superior knowledge. In past times, these were priests. On commonplace matters, the priests could respond with true and precise answers. On graver matters, they were equally at fault. They, in their turn, resorted to the sacred writings. These were supposed to be depositories of all wisdom. If they could not find a question answered in direct and perspicuous terms, they derived it by interpretation of obscure or ambiguous passages.

A New England congregation was sadly disturbed by dissensions. After vainly endeavoring to compose their differences, they appealed to a venerable clergyman respected far and near for his moderation and wisdom. The clergyman took the matter under advisement, and, after due deliberation, reduced his counsel to writing. At the same time he wrote a letter to his tenant. Inadvertently he directed the congregation's letter to the tenant and the tenant's to the congregation. Upon the receipt of their letter, the people of the congregation were summoned to hear his counsel. It read as follows: "You will see to the repair of the fences, that they be built high and strong, and you will take especial care of the old black bull." At first the people were perplexed. After a painful pause, an individual wiser or more ingenious than the rest volunteered as interpreter. He said that the allusion to the fences was a caution against admitting incongenial members and that the allusion to the old black bull was a warning against the devil, who had recently broken into their fold. The whole congregation was at once enlightened and ardently approved the clergyman's counsels. For centuries the priesthood has sought for knowledge by similar violent constructions. The compendium of their constructions is called theology. The persons who employ this puerile method of investigation are called theologians.

As to the ethical basis of conduct we find much that is valuable in this new book. Here is a specimen of the author's crisp, explicit, convincing argument:

The criterion of conduct is its outcome. If it promotes pleasure, it is moral. If it induces pain, it is immoral. These three sentences constitute the true science of ethics. Their explicitness makes exposition superfluous. Their rationalness places them above the necessity of defense. Their avowal is their vindication. They are confirmed by every dictum of common sense, by every impulse of humanity, and by every purpose of conduct. The business man recognizes their validity by the hopes that are the stimulants of his enterprise. The philanthropist acknowledges their validity by the comfort that is the aim of his benefactions. The statesman acknowledges their validity by the public welfare that is the end of his legislation. Their truth is implied by the abortive careers that are our warnings; by the successful careers that are our examples; by the odium that clings to those who substitute a wail of woe for a shout of joy; by the esteem that attaches to those who chase away tears with smiles. If these statements are not true, we should adore ogres and abhor benefactors. We should emulate a slave-driver, instead of Wendell Phillips; and we should dedicate the monument of Washington to Benedict Arnold.

Happiness is virtue. Conduct that promotes happiness is morality. No one of reputed sense, except theologians, repudiates these doctrines. No one can repudiate them outside of the pulpit or pew and escape imputations on his sanity or sincerity. Even religionists repudiate them only in church. The doctrines fully accord with their practices. They conflict only with religious professions. It is common to see a minister pass from a sumptuous parlor to a gorgeous pulpit and inculcate abstemiousness; or to see one of the laity pass from a banquet to his velvet-lined pew and testify to the merits of abstinence. Such incongruities are mirthful, since they are harmless. They now delude few even of the religionists themselves. The constant assertion of the doctrines of abstinence, however, is a reflection on the intelligence of the times. Although they have been refuted before, I will perform the same office again. Their only force is derived from reiteration. The reiteration of their absurdities is the best means for their eradication.

The idea that suffering is a virtue and self-denial a duty originated when our ancestors were savages. They practiced abstinence to indulge their god. They sacrificed their goods to placate his wrath. They underwent torture to gain his favor. According to their view, abstinence and self-denial prevent greater evils. From such a standpoint, asceticism is neither madness nor folly. The savage practice was justified by savage belief. We, however, continue some of his practices, although we reject his doctrines.

With one more nibble we must reluctantly turn from this table heaped high with delicious and nourishing food:

So I say that the regulations of the church are prompted less by charity than intolerance, less by humanity than persecution. Every one has occasion to see this fact ludicrously illustrated. On a Sunday, a pair of Christians in a carriage will roundly berate the occupants of an excursion train. At noon, as they banquet with friends in a dining-room, they score the excursionists for banqueting in a grove. Again you will see Christians returning from a party after midnight animadverting on the depravity of those returning from a concert saloon. Then again you will see an over-fed lecturer or over-laced lecturer holding forth on the enervating effects of wine-bibbing. They object to vice only that differs from theirs. They arraign not so much debasement as disobedience, not so much dissipation as nonconformity.

All attempts to elevate men by authority are worse than useless. Dictation of conduct is dethronement of judgment. Persecution is more likely to excite rancor than morality. Punishment is more likely to develop fear than principle. Conduct is not moral unless it is a true expression of motive. A good deed may be prompted by fear as well as by virtue. The expression of lofty sentiments may be prompted by hypocrisy as well as by generous impulses. The church, however, excites terror and calls it virtue, compels obedience and calls it morality.

Morality grows only in a state of freedom. The attributes of all animals correspond with their surroundings. Where the fox has enemies, he is sly. In Kamtschatka, where he has no enemies, he is stupid. Where there is water, geese can swim. In some desert parts of South America a goose can swim no better than a hen. Where there is winter, the bee is noted for its providence. In Mexico, where summer is perpetual, it is improvident. So it is with men. Where they must take care of themselves, they are prudent and moral. Where they are controlled by authority, they are ignorant and vicious. All history testifies that where men are most free, they are on the average most enlightened. Where tyranny is the most unquestioned, they are the most ignorant. Where conduct is most untrammelled, it is most moral. Where it is most regulated, it is most vile.

No penworker is always wholly right; Dr. Lorentz is to be debited with some serious mistakes, but it is rarely that a writer gives the world a book which has so much of truth into which is woven so little of error. And the fundamental principles upon which he so strongly insists will shed a clear warning light upon the entrances of the misleading by-paths into which he has occasionally strayed, thus serving to keep in the broad way of logic, justice, and liberty all reasoning men and women who read "Pleasure and Progress," a work which, taken all in all, is, in the judgment of this writer, the best book of the year.

I. C.

The International Congress and Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

The International Congress has exceeded our expectations. It has been a great event. It has united Liberals on a broad platform. There has been no endeavor to limit; but methods have been combined and hereafter there will be more coöperation than ever with wider means of action. The best of feeling prevailed. It was in every respect a representative gathering. From all over the country the leading Liberals were present. The best thought of the best men was presented. The resolutions had the right ring. They were radical and comprehensive.

There will be greater interest and greater enthusiasm than ever, and this is what we need first of all in our Liberal ranks. Napoleon understood this and led his men to battle with martial strains. The churches understand this and depend upon corps d'esprit for their largest successes. Political parties understand that the first necessity of every campaign is enthusiastic feeling. We cannot formulate plans for practical action until first of all we have the means—that is the life—to do it with. Nothing could be more useful than this Congress for it has roused Liberals, it has created a fire among us, and that is just what is wanted more than anything else at the present time. Nothing can be done with a cold, inert, indifferent mass. There must be warmth before there can be movement. It is useless to organize unless you have something to organize with. It is useless to dig a channel unless you have some water to run into it. We must create material before we can put into work the glorious ideal of Freethought.

The Congress has outlined plenty of ways to do something if one only has the disposition, and it is to make the disposition that we have congresses and conventions, and speeches and music. Now that the Congress is over let us utilize the glow and the splendor that has been made for Freethought over the land. Let us take our special work and push it thoroughly. Help the Liberal journals, help the lecturers, talk up the Freethought university, establish science Sunday-schools, circulate pamphlets, write for the press wherever you can, start a reading-room, watch the ecclesiastical enemy and be ready to meet him in the court, in the legislature and at the polls; agitate, educate, and inform and reform wherever you can. That is the way to do. The object of the Congress was to stir your heart like a flame. Now use your brains to the best advantage and put into home work the glorious inspirations of those golden days.

And I desire to crystallize this auspicious Congress into all its wonderful meaning both "before and after." My task is to write a book of which this great International Congress shall be the central point, in which we can read the great lessons of the past and see the glory of the future. This World's Fair is a noble light in human history, and it is for Freethought to take advantage of the splendid occasion to realize its own greatness, its victories in the past, and its powers for the future. What more fitting moment could there be for the unrolling of the panorama of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought?"

This great work opens upon one like a beautiful and boundless day. We see the night and the morning flowing onward into the noonday brightness.

In order to do full justice to this manifold subject, I find I must divide my book into two parts. The first part will deal with Freethought universally—in its world-wide aspects, in the great realms of philosophy, science, literature, education, ethics, government and politics, and the emancipation of woman. In this I can only survey the mountain-tops and broad expanses of human history, connecting them in the one supreme principle of Freethought.

The second part will be more sociable and homelike, for in this I shall take up mainly the organized Freethought of modern times—the Liberal press, secular unions, federations, etc. Organized Freethought is not so wide and high as that unorganized and tremendous power which through the ages has been the potent factor of human progress, lofty and deep as the spirit of man. In order to understand Freethought, it is necessary to look upon it in this two-fold way. Not until the last half century has there been any great important Freethought movement or Freethought press. And in this part of my subject we shall come into a familiar domain. We shall meet comrades and friends, and it will be equally important with the first grand department. It will be a kind of family record, or the history of a company of soldiers who have been through storm and battle. Here we shall meet those with whom we are acquainted, with faces that we know, and in the picture gallery there will not only be those who are famous as lecturers and editors and writers, but representative Freethinkers who in other fields of activity have notably represented Freethought, men of business, captains of industry, pioneers, successful merchants, lawyers, doctors who have always kept their colors flying and in action, have made Freethought respected. It is well to see Freethought not only in writing, in eloquence, in thought, but also in the deed. It is well to thus come into communication with each other, to have a roster of our own ranks, and to know what the Freethinker is, not only in the press and on the platform, but in the varied life of communities. The history of organized Freethought and of those who have been associated with it is peculiarly attractive, and I shall endeavor to make it as complete and valuable as possible. Nothing of this kind has ever been published, and in this respect it will be a splendid souvenir of the International Congress, of the Liberal press, of the various organizations that have struggled and won for human liberty; and of those brave workers who have always been ready to stand up and be counted. The second part in itself, with its pictures, biographies, and histories, will be of great importance to every Freethinker who is in the harness and trying to do something. This will be an expression of the companionship of Freethought. It will cultivate the corps d'esprit. It will be the roll-call of friends and neighbors. The first part of the book will appeal to the universal world as it displays the magnificence of Freethought in all human progress, but the second part will be the home-life of Freethought, its comradeship, its conscious fellowship, its organized material, its spirit bodied forth in united heart and hand.

I shall now devote myself exclusively to the writing of this book, and it will be published at the earliest possible moment. But I shall take time to do justice to the great theme. I desire, however, the names of all who purpose taking the book so that I can enroll them in its pages. Besides, I must have some funds to proceed with, for the getting out of the souvenir edition—as at present planned—will cost at the very least $1,500, and I have to depend on subscribers to furnish the funds. I am now going on to five hundred subscriptions, and I hope for one thousand; and this will make a power for Freethought in the years to come that will be of vast influence.

In addition to the names already published are the following:

Judge C. B. Waite (5 copies).	Jasper J. Brown.
Frank McClure.	R. C. Jacobs.
M. L. Sims.	E. C. Sly.
C. K. Spencer.	Wm. S. Dowling.
W. T. Galloway.	G. W. Doane.
Joseph Atkins.	W. W. Walker.
S. B. Munn.	B. C. Murray.
H. M. Buell.	Mrs. M. F. Carver.
Wm. Whittick.	Leroy Dutton.
Franklin G. Wells.	Geo. H. Look.
George W. Robinson.	B. Thorpe.
N. D. Goodell.	Sam'l D. Moore.
Uriah Fritz.	D. A. Blodgett.
Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Brewer.	M. P. Steele.
S. F. Fobes.	S. W. Bowers.
L. DeWitt Griswold.	A. Peterson.
S. Sharp (3 copies).	Lewis Moffitt.
Joel B. Parker.	Charles Davenport.
R. A. Hardee, (5 copies).	J. A. Munn.
Mabel W. Tarbell.	Wm. C. Decker.
J. H. Sloma.	Sophia B. Robinson.
Susan M. Brady.	Wm. Dickson, Sr.
Dr. P. C. Mosier.	F. Schornhorst.
Wm. Mansfield.	H. I. Daigle.
J. M. Monroe.	John Sawvel.
Abijah Lamb.	John Souter (2 copies).
L. N. Stevens.	A. H. Dwight.
J. B. Schneller.	Sol. Benson.
John G. Kendall.	M. S. Troyer.
Will Barry.	C. W. Havlick.
Albert Barwis.	W. C. Sturges.
E. P. Peacock.	A. C. Smith.
A. C. Humphrey.	C. Fannie Allyn.
Mrs. J. R. Monroe (5 copies).	F. J. Porter.
Joseph Fortier.	Charles Eggert.
B. Marcus.	John Brosie.
E. P. Bly.	J. B. Janin.
John G. Cooper.	Peter Sinclair.
Miss Jennie Armstrong.	Wm. Joseph.
Sam E. Nicoles.	Wm. Baldridge.
Dr. W. B. Radford.	J. M. Kendall.
Wm. D. Rockwood.	M. A. Goodwin.
Chas. T. Harris.	Maxwell Ramsby.
Wm. C. Howard.	Warren Carsoner.
Dr. R. Greer (5 copies).	Owen Jones.
Mrs. S. C. Gilpatrick.	Charles Werner.
S. Toomey (6 copies).	C. M. Buck.

This is an inspiring array of names, with those already on the roll. Let us make us a full regiment of one thousand of the world's Freethinkers for the book.

The following from a representative Freethinker of the Old World shows the universal interest in this great undertaking:

BIRMINGHAM, ENG. AUG. 11, 1893.

MY DEAR PUTNAM: I have been delighted with your letters from Chicago. Glad you are publishing "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." The work is sure to be of great value. Put me down for a copy, and I will do my best to get it circulated in England.

CHARLES WATTS.

Address all communications for me hereafter to 28 Lafayette place, care of THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Kansas Notes.

Judge Louis A. Myers, of the second judicial district, is a Freethinker. In fact nearly all of the prominent public men of Kansas are very liberal in their religious views. Kansas is destined to become a Freethought domain. It is evident that her citizens want freedom in every form, and they are ready to fight for their rights.

The Kansas City Star says that there are only two preachers left at Wellington to scatter seeds of grace. It is doubtful as to whether the Star can say the above with propriety. As a general rule these preachers scatter seeds of disgrace. We would infer so, at least from a careful perusal of Billings' "Crimes of Preachers."

Oakley, Kan., is having a spell of dry weather and a religious revival. It is hard to tell which is the drier, the weather or the revival. Only one person has been converted, and, according to the Graphic, she had to be baptized in a farmer's watering trough on account of a scarcity of water. This is religion "cut and dried."

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll will speak in one Kansas town during his western tour. He is billed for Atchison on Oct. 21st. It is believed that the opera house will be crowded to its utmost capacity. His subject will be "Myth and Miracle," and it is hoped that those of our citizens who are deluded by the dogmas of such a religion will turn out "and let the light shine in their eyes," providing they are not so blind that they cannot see the light. We hope to have the able young Charlesworth or the brilliant Putnam with us this winter.

There is one institution in Kansas that the state should feel proud of, and that is her historical society. Freethought literature is by no means barred from the library of this institution. A great many Freethought works are to be found on its shelves. Judge F. G. Adams, the very efficient secretary, is one of the most liberal of men. He is free from bigotry and malice and has conducted the affairs of the society in a fair and impartial manner. All papers and books pertaining to freethought and reform are accepted by the library.

Kansas can boast of one of the oldest and most faithful Freethinkers in the United States, and one who has not been afraid to "beard the lion in his den." He is old and decrepit. He has for a long time been in destitute circumstances and almost without sustenance; but he has a brave heart and a noble mind and has probably done more good for the cause of mental freedom in Kansas than any other man. He can justly be called "The Father of Freethought." I refer to that brave old hero, Prof. J. H. Cook, of Columbus, whose name is familiar to every Freethinker in the United States. How glad I was to hear that he attended the great Congress and that he was honored and generously provided for by that body.

GEORGE J. REMSBURG.

Atchison, Kan., Oct. 15, 1893.

Lectures and Meetings.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York. Its lectures for October are:

October 27th.—"Arbitration," Albert Day.

November 3d.—John R. Charlesworth.

E. B. FOOTE, JR., Presiding Officer.

As previously announced in our columns, John R. Charlesworth will commence a tour Eastward. The following appointments are on his list, and friends along the route desiring lectures should address him at once:

Nov. 3 Manhattan Liberal Club, New York.	Nov. 19 Boston, Mass.
" 5 Newark, N. J.	" 26 Philadelphia, Pa.
" 12 East Dennis, Mass.	Dec. 3 Alliance, O.
" 14 15, Osterville, "	" 14, 15, 16, Waterloo, Ind.
" 16 Cotuit, "	" 17 Chicago, Ill.

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Society holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Sixth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of Lectures for October:

October 29th.—Mr. S. P. Putnam, "The Bible and Modern Thought."

November 7th.—Miss Voltairine de Cleyre. (Subject to be announced hereafter.)

November 14th.—Dr. Frances Emily White, "A Study in Sociology."

November 21st.—Ida C. Craddock, "Survivals of Sex Worship in Christianity and Paganism. What Christianity Has Done for the Marital Relation."

November 28th.—Mrs. C. B. Kilgore, "The Congress of Religions."

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, will meet on and after October 17th in the Skerrett Building, northeast corner of Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock.

October 31st.—Rev. Wm. I. Nichols, "Unitarianism; Its History and Principles."

THE Ohio Liberal Society meets in College Hall, 168 Walnut street, Cincinnati, Sunday evenings at 7:45, prompt. Admission is free. Program to December:

October 29th.—Prof. J. S. Van Cleve, Ph.D., "The Historic Christ."

November 5th.—C. O. Wilmot, "The Christ of Myth and Mystery."

November 12th.—Judge Alfred Yaple, economic lecture, (subject to be announced).

November 19th.—Allen O. Myers, "Was Judas Iscariot a Traitor?"

November 26th.—Mrs. A. L. Fealy, of Dayton, O., "Truth and Fallacy of Christian Science."

How to Help The Truth Seeker.

1. When renewing get a friend to subscribe and thus save a half dollar apiece.
2. Get your newsdealer to display it on his stand or in his shop window. Be sure that he displays the pictures.
3. Get your newsdealer to keep in stock one or more copies, with your guarantee to take off his hands at the end of the week any that remain unsold. If he exhibits them the pictures alone will sell them.
4. Take a few extra copies and circulate them among your acquaintances. On your request, we will send you back-number sample copies free.
5. Leave a copy occasionally where it will be picked up—in the train, in the factory, in the meeting room, in the cigar store, in the barber-shop. Leave it picture-side up.
6. Keep in your pocket some of our cheap tracts and when convenient hand one to a friend.
7. Get a new subscriber by persuading some friend to take it.

Letters of Friends.

More Pledges for the University.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL., Aug. 27, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: THE TRUTH SEEKER and books have arrived and we are much pleased with them. I will do all in my power to increase the circulation of your splendid paper in this part of the world. If Ingersoll university is started I will add $10 to Mr. Wittenberg's $5, and Mr. John W. Laine says he will add $10 more.

Fraternally yours, JOHN MCKENNA.

Christianity Is Nothingism.

CHICAGO, WIS., Apr., 30, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Send your paper right along, for you can count me one of the stayers as long as you keep Lord Heston at work on the front and back of it, keeping at the same time its columns open to Christian, heathen, Jew, and gentile alike to discuss the merits of nothingism that gives employment to seventy thousand howlers, clubbing the devil in public, and with a tickler furnished that they may privately tickle him for giving them such a fat job.

Yours for equality,

J. T. HELM.

Infidel Bible-Reading.

OCT. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In the Utica Saturday Globe of September 23d I find the following: "Rev. T. De Witt Talmage offered a reward of $100, Sunday, to any Infidel who could prove by one witness that he had read the Bible through twice. The doctor said he did not believe that any Infidel alive had read it thoroughly."

Of course, to prove by one witness a double reading of the Bible would seem to be a difficult thing for an Infidel to do, but no more difficult for the Infidel than for the Christian. His own belief that no living Infidel had read it thoroughly is evidence of either ignorance or falsehood on his part.

It is a fact well known and acknowledged by most investigators that the strongest Infidels are those who have studied and read the Bible most thoroughly. In most cases it is this thorough and careful reading and consideration of the contents of the Bible, and a search also after the source of these contents, that has made the Infidel. This holy talking machine has stated what he asserts to be his own belief. I feel I have a right to state my own, which is to the effect that the strongest and most zealous Christians are those who, when they read the Bible at all, read it as the Asiatic turns his prayer wheel, and absorb at the same time about as many ideas. If they stumble upon a passage that seems strangely at variance with reason, contradictory, improbable, or inconsistent, they pass it by as one of the divine mysteries of the book too deep for human understanding.

J. B. SWETT.

Will Work Saturday and Sunday, Hell or No Hell.

CONCORDIA, KAN., June 17, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I notice the figures on my tab read "June 1st, '93," which means "time is up," or its equivalent, and would be in plain English, "Send $3 to E. M. Macdonald for the grand old TRUTH SEEKER (and read your own paper instead of the editor's)." I have been taking THE TRUTH SEEKER for several years, and it has almost become a household necessity, although I began to think I would have to stop it on account of the drought; but God (nature) has blessed us with plenty of rain lately, so I guess I can keep right on feasting on mental food for another year, at least.

I am a farmer, and have divided my time as follows: Eight hours for labor, eight hours for sleep, and eight hours for recreation. Now, as I have written in previous letters that my neighborhood is noted for piety, I will tell you what my neighbors say about it. One says, "If you don't quit your Sunday labor, you will go to hell;" another says, "If you don't stop working on Saturday, you will go to hell;" but I quote the eleventh commandment to them, viz., "Mind your own business;" and keep right on, hell or no hell.

I will send you a few names of Liberal men, to whom you may send sample copies. I lend my papers wherever I can get anybody to read them, and if you will send me some back numbers I will scatter them in as good soil as possible.

Yours respectfully, J. L. BOWLING.

What Does It Mean?

SPOKANE, WASH., September 27.—A new religious movement has been started in Spokane, and over one hundred members of churches of all denominations have formed an association to compel everybody to attend church. A careful canvass is to be made of the city, and everyone who does not attend church will be listed, and a set of books is to be kept open for inspection, which will be called the blacklist books. The only way anyone can get their name off the books is to go to church for three consecutive Sundays. There is considerable excitement over the movement.

NAPLES, N. Y., Oct. 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The above was clipped from the Missouri World, and it must mean a great deal more than is expressed in the above article, unless one reads between the lines. I suppose all churches keep a list of the names of members of their churches, and these members are supposed to attend church. But I apprehend that most churches would object to having this list of names, called the "black-list." It seems to smack of the idea of the "black sheep in the flock." There must be some odium or disability connected with this "black-list," or there would not be "considerable excitement over the movement." Why should a careful canvass of the city be made unless some penalty is to be inflicted upon the "non-church-goers?" Are those who do not attend church to be boycotted in their business and regarded as "black sheep" in society? There must be some object in keeping open books for inspection.

I dare venture the assertion that when the true inwardness of the black-listing operation is made to appear, that it is a crawfish movement back toward the Dark Ages. The teeth and claws of the old monster are merely covered with gauze—the feline disposition has not been eliminated—and she is just as ready to pounce upon the unsuspecting as she was three hundred years ago.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." I believe in toleration, and I believe in equal rights, and when I am threatened with penalties because I do not attend their religious jamborees, I will risk a sniff of gunpowder, as old as I am, and may the Lord have mercy on their little, nasty souls.

JOHN PECK.

Attempts to Find God Are Futile.

GOLDEN, LA., March 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have been much interested in your anti-design articles. You have presented many good points, and covered nearly the whole ground, although much might still be said without in the least convincing those who are so constituted mentally that they cannot get along without a giant spook as a moving power of the universe. It is of no use to ask them who made the giant spook? They account for his existence as Topsy did for her own—"Just grewed."

I am often asked, "How did all these things come to be?"—referring to the phenomena of nature—"and what is it all for, if death ends all?" And I tell them these things are simply a natural result of all that has gone before; the effects of an infinite chain of cause and effects which reaches backward into eternity and forward just as far. This is the God without beginning and without end. And these things were not made for anything. But they cannot get the God and design idea of their minds, or rather it fills the place where their minds ought to be.

The best argument against the God idea, the one which leaves them no way to dodge, no means of escape, as you attack them on their own ground, is this: God at some time created the universe. Whether it was a six days' creation or the result of a succession of creative acts, makes no difference. At some time during his existence he created the universe. This being the case there must have been something prompting or impelling him to create it at the time and in the manner in which he did. This places the inspiring cause beyond him, subjects him to condition, and makes him only one small link in the endless chain of cause and effect, and therefore not God.

Now, while the believers are rushing around red-hot after God, asserting that the belief in and worship of God is all that builds up and elevates man, they forget that he gets along first-rate without such worship and belief, and is bigger and better than they all. It may be said that he believes in himself, and therefore is God. Then let man believe in himself, and he will grow as great and good. And judging from the book which God is said to have written or dictated, he will not attain an exalted ideal.

Yours for man and him ennobled,

R. N. HOWE.

The Era of Man.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your report about the action of the Congress in regard to the Bruno or Era of Man Calendar is not quite straight. It should be revised thus:

In response to a call from Mr. Putnam and the audience, Mr. Wakeman concisely explained the significance of the words "Era of Man," which headed the banner designed by Dr. L. Z. Coman and presented by the Liberals of Boulder, Col. This Era, Mr. Wakeman stated, was first proposed by him in a course of articles in THE TRUTH SEEKER some ten years ago, and had been largely approved and adopted by Liberals. He also referred to the meaning of the letters U. M. L. as the motto of Universal Mental Liberty, and as the intellectual side of the Era of Man and its inevitable concomitant. At the end of Mr. Wakeman's remarks Mr. Putnam moved that the Era of Man be adopted and recommended for dating purposes among Liberals. This motion was seconded with applause and was adopted unanimously. Three cheers were then given for the new date and the Congress.

Some years ago the editor of Lucifer made a pretty good statement of the historical reasons for this new era, which, with a slight amendment, I send herewith, and ask you to reprint:

OUR DATE, "E. M. 293."

We date from the first of January One Thousand Six Hundred and One. This Era is called the Era of Man (E. M.) to distinguish it from the Theological Epoch that preceded it. In that epoch the earth was supposed to be flat, the sun was its attendant light revolving about it. Above was heaven, where God ruled supreme over all potentates and powers; on earth ruled the Pope as the viceroy of God; below was the kingdom of the Devil, Hell. So taught the Bible. Then came the New Astronomy, the Astronomy of Copernicus, Bruno, and Galileo. It demonstrated that the earth is a globe revolving about the sun; that the stars are worlds and suns; that there is no "Heaven" or hell and no "up" and "down" in space. Bruno sealed his devotion to the new truth with his life on the 17th of February, 1600. At the beginning of the Seventeenth Century Grotius wrote the first work on International Law: India and America were opened up to civilization; Shakspeare produced his immortal works, and the New World of Science and Man, instead of Revelation and God, fairly began.

T. B. WAKEMAN.

[The only difference in the two accounts is that the THE TRUTH SEEKER reporter took it down as it occurred, and Mr. Wakeman writes it out as it ought to have occurred. But it's all the same.—ED. T. S.]

A History of the War.

NEW CAMBRIA, KAN., Oct. 9, 1893.

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, GEN. E. M. MACDONALD: Your subordinate officer in command of the grand army of freedom of Central Kansas reports from the field of battle as follows:

You know he has had several skirmishes with General (Rev.) Mucklow, commanding the opposing forces, as you will find by my last two letters recorded in your ledger (THE TRUTH SEEKER). Those two letters went to show how he had me suppressed, and how I had him suppressed, or cut off from his communications. Is it any wonder that hostilities were renewed when we both were really claiming the victory? We claimed the victory because he made an assault on our lines and we had repulsed him, as we thought (a la answer through the Salina Union to an attack from the same source, to which answer he did not reply), but lo and behold, he sent me an invitation to attend my own funeral as it were, a place to which we will never go willingly—that is, he invited me to come and hear him discuss the various issues between Christianity and Liberalism, the cause of the war; and so, as he had retreated to his fortress (the coward's castle—the pulpit) and issued such an invitation, and as he no doubt considered his position impregnable, we thought we had better move cautiously, and we finally decided upon sending to you for reinforcements (sample copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER and other literature), inclosing to you the card of invitation, with some of the promises to pay, to show you the necessity of responding quickly to the call, which you did. When the troops arrived, at the first order, "fire," they mowed down whole platoons of the enemy—emptied the pews—and it was impossible for them to close up their ranks. We don't see what your men's guns were loaded with—"rocks" perhaps—at any rate they "fetched down a bagful." Your regulars (we don't like to admit it) did much better service than our provincial troops.

Now, since the battle, listen to what he says of the enemy: "They are all fools;" and again: "They are more numerous than one would think;" and—"There are more enemies [Infidels and Atheists at Bavaria, Kan.] to the square inch than any other place in the county; but there seems to be a good deal of it in and about New Cambria, and the Christianity is of a kind that don't amount to much"—that is dead. Gen. T. H. Terry no doubt will feel flattered, while we must confess that we feel somewhat envious. They must have some mighty good recruiting officers up there at Bavaria. If we get in a close place again we will send more of that promise to pay and we know we will get relief immediately. Hoping to hear of my early promotion, I remain,

Your humble and obedient servant,

JOHN W. ABBOTT.

Strike While the Iron Is Hot.

WOODVILLE, O., July 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The clouds of battle between Freethought and Christianity for supremacy in America are growing darker daily. Never before were those two powers so determinedly arrayed against each other. Heretofore Christianity has dictated, and Freethought, through feebleness, has been forced to obey. But slowly, silently, a great change has been wrought. The under-current has worked its way to the surface, and the withering, blood-stained creed now finds itself confronted by an enemy whom it is bound to respect. It can no longer crush with hands of iron all who cry out against its unholy usurpation. It still possesses the power to fight, but it has an antagonist able and willing to give it battle. It closed the gates of the World's Fair on Sunday, but its once feeble rival opened them again in spite of it. It can still ride a cowardly Congress, but it got cuffed when it flung its impudent pretenses in the faces of the American people.

In opening the Fair on Sunday, an advantage of great importance to the cause of Freethought has been gained, and now that success has once crowned our efforts, we must continue the fight until we have driven superstition from its remaining strongholds.

The leaders of the Christian religion now realize for the first time that the human brain has slipped from beneath their grasp—that the mind of the world is against them. They realize that the wounds which their pet faith has received in England and America at the hands of Liberals must be healed now or they will prove fatal; and we see in the present mighty efforts for their supremacy in America the votaries of a dying faith driven to desperation.

It is a very popular opinion among Liberals that Christianity is on her last legs, that she is struggling in the throes of death; but that is a sad mistake. True, she has long since passed her meridian, and is declining toward the western horizon, but she has enough of vitality remaining to revive at the sight of a possible victim for her merciless jaws. Should she at the present moment succeed in getting her despotic principles incorporated into our laws, she would rekindle like a smoldering fire on which fresh fagots have been thrown, and a repetition of the French Revolution would be the almost inevitable consequence.

The time has come when a mighty blow must be struck. Two great armies, Free-thought and Christianity, liberty and bondage, stand arrayed against each other. Both cannot conquer—one must fall. Which shall it be? I ask, in the name of freedom, which shall it be? No person, male or female, who is in sympathy with the cause of liberty, should shrink from duty now. A herculean task is to be performed, and we must put forth every effort and win this battle, or the cause of Free-thought in this country is lost, and with it the life-work of many of the best men on whom the sun has ever shone.

Through a mistaken idea a large percentage of the American people consider this conflict as a matter of no real importance, and take no part or interest in it one way or the other, but lull themselves into a false security, without considering whence that security is to come.

Another class, appropriately called "silent skeptics," are more useless still. I cannot regard them otherwise than with contempt. In their hearts they are unbelievers in orthodox Christianity; would be "tickled to death" to see Infidelity gain the ascendancy, but have not the moral courage to make their wishes known lest the minister should "call them down" or "the girls might not like it." How will the girls like it when they become aware that those dear boys are a lot of hypocrites? I dare say that their opinion will not be a very flattering one.

I have never concealed my antagonism to the Christian faith from the public ear, nor have I (to my knowledge) ever forfeited the friendship or goodwill of any person by expressing my views, though I have met a great many Christians, including some ministers, in controversy.

Yours for Free-thought and Liberty,
GEORGE H. TURNER.

Binghamton's Side Show.

Oct. 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The city of Binghamton which has been long known as the Parlor city, from its broad, clean streets, beautiful residences, magnificent public buildings and charming parks and pleasure resorts, yet counts much upon the splendor of its church edifices as the chief attractions to the place. There are some thirty-six of these churches, and with few exceptions they are large and imposing structures, fitted up with all the pomp and luxury of wealth, and well calculated to inspire with awe and admiration the ignorant and superstitious. Last winter the First Baptist church, on Chenango street, was burned, but is being rebuilt at an expense of over $60,000, while the Catholics are building a still more costly temple on Court street, and but recently the Universalists dedicated a pretty little church on Exchange street, erected at a cost of between $20,000 and $30,000. Notwithstanding all this Binghamton has suffered much from the financial depression of the past few months. Many of the people who depend upon the manufactories of the city for employment have been out of work, or have been compelled to work on reduced time and at reduced wages, and these are the ones, especially among the Catholics, who have been called upon to contribute largely to the erection of these temples of the supernatural. Besides, the city boasts of two Young Men's Christian Association halls, another for the young women, and still another for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, with all of its auxiliaries, sub-societies, and under-organizations.

There are very few people in the city who know anything about the principles of Liberalism; nearly all are held in the yoke of Christianity, yet there is a sense of uneasiness, doubt, and unbelief existing, which is a source of much discomfort to the clergy and their more enthusiastic followers, in consequence of which a large union tabernacle has been erected, and the Rev. B. Fay Mills employed to conduct a long series of revival meetings, with the hope of securing converts and whipping the delinquent and lukewarm into line. This side show will be the chief entertainment for months to come, if we except the Salvation Army, which we omitted to mention above, that nightly parades the streets, and holds open-air meetings. A veritable crusade of the bloody cross, though we hope not a dangerous one, thanks to the noble phalanx of Infidel martyrs who have purchased our liberty and safety with their lives and sufferings.

These meetings have been largely advertised in the city papers, and by glaring handbills distributed promiscuously about the streets, in the homes and public buildings, on the street cars and railways, and which are found blowing about like autumn leaves in every wind. Cards of invitation have also been issued, which are given to every man, woman, and child, and every imaginable device to advertise them has been resorted to, even to the blotting tablets found on the desks of merchants, bankers, and shop-keepers.

Large bulletin boards have also been erected in front of the various churches, painted in colors, giving a description of the meetings at the Mills' Tabernacle, and telling of the great divines who are expected to air themselves before the assembled multitudes. If these bulletins could only be illustrated by some of Heston's cartoons, they would make excellent circus or theater bills. Yet, after all, their real object is to give notoriety and popularity to the priests, and fill their pockets with ready cash.

At the opening meeting last evening over four thousand people were gathered, the largest Binghamton audience ever under one roof, while the clergy expressed their pleasure and approbation in every look and gesture. Verily they expect to reap a rich harvest—of souls, of course—but then it will take a good many converts to bleed the amount of expenditure for these meetings out of, as it will easily exceed $10,000. But if they do not succeed in doing this, they will have the satisfaction of spouting to the people, of demonstrating their importance, while the latter pay the bills.

At the same time, that handmaid of Christianity, rum, is dealt out in over three hundred different places, in every case, so far as I am able to learn, by men, and women, who believe in the Christian religion. If some of these rich men's Sunday club houses could be turned into halls of education and science, where men and women could be taught self-reliance, true manhood and true womanhood, and how to rightfully enjoy the privileges and pleasures of life, Binghamton, and all other places, for that matter, would soon experience a change for the better, which they never can hope to enjoy, so long as overshadowed by a superstition and idolatry, which has too long been a festering sore to our fair republic. These things show how great is the enemy with which Liberalism must struggle in the years to come.

ADDISON ELLSWORTH.

Equal Rights and no Favors.

RUTLAND, VT., Oct. 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I regret that so many of our people who profess to be—and they really think they are—Freethinkers have neglected to study the great social question, except in so far as relates to church dogmas. But, notwithstanding, I rejoice over the fact that we feel free to exchange views.

My attention has been attracted to an article in THE TRUTH SEEKER of September 2d by Asa W. Brayton. He has studied far enough to see that "the church and politics are exchange partners," and that "our nation is drifting away from the principles that made us a free people." Would that all men had studied thus far. But when he comes to consider the claim that "all men have an equal right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," it seems to me he fails to follow out that claim. He says: "When we look around us over the state of our own nation that we call governed by free institutions that claim all men to have equal right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, we see one man's right is as good to get and hold property as another's, but it seems that all men have not the gift to do so."

Surely one man's right is as good as another's, if we remove the obstacles which society has put in the way, that make it necessary for man to have a "gift" in order to obtain that right. Naturally, all have the same right; but under the unnatural conditions in which society's rules have placed us many are deprived of that right. Mr. Brayton wants to know how we can blame the rich man for using his money as he may think best. We cannot blame him, but we can blame ourselves for allowing a condition to prevail which gives him an undue advantage over other men simply because he has money, no matter how he obtained it. He says the rich man "wants to add to his pile, so we see him building factories and making railroads and all the great improvements of our country,"—but stop a minute! If the rich man wants to add to his pile, why should he not do so by the fruits of his own labor, the same as any poor person has to? Then again: Does the rich man build factories, make railroads and all the great improvements of our country? Is it not the laboring man who does all this? Money cannot build factories, nor produce manufactured goods, nor build railroads, nor produce the products of the country which railroads are employed in transporting over the country.

Labor does all this, and without labor nothing can be done. Continuing, he says: "and in so doing give employment to thousands of poor people, and this gives the poor man a chance to feed and clothe himself and family too." But how does it happen that the power rests with the rich man to give employment to thousands of poor people? If poor people have not the power to give themselves employment and the rich man has not only the power to give himself employment, but the power to give employment to thousands of poor people as well, can it be said that the right of the thousands of poor people to get and hold property is as good as the rich man's? How did the rich man obtain the right to give employment to thousands of poor people, and how did the thousands of poor people lose the opportunity to give themselves employment? It seems quite plain to me that the rich man has deprived these thousands of poor people of their natural right to give themselves employment by monopolizing the natural opportunities, and that, by virtue of this monopoly, he exacts of them—for the privilege of exercising their natural right to give themselves employment—that they furnish food, clothing, and shelter for himself and family, and many luxuries besides, off the proceeds of their labor. It is not because of a fellow-feeling that he gives employment to these poor people, but because he can profit off the labor of his fellow-man. If the rich man is to pose as a philanthropist he must allow the poor man to retain all the proceeds of his labor—for what right has he to the products of the poor man's labor, except the right of might? We do not say that the poor man should have more of the rich man's money than the value of the products of his labor; then why should we say that the rich man should have more of the products of the poor man's labor than the (representative) value of the money he pays him? Surely the rich slaveholder of the South, in the days of chattel slavery, gave employment to thousands of poor slaves on the same conditions. Did we abolish chattel-slavery because we saw the wickedness of it? If so, why are we so slow in seeing the wickedness of wage-slavery?

I fear we who style ourselves Freethinkers are, very many of us, free thinkers only in a certain direction and, even then, to a limited extent. We boast of having—for ourselves—cast off the fetters that bind men slaves to religious superstitions and church dogmas, taught in the interest of rich hypocrites who desire to maintain a false and tyrannical religious system calculated to dupe the unthinking masses and make them the more easily slaves to "gifted" monopolists. We pretend to have outgrown the idea of a just God so inhuman as to make most of human beings forever miserable hereafter; and yet we have not outgrown the idea of a humanity of rich speculators, monopolists, Wall-street gamblers, and political demagogues so inhuman as to make the masses of our fellow-men forever miserable here on this earth—and we call it just!

Why, look at this! The New York

World, August 4th, reports that in fifty-seven trades in New York city, 36,177 persons are out of work. And read the World's Bread Fund report: In a little more than four weeks 210,701 loaves of bread have been distributed to the poor people of New York city, who are starving because they cannot find employment; and this is but one of the charity funds. And the World says, September 9th: "From the date when this bread fund was started, a little more than two weeks ago, until the present moment, not one name of the well-known money aristocracy of New York appears among the contributors to it." As a companion piece to this last I take the following from the World, Sunday, September 24th:

BABY STARVED TO DEATH.

The mirror in Max Meyerowicz's poor little room at No. 105 Allen street was covered with a white cloth yesterday, and a lamp was burning in broad daylight. Until next Wednesday night they mourn thus for little Annie, nine months old, who died Thursday morning of starvation. She was six weeks in dying. It takes a long time to starve. When she was well, and there was milk enough to feed her, she was a good little thing, and didn't cry at all, but for six weeks she moaned all day long, with just a faint, trembling cry, etc.

As the mother told it, "For the last week she didn't sleep at all, only she cried, not loud, but like a little kitten. The doctor said she died because she had nothing to eat. She was a bottle baby."

Good Lord, deliver us! from the hands of the rich people, who have a gift for gaining wealth. In the case just mentioned, the father could find no work, and there was not a cent in the house. I pity the person who can read such an account with indifference.

Surely, something is wrong. Mankind having been originally ignorant concerning a proper and just social system, the masses who toiled were easily led by a crafty (gifted) few to accept a system of government that made them subservient tools of the ruling power; and the world has ever since bowed down and worshiped false gods. The people have not yet given sufficient thought to this matter to enable them to see the great wrong inflicted upon mankind by a few in power; so we continue to pay rent, interest, and taxes in support of a class of useless persons who are themselves, usually, efficient church-members, and pay large pew rent and support the church liberally, if only the preacher teach the people submission while he—rolling his eyes heavenward and thanking God he is not like other men—collects dividends on stocks, watered a hundredfold. Let the people once learn their need, and repeal all laws that support monopoly—then see who are the persons who have a gift to gain wealth.

Speaking of how he commenced life, Mr. Brayton says he went to work in his father's sawmill, with his wife to keep house. They worked there two years; then he bought a piece of land, agreeing to pay $1,400 for it; he could pay but $400 down, and gave a mortgage for $1,000. Now, as $400 was all he could pay down, it is fair to presume that $400 was all he was able to save of the products of his and his wife's labor during that two years.

That being the case, he and his wife gave two years of their labor to some person for the privilege of occupying a piece of land upon which they were at liberty to apply their labor to produce for themselves a living. We have read of cases where a chattel slave gave his master a certain number of years of his labor to pay for the privilege of his freedom, and we thought it awful. To pay the remaining $1,000, he says: "I drew corn twelve miles and sold it for forty-two cents, and wheat for forty cents. I paid $70 interest, and took my team winters and went into the woods and worked for $1 per day."

All of which was mighty hard labor which he gave somebody for the privilege of living on this "free" earth.

My dear Mr. Brayton, I admire your pluck. You are a thousand times more deserving of praise than people who merely settle back into the harness and grumble at their hard lot. But, sir, it would be interesting to know just how many years of your and your wife's labor you gave for your freedom—and you are not free yet. You are still paying large dividends to monopolists.

A. A. ORCUTT,

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Lark in the City.*

The meadow-lark has found me out,
Altho' I bide in city lanes,
Where, 'bove the din and morning shout,
She brings the message of the plains.

I shall not heed the surge and scream
Of crowds that press, of bells that ring,
While she has thrilled my morning dream
With all the songs she used to sing.

I may forget the engin's blast,
The hum of wheels both night and day,
Since she has come at last, at last,
With sweet cantata's on my way.

Her note has banished care and pain.
Has chased with joy all dread alarms,
Recalling oft the summer rain
And songs of home and prairie farms.

Pueblo, Col. —MARY BAIRD FINCH.
*The lark is singing now her farewell songs preparatory to her departure for Southern lands.

Mamma.

"It's 'mamma' here and 'mamma' there,
Till I am like to drop;
It's 'mamma,' 'mamma,' all the time—
Oh, will it never stop?"

"It's 'mamma,' 'mamma,' 'mamma,'
Till it would wear out a saint."
Ah, poor tired mother,
Thus I oftentimes hear you make complaint,

But when the quiet night descends,
And every voice is still,
Oh, does no vague but haunting fear
Your gentle bosom fill.

Oh, does no sudden heart-throb make
You seek the children's beds
And call heaven's blessings down upon
Their precious, curly heads.

Their little hands make mischief
And their little feet make noise,
But oh, what could you do without
Those naughty girls and boys?

Ah, think of lonely mothers who
All day in silence sit;
Across whose hearthstones nothing now
But ghostly shadows flit.

Ah, think of those who never hear
The sweet child voices call;
Whose empty arms reach out to find
No little ones at all.

BLANCHE G. CHAMBERLIN.

Home Again.

A letter received to-day reads thus:
"Dear Miss Wixon: Are you safe? I am so afraid you will get hurt on the railroads." The uneven, tremulous handwriting of the little one who penned the letter testified to her fears and anxiety, and I hasten to say to her and to all my dear friends that once more I am within my home, safe and sound. The two dogs of our family, Bonnie and Tommy, shrieked and howled for joy. You would hav laughed to see them, leaping, rolling over, sitting up on their hind legs, capering about and trying to talk. The parrot laughed and screamed at the top of her voice, "Mother! Mother! Mother!" Even old Dick, the cat, who had been off enjoying a vacation of several weeks, put in an appearance and purred his delight at seeing me again.

Best of all, there came neighbors and friends with words of welcome and gladness, and one sent a big tray laden with good things for a feast. But, before my hat was off my head some callers came in on business, and ere they left two more called, intent on matters of importance to themselves.

If you could see me now in the midst of letters, circulars, invitations, newspapers and magazines, the accumulation of three weeks' mail matter, you would think me quite disorderly, for some things will drop upon the floor, and others will tumble about on the table. Everything will get straightened out in good time, however, if we can only be patient. I have just looked over the Westminster Budget, and read on the "Children's Page" an account of a children's party at Epping Forest, where the little deformed and crippled children of the east end of London had enjoyed a holiday in that lovely wood, through the generosity of Mr. J. F.
Shorey, a kind-hearted gentleman who is always happiest when doing good to some one deserving kindness and attention.

This reminds me that our last Sunday in Chicago, a part of it, was spent with some of the waifs of that wonderful city, who had been gathered into one of the large halls in the Art Institute. These children from the slums and alleys represent a portion of the under-current of Chicago. For the most part, they were bright-looking, intelligent, keen and shrewd, but one of the managers said there were those among them who would pick your pocket in a minute, and you wouldn't know it. Nearly all the boys had dirty faces, and were chewing tobacco. When I remonstrated with one, a lad of ten years, he said:
"Why don't you talk to that kid over there—Jim—he's only five years old?"
Turning my attention to Jim's grimy face, and perceiving he was vigorously working at a mouthful of something, I questioned if it really was tobacco. He quickly showed me that it was, and he had had the habit for a year, and was but five years old! With some trepidation, I asked him if he would not go into the ante-room and wash his face, also rinse his mouth. To my surprise, he graciously assented.
Shortly after, when inquiring for "Jim,"
and he was pointed out, smiling in front of my seat, I could hardly recognize in the bright face the dirty little fellow of a few minutes before. The girls had the wizened, prematurely old features that belong to those whose fate has made them acquainted with crime and wickedness early in life. It was a sorry sight, and when the editor of the Corner was invited to address them she had to wink back the tears in order to tell the children a little story with clearness. It is said there are about ten thousand such children in Chicago, who live by their wits, as it were, who do not know the blessedness of a sweet and cleanly home. Yet, from among these little waifs may arise the poet, statesman, and philosopher of the future; while others among them must necessarily join the long procession called the criminal classes. Alas and alas!

I told you in my last of a visit to the Skinner school, and also that the Bible had not been read in Chicago schools for sixteen years, nor a prayer recited. One day after that visit, while passing a section in the educational department of the Liberal Arts Building, a lady held out a paper and asked my signature. Upon reading it what was my amazement to see that it asked to have the Bible replaced in the public schools. The matter is of such importance that I copy the form of petition, that those residents of Chicago, especially our Bohemian friends, who are not in favor of any such nonsense, may see to it that their rights are not infringed upon, and, if necessary, send in a counter petition to the school board of Chicago.
Here is the form of petition:

To be signed only by Residents of Chicago over eighteen years of age.

TO THE HONORABLE BOARD OF EDUCATION
OF THE CITY OF CHICAGO—Petition for the Reading of the Bible in the Public Schools:

WHEREAS, the Bible is the great fountain of public and private morals, and contains the most exalted literature ever produced; and, WHEREAS, the effect of reading appropriate extracts therefrom, to and by the pupils in the public schools would be to elevate their minds, and strengthen their moral character;

Therefore, the undersigned citizens of Chicago respectfully pray that the proper order may be made to require the reading of such extracts in the opening exercises each day of all departments of the public schools of Chicago.

The undersigned regard the claim that such reading would be an infringement of just, personal, or religious liberty as wholly destitute of merit and insist that such reading would still leave the mind and conscience of every pupil entirely free from any improper bias.

Name. Address.

In an instant I found myself in controversy with the lady who was in charge of the petition. "How dare you offer this to me?" I said, "I am not a resident of this city." "O, we have another petition for non-residents," she stammered.
"Have the schools become demoralized in the last sixteen years without the Bible being read in them?" was my next query.
"Oh, yes, very much indeed," was the reply. "The schools are in a wretched condition—you've no idea."

Then I quoted the Skinner school of twelve hundred and fifty pupils, where the principal had informed me that the scholars were not worse without the Bible, but were obedient, moral, and well-behaved.

There was no sensible reply. Then some good exceptions were taken as to the Bible being the "great fountain of public and private morals," and somebody behind in the crowd laughed audibly. Think of strengthening the moral character and elevating the mind of childhood by reading some extracts from the Bible that you and I mind us of, and which I would not degrade myself by quoting.

The reading from the Bible in school would certainly be an infringement of "just, personal, and religious liberty," and I send this as a note of warning to the friends of Freethought in Chicago. The lady said she had already secured fifty thousand names to the petition. How will you know that they are residents of Chicago? The public schools of Chicago are free from Biblical instruction now. It is your duty, friends in Chicago, to keep them free. In order to do so, you must be awake and alert, for the enemy is crafty and moves stealthily.

ED. CHILDREN'S CORNER.

Correspondence.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Oct. 7, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I will send you a name for that baby, that suits me. I am thirteen years old, and a firm believer in Freethought. My choice in names would be Robert Seamon. That would be after our noble friend, Colonel Ingersoll, and another friend equally as good.

Your friend, COLLE L. INGLIS.

EL RENO, OKLA. TER., Sept. 23, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I have been reading the letters in THE TRUTH SEEKER. I do not go to school now, because the school is not commenced yet. Well, we had rain here yesterday, and it is raining to-day, and we needed it. I like this country very well, only it is a little windy here.

Well, I guess I will close.

Yours truly, from a Freethinker,

JESSE J. JOHNSON.

[Will Jesse please write something about the town he lives in, and oblige the Editor of the Corner?]

COALING, ALA., Oct. 1, 1893

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to the Corner. I am twelve years old. My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER;
I like to look at the pictures and read the Corner. I live in the country on a beautiful farm. I work; I pick cotton every day that it is not raining, or Sunday.
I do not go to Sunday-school or to church.
I don't go to school now; our school closed a week ago.

I will close for fear of the waste-basket.

BRANTLY WARD.

[Please tell us how cotton grows, its bud and blossom, and all about it.—Ed. C. C.]

ST. ANTHONY PARK, MINN., Oct. 5, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first attempt to write to the Corner. I like to read the Corner very much. Grandpa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for over sixteen years, and thinks we could not do without it. I am nine years old; I have one brother, Sidney, who is three years old; I have no sisters. I will send a piece of poetry, and I hope you will print it.

Well, I will close my letter for this time. From your Liberal friend,

BLANCHE G. CHAMBERLIN.

[May this letter not be the last.—Ed.
C. C.]

PALOUSE CITY, WASH., Sept. 24, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Every week I read the Children's Corner, and never read a letter from this place. I think THE TRUTH SEEKER one of the best papers in the world. My father takes it, and we all read it. We could not do without it. I think everybody ought to read it. Some of the Christians turn up their noses at it, but I don't.

I don't go to church or Sunday-school very much, and when I do go I just go for fun, not because I believe in it. There is more sense in one TRUTH SEEKER than all the Bible. For fear my letter will get too long I will close, hoping to see this in print, that I may write again. I think Mr.
Heston must keep busy making pictures.

I remain one among your Liberal friends,

ZENIA H. ROBERTSON.

[Zenias is a girl of fine discrimination, and her letters will be always welcome.—
Ed. C. C.]

PUEBLO, COL., Oct. 3, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I inclose a little poem for the Children's Corner, while sending you good-speed to the Freethinker's Congress. How much I wish I could be there to hear you speak, and see and talk with you and all the other grand workers for freedom. I am sure it will be a noble gathering of noble men and women.

I was so happy to see how the Sunday opening terminated. That was just the quietus the bigots needed, trying to make the whole world come to their small two-by-four minds. Why, many of them would put us in chains if they dared.

And still there a few good men and women who call themselves Christians, but their religion makes them narrow and fanatical.

Hoping you will have an enjoyable time,
I will close by asking you to give W. F.
Jamieson and W. S. Bell my best regards.
Tell them I still remember them with pleasure. Yours for the whole of freedom, MARY BAIRD FINCH.

ATCHISON, KAN., Oct. 14, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: While I have a few leisure moments I thought it would be better to occupy them by writing to the Corner than anything else I could do. I left Chicago Monday evening, returning to my dear old home in Atchison Tuesday morning. I was very glad indeed to see my old friends again, but regret that I had to leave so many new friends behind.
But friend after friend must part. Yet I hope that I will be able to meet them all again in the future.

I think that our Congress met with the grandest success, and hope that the people who attended will work hard to down superstition, and to put Freethought in its place. I don't see how anyone can believe in a hereafter after attending our great Congress and hearing the subject explained by some of the smartest women and men in the world. If there were any who attended and believed that way, and left with the same impression, I think they ought to be taken to the insane asylum, for they must be crazy.

My orthodox friends seem to be anxious about my salvation. If I could, I should be glad to believe as they do, and put an end to their anxiety in my behalf. But I do not and cannot so believe. I shall be just as glad to have it shown that I am mistaken in any particular as to have it shown that I am right. But I think I am right, so I shall stick to it. It will take something better than an old superstitious preacher to change my opinion.

Well, as my letter is growing monotonous, I will close for this time. Hoping that you reached home safely, and trusting to meet you some time again, I remain,
Yours for Freethought,

JOHN REMSBERG, JR.

[Among the pleasant memories of the International Congress of Freethinkers there will always remain the sweet music, the fine face, and gentle manners of the gifted writer of the above letter. Long may he live to stem the tide of superstition and charm all hearers with delicious melody.—
Ed. C. C.]

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance.
12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Free-thinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued.
66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarisms is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.
Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York City.

A NEW BOOK--AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis--The Creation.

Genesis--The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God--The Creation.

The Creation of God--Abraham.

Moses--Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life--Vegetable.

Organic Life--Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul--What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions--Bible Dreams--Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables--Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties--The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters--Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea--
The Jewish Sabbath--The
Christian Scriptures and the
Sabbath--Examination of
Sunday Arguments--Origin
of the Christian Sabbath--
Testimony of the Christian
Fathers--The Sabbath during the Middle Ages--The
Puritan Sabbath--Testimony
of Christian Reformers,
Scholars, and Divines--Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

-BY-

JOHN B. REMSEUR.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth; Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone; Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards? The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested? Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter. The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology). Immortality of Matter. Man. Immortality of Force. Brain and Mind. Infinity of Matter. Thought. Value of Matter. Consciousness. Motion. Seat of the Soul. Form. Innate Ideas. Immutability of Natural Laws. The Idea of God. Universality of Natural Laws. Personal Continuity. Vital Force. The Soul of Brutes. The Heavens. Free Will. Periods of the Creation of the Earth. Morality. Original Generation. Concluding Observations. Secular Generation.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles avay."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Just Out.--25 Cents.--Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral. We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church--"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man--caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 80 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stipendiature; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE and OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardner's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Litigiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Abscon; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;
OR
THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE
AND THEOLOGY.
By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,
with a preface by
R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.
Price, cloth, $1. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's
ARGUMENT

IN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the
Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in
the Interest of and Owned by the Whole People.

By HON. THOMAS E. HILL,
of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms,"
"The Hill Banking System," and other
works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted.

This book is "just in time," is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFER-
ENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION
By the Citizenship through the
Initiative and Referendum,

By J. W. SULLIVAN.
Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks
at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PULPIT, PEW,
and CRADLE.

By HELEN H. GARDNER.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It
and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.
Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A Nineteenth Century Novel.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with a little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroine. The narrative is, in the main, a history of a working-girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business-men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrites. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world.
Price, 25 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

WHAT is history but a fable agreed upon?—Napoleon.

A CONSERVATIVE young man has wound up his life before it was unreeled. We expect old men to be conservative, but when a nation's young men are so, its funeral bell is already rung.—Henry Ward Beecher.

THE student is to read history actively and not passively; to esteem his own life the text, and books the commentary. Thus compelled, the muse of history will utter oracles, as never to those who do not respect themselves. I have no expectation that any man will read history aright who thinks that what was done in a remote age, by men whose names have resounded far, has any deeper sense than what he is doing to-day.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

THE theory of this government is opposed to the union of church and state. The exemption of church property is the taxation of the whole people for the maintenance of the church. This is done in the face of the declaration that there shall be no union of church and state. We are opposed to any such injustice. It is not advantageous to either the church or the state. There is nothing gained by the state, but much lost, and a great principle of free government violated in the letter and the spirit. The laws need reconstructing on this point.—Minneapolis Progressive Age.

THE pursuit of pleasure is a man's unconscious aim, even when he promotes the happiness or relieves the distresses of others. If by self-sacrifice he alleviates the misery of a fellow-being, it is because he feels the misery he sees. If he is solicitous to indulge the desires of those he loves, it is because he shares the joys he witnesses. The hard heart, which we attribute in disdain to the selfish, expresses their callousness to others' wretchedness. The tender heart, which we attribute in praise to the generous, expresses their sensitiveness to others' happiness. Charity is but the expression of an exquisite susceptibility. Altruism is the most delicate sense of delight.—A. M. Lorentz.

THE indifference toward, or the dislike of, athletics, a generation or two ago, was due partly to the fact that it was an era of transcendentalism in politics, and also largely to the religious ideas and feelings of the time. The body was but a shell, a prison in which the soul was confined, and against whose bars its aspirations continually beat and bruised themselves. All these notions have now gone together. Other ideas, better suited to inspire a progressive civilization, have taken their place. In part, this is due to the decay of superstition; in part, to the effects of positive teaching. The men of to-day are more concerned with how they shall live than how they shall die. Man is no longer a pilgrim here below, but a citizen. This world is a place to work in; activity and development, not suffering or self-repression, its law.—F. A. Walker.

THE earliest form of the superstitious notion of a continuance of life after death is the belief in the Resurrection of the Body; a later form is the belief in the Immortality of the Soul. The idea of Resurrection arose from and is closely bound up with the practice of burial, the earliest and simplest mode of disposing of the remains of the dead. The idea of immortality arose from and is closely bound up with the practice of burning, a later and better innovation, invented at a higher stage of human culture. During the early historical period all the most advanced and cultivated nations burnt their dead, and, in consequence, accepted the more ideal and refined notion of Immortality. But modern European nations bury their dead, and, in consequence, accept, nominally at least, the cruder and grosser notion of Resurrection.—Grant Allen.

He was of that stubborn crew
Of errant saints, whom all men grant
To be the true church militant;
Such as do build their faith upon
The holy text of pike and gun;
Decide all controversies by Infallible artillery.
And prove their doctrine orthodox
By apostolic blows and knocks;
Call fire, and sword, and desolation
A godly, thorough Reformation,
Which always must be carried on
And still be doing, never done;
As if religion were intended
For nothing else but to be mended.
A sect whose chief devotion lies
In odd perverse antipathies;
In falling out with that or this,
And finding somewhat still amiss;
Compound for sins they are inclined to,
By damning those they have no mind to;
Still so perverse and opposite,
As if they worshiped God for spite.
—Hudibras.

JOHN E.
REMSBURG'S
WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged

As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents; singly, 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by

Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life,

delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason," are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1894. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods..... Helen H. Gardner.	50
The Age of Reason..... Thomas Paine. Illustrated.	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	25
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath-Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of The World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK Price, 15 cts.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicereigns of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER.

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Not for Parsons.

A CLOTHIER has excited public curiosity by having a large apple painted outside his shop. When asked for an explanation, he replied: "If it hadn't been for an apple, where would the ready-made clothing shops be to-day?"—Tit-Bits.

MINISTER: Good-morning, Janet. I am sorry to hear you did not like my preaching on Sunday. What was the reason? Janet: I had three verra guid reasons, sir. Firstly, ye read yer sermon; secondly, ye didna read it weel; and thirdly, it wasna worth readin' at a'!—Tit-Bits.

A MARRIED couple announce in the Bolton Evening News the birth of a son, giving the very minute at which he first inflated his little lungs. They add: "Not unto us, but unto Him be the glory." We hope it isn't a special reference to the third person of the trinity. As for the "glory," considering the number of people who begot babies, it is difficult to see where it comes in.—London Freethinker.

THE Catholic church at Dover had fifty pounds' worth of communion plate. The officials are now looking about for it. The thief who went off with the sacred silver cares more for the police than he does for the devil. Fifty pounds' worth of silver plate would have made Judas Iscariot's mouth water. All he got for selling Jesus Christ was thirty half-crowns—£3 15s. It was a beggarly price for God Almighty.—London Freethinker.

THEY have a man on the Methodist Times who writes labor notes, and he finds it unfortunate that "the founders and teachers of modern Socialism have been and are, with hardly an exception, blank and blatant Atheists." How shocking! But what is a blank Atheist? Is it a Methodist way of swearing? What a blatant Atheist is we know. From the orthodox standpoint, he is an Atheist who openly proclaims his Atheism—which is the crime of crimes.—London Freethinker.

AUNT HANNAH ON THE PARLIAMENT OF RELIGIONS

Wall—I'm glad enough I'm hum agin—kin rest my weary brain,
For I've seen an' heered so much, too much, I guess I've heered in vain.

I thought th' Fair was mixin' an' th' Midway made me crawl,
But th' Parl'ment of Religions was th' mixin'est of all!

I seen th' Turks agoing round th' Midway in th' Fair,
But our minister reproved me when he seen me peep in thair.

"Defilin' place," he called it, an' th' Turk "a child of sin";
But th' Parl'ment of Religions took all them heathen in.

It made me squirm a little, to see some heathen's air,
As he told us Christians 'bout our faults an' laid 'em out so bare,
But thair flowin' robes was tellin' an' thair mighty takin' folk,
So th' Parl'ment of Religions clapped to every word they spoke.

I listened to th' Buddhist, in his robes of shinin' white,
As he told how like to Christ's thair lives, while ours was not—a mite.

"Tel I felt, to lead a Christian life, a Buddhist I must be,
An' th' Parl'ment of Religions brought religious doubt to me.

Then I heered th' han'some Hindu monk, drest up in orange dress,
Who sed that all humanity was part of God—no less,
An' he sed we was not sinners, so I comfort took, once more,
While th' Parl'ment of Religions roared with approving roar.

Then a Cath'lic man got up an' spoke, about Christ an' th' cross;
But th' Christians of th' other creeds, they giv' thair heds a toss.

When th' Baptist spoke, th' Presbyterians seemed to be fightin' mad,
'Tel th' Parl'ment of Religions made my pore old soul feel sad.

I've harkened to th' Buddhist, to th' Hindu an' th' Turk;

I've tried to find th' truth that in our different sects may lurk,
'Tel my pore old brain it buzzes, like its goin' religious mad—

For th' Parl'ment of Religions nigh put out th' light I had.

Must I leave all this sarchin' 'tel I reach th' other side?

I'll treat all men as brothers while on this airth I bide,
An' let "Love" be my motto, 'tel I enter in th' door.

Of that great Religious Parl'ment, where creeds don't count no more.

—Minnie Andrews Snell, in Open Court.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.
6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port., Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28. $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port., $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

The Illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.
2	The Church Robbing the People.
3	Thanksgiving.
6	Sabbath Laws.
14	Children and the Church.
10	Woman and the Church.
6	The Church and Thomas Paine.
4	Studies in Natural History.
3	The Bible and Science.
15	The Clergy and Their Flocks.
1	Pietism in Our Penitentiaries.
4	The Atonement Scheme.
4	The Lord and His Works.
2	Prayer.
10	The Creeds.
1	Christians and Mohammedans.

2 represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
5	Missionaries.
1	The Lord's Instruments.
25	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1	The Church and Slavery.
4	Priests and Politics.
2	Ireland and the Church.
4	Church's Idea of Civilization.
1	The Uses of the Cross.
4	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
9	Persecutions of the Church.
12	Some Allegories.
3	Heaven.
6	Hell.
7	Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Art. at Heston as a portrait painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of his volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

POPE'S AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl. 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MAGIC LANTERNS

And STEREOPTICONS, all prices. Views illustrating every subject for PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS, etc.
A profitable business for a man with a small capital. Also, Lanters for Home Amusement. 250 page Catalogue free.
McALLISTER, Mfg. Opticians, 49 Nassau St., N.Y.
13 eow39

CHOLERA, DIPHTHERIA, Dysentery, Piles, Quinsy, Catarrh. The Antidote for $1. Agents wanted. Dr. G. H. MILLER, 2,333 Hickory street, St. Louis, Mo., former address 1,441 South Twelfth street, Denver, Col. 20128

150 AMERICAN WATCH

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 50 days; is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.
It has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lantern Pinion, 240 beats to minute; No key required to wind and set; weight 4 oz.; exactly like our Patent paid for $1.50, $2 for $4.00, $3 for $15.00, by express. Mention paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CHARM. AGENTS & Storekeepers send for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.
ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO.,
65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

THE "Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.
Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels, $15. In finer cases, add as above.
Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filed, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.
All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.
Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.
The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more Etched (teas only):
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.
Diamonds. 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.
OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST,
For Men Only.

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.
Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

and say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ZEKE IS INSPIRED TO PART WITH HIS HAIR.

And thou, son of man, take thee a sharp knife, take thee a barber's razor, and cause it to pass upon thine head and upon thy beard; then take thee balances to weigh, and divide the hair.—Ezek. v., 1.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.
Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Humboldt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature—i.e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition of Winwood Reade's "Martyrdom of Man," the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interesting and pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America, Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SURVEYORS, ATTENTION!

A rare chance is offered for a survey or to get a

TRANSIT CHEAP.

We have one for sale, in good order, with Tripod, which cost $160. We will sell it for half-price—$80. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AGENTS MAKE 100 PER CENT PROFIT and more, get sample free, best-known goods in all America. Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Safety Razors, Cutters, Insoles, Plasters, and all our other popular goods. (Either sex.) Address Dr. EO A SCOTT, 842 Broadway, N. Y. City.

A GREAT BOOK ON RADICAL, SOCIAL, AND ECONOMIC REFORMS

The title of the book is

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

The author is

HENRY OLERICH, of Hawarden, Ia.

This book is in story form, well printed on good paper, well illustrated, and hands mely bound. It is a text-book on "Co-operative Individualism." For many it is perhaps too radical on some questions of reform, but it is nevertheless eminently thought-provoking.

The universal unrest manifested by the thinking world, particularly during these "hard times," plainly indicates that our social, economic, and religious institutions are not in tune with the best thought of the age. The author vividly portrays an ideal world from which all our present social, economic, and religious evils are eliminated. For the fulfillment of his prophecy, the author does not rely on miracles, but on the advancing intelligence of thoughtful men and women. If Mr. Olerich's ideal state can ever be attained the world will certainly be a paradise. Beautifully cloth-bound, price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

$75.00 to $250.00 can be made MONTHLY working for B. F. JOHNSON & CO., Richmond, Va.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MENTAL HEALING.

A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power.

By LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

A Book to explain the correct idea of Mental Healing, and what may be reasonably expected to result from an understanding of its principles. Price, $2.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth. 75 cents.

News of the Week.

LUCY STONE is dead, ripe in years and honors.

THE New York Synod refuses to reopen the Briggs case.

THE London Church Missionary Society admits that there is no anti-Christian crusade in Persia.

HERBERT SPENCER is in poor health, and has been obliged to do less than his usual amount of work.

SENATOR ALLEN, of Nebraska, made a speech fifteen hours in length the other day in the senate.

A FIRE in New York on October 18th destroyed more than three millions of dollars worth of property.

A CRISIS is imminent in Austria, caused by Count Taaffe's suffrage bill and hard treatment of Bohemians.

THE New York and New Jersey bridge bill passed the house of representatives without a dissenting vote.

There have been an unusual number of desertions from the United States navy during the last six months.

It has been discovered that the Indian [English] penal code permits the sale of young girls except for public use.

WRIGHT MILLS, of Evergreen, Ala., has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment for sending a challenge to fight a duel.

CHARLES FRANÇOIS GOUNOD, the famous musician, and composer of "Faust," died in Paris on Oct. 19th. He was born in 1818.

FRANCE has gone crazy over the Russian fleet. Mobbing of those who do not take off their hats to the Russian officers are common.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET is again here. She came to preside at the World's Congress of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

SENATOR HILL, of New York, has recently come to the front in the senate as the leader of those who want the senate to reach a vote on the silver bill.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE BROWN, of the supreme court, was badly cut in the head by a piece of glass while attempting to close a window during a severe storm.

PERRY, the capital of the newly opened Cherokee Strip, has fifteen thousand inhabitants, six daily and two weekly papers, and a choice assortment of desperadoes.

PROFESSOR HELMHOLTZ, the German physicist, recently in America, was injured by falling down the companionway of the steamer in which he sailed from New York.

THE bombardment of Rio Janeiro continues. Talk of foreign intervention is heard. United States war vessels have arrived. Forts in the harbor are firing at each other.

STRIKING coal miners at St. Helen's, in the county of Lancaster, England, twice repulsed the constables who went to the rescue of non-union miners, who were being maltreated by the strikers.

UNDER pressure from England, the sultan has ordered that the streets of Mecca be cleaned and a pure water supply secured. It is hoped that this will check the spread of cholera from the holy city.

ON October 16th, a political meeting in Rome ended in a free fight between the Radicals, who were conducting the meeting, and the Anarchists. That night the theatre, where the trouble occurred, was burned.

MANY lives were lost on Lake Erie during the recent storm. The Dean Richmond went down with her entire crew; the Wocoken foundered, and all but three of her crew were drowned, while many other vessels lost men.

WASHINGTON'S first decisive victory, achieved at Trenton, was celebrated on October 19th by the unveiling of a magnificent monument which has been talked of for fifty years. Eight governors and five thousand troops participated.

WALES is working for disestablishment of the Welsh church and for land reform, the latter on similar lines to those pursued in Ireland—fair rent, free sale, and fixity of tenure—only cloaked under other names.

FIELD MARSHAL MACMAHON, of France, duke of Magenta, died October 17th, aged eighty-five years. He was the descendant of an old Irish Catholic family who followed the fortunes of the Stuarts, and after their downfall emigrated to France.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 44. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, November 4, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

CONFLICT BETWEEN RELIGION AND GEOLOGY—A STORY WITHOUT WORDS.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.
The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.
The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.
Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.
Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.
Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.
Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.
The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian legends upon them and others:
 Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot,

**

By

G. W. ROOTS.

**

Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
 Price, 25 cents

Christianity a Fiction.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

THE
Astronomical and Astrological
 Origin of all Religions.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
 Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, - - - 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professed naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
 Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

New Publications.

New Publications.

New Publications.

New Publications.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

By Samuel P. Putnam.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1892, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poem by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore., Free-thought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits
Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers.
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for
 - His Processes Are Egregiously Slow,
 - They Are Egregiously Costly,
 - They Often Serve No Use,
 - They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomical Design.
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

Rensburg's Book on Lincoln Now Ready.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN: WAS HE A CHRISTIAN?

By John E. Rensburg.

One of the most noted controversies of the century has been waged over the question of Abraham Lincoln's religious belief. Soon after the remains of America's most illustrious son were laid to rest at Springfield, one of his biographers, Dr. H. H. Land, put forward the claim that he was a Christian. The claim was promptly denied by the dead statesman's friends, but only to be renewed again, and again denied. And thus for a quarter of a century the question of Lincoln's belief has been tossed like a battle-dore from side to side.

For fifteen years Mr. Rensburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

NOTED WITNESSES.

Hon. W. H. Herndon, Col. Ward H. Lamon, Hon. John T. Stuart, Col. James H. Matheny, Col. John G. Nicolay, Judge David Davis, Col. Jesse W. Fell, Hon. Leonard Swett, Dr. William Jayne, Judge Stephen T. Logan, Joshua F. Speed, Hon. Jesse K. Dubois, Hon. Joseph Gillespie, Dr. C. H. Ray, Col. F. S. Rutherford, Judge Robert Leachman, Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Leonard W. Volk, Joseph Jefferson, Hon. E. B. Washburne, Hon. E. M. Haines, Hon. James Tuttle, Hon. M. B. Field, Hon. Geo. W. Julian, Hon. John B. Alley, Hon. Hugh McCulloch, Gen. M. M. Trumbull, Rev. David Swing, Rev. Robert Collyer, Judge Jesse W. Weik, Hon. J. P. Usher, Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, Salmon P. Chase, Wm. H. Seward, Hon. John Covode, Hon. A. J. Grover, Hon. W. H. T. Wakefield, Gen. D. W. Wilder, Judge Aaron Goodrich, Judge James M. Nelson, Rev. Edward Eggleston, Rev. John W. Chadwick, Donn Piatt, H. K. Magie, Dennis F. Hanks, Mrs. Sarah Lincoln, Mrs. Mary Lincoln.

The foregoing and sixty other reputable witnesses testify that the greatest man born on this continent was a Freethinker.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS
FOR Liberal and Ethical Societies,
for Schools and
the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PEN PICTURES OF THE WORLD'S FAIR.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

A Full Description of the Fair, Invaluable as a Guide-Book and still more Invaluable to those who cannot attend. It tells WHAT TO SEE and WHERE TO SEE IT; gives rates of admission to the various attractions of the Fair and cost of living in Chicago, with other useful information to the visitor.

It is, besides being a complete Guide-Book, the best description of the Fair yet given—poetic, beautiful, accurate. It describes the inauguration ceremonies, gives the director-general's address, the efforts to close the Fair Sundays and the triumph of the Sunday-openers; describes the various buildings and what they contain, and is, all in all, the very best picture of the Fair that can be painted with a pen.

ILLUSTRATED.

A MAP OF JACKSON PARK, enabling the visitor to make his way around, and the stay-at-home to see where he went.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE FAIR, enabling one to comprehend at a glance the magnitude of the Exposition, the greatest ever known to the present time.

PICTURES OF ALL THE PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS:

Woman's Building.	Art Palace.	Fisheries Building.
Administration Building.	Manufactures and Liberal	Agricultural Building.
Electrical Building.	Arts Building.	Transportation Building.
Machinery Hall.	Mines and Mining Building.	Horticultural Building.
	Forestry Building.

A visitor to the Fair says of this book—reading it in THE TRUTH SEEKER—that it is charming and to one who has seen the Fair vastly entertaining.

Single copy, 25 cents. Five copies for $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

FACTS AND FICTIONS OF LIFE.

CONTENTS.

Preface.	Sex in Brain.
The Fictions of Fiction.	Her duty in its Relations to a Double Standard of
A Day in Court.	Morals.
Thrown in With the City's Dead.	Divorce and the Proposed National Law.
An irresponsible Educated Class.	Lawsuit or Legality.
The Moral Responsibility of Woman in Heredity.	Common Sense in Surgery.
Woman as an Annex.

At the Woman's Congress at Chicago Helen Gardener delivered as an address one of the chapters of this book. The Chicago Times said of it and her: "But the last address, dealing with the most delicate of the problems of reform, namely, the question of woman's rights, was listened to with breathless interest by the audience. It was 'Heredity in its Relation to a Double Standard of Morals,' and it was delivered by the one woman of all others best qualified to speak upon that subject—Helen Gardener. Petite, graceful, eloquent with the burden of her thought, Mrs. Gardener, enchainé, very audacious, and when she had finished received a perfect ovation, which her courage and devotion had so worthily won. The evening session was highly interesting, but that of the morning will be set down on the tablet of the memory of those present as one of the distinctively great features of the week's congress."

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EVERY Woman Ought to Read It. Every LIBERAL Woman
and Man Will Want It.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE.

By Matilda Joselyn Gage.

This is Mrs. Gage's latest and crowning work. It is THE book to show how the church has enslaved woman and kept and keeps her in an inferior position. A glance at its contents will show this:

The first chapter—the Matriarchate—shows that under the old civilizations woman had great freedom, but that the tendency of Christianity from the first was to restrict her liberty. In this chapter Mrs. Gage claims that the Matriarchate—or Mother-rule—the world is indebted for its first conception of human rights.

Chapter II deals with the theological dogmas of original sin and celibacy. Woman, by the church, was not regarded as a human being; marriage was looked upon as vile; wives were sold as slaves; women driven to suicide; the influence of the church was unfavorable to virtue. The celibacy of the clergy produced degradation, sensuality, and woman was the victim of these brutes.

Chapter III is on the Canon Law, showing how the church controlled woman by making the legitimacy of marriage depend upon its own control of the ceremony. Ancient civilization gave place to Christian barbarism; the clergy became a distinct body—at once a "holy" and an unholy caste. Learning was prohibited to women, husband's property was prohibited from leaving him more than one-third of their property; daughters could be disinherited, sons could not. The Reformation effected no change.

Chapter IV—Moralism—is on Feudalism and its degradation of woman, the rights of "lords spiritual," the immorality of the heads of the church, baptism of nude women in the early Christian church. It also deals with some of the later-day abuses of females, like our Northwestern pinneries, the English deaneries, government clericalism, etc.

Chapter V—Witchcraft. In the days of religious insanity Mrs. Gage shows how the possession of a little learning was sufficient cause to suspect a woman of witchcraft, that to keep a pet was dangerous, so rigid was the clerical notion of suffering with evil. This persecution for witchcraft was a continuation of the church's policy for obtaining universal domination over mankind. Women physicians of the Middle Ages were persecuted, and the "Pilgrim Fathers" continued it in America. The first synod convened in America was to try a woman for witchcraft, and others were stripped and whipped for not agreeing with the clergy.

The chapter on "Wives" shows how the disruption of the Roman empire was unfavorable to the personal and proprietary rights of woman—at the sale of daughters was practiced in England seven hundred years after it was Christianized—that the practice of buying wives was regulated by law—that women were not permitted to read the Bible—that they were not admitted as witnesses—that civil marriage was proposed by the church.

In Chapter VII is shown how polygamy was sustained by the Christian church, that the first synod of the reformation convened to sanction this institution, that Luther and the other "principal reformers" favored it, as well as the American Board of Foreign Missions. The Mormon theocracy is shown to be similar to that of other Christian sects.

In the last three chapters Mrs. Gage treats of the opposition of the church to the amelioration of woman's sufferings as interfering with her "cause," of woman's degradation by the church to labor for slaves, of woman's "inferiority," as taught by the church to-day, and of how little value Christianity has been and is to civilization.

The work is a burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It is also extremely valuable as history. No woman, it seems to us, can read it and remain a supporter of the religious institution which has crushed her individuality, her mentality, and degraded her person. To the woman's cause it opens an Age of Reason. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do.

In cloth, $2; in half-leather binding, $3. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 44. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, November 4, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - NOVEMBER 4, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

The Cloven Hoof of the "Sabbath" Satan.

Those who have kept themselves informed on the Sunday-observance question know that nearly all the leaders in the movement are very restive when it is charged that they wish to compel the people to observe Sunday as a holy day. They make it their business to declaim against the union of church and state and they are sharp enough to see that they will lay themselves open to the accusation of favoring such union if they advocate Sunday laws in the name of religion. So, as hitherto pointed out in these columns, they have invented several specious catch-words with which to deceive such of the people as might dangerously antagonize them should they frankly avow their purpose to make Christianity the state religion. They talk glibly and delusively of a "civil" Sabbath which shall be enforced in order to allow everybody (except preachers, church organists, sextons, ushers, choirs, et al.) to "rest" on Sunday, and they vary this siren's song with considerable illogical and nauseating talk about the "morality" of Sunday reverence. But this pious pretense cannot be kept up all the time; not all the Sunday worshipers can be induced to talk discreetly—some will persist in making "unguarded statements" and thereby getting the whole Sabbatarian happy family into hot water. The latest to do this are some Boston clergymen, who have assembled themselves together and adopted these resolutions:

"We, the Congregational, Baptist, and Methodist ministers of Boston and vicinity, assembled in our Monday meeting, Oct. 2, 1893, cordially unite with the Massachusetts Sunday Protective League in the following expression:

"In view of the deplorable increase in the issue of Sunday newspapers in Boston, we are constrained to renew our earnest protest against the Sunday newspaper, and our strong condemnation of it, as one of the chief agencies of evil in hindering our work.

"Because it preoccupies the minds of its readers on the Lord's day with secular things, from the contemplation of which the higher needs of human nature and the beneficent divine requirement prompt man then to rest;

"Because it thus beguiles its readers to neglect and exclude from their thought those religious considerations on which all right character depends;

"Because it thus indisposes its readers for public worship in the house of God, disqualifies them for it, and detains them from it to a degree that is rapidly changing the habits of large sections of our population, far and near;

"Because in thus becoming a main instrument in breaking down the habit of public worship in our land it weakens the religious restraints which are indispensable to the stability of society, and thus becomes a foe to good order and a menace to our civilization.

"We look with the deepest sorrow upon the unscrupulous and unpatriotic greed, and the inhumanity, exhibited in the publication, distribution, and sale of the Sunday newspaper, trespassing upon the civic rest day of large numbers of railroad employes, newsdealers, and especially youthful carriers; and in view of the hearing now in progress before the railroad commissioners of this state in regard to special Sunday newspaper trains, we respectfully represent to that honorable board that it seems to us against public policy to grant special favor to any one line of business on Sunday."

Now, here are five reasons why these clergymen are opposed to the Sunday newspaper. Four of these reasons relate entirely to the religious aspects of the matter and only one bears upon the "rest" question. Then which is of the most importance in the eyes of the clergymen, and, consequently, which will most influence their actions in the attempt to secure the suppression by law of these papers, the religious or the secular relations of the problem? Is it not perfectly plain that the Sunday law advocates are working in the interest of religion, that they want to enforce the observance of Sunday because such observance will, in their opinion, advance the cause of religion, and that their talk about securing a day of "rest" for helpless workingmen is the sheerest humbuggery? No foe of the Sunday tyranny could have more clearly and succinctly stated the case for the opponents of Sunday laws than have these ministers in the foregoing resolutions, especially in the third and fourth. They are opposed to the Sunday paper, as they are to Sunday amusements and Sunday work, primarily and chiefly because such publications, recreations, and labor interfere with their work on their particular work-day. All these secular agencies help to curtail their influence and authority in the community and lessen their means of livelihood.

In the last resolution an "anchor is cast to windward"; a saving clause in regard to the "civil rest day of large numbers of railroad employes, newsdealers, and especially youthful carriers," is introduced, but it is evidently very much of an afterthought, a secondary consideration which it was necessary to recognize somewhere in order to draw, if possible, some support from the so-called laboring classes. But labor is benefited, not injured, by the Sunday paper. There are always more men than there are places, and there can be no doubt that where superstition does not dominate, a sufficient number can be found who will gladly do this Sunday work, thus giving the "week-day" employees a chance to rest. As for the "youthful carriers," meaning, without doubt, the newsboys, the Sunday paper is an immense assistance to them. Suppose that a daily journal issues one hundred thousand copies of its Sunday edition, which sells for five cents per copy, and that the newsboys get one and one-half cents of each five paid by the reader. This gives the boys fifteen hundred dollars in wages each Sunday for the one paper of one hundred thousand circulation. Then a good portion of the remaining three and a half cents finds its way into the workingmen's pockets, being distributed in the composing room, stereotyping room, press room, paper mill, ink manufactory, and various other places. Of course much of this, in the absence of the Sunday paper, would have been drawn into the coffers of the church, but we cannot afford to weep with the ministers because of this diversion. What is their loss is freedom's gain. We are not blind to the demerits of the Sunday paper; we know that it contains much very wishy-washy stuff, but the preachers are the ones who can least afford to call attention to such weakness. At the worst, the Sunday paper is more interesting and instructive than the Sunday sermon, and even if it were not, the attempt of the clergy to suppress it by force is nothing less than an attempt to commit a crime. The daily newspaper proprietors are often cowardly and mean, loudly defending their own right to engage in business on Sunday, but joining with the Christian persecutors in hounding men engaged in less popular enterprises who try to earn a dollar on that day. But actions are more important than words, and hence the example of the Sunday papers is one making for the widening of the bounds of free and just action, spite of their verbal lapses at times.

The clergymen are right in their denunciation of the granting of special favors to one line of business, therefore we can never consent to give the preacher, prayer and psalm-singer a monopoly of Sunday. Let them take their chances with men and women engaged in all other occupations. Let each person select his or her own rest days and rest weeks and rest months and rest years. The hand of the church must be kept off the helm of state. The priests must not be permitted to subvert and degrade justice in the name of physiology. We thank the Boston ministers for letting in the light of day upon the sinister designs of their junta. It is not the rest day, but the Christian Sunday for which they clamor and scheme. We know what they want and where they are. We shall have only ourselves to blame if we are ultimately beaten.

After Talmage's One Hundred Dollars.

It will be recalled that unreverend T. De Witt Talmage recently offered one hundred dollars to any Infidel who could prove, by one witness, that he had read the Bible twice through by course. The Bible is put together somewhat carelessly, and while there is no class of people who have studied it more carefully and thoroughly than have the educated Freethinkers, the temptation to read it through by course is not exactly irresistible. No doubt Talmage was depending partly upon this to enable him to keep his cash. The point he was trying to make was that the Bible is one book, a coherent and logically connected whole, and the reason Infidels do not accept it is their supposed failure to read it through from beginning to end, this failure resulting in the breaking of the chain of revealed truth and the consequent release from her moorings of the ship of faith. That the Bible is a heterogeneous collection of books, fragments of books, books patched up out of parts of other books, many of them written by unknown authors, and produced in periods of time separated by hundreds of years, is a fact not known to the mass of Christian believers, and Talmage relies upon this popular ignorance to give weight and force to his flamboyant challenge. But when a speaker or writer depends upon the ignorance of his auditors or readers to supply the truth and logic which is absent from his deliverances, he leans upon a weak support indeed, and is almost certain to find himself precipitated into an inconvenient chasm at a moment when he deems his position most proud and secure. This seems to be the case with Talmage just now. A man comes forward who says that he wants that one hundred dollars and that he has the pole which can gather it from the Talmagian persimmon tree. This man is Rev. Moses Hull, ex-minister in the Adventist church, ex-lecturer for the Liberals, now Nationalist speaker and Spiritualist preacher. He is fluent, eloquent, and an exhaustless magazine of Biblical texts. In his monthly, New Thought, he talks in this saucy way about the offer of the Brooklyn sensationalist: "Rev. T. De Witt Talmage has, in a recent sermon, offered one hundred dollars to any Infidel who has twice read the Bible through by course. If an Infidel is, as Webster says, 'One who disbelieves the inspiration of the scriptures and the divinity of Christianity,' I can be put down as an Infidel. For over thirty years I have not believed in the plenary inspiration and the divine authority of the Bible. I am entitled to the one hundred dollars. I have read the Bible through by course twenty-three times; five times since such men as the reverend doctor have been calling me an Infidel. In the year 1891 I read King James's version through twice, and the revised version once, beginning in each instance at the title page and ending with the final 'amen.'"

The money is not all that Mr. Hull wants; he wishes also to test Talmage's knowledge of the Bible; he would feel almost too happy to live if he could get that gentleman into the competitive examination herein proposed: "Now, if Dr. Talmage wishes to test my knowledge of the Bible before he hands over the one hundred dollars; if it is his desire that he and I shall pass through a mutual test, to see which has made the more thorough study of the Bible, I will try and arrange to meet him at some time and place where it suits his and my convenience. We will test the amount of knowledge he and I may have of the Bible, and allow a mutually chosen committee to decide whether I am entitled to the one hundred dollars or not."

But the foregoing is not enough—Mr. Hull seems animated by the inquisitorial spirit, and proposes to find out what the preacher does not know about the history of God's book. Hear him: "Should Mr. Talmage wish further to test my knowledge of the origin of the bible, of its authors and of its history, I am willing to include that in the test, providing that gentleman himself will submit to the same ordeal."

And now he cruelly tells the Christian champion what he wants to do with the money, and in addition he seems to insinuate a doubt of the challenger's candor: "I am not doing this as a game of bluff; I really want the one hundred dollars; and I promise, if the doctor hands it over, according to his voluntary promise, that I will honestly expend every cent of it in publishing and circulating a reply to his often repeated harangue against Spiritualism. Besides that, I want to be tested as well as to test Mr. Talmage's knowledge of the Bible, and his candor in making the offer."

Will Talmage stand by his guns and his proposition, or will he try to sneak away?

Another Proposed Assassination of Justice.

The Catholic Freeman's Journal grows enthusiastic over the proposition of Congressman Wheeler in reference to the celebration of the beginning of the twentieth century of Christianity. It says:

"Let us have the fair in commemoration of this greatest fact in human and divine history. Even from the low, material view, mankind's advancement, under the auspices of the cross, leaves it debtor beyond measurement to Christianity. The soldiers of the master pioneered our American civilization, just as their co-laborers in the Old World stood between unarmed and uneducated man and his enemies in his struggle from darkness into the light. Let us have the fair in 1900 and let New York show that grand and unequalled as was Chicago's Exhibition in honor of the Christ-bearer, Columbus, it can still surpass that wonderful display with the glory and vindication of God's goodness to us as the incentive."

We wonder if the church is really proud of the murderous performances of "the soldiers of the cross" in Mexico and Peru? And when its champions talk of its services to humanity in the Old World we are reminded of Clifford's comment upon its claim to have preserved learning through the long, dark night of the Middle Ages: "A man," he pithily remarks, "burns your house to the ground, erects a wretched hovel on the ruins and then takes credit for whatever shelter there is about the premises." As for the achievements of the "Christ-bearer, Columbus," not one of them would now laurel his memory had he not acted in utter disregard of the teachings of the church concerning the conformation of the earth. Only when he was a practical heretic was he of service to mankind.

"God's goodness to us" is not apparent, unless we consider that he is to be credited with the diminution of the power of his church. But as his ambassadors fought to the utmost to smother the enlightenment that made possible such decrease of churchly tyranny, we do not think we are under any obligations to thank him or belaud it for the tolerable degree of security from persecution which we to-day enjoy. Certainly, the nation cannot in justice levy taxes upon all the people to pay the expenses, or any portion of the expenses, of a Christian ratification meeting. Let the Christians hold the fair under their own auspices and foot the bills themselves. If the followers of Jesus and Paul insist upon compelling those who do not accept as divine or true the teachings of those ancient agitators we shall know that there is at least one fundamental principle of an honest human society which Christianity, despite all the boasting of its adherents, did not give to the world and does not regard, and that is the principle of justice.

Four Good Books for German Freethinkers.

We can supply, in the German language, the following four books which everyone knows to be good:

"The Mistakes of Moses," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

"Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen H. Gardner, 50 cents.

"The Gods," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 25 cents.

"Miracles and Miracle-Workers," by John Peck, 20 cents.

These are neatly printed, bound in paper covers, and are complete. Our German-reading friends should circulate these widely.

In J. K. Ingalls' "Mythology and Economics," last issue of paper, insert "stamp" after government in third line of second paragraph, and "non" in lieu of now before legal in eleventh line of same paragraph.

C. W. Goff, the Freethought university advocate, of Kearney, Neb., pays the following characteristic compliment to Remsburg's "Jesus Christ," delivered before the International Congress: "It is the best thing I ever heard, and knocks out anything that has ever been put up in the English language."

The San Francisco Examiner cuttingly says: "Barbers do not want the Midwinter Fair closed Sundays because this would destroy their only chance of attending. There are other journeymen in the same condition. Ministers, however, have reason to be grateful that they can attend any day of the week, and natural generosity would prompt them to remember those less fortunate."

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union females who engaged in White-Capism a few days ago decoyed their victims into their talons by signing the names of several young men to notes which they sent to the young women. Of course forgery is a trifling crime for Christian viragoes to commit. They remembered the "crafty" example and admonitions of that model friend of woman, St. Paul.

Rev. David Gregg is debited with the statement that "Love, which is the soul of friendship, is the fruit of religion." Well, about how much religion is there in "Christian Europe," the nations of which, in order to manifest their friendship and love for each other, have eighteen millions of men trained to the highest degree of perfection in the art of maiming and killing, and armed with the latest and most improved instruments of death? "Whom the [Christian] loveth, he chasteneth," eh?

God has just knocked down another woman. She is a Baltimorean. She was in court, testifying in her own behalf, having been charged with striking a young woman with a teapot, and she recklessly called upon God to smite her if she had not spoken the truth. He smote. It was all right, probably, because it was established that she did hit the young woman, and we suppose his majesty wanted to admonish her to keep her temper under better control. His own has always been murderously violent.

Prof. Felix Oswald will shortly resume his bright paragraphs on "Science and Progress," which appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER last winter and spring, but got crowded out by the voluminous World's Fair letters. THE TRUTH SEEKER obtains the services of the best minds and pens in the land, and Professor Oswald has not the least of these. Everybody that we know likes to read the epigrammatic sentences from his pen—except the Christians!

Among the sturdy Freethinkers of Iowa none were more earnest in their loyalty to the great cause than the four Dutton brothers, Leroy, Lorenzo, Charles, and Jerome. Intelligent, hospitable, generous, and fearless they have been a tower of strength in Clinton county. Alas, the ranks are broken! Jerome Dutton is dead. Keen in thought, genial in disposition, tender-hearted, and loving, he kindled admiration, inspired respect, and stimulated love in all who knew him. He was a true man and the world is better because he has lived.

A Chicago paper recently called attention to the fact that "Americans who engage in commerce in so-called heathen lands seldom become embroiled with the natives. It is only the missionary, who attacks old traditions and long-established faiths, that gets into trouble," and then asks: "Are the inhabitants of our land so firmly grounded in the precept and practice of Christianity that we can turn our attention to the heathen at the risk of kicking up international rows?" There is food for thought in the above, and THE TRUTH SEEKER has in the past illustrated the folly of religionists of Christian countries trying to pull the mote of different doctrine from the eyes of people of heathen countries, while the eyes of the people of Christian countries were full of the beams of moral and social wrongs.

The attendance at the World's Fair on Sunday, Oct. 22, was 152,206, of which 140,578 paid the admission fee. Had it not been for the superstition and cowardice of many of the exhibitors, who hid their exhibits, the unaccountable conduct of the managers in not providing some compensating attractions for that day, and their failure to reduce the admission fee to the thus crippled show, Sunday opening would have justified itself from the beginning. As it was, it did not have a fair trial. People could not be expected to pay full admission rates to an entertainment shorn of four-fifths of its attractions. These facts must be borne in mind when Sabbatarians in future oppose Sunday opening of any place and claim that the slim Sunday attendance most of the time at the World's Fair showed that the people are opposed to Sunday recreation and instruction.

Chief Justice Maxwell of the Nebraska supreme court, whose decision affirming the validity of Sunday laws was recently reviewed in these columns, was defeated for renomination in the Republican convention. Whereupon he has come out in support of Judge Holcomb, the Populist candidate. This is bad for Holcomb, who stands upon a platform which contains these two planks:

"We are opposed to any union of church or state in any form or under any pretext whatever."

"We demand that the freedom of speech and of the press shall ever be maintained; that there shall be no religious test for office. We are opposed to all secret or open political organizations based on religious prejudices as contrary to the spirit and genius of our institutions and thoroughly un-American."

If those planks are to be understood as meaning what the letter expresses how can a theocrat like Maxwell support any man who honestly accepts them?

There was imminent danger of all the United States Senators losing their souls—and some of them their seats—if the silver debate had continued much longer. A dispatch from Washington a few days ago said: "Shortly after this episode the Senate took a recess until to-morrow. It took a recess instead of adjourning because if it adjourned it would have to listen to prayer when it meets again, and it would be obliged to observe certain other formulas of etiquette and business which the Senators are too impatient and too absorbed to make way for." About ten days later we get some additional information regarding the danger that menaces Senatorial souls. Senator Allen "called attention to the fact that for ten days the Senate had been proceeding in the legislative day of Tuesday, Oct. 17th, and that in all that time the Senate had not listened to a single prayer by the chaplain." This is simply awful.

It will please our readers to learn that Mr. Charles Watts will send us frequent letters from England, giving the news about the Freethinkers in the tight little island, what they think about things generally, and what they are doing. Our English friends, when they meet him, can hand him their subscriptions, and he will transmit them. Mr. Watts returned home on the record-breaking Campania last Saturday morning. In company with the author of "Four Hundred Years of Free-thought," we spent Friday evening with him on that magnificent vessel—an evening full of jollity except the parting, but which it wouldn't do to report too closely. The Poet and the Debater had the platform to themselves, and the Editor gathered much wisdom, which is carefully treasured. Mr. Watts sent greeting to his friends all over the country, and took others home with him to all the Infidels of England from the land of Yankee Doodle.

It is reported that Rev. J. G. Stewart, of Monmouth, Illinois, has been suspended from the ministry of the United Presbyterian church because of his belief in divine healing. Well, what next! The New Testament writers could not have had the Presbyterians in mind when they penned some of their "Prescriptions for Christians—follow the directions carefully." Dr. Mark prophesied that those who believed in Christ should "lay hands on the sick and they shall recover." Evidently the United Presbyterians of Illinois dare not risk such a test as this. Dr. James gives more particulars in his prescription: "Is any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him." This would appear to give the Christian Scientists large odds against the Presbyterians. What is the matter with the latter, anyway? Are they getting to be afraid or ashamed of their own "rule of faith and practice"?

The St. Louis Christian Advocate wishes now that it had not been so sure concerning something it did not know anything about. In its anxiety to make a point against the Sunday paper, it asserted that "London, with her five million inhabitants, has no Sunday newspaper." Upon which the Christian Commonwealth, of London, comments: "This will be news to the people of the metropolis who have become quite accustomed to hearing the Sunday newspapers cried by the newsboys. We are profoundly sorry that our contemporary's observation is wholly untrue. London has a surfeit of Sunday newspapers, and some of these have a phenomenal circulation, reaching as many as five hundred thousand. Surely this does not look much like superior respect for the Lord's day on this side the Atlantic!" This is a very good report. It shows that the people are slowly getting back their own from the priests and the priests' God. Sometime this absentee Lord will be wholly dispossessed. We can hasten the coming of the hour of happy deliverance. Watch and work.

D. W. Wilder, ex-commissioner of Kansas, says in his Insurance Magazine:

"In the United States the belief in hell, an eternal fire, no longer exists; it was a human invention that humanity has outgrown and sloughed off."

Mr. Wilder seems to have mistaken the opinions of the cultivated few for the beliefs of the uneducated many. A few hundred city ministers, who speak to and for the Unitarianized people of humanitarian feelings, are on one side; on the other, are the tens of thousands who break the bread of the gospel for the millions. Listen to the teachings in the Sunday-school; hark to the utterances of the great evangelists, whose ravings can hold the attention of cities of one hundred thousand inhabitants, and who gather in thousands of converts at a single meeting, and tell us, if you can candidly, that the fires of hell have really been extinguished. Hell has not become unpopular in the creeds—not a church has eliminated the dogma from its confession of faith. Until the churches officially close hell we shall be justified in maintaining that belief in it is a fundamental dogma of Christianity. Their more astute leaders know just as well as we do that hell is the keystone of their structure; with that gone the whole redemptive contrivance tumbles into ruins.

We do not wish to precipitate another panic or "object-lesson" upon the country, but it is perfectly true that there are a number of our subscribers whose time has expired who have not paid us. And it is perfectly true also that there are some people down-town to whom we owe money whom we have not paid. But it will be perfectly easy to even this thing up if those subscribers will stop at the post-office and buy a money order for $3 and mail it here. If they meet a neighbor on their way who doesn't take the paper but wants it, make the money order $5 and it goes for a year to both. But please remember that the down-town fellows here are hard up.

We desire to call the attention of readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to the benefits of subscribing to the Truth Seeker Monthly Library. The yearly subscription is only $3, and subscribers to the Library receive a paper-bound copy of each book issued in it; or, if they desire the books in cloth binding, subscribers can remit the difference in price between paper and cloth binding, and get the books in the latter shape. So far this year subscribers to the Library have received "Paine Vindicated," by Colonel Ingersoll, price 15 cents; the "Creation of God," by Dr. Hartmann, price 50 cents; the "Resurrection of Jesus," by Don Allen, price 40 cents; "Crimes of Preachers," price 25 cents; the "Handbook of Freethought," by W. S. Bell, price 50 cents; "Religion a Curse," by S. P. Putnam, price 25 cents; "Design Argument Fallacies," price 15 cents; "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," price 25 cents, and "Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" price 50 cents. Other books besides are in preparation. One of these, we may mention, is "Pleasure and Progress," by A. M. Lorentz, LL.B., of which further notice will shortly be made. Send $3 and receive at once the books already published, and, as they appear, those which will be published between now and January, '94.

We have purchased the copyright and plates of A. Jacobson's "Bible Inquirer," and shall soon have ready the fourth edition of that admirable little book, of which Lincoln's old law partner, and biographer, Wm. H. Herndon, wrote to the author:

"A few days since I received your most excellent pamphlet, the 'Bible Inquirer,' and for which I am much obliged to you. It should be in everybody's hand.

"The arrangement is methodical and excellent. How any sane man or woman in the world can hold that the Bible is God's special revelation, as contended by the Christian world, I cannot conceive.

"Your one hundred and forty-eight propositions quoted from the Bible refute the idea that God had anything to do with the book. If God revealed it he is a poor God.

"It smells of the ignorant and barbarous human. It is a record of the struggle of the human soul in the process of its grand evolution to know the unknowable—to know nature—its laws, causes, etc. Your book is a manly attempt to enlighten the world on the subject of revelation, and I hope you will scatter the pamphlet over this broad land.

"You have done in this matter a most noble deed for humanity. It has most certainly cost you much intellectual toil and effort. Your pay will be the gratitude of your fellow-men. Among the great men of the world is he who removes ignorance and superstition, and substitutes therefor fact and science. You have done your duty bravely and nobly. I do sincerely recommend your book to all free Religionists, Liberals, and those who would be free. The book is a good thing; it is no sham; it is a fact—solid facts, well and sharply put."

As to the dream of Christian unity, Cardinal Gibbons says:

"There is a heartfelt desire for it, I am sure, among all good men. The Parliament of Religions was an evidence of it. But the essential principle of unity is a head, and there can be no union of Christians without a central authority. The successor of St. Peter is the head for members of the Christian faith, approved by our Lord himself."

Cardinal Gibbons is undoubtedly right as regards the necessity of a central authority in matters religious, especially in the case of a "universal" church. It is not possible otherwise to prevent schism and disintegration. Doubts must be smothered. The machinery of the organization can work smoothly only when the power is distributed through one great, central motor. What is true of religion is true of morals. To successfully establish a universal system of morals, heretics must be relentlessly crushed. All must conform their conduct to the one standard, that of the dominant party. In Christian ethics no account can be taken of temperamental, geographical, and racial differences. All priesthoods are alike. None can tolerate dissent. The bed is made to hold a man of a certain length. Those who have fallen short must be stretched, those who have been unfortunate enough to grow a little taller must be chopped down to fit. The universal church means the stagnant, it means the intolerant, it means the persecuting, church. The universal empire is another name for despotism. Had Rome, the mistress of the world, maintained her ancient power until to-day, or could Russia shadow the whole earth with her flag, would there be any political liberty? If the Catholic church had encountered no rivals, could Free-thought even whisper now? Uniformity is enforced conformity, cruelty, persecution, decay, dissolution.

Freethought Progress.

Toronto has no Sunday street cars yet but the Sunday omnibus movement is extending, several lines having been opened.

The barbers who do not want to work on Sunday seem determined that those who do shall not have the opportunity. It is the dog-in-the-manger trick again, but it is not always successful. Mayor Bevins, of Omaha, has just vetoed a Sunday-closing ordinance for barbers.

About two months ago the Boston Post began the issue of a Sunday edition, this making three Sunday papers in that city—the Herald, Globe, and Post. Now the Journal has made the trio a quartet. It is the only Republican Sunday paper in Boston. Of course the meddling preachers are raising a fuss about it. They are bound to defend their Sunday trust by fair means or foul.

Canon S. A. Barnett admits that the Japanese get on remarkably well without religion. He says: "No one is religious. I believe in nothing. I believe in myself! expresses the attitude of young Japan. The Japanese are curiously deficient in the religious sense." Yet by energy and versatility, Japan in science, education, and history now takes its place alongside the foremost nations.—London Freethinker.

If every modern theologian could receive, by a sudden inspiration, Professor Tyndall's openness of mind to all disclosures of truth, his earnestness of purpose in quest of truth, and his candor of statement in teaching truth, there would be an end to heresy trials; and the church universal would enjoy an illumination like that which used to make St. Peter's dome on Easter night a blaze of glory.—Rev. Dr. Abbott, in Outlook.

Lady Shelley has just presented the Shelley Memorial to University College, Oxford. Several clergymen were present, and the principal of the college, in acknowledging the gift, said that "the rebel of eighty years ago was the hero of the present century." It was University College from which Shelley was expelled for Atheism. Thus, to adopt Ingersoll's words, "the heretic of one age becomes the aureoled saint of the next!"—Secular Thought.

Readers will aid the cause by forwarding us names of their friends who might be interested in sample copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Woman: Four Centuries of Progress.

We are living to-day in the midst of glowing splendors. Our breath mingles with the bloom and beauty, the flowers and fragrance of the grandest hour since time began to be.

On either hand a multitude of honors and achievements meet and greet us.

The blossom of genius, the wealth of art, the glories of science, speak with a million eloquent tongues.

Reality, strong, supple, graceful, with queenly magnificence, dowers the world with strength and honor. As, with magician's wand, she has touched the hidden forces of Nature, lo, from centuries of growth and development, has unfolded the fairest fruitage of all the blooming earth.

It is eminently fitting and proper that the blossom of philosophy and reform should crown this unequalled exhibit of the world's great work and worth. Hence, science holds the jeweled coronal above the fair brow of Freethought to-day. Freethought, many times slandered, bruised, beaten, bleeding, martyred, yet now arisen, glorified, deified, arrayed in robes of consummate grace and glory—the pure white angel, and only savior of this, or any other world.

In the midst of the golden glory of the magical scenes unfolded before the enraptured vision stands woman, an active, honored coadjutor and friend. For the first time in modern history she is in her own place. For the first time her right to be a part of the forces that produce the beauty and delight of the world is acknowledged. For the first time she stands beside her brother in art, literature, industry, and science.

All honor to America for this recognition, a recognition, however, absolutely compelled by the hard work and persistency of woman, and the times in which we live; and it is right that in this new world the triumph of woman over old-time prejudices, over ancient and rigorous customs, should be complete and undisputed.

Just here it is pertinent to inquire why this present condition of things has not always obtained, why woman has not heretofore, as in the present, stood shoulder to shoulder, and hand in hand with man? What terrible force, what iniquitous powers have operated to keep her in ignorance, and what has made her a weakling, distrustful of herself? What had she done? what dreadful crime committed for which she was relegated to a back seat or no seat at all, in the world's great auditorium? What sins lay at her door that she should be compelled to do penance as long as she lived?

And what has changed the order of events? What has raised her to the position she occupies to-day? What power has brought to her the opportunities she now enjoys? What has broken the barriers that, not so long since, shut her from all that she now takes as her just right and due? Why is the consideration tendered her to-day, never vouchsafed her before? What in the past held her a slave, and what has changed her condition?

The above are a few of the inquiries we shall seek to answer, briefly and concisely as possible in the space assigned us upon this occasion.

When Isabella of Castile fitted out, at her own expense, the little squadron, that, launched on its voyage of discovery, was destined to touch into action the springs of a new world, little did she think what she a woman, was doing for the liberation of her sex. And, when Columbus sent a cargo of Indians to Spain as slaves and this true queen indignantly ordered them returned to their native land, it was then a ringing blow was struck at human slavery, a blow that has resounded down to the present, and still is ringing in the ears of dependent womanhood. It was then that Isabella unlatched the door to the woman's kingdom.

That she gave a reluctant consent to the establishment of the Inquisition only makes more apparent the angry sea of ecclesiasticism in which she as well as all other women of her time was engulfed. Man was there too, but his head was now and then above water. He could occasionally feel the breezes of liberty and understand which way they were blowing. But woman could neither see the real light nor experience the touch of the sweet winds of freedom.

She was enslaved without knowing it. She accepted her situation meekly. She thought she must. She was born and reared in subjection. Her pre-natal condition bore the stamp and seal of slavery. Her mother wore the badge and emblem of servitude before her.

Her "very chains and she grew friends,
So much a long communion tends
To make us what we are."

She was held as a species of property, along with chattels, animals, or real estate, created, as the Hebrews had it "solely for the pleasure of man," but "man was said to be made for the glory of God."

Petruchio in the "Taming of the Shrew," expresses the former, and to a great extent, the still prevalent notion of the ownership of woman, when he says,

"I will be master of what is mine own.
She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,
My household stuff, my field, my barn," my animal and so on.

This conception of the status of woman is recognized in the Episcopal marriage service. Some male relative must be present to respond "I do," to the question "Who gives this woman away?" thus implying that she is owned by somebody, and when she marries she simply changes masters.

No one gives the man away. He usually does that himself! and pretty effectually too, sometimes.

In Spain four hundred years ago, woman had learned the use of the needle and could sew and embroider, but it was not till the time of Elizabeth that the needle was known to any great extent in England. Four hundred years ago the general use of the table fork was unknown. The clergy from the pulpit denounced the article as devilish, an implement of Satan, and as flying in the face of divine wrath to use it at table when God had purposely made fingers to eat with.

Society, at that time, was loose and sensual. Woman was the beast of burden, the puppet, the plaything for man's amusement, or the serving mistress to come and go at his command, his vassal, and legitimate prey. She was unacquainted with her own nature, practically unknown to herself.

Perhaps she had a dim consciousness of something different than she had known, but, in the main, she knew no better than to acquiesce in a dreadful edict that had been put forth against her. Her sphere was compassed by one word—toil. It was bounded by one other word—submission. The mummy of an Egyptian woman represents her with a distaff in her hand and her finger upon her lips, signifying silence and labor.

Worn with fatigue and suffering, many times a mother, with all the consequent perils, trials, cares, and vicissitudes of motherhood, she was in no condition to realize any higher state than the one she occupied. Go look among the valleys and mountains of Italy, Switzerland, Russia, where women have toiled for eight hundred years in silence and servitude—go to Germany and Belgium and see women harnessed with dogs and sweating under the most abject toil, behold the condition of woman in every priest-ridden country, if you would understand a little of the slavery that still holds woman bound hand and foot. Go to France and those countries where prostitution is legalized, where, under the sanction of law, the bodies of women are made marketable merchandise, if you would realize somewhat of that ancient sacerdotal barbarism that has not even as yet taken its fingers from the throat of woman.

Nor need we go three thousand miles from home to find women bending beneath the yoke of a bondage dreadful to contemplate. Nay, nay, friends.

Go out upon the streets of this beautiful city, and behold women selling themselves for bread this very night. And mark ye the eager purchasers at every point. Mark ye, too, the men of standing, of influence, yea, those who are sent up to the nation's capital to frame the laws of the land, hesitating at nothing to accomplish the ruin of innocent women. Take off the veneer from aristocratic circles, and witness the surging of the filthy waves in the miasmatic lakes of pollution, where woman sinks to rise no more.

Go read the "age of consent" laws, disgracing the statute books of every state in the Union. Read the reports of indignities heaped upon young and innocent children, murdered oftentimes by the wolf of passion in man.

And, through it all, from beginning to end, may be traced the subserviency of woman herself—the victim and slave of falsehood and fear.

CAUSE OF WOMAN'S SUBJUGATION.

The cause of the subjugation of woman reaches far back, and is wound around with the rusted chain of ancient theology and a false faith. Under pagan rule woman was treated with honor and regard, and she had many rights and privileges which were lost to her under Christian rule.

If ever there was an ingeniously woven plot, it is that of the "Fall of Man," with Paul of Tarsus for its mouthpiece.

His words on the subject of women are deadly poison. "She was first in the transgression," said priestly Paul, "therefore keep her in subjection." "She shall not teach. She must not usurp authority over the man." "She must obey her husband," whatever he may command, and she "must keep silence." Why? Well, this is the reason given. "She was first deceived and not Adam!"

Realizing that she might desire to ask a question or two, might wish for some education, her schooling is provided for in this way by the sainted Paul: She can go home and ask her husband! Can anyone wonder that women, married women especially, were such absolute illiterates when they had such ignorant instructors as the husbands of the past! No provision having been made for old maids and widows, they have had the field to themselves.

It is needless to say that they have made good use of time, and show some progress! Paul also gave instruction as to how women should dress—that they should not wear gold, jewels, or pearls (see Paul's Epistle to Timothy), thus paving the way for masculine dressmakers. It was long after the death of Paul before women dared to wear rings and breastpins.

This reformer also left written orders how women should wear their back hair, long, of course, and braided. He is, for the most part, dutifully obeyed to this day, with some additions, as the French twist, bangs, and frizzles. He also commanded that woman should keep her head covered when she went to church, and that is presumably the reason, gentlemen, that you find yourselves presented with such marvelous milliners' bills, as to sometimes cause each particular hair of your heads to stand on end, like quills upon the fretful porcupine.

Strange enough, few names are dearer to the ordinary Christian woman's heart than that of Paul, yet no man has done more to bring disgrace, shame, and servitude upon women than this same Paul. No man has stood in the way of woman's progress as he has. No other man, primarily speaking, has caused her so much sorrow; none made her more dependent; none besmirched her name and fame as he has.

No man more deserves the contempt and scorn of woman.

An apple had been flung at the head of woman, and she was accused of the blackest crime in the calendar—that of introducing into the world all the shame, pain, woe, crime, and wretchedness in it, and we need contemplate only a portion of it to know how stupendous and monstrous the charge. She was not adjudged probably guilty, and bound over to a higher court for trial, but, without judge or jury, without being allowed one little word in self-defense, without a witness to attest her innocence or to prove an alibi, she was pronounced guilty, GUILTY, GUILTY!

She was drummed out of her garden home, according to the record, and her sentence pronounced, with no recommendation to mercy.

THE CANON LAW.

The canon law comprises that system of laws established by the Christian church in the ninth century, and based upon the Bible. These laws are the root and cause of the subjugation and degradation of women in Christian countries.

In 1632 a book was published in England in which it is declared that "the reason why women have no control in Parliament, why they make no laws, consent to none, abrogate none, is because of their original sin!"

This is the whole story in a nutshell. All the abuses, humiliations, cruelties, and indignities heaped upon woman in Christian countries may be traced directly and squarely to this source and nowhere else—the fable of original sin.

Listen to this from St. Chrysostom, Greek father of the church, commonly known as the golden-mouthed saint. This may be one of his golden utterances. Judge ye: "Woman is a necessary evil, a natural temptation, a desirable calamity, a domestic peril, a deadly fascination, and a painted ill."

Hark ye to what the great authority, Tertullian, a Latin father of the church, said: "Woman, thou shouldst ever be clothed in rags and in mourning, appearing only as a penitent, drowned in tears, and expiating thus the sin of having caused the fall of the human race. Woman, thou art the gate of the devil. It is thou who hast corrupted those whom Satan dare not attack face to face."

You will note that Tertullian regarded woman as worse than the devil.

St. Jerome wrote that "woman is the gate of the devil, the road to iniquity, the sting of the scorpion, in a word, a dangerous species." Jerome was the dirty fellow who lived in one garment till he died, letting his body go unwashed and half-starved, despising and mortifying the same, in order to preserve his soul. At the death of this notable saint, his ragged garment, full of lively tenants, was held up as proof of his right to be known as a saint and blessed martyr. This gave him the undoubted right to thus discourse regarding women.

These women were believed to be in league with the devil, and were consequently regarded with the utmost horror and suspicion. The persecutions came from the church, and George Combe says, in speaking of this shocking state of affairs, that "religion was employed to fan the flame of cruelty and superstition." John Wesley had said that to destroy the belief in witchcraft was to destroy the Bible—and Wesley was certainly right. The old superstitions have gone, many of them, and where, let me ask, is the Bible to-day?—tottering in weakness, a moldy mass of ignorance and superstition.

But little progress was made or could be expected under a general belief that woman had the power to change herself at will into a black cat, and in this guise perform all kinds of villainy, cruelty, and depredation, to cause pain and sickness, to blight crops and torture the innocent, to maliciously injure, to destroy and kill.

Satan was thought to be trying to go the Almighty one better, if I may be pardoned the phrase, in getting possession of the saints, and any maimed, unattractive, aged woman was liable to be accused of being a witch. In the present, times are so changed and opinions, that the young and attractive among women are the most bewitching witches.

It seems almost incredible that such men as Sir Matthew Hale in old England, and Cotton Mather in New England should lend themselves to gravely preside over a delusion like witchcraft. Yet such is superstition, and when blinded by religion, no one can calculate its harmful and deleterious effects upon the human mind.

Woman was now regarded with more suspicion than ever, and was continually urged by the fathers of the church to repent of her sins. Her business was to work and pray, and her only recreation a walk in the graveyard to view the place where she might shortly lie.

In such a situation she found herself hedged about and circumscribed, unable, from ignorance, to define her position, and too bewildered to lift herself above it if she knew it.

In England, as is stated by Herbert Spencer, "wives were bought from the fifth to the eleventh century. Women were whipped on slight provocation, and Christian gentlemen arranged pleasure parties to go to Bridewell to see the women whipped." And this public whipping of women was not abolished in England until 1817. In that country the wife calls her husband "master" to this day. In this country wives were bought by the early settlers in Virginia, and the price paid was one hundred and fifty pounds of tobacco. (See Eggleston's Hist.) The first persons publicly whipped in this country were women. They were tied to the tails of carts and whipped on their naked backs through the streets of Boston. Our police courts everywhere are still disgraced by wife-beaters, the frequency of whose appearance before the bar of so-called justice is a disgrace to present civilization.

As a result of the shameful burdens and bondage of woman, the ownership and slavery of the same, the Christian world has been, and is still, a hot-bed of sensuality and vice. When the mother is regarded solely as a house-cleaner, a scrub, drudge, and breeder of children—and I regret to say that too many regard her in this light only even to-day—what can be the outcome but laxity of morals and crime? When Lust is concealed under the title of Love, what can you expect but sin and sensuality? As the offspring of the inferiority and degradation of woman, planted and maintained by theology, behold in every town and city throughout the Christian world wells of immorality, sinks of iniquity, disgraceful to humanity and shocking to the moral sense of communities.

Two standards of morality have been adopted as a result of the teaching of the early theologians, one for woman, and another, quite different, for men.

And there can never be any great moral progress until there is but one code of morality, and that for all the universe alike.

The first Synod of the Reformation passed laws sanctioning polygamy. Martin Luther himself favored it, and the Bible gave it sanction.

Out of it has come the prostitution that goes hand in hand with our boasted civilization, planting itself before every church-door in Christendom, and which the church candidly admits it is powerless to wipe out.

Thus woman was stranded, as it were, on the rocks of superstition, a helpless and almost hopeless wreck, made so by ecclesiastical rulings and decisions, based entirely upon false and ruinous charges.

Gradually the tide arose, and woman found herself afloat, afloat on a cruel, treacherous sea, but still afloat. People were beginning to think, and to think aloud.

As the rigidity of early Christian teaching softened under the influence of the truths of science, the star of woman dimly appeared in the firmament.

A little learning was not to woman a dangerous thing, but the opening of a door letting in a little of the light of common sense. She had been kept in ignorance. She could not read. She could not write. Samuel Johnson claimed that "as the faculty of writing has been chiefly a masculine endowment, the reproach of making the world miserable was thus thrown upon women; and the grave and the merry have equally thought themselves at liberty to conclude, either with declamatory complaints, or satirical censures, of female folly or fickleness."

The effort made to allow her some advantages of education met with great disfavor and a terrible opposition.

The first plot of ground for a schoolhouse in this country was given by a woman, Bridget Grafton in 1700, but her sex was not allowed to attend that school. The entrance of girls to the first high school was most bitterly opposed, and it was only after great pleading, and the paying of taxes under protest, that they were admitted.

In France in the sixteenth century when Mme. de Saintonges attempted the opening of a school for girls, her father called in four eminent physicians to pronounce as to her sanity. To attempt to educate a girl was considered proof enough of mental derangement.

The whole duty of woman had been assigned her by the early Christian rulers—to make bread, and keep the cradle rocking—to bear children in sorrow and silence, and to bear the burdens not only of the household, but of out-door labors as well. Her path was indeed a weary one, marked by insult, wrong, blood, and tears, from which there seemed to be no appeal.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Ministers Giving Themselves Away Again.

Prof. Joseph Le Conte is an evolutionist. He is also a beloved instructor in the University of California. C. H. Hobart believes in the Bible. He is also a Baptist minister of Oakland. He thinks Professor Le Conte and his fellow-evolutionists in the chairs of the University of California are leading the students straight to hell. He is not afraid to say so. The consequence is a great time on the Pacific Coast. Professor Le Conte is a member of the Presbyterian church but he innocently admits that he is not as orthodox as some other members of that conventicle. The papers out there are filled with the pros and cons, and Rev. Mr. Hobart can have the satisfaction of knowing that he has helped along the cause of Freethought by his rash attack.

On Sunday, Oct. 15th., the San Francisco Examiner ran this question across the top of one of its pages—"Are Evolution and Christianity Reconcilable?"—and filled the page with closely-printed replies thereto, most of which were from ministers. One being by Mr. Hobart himself. President David Starr Jordan thinks that all scientific discoveries are "steadily bringing us toward a real conception of the meaning of Omnipotence," and hence taking us away from "godlessness." Rev. Charles W. Wendte takes the position that the University is too orthodox, and in connection with Professor Le Conte's "heresy," he mentions the receipt recently of a letter from England in acknowledgement of a copy of the Professor's book, "Evolution and Religion," in which the writer says: "It has saved me from Atheism." But the witty and gifted Ambrose Pierce contributes an answer, which, for keen satire and delicate ridicule of the Bible and its defenders, has not often been equaled. He simply transposes Evolution and the Bible and lashes the latter over the shoulders of the former. Here is his article in full:

Is the theory of Evolution reconcilable with the Christian Religion? Is the theory that a bull is an owl reconcilable with the hypothesis that a cow is a fish? Is the belief that twice two make seven consistent with the conviction that five can be divided by two without a remainder? Is total abstinence from strong drink compatible with addiction to the habit of toping double-distilled thunder and lightning out of a clamshell? Is rotundity of the earth identical with terrestrial hexagonality? Is an academy of science undergoing impairs the same thing as a church in the last throes of dissolution?

I do not say that all these "problems" are "pressing for solution" with an equal urgency; I say only that the discussion of them all with fit and becoming gravity would promote the gayety of nations. In the hope that at least some one of them may be so discussed by my collaborators in this competitive examination for controversial honors, lies the exceeding great reward of my participation. In apportioning the honors, (and if there are prizes, the prizes) I trust the editorial judges will be able to intelligently decide which is the more creditable —the generosity of the Evolutionist in veiling his contempt for religion, or the forbearance of the Religionist in disguising his hatred of Science? And truly I cannot but feel that something will be "coming" to me for frankness in confessing my esteem for both. One who can respect at the same time Science and Religion, can respect anything at any time, can discern the well-known "identity of interest between labor and capital," and is a good citizen.

When you come to think of it very hard the essential consistency between the Mosaic and the Darwinian Scriptures is obvious. For example, the former assures us on honor that the world, with everything infesting and impesting it—science, religion, and the mule excepted—was created in six days. In support of this view we see the Book of Evolution, passim, where it is averred that, like Topsy, the world "just grewed," consuming incalculable ages in the process. By the really enlightened understanding these apparently contradictory assertions are observed to be quite the same; the term "incalculable ages," as used by the inspired evolutionist, is merely "language." It means six days. The difficulty has all been caused by the stubborn insistence of the Scientists on the literal inspiration of their Good Book. That narrow and unintelligent view is now generally abandoned, and it is conceded that their Sacred Scribes wrote "with a perfect looseness." Much that is recorded with a dogmatic and severe particularity is to be understood in a Pickwickian sense, and some is not to be understood at all.

Take Herbert Spencer. Projecting his vision forward to the present discussion, he saw with a prophetic eye how he could assist. So he actually pointed out a common ground upon which Science and Religion could stand to compose their differences. He explained that they agreed in the one great essential doctrine that back of all that we can perceive is Something that we cannot perceive. This something which Religion calls God Science calls the Unknowable. Superb discovery—that two great systems are reconciled and practically one through the solvent power of a common ignorance!—that the true foundation and corner-stone of spiritual fellowship is intellectual darkness!

But even this magnificent discovery did not suit, nor win immediate acceptance, for the Religionist held that his God, while indubitably incomprehensible, was very knowable indeed—that He was known "by report divine" to be good, wise, powerful, loving, jealous, somewhat irritable, etc. So matters were really not very greatly better than before. But the reconcilers then, as now, were active and alert; no difficulty would daunt them. Being all in the Science camp, they soon agreed (and so preached) that St. Spencer was inspired only Pickwickwise, and his term "The Unknowable" must be understood in the sense appropriate to that inspiration; it meant God—known "by report divine" to be good, wise, powerful, loving, jealous, somewhat irritable, etc. So, Religion having in the immemorial way driven Science from another of its untenable outworks, the capture of the citadel was brought notably nearer in point of time; or, in more familiar metaphor, the complete deflagration of the parrot by the monkey was made imminent, though on some disputed points they are still having "a h-l of a time," it must with sorrow be confessed.

Innumerable examples might be cited of how the spirit of concession among the Scientists has brought about a practical agreement—a modus vivendi which promises to become the basis of a permanent treaty of peace. The Darwinian Scriptures affirm the slow descent of Man from an arboreal ancestor with a swim-bladder; the Mosaic says he was made at a single operation from a lump of clay and named Adam. Obviously these are two accounts of the same occurrence, as has been pointed out by the ingenious Professor Frump, of Gottingen. He says that the Darwinian account is either allegorical or a parable. He is himself unable to say which, but upon that point he quotes the learned Dr. Grump, of Bonn—who also is unable to say which. As to the advent of Woman upon this (thereafter) "distracted globe," the silence of the Evolutionists is most significant. It must be taken as singularly strong corroborative evidence of her creation from a raw rib. Of course that applies only to the first woman; the others, as Caliban says of the stars, "came otherwise."

But why multiply evidence of the essential identity of Evolution and the Christian religion? It must be obvious that when interpreted in the light of a sincere desire for peace and quietness, and given their true Pickwickian sense, all the knotty assertions of the book of Evolution are accurately confirmatory of those in the Hebrew and the Greek scriptures. It is only when not so understood that the one set of inspired scribes give the other the lie direct.

For further examples of that way of understanding things I feel that I can confidently refer to the work of some of the most distinguished of my collaborators in this day's controversy. If they happen to be mostly from the camp of Religion—well, let us accept it as a latter day miracle, which will itself go a long way toward confirming Revelation—for by miracles the truth of Revelation has been always best attested.

In conclusion, having said so much about Creation, I may venture to submit my own humble view of it; and this I do not only as a contribution of raw material for a scientific religion of the future, but in refutation of the erroneous doctrine that God made the world in six days and was arrested on the seventh. My notion of the matter is best set forth in a couplet:

God slept—suns, worlds sprang flaming into place,
God woke—His smile alone illumined apace.

Interpreting this couplet as well as we can, it would appear to state that God occupied bachelor apartments in vacuity for an indefinite eternity, reposing in slothful somnolence upon the downy couch of—nothing. Sometime he awoke, and, like the little child which opens its eyes on Christmas morning upon a room full of new toys, he was so tickled when he beheld the "suns, worlds," and other cosmographic paraphernalia that had materialized while he was taking his siesta, that he smiled with such tumultuous and expansiv hilarity that the Marsites thought Talmage had opened his mouth. The illumination was due to the conversion into light of the movement of his lips in smiling. This is believed to be the earliest authenticated instance of the operation of the Law of the Conservation and Correlation of Energy. If this translation is not sufficiently free doubtless Mr. Bierce in the kindness of his heart and his delightfully felicitous style will set us right.

News and Notes.

I left New York Saturday evening October 14th, on one of the magnificent sound steamers, which is a very delightful way of traveling from New York to Boston. There is an orchestra on board which fills the air with music. There is a fine table set, and the prices are really gorgeous and somewhat surpass the cuisine. A fine cabin is at your service, if you pay for it, and you can sleep comfortably until morning. You don't have to hurry to "awake, arise," for there are two express trains for Boston and you can take your choice.

Boston is an awfully lonesome place on Sunday; I feel as if I were in a country churchyard when I get there. The melancholy spirit of the Puritans seems to possess the place. I arrived in Boston at 7:30 a.m., and the cars do not run until 8 o'clock, and then like angel visits they are few and far between. The restaurants are not open, and you must remain both hungry and thirsty. The only thing that breaks the monotony is the faint odor of Boston baked beans. This gives you a sniff of good things to come, and reminds you that Boston is still the "Hub," even if it isn't the hubbublike New York. You can't get your boots blacked on Sunday in Boston unless the boot black takes you around the corner where the eye of the policeman is conveniently absent. I wonder if a boot-black keeps on the right side of a policeman by a division of the spoils; you have to pay twice as much on Sunday as on any other day.

Well, along toward afternoon Boston wakes up. The church people having performed their duties in a most solemn manner, the general masses begin to think of having a good time on the Common and round about and the streets look a little bit lively, and the swift-footed steeds adorn the avenues, and there is a sort of religious hilarity in sights and sounds, as if Yankee Doodle was being played on a church organ. There is a vast undercurrent of jollity in Boston, after all, on Sundays, but the casual observer is not in it. If one knows the ropes, however, he can see the elephant in a very quiet manner.

When I come to Investigator Hall in the afternoon I find, of course, the advance guard, and the true glory of Boston begins to appear—that which has made it such a stimulating memory and such a prophetic impulse, for Boston after all is the seat of Radicalism and it flourishes alongside of Conservatism with a life all its own. From Boston has flowed many a stream of progress, and the fountains are brimming yet.

It is pleasant to meet old comrades around the camp-fires of liberty. Washburn is back from the Congress and the World's Fair. Dr. Noyes I greet again, and Secretary Foster and President Rockwood and Reuben Rush—whose fiery oratory gave us a new impulse at Chicago—and his brother and Rush, Sr., who has borne our flag on two continents, and Babcock, my old Unitarian ministerial friend—for we were both together in the Liberal pulpit and have come together into the "unfenced universe"—and my young friend Chainey, who reminds me of old times, and upon whose brow are gathering the laurels of literary success—these I see and many more. And so my afternoon's lecture at Investigator Hall was a genial labor; the audience was that kind which makes one feel at home—a friendly and inspiring one—and Boston and Paine Hall have the warmest place in my heart, for its venerable and beautiful surroundings do give hope for the future.

After the lecture at Boston I take the train for Worcester, Mass., arriving just in time to go upon the platform and address the largest audience I have yet had in this city. W. B. Clark keeps things on the move here, and supplies mainly the sinews of war. A fine report of the lecture was given in the Worcester Telegram. I had a pleasant sojourn with Mr. Clark and his family, where THE TRUTH SEEKER sheds its rays. Mr. Clark's son, a member of the high school, is one of the most brilliant contributors to the Children's Corner, and takes to journalism with true Yankee genius.

Next I come to the Liberal Club, New York, where I lecture on Friday, October 20th, under the presidency of Dr. Foote, Jr. This club maintains its old-time prestige. The hall was full. The Liberal Club is a place where one must be on the lookout. He must be ready to defend himself; for, after the lecture, he is the subject of manifold criticisms. I lectured on "Freethought and Morality," and was followed by Macdonald, the sculptor, with a widespread discourse about almost everything the lecture included; and the audience liked his quaint and venerable manner, for he has been over fifty years in the Freethought movement. Mr. Wright said the lecture didn't amount to anything. He came to hear something, and didn't. What's the use of this Freethought talk—why not do something? Both Mr. Rowley and Mr. Wakeman ably replied to this attack, Mr. Wakeman showing that talk was absolutely necessary to agitation and to the enlightenment and education of the people, and no reform could get on without it, and that the first necessity of progress was the freedom of the mind. We must get rid of the dogmas and chains of the past before we can grapple with the great social problems and settle them on a true scientific basis. Mr. Rowley I met and heard for the first time, and he is a power upon the platform. He knows what he is talking about, and can make his points clear. He is one of the foremost debaters in our ranks.

The criticisms of the club were on the whole favorable with the exception of Mr. Wright. To this I answered that ideas must precede action. Before a reform can be practical, it must be ideal; it must be in the minds of men, and it can come into the mind as a commanding force only by talk—by the pen and the platform; and furthermore, that the chief thing now in the way of social advance is the church itself, whose intellectual authority must be destroyed, for people must nobly think before they can nobly act.

On Sunday, October 29th, I lectured before the Brooklyn Philosophical Association. Sixteen years ago, at its first organization, I gave a lecture before this club in 1878. Since then it has been growing in numbers and influence, and is now a recognized power. It is formed "for the attainment and diffusion of knowledge, on scientific, social, ethical, and religious subjects, and for comparison of ideas by means of lectures and discussions."

It meets at Long Island Business College on Eighth street, between Driggs and Bedford avenues. Its president is Joseph Warwick, a stalwart Freethinker, who gave me welcome sixteen years ago. H. A. Stone is vice-president, W. V. Winham, treasurer, Henry Rowley, corresponding secretary, and George E. Frederick, Jr., recording secretary. Its motto is, "The Truth shall make you free."

A fine audience was present to listen to my lecture on "The Bible and Modern Thought." A very interesting discussion took place afterwards, with much variety of thought and difference of view, but in the same direction as the lecture mainly. There was no orthodox to take the stand and defend the old doctrine. Every one of the speakers was more or less a heretic. Mr. Delmore Elwell first advanced to the arena. In a vague sort of way he believes in the Christian scheme of redemption, but is much more interested in the great question of poverty, and on that point indorsed the opinions of the lecture. However, he wanted to know what Freethought was doing to redeem the world to get rid not only of the Bible God but the God of mammon, which was now apparently the "Almighty God." He was followed by Wm. Hanson, well known among reformers, who takes the Bible in a sort of free and easy way—picks out the good things and lets the bad alone without saying much about it. He doesn't believe a thing because it's in the Bible, but if it happens to be in the Bible, the Bible is a good book to back it up with, being so universally accepted. The world had not yet come up to Moses on the land and usury question. As for Jesus he would idealize him, and God also, as creations of the human imagination and not real things; and to be made better as man grows better. We need not therefore trouble ourselves about the record of Jesus or the past conceptions of God, but look to the future and make our own ideas of these things more conformable to advanced reason and morality.

The Rev. Frank E. Mason next occupied the platform. He is a thorough-going idealist after the fashion of Berkeley, Fichte, and Schelling. Everything is subjectiv. There is no objective reality. The ego is all in all. Moses, Jesus, God, are not outside of us, only in our consciousness. Time is not a reality, but a concept. It is only a method of thought, and so is space. Matter is only a mode of the mind, a "concentration of limitation." Mr. Mason goes into his subject with a good deal of vivacity. He has evidently thought the subject out quite vigorously from his standpoint. His philosophy is pure transcendentalism. The ego is the center, and when the ego vanishes, then the universe vanishes also.

My valiant, materialistic ally, Rowley, attacked these statements with plenty of logic and wit. It was a delightful combat—the Idealist with the Realist—and the sparks flew, for there was matter in hand, and even Mr. Mason proved a solid substance and knew when he was hit. If I am subjectiv to Mr. Mason, says Rowley, why, then, Mr. Mason is subjectiv to me, and therefore does not exist. When I cease he ceases, and when he ceases I cease, and therefore both of us are nonentities, and the universe is annihilated. To assert that there is no objective reality, no real succession of events, is to make everything nothing. There is no such thing therefore as knowledge, no such thing as truth; no time, no space, according to Idealism. It is only the ego, and since the ego rests on vacuity, it itself becomes a nothing, and Mr. Mason vanishes from view on the tide of his own philosophy. Is he here, or is he there, or where is he?

Mr. St. John closed the animated discussion, pointing out the practical work of Freethought and the value of these destructive criticisms of the Bible.

I gave a reply of about ten minutes, in which I affirmed that the only possible way to settle any question was by science, and that science affirmed the objective reality of the universe, but that we could only know it through phenomena, as finite, not as infinite; that we know ourselves only as parts of the universe, not as separate from it, for in the very act of knowledge is included both subject and object; that in this universe we can improve our surroundings, and so from our standpoint at least make the world a better and more beautiful one.

Thus concluded a very varied and instructive discussion. I lecture before the same association again November 12th and November 26th.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

International Congress of Freethinkers.

FINANCIAL REPORT.

The Congress is now a thing of the past. This first Congress of its kind held in America, has met, transacted its business, and dispersed. It has now become a matter of history. But its influence will not wear off for some time to come. Freethinkers will speak of it to each other, it will be remembered in our correspondence, and its many little pleasantries will remain in our hearts yet awhile.

In justice to those who have helped in matters of finance to make it a success, to whose assistance in this relation its success was almost entirely due, I present for publication this statement of the moneys received and expended by myself in its behalf:

There had been placed in my hands by collection at the Congress, from all sources, the sum of...	$291 01
By subscription from the Freethought Federation.....	111 10
By subscription from the Secular Union.....	111 10
Returned by Federation to common fund by request of Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.....	25 00

Making a total received by me of..... $538 21

This amount has been expended, as here specified:

To hall rent, extra chairs, tables, etc.....	$81 00
To advertising.....	68 03
To translating foreign documents, typewriting, etc.....	28 30
To decorations, silk badges, etc., for committees,	15 70
To printing programs of Congress, and mailing same.....	45 65
To printing members' and lodge certificates.....	11 00
To payment of lecturers for services rendered.....	283 00
To personal expenses.....	12 00
To sundries.....	5 35

Making a total of..... $550 03

Total receipts..... 538 21

Balance due me..... $11 82

Of this balance due, the Federation has already paid me the sum of $6, leaving the sum of $5.82 due from the American Secular Union.

For the further information of those members of the joint committee who were not present at the final meeting on Tuesday, October 10th, I will say that this latter balance was occasioned by the agreement of the committee to include Mr. Reuben Rush among the list of paid lecturers. Immediately after the adjournment of the Congress, a meeting of the joint committee of arrangements was called for the above date, for the purpose of winding up its business relating thereto.

There were present at that meeting Samuel P. Putnam, E. C. Reichwald, Dr. J. H. Greer, and myself. A full, itemized report on finances was presented to the committee, which report being adopted as entirely satisfactory to all, the committee was then discharged and relieved from further obligations by Dr. Greer, who acted as chairman in the absence of Judge Waite.

The large number of delegates from Massachusetts to California, from Michigan to Florida, who attended the Congress; the good feeling of comradeship that prevailed upon all sides; the renewals of brotherhood, and exchanges of good-will, show that we are gaining in numbers and strength throughout the country. The good work of the Congress must not stop with its adjournment; let each one that attended carry it on in his or her own sphere. Keep it up by a constant and thorough agitation, and in the meantime prepare for another grand meeting next fall.

Those members of the Congress who have not received their certificates of membership therein may have them forwarded in due time by applying to me at 165 South Water street, Chicago, Ill.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Committee of Arrangements.

Death of Dr. A. G. Austin.

It is with feelings of inexpressible sorrow I announce the death of that good friend and staunch Liberal, Dr. A. G. Austin, of Williamson, Wayne county, New York, who died at his residence Oct. 2, 1893.

He was a deservedly popular and very successful physician and a surgeon of great skill, possessing wonderful nerve, coolness, and rapidity of action, born of confidence and real ability. A man of broad views, a generous, kindly nature, and fearless independence, he had supreme contempt for cant, hypocrisy, and shams. His opinions were ever expressed in language unmistakable; yet, despite his constantly avowed and aggressive infidelity, his benevolence, conviviality, and sterling honesty commanded the respect even of those who most differed from him.

His home, the "Old Stone Mansion," was the happiest and most delightful of resting places for pilgrim exponents of Liberalism, and in the exercise of hospitality he was ever ably seconded by his loved wife, who rivaled him in generous endeavor to promote the comfort and make glad the welcome of the Liberal pilgrim.

The doctor was for many years the leading musician of the town, and was always relied on to take the lead in every public enterprise.

No Liberal lecturer being available, his funeral was conducted by the Masonic fraternity, of which for many years he had been an honored member, hailing from Lodge 159, Eagle Chapter and Zenobia Commandery of Palmyra.

The doctor had a long and severe siege of suffering, alleviated by the unceasing, loving ministrations of his ever-faithful and devoted wife, who for thirty-six years was his true and trusted co-worker in every good work.

His heart, home, and hand were ever open to the call of need and the cause he loved. Now—

Pale, withered hands that, more than four-score years,
Had wrought for others, soothed the hurt of tears;
With science's skill allayed the fever's smarts,
Dropped balm of hope, in many despairing hearts;
Gentle hands, swift to act, courage undimmed,
By skill in surgeon's art so many saved;
Now in mute appeal they tell of labors done,
And well-earned rest—life's work well done.

Tacoma, Wash.

C. B. REYNOLDS,

Mr. Watts Relates An Incident of His Latest Trip Across the Atlantic.

We had a plentiful supply of the clerical profession on board, including two Catholic priests, and about twelve Protestant clergymen and ministers of various denominations. Some of these gentry appeared to be in no way influenced for good by their religion, so far as propriety of conversation in the retirement of the smoking-room was concerned. On one occasion, I good-naturedly inquired of two of those gentlemen if they were in the habit of entertaining their congregations with such stories as they related there. "Oh, no," replied one of them, "but we are taking our holiday and you know we are but men." This I readily understood, and it was also evident to me that their profession had not, in the matter of conversation, made them gentlemen in modesty and refinement of language, for it had never been my fate to listen to such questionable talk as some of those "pious servants of the Lord" indulged in. What a hollow mockery orthodox Christianity is as a factor in human conduct! We had one very devout clergyman on board, and he happened to share my state-room. Every night he occupied considerable time in prayer and Bible reading, and he very kindly asked me to join him in his pious exercises. I assured him that I had more profitable reading than the Bible afforded, as it was a book whose contents I knew fairly well, and that prayer was in no way in my line. This position upon my part gave rise to frequent and pleasant controversies upon the faith which was said once to have been delivered to the saints. One afternoon I heard this good shepherd preach to the steerage passengers. The cabin folks were not troubled much with sermons, except a brief one on Sunday. In addressing his somewhat motly crowd, the preacher urged them to follow Christ, that being the highest duty of every person. "My friends," said he, "Jesus is your friend; if he were here he would be a steerage passenger, for he preferred to be among the poor and lowly." The same evening, when we had retired to our state-room, I suggested to my clerical companion, that if he practiced what he preached he should quit the saloon and adjourn to the steerage, where he alleged Christ would be if he were on board. "Ah!" he replied, "we poor mortals have too much human nature in us, which prevents us emulating Christ in every particular." Upon this point we agreed.—Charles Watts in London Freethinker.

To the Liberals of Iowa.

As was shown by the secretary's late report, made at the Congress in Chicago, Iowa stands second among the states in members of the Freethought Federation. It gives about three hundred and fifty. Three hundred and fifty men and women, when they take the matter in their hands, can do a great amount of work for the cause of Freethought, and particularly for secularizing the government.

As the legislature meets this winter, no better opportunity could be given for active effort toward having church property taxed. We can begin educating the people, and while we may fail perhaps at the present time, our efforts will ultimately end in victory. I say this, as I understand that steps will be taken in the coming session of the general assembly to compel all ecclesiastical organizations to bear their just share of the public burden. Several different orders are working for this end and we should not lag behind. How can it be done? First, circulate literature upon the subject, showing the injustice of exemption. Talk the matter up among your friends. Write letters to your senators and representatives, and, above all, circulate petitions, which can be presented to the legislature when it meets.

I am about to start on a brief lecture tour throughout the state and will present a petition for signatures at the meetings. Later on, I hope to have some printed blanks for signatures, which can be had by writing me at Box 882, Des Moines, Iowa.

FRANKLIN STEINER.

Our London Letter.

Of all the bills brought forward by the present Liberal government, perhaps none has excited so much wrath in the minds of the parsons and their friends as the Veto bill, which is after all very mild in its way, and in the present state of the drink trade is greatly to be desired. One holy man has gone so far as to denounce it as a most unrighteous act, and urged upon his congregation to pray that the country might be preserved from this threatened evil. As beer and the Bible are such close allies, it is not greatly to be wondered at that one friend stands up so boldly for the other; but to my mind it seems fairly clear that it must be more or less a good measure, or it would not be opposed by the clerical interest. It has been always found that the church party steadily sets its face against anything proposed for the benefit of the public at large, and it is always safe to vote for any act that may be opposed by the religious bodies.

It must be admitted, however, that there are many shrewd parsons who are quite willing to go with the tide, though at the same time the majority of them are as bigoted and reactionary as ever they were, and in several large towns are doing all in their power to show their sentiments in this respect. In Birmingham, which has latterly gone back very considerably instead of forward, as it was doing before Chamberlain held it in thrall, prosecutions have been instituted against the vendors of newspapers on the first day of the week, as well as against the small shopkeepers, who cannot in their struggle for existence afford to take a much-needed rest one day in seven. In Inverness a solemn warning has been given to the faithful that iniquity is ripe amongst them, and that they are guilty of most heinous sins, young people having actually been seen walking in couples on the blessed Sabbath, which everyone knows to be a most fearful crime against God. If such absurd charges and persecutions exist in these comparatively enlightened times, what would the priests do, if they once more got the upper hand? The Protestants would be as intolerable as the Catholics, and there would be no peace for anyone outside the pale of the church. Secularism only can be a thorough safeguard and preservative of mental freedom. Were this extinguished, we should be speedily plunged into the darkness and ignorance of the Middle Ages, but fortunately Secularism is a growing power, and has too much life in it to be easily vanquished. It would seem almost as though clerical-ism was making its last stand, and it may be that the fabled battle of Armageddon may yet be fought, though not on the same ground as prophesied. Christianity so-called has existed a long time and has taken deep root, but long since it was attacked by decay which may be retarded, but cannot be arrested. But for all that, it will not do to be off guard, as the cursed creed may do much damage even in its death-throes.

In the school board a strong effort is being made to compel children to learn catechisms and other pernicious rubbish to the glory of the priests and the injury of the infant mind, and it will require some considerable effort to resist the innovation. Secularism is not yet strong enough to combat these insidious enemies in the open field, and can as yet only work cautiously and, to a certain extent, out of sight; but it will be a good day for this country when indifference is overcome and will join forces with avowed Secularism; when the utter destruction of supernaturalism will be accomplished, such freedom will be established as has never yet been known in historical times.

The disputes among believers are sometimes intensely amusing to those outside. Parker, the creator and preserver of the city temple, has had a glorious shindy with his organist, who has been foolish enough to perform on the church organ for seventeen years without pay. Unfortunately for him he did not blow Parker's trumpet also, and has been ejected with ignominy, which may perhaps open his eyes to the virtues possessed by the priesthood. It seems that there are weekly concerts given at the church, and the organist, who is also musical director, does not give Mrs. Parker all the best solo parts, the truth being that this good lady's voice is not pleasant to hear; and this greatly upset the bumptious shepherd, who declared his intention to "squash the choir and squash the organ," winding up with the words, "I dismiss you for the hellish position you have taken up." What a meek and humble disciple of the "gentle Jesus"! J. D.

Lectures and Meetings.

FRANKLIN STEINER desires to come East this fall and winter on a lecture trip, and would like to secure many engagements. His terms are very reasonable, and he should be kept busy. Address him at Des Moines, Ia.

The Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York.

J. E. REMSBURG has returned from an extended tour through Wisconsin, Minnesota, and South Dakota. His next trip will be to Nebraska, where he has the following dates:

Omaha,	Nov. 4	Seward,	Nov. 15, 16
Lyons,	" 5, 6	Cairo,	" 17
Ponca,	" 7, 8	Gibson,	" 18, 19
Tilden,	" 9, 10	Cambridge,	" 20, 21, 22
Hooper,	" 11, 12	Blue Hill,	" 23
North Bend,	" 13, 14	Hebron,	" 24

When these appointments are filled he will speak in Kansas.

As previously announced in our columns, John R. Charlesworth will commence a tour Eastward. The following appointments are on his list, and friends along the route desiring lectures should address him at once:

Nov. 3 Manhattan Liberal Club, New York.	Nov. 19 Boston, Mass.
" 5 Newark, N. J.	" 26 Philadelphia, Pa.
" 12 East Dennis, Mass.	Dec. 3 Alliance, O.
" 14, 15, Osterville, "	" 14, 15, 16, Waterloo, Ind.
" 16 Cotuit, "	" 17 Chicago, Ill.

The Brooklyn Philosophical Association holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of Lectures for November: November 5th.—Mr. T. B. Wakeman, "Christianity and After."

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, will meet on and after October 17th in the Skerrett Building, northeast corner of Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock.

November 7th.—Miss Voltairine de Cleyre. (Subject to be announced hereafter.)

THE OHIO LIBERAL SOCIETY meets in College Hall, 168 Walnut street, Cincinnati, Sunday evenings at 7:45, prompt. Admission is free. Program to December:

November 5th.—C. O. Wilmot, "The Christ of Myth and Mystery."

THE Science Sermons Society has been organized in New York city, to hold Sunday evening meetings in the lecture room of Dr. Collyer's church, Park avenue and Thirty-fourth street. The lectures on "Life and the Conditions of Survival," provided for the Brooklyn Ethical Association, will be repeated in the New York meetings, and other lectures of similar trend will be given in alternation with them. The first meeting will be held November 5th at 8 o'clock, and addressed by Dr. L. G. Janes, Henry Frank, Helen H. Gardener, Rev. G. W. Samson, and others.

Letters of Friends.

Cheers for the Federation.

TRUXTON, N. Y., Oct. 18, E. M. 293.

MR. EDITOR: I again renew my subscription for THE TRUTH SEEKER. Am much pleased with the Freethought Federation, and hope that it will be a success, and I think that I will become a member of it before long. I think much of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and do not know what I will do without it, when, if ever, the time comes that I cannot pay for it. With best wishes for its welfare and that of its many friends, I am, as ever, a Freethinker, who is doing what he can for Freethought.

JOHN DEAN.

Reason Stands Erect.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL., Oct. 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $3 to renew my subscription. Also $1, for which send me a dozen "False Claims," by Remsburg, and one copy of Ingersoll's "What Must We Do to be Saved?"

I am seventy-five years of age, and want to live to vote for Robert G. Ingersoll, the greatest man in the world. We will nominate him, and get up an electoral ticket, and I will vote for him in opposition to all other men in the United States, if they won't help. Let us show a bold front and fight against fraud and superstition.

Reason stands erect,
Superstition kneels.

Yours for liberty and Liberalism,
JONAS SCOTT.

Nature Proves the Falsity of Religion.

BEE, N. B., Oct. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $8.25 for which please send me the following: THE TRUTH SEEKER (renewal of subscription); "The Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind;" "Mistakes of Moses," cloth; "Gods and Other Lectures;" "Crimes of Preachers;" "Design Argument Fallacies," and "Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle." Please send me catalog.

The more we learn of nature the less we think we know, and yet but a slight acquaintance with the wonders of nature is positive and absolute evidence that all religions of mankind of whatsoever shade or degree of ignorance or intelligence are but superstition and priestcraft—nothing more and, most assuredly, nothing less.

Yours truly, CALVIN J. WRIGHT.

Wanted! A Stenographer to Report Sermons.

TALLAHASSEE, FLA., Oct. 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please accept inclosed $5 for two years' subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Ignorance and superstition are my immediate neighbors; three churches within six hundred yards; three meetings every week in each, where they howl in circles and squares, and dance the round dance until 12 to 2 o'clock every night; then go home howling like coyotes. Yet but few of them will pay their debts. Every negro in the community is taught from infancy that the acme of all that is good and great is to become a negro preacher, and all of the smart Alecks among them want to preach; and they all think the one who can howl the longest and loudest is the greatest preacher. A good, expert shorthand writer, stationed outside the church, could certainly amuse the world with a verbatim report of their sermons. Please send one along. I will board him free and pay liberally for sermons. I think they would be splendid for dyspepsia cures. Ever yours for Truth,

W. B. RADFORD.

Please Heed Elminá's Kindly Words.

SNOWVILLE, Va., Oct. 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to call your attention to "Hacker's Last Song." It is a poem of seventy-five verses, and embodies the thoughts of a lifetime of Liberal study and experience. It is his last legacy to the public, for which he has worked so many years. He has spent nearly $50 of his meager income in publishing the book and long months of labor in getting it up. Old, feeble, deaf, and nearly blind, he still longs to help a needing world to see the truths of Liberalism. This pleasant jingle of rhymes will impress the memory more than simple matter-of-fact prose. Here is a verse, for instance, telling of the man after God's own heart—King David:

He supported himself
And large harem by war,
And did many things
That would hang a man now,
If not king or priest,
But belonged to the plow.
Turn to his psalm,
One hundred and nine,
And read his long prayer
That the book calls divine.
Then think if a devil
Could pray any worse,
For the wickedest sinner
He wanted to curse.

The poem is historical, useful, and cutting. It hacks Bible, priest, and myths into ten thousand bits, and teaches truth, virtue, and honesty as the true road to right and peace. I hope it will sell well. It will do good, and will be some reward to an old man who has given the work of a long life to the spread of broad, Liberal, and useful thought. If any of you feel like adding a small bonus to the price (fifteen cents), it will be doing a kindly deed where it will help and encourage. Jeremiah Hacker's address is Vineland, N. J.

ELMINA.

Talking to Uncle John in a Friendly Way.

BRAYTON, N. Y., Oct. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I want to talk to John Peck a few minutes. Well, Uncle John, I see that you have been criticising my article in THE TRUTH SEEKER of September 2d, which you think was calculated to deceive and lead men from the truth. Now, I will say the same by your criticism, for it was written on assumption, and I might as well say presumption, for I fail to see one fact in all of the points that you have made. You say: Suppose a mortgage was given when wheat was $2 per bushel and it fell to fifty cents, how is he to pay? Now change it about, and say the mortgage was given when wheat was fifty cents, and it rose to $2; what then, Uncle John? Then, nothing; we all must take our chances in life, either up or down as time moves onward. When I first read your article I thought I would not notice it—let it pass in silence. Then I thought that John would take that as an insult. I saw his sympathies were on the side of the strikers, who were clamoring for higher pay and shorter hours. Well, I thought that the strikers were like the old-fashioned Christians, who put on the thumb-screws to make Infidels recant; the striker thought he would put on the thumb-screws and bring his employer to terms. I have no sympathy for the striker who kills so many good people, for he is free to go away to some other place, or eat cat or crow, and live in a crowded shanty if he chooses. But you say he has nothing to eat. If he had nothing to eat or nothing to buy with, he never would strike; and here is proof that he has something ahead to live on, or he would not strike.

Well, Uncle John, I think it is about time to close up the gap. It is not productive of much good in a family to quarrel over small things; the churches would accuse us of immorality, at least give us a bad name and say that Infidels are not what they claim to be.

ASA W. BRAYTON.

An Enthusiastic Admirer of Wettstein and Peck.

PRAIRIE DEPOT, O., Sept. 27, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am a red-hot Infidel, and I call myself before the public a Materialist, an Agnostic, a heretic, a Freethinker, and I have had a red-hot time here talking to the people.

It is my intention to start a Freethought club and to name it the "Pioneer Freethought Club of Freeport." It seems this little place has more Liberal-minded people in it than most of the small burgs into which I have happened to stumble.

I have been what you might term an out-and-out Infidel for at least twenty-five years and have taken THE TRUTH SEEKER from the second year of Mr. D. M. Bennett's residence in New York city and have during all this time been an ardent reader of the paper, and consider that most of the knowledge I now flatter myself as being the possessor of I got from reading it and the Boston Investigator, which I took for three years, and the Freethinker's Magazine, which I took for one year,

All of these I consider very able papers, and also the Ironclad Age, and Secular Thought, especially when Charles Watts was at its helm. Your own articles and editorials at present have a charm for me and I consider the reading of them my greatest pleasure; and on Sunday, while groups of people are reciting to one another some of the things that were new fifty years ago, I am quietly sitting in my back room behind my paper and taking in every sentence of those scientific dissertations of yours, as well as those of grand Otto Wettstein, and occasionally one of our old sledgehammer, John Peck, the grand blacksmith who can hammer the church and old nonsense far worse than any other thing that ever got a hammering. It does me good to see him (Otto Wettstein) throw rocks at his lady correspondent.

C. C. GERMANN.

Our Confession of Faith.

RAT PORTAGE, ORE., Oct. 5, 1893.

Of a place of bliss or woe or a god we nothing know;
Or a bread-and-wine, ever-dying savior;
Or hereditary sin, that priests claim leaves a stain
On all human, lofty, pure endeavor.

Or a good and noble man who would sacrifice his son
At a devil or a god's instigation;
Or turn wife and child adrift—a man like this deserved a lift,
And a thorough, well-laid-on castigation.

And we never knew a whale, in either calm or gale,
Turn itself into a free excursion packet,
And carry truant priests, to give warnings or love feasts,
Or any other silly, senseless racket.

We could God a lesson teach, how to get a fraud to preach,
And his little, trifling story glibly chatter.
Had he promised bigger pay Jonah would have ta'en the way
To Nineveh—or to hell for that matter.

And we never knew prayer prevent woe or care,
Or raise one lonely bunch of tomatoes,
Cure a broken leg, build a house, or lay an egg,
Or supply a starving pauper with potatoes.

But we know a queer old book, the delight of every crook,
That has more pious lies in its pages,
Than throughout the world you'll find in all other books combined—
'Tis the inspiration lie deposit of the superstitious ages.

When by sickness low we're laid we depend on human aid
To soothe, comfort, and deliver when it can,
And in health our joys we find in community of mind,
And our trust is in the brotherhood of man.

When superstition dies and its priest's gone with his lies,
And the human race no longer dreads his ban,
Our mottoes then will be, "Fraternal equality,"
And, "Our brotherhood's the whole race of man."

TOM WALKER.

When superstition dies and its priest's gone with his lies,
And the human race no longer dreads his ban,
Our mottoes then will be, "Fraternal equality,"
And, "Our brotherhood's the whole race of man."

When superstition dies and its priest's gone with his lies,
And the human race no longer dreads his ban,
Our mottoes then will be, "Fraternal equality,"
And, "Our brotherhood's the whole race of man."

When superstition dies and its priest's gone with his lies,
And the human race no longer dreads his ban,
Our mottoes then will be, "Fraternal equality,"
And, "Our brotherhood's the whole race of man."

Could Not Work the Scheme Without Judas.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Oct. 8, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The following letter, addressed to a prominent chicken-eater, has thus far failed to receive notice or reply:

Reverend Sir: In one of your discourses you took pains to denounce the treachery of Judas Iscariot, and asserted that he hung himself through remorse. Now, Judas played a most important part in the Christian scheme of salvation, and I rise to protest against his being censured for the part he played in the work of saving mankind from the wrath of God. Christianity teaches that God sent his son Jesus into this world to undergo a violent death, that his anger and vengeance toward a sinful race might be appeased through the shedding of that son's blood. Nothing but blood would do the business; that is understood. Now, if this fore-ordained method of bringing salvation to a sinful world was a scheme of God himself, did not everything occur just as God intended it should? If so, why is Judas Iscariot denounced for betraying or revealing the son of God, who came on purpose to shed his blood and die for others? Why, too, is Pontius Pilate blamed for condemning Jesus to death? Could Jesus have been betrayed without a betrayer, condemned without a judge, or executed without executioners? If not, were not his betrayer, his judge, and his executioners just as necessary in perfecting this salvation scheme as the chief actor himself?

If God wanted blood to appease his wrath, did he not have to provide some person or persons to shed it, or do the job himself? And if those persons did exactly as God willed they should do, wherein can you consistently find cause to blame them?

If your future happiness and salvation were secured through the acts of Judas Iscariot, Pontius Pilate, and the soldiers who carried out the sentence of death, which made your entrance into heaven a possibility, why blame any of them? They simply did the will of your God, and were his instruments in that scheme of vicarious atonement which destroys all individual responsibility and makes Jesus the pack-horse for sins and the savior of sinners, who need only believe this trash in order to be saved. For the Bible distinctly says: "By faith are you saved and not through works lest any man should boast."

Such doctrines are an outrage on common sense, as Thomas Paine declared, and have done more to develop criminals and hypocrites, bilks and frauds than anything else you can name. Only believe, gape, and swallow and you are saved, though your name be Jack-the-Ripper or any other cut-throat's. This is Christianity, and my dear but deluded sir the world has had too much of it already, and it is high time it ceased to be preached and promulgated by any person who knows the value of reason or possesses common sense.

In conclusion, allow me to say that the old riddle called the Bible has two different accounts of the way Judas died; so you have no means of knowing whether he hung himself or not, as you will see by comparing Matt xxvii with Acts i, 18. How do you account for such discrepancies in an infallible book?

A direct answer to these queries will be acceptable to
C. SEVERANCE.

What Is Christianity, Anyway?

ROANOK, Mo., Aug. 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: On account of the vigorous manner in which St. Paul denounced the opposing religious sects of his day, it has been thought by some that he still retained, in spite of the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost, a spirit of religious intolerance imbibed originally, perhaps, from the teaching of Gamaliel, his former preceptor. Or, it may have been a legacy inherited from a long line of fanatical religious predecessors. Be this as it may, it cannot be denied that St. Paul's intolerance, his hatred and utter detestation of rival religious sects became more and more intense as he advanced in the ministry of the new religion. It is evident that he, like those of his calling of the present day, could scarcely endure the opposition to priestly rule, which even at this time appears to have been springing up. That St. Paul, intentionally or otherwise, inculcated the principle of religious intolerance and hate in propagating the new theology cannot be denied. He, with other illustrious exemplars known to have existed in the primitive times, taken in connection with the subsequent history of the church, explains why it is that about ninety-nine per cent of the professed followers of J. Christ have been so relentless in their persecution of those who rejected the absurd dogmas of their creed. Hence the spirit of cruelty and uncompromising religious intolerance always controlled the law-making powers of the church. This same spirit of hate has been conspicuously characteristic of most all the great religious reformers of both ancient and modern times.

This identical spirit of implacable hatred and persecution, like a grim-visaged specter, for many long centuries has been standing composedly at the helm of "the old ship of Zion," before whose rugged prow millions have sunk to rise no more, not being considered worthy to be taken on board, on account either of their total unbelief or their fidelity to some rival system of religious worship.

This very intolerant controlling element in the church in times past, in its utter disregard of the sacred rights of others, and through mercenary motives, with a view to extending the range of its ecclesiastical jurisdiction, carried the religion of Jesus across mountains and seas. In their enterprising zeal they have spread it over entire continents; under their fostering care all other forms of religious worship have been supplanted; with an iron heel they have sought to crush all opposition into the earth; with their unlimited revenue, wrested from the calloused palms of unrequited toil, they have built costly cathedrals and founded great universities, and for whom? For the express benefit of the clergy, and none others. Theology was the principal feature; the sciences were considered to be of but little value, only so far as they could be utilized as auxiliaries of the church; no one known to entertain unorthodox views, or opinions in any way hostile to the church, were permitted to enter their great institutions of learning. For centuries the church built no asylums for the insane. What is now known to be a mental malady produced by abnormal conditions of the brain was considered by the learned spiritual doctors to be the outward or physical manifestations of diabolical spirits that had taken possession within. The unfortunate victim was not considered worthy of scientific or humane treatment. J. Christ, "the great physician," having authoritatively declared that this particular class of patients could be healed only by clerical exorcism, accompanied by prolonged "fasting and prayer."

It was the chosen representatives of the foul spirit of bigoted intolerance so largely diffused among the clergy and lay members of the church that made laws for the extirpation of heretics, the burning of witches, and the stripping of Quaker women to the waist, and whipping them publicly on the streets, as evidenced by reference to the history of the Colonial age in our own country near the close of the seventeenth century. Intolerance, and implacable hatred of rival systems of religion, in connection with inordinate greed, an insatiable desire for gold, is the power behind the throne that sends missionaries to the heathen, that usurps their government, confiscates their property, ransacks their country in quest of gold, demoralizes and degrades the unsophisticated savage with rum and opium, deprives the people of their personal liberty and lays the country under tribute for the support of an ecclesiastical despotism more cruel and relentless in the enforcement of its arbitrary law than any form of secular government ever known to exist among semi-barbaric tribes of men. Under the strange infatuation, or impulse, of this terrible delusion the fanatical Christian views, with a heart unmoved by sympathy, the extreme destitution and wretchedness now prevailing, to an alarming extent, throughout Christendom, while with a lavish hand he dispenses his charities among the unappreciative, naked savages of the jungle. As long as the wild, untamed Hottentot can be proselytized, or won to the Christian faith, they that are destitute and helpless may go unprovided for though dwelling in the heart of the most opulent Christian country on the face of the globe.

This controlling, intolerant element, not being content with manipulating the law-making machinery of the church, seeks to extend the field of her aggressive operations by invading the domain of secular government where she can direct the military arm of the body-politic in a final effort to compel a universal acknowledgment of the absurd theological dogmas of her creed. Eliminate the fiendish record of this element or class of intolerant Christians from the true history of the church, and there remains but little to be said of her achievements or influence on the world during all the ages that are past. It is true the church—her temporal power being on the wane—has become civilized to a degree that she does not so often emphasize her resentment, her detestation and hatred of the unbeliever, by a direct application of brute force, "as in the days of yore," but her zeal, and her morbid delight in picturing the horrors to which the unbeliever is thought to be exposed has not abated one particle. The writer remembers quite distinctly an instance of a spiritual doctor, who, having exhausted his oratorical powers in depicting the agonies of the damned in hell, brought his sermon to a close. He had scarcely retired to his seat, when the following consoling stanza,

Oh! I mean to shout glory
When this world's all on fire,
Hallelujah! etc.,

broke from the pious mouths of most every professing soul in the house.

Now if it is true, as we sometimes hear it alleged by the apologist, that Christendom is not Christianity; that the professed followers of Christ do love their enemies and treat them kindly; that they do not persecute for opinion's sake; that they love one another and do not engage in carnal warfare with each other; that they do not construct implements and make munitions of war to blow each other off the face of the earth; that they are temperate in all things; that they do not distrust each other's integrity; that they are not dishonest; that they do not take advantage of the stupidity of their fellow-man in business transactions; that when smitten on one cheek they invariably turn the other; that they do not practice any of the vices to which a depraved nature is addicted; that they are meek and lowly in spirit; that they are not cruel, haughty, and scornful to their inferiors—their subordinates; that they are not treacherous to their friends and ungrateful to their benefactors; that they willingly concede to others all the rights, privileges, and immunities that they claim for themselves—in a word, if it be a fact that the genuine Christian indulges in none of these vices and commits none of these crimes; if Christendom is not Christianity, it must be granted that the following of J. Christ is a very insignificant party indeed; that it is not and never was a noticeable factor in the solution of any of the grave and complex problems connected with the history of the world. None of the grand achievements that were in any way conducive to the development of the arts and sciences that have contributed to the present advanced civilization were the result of the alleged beneficent influence of Christianity. It must be admitted that the malevolent spirit of religious intolerance, relentless cruelty, implacable hatred, and systematic social ostracism is the fundamental principle of practical Christianity, the logical development of the plain declaration of the guileless Nazarene that, "unless you hate father and mother, brother and sister, wife and children, yea, and your own life also, you cannot be my disciples."

W. E. WALTON.

Some Bible "Spirituality."

YPSILANTI, MICH., Sept. 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The question has often arisen in my mind why a perfectly pure and holy angel should have had any desire to rebel in heaven. When young I have heard it said in the pulpit that it was ambition to rule, instead of serve. This to my mind was never entirely satisfactory, although I supposed it must be true. The other day, when reading the account of the prodigal son it seemed to me I had found a solution more in accord with my mind. It seems the father had two sons, the younger requesting that his portion might be given him that he might strike out for himself, to which request the kind father readily acceded. After taking his leave, he seems (according to the account) to have sought out and made the acquaintance of all the Lot's daughters, Madams Tamar, Rahabs, Ruths, beautiful Abigail, and Bathshebas, he could find, who, according to the account, quietly relieved him of his bank account, leaving him dead broke. After finding himself thrown upon his own resources, and taking his bearings, he sought other occupation. Fortunately he found it, but not finding it to suit his tastes, he concluded to "throw up the sponge" and return to the old hive, which he accordingly did, his kind and generous old father meeting him with open arms. This was all right so far. Had he stopped here everything would have been lovely; but this was not enough. He must have the best robe, gloves on his hands, rings on his fingers, shoes on his feet, a great feast of the fatted calf, with music and dancing thrown in. His elder brother, who it appears had not been apprised of his failure in business or return, on inquiring the cause of the feasting, was jealous, or, as the scripture has it, "was angry," and would not go in. Therefore came his father and entreated him. Hear his answer: "Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I thy command at any time, yet thou never gavest me a kid to make merry with my friends," or expressed any gratitude for so doing; but as soon as my brother was come, who "has spent thy living with harlots," everything else is forgotten in the excitement. It seems to me we find here the key to the "rebellion in heaven." Scripture informs us "there is more joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth than over ninety and nine just persons that need no repentance." Who are these just persons that need no repentance? As all on earth have sinned or come short, it must have meant those who had not sinned—viz., the angels. Now isn't it just possible, if not probable, that in witnessing the marvelous demonstrations these repenting sinners were able to call forth, these unhatched devils felt a little inclined to imitate these new-comers who had raised hell on earth in order to attract a little attention to themselves, or in other words, to also create "joy in heaven?" never for a moment expecting to be expelled for so doing before they would have time to repent. But failing to connect, they brought on the first war of which we ever read. (I would like Brother John Peck's opinion on the subject.)

Speaking of this heavenly war, calls to mind the remark of a preacher who was having a gospel racket at the time the cyclone struck us last spring. He stated to his hearers that it was clearly the work of the devil; that he was still in heaven tempting the saints, but he could not see what he wanted there. I said: "Friend, that is all clear to me; you know the scripture informs us he drew away the third part of heaven in his first skirmish of 'three days.' Now he has been studying the situation, getting all the strategic points, sees where he failed, expects to remedy all that and get the other two-thirds; the chances are he will succeed, as he generally does."

I notice the religious Congress now being held in Chicago is having a regular love feast—Catholics, Protestants of all sects, Brahmans, Buddhists, Jews, etc. It must be refreshing to see the Protestant put his loving arms around the Catholic representatives present, after denouncing them for the last hundred years. Still, we are inclined to think if the "lamb lies down with the wolf" it will be inside, instead of outside, of him.

It is the nature of all supernatural religions to be intolerant, especially so with the old Hebrew and its offspring, the Christian. Take, for instance, the command, "If thy son, or the wife of thy bosom entice thee saying, Let us go and worship other gods, thine eye shall not spare or pity, but thou shalt surely put them to death." As we come along to St. Paul's day, we find him trailing men and women, committing them to prison and stoning them to death. This was Paul the Pharisee. Later on the Jewish god by a stroke of lightning knocked the Pharisaic staffing out of him, replacing it with the Christian. Listen to him now: "If any man bring any other gospel unto you than that we have preached, let him be accursed." Again: "I would that they were even cut off that trouble you," and he might truthfully have added—If I had the chief priest and pharisees to back me, I would see to it they were cut off. This particular friend of woman could say, for "I know that in my flesh dwell no good thing." Was there no truth, no honesty, no honor, no filial affection, no justice, no humanity in him? These are all qualities that belong to the flesh. He also said he "became all things to all men." He could preach circumcision or uncircumcision, law or no law, as the case might be; he could boast of "being crafty" or catching people "with guile;" he could dissemble, while condemning the same in others; he could boast of "lying for the glory of God;" he could "become a fool for Christ's sake." Is it any wonder that he should have been called the "offscouring of all things?" It would seem he came dangerously near the line, so much so that his God found it necessary to "plant a thorn in his flesh." And yet with all this he could say, "I have lived with all good conscience to this day." Here we have St. Paul the Christian! If all the above be true, he ought to have had a dozen thorns instead of one, and each one as large as a crowbar.

Surely Judaism is a cast-iron creed, Brother Abram S. Isaacs's opinion in the Arena to the contrary notwithstanding, and no one who has studied both will ever be led to suspect that Christianity is not its legitimate child. They believed in the same God; both believed in witchcraft and in its destruction; both believed in and practiced slavery; both taught that all governments received their commission from God, instead of the "consent of the governed." Indeed, in almost all the essentials they were identical. It is true Christianity has substituted some things in place of the old, viz., baptism in place of circumcision, Sunday for Sabbath, the Lord's supper for the passover, etc.; but the object or intent is the same.

A good Christian brother said to me: "Why do you always take a literal view of scriptural passages when so much of God's word must be understood in a spiritual sense?" I replied: "I fear the curse St. John pronounced in the last chapter of Revelation upon those who added to or took from it. As it is impossible for me to distinguish the one from the other, I think it safest to take the common-sense view. Now I like St. John, for he tells us something about heaven, while St. Paul, who also went there, keeps mum, although he went into the third heaven. St. John tells us something about the beast that run to heads and horns, having seven heads, and nine and ten horns. St. John also tells us about the scarlet woman that he calls—he calls—well, the Mary Magdalen before the wholesale delivery of devils. My friend, do you think they were real devils? If so, were they old or young ones? Don't you think the devils felt quite as much relief as the poor woman? I think if they were real, genuine devils they were never caught in that trap like a flock of quails the second time. Again, do you think when Peter cut off Malchus's ear, and Judas hanged himself, they were spiritual transactions? And again; do you think it a spiritual performance when the devil took Christ and lifted him to the pinnacle of the temple, and tried to get him to cast himself down headlong, quoting scripture to induce him to do so? That, you know, is represented to be a temptation. I see nothing of the kind about it; it was simply a question of life and death; he knew that if he cast himself down all the angels in Jerusalem would not save him from being dashed to pieces. Do you think when Jesus turned the water into wine it was a spiritual or real wine? Going back to the Old Testament times—was David's performance with Bathsheba wholly a spiritual affair? Do you think Solomon was under the inspiration of the spirit when he selected the thousand women to make up his little family? Do you think the Philistines thought it a spiritual affair when David made his raid among them to obtain the material to pay for his wife Michal? How much spirituality was there in the flood, in the Judah and Tamar affair, in Lot and his daughters, in the Onan affair, in which he lost his life? The only mistake in this last was that there should have been three funerals instead of one, and that would have wound up the disgusting business—the originator as well as the participants should have filled the same grave. Please explain to me the spiritual significance of all the above cases." He looked as though he had been telescoped in a wheelbarrow train. "I recall but one passage where we are warranted in taking a spiritual view of it: God is said to have put a lying spirit in the mouths of his prophets, that they might deceive, but I fail to see the need for going abroad for liars and deceivers; the church can furnish all that is needed and discount the foreign article every time and then declare a dividend. Witness the long list of names sent into Congress to close the Fair; more than the census gave the states."

JAMES P. DICKENSON.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Old Stone Basin.

In the heart of the busy city,
In the scorching noontide heat,
A sound of bubbling water
Falls on the din of the street,

It falls in a gray stone basin;
And over the cool, wet brink
The heads of thirsty horses
Each moment are stretched to drink.

And, peeping among the crowding heads,
As the horses come and go,
"The Gift of Three Little Sisters"
Is read on the stone below.

Ah! beasts are not taught letters,
They know no alphabet;
And never a horse in all these years
Has read the words—and yet

I think that each toil-worn creature,
Who stops to drink by the way,
His thanks in his own dumb fashion
To the sisters small must pay.

Years have gone by since busy hands
Wrought at the basin's stone;
The kindly little sisters
Are all to women grown.

I do not know their home or faces,
Or the name they bear to men;
But the sweetness of their gracious deed
Is just as fresh as then.

And all life long, and after life,
They must the happier be
For this "Cup of Water" given by them
When they were children three.

SUSAN COOLIDGE.

An Unfavored One.

Wanted—kindness. Yes, it is true that we are sadly in need of a little kindness to cheer the busy worker on in this hurrying world of ours. It is a lamentable fact that there is not enough of that humane feeling in the hearts of those who, by a few assuring words, would greatly relieve the sufferings and hardships of those who find the world nothing but one of hard work, with but little sympathy at that. Yes, it is yet a truism that we are still selfish, and that we rarely do a thing unless it brings pleasure to us. We are still afraid that if we benefit others at a cost of trouble to ourselves we lose something; when, instead, we gain. The knowledge that some one is benefited should recompense us for our trouble.

On one of the streets near, and running parallel with, Fourteenth street, New York, was a house the rooms of which were let out in twos and threes at low rents. Two rooms were occupied by a father and daughter. He was an old man—the other side of sixty—and was very cruel and unjust to his child, the only one left of six. The mother had died a few years back.

At present they were behind in the rent and much in debt. She had not worked for some time. Business becoming dull, she was "laid off" with others at the place she was employed. He never worked—not because he was unable—but thinking a man of his years, with a grown daughter, should be at his ease; while she worked and with what money she earned provided for the house.

In the larger room of the two he was sitting in an armchair gently rocking himself to and fro. The fire was slowly dying. The hands of the clock pointed to 5. Darkness was gradually creeping upon the city, and soon it was night. The hour was now 7. He was still in the chair, but asleep. The fire was out and a cold breeze was blowing outside.

Eight o'clock! The door slowly opens and a young girl enters the room. She is accustomed to the place and finds the match to light the lamp. The lamp is lit, the blinds are down, but he is still sleeping.

The face of the girl was a thoughtful one. Brown eyes—now filled with sadness—a prominent forehead, an expressive mouth and high cheek bones, dark brown hair and pale cheeks, tall and slender, is a description of her.

She had returned from an unsuccessful attempt to procure a position. From 7 in the morning until 8 at night had she walked and walked with hopes that were only dashed to pieces as soon as formed. She knew work was yet to be done at the house; she knew bitter words would be her welcome; she knew there would be no supper unless she found a day's work and with the money earned procured something to eat. She knew all this, and went from one place to another only to find she was not wanted, but exhibited a perseverance worthy of a noble person.

The rays of the lamp shed but a poor light around the room. The father was still asleep, and the girl also, with her arms resting on the table, and on them her head. She was worn out with her day's wanderings.

The old man starts up quickly and, after rubbing his eyes, looks at the clock. Half-past nine! "God bless my soul!" he exclaimed, "this late hour and that girl not yet home. I wonder," looking around him—"Yes, yes, there she is fast asleep, when she ought to be getting supper and cleaning up."

He advanced toward her, and roughly shook her by the arm. She slowly opened her eyes and looked at him. She remembered now—she was clearing the table, when she sat down in a chair, and in her tired condition had fallen asleep.

"Come miss, come, why sit there like a mummy when you ought to be cleaning up and getting supper?"

"I'm so tired," she sadly said, "I've been walking everywhere, and they all say they don't want me. It does seem so hard not to be doing something so we could get something to eat."

"Stop that talk and be about your work. If you had tried you would have been working long ago. But you don't. You look in every shop window and speculate about what you would do if you had this and that."

"Father," she exclaimed reproachfully, "you know that is not true. I have not gone day after day for the last three weeks, and only a day's work here and there. Just enough to keep us from starving."

"I don't know anything. I'm hungry, and I must have supper right away. Come, rise, madam, and do as you are told."

She reluctantly arose and mechanically began tidying up. He had taken his seat and was gazing at the ceiling. He chanced to look around and his eyes rested on his daughter. He arose and violently bringing down his hand on the table, said: "I thought I told you to get supper, and there you are busying yourself with what you have no business to."

"I cannot get supper when there is no money or anything to get it with," she quietly said.

"Go out and get money. Steal, beg, or borrow. I don't care how, get money. I must have food to eat or I'll die."

"Who will lend or give us anything? No one. As for stealing or begging," and she proudly raised her head, "I can not do it. Mother always taught me it was wrong," sobbing, "and mother was always right."

"There, there, stop your whining and be about. If you stay here you will never get supper. Go out and see what you can do. Supper I'll have to-night, come what may."

She knew to disobey would be useless. She put on her hat and coat and wandered out into the chilly night. The streets were slowly being deserted, and the stores were closed up. Nowhere could she find any success. Dame Fortune had entirely forsaken her.

Beg? No, she could not do it. Steal? That was still worse. "I don't care how, get money." The words rang in her ears. Would her father have her sell herself. Better by far to feel death's sting than to commence a life of degradation.

On and on she wandered, caring not where. The love she bore her father was almost dead. The bitterness of life had pained her greatly. The difficulty of existing had shown new terrors.

The swish of water caught her ear. The river! Hastily she went in the direction of the sound. Soon she stood at the edge of the Hudson. The moon shone with unusual brightness, the stars thickly studded the heavens. All about a scene of calmness.

Why not drown? That thought most horrid, entered her head. She thought of the past with all its troubles and burdens; she saw the future, which offered no encouragement to live. Standing awhile, she thought of many things which she alone knows.

Now she glances up and down the river. The ferry is coming in; the lights on several vessels could be seen. No sound save those of the dock hands and the ferry could be heard. When the noise of the chains and wheels in the mooring of the vessel were going on, and with a feeling quite unexplainable, she jumped into the water. No outcry was made, and soon the water was as placid as though another victim had not been claimed.

The father? He had fallen asleep in the armchair. The lamp was slowly burning out. The hands of the clock were fast turning around. The light of morning began to supersede the darkness of the night. The hour was six.

He awoke, and, rising, went into the bedroom of his daughter. The bed had not been lain in; she had not come back yet. He muttered a curse and took no further heed. Hunting up a few scraps, and boiling some water, with which he made a weak cup of coffee, he had his breakfast. The day wore on, evening appeared, bed-time came—she was not yet home. Still he did not feel anxious. She might come home with something to eat; that was all he cared for. Not that night were there any signs of her.

Morning came again. By mistake the newsdealer had left a paper at his door. He took it in and began to glance over it. On one of the pages was a likeness of a girl, with nearly a column of reading matter. He hastily scanned it, and let the paper fall to the ground. He sat in a vacant stare.

He knew now why his daughter had not returned. He knew now that he had been unnatural to the child—he felt it. He knew it in a way not to be mistaken. He put on his hat and hurried to the morgue. Yes, that was she. His own child, so much like her mother. As he looked at her as she lay in that dreary place, tears ran down his cheeks. All that he loved was lying there. When she was gone, when she never more would be home with him, when it was too late, he found he loved her.

What would a little love and kindness have done here. It would have saved a young and innocent life, and he would not be mourning for a daughter who was as good to him as he was cruel and unjust to her. What a lesson for us all to learn!

EDWARD DOBSON.

Correspondence.

DAVENPORT, WASH., Oct. 7, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Children's Corner. I am thirteen years old. Our school started Monday, but I could not go till after plowing. I study reading, writing, spelling, history, geography, arithmetic, hygiene. I like to read the Children's Corner. I take the little Freethinker, and I like it very much. We sent for the "Apples of Gold," but never received it. We got the registered letter return for the money. It was signed by the name of Phillips, so you were not home at the time. Times are hard here, and I don't know when I will be able to send again. I would like to have "Apples of Gold," and also "All in a Lifetime." I have the "Story Hour," and I like it very much. I will close for the first time. Your Freethinker friend,

EDWIN SELDEN.

[The book was sent all right, but was probably lost or taken from the mails by some dishonest person. Another copy will be mailed to your address.—ED. C. C.]

WEYAUWEGA, WIS., Oct. 18, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: We lived in Oregon four years, but we returned to Wisconsin last June. We like this country better than we did Oregon. Papa has bought a place near Weyauwega. Papa is teaching school two miles from home. He goes with the horse and buggy, and I go with him. One morning our horse ran away. He got frightened at some cows and ran a little way and fell down, which threw papa and me out of the buggy. We did not get hurt. Nothing was broken but the thills.

My little brother, Leland, and I have four little kittens. I call one Snowball, another Lady Jane Grey, another Boody, another Miggins. The old cat's name is Diamond.

I like to read the Children's Corner to my little brother Leland. I am nine years old and he is almost six years old.

INEZ DAWES.

[A good letter for a girl of nine years. We hope to hear from Inez again. Write something about the town in which you live.—ED. C. C.]

CLOVERDALE, VA., Sept. 24, 1893.

SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Madam: Nestled in the mountains of Botetourt county, state of Virginia, two and a half miles from Bonsack's and two miles from Cloverdale, two small stations on the N. & W. R. R., is the farm on which lives Charlie Wm. Power, a Freethinker of fifteen years. We raise all kinds of fruits and vegetables; we raise strawberries and melons.

Now I will tell you something about raising strawberries:

1st. You plant the berries in the fall. A new beginner thinks his work is done when they are planted, but he is mistaken. His trouble is just begun.

2d. You have to hoe them until they shoot forth their runners. Then you have to hand-weed it and keep the runners in the row so they will make more plants. We have about five acres in berries, and are going to plant about two acres more this fall. We are busy picking apples just now. Melons are all gone.

I am going to school next month (October). I study as follows: Geography, grammar, history, dictionary, arithmetic, writing, drawing, physiology, etc.

I would like to have some of your little boys and girls write to me.

Well, I am about done for this time. Will write more next time.

With best wishes for Children's Corner I will close. CHARLIE POWER.

P.S.—As I am a new writer I hope you will not neglect this letter. C. W. P.

[We hope to hear from you again, Charlie.—ED. C. C.]

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 388 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
28 Lafayette place, New York City.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

Pushed by Unseen Hands. SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

A Thoughtless Yes.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boiler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.
The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Adam and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.
For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, 10 cents.

The Most Magnificent Work Ever Published by the Freethought Press.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The object of this work is to present the Course of Freethought throughout the Civilized World for the last Four Centuries, from the time of Columbus and Bruno to the time of Ingersoll.

It will be a radical Historic Record of the Greatest Developments of the Human Race.

It will reveal Freethought as an Intellectual, Moral, Literary, Social, Industrial, and Political Movement.

It will show what Freethought is in itself and how manifold are its influences, and with what hope and promise we can hail its future triumph.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" will Embrace the most Illustrious Pages of Human History,

adorned with the brightest Genius, radiant with the most splendid Poetry, rich with the greatest Inventions and Discoveries and ennobled with Freedom's most shining advance.

Nothing Can be More Interesting,

more inspiring to the Pioneer Workers of to-day—to those who are still in the van for Human Rights and Progress. The struggle is not ended and what is already won must be carefully guarded. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty; and from the Past we must ever learn Great Lessons for the Future.

NO LIBERAL CAN AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT THIS BOOK.

It will contain the Greatest Thoughts and the Greatest Deeds of the Greatest Men

In One Harmonious and Magnificent Whole,

a vivid picture of man's sublimest evolution, with the added glory of

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION

from the chains and slavery of a barbaric creed and church.

THE FIRST PART of the book will deal with Freethought as a Universal Power, as a Spirit, a Method, a prevailing but unorganized Influence in every Department of Human Growth.

THE SECOND PART will deal with Freethought as an Organized Movement, especially in America and Europe; and this history is of equal importance with the first, and should be justly understood and the Pioneers of our work recognized.

The first part will embrace the following Grand Departments:

Philosophy.	Science.	Education and Ethics.	Literature.	Government and Politics.	Woman's Emancipation.
Bruno.	Copernicus.	Bacon.	Boccaccio.	Voltaire.	Madame Roland.
Spinoza.	Galileo.	Comenius.	Rabelais.	Rousseau.	Mary Wollstonecraft.
Descartes.	Kepler.	Pestalozzi.	Cervantes.	French Salon.	Harriet Martineau.
Locke.	Da Vinci.	Froebel.	Marlowe.	French Revolution.	Frances Wright.
Hume.	Newton.	Combe.	Shakspeare.	Thomas Paine.	Lucretia Mott.
Hobbs.	Humboldt.	Spencer.	Gibbon.	Jefferson.	Ernestine L. Rose.
Kant.	Lyell.	Owen.	Burns.	Mazzinni.	Lydia Maria Child.
Hamilton.	Darwin.	Holyoake.	Shelley.	Bentham.	Margaret Fuller.
Comte.	Tyndall.	Haeckel.	Byron.	Mill.	Elizabeth Cady Stanton.
Büchner.	Huxley.	Girard.	Pushkin.	Garibaldi.	Susan B. Anthony.
Feuerbach.		Lick.	Tcherny-chewsky.	Heinzen.	Matilda Joselyn Gage.
					Helen H. Gardener.
					Annie Besant.

THE PORTRAITS OF THESE ILLUSTRIOUS REFORMERS

in every domain of Human Thought and Progress will adorn the pages of this volume.

The Second Part of this volume will be devoted especially to organized Freethought and the Liberal Press in modern times. The Truth Seeker, Investigator, Ironclad Age, Secular Thought, Freethinkers' Magazine, Independent Pulpit, Lucifer, the Freethinker, Agnostic Journal, etc.

It will give a history of the

GREAT INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS

at Chicago, the Freethought Federation of America, the American Secular Union, the various state and local organizations, the Canadian Secular Union, the British Secular Union, and other Liberal associations throughout the world.

It will contain the portraits of those who, up to the present time, have been identified with Freethought work—editors, lecturers, officers of societies, and those who, as representative men, have won distinction in other fields of effort. There will be the portraits of

Horace Seaver,	George E. Macdonald,	Capt. R. C. Adams,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.,	Susan H. Wixon,
J. P. Mendum,	E. M. Macdonald,	John R. Charlesworth,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.,	Mrs. Charles Watts,
D. M. Bennett,	L. K. Washburn,	Samuel P. Putnam,	Prof. J. H. Cook,	Mrs. Robert C. Adams,
Parker Pillsbury,	Ernest Mendum,	John E. Remsburg,	E. H. Heywood,	Mrs. M. A. Freeman,
Elizur Wright,	Charles Watts,	Franklin Steiner,	Otto Wettstein,	Katie Kehm Smith,
T. C. Leland,	G. W. Foote,	J. D. Shaw,	Stephen Pearl Andrews,	Lucy N. Colman,
T. B. Wakeman,	Saladin,	E. A. Stevens,	James Parton,	Lillian Leland,
Judge C. B. Waite.	J. R. Monroe,	H. L. Green,	Abner Kneeland,	Amy Post.

and other men and women who have contributed to the advancement of Freethought and whose names should be remembered throughout the Liberal ranks. There will also be about

ONE HUNDRED BIOGRAPHIES,

and in these will be given a picture of Freethought progress which will be most interesting and valuable, for it is in individuals that we find the best interpretations of the age.

The Price of This Superb Book is $5.00,

and not for the same amount of money can there be found such an array of facts, such a survey of history, and such a galaxy of Freethought.

Mr. Putnam is now devoting his whole time to this work and it will be published at the earliest possible moment.

The name of every Subscriber who sends five dollars before the work is on the press will be enrolled in this book. DON'T FAIL TO SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE.

This book will contain

Over Six Hundred Pages of Printed Matter and Over One Hundred Portraits.

It will be elegantly bound. It will be a book for the home and the fireside. It will be a book to give to your friends when they ask, What is Freethought—what has it done and what is it doing in the world?

This is the most universal presentation of Freethought ever given to the public, and no Freethinker can afford to be without it. It is a library in itself.

Address orders to

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE; OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,
with a preface by
R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.
Price, cloth, $1. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

IN THE
Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,
At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the
Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in
the Interest of and Owned
by the Whole People.

By HON. THOMAS E. HILL,
of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms,"
"The Hill Banking System," and other
works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted.

This book is "just in time" is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFER-
ENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the
Initiative and Referendum,
By J. W. SULLIVAN.
Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By HELEN H. GARDNER.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against
the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It
and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.
Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A Nineteenth Century Novel.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with a little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroine of the story, and her experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrites. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world.
Price, 25 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

THE wealth of a man is the number of things which he loves and blesses, and which he is loved and blessed by.—Thomas Carlyle.

THE audacity of a priesthood that arrogates the power to prescribe what an unborn child's religious faith shall be, is an anachronism which the spirit of the age utterly repudiates. The child's right to choose his own opinions must be recognized if human society is not to be thrown into chaos.—L. K. Washburn.

THERE is no rational ground for supposing that suffering is a medicine, or that all tears are to be wiped away. If a gracious God keeps himself in our remembrance by murdering our children, what would an ungracious God do? A human father beating his child to keep it from wandering from his "protection" is the parental type to which Theism is compelled to resort, in apologizing for human calamities.—Moncure D. Conway.

OUR highest happiness is inconsistent with injustice. In equity all men are equal. If we may aggress, another may retaliate. If we may be cruel, he may be vengeful. If we may injure, he may retaliate. If aggression is practiced, joy will be mixed with torments. Repose will be disturbed by menaces. The shout of hilarity will be interrupted by the shout of spite. Apprehension will displace anticipation, and confidence will be displaced by fear. Our pleasures must be supplied by skill and not by subtlety, by industry and not by fraud, by contract and not by violence. Thus selfishness enjoins not only prudence but justice.—A. M. Lorentz.

THIS week the Humane Congress is in session, and the cause of the mute sufferers who have no tongue to plead their own case is being pleaded by many representatives, among whom none speak with better right than the representatives of non-Christian religions, who, in this particular at least, shame the thought and practice of Christians. The higher Oriental religions have, with scarcely an exception, and with great emphasis, taught the sanctity of all life and the sacredness of the life principle wherever revealed; while Christianity in its attempt to magnify man has dug a great ditch between him and what it has called the brute creation. This has naturally brought mountainous abuse to the lower animals.—Unity.

IN spite of creeds and formularies, the influence of Plato and other ancient thinkers, as well as of surviving ancestral ideas, has made most educated Europeans believe really in immortality, even when they imagine themselves to be believing in resurrection. Nevertheless, the belief in resurrection is the avowed and authoritative belief of the Christian world, which thus proclaims itself as on a lower level in this respect than the civilized peoples of antiquity. And the reason why European nations after Constantine thus went back from the higher practice of cremation to the lower practice of burial, and from the higher idea of immortality to the lower idea of resurrection, is because they then adopted the Christian religion, an offshoot and sect of Judaism.—Grant Allen.

AND much may be done to change the nature of man himself. The intelligence which has converted the brother of the wolf into the faithful guardian of the flock ought to be able to do something towards curbing the instincts of savagery in civilized men. But if we may permit ourselves a larger hope of abatement of the essential evil of the world than was possible to those who, in the infancy of exact knowledge, faced the problems of existence more than a score of centuries ago, I deem it an essential condition of the realization of that hope that we should cast aside the notion that the escape from pain and sorrow is the proper object of life. We have long since emerged from the heroic childhood of our race, when good and evil could be met with the same "frolic welcome;" the attempts to escape from evil, whether Indian or Greek, have ended in flight from the battle-field; it remains to us to throw aside the youthful over-confidence and the no less youthful discouragement of nonage. We are grown men, and must play the man—

"Strong in will
To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield."

cherishing the good that falls in our way, and bearing the evil, in and around us, with stout hearts set on diminishing it. So far we all may strive in one faith towards one hope—

"It may be that the gulfs will wash us down,
It may be we shall touch the Happy
Isles,
... but something ere the end,
Some work of noble note may yet be done."

—Huxley.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his legal partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged

As a Missionary Document it is unequalled. Amos: the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture: Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extirpation; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Women; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiotcy; Ousceality. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Sabbath; the Sabbath and the Church; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Pagan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per dozen, 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the a per ions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason," are given; also, tribute to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1894. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
18 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.
ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath-Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Harnmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
Single numbers sold at prices quoted.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK Price, 15 cents.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and viceregents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Convent, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in papal history of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER.

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Not for Parsons.

TEACHER (examining a class of little boys in scripture): "What did Jacob say when he saw the bridal train, the men leading the camels, laden with costly presents?" Pupil: "The Campbells are comin' g, hurrah, hurrah!"—London Free-thinker.

DEACON WOOLERTON (sneeringly): I s'pose yo' tink it's de Lord's will to' yo' to leave dis charge an' take de one wid de biggah salary! Parson Shouter: Look 'ere, Bre'r Woolerton, ef one man offers yo' ten dollars fo' dat mule, an' another offers yo' twenty, would dere be any question in yo' mind which offer it wuz de Lord's will for you to accept?—Puck.

MISS SAKERI is a young Japanese woman educated in America and sent back by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, to abate the drink evil in the insular country. She reported yesterday at a meeting that two insuperable obstacles prevented temperance reform in Japan. The natives have no money to contribute for the work of regeneration, and the Japanese are not addicted to drink.—Chicago Times.

THE Examiner tells of a colored preacher who saw in a vision the golden letters "G. P. C." in the sky, which he interpreted to mean "Go preach Christ." One of his brethren said that he had no doubt of the vision of his brother, but he thought it would be more correctly interpreted, "Go pick cotton." Probably a good many who are sure which way destiny calls them would do well to call in some impartial interpreter of their visions.—Unity.

PARSON SANDY, a colored divine of deep lore, and Simon, a theological student, roomed together. The other morning, when Simon arose, he discovered that his watch had been stolen. When Sandy, who had left his bed early, came into the room, Simon spoke to him about the missing watch, and asked his advice as to the best course to pursue for its recovery. "De bes' plan, Brudder Simon, is ter pray ter de Lord. Ef yer prays wid ferventness, de Lord will see dat de watch is returned." "Does yer believ' dat, Brudder Sandy?" "Yes, Brudder Simon. Ax de Lord, an' he will answer yer pra'r." "Will yer pray for me, Brudder Sandy?" "Yas, Brudder Simon, I'se always willin' ter pray." The two men kneeling, prayed. When they arose Simon said: "I feels dat de Lord is gwine to answer my prayer." "I'se glad to hear it," responded Sandy. "In fact, I know that he is," and drawing a horse pistol and leveling it at Sandy's head, Simon continued: "Gimme dat watch or I'll shoot the top of your head off." Sandy produced the watch, when Simon continued: "D' power of prayer and hoss pistols is ason shing to the human un'erstandin'."—Arkansas Traveler.

THE HERMIT GRAY.

(A Moral Tale.)

In the evening gray the hermit sat
Before his cave, on a twisted mat,
And he told his beads and breathed a prayer
Of thankfulness for his haven there,
"Here, far from the jostling market-place,
My humble spirit grows in grace;
And here my lot and fate I'll fill,
Lulled by the tinkling, drowsy rill."

But, hark! A horse is coming fleet,
And the rider stays his steed to greet
The hermit gray, and bends him low.
"My lord!" he cries "dost thou not know

Thy brother's dead, and his wealth is thine?
Among the peers 'tis thy lot to shine.
Why linger here? Come, mount and ride
Upon my horse, a steed of pride!

"Here is my cloak, of golden sheen,
My spurs, my sword, and doublet green!"
The hermit rose, and a curious look Passed o'er his face. He rose and took His staff, his cruse, his beads and all
He gave them a fling, and he let them fall

Far and wide on the cavern floor
As one who'd never need them more.

"Come! Hasten!" he cried; "I long to see

The acres broad that belong to me;
The towers and trees and the manor old,
The boxes, iron-ribbed; the gold,
And all that wealth and power can bring
To a noble rich as a Moorish king!"

Alack and alas! As the hermit rose
He clapped his fingers to his nose,
For a smell of sulphur filled the air,
While the rider—well, he wasn't there!
And the hermit wished he had held aloof
As he gazed on the print of a cloven hoof.

MORAL.

The tale is good—if well applied:
Be sure all checks are certified.

—Puck.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.
6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By O. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Port. Pap., 50c.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 15c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

The Illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests	2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
2 " The Church Robbing the People.	5 " Missionaries.
3 " Thank-giving.	1 " The Lord's Instruments.
6 " Sabbath Laws.	25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14 " Children and the Church.	1 " The Church and Slavery.
10 " Woman and the Church.	1 " Politics.
6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.	4 " Ireland and the Church.
4 " Studies in Natural History.	1 " Church's Idea of Civilization.
3 " The Bible and Science.	1 " The Uses of the Cross.
15 " The Catechism and Their Flocks.	4 " Unkind allusions on the Church.
1 " Pict. in Our Pict. series.	9 " Persecutions of the Church.
4 " The Atonement Scheme.	12 " So-called Allegories.
4 " The Lord and His Works.	3 " Heaven.
2 " Paganism.	6 " Hell.
10 " The Creeds.	7 " Miscellaneous.
1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At the same time, it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of his output. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the truth of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Viceroyants of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

FILE BINDERS.

Those who preserve the volumes of THE TRUTH SEEKER need a File Binder, which we will send on receipt of one dollar.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy.
Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and Reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and Description to J. R. BROWN & CO., 400 Washington St., New York.

CHOLERA, DIPHTHERIA, Dysentery
Piles, Quinsy, Catarrh. The Antidote for $1.
Agents wanted. Dr. G. H. MILLER, 2333 Hickory street, St. Louis, Mo., former address 1441 South Twelfth street, Denver, Col. 20128

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO., 65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silver case, $17; in gold case, $28; in silver case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $50. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silver case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; 17 jewels, $10.50; 19 jewels, $12. In finer cases, add $3 above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles in flush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sturdies. Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spec. cases, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plat d. teaspoons, $1.50; table spoons, $3.00; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $3.35 per ounce. Solid silver souvenir spoons, $1.50, $1.50, $1.50, $1.50, $1.50, $1.50.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Etched (teas only):

"The Time to be Happy is Now," 50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors. Small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diam. ends, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $6. Crisms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7, $8, $9, $10, $11, $12, $13, $14, $15, $16, $17, $18, $19, $20, $21, $22, $23, $24, $25, $26, $27, $28, $29, $30, $31, $32, $33, $34, $35, $36, $37, $38, $39, $40, $41, $42, $43, $44, $45, $46, $47, $48, $49, $50, $51, $52, $53, $54, $55, $56, $57, $58, $59, $60, $61, $62, $63, $64, $65, $66, $67, $68, $69, $70, $71, $72, $73, $74, $75, $76, $77, $78, $79, $80, $81, $82, $83, $84, $85, $86, $87, $88, $89, $90, $91, $92, $93, $94, $95, $96, $97, $98, $99, $100.

Diamonds. 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, an returned for free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, R. chelle, Ill.
P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only.

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.
and say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AN INSPIRED WAY OF DISPOSING OF TOO MUCH HAIR.

Thou shalt burn with fire a third part in the midst of the city, when the days of the siege are fulfilled; and thou shalt take a third part, and smite about it with a knife: and a third part thou shalt scatter in the wind; and I will draw out a sword after them.—Ezek. v, 2.

"A Digest of Science."

THE DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND:

An attempt to show that all Organic Beings are both Constructed and Operated by the Dynamic Agencies of their respective Environments.

By JAMES B. ALEXANDER.

Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages, and a 3-column index of 11 pages.
Price, express prepaid by us, only $2.75.

This work endeavors to embrace the field covered by thousands of books, such as those of the "Bumholdt Library of Science," the "International Scientific Series," etc., by bringing together, in simple and direct form, with proper correspondence between them, all of the known factors contributing toward the origin and evolution of organic beings.

Do you wish to be well informed? THEN READ A CHAPTER OR VERSE DAILY FROM THIS BIBLE OF SCIENCE!

It is entertaining as well as enlightening, and will lead you to "worth-ship" (worship) nature—i. e., appreciate the worth of the Universal Mother.

You must own this book some day: why not NOW?

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

REDUCTION IN PRICE OF A GREAT BOOK.

With the eighth edition, "Winwood Reade's 'Martyrdom of Man,' the cost of production has been lessened so that we can reduce the price from $1.75 to $1.00.

The book has had a phenomenal sale for so heretical a work, second only to Helen Gardner's "Men, Women, and Gods," and we give our readers the pecuniary benefit of it. The

"MARTYRDOM OF MAN"

Is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how War and Religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for Liberty, and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. The chapters are:

WAR. Egypt, Western Asia, the Persians, the Greeks, the Macedonians, Alexandria, the Phoenicians, Carthage and Rome, Roman Africa, the Arabs.

RELIGION. The Natural History of Religion, the Israelites, the Jews, the Prophets, Character of Jesus, the Christians, Arabia, Mecca, Character of Mohammed, Description of Africa, the Mohammedans in Central Africa.

LIBERTY. Ancient Europe, Invasion of the Germans, the Castle, the Town, the Church, Venice, Arab Spain, the Portuguese, Discoverers, the Slave Trade, Abolition in Europe, Abolition in America. Materials of Human History.

INTELLECT. Animal Period of the Earth, Origin of Man, and Early History, Summary of Universal History, The Future of the Human Race, The Religion of Reason and Love.

Price reduced from $1.75 to $1.00. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

News of the Week.

WHITE Caps are burning cotton gins in Arkansas.

EX-PRIEST SLATTERY was mobbed in St. Louis while attempting to lecture.

PEPPER'S free-coinage amendment to the silver repeal bill was defeated in the Senate by a majority of eleven.

THE Kabyle Moors and invading Spaniards are inflicting serious damage upon each other at Melilla, Morocco.

JUSTICE WILLIAMS has decided that under the constitution of New York women cannot vote for school commissioner.

The House judiciary committee will report favorably Mr. Oate's bill making more stringent the naturalization laws.

At Budapest a beautiful young nun eloped, leaving a letter saying she desired happiness and could not find it in the convent.

CASSIUS M. CLAY, the famous Southern Abolitionist, has just passed his eighty-third birthday. He is still robust in mind and body.

To facilitate disestablishment in Wales, Gladstone will maintain that no Church of Wales exists, but merely the Church of England in Wales.

THE dynamite cruiser Vesuvius is engaged in the useful work of blowing up derelicts, which render navigation dangerous along the Atlantic coast.

In Baltimore the colored voters are advised by their leaders to stay away from the polls, as neither party has given them the recognition they demand.

FIVE agents and two lawyers of Parkhurst's Society for the Prevention of Crime were mobbed on the Bowery in New York on Oct. 27th, in daylight.

ON Oct. 30th, the Senate passed the Voorhees bill for the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman silver law, by a vote of 43 to 32. Ten Senators were paired.

THE labor associations in New York are determined to secure (if possible) representation in the constitutional convention, delegates to which will be selected at the November election.

Carter H. Harrison, mayor of Chicago, was assassinated at his home on Saturday, October 28, at 8 p. m. He was shot three times by a probably insane office-seeker named Prendergast.

"LOVE AND LIFE," by the English artist Watts, the picture most appreciated at the World's Fair, has been presented by Mr. Watts to the American people, and will be removed to the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

COMMODORE STANTON has been suspended from the command of the South Atlantic squadron of the United States fleet now stationed in Brazilian waters. He had saluted the flag of Admiral Mello of the insurgent fleet.

THE yellow fever scourge at Brunswick, Ga., shows no signs of abatement. There had been seven hundred and sixty-four cases and forty-two deaths to Oct. 27th. Supplies for the relief of the stricken town are being sent from Northern cities.

THERE is a water famine in England and Ireland. In the Hartlepool district, England, the water companies on Oct. 26th stopped supplying manufactories. At Dublin the great Guinness brewing company has temporarily stopped operations.

THE coroner system of the state of New York is being pretty thoroughly ventilated in the newspapers, and is also being made the subject of grand jury inquiry. It is shown that cruel and unnecessary inquests are often held, at great expense to the taxpayers.

THE new building of the West Side Clinic (New York) will be opened to the poor this week. The Clinic is supported by wealthy Germans, and for more than twenty-five years has given advice and medicine free to the needy poor of all nationalities.

THERE is a cholera panic in Leghorn, Italy. Business is generally suspended. About sixty-five per cent. of those attacked die, and the deaths of women are more than double those of men. The schools have been closed and processions to the shrines forbidden, the latter order nearly resulting in a riot.

THE Cascade range forest reservation extends across Oregon from Crater lake in the south to Mount Hood in the north, being 250 miles long and 30 wide and embracing 4,500,000 acres. It is set apart to protect timber and water supplies. There is also the Ashland reserve in Oregon, intended to protect the water supply of Ashland. It has 20,000 acres.

SURVEYORS, ATTENTION!

A rare chance is offered for a surveyor to get a

TRANSIT CHEAP.

We have one for sale, in good order, with Tripod, which cost $160. We will sell it for half-price—$80. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AGENTS MAKE 100 PER CENT PROFIT and more, get sample free, best-known goods in all America. Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Safety Razors, Curlers, Insoles, Plasters, and all our other popular goods. (Either sex.) Address Dr. E. O. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, N. Y. City.

A GREAT BOOK ON RADICAL, SOCIAL, AND ECONOMIC REFORMS

The title of the book is

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

The author is

HENRY OLERICH, of Hawarden, Ia.

This book is in story form, well printed on good paper, well illustrated, and hands mely bound. It is a text-book on "Co-operative Individualism." For many it is perhaps too radical on some questions of reform, but it is nevertheless eminently thought-provoking.

The universal unrest manifested by the thinking world, particularly during these "hard times," plainly indicates that our social, economic, and religious institutions are not in tune with the best thought of the age. The author vividly portrays an ideal world from which all our present social, economic, and religious evils are eliminated. For the fulfillment of his prophecy the author does not rely on miracles, but on the advancing intelligence of thoughtful men and women. If Mr. Olerich's ideal state can ever be attained the world will certainly be a paradise. Beautifully cloth-bound, price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

$75.00 to $250.00 can be made MONTHLY working for B. F. JOHNSON & CO., Richmond, Va.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MENTAL HEALING.

A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power.

By LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

A Book to explain the correct idea of Mental Healing, and what may be reasonably expected to result from an understanding of its principles. Price, $2.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Godly Women of the Bible

A HISTORY OF ALL The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—
A GODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth 75 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 45. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, November 11, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

Suggested by seeing the Salvation Army Muster on the streets of San Diego Cal.

THE SALVATION ARMY ON THE WAR PATH.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scriptural. Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

**

By

G. W. FOOTB.

**

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Litre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Babe-lais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.
Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.
Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.
The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

Christianity a Fiction.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

THE Astronomical and Astrologi-cal Origin of all Religions.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

The Most Magnificent Work Ever Published by the Freethought Press.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The object of this work is to present the Course of Freethought throughout the Civilized World for the last Four Centuries, from the time of Columbus and Bruno to the time of Ingersoll.

It will be a radical Historic Record of the Greatest Developments of the Human Race.

It will reveal Freethought as an Intellectual, Moral, Literary, Social, Industrial, and Political Movement.

It will show what Freethought is in itself and how manifold are its influences, and with what hope and promise we can hail its future triumph.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" will Embrace the most Illustrious Pages of Human History,

adorned with the brightest Genius, radiant with the most splendid Poetry, rich with the greatest Inventions and Discoveries and ennobled with Freedom's most shining advance.

Nothing Can be More Interesting,

more inspiring to the Pioneer Workers of to-day—to those who are still in the van for Human Rights and Progress. The struggle is not ended and what is already won must be carefully guarded. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty; and from the Past we must ever learn Great Lessons for the Future.

NO LIBERAL CAN AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT THIS BOOK.

It will contain the Greatest Thoughts and the Greatest Deeds of the Greatest Men

In One Harmonious and Magnificent Whole,

a vivid picture of man's sublimest evolution, with the added glory of

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION

from the chains and slavery of a barbaric creed and church.

THE FIRST PART of the book will deal with Freethought as a Universal Power, as a Spirit, a Method, a prevailing but unorganized Influence in every Department of Human Growth.

THE SECOND PART will deal with Freethought as an Organized Movement, especially in America and Europe; and this history is of equal importance with the first, and should be justly understood and the Pioneers of our work recognized.

The first part will embrace the following Grand Departments:

Philosophy.	Science.	Education and Ethics.	Literature.	Government and Politics.	Woman's Emancipation.
Bruno.	Copernicus.	Bacon.	Boccaccio.	Voltaire.	Madame Roland.
Spinoza.	Galileo.	Comenius.	Rabelais.	Rousseau.	Mary Wollstonecraft.
Descartes.	Kepler.	Pestalozzi.	Cervantes.	French Salon.	Harriet Martineau.
Locke.	Da Vinci.	Fröbel.	Marlowe.	French Revolution.	Frances Wright.
Hume.	Newton.	Combe.	Shakspeare.	Phillips.	Lucretia Mott.
Hobbs.	Humboldt.	Spencer.	Gibbon.	Parker.	Ernestine L. Rose.
Kant.	Lyell.	Owen.	Burns.	Jefferson.	Lydia Maria Child.
Hamilton.	Darwin.	Holyoake.	Shelley.	Mazzini.	Margaret Fuller.
Comte.	Tyndall.	Haeckel.	Byron.	Bentham.	Elizabeth Cady Stanton.
Büchner.	Huxley.	Girard.	Pushkin.	Mill.	Susan B. Anthony.
Feuerbach.		Lick.	Tchernychevsky.	Garibaldi.	Matilda Joselyn Gage.
				Heinzen.	Helen H. Gardener.
					Annie Besant.

THE PORTRAITS OF THESE ILLUSTRIOUS REFORMERS

in every domain of Human Thought and Progress will adorn the pages of this volume.

The Second Part of this volume will be devoted especially to organized Freethought and the Liberal Press in modern times. The Truth Seeker, Investigator, Ironclad Age, Secular Thought, Freethinkers' Magazine, Independent Pulpit, Lucifer, the Freethinker, Agnostic Journal, etc.

It will give a history of the

GREAT INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS

at Chicago, the Freethought Federation of America, the American Secular Union, the various state and local organizations, the Canadian Secular Union, the British Secular Union, and other Liberal associations throughout the world.

It will contain the portraits of those who, up to the present time, have been identified with Freethought work—editors, lecturers, officers of societies, and those who, as representative men, have won distinction in other fields of effort. There will be the portraits of

Horace Seaver,	George E. Macdonald,	Capt. R. C. Adams,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.,	Susan H. Wixon,
J. P. Mendum,	E. M. Macdonald,	John R. Charlesworth,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.,	Mrs. Charles Watts,
D. M. Bennett,	L. K. Washburn,	Samuel P. Putnam,	Prof. J. H. Cook,	Mrs. Robert C. Adams,
Parker Pillsbury,	Ernest Mendum,	John E. Remsburg,	E. H. Heywood,	Mrs. M. A. Freeman,
Elizur Wright,	Charles Watts,	Franklin Steiner,	Otto Wettstein,	Katie Kehm Smith,
T. C. Leland,	G. W. Foote,	J. D. Shaw,	Stephen Pearl Andrews,	Lucy N. Colman,
T. B. Wakeman,	Saladin,	E. A. Stevens,	James Parton,	Lillian Leland,
Judge C. B. Waite.	J. R. Monroe,	H. L. Green,	Abner Kneeland,	Amy Post.

and other men and women who have contributed to the advancement of Freethought and whose names should be remembered throughout the Liberal ranks. There will also be about

ONE HUNDRED BIOGRAPHIES,

and in these will be given a picture of Freethought progress which will be most interesting and valuable, for it is in individuals that we find the best interpretations of the age.

The Price of This Superb Book is $5.00,

and not for the same amount of money can there be found such an array of facts, such a survey of history, and such a galaxy of Freethought.

Mr. Putnam is now devoting his whole time to this work and it will be published at the earliest possible moment.

The name of every Subscriber who sends five dollars before the work is on the press will be enrolled in this book. DON'T FAIL TO SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE.

This book will contain

Over Six Hundred Pages of Printed Matter and Over One Hundred Portraits.

It will be elegantly bound. It will be a book for the home and the fireside. It will be a book to give to your friends when they ask, What is Freethought—what has it done and what is it doing in the world?

This is the most universal presentation of Freethought ever given to the public, and no Freethinker can afford to be without it. It is a library in itself.

Address orders to

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

HOW TO GET FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT FREE

SPECIAL OFFER.

We have made arrangements with Mr. Putnam whereby we are enabled to make our friends a most generous offer.

We need more subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and every Freethinker needs "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." Not all are able to pay $5 for it, but everyone can do a little work to obtain a copy—congenial work, that will do great good all around. This is the offer:

Send us Four New Yearly Subscribers at regular rates ($12 in all), and we will send the Getter-up of the Club a copy of "FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT," FREE OF CHARGES.

And further, to aid our friends in getting this book for themselves, we will offer

To the New Subscribers as a Premium,

post free, a copy in boards of

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated

By WATSON HESION,

THE GREATEST BOOK OF ITS KIND EVER CONCEIVED.

Or, if preferred, a copy cloth-bound of
W. S. BELL'S

Handbook of Freethought.

With these Splendid Works as premiums there ought to be no difficulty in getting hundreds of clubs of subscribers.

Remember, to the Getter-up of The Club, FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT, free.

To each New Subscriber in the club, a premium of a Dollar Book—either "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought," in Cloth—all free by post or express.

This really brings the price of the paper down to $2 to each new subscriber, as they get THE TRUTH SEEKER one year and a dollar book for $3.

A Club of Four New Subscribers and $12 ($3 only from each) does this.

We want to extend our circulation, and we want to help our friends to help us.

It ought not to be difficult to get four New Subscribers in any town in the country, especially with these Splendid Premiums to assist.

Those who get up these Clubs will receive their copies of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" as soon as the book is issued.

Those who send a Club and Four New Subscribers and $12 before the book is printed, will have their names enrolled in its shining pages.

THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place,
NEW YORK.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 45. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, November 11, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - NOVEMBER 11, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

SOME HANDSOME PREMIUMS.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" ($3). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and James B. Alexander's Dynamic Theory ($2.75). This is a splendid offer, for every one wants this book. It has over a thousand large pages and more than four hundred illustrations. It is a digest of Science, and every one who studies it cannot help but be well-informed in all scientific matters.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in board covers ($1).

The Freethinker's Badge-pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

The Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon with gilt bowl, 50c. more.

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have, at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

What Dr. Briggs Thinks.

In the November number of the Forum Dr. Charles A. Briggs has a paper on "The Alienation of Church and People." It is a document which has considerable interest for Freethinkers. It opens with these sentences: "We are living in the ebbside of the Christian church. The church is ruled by dogmatists, ecclesiastics, and traditionalists. But their day is almost over. There is that profound dissatisfaction with the present state of things, that intense longing for better things, that anxious quest for something higher, that readiness to follow anyone who seems to have something new, which herald the approach of a new era."

Undoubtedly the church is ruled by "dogmatists, ecclesiastics, and traditionalists," but what is there new in this condition? Was there ever a time when she was not so ruled? Have not her authorized representatives ever been ecclesiastics, persistently insisting upon the supreme value of dogmas? Upon what does the church rest, in lieu of authentic history, if not upon tradition? Who but the ecclesiastics of the church tortured to death millions of men and women whose brains were a little too large or whose hearts were not quite callous enough to accept as true and divine all the ridiculous and atrocious dogmas and traditions of the church? This is the "ebbside of the Christian church," not because the church has degenerated—for, on the contrary, it has progressed under the impulse of outside pressure—but because the people have advanced. They are not content with the husks which their fathers fancied were juicy with the richest essences of spiritual nutriment. The trouble with Dr. Briggs and others of his way of thinking is that they want to retain the Christian name, and remain in and partake of the advantages which accrue to members of a great organization, while they repudiate all that gives definiteness to the name and historical and logical continuity to the organization. In furtherance of this purpose they attack Christianity in the name of Christianity, but with the weapons of modern scholarship and science, and then are seemingly amazed because the still faithful custodians of the church's traditions and dogmas resist their attacks and try to oust them from the pulpits in which they preach a sugar-coated Infidelity, and from the university chairs where they teach scientific principles and uphold canons of criticism which are utterly subversive of the fundamental and age-honored teachings of the church whose name they misleadingly bear. It must be that these men understand that the "profound dissatisfaction" of which Dr. Briggs speaks is the fruit of a growing intelligence which cannot accept the vital dogmas of the church, which cannot view the universe and man's relations from the standpoint so long occupied by Christianity. They are too intelligent not to know that when the church moves forward to the position they occupy it commits suicide, virtually. It can hypocritically retain the old name, as they do, and it can strengthen its political power, being all things to all men; but the old, the original, Christianity will be dead—the alleged historical connection of the church with a reputed Jewish enthusiast and reformer disproved and repudiated, its dogmas became objects of contempt or curiosity only, its traditions faded into dreams and vague idealizations.

It is sadly true that the people are all too ready to follow "anyone who seems to have something new," and this accounts for the support which amiable but illogical men like Dr. Thomas, Dr. Briggs, and Professor Swing, and such churches as the Universalist and Unitarian, receive. But Dr. Briggs must not delude himself with the hope that the "new era" will witness the permanent enthronement of Briggsism. No hybrid born of the unrighteous union of supernaturalism and naturism can be fertile. It is a waste of time and energy to try to put new life into the shrunken veins of Christianity by an infusion of the rich, warm blood of lusty young Science. Hopelessly diseased mother Christianity would instantly sterilize every healthy germ thus received. There is just one chance for the church, and that is to seize the machinery of government and carry the world back to the Dark Ages. The Sunday crusade is the beginning of such a struggle for political supremacy.

To quote again from the Forum article:

"The church has lost the confidence of the people in its ability to teach them the truth. The church ought to be in the van of knowledge—for it is endowed with the holy spirit, the guide into all the truth. Theology in olden times was rightly regarded as the queen of the sciences. But theology no longer reigns; she has not kept pace with the progress of knowledge. She has pursued her own independent way. She has waged war with science and philosophy, and has been defeated in so many battles that science and philosophy have gone on before her and left her in the rear."

Why has the "church lost the confidence of the people in its ability to teach them the truth"? Because the people have gone forward more rapidly than has the church. Theoretically, the latter should not have advanced at all, for it rests on revelation, not on human knowledge. To admit that the church has progressed is to charge that it has changed, and to accuse it of change is to deny its claim to infallibility as the custodian and expounder of inerrant scripture, of the revelation of God's will to man.

"The church ought to be in the van of knowledge—for it is endowed with the holy spirit, the guide into all the truth." This is self-destructive. The assertions that the holy spirit is the guide to all the truth, that the church has the holy spirit, and that the church is not in the van of knowledge, constitute a syllogism that chokes itself to death at the first twist of the triple strand.

"Theology in olden times was rightly regarded as the queen of the sciences" because she murdered every rival who aspired to the throne. The people were taught to look upon theology as the inspired censor of science—such knowledge of nature as they had had been measured by her yardstick. Whoever discovered a fact or propounded a theory which her feeble brain could not assimilate was blacklisted. If he escaped the dungeon, the rack, and the stake it was because of luck or recantation.

"But theology no longer reigns; she has not kept pace with the progress of knowledge." Quite true, but what did you expect? Does not Christian theology draw its inspiration from the Bible and is not the Bible the word of God, God the immutable, God "who is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever"?

Certainly theology "has pursued her independent way," and waged war with science and philosophy, and "has been defeated." She is of God; science is of man, and the result of a conflict between these forces was inevitably defeat for God. For "God" is but a term; it is the tag which primitive man put upon the totality of his ignorance. Theology was the "science" that "explained" this ignorance. That science was purely a priori. Only when it called persecution to its aid could it stand for a moment before the assaults of its rival, modern science, which is inductive, building from the solid basis of facts. Dr. Briggs ignores this, and finds fault with theology because she has not grown! The tree grows, but does the stone gatepost? Science grows, because it is constantly fed and strengthened by the accretions of human knowledge, but every attempt to feed theology on the food—facts—which nourish science has weakened the ancient “queen of the sciences,” until to-day she is scarcely more than a skeleton. When men like Dr. Briggs once get clear vision enough to see that Christianity is merely theology they may quit praising the former and damning the latter and get out into the open to work for better conditions for humanity. At present, however, they manage to talk more hopeless nonsense than do their enemies within the church, the old-style theologians.

The Status of the Woman Suffrage Cause in New York.

In 1892 the legislature of New York passed an act conferring the franchise upon women, in school elections. School commissioners were voted for this year. In a number of places the women registered quite heavily, especially in Elba, Penn Yan, Johnston, Port Jervis, and Auburn. But Justice Pardon C. Williams, of the Supreme Court, holds the legislative act giving them the opportunity to vote to be unconstitutional. His decision is likely to be considered final until the general term of the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals takes a turn at the question. In many places the women who had registered were enjoined from voting by judges who accepted the authority and interpretation of Justice Williams. Miss Anthony advised all who had not been enjoined to vote, as the election inspectors, she claimed, must accept their votes, unless specifically enjoined against so doing.

The enabling section of the act of 1892 reads as follows:

“All persons without regard to sex, who are eligible to the office of school commissioner, and have the other qualifications now required by law, shall have the right to vote for school commissioners in the various commissioner districts of the state.”

In reaching his conclusion that this act is unconstitutional, Justice Williams construes in connection with each other section one of article two and section two of article ten of the Constitution. Here is the first:

“Every male citizen of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a citizen for ten days and an inhabitant of the state for one year next preceding an election, and for the last four months a resident of the county, and the last thirty days a resident of the election district in which he may offer his vote, shall be entitled to vote at such election in the election district in which he shall at the time be a resident and not elsewhere, for all officers that now are or hereafter may be elective by the people, and upon all questions which may be submitted to a vote of the people.”

Section two of article ten follows:

“All county officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution shall be elected by the electors of the respective counties or appointed by the boards of supervisors or other county authorities as the legislator shall direct. All such town and village officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution shall be elected by the electors of such cities, towns, or villages, or some division thereof, or appointed by such authorities thereof as the legislature shall designate for that purpose. All other officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, and all officers whose office may hereafter be created by law, shall be elected by the people or appointed as the legislature may direct.”

Here follows some of Justice Williams's reasoning upon these two provisions:

“This office of school commissioner is not an office provided for by the Constitution, nor was it an office in existence at the time the Constitution was adopted. It is therefore an office created by law after the adoption of the Constitution, and by the terms of this provision such officers might be elected by the people or appointed as the legislature should direct. The statute creating the office of school commissioner passed in 1856, and the statute passed in 1864 continuing such office leaves no doubt but that the office was made by the legislature one whose incumbent should be elected by the people, and not appointed by any authority. By section 3, title 2, chapter 33 of the Laws of 1864 it is provided: ‘The school commissioners for each school commissioner district shall be elected by the electors thereof by a separate ballot at the general election of 1866 and triennially thereafter. The laws regulating the election thereof and canvassing the vote for county officers shall apply to such election.’

“In view of these and other provisions of the statutes with reference to the office of school commissioners, it must be conceded that the legislature has made this office one to be filled by election and not by appointment.

“It will be well settled that the provision has had the effect to exclude all persons who are not males from the right to vote for the officers referred to in the provision, and the legislature has no power to pass any act authorizing females to vote for any such officers. We are brought, therefore, to this conclusion: The office of school commissioner having been made elective by the people, no person can vote for an incumbent of the office who is not authorized under provision of the Constitution to vote, and only male persons are so authorized to vote. The only escape from this conclusion must be found in the claim made in behalf of these women that the office of school commissioner is not covered by the latter provision of article 10, section 2 of the Constitution: ‘All officers whose offices may hereafter be created by law, or shall be elected by the people, or appointed as the legislature may direct.’

“It seems to me that such claim is untenable, and without support in reason or authority.”

On the other side we have the opinions of the nine able lawyers on the judiciary committee of the state senate. This question was raised while the bill was in the hands of the committee, and was canvassed with the result that the bill was reported to the senate and passed. Gen. Martin T. McMahon, one of the members of the committee, says in an interview:

“The legislature did not act hastily in passing that bill. The Senate judiciary committee heard its constitutionality fully discussed, and had the advice of Professor Collin, the governor's adviser on such matters. We came to the conclusion that the provision of the Constitution limiting the franchise to male citizens applied only to the selection of constitutional officers—such as were originally, now are, or hereafter may be provided for by the Constitution. The school commissioners are not such officers. They are legislative creations, and the legislature may direct how they are to be chosen even to the extent of limiting or extending the franchise. I am sorry that Judge Williams has decided against the constitutionality of the law. I think the law should be upheld until the court of appeals shall say, if it ever will, that it is contrary to the letter or spirit of the Constitution.”

As it throws a strong legal side-light on the infallibility of our male law makers and adjudicators the opinion of another lawyer is subjoined:

“If Judge Williams is right in his contention, there are scores of unconstitutional laws on the statute books, for if the franchise cannot be extended to females, it certainly cannot be restricted among males further than the Constitution expressly allows, for the Constitution states that ‘every male citizen’ shall have the right to vote. I have in mind many laws which provide for the election of officers, such as water and school commissioners, in various municipalities in the state where a property qualification is required of the voter.”

Only about twenty thousand women registered in the state before Justice Williams's decision was promulgated, which fact might have had a negative influence upon the court. Had ten times this number manifested a desire to vote it is not without the bounds of possibility that Justice Williams would have read the Constitution in a different light. This opinion is good law. The women must at the constitutional convention next summer work to have the new constitution made right.

Sunday in the City, and Sunday Travel.

The daily papers report that at the recent Boston meeting of the League of Railway Trainmen a resolution was adopted declaring against Sunday trains. We have not seen the resolution, nor do we know the vote by which it was adopted, nor the arguments adduced in its support. But there are some considerations involved which are amply conclusively against the wisdom of such a resolution, and we are confident that when railway workmen examine them carefully they will refuse to maintain the position the League is said to have taken, and this without reference to the church and state issue, which is the real question at the bottom of all Sunday law agitation.

The population of the cities increases in a much more rapid ratio than does that of the country. It is not necessary to our present purpose to inquire regarding the cause of this difference; we are here concerned only with the fact, and the sequences. The rich and moderately well-to-do city residents have, most of them, homes in the suburbs, or at least some distance removed from the crowded centers, and hence are not directly so vitally interested in the question of transit. But the masses of the people are forced to live in close quarters, contiguous to their work, and so their surroundings are often unsanitary to a degree, and even when not so bad as the worst, are far from healthful or desirable in other ways. By millions so situated Sunday is hailed as a day of release. On cheap excursion trains and boats they flock into the country and to the seashore or to the marge of some inland lake. They get away from the noise and dust and unwholesome odors of the city. The restful, cooling green of forest and meadow delights eyes strained by the glare reflected from towering walls of brick and stone. Children dance and roll and play merry games upon the sand or under the trees. They watch in wondering awe the incoming and receding tides, or with bare feet and rolled-up clothes wade in the limpid waters. To old and young is brought relaxation, rest and quickened pulses, but the benefit to the children is greater than to the elders. They are growing, and they need every touch with nature that can be given them. To none, however, is it less than a positive blessing, and he is an enemy of his kind who would lift a finger in opposition to the weekly outflow into the country and to lake and ocean.

Then there are other multitudes who have relatives and friends in the country, and in neighboring villages, towns and cities. On Sunday, with proper traveling facilities, they can hold delightful family reunions or make and receive pleasant visits to and from valued friends and agreeable acquaintances. Or they can go and hear a lecture or attend an entertainment in some other place. All these varied forms of recreation, entertainment and instruction are rendered possible by the Sunday train, electric or cable car, and boat. They are all innocent and health-bestowing. The trouble is that there are not half enough trains and boats running on Sunday.

In view of these self-evident facts, and many more equally unassailable, it is a matter of amazement that any laboring man can oppose Sunday trains. All classes of workingmen are benefited by them, and this is especially true of trainmen themselves. It is perfectly easy, with the power possessed by organized labor, to so arrange business that each man will get his weekly rest-day without depriving any other person of the opportunity to go into the country, to the seashore, or on a visit on Sunday. Every new Sunday train is a proclamation of liberty and an evangel of happiness to the people, as is every paper added to the list of Sunday publications.

Of course we cannot expect the clergy to attach any importance to such purely worldly benefits as those named. That the people should be healthy and happy through Sunday “desecration” seems to them inexpressibly monstrous. They are possessed by one little, narrow, other-worldly, God-first-of-all, idea and while that lodges in their brains there is room for nothing else. It seems a pity that we must say such severe things of a class of men who set themselves up as the religious guides and moral leaders of mankind, but it is absolutely necessary to expose their fraudulent claims. They are the mischief-makers in this Sunday business; they are the rebel chiefs in this revolt against nature at its best, and in this fierce crusade against rational enjoyment and a healthful Sunday they ply the sword with a ferocity and apply the torch with a heartlessness unapproached by any of their dupes. Protestants they call themselves, but they protest against reason and justice alone.

“Keep your children away from the priest or he will make them the enemies of mankind.”

Six Famous Victories.

The Christian Statesman says:

“Vexatious as are the serpentine twistings of the World's Fair management, we should not belittle our six great victories by forgetting that we have been defeated only in skirmishes on legal technicalities which will be forgotten when, at the end of the nineteenth century, we recall as among its greatest moral triumphs that Congress passed the Sabbath-closing law by a three-fourths vote, and later killed the proposed repeal in committee; that the federal court on the only occasion when the main question was before the courts decided for the Sabbath; that “our friends, the enemy,” gave us the greatest victory of all in the failure of Sunday opening through the covering of exhibits of the rich and the non-attendance of the poor; that the national commission and the local directory at last were constrained by public sentiment to almost unanimous votes for the Sabbath. These six victories are vividly called up by the news that two of the five million half dollars are to go back to the mint to be recoined into common half dollars, because so few want any souvenir of the frauds associated with the government's gift to the Exposition."

Yes, Congress trampled the Constitution under feet at the behest of the priestly caste.

Yes, Judges Jenkins and Wood decided for the Sabbatarians, and it is fitting that they should be proud of the latter judge, whose connection with the Indiana election frauds is a stench in the nostrils of all honest men.

The "covering of the exhibits of the rich" was not the work of the friends of Sunday opening, but of the narrow-minded exhibitors, and the "non-attendance of the poor" was the natural result of this. Working people did not care to pay fifty cents admission to a show which was under the blankets of sixteenth century survivals. That their failure to attend was not a victory for the holy day idea is proven by the large attendance on the last few Sundays, when the managers provided attractions approaching in drawing power those which caused the turnstiles to revolve swiftly on week days. For a time the local directors covered before the bluster and forged petitions of the Sabbatarians, and this is the only reason why Sunday opening was not a success from the start. The idiotic scheme for a "silent Sunday" did all the mischief. With the machinery running and all other attractions open to view, except such as the Puritans covered, the people's day of recreation would have been a grand holiday for the masses. The admission fee on Sunday should have been put at twenty-five cents, in consideration of the covered exhibits. This was the contention of the Free-thinkers, and the paid attendance of more than 140,000 on Sunday, October 22d, fully justified this common-sense position.

From the above stated facts and conclusions it follows "that the National Commission and Local Directory were" not "constrained by public sentiment to almost unanimous votes for the Sabbath," but by the financial failure of Sunday opening during the first months of the Fair, which failure was wholly due to the superlatively foolish "silent Sunday" plan.

When the Statesman talks of the "frauds associated with the government's gift to the Exposition" and of the failure of the people to buy the souvenir coins because they are tainted with these "frauds," honest men and women must smile derisively. Frauds, indeed! Sabbatarian forgeries, reaching into the tens of millions—forgeries so colossal, so gross, so clumsy, that the petitions for Sunday closing from several states were alleged to bear the signatures of signers so numerous that the totals were largely in excess of the total populations of those several states, men, women and children, criminals, paupers, aliens, and lunatics all included. Frauds? Why, Congressmen were cajoled or bulldozed into giving their votes for the unconstitutional condition attached to the national gift to the Fair. They were told that they would never come to Washington again if they did not do the bidding of the priests, and the threat was emphasized by shaking in their faces those forged petitions, asserted to represent the great majority of their constituents. Frauds? In the Senate the corruptionist Quay was their most active tool. Frauds? The attempt to close the Fair on Sunday was, from beginning to end, tainted with trickery, jobbery, and fraud. The connection of the national government with the Fair was so disgraceful, so unconstitutional, so fraught with deadly menace to the liberties of Americans, that it is not at all strange that honest people do not want any memorial of the miserable deal. No wonder the souvenir coins became a drug in the market. What satisfaction to a Freethinker would be the possession of a medal struck in commemoration of the forging of a new link in the chain binding in loathsome union church and state? That is all the souvenir coins are.

"'Twas a famous victory," but it should bring the blush of shame to even the indurated cheeks of the Christian Statesman factionists.

Agents Wanted.

We believe that not only can good be done but money made by any Liberal who will canvass for our book "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." In fact we know one man who worked at it but a few hours weekly and sold nearly fifty copies in a month. The price is low; everybody knows the Old Testament stories, and nearly everybody would like a book applying nineteenth-century wit and knowledge to them. People like to laugh. Reverence for the Old Testament tales has largely disappeared and jokes at the expense of Jonah and Joseph and Esau and Samson and David, and the other worthies of unsavory reputation, are keenly appreciated. It seems to us that the book will sell at sight. It does here in the store. Liberals out of employment will find this a good way to make an honest dollar.

Terms to agents sent upon application.

We do not wish to precipitate another panic or "object-lesson" upon the country, but it is perfectly true that there are a number of our subscribers whose time has expired who have not paid us. And it is perfectly true also that there are some people down-town to whom we owe money whom we have not paid. But it will be perfectly easy to even this thing up if those subscribers will stop at the post-office and buy a money order for $3 and mail it here. If they meet a neighbor on their way who doesn't take the paper but wants it, make the money order $5 and it goes for a year to both. But please remember that the down-town fellows here are hard up.

Four Good Books for German Freethinkers.

We can supply, in the German language, the following four books which everyone knows to be good:

"The Mistakes of Moses," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

"Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen H. Gardener, 50 cents.

"The Gods," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 25 cents.

"Miracles and Miracle-Workers," by John Peck, 20 cents.

These are neatly printed, bound in paper covers, and are complete. Our German-reading friends should circulate these widely.

Colonel Ingersoll will lecture in the Boston Theater, Boston, Mass., on Sunday evening, November 12th. Subject: "Shakspeare." We envy the Bostonians.

The old pro-slavery idea that Mongolians, Negroes, and Indians are not descendants of Adam has been revived by an Episcopal clergyman of Charleston, South Carolina. He says; "Every dollar and all time and labor expended on non-Adamic races is so much withdrawn from the forces of Christ's kingdom." If Adam was not the father of all men, maybe he was not the first man, eh? And have these other men, of the yellow, red, and black races, souls? If not, have mulattoes, for instance, each half a soul? How much longer is this Adamic myth going to be thrust into the discussion of great ethnological and social problems?

The Science Sermons Society met for the first time on Sunday evening the 5th, in the lecture-room of Dr. Collyer's church. The place was crowded. The speakers were Mr. Janes, the Rev. Robert Collyer, Rev. G. W. Sampson, and Helen Gardener. Mr. Janes's paper was upon Evolution and Ethics. Mr. Collyer made a generous little speech of welcome. Mr. Sampson talked about ancient history, and Helen Gardener represented woman in the conglomeration. And it happens that in this particular instance, the women were better represented than the men, so far as Liberal thought is concerned. And next week, therefore, we shall print her speech. It is wise, witty, and weighty.

Governor Pennoyer of Oregon has issued the usual unconstitutional Thanksgiving proclamation. Into it he has injected a silver stump speech, the object being to secure from God, through prayer, a veto of recent Congressional action. He does not state why it is necessary to beg God to interpose his royal mandamus. Perhaps he thinks telegraphic communication between Washington and Godlandville has been cut off, or it may be that he surmises that the Most Worshipful is on the fence and nothing but the united outcries of the people of Oregon will induce him to get down on the right side. Anyhow, Fious Pennoyer has a surprising aptitude for making a spectacle of himself, and it is not strange that he imagines that he is in high favor at court.

In one of the courts of Atlanta, Georgia, the other day, Judge Edgar H. Orr was on the bench. Judge Orr is a Sunday-school superintendent and a devout churchman. A lawyer named B. Z. Phillips was trying to reach an agreement with his honor about some costs of litigation, the sum of ten cents holding them apart. At last Phillips paid the amount, remarking, "Touched again for a dime." Instantly the judge "sent him a right-hander" and, catching him by the collar, shook him up and down the court-room, finally hurling him out into the street, threatening awful consequences if he returned. Orr is six feet in height and weighs two hundred pounds. Phillips is a little bit of a man. This is called "turning the other cheek." How often we see a domineering Christian nation similarly maltreat a feeble barbarian state which has ventured to protest against being robbed! Just now Spain and England are making bloody records of this kind.

In the meeting of the Methodist ministers of Chicago the other day, Dr. L. W. Munhall, of Philadelphia, relieved his surcharged feelings as follows:

"The World's Fair has been a cursed thing. It did the devil's work. Like the Sunday papers, it has been of the devil. When I thought they were going to close the gates on the Sabbath day, I went to the Fair twice. After they desecrated the Sabbath I was very sorry for myself and did not go again."

This is a pretty good certificate for both the World's Fair and the Sunday paper. Casting our eyes backward over the pages of history, and making an inventory of the innovations which the clergy have ascribed to the devil, we find that about everything that has made for civilization in its best sense has come from the ruler of the nether regions—or the parsons lied. It is too bad that Mr. Munhall should have been fooled into attending the Fair which was destined to "desecrate" the Sabbath so horribly. Was he ignorant of the fact that it had already desecrated it? Did he not know that when the buildings were under construction large numbers of men worked every Sunday? If he did not, intelligent readers of the press did. In this connection it is fitting to say that the thanks of all Liberal citizens are due to the great journals of Chicago, New York, Boston, and other cities for their independence in the matter of Sunday opening, as well as for their priceless services in other directions. Why the clergy hate them so is not because of their really bad features, but for the reason that they are largely independent of and are supplanting the pulpit.

Death.

"What is Death?" The moralist would say,
"Tis only a transition;" and the sage,
"Tis a returning back to dreamless clay
From whence we sprung;" and thus from age to age
Come questions, doubts, decisions, which again
Must be decided, never set at rest.
Death mocks within the shadow and in vain
We ask, "What art thou?" And in vain our quest
To search within that shadow land which lies Around him and beyond him. Though we call,
"Let us have light," the echo of our cries
Comes wailing back to us; and that is all.
Men weep about us as the wavering spark
Sinks—flickers—starts—and passes with a breath.
A life has slipped into the boundless dark,
Whither no eye may follow. This is Death.

ARTHUR EDGERTON.

Send for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Woman: Four Centuries of Progress.

THEOLOGY NEVER HELPFUL TO WOMAN.

In the face of a history replete with abuse, cruelty, scorn and dogmatic insolence toward woman, the Christian church still has the audacity and impudence to declare that it has been her friend and done everything for her elevation and advancement. It says that what she is to-day she owes to the church. A blacker falsehood was never uttered.

After the crusades the respect and deference first proffered to woman came from the Moors and Saracens of Spain. In America, it was Thomas Paine who first spoke for equal rights for woman. And her first step in progressive lines began with her first defiance of, and indifference to, churchly rules.

Within the last hundred years her march has been steadily onward. But it has not come through the channels of the church, or by theological dogma.

Why, theology forbade a mother to kiss her babe on a Sunday morning. It told her when her unbaptized little ones died that an extraordinary use of their skulls was made in repairing old sidewalks in the regions down below where asphalt pavements and other modern improvements are unknown. This was consolation with a vengeance.

Within the present century, when a young lady, having taken cold at a ball, became ill with pneumonia and died, the clergymen who officiated at her funeral, administered consolation to the bereaved parents in this wise: "I have no doubt," said he, "that she is now dancing amid the pains and tortures of hell-fire!" And then proceeded to declaim against the sin(?) of dancing.

Theology the friend of woman! What did this boasted friend do when woman insisted on her right to free speech? I will tell you, friends. It hanged her in the person of Mary Dyer, to a tree on Boston Common till she was dead. It banished Anne Hutchinson to the wilderness for saying that the clergy of Boston preached a covenant of faith instead of works.

What was the consequence when the beautiful Madame Roland declared her sentiments for truth and justice? She was rendered speechless by severing her head from her body.

What was the answer when woman asked for a little more education? Christianity bade her go home, sew on shirt buttons, mend the stockings, and mind her husband.

When did Christianity, that boasts of being so friendly to woman, ever advocate her right to representation? her right to self-ownership? Never. Has it ever been known to speak for equal suffrage regardless of sex, or previous condition of sex servitude? No, it never has. Has it ever favored eligibility to office of persons of suitable age and intelligence, without regard to sex? Never in the world. Has it labored at all for the elevation of woman, either inside or outside the church? Certainly not.

Has this boasted friendly power ever sought the educational development of woman and the spread of useful scientific knowledge among women?

Never to my knowledge or the knowledge of anybody else. Has it ever striven that woman should receive the same pay as man for the same work? Never, not even for missionary labors. Has it been tolerant of woman's liberal and progressive ideas? No, but, on the contrary, most intolerant and abusive. Upon all these points, this self-asserting "friend" has been as dumb as a tongueless bell, when not preaching against her progress and advancement.

When, a hundred years ago, Mary Wollstonecraft spoke brave words for the amelioration of the condition of her sex, how was she received? With derision, scorn, and contumely. Frances Wright was driven from a hotel in New York out upon the street, a stranger in a strange land, to find lodging where she might, because of her advanced views. Ernestine L. Rose and others who followed her have felt, in their own persons, the cruel shafts of ridicule and insult, for endeavoring to lift woman from the quagmires of superstition in which she was placed by an ignorant past.

INVENTION WOMAN'S FRIEND.

The age of invention marks the era of woman's hour.

With the printing press came broad streams of light that crept through the bars of the prison-house of woman. It shed its streams of glory around her head like an aureole, and illumined her onward path.

When Charlotte Guillard in 1490, four hundred and three years ago, started her printing presses, printing books in Latin and Greek, and keeping those presses busy for fifty years, she broke the way for future generations.

The first daily newspaper in England was printed by a woman, Elizabeth Mullet. And during the invasion of the British in this country in the war of the Revolution, when newspapers in Boston were suspended, the only two, and those the most radical, that kept on printing regular editions, were owned and edited by a woman, Margaret Draper.

These early pioneers in printing and editing made it possible for Margaret Fuller first, and many other women since, in the present century, to adopt journalism as a means of support.

The printing press has been one of the greatest factors of modern progress. While it has been at times the enemy and detractor of woman, it has been also her greatest friend and the promoter of her best interests.

It gave to civilization a new impetus. When people began to read, they began to think. When they began to think, they were led by easy steps to reason and reflect.

By hard and incessant labor woman has overcome many of the obstacles in her path. In astronomical science, Mary Somerville, Caroline Herschel, Hannah M. Bouvier, Maria Mitchell, rank equally with men.

In other fields of science, where feet of women have trod, they have made constant progress. In art, Rosa Bonheur, in her particular department, stands without a peer, while Elizabeth Sirani has the honor of painting one of the seven finest paintings in the known world (The Baptism of Jesus). To Louise Bourgeois the world is indebted, in medicine, for a treatment that robs some of the ailments of woman of half their terrors.

In literature, many publications attest the value and excellence of woman's work, while George Eliot, peerless and immortal, stands among the greatest, with the laurel on her brow.

In political economy, Harriet Martineau, who wrote forty volumes on the subject, and of whom the late Wendell Phillips was pleased to say she had more brains than twenty thousand ordinary men, stands side by side with the foremost political economist of this or any period.

As showing the prejudice against woman in this line of work, a gentleman told me he had never been brought to the pass of reading "Jane Eyre," or "John Halifax, Gentleman," because these books were written by women, and he did not believe a woman could write anything fit for a man to read! It was such prejudice as this that forced women to adopt a masculine cognomen in order to receive the reward of true merit which would be awarded to the matter, the signature indicating a man instead of a woman.

In business conduct the women of France take the lead, carrying on large enterprises with ability and shrewdness. In our own country they are not behind, coming into all activities. The inventions of women are particularly noticeable, being of a practical, beneficial order. Woman owes very much of her advancement to the inventive genius of the world.

It was the evolution of the spinning jenny that broke one of the shackles that bound her. She had been the spinner, weaver, and maker of all the garments worn by man, and thus had she been kept in one ceaseless round of toil.

The power loom struck the handcuffs from her hands. When the spinning wheel and the ponderous old hand loom went into the attic, woman got her passport to the World's Fair to be held in 1893.

The first sewing machine sent the thimble flying from her finger, and gave her time to read, time to think. The washing machine was a god-send. The carpet sweeper was worth more to her than a thousand years of prayer.

As new fields opened, her vision unfolded. She saw clearer. The scales fell from her eyes.

In the beginning of the century there were but seven occupations open to woman. Now there are nearly four hundred, in any of which she can earn her own living. She is beginning to realize the value of independence. Within the present century the advancement of woman in industry, art, literature, science, has been as wonderful as it is marked.

She has entered nearly every department of work and education, and wherever her hand has gone she has achieved success.

Woman is practicing law in sixteen states and three territories in this country. Nearly two hundred pulpits are occupied by women. There are six medical colleges exclusively for women, and thirty-six in which they share instruction with their brothers. This has placed three thousand women in active medical practice. Two hundred and four out of three hundred and forty-five colleges are co-educational, and ninety-six per cent. of our teachers are women. There are women bankers, brokers, dentists, directors of corporations, heads of business establishments, artists, authors, writers, printers, and no large newspaper office is complete without one or more women upon its editorial staff. "But, after all, she hasn't produced a Shakspeare, Bacon, or a Robbie Burns," pipes a little man. Hasn't she? In the words of Mrs. Chant, Who did, if she didn't?

Politically, the march of woman has been directly onward. She votes for school matters in twenty-five States, holds the office of school committee, school superintendent, trustee of universities, dean of colleges, and many other offices. In Kansas she has equal municipal rights with man, and in Wyoming she enjoys all the state rights and privileges equally with men. Before another decade shall pass it is not unreasonable to believe that woman will be an equal factor in the whole political world with man—that she will occupy a seat in the Congress of the nation at Washington, and people will wonder why she was not always there.

Macaulay said: "The best way to prepare a people for liberty is to give them liberty," and the people are just beginning to realize that the best way to make a nation great and prosperous is not by holding one-half of the population in a superior or an inferior condition, but it is accomplished by making all of intelligence equal before the law and the government under which they live.

In the time to come, and toward which everything is pointing, the popular vote of this country will not arise from the slums and saloons. It will not be the vote of the ignorant and unthinking. But it will be the woman's vote.

An incident. A few years since a woman, born in a foreign land, applied for naturalization papers. When her case came before the court, the judge looked at the woman in astonishment. He had never before heard of a woman applying for citizenship. For what did she want to be a citizen of this country? Wasn't she a woman? And was not that enough? He did not know about it. A man might take out papers; but a woman—well, he would inquire and see.

At the time of the application the court room was filled with its usual quota of loafers and odors, not exactly of the highest order of intelligence, or as fragrant as the rose. The loafers heard the woman's request in pained and indignant amazement. As she retired from the room, pending the judge's inquiries as to her legal right to make such an application, the loafers expectorated freely, looked at each other quizzically, with half-opened eyes, and said one to another, "Her wants to be like we."

Heaven forbid that woman should ever become like the audiences of the district court, and you may be assured she never will, but she would be glad to at least take the management of her own affairs into her own hands, instead of leaving it to the tender mercies of the "we" of the court-room rabble.

With the opening of new avenues of employment has come to woman the right and privilege of competition, which she never enjoyed before in the whole course of her existence. And this is a marked era in her advancement. Heretofore she has been crowded out of many employments that would seem rightfully to belong to her, man assuming that he had the right to provide for her as he pleased. He felt that he alone had the right to be the wage-earner, or, if woman worked for wages, he should have the expenditure of the same. Said Alexander Hamilton, "Give a man a right over my subsistence, and he has a right over my whole moral being." By woman coming into the great arena of labor and competing with man, she has achieved a great victory. Another triumph in this direction will be accomplished when her work shall secure the same pay as is now accorded to man for similar labor. The trend of womanhood in this line is toward a better and nobler future than ever has been known before.

It is a significant fact, marking the steady progress of woman, that her applications for business positions are no longer treated with contempt, but are respectfully, and, for the most part, generously considered.

Since her advent into the labor market, her rise has been steadily upward and onward. More than three million women are earning independent wages in the United States alone. Eighty thousand women are earning wages in New York city outside of domestic service. Six thousand women are acting as postmistresses. Fourteen hundred are in various government departments in Washington.

Simultaneously with the uplift of woman in this country has come her advancement in British Columbia, Quebec, and Montreal, in England, Scotland and Wales, in France, Belgium, Germany, Sweden, Poland, British Burmah, Madras, and Bombay, at the Cape of Good Hope, New Zealand, New South Wales, Queensland, and South Australia. In all these countries women have some political freedom, and that country is behind the times where women have no political powers whatever. In spite of old customs and religious restrictions, women almost everywhere are inquiring and asserting their human rights as intelligent beings.

And what has occasioned this uprising among women?

There is one force, and but one, that has brought about this condition of things and assisted woman to the place in which she finds herself to-day. Freethought—call it Liberalism, education, or whatever you will—is the one power which has broken the chains of woman and started her on the road to Freedom. When the colleges refused her admittance, Freethought said, "We will build new ones for her." It did so, and put an annex on the old ones for her benefit. It said, "Down with the despotism that would keep woman forever in the bonds of ignorance." And in this way more has been accomplished for her in a few years than in an age of scheming, and preaching narrowed down to the musty dogmas of ancient theology. It early sent her forth as a teacher and encouraged her to press on to newer heights, held her trembling hands, and guided her unaccustomed feet.

It bade her go preach the gospel of truth and righteousness to every living creature, the gospel of a new and better era. It opened the doors and sent her out into the sunlight of freedom, and her march has been steadily and nobly onward.

Freethought has broken every barrier to woman's enfranchisement that so far has been broken and will yet beat down the remaining stumbling blocks in her pathway.

For centuries the married women of England and their property had no separate existence. Freethought succeeded in securing "The Married Women's Property Act," whereby women could hold property separately from the husband. This was in 1862. Before that, in our own country, Judge Hertell, a noted Freethinker of New York, had argued for the bill to restore to married women the right to hold property, as guaranteed by the constitution of New York state. Fifty years ago everything belonging to a woman when she married became her husband's property; also, all that she might subsequently inherit. She could not sue or be sued at law. Her wages belonged to her husband. She could not even own her children. Freethought has changed all this. In nearly all of the forty-four states of the Union a married woman holds and controls her own property, if not her person. She is entitled by law to the money she may earn by working for anybody except her husband. In six states she has gained equal rights with her husband as to the guardianship of her children. Freethought will yet assist her to equality in this respect in the other thirty-eight states, for it has ever regarded her as an individual, independent being, capable of government and the exercise of liberty.

Freethought early discovered that there is no sex to right, no sex to wrong, no sex to purity and truth; that these qualities belong equally to man and to woman. When this is still better understood and the old customs of society are outgrown, woman will demand the same purity of life and conduct from man that is now exacted from her. She will then frown upon the same irregularities in man that she now scorns in her own sex.

Freethought has always been the best friend woman had—the noblest, truest ally and champion. It has ever sought to place her in her own true light before the world—the guide, counselor, and friend of man; queen not only of home and household, but of every domain where her worth and work is required, and equal sharer in life's pursuits, duties, and emoluments—the undwarfed, unfettered, real complement of man.

To a free and liberal press, to the free schools, to free thought and free speech, to an enlightened public opinion, is due the emancipation of woman from the bondage of superstition. To these forces, and these alone, must she look for her future welfare.

To destroy mental slavery is the work of the great future, for that is the vulture still preying upon the vitals of our common humanity. This cannot be accomplished without first making woman herself free. Her condition decides that of the race. Elevate her, and you lift the whole human family. Degrade her, and disgrace and shame become the lot of man.

Education is the great lever, raising all to higher ground. It is woman's benefactor. Pen and voice have been employed against woman's right to free and full education. But wherever she has secured equal facilities she has held her own, distanced man when he has been her competitor, won the prizes in mental work, and maintained her physical balance.

Her progress, through many difficulties, through many false notions and foolish prejudices, has been straight onward and successful. Yet there still remains much to be overcome, many narrow views to be overthrown. To do this there must be absolute equality of the sexes. There must be no more cringing dependence, no more creeping and fawning for favors, no more sex slavery, no more enforced motherhood, but entire freedom and independence of action.

Time and the agitation of free and noble principles alone can accomplish this. Goethe says: "Time is my inheritance, Time my field." And Time will bring all things to those who work and wait.

In the future we shall hear no more of what can be done for the elevation of woman, but the question will be how shall we lift man from the moral degradation of sensuality, of strong drink, tobacco, lewdness, profanity, and obscenity.

The future will be ruled not by brute force or by vast wealth, but by moral and intellectual strength, and these belong to woman as to man, and will be exercised for the good of the whole by both man and woman.

Schopenhauer saw only ill in the whole world, but Liebnitz saw the good running like a silver thread all through life's changes. So, after the ills that have beset the way of woman, shall come the good. Her path is onward, and her motto, Excelsior. Whither she goes, as a necessary consequence, man must follow. The twain will stand side by side, shoulder to shoulder. They will be friends, equals, companions, helpmates. Woman, as she progresses, will never lose her womanliness, as some have feared and predicted.

Woman will be always woman, whether she performs her part of life's work as lawyer, editor, doctor, banker, broker, president of corporations, ship-captain, mine-operator, stock raiser, teacher, merchant, or manufacturer; whether she pursues the calling of any great business operator, or remains simply the housekeeper and regulator of the family, venturing not beyond the boundaries of home, she will remain distinctively and essentially woman. She will be always tender, solicitous, sympathetic, loving, and lovable.

She will always be the principal factor of the household, the home-maker, the heart-sweetness, the true lover and comforter of man, appreciated by him as never before in the history of the world.

And then, when man and woman

Upon the skirts of time
Sit side by side, fully summ'd in all their powers, Dispensing harvest, sowing the To Be Self-reverent each, and reverencing each,
Distinct in individualities.

Then comes the statelier Eden back to man—and to woman, also.

Then, will the whole world be their country, and the practice of goodness the only religion.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

Sparks from The Lecture Field.

After a few days sojourn at the beautiful home of B. A. Roloson, whither I had gone to recuperate from the fatigue caused by my labors at the Congress, I commenced once more the work of human progress and Freethought. These few days afforded me a much needed rest, and my eternal gratitude is due to my friends for their kindness. Cincinnati was the first place upon my list of appointments. Here I met all the old friends, but in new quarters. Owing to the active labors of Light, Hogg, Allen and company the Ohio Liberal Society has grown to such an extent that more spacious apartments had to be secured for this season's work. A splendid audience of six hundred people greeted me upon this occasion. They were enthusiastic to a degree. They are all Freethinkers and take a delight in their weekly meetings.

A discussion always follows the lecture, and this time we had a good one. It lasted for an hour and a half after the lecture was over, and the audience thoroughly enjoyed it. The Ohio Liberal Society is well known all over the city. Its members are regarded as the most active opponents of all kinds of fraud and superstition. A few weeks back they upset a fraudulent spirit materializer, by grabbing the "spirit," which turned out to be a woman wearing a false beard and mustache. The medium and the spirit were both placed under arrest, and put under bonds of $1,000 for their appearance. Once outside the prison walls the "spirits" spirited them away, and they failed to answer to the charge. The moment that "Light" appeared upon the scene of the darkened seance, "Hogg" raised the devil, and that put an end to it. There are a large number of Freethinkers in this city, and the society has a long career of active usefulness before it.

Once more I resume my journey, this time to Golden Pond, "down thar in Ole Kentuck." Successive stages of long rides, first by vestibule, then by freight, followed by stage and hack, brought me to my destination. Bogard met us a few miles from town, he being on his way to meet me. Golden Pond is beautifully located between the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers. It is but a small place, but there are quite a number of Liberals among the population. They were eagerly watching for my arrival and warmly welcomed my advent amongst them. The Christians had been having things all their own way since Putnam was down there last fall, and now it was time for the glorious light of Freethought to shine forth again.

An effort had been made by Messrs. Bogard and Rodes to arrange a debate between myself and the Very Rev. J. N. Hall. The sky-pilot failed to appear, though he had written to one of his "dearly beloved" that he would be on hand, but later sent word that he was sick and could not attend. He had probably heard from Braden; but, then, his sickness was of a fleeting nature—it was only temporary. Anyway, he did not come, either by accident or design, the latter being the most probable cause. The faithful had done their utmost to spoil the meetings. They could not bear to think that the Infidel should come among them and have things all his own way, that their side should not be represented. But they forgot that "their side" had been represented all the time and it was our side that had been without representation. They sent word by mail, by stage and personal visits, advising the people not to come. But the people did come; they were like Eve with the forbidden fruit. A large hall had been seated for my lectures. The people came from miles around. It was a general holiday. My first lecture was given to a good crowd, who seemed to enjoy it. I gave my first lecture at 10 o'clock in the morning, and though "Preacher Bentley," of the Baptist persuasion took several notes of what was said, he, wisely perhaps, refrained from making any remarks. After the lecture a table was laid in the hall, whereat, through the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Z. T. Bogard, we all sat down for a lunch. It was a happy, merry crowd, with the exception of a few sore-headed Christians; but when it came to eating, the "lion" and the "lamb" sat down together. There were Freethinkers and Christians—of the latter, a parson and a few dupes—all around the festive board. After lunch came another lecture. This time the parson, urged on by one of his own friends, made the most ludicrous attempt at a discussion in which it has ever been my fortune to take part. He had prepared a little paper to read in answer to my lecture, but sad for him, it didn't fit. Therefore the preacher, who had, as he declared himself, "been commissioned from God to preach the gospel," was compelled to argue from anticipation. His remarks were prefaced by the solemn warning of "He will tell you." He wanted to argue upon something that I was to tell the people, and not upon what I had told them. What is worse though, and I regret to say it, the parson got mad. Well, that's nothing. Jehovah frequently got mad, and played hell occasionally, so we can excuse this poor human worm who, by the way, has turned out to be the long sought-for, though never before found, "missing link" of Charles Darwin. I hasten to make my apologies to him beforehand, but really the reverend gentleman brought it all on himself. During my reply, he turned uneasily in his seat, and finally rose to leave before I got through. I was then compelled to request him to sit and take his physic like a man. I realized how distasteful to him it was, but it was all his own fault. He tried abuse and slander. He tried to throw ridicule upon the cause of Freethought, but, like a rubber ball, it rebounded with double fury upon himself. I was the rebounder. He complained of my personal appearance. My clothes were too good to suit him, and my hat had too fine a polish. He said: "His appearance would show that he had never done a day's work in his life, while for ten years I have been herding sheep in Texas." Rash mortal, vain parasite, how little he knew of the world. He did not know that for fifteen years I had toiled in the scorching sun of summer and the biting winter frosts as a mason, and that I told him, "was harder work than chasing butterflies on the plains of Texas." I urged him to speak the truth, to tell the people what he really thought and believed, and in the course of time the public would begin to appreciate him. His appearance would polish up a little, and there would be no further need to patch his pantaloons with canvas. The Freethinkers were jubilant, and the Christian portion of the community wore a truly sad and dejected air. The next morning the people began to arrive bright and early. It was evident that we were to be favored with a larger audience than ever, and so it turned out. The Misses Cunningham cheered us with vocal and instrumental music, which added to the good humor of the crowd. I was in good spirits. I lectured again at 10 in the morning. There was no opposition this time. The preacher fought shy, and, even if he had not shied, his own congregation would have prevented him from speaking again. One of them even urged Mr. Bogard to call him down should he attempt to discuss with me again. Had this been done the whole responsibility would have been thrown upon us. We saw through the trick, however, and refused to entertain such a proposal. If they did not wish him to speak they were the people to make him acquainted with the fact, and so they were informed that if he desired to speak the platform was as free for him as for me. But "he never spoke again." The preacher did not care about it, and his flock had no further desires in that direction. The Christians were hot, hotter than they will be when they reach hell. They would have rejoiced had some physical injury been inflicted upon me; and four hours later their rage found expression. They tried to persuade me that I was wrong—they knew I was wrong—and they tried to show me the error of my ways with jack-knives and revolvers. In the afternoon of Saturday, October 21st, eight zealous Christians rushed up to me with these weapons in their hands. A preacher of the gospel of Christ held my arm with one hand and with the other he clasped a large knife. A wild scene followed; the wooden place rang out with Christian threats and Christian curses. The foulest of epithets fell from their lips. My friends urged me to escape from the hall; but no, I stood my ground. My only defense was to back up against the wall, keeping every man before me, thereby preventing a blow being dealt me from behind. At one stage of the game I thought my time had come, so I began to count my "chips" preparatory to handing them in; at least, I had made up my mind that I might be called upon to do it.

I had no desire to wear a martyr's crown, nor have I yet. If the "big un" with the "six-shooter" had insisted upon persuading me to join church, I would have consented to be baptized six times, once for every chamber, if he would only let up on it. It would have been an easier matter, and far more comfortable, to have joined church and then backslid than to take chances on going to "kingdom kum." My friends soon rallied to my assistance, and, standing before me, they pushed the crowd back, declaring that before they would allow anyone of them to touch me they (the Christians) would have to walk over them. My thanks here are due to them, and more especially would I mention the bold and determined stand taken by "Jim" Holland and John Bogard. The appearance of Z. T. Bogard upon the scene of excitement and intimidation soon had the effect of driving off the would-be inquisitors, and order and peace reigned supreme once more.

I was not through with them yet, however. I had still one more lecture to give, and I meant to give it, too. It was rumored that the Christians would not allow me to do so, but I had not yet been persuaded, so at the risk of further efforts at Christian persuasion, I went to the hall next day at the appointed hour, and lectured again to a splendid audience. The faithful were now driven to desperation. They got up evangelical meetings on the streets, at which some wandering tramp was selected to speak. Church meetings were speedily organized, and the quiet little Kentucky town was full of excitement. They button-holed everyone they met on the road, and urged them to go to church. They deceived the people by leading them to believe that I was going to speak there; but when they discovered the fraud, some few of them came out in disgust, while a few of the more timid remained. Despite their efforts I had by far the larger crowd, and as I had purposely commenced late, I caught a large portion of those who had been to church, for I was still talking when they came out.

Freethought never had such a boom there before; the very air was full of it. Following upon my last lecture, it was amusing to hear the expressions of opinion. One Christian remarked to another, that "he has given us some pretty hard knocks, and the worst of it is, they are all true." The church can never recover from the blow that has been dealt her in that town. Freethought is at the top. At the top it will stay. The Christians were mighty glad when I left town, but I would request them not to jubilate too much over my departure, for I am bound to return. Thus the good work goes; the "sparks" are still flying, and the flag of sweet liberty is flying before the breeze.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.
165 South Water street, Chicago.

The Manhattan Liberal Club.

After the annual round-up of our talented lecturers at the fall Freethought conventions, as many of them as can make it at all convenient come to New York. There is something in the air here they like. THE TRUTH SEEKER editor chaperoned Mr. Putnam direct from the Chicago convention, and he is having a pretty good time speaking round about here and writing "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." Mr. Charlesworth, unscathed by the knives of the Kentucky Christians, followed on, and Friday evening the 3rd, he entertained the Liberal Club. Mr. Steiner is looking eastward and Mr. Remsburg will be here this winter sure. They are all abundantly welcomed, and THE TRUTH SEEKER puts itself out a little to make things cheerful for them.

The audience came slowly together to hear Mr. Charlesworth, but finally they all got there. The room was plastered so thick with TRUTH SEEKERS that few saw the People's Party documents laid upon the table by candidate for Attorney-General Wakeman and he had to call attention to them. Candidate for Coroner Foote is taking a rest from presiding this month, and sat meekly among those he so often lords it over. Candidate for Justice of the City Court Chamberlain came in late, and candidate for State Senator Titus Merritt didn't come at all. Charles Eckhard's northwest corner was occupied by his young chum only.

It was a thoughtless deed for which due repentance is hereby expressed, to put Heston's pictures in opposition to Charlesworth's words and it apparently took him some time to get the attention of the audience away from THE TRUTH SEEKER. It was half past eight when Vice-President Wilson McDonald lay down on the reading desk, his feet resting comfortably on the floor, and announced that as there were no announcements he would introduce Mr. Charlesworth who would say something about the relation of Freethought to politics. Mr. Charlesworth rose up and said that man had attained his present bad eminence as an animal by being the most accomplished and successful murderer on the globe. This was in accord with the Darwinian doctrine of the survival of the fittest. But the fittest was a pretty bad lot sometimes—especially the politicians, with the exception of the Liberal Club candidates of the People's party. They are all right. As for the press, its devotion to human interests could be inferred from the fact that when Whittier died, the World printed twenty lines about him, and on the same day printed thirteen and a half columns about a prize fight. Is that, queried Mr. Charlesworth, a criterion of New York culture? "Yes," answered a voice in the audience, "it is." Conventions are no better as expressions of public sentiment than the press, and the pulpit is worse. All Christian countries base their claims to bigness and power on their armies and navies, and every regiment had a Christian chaplain, who asked God to help his men kill the other fellows. And these other fellows had the same. Eight men, down in Golden Pond, Ky., had rushed upon him, Mr. Charlesworth, each possessing a bowie knife or a revolver, and such weapons are Christianity's strongest arguments.

The Freethinkers, to become a power, must become a voting party. Each year they met in convention and passed resolutions which were forgotten a week afterward. What did Congress care about that? Congressmen never heard of it, and anyway the average legislator didn't care what the people said if he could make money enough during his first term of office to buy a seat for the next term.

But the speaker did not confine his remarks to any one reform advocated by the Freethought party, but undertook to show how all reform in general should be attempted. He reviewed the existing mediums by which public opinion was molded and inquired into the purity of the channels by which they were made manifest. He first dealt with the necessity for reform, or at least some change in existing conditions. He next defined what he meant by Freethought, and showed how it might be made a factor in the political life of the nation. The most important channels, he said, "by which public opinion is molded and made manifest, are: First, The public press, and the general literature of the country; second, by the convention of public bodies; and third, by the means of the pulpit and the platform." The lecturer urged that when these channels are palpably impure an unenlightened and unmoralized public opinion is the result. The present evils of society are the direct results of such impure agencies; and when we consider the approximation of society to existing orthodox opinions, we are forcibly reminded of the evil instincts of the adherents of modern Christianity.

The public press is supposed to be the true reflection of public opinion; and if the American press truly reflects the opinion of the American public, and truly represents American culture, we have nothing therein of which we may feel justly proud. There is scarcely an organ throughout the country but what is run either for party or personal interests. Their sole purpose is to distort facts and pervert moral truths; to serve their own end. Hence, as at present constituted, the press is an unsafe and unreliable medium. The pulpit, which might be made a great power for good, has been used in the interests of the classes as against the masses. For the most part its occupants are actuated by purely personal and selfish motives, and they feel and speak accordingly. Many evils that afflict modern society are the results of its influence. With the inward organization of nations, as with their outward relation to others, Force still determines the relative condition of all things. We are at present cursed with a huge array of cumbersome and hopelessly entangled legislation, which, in itself, is hurtful to society at large.

The lecturer continued, "That education was our only salvation; in the proper education of the young, lies the hope of America." He urged that every Freethought voter should act in accordance with the principles of the Freethought Federation of America, and to begin right now with the ensuing elections.

When the lecturer concluded, candidate for coroner Foote gave notice of the new Science Sermons Society, which meets in the lecture room of the Rev. Dr. Collyer's church, Park avenue and Thirty-fourth street, and candidate for attorney-general Wakeman from the audience adverted to the fact that he was to speak to the Williamsburgers on "Christianity and After," being his Chicago address.

The critics were slow in coming forward, and Mrs. Donlevy filled the gap by saying that all thought is free, though Mr. Charlesworth had said otherwise. Then she said several other things, to which few listened, because they were reading THE TRUTH SEEKER. But they all applauded when she concluded, because she is a fine old lady, whom everybody loves.

Dr. Kinget, in a red necktie, was the next speaker. He lived the Liberal Club because it invited persons to its platform without regard to membership in it or previous condition of servitude elsewhere. Mr. Kinget is an Anarchist of the Anarchists, and wants no government at all, and advised everybody to abstain from voting. The lecturer of the evening had not yet discovered the logic of Freethought. Go into politics if you will, said Mr. K., and see where you will come out. Politics could not be purified, and association with politicians would only make Freethinkers filthy. Let the honest men stay away from the polls, leaving only the rascals to vote, and they would soon fall. Honest men would then form voluntary associations, and collectively and individually protect themselves. (Great laughter from Mr. Eckhard's chum in the northwest corner.) The logic of Freethought is free action, and we should not vote for Democrat or Republican or People's Party. This last thrust made candidate Foote, who had replaced Mr. McDonald as presiding officer, look gloomy, and after that he evidently did not expect to be elected.

As Mr. Putnam went upon the platform the hope was expressed by one of the auditors that he at least would talk sense, which he did. Freethinkers, said Mr. Putnam, should vote as they think, and for the men who favor our demands. The press should be reformed and the pulpit abolished. It is true that the politicians care only for the spoils of office, but we cannot get along without government. It was better to make politics something different, and there was no use holding aloof. Personally, he is a Jeffersonian Democrat. Further, the audience should take THE TRUTH SEEKER home with them and read it and then subscribe. He had been preceded in these sensible remarks by candidate Foote, on the same subject, and it is hoped the audience will follow the advice.

Mr. Wilson followed Mr. Putnam. He is another Anarchist, and his remarks were substantially the same as Mr. Kinget's. Government, he said, is only to suppress liberty, and rob people of their property by taxation. The purpose of Tom Jefferson and Tom Paine was to extinguish government, and that was what our Revolution was for. When Emerson said the grandest part of our national history was when we had no government, he spoke a great truth. Organizing a party necessarily meant a combination with thieves and robbers, and the notion of making men honest that way is absurd.

Candidate Wakeman indorsed Mr. Charlesworth's idea of throwing influence in favor of candidates who accept the Nine Demands of Liberalism, and he couldn't see anything unreasonable or impracticable in the Freethought Federation's work. As a candidate of the People's party he was in it, and he wanted the audience to take the documents he had laid upon the table and study them. The Anarchists would make Jefferson and Paine groan in their graves if those two statesmen heard the sentiments attributed to them. If Jefferson were alive to-day he would undoubtedly be a Populist. Jefferson's scheme was to institute new governments to replace the old and bad ones. Government is a necessity and every man possessed of common sense knows it. The talk of Messrs. Kinget and Wilson is folly and only misleads fools to their own destruction. People with the culture of Kinget and Wilson ought to know better. All audiences of the size of this one include a percentage of fools, who might, after listening to the Anarchists, get pistols, like Prendergast, who killed Carter Harrison, and go out and "protect" themselves. That might be the ending of the foolish talk of Mr. Kinget. The best thing to do is to vote for the People's party, and he hoped to hear no more inane talk such as had been heard from Messrs. Wilson and Kinget.

The time for debate having elapsed Mr. Charlesworth closed the session by graciously expressing the hope that Mr. Wakeman would be elected. To Mrs. Donlevy he would say that there is no such thing as absolute Freethought, because environment governed us and circumstances are our schoolmasters. To Messrs. Kinget and Wilson he would say that government could not be abolished without abolishing man, to do which it would be necessary to extinguish the race. Mr. Wilson objected to the words attributed to him, and interrupted; Mr. Wakeman endeavored to set both right, and the debate was progressing merrily when Candidate Foote swung his black gavel and called time. Messrs. Wilson and Wakeman subsided and Charlesworth soon let the audience go home, taking their TRUTH SEEKERS with them.

The text for the next meeting will be Mr. Wilson McDonald's explanation of Psychic Phenomena.

Freethought Progress.

The Free Religious societies of Germany held on August 5th-7th their fifteenth congress at Nuremberg. Delegates representing thirty-one societies were present.

Freethought is having a great boom in that orthodox state, the republic of Peru. Three Freethought journals exist now in that dark land—La Razón, El Independiente, and El Rescate. Surely Freethought is progressing.

The Italian Free Mason society, Grand Orient, which is affiliated with the International Freethought Federation, has made its headquarters in the Borghese palace at Rome, and its insignia are placed on the identical spot from which Pope Paul V. used to bless the populace.

Cuba is joining the forward procession. Freethought is organizing in that beautiful island. El Esfuerzo del Siglo, published in Santiago, contains a lengthy account of the doings of our local brethren, who have formed a society with the very appropriate name, "Victor Hugo."

The Freethought Society of Vienna, Austria, the president of which is Edward Schwella, held its silver jubilee on October 1st. The large hall was crowded almost to suffocation at both the forenoon and evening meetings.  Three libelers of the Jews, one a priest and another an editor, who said they sacrificed children at the passover, have been punished in Austria recently.

The great Freethought demonstration held at Lill-Jans, Sweden, on September 3d, was a decided success. About five thousand people were present, and the greeting given our friend Victor E. Lennstrand was an ovation. A telegram containing a protest against the Upsala jubilee of the state church was sent to the king, and signed on behalf of those present by Victor E. Lennstrand, A. W. Aberg, A. Wester, C. J. Eketöf, and Dr. Knut Wichsall, the latter by proxy, he himself being unable to attend the meeting.  Eight thousand five hundred and ninety-two signatures were gathered to the protest list against the Upsala celebration. Several thousand more have no doubt been given, but numerous protest lists which were left for signing in various newspaper offices and stores have mysteriously disappeared. The Christians of Sweden no doubt forgot the commandment about stealing. The Swedish press is yet, with a few honorable exceptions, decidedly hostile to Freethought.

The French Freethought Federation held its annual Congress on October 29th, at Salle H'de l'Harmonie 94, rue d'Angoulême.  Le Réveil du Nord contains an excellent account of a congress held by Freethinkers from the north of France. What publicity did American secular papers give to our late Congress?  French Freethinkers have now formed a society for promotion of secular marriage. Why not? No need tipping a sky-pilot.  Over one thousand francs have been collected for the erection of a home for aged French Freethinkers.  La Vérité Philosophique, formerly edited by C. Cilwa, is now published in an enlarged form by E. Cordeau, 17 Rue Croix des Petits Champs, Paris. We hope soon to see it on our table.  Antoine D'Abadie, ex-president of the Paris Academy of Sciences, has made over to the academy property and bonds to the value of a million francs. An observatory is to be built with the proceeds, and one condition of the bequest is that there shall be no vivisection in the physiological department benefited by it.

The London Freethinkers wish to rebuild their hall next spring. To this end the National Secular Hall Society (Limited) is working to raise three thousand shares by February) next. Four thousand pounds are needed before building is begun.  Can any good thing come out of the church? At Hamilton, Ontario, representatives of the Central Presbyterian church, and of Christ Church Cathedral, conferred with several officers of the Hamilton street railway company to see if the partial Sunday car service, which prevailed before the introduction of electricity there, could not be restored. The Sunday cars, before and after service, had been found very convenient. So badly did the churches want the Sunday cars—for the benefit of their own services, of course—that they were willing to guarantee at least $2 a per day for each car if two bobtails were put on for each church. So far as the report shows, nothing was said about the immortal souls of the drivers and conductors of these cars.  E. P. Powell has a very appreciative "Study of Thomas Paine" in the Arena for November. He paints graphically the black ingratitude of Americans toward this brilliant and heroic champion of their rights.

Churchly Purpose and Performance.

Through love for God, the holy souls, and ourselves, we should endeavor to gain as many indulgences as possible, and deliver them, as well as all our satisfactory merits, to the Blessed Mother for the benefit of the souls in Purgatory. But it may be said that if we reserve no indulgence for ourselves, and if we give up the satisfactory portion of our works for the benefit of the holy souls, that we ourselves run the risk of having to remain a long time in the prison of Purgatory. On this point we need have no fears, for the voluntary whole offering of our satisfactions to the suffering souls is an act of charity of such high merit that it remits all our punishment. But even if some loss to us should exist by reason of the "Heroic Act," an occurrence not to be supposed, we shall certainly find ourselves more than compensated for that loss by the sublime degree of glory to which we shall be exalted in Paradise by reason of this act of boundless charity to souls so dear to God and Mary, says a Dominican priest in the Rosary.

As rosarians, the associates of the Sodality, and even those of the faithful who do not belong to either of those associations, have by reason of the Rosary so many opportunities of amassing spiritual treasures in the form of indulgences, and as frequently they may be in doubt as to the best way of disposing of the treasures, we would most earnestly advise them to keep continually before their minds the principles just enunciated, and follow their grand teaching as proclaimed in the "Heroic Act."

The "Heroic Act of Charity" consists in a voluntary offering or surrender of all works of satisfaction in this life, and of all the suffrages that shall be offered up for us after death into the hands of the Blessed Virgin, to the end that this tender Mother may distribute them in behalf of those holy souls whom it is her good pleasure to deliver from the pains of Purgatory.

But it is only the special personal fruit resulting to us from the satisfactions and suffrages we thus forego in their behalf. Hence such a transfer would not prevent priests from offering Masses for the intentions of persons who have given them honorario; neither would it hinder a person from praying for himself, parents, or friends, nor from practicing in his own behalf works of piety, because it is only the satisfactory portion, so to speak, that is applied or given over by this offering to the souls in Purgatory. The fruits of merit, propitiation, and impetration always remain with the doer of the acts, since they cannot be communicated to others.

The "Heroic Act of Charity" was first enriched with indulgences by a Dominican Pope, Benedict XIII., afterwards by Pius VI., and lastly by Pius IX., in a decree of the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences, Sept. 30, 1852. The privileges conceded to it are the following: 1. The indulgent of a privileged altar personally every day in the year to priests who have made this offering. 2. A plenary indulgence, applicable only to the faithful departed, to all the faithful who have made this offering, whenever they go to Holy communion, provided they visit a church or public oratory, and pray for some time according to the intention of His Holiness the Pope. 3. A plenary indulgence every Monday to all who hear Mass in suffrage for the souls in Purgatory, provided they visit a church or public oratory, and pray as stated above in No. 2. 4. All indulgences granted or yet to be granted, even though not applicable according to the tenor of the grant to the dead, which are gained or which may yet be gained by the faithful who have made this offering, may be applied to the holy souls in Purgatory.

Finally, Pope Pius IX., having regard to the young who are not yet communicants, as well as to the sick, to those who are afflicted with chronic disorders, to the aged, farm laborers, prisoners, and others who are debarred from communicating and unable to hear Mass on Mondays, has vouchsafed by another decree of the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences to declare that for all the faithful who cannot hear Mass on Mondays, the Mass heard on Sunday would be available for gaining the indulgences specified in No. 3, and that in favor of those not yet communicants, or who are hindered from communicating, he has also left it to the will of their respective ordinaries to authorize confessors to commute the works there enjoined.

Though this "Act of Charities" is denominated a vow in some printed tracts, in which also is given a formula for making the offering, no inference is to be drawn therefrom that this offering binds under any sin, neither is it necessary to make use of the said formula, since in order to share in the privileges and indulgences pointed out, no more is required in the case than an act of the will made with sincerity and determination.

The "Heroic Act" may be made in this manner by anyone who desires to practice it and to gain its privileges: "From this hour to the end of my life I freely give all the satisfactory part of all my works, and also all the suffrages that will be offered for me after my death, to the Most Blessed Virgin Mary, to be distributed by her according to her good pleasure for the benefit of the souls in Purgatory."

In the course of time, doubts having arisen as to some of the conditions for gaining the indulgences already named, the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences has issued a decree solving five of those most frequently occurring. The decree decides, in the first place, that indulgences declared by the Holy See to be "applicable to the souls in Purgatory" are included among the opera satisfactoria which by the "Heroic Act" are offered for the faithful departed. 2. Those who reserve to themselves the indulgences granted to the living do not satisfy the conditions, and are bound to apply them all to the holy souls in accordance with the words of the Indult. 3. It is not an integral part of the "Heroic Act" that the dispensation of these spiritual favors should be placed in the hands of the Blessed Virgin. 4. The plenary indulgence which a person who has made the "Heroic Act" will gain by going to Holy Communion, or by hearing Mass on Mondays, need not be placed at the disposal of the Blessed Virgin, but may be applied to any of the poor souls at the discretion of the donor. Lastly, that a priest who has made the "Heroic Act," and is using the privilege which some priests possess at Mass of what is called a "privileged altar," must apply the plenary indulgence gained thereby to the soul of the person for whom the Mass is offered.—Catholic Review.

[When we remember that tens of millions of people could read the above and fail to see any joke in it, we can begin to realize the awful depth of ignorance in which the people are plunged. Just think of men and women of even ordinary sense taking that piece of labored humor seriously! There is a general concurrence of testimony that professional "funny" writers are very grave and serious men, in appearance, sedate and dignified in their actions. Were it not for this fact, we could not help believing that the writer of the foregoing article nearly split his sides with laughter while penning it.—Ed. T. S.]

Lectures and Meetings.

FRANKLIN STEINER desires to come East this fall and winter on a lecture trip, and would like to secure many engagements. His terms are very reasonable, and he should be kept busy. Address him at Des Moines, Ia.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York:

November 10th.—Wilson McDonald, "Psychic Phenomena."

November 17th.—Col. H. Charles Ulman, "The Rights of Man."

November 24th.—Prof. A. L. Rawson, "The Dualism of Consciousness."

J. E. REMSBURG has returned from an extended tour through Wisconsin, Minnesota, and South Dakota. His next trip will be to Nebraska, where he has the following dates:

Hooper, Neb., Nov. 11, 12	Gibbon, Neb., Nov. 16
Seward, " " 13, 14	Cambridge, " " 18, 19
Cairo, " " 15	Danbury, " " 20

When these appointments are filled he will speak in Kansas.

HENRY ROWLEY will speak for the Newark Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market street, at 3 P.M., Sunday, Nov. 12th.

John R. Charlesworth is now in the East. The following appointments are on his list, and friends along the route desiring lectures should address him at once:

Nov. 12 East Dennis, Mass.	Nov. 26 Philadelphia, Pa.
" 14 15, Osterville, "	Dec. 3 Alliance, O.
" 16 Cotuit, "	" 14, 15, 16, Waterloo, Ind.
" 19 Boston, Mass.	" 17 Chicago, Ill.

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Association holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of Lectures for November:

November 12th.—Mr. S. P. Putnam, "Evolution and Creation."

November 19th.—Mr. H. A. Powell, "Reform and Politics."

November 26th.—Mr. S. P. Putnam, "Rights of Man."

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, will meet on and after October 17th in the Skerrett Building, northeast corner of Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock.

November 14th.—Dr. Frances Emily White, "A Study in Sociology."

November 21st.—Ida C. Craddock, "Survivals of Sex Worship in Christianity and Paganism. What Christianity Has Done for the Marital Relation."

November 28th.—Mrs. C. B. Kilgore, "The Congress of Religions."

THE Ohio Liberal Society meets in College Hall, 163 Walnut street, Cincinnati, Sunday evenings at 7:45, prompt. Admission is free. Program to December:

November 12th.—Judge Alfred Yaple, economic lecture, (subject to be announced).

November 19th.—Allen O. Myers, "Was Judas Iscariot a Traitor?"

November 26th.—Mrs. A. L. Fealy, of Dayton, O., "Truth and Fallacy of Christian Science."

THE Science Sermons Society has been organized in New York city, to hold Sunday evening meetings in the lecture room of Dr. Collyer's church, Park avenue and Thirty-fourth street. The lectures on "Life and the Conditions of Survival," provided for the Brooklyn Ethical Association, will be repeated in the New York meetings, and other lectures of similar trend will be given in alternation with them.

Letters of Friends.

The International Congress Was Just Splendid.

CARLTON, NEB., Oct. 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $3 for renewal of my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER. I have been to the World's Fair. I never had so good a time before, and never saw so many Liberals in my life, and it was just splendid. I hope our cause will grow faster from this time on.

Yours for the rights of all,

BENNET ANDERSON.

They Try to Persuade, but Would Compel if They Could.

SPOKANE, WASH., Oct. 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Herewith please find postal order amounting to $4.

I inclose under separate cover a copy of San Francisco Examiner in which I marked a piece which you may use as you see fit. The churches here have appointed committees to wait on every individual and try to persuade him to go to church. The movement has aroused a great deal of antagonism already and it may fall through, which I hope it will. Trusting you will continue your good work, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

JOHN E. WELIN.

Rensburg is a Scholar, an Orator, and a Gentleman.

LODI, WIS., Oct. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find money order to cover renewal to the good old TRUTH SEEKER. Long may it wave and spread its truths all over this benighted and superstitious world of ours God (!) bless THE TRUTH SEEKER. Amen!!

Our people here in Lodi have had the extreme pleasure of listening to J. E. Rensburg. He gave us three lectures, on the 12th, 13th, and 14th of this month (October), which were highly prized. We hope to secure his services again, if possible.

Mr. Rensburg while here showed himself to be a gentleman of the highest type, a fine orator, and a complete master of his subjects.

N. C. SKELTON.

God's Legerdemain vs. Nineteenth Century Miracles.

FALMOUTH, N. S., Oct. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The copy of the "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" arrived punctually and in good condition despite the many orthodox hands through which it must have passed. Your Heston is a genius and his book a jewel that I am obliged to keep hidden, as I am the only Liberal in a community bitterly religious and clouded with superstition, through which THE TRUTH SEEKER bursts weekly like a welcome sunbeam.

I have been doing my own thinking for some time past and have searched long and diligently for Freethought works, but never knew where any could be obtained until a few weeks since a new acquaintance presented me with several back numbers of THE TRUTH SEEKER and I hastened to send in my subscription.

My father (i. e., my earthly father) has been a constant subscriber to a Baptist sheet published at St. John, N. B., and devoted to the glory of God and patent medicines. Of late years it has reached the proportion of one column of God's praise to two of the other fellows', and the legerdemain of scripture has become so hopelessly confused with nineteenth century miracles that it has become a question of some uncertainty whether the raising of the widow's son should be attributed to the faith of Elijah the Tishbite or to the administration of a timely dose of Pink Pills, or whether the credit of relieving Mary Magdalen of her seven devils belongs to Jesus of Nazareth or to the magical virtues of Hood's sarsaparilla.

I am glad to find that THE TRUTH SEEKER is as free from modern miracle lies as it is hostile to the lies of scripture miracles.

For inclosed stamps please send Hume's "Essay on Miracles," and oblige,

W. P. LAWRENCE.

By Growth, Not by God.

PEASTER, TEX., Oct. 21, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $1.25 for which please send to address below "Hand-book of Freethought," by W. S. Bell, and "Infidel Death-beds," by G. W. Foote.

The preachers can never cease defaming the Infidel dead, and their dupes, who read but one side of the question, believe all they say, even if the statements are positively false. I listened to a Second Adventist preacher, a short time ago, deliver a sermon to Infidels. His first argument was that "Tom" Paine died a miserable death, and when "Old Bob" Ingersoll dies he will die a miserable devil. I suppose in the latter case he has had a special revelation to that effect, and in the former he takes Christian lies for the truth. It never occurred to him to mention John Calvin, the founder of the Presbyterian church, who also died a miserable death, as it is said he died raving, cursing and blaspheming God. He utterly forgot to refer to the pages of history, where one can learn that hundreds of men holding high positions in the church died miserable devils. He never mentioned the fact that the church is full of miserable devils to-day, who would reenact the horrible scenes of the past if it were not for the lack of power. He seemed utterly oblivious to the fact that the actions of men are governed by their organizations and not by what they believe. The church, as well as the laws of the land, have been trying for centuries to make good men and women out of vicious organizations, but they never will accomplish it; it can be done only by proper breeding.

The grand old TRUTH SEEKER continues to come regularly once a week. I would hardly know how to get along without it. It is worth more to me than all the divine revelations that have ever been promulgated, and hoping it may attain the success it merits, I remain,

Yours for Freethought,

J. S. WHITE.

Prayer Does Not Accomplish Anything Practical.

NORTH BENTON, O., Sept. 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Within find $2 for which send me the "Martyrdom of Man" and credit me for the balance on THE TRUTH SEEKER. I have been attending the Chicago World's Fair; it is a grand show, too big for the mind of man to contain. I am pleased with the result of the opening of the Fair on Sunday; it is a fatal blow to the sky-pilots.

I attended a camp-meeting a few days ago; they preached loudly and long about the efficacy of prayer. I told the preacher I would give him $100 if he would demonstrate that a single prayer was answered by the myth he called God. He turned to his congregation and told them that all who had had their prayers answered by God should hold up their hands. A number held up their hands. After that he called on them to give their reasons for knowing that God answered their prayers. One man about sixty-five years old said he knew God answered his prayer because God took away his taste for tobacco. I asked him who gave him the taste for tobacco; he said the devil. Another said he knew God answered his prayer because by prayer he could take fire out of a burn and by prayer he could stop blood. I told him I would allow the doctor to open a vein in my arm and if he would stop the blood by prayer I would give him $100, and he said he could not do it without I had faith. I told him such stuff as that would do to convict persons of witchcraft and whip a man for kissing his wife on Sunday, but it would not do to substantiate an alleged fact in this day and age of the world. The Christians from pine-clad Maine to California called on their God to heal Garfield. They also called on God, their image, to close the gates of the World's Fair on Sunday. With all God's promises to his people they cannot demonstrate that he ever made good one of his promises. At New Salem, Columbiana county, O., the Methodists tried a person for witchcraft and had a long and tedious trial. The papers were full of it just last spring, in the noonday of the nineteenth century. Shame on such Christianity!

Wesley said that to give up witchcraft was to give up the Bible. CHESTER BEDELL.

A Most Astonishing Confession.

DEERING, ME., May 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: A short time ago, in one of our Sunday papers, among the notices of divine (?) services for the day, the following paragraph caught my eye: "Free church, Western avenue, at 7:30 P.M. Discourse by the pastor. Subject: 'The Greatest Sinner in Deering.'" Being somewhat of a sinner myself, according to the verdict of some of my converted friends, I quite naturally felt some curiosity as to whom this interesting individual might be, and straightway I made up my mind to attend the meeting and find out.

Consequently, 7:15 P.M. found me one of the few Freethinkers of this vicinity, comfortably occupying a front seat in the house of his majesty, Jehovah, the loving Jehovah, the kind Jehovah, Jehovah the just, Jehovah the only, the great, the original. After the introductory exercises were over the gospel dispenser rose and, naming his subject, announced his intention of calling the person's name right out in meeting before everyone. "Good," thought I, "now I shall have a chance to go and compare notes with this poor soul, and therein we can both take comfort."

The culminating point was delayed by the minister's settling the grounds on which we were to judge a man, and what standard of character we should use in so doing. After giving up several points from which we are wont to judge, such as public opinion and the dictates of conscience (he never mentioned the dictates of reason and common-sense), he finally settled on the character of Christ as the highest standard known to man and therefore as that from which we should judge. I took decided objections to this, but of course did not wish to interrupt him, but I will give them here:

1st. We do not know anything about the character of Christ, except what the writers of the New Testament have told us, and they were such notorious liars that we never know when to and when not to believe what they tell us.

2d. Even if the character of Christ as recorded in the gospels was a faithful portrayal of the man's virtues, yet it is not the highest standard the world was ever to know.

Christ himself said (see John xiv, 12): "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do." Now, in order that a man should be able to do greater works than Christ did, he must of necessity be a greater man, and consequently a better character to judge by.

Well, to come to the meat of the nut, he declared that he himself was the greatest of all sinners within the jurisdiction of the city of Deering, and to say that I was surprised would be expressing it but mildly. Not that I doubted his word for one moment. Far from it, but it astonished me greatly to hear him own it, for I had previously been laboring under the delusion that it was easier for the rich man to enter the gates of the New Jerusalem than for a minister to tell the truth. Amid the manifold instances which we constantly read of, wherein priests and ministers take precedence in lying, following therein the bright and shining example of the father of Christian lies, Saul of Tarsus, it was pleasant to find one case in which the truth was spoken, and I made up my mind that I would inform THE TRUTH SEEKER of it. The only dampener to my joy was this: I could see that he hardly believed that he was as bad as he said he was after all, but he is hoping against hope.

I now believe there is a chance (though a very small one) that at some time in the future we shall hear the truth proclaimed from the pulpit, but it is a long, dreary wait, and in the meantime the task will devolve on us poor, despised Freethinkers.

Yours hopefully,

FRED IRISH.

Keep on Seeking for Truth.

CASTANA, IA., Oct. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Politics is a bane to the expression of Freethought. For that reason the emphatic protest of W. W. Morris, Newark, N. J. (THE TRUTH SEEKER, October 14th), against the bad practice of using Freethought journals for electioneering purposes, should be highly commended. The Freethinker who believes that any good can come to his cause from any existing political party is guilty of credulous infatuation; he is thoroughly benighted on that point. My residence is in a county where the Populists rule; but we might as well expect to draw blood from a stone as to derive the least benefit in the warfare against superstition from the Populist party. As the present object is to make some comments on the financial notions of John Peck, as set forth in THE TRUTH SEEKER for September 23d, I will pass by that glittering, deceiving humbug known as free trade, which cannot be adopted without serious injury to the common people.

That brave iconoclast, who is strong and convincing when discussing theology, shows himself to be both credulous and careless in his views of finance. It is astonishing that Mr. Peck should place credence in that absurd old campaign lie about Ernest Seyd. Mr. Seyd has not been in this country since 1856. He lived and died a bi-metallist who was opposed to the demonetization of silver. It is a disgrace and a shame to American politics that so good and intelligent a man as Ernest Seyd should be traduced and lied about long after he has been placed in his grave.

"In 1865 Secretary McCulloch said: 'There are nearly $2,000,000,000 in circulation.'" McCulloch was not talking about currency at that time and it must be very doubtful if he used the words "in circulation." According to his own treasury statistics there were only about $20 per capita in circulation in 1865-6. Surely, Mr. Peck would not have us reckon interest-bearing bonds as currency.

"Wherever paper money has been tried it has produced prosperous times." Indeed! Has Mr. Peck never heard of continental, Confederate, and wildcat paper money? Has he never heard of the assignats of France, of Argentine scrip, and other such disasters? It is not true that "Venice used neither gold nor silver as money for more than six hundred years." Anyhow, I cannot find any such thing in the history of Venice. Undoubtedly gold and silver were the currency of the Venetians during the whole six hundred years. Interest-bearing bonds and annuities are not to be reckoned as currency.

France paid off her enormous debt to Germany by borrowing the money for that purpose. That she has not yet repaid that borrowed cash is shown by the fact that she has the largest national debt in the world. France is not a free-silver country; she has no fiat money, and her tariff is closely like our McKinley law.

Again, is it not astonishing that Mr. Peck should be so much in love with government debt and full "legal-tender" paper money? The legal-tender power is an exercise of absolute sovereignty which is liable at any time to degenerate into a vicious tyranny. A government may compel the people to accept bad money for past debts, but it cannot force them to otherwise receive any kind of money. The French government once tried, with pains and penalties, to drive its subjects to receive paper money. The final result was that the people utterly refused to take the legal-tender "stuff" and it became worthless. I have heard an able and experienced business man seriously argue that it would be better for the country if the legal-tender power were abolished altogether. Why not?

All money is to some extent beholden to the element of confidence. But human nature the world over has attained far more confidence in gold and silver than in paper money; not that the world loves paper less, but gold and silver more. As governments are liable to go bankrupt in an emergency and repudiate, a suspicion attaches to paper money which is not attached to gold. Though all governments on earth should repudiate, gold would continue to exchange for clothing, provisions, and shelter. The almost universal verdict of mankind in favor of a precious metal basis is likely to control the financial world until the possibility of national debasement or repudiation of paper money has ceased to exist.

Mr. Peck writes: "The bullion in the gold dollar cost me a day's work before it was coined, then I had to give to the government a day's work to get the dollar after it was coined." What for? Is the government's seigniorage such an immense thing as that? Dollars must be getting expensive.

Finally, brethren, howsoever things may be, there is left to us one consolation—we can continue right on seeking the truth. P. DAY.

Some Bible Worthies.

BODIE, CAL., Oct. 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Strange that the living God does not anoint some of the brigand chiefs, railroad robbers, or stage robbers of to-day as a complimentary voucher for their grand achievements. No doubt he is the same God who wrote about the robber chiefs of Bible times; maybe he has changed his opinions. If so, why not cause a revised book to be written? The Freethinker has the only revised Bible. Its golden words are "common sense," "investigation," "energy," "perseverance," "honest thought," "reflect for yourselves." Certainly we will not be condemned for that, though there be a living God.

Even the orthodox ought not to wish their children or any other of their Lord's children annihilated, or cast into a pit of hell fire and brimstone, a life of everlasting punishment, for using the organs nature gave them; for exercising the natural ability or instinct with which the human family was endowed.

According to the orthodox teaching, there is no use for brain-work; the more ability a man has the more wretched he will be after death, unless he allows himself to be dictated to by some creed-monger. Then the question arises, Which? They all tell us theirs is the only true way to salvation of the soul; bewildering, this is. It seems to me intellect is dangerous, if exercised in an independent manner on religious matters. The person who is most easily persuaded and can be dictated to stands the best chance for salvation.

Believe the book called Holy Writ from lid to lid; ask no questions; it is not necessary to be able to read; believe and your soul will be saved. Investigation is therefore dangerous; ignorance is safety. One of ordinary ability cannot believe, or pretend to believe this, unless he is a coward or a knave.

Let one read the book of Samuel and note the butchery ordered by the great all-wise, merciful, living God, of a people that committed no sin. And they were his people, "God the creator of all things." First Samuel, xv., 11, tells us that the Lord was displeased that he had appointed Saul king over Israel through Samuel, because he had disobeyed his butchering order. The woman saluted David with shouts and fine music, saying that Saul had killed his thousands, but David his tens of thousands. This proves both of them murderers. This incident made Saul jealous of David thenceforth, because the people thought David the greatest human butcher.

God stood in with David, for the "evil spirit" came from the Lord. Saul having failed twice to murder David with a javelin from his own hand, bethought it policy to try scheming deception on the boy after God's own heart; but the youth was a player and dancer, even a great poet. Saul then promised David his eldest daughter to wife. Saul deceived the youth by giving her to another; but Michal, Saul's youngest daughter, loved David. This love appeared to please old Saul, the deceitful king, who then invented another scheme to cause David to die of heart failure, that the blame might be cast on the innocent Philistines, choosing his daughter as the snare (1 Sam. xviii., 22-25). Read of the dowry required by this once godly king. The inspired work informs us in English, but Jewish version, that David procured double the dowry, at the same time sacrificing two hundred innocent lives. Can anyone deny this assertion? To make this gift complete, David should have taken these two hundred trophies, had them tanned by an expert, and had a jacket made; then, no doubt, the Lord would have presented this holy garment to this lovely king. This grand accomplishment surprised Saul, so that he was much annoyed, after having laughed in his sleeve and rejoiced at his shrewdness. This scheme having failed, the old wretch tried to make arrangements with his son Jonathan and his servants to kill David, but repented because Jonathan had convinced him that the Lord had wrought a great salvation for all Israel, and called David's blood innocent. Saul swore that David should not be harmed; then he tried to murder David, to shed innocent blood, with his own hand that night.

David afterward became a brigand chief. The twenty-fifth chapter of Samuel tells us how David solicited alms from Nabal, the honest rancher, for his outlaw followers, and when refused, David, the anointed, prepared to make a raid and exterminate all Nabal's belongings, not leaving one wh— the reader may finish this sentence by reading the twenty-second verse of the twenty-fifth chapter of First Samuel; also the latter part of the thirty-fourth verse. By the way, was not this man David, the man after God's own heart, a Mormon? The forty-second, forty-third, and forty-fourth verses of the same chapter read like it; besides the record of other acts of this anointed one is convincing. Here is where the fine work of a woman comes into play. Can anyone read this story without becoming convinced of the intrigue of David and Abigail? They got rid of Nabal very soon, with the Lord's assistance. Abigail became the wife of the chosen man of the living God. This episode is equal to the stealing of Uriah's wife, Bethsheba, by the same anointed deceiver. He took many wives and concubines in the name of the Lord.

The above are but a few of the wicked ideas that have been forced into my dull, uncultured brain by the liberal teachings of the Freethinkers. Taught as I was in childhood to read and believe, to doubt or investigate was wicked.

N. J. SALISBURY.

Wealth and Want.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As Mr. Brayton has contributed an article of considerable length in defense of the rich man, I presume I may be permitted to express my views on the same subject. His views are substantially the same as are held by the rich generally, as well as by many other well-meaning people in the more humble walks of life.

Very few people have any laudable ambition or any worthy purpose in life. It is the ambition of most people to become rich. Some persons desire this through mere greed for gain; others because it gives them power and position; and both because it enables them to bring up their children in indolence and "respectability," and, at death, to leave the said children sufficient means to continue their indolence and "respectability." To this end they grasp, hoard, speculate, and swindle; they have their lives insured, and they join all sorts of benefit associations, etc., for the purpose of "keeping the wolf from the door," after they are gone. It would look more honorable and more sensible if they were exerting themselves as energetically to secure a more equal distribution of property and more just laws. But justice and equality are not what they desire; they want injustice and inequality, knowing that if their own children are left rich, some other man's children must remain poor, for we cannot all be rich. They desire that someone be poor enough to be obliged to do the drudgery, to make the beds and black the stove and scrub the pavement and brush the horses. In other words, popular ambition, when carefully analyzed, is generally found to consist of a desire to escape from honest work and to dominate over others. Such is largely the ambition of those whom we send to Congress and to the legislature to make our laws.

Mr. Brayton informs us that "one man's right to get and hold property is as good as another's, but it seems that all have not the gift to do so." Did the Goulds of the present generation, and thousands of others of the same stamp, get their wealth because they "have the gift to do so?" Or was it because circumstances placed them where they could step into the shoes and inherit the wealth accumulated (honestly or dishonestly) by someone else? Recent newspaper accounts state that one of the Vanderbilts is now developing a thirty-eight thousand acre farm in North Carolina, where he now has seven hundred men working on it, and where he contemplates erecting a $5,000,000 residence. Did he earn all this by the "gift to do so?" It represents the sweat of thousands of industrious and hard-working men, who now slumber in neglected graves, and whose sons and daughters, in many instances, can scarcely secure food and raiment, or school-books and medicines, for their children. Is this right? This is the stamp of man that manipulates the stock market, that controls the price of grain. To this stamp belong the men who corner coal, lard, coffee, apples, etc., and then go away to the sunny South to wallow in luxury, while their slaves that they leave behind, shiver with cold and battle with starvation, suicide, and crime.

It is a popular notion that a man has a perfectly just right to bequeath his property to whomsoever he chooses, and that children have a just right to the property of their parents, but is this right? A man brings no property into the world with him. We all come into the world empty-handed. We do not even bring a suit of clothes with us. If a man brings nothing into the world, why should he be permitted to govern something after he has gone out of the world? In the language of Paine, "should the dead govern the living?" Is it right that those who have never done an honest day's work, but who have been brought up in luxury, and have spent their time in eating and drinking, smoking, pounding a piano, buggy-riding, and entertaining company, and who have been taught to scorn as inferiors all who honestly sweat for their bread—I say, is it right for such people to inherit wealth which they never earned, while thousands more industrious, more talented and more honest, inherit only slavery, rags, and disgrace? Laying all sentiment aside, and looking at the matter from a purely utilitarian standpoint, it seems to me that a dead man's property should revert to the state, and that his children should be permitted to struggle for themselves. Why should not the children of the rich struggle the same as those of the poor? They are no better and often not as good.

We often hear people in comfortable circumstances say of some less fortunate brother: "If he had $25 on Saturday night, it would all be gone before Monday morning." It is a fact that there are quite a number of such improvident and spendthrift characters in the world, and for such I have no great amount of sympathy, but it is also a fact that there are thousands more with no "ifs" in their case. We cannot say of them, "If they had it," they have it; and they "blow it in" regularly; and they never earned it either. There are people in this city who live on the most aristocratic streets and who put on great style, keep fast horses, get up excursions for the benefit of their friends, go off to neighboring states on horse-racing and gambling expeditions, and get so drunk and disorderly that they get into jail, and their friends have to go after them. The newspapers speak of them as "good fellows" and "high rollers;" they are among the elite of this city, but it is very well known that they inherited their money, or the most of it, from their old granddad, who made it in a whisky-mill. Now, the question is, have they any better right to "blow it in" than Pat Casey, who makes his money carrying the hod?

Mr. Brayton tells us that there never was a time when the poor man was as well off as he is to-day. I think it is true, but he might also have said the same thing of the rich man. I think there never was a time when there were so many millionaires; but poor men, thousands of them, want for the necessities of life, and women still make shirts for seventy cents per dozen or barter their virtue for bread.

It is a mistaken notion that the concentration of wealth and power in the hands of a few men is necessary to the successful development or operation of railroads or other great enterprises, otherwise we should make haste to return to the feudalism of mediæval ages.

I do not wish to be understood as underrating the value of brains or intellectual effort. The brain of an Edison, for instance, is worth more to society than a thousand hands; but I wish it distinctly understood that Edison could never put his brains in the market or give society the benefit of them, without the thousand hands; so that the thousand hands ought not to belong to paupers, while Edison is several times a millionaire. While admiring the frieze we should not forget the mudsills.

This unjust distribution of wealth is one of the principal causes of the vice and crime which pervade society. Money, and the leisure, fine clothes, etc., which only money will bring, are the only things which can be depended on to give a man respectability. Lacking these, no amount of character and talent will enable him to maintain his "social position," but possessing them, his roguery and rascality are only laughed at. The result of all this is, that thousands of people in their efforts to keep up an appearance of respectability are tempted to resort to dishonest, vicious or criminal practices, in order to secure the necessary funds. Multitudes of rich people, having much time and money at their disposal, often find it impossible to content themselves with the common affairs of every-day life, and resort to degrading and demoralizing habits of dissipation, thereby injuring themselves and their own and setting a bad example to society.

It is a fact that many rich men, in their efforts to perpetuate the memory of their "honorable" names, found colleges in which the expression of a candid opinion is considered a crime, and from which a pupil who would ask a few pinching questions would be likely to be expelled. It is a fact that some such people as Carnegie, in the kindness and generosity of their great, big, warm hearts, build libraries from which most books which contain any valuable information are excluded. Such are some of the blessings (?) of riches. Such is charity.

Judging from the ways of the world, the popular definition of charity must be somewhat as follows: Charity is robbing every poor man that you can, of every cent that you can, and building churches, asylums, and libraries with the proceeds; charity is giving away what you don't want, and can't possibly make use of yourself, and advertising your generosity to the world; Christian charity is grudgingly giving a poor man ten cents, and then asking God to credit you with $10 in the sweet by and bye.

After finding so much fault with rich men and riches, one might properly be expected to offer some kind of remedy. My remedy is a graduated tax on all property, incomes and inheritances. This appears to me to be the only practicable way to break the back of the millionaire and monopolist. I certainly think they can be crushed in this manner. When it is no longer profitable or possible for men to accumulate, retain, or inherit vast fortunes, then all will have to begin to do something sensible and useful, and to bring up their children to do likewise. Then those seeking glory, fame, or respectability will find it necessary to apply themselves to science, art, invention, philosophy, or in some other realm of useful effort, and character and talent—not dollars and cents—will become the true measure of social position. We can hope to obtain a graduated tax through the initiative and referendum only, but they are certainly coming.

Their opponents may sneer at them and laugh at them, but they cannot long ignore them. All honor to the noble Infidels who brought these measures before the American people!

After all, the principal cause of all the misery in the world is ignorance, and the principal cause of this ignorance is the fear of hell and Mrs. Grundy. Let us, then, never lose an opportunity to stab the church under the fifth rib, until every drop of blood has left her lifeless body. Then two roses will blossom where one now does, and prosperity and progress will be the heritage of the race forever.

DOUGLAS TAYLOR.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Ten Thousand Leagues Below.

Deeper, far deeper down
Than the eye can penetrate,
Or, that the power of man
Can seek to investigate,
Lie tiny, living beings,
Disporting in mossy bowers,
Absorbing and secreting
The sweets of tiny flowers.
Amid these seaweed's humid shade
The tiny beings glow;
Star fish and sea-anemone,
In rich profusion grow.
The incandescent lights upon
The deep phosphorescent river
Glisten o'er the silent waves,
Where the darkening shadows quiver.
A populous solitude under the waves,
The glistening topaz rare;
The emerald flashing from mossy stones,
The gleaming white bones there,
The ghastly grinning skulls beneath
The pure, clear waters flow;
'Tis the fairy land of science,
Ten thousand leagues below.

IDA BALLOU.

Chats With Correspondents.

IDA BALLOU.—Very glad to hear from you, and your essays will be always welcome. Excuse us for not writing to you personally. Our time is all taken, and consequently there are few opportunities for correspondence.

MRS. S. W. SMITH.—Your communication is not especially adapted for the Children's Corner, but to oblige you we print it. How many brothers and sisters children may have, how many pets, cats, or kittens they own, may be of little consequence to you, but is of great interest to them. The children, by their little letters, are learning to write, to spell, and to compose properly, which is of value, you will admit. As they grow older, their minds expand, their ideas broaden, and we trust they will give but little attention to the myths and fables of old, except to demolish them by the logic of common sense.

KATIE KEHM SMITH.—We did not receive your letter in time to comply with your request. We know you are doing splendid work, and our best wishes go with the Oregon State Secular Union.

JOHN RUDLING.—Thanks for your compliments. The lecture is to be printed in pamphlet, and you can order of The Truth Seeker Company.

EDWARD DOBSON.—Thanks for all you send. Your reasoning is good and valuable, and your kindness greatly appreciated.

MAGAZINES.—New Occasions is the title of a magazine of social and industrial progress, edited by B. F. Underwood and published by Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago. Among the contributors are several well-known names, and the reading matter is sound and solid. Its motto is:

"New occasions teach new duties, Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still and onward, who would keep abreast of Truth."

Progress is the stirring name of a monthly magazine edited and published by our friend, Emanuel dos Santos, at Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, B. W. I. It is devoted to the dissemination of Freethought principles, and bears the motto of that distinguished friend of freedom, Thomas Paine: "The world is my country, to do good my religion." Our friend is to be congratulated upon the handsome appearance of this new candidate for public favor. It is one more protest against bigotry and superstition, and we wish it long life and great prosperity.

Correspondence.

NORTH HURON, N. Y., Oct. 24, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As the Children's Corner seems to be growing smaller, I have concluded to write you a few lines again. I am going to school now, and am studying arithmetic, spelling, geography, history, physiology, and grammar. My teacher's name is Hattie Seager. I like her very well. I am eleven years old; will be twelve the 22d of December. We had a very pleasant summer with the exception of a few thunder showers, and two storms of wind; one about the 1st of September, and one later. I suppose you have been to the World's Fair; I would like to have gone myself, if it had been so that I could, but as it was not convenient, I had to content myself by visiting the Wayne county fair, where I stayed two days, and was sick all the time I was there. Since I wrote you last we have lost the oldest Freethinker in the town, Mr. J. M. Cosad. He died quite suddenly.

Well, I guess I will have to close, and busy myself with something else.

From your true friend,
BERTHA E. WEED.

HOOPESTON, ILL., Oct. 22, 1893.

MY DEAR AUNT SUSIE: On this beautiful autumnal Sunday afternoon, I have decided to improve my time by complying with your request, and writing to you and the Corner friends.

I am so very glad I had the opportunity of meeting you and your sister in person. (A pleasure I scarcely dared hope for a short time ago.) I always thought I loved you, Aunt Susie, but now I am positively sure I do, and I wish all the Corner friends could meet their dear friend. I wish I could have remained in the city for a longer time, and got better acquainted with you. Of course I should have liked to have gotten better acquainted with all the Liberals, but you seem to be nearer to me than any other of them.

I think our Congress was just grand! I hope we may have many more just like it.

I am quite busy now preparing to graduate from the high school in May next. I study geometry, higher algebra, ancient history, rhetoric, and Caesar (Latin). I like my studies very well. Ancient History shows us that the Christian were the least progressive of all nations, and still our principal, who is a Methodist, refuses to see it. But he does not read the Bible to us any more, for last winter he appointed a young man to read a chapter and he refused, saying he did not come to school to read the Bible, but to study.

One of my classmates called on me the other evening, and amazed me by saying, "I hate religion and the church." I could not help saying, "Good!" Then we had quite a talk, and I discovered she has always been an unbeliever, but will not say so to anyone but me. All her friends and associates are church members. So are all my friends, but when asked, I do not hesitate to let them know my "(anti)-religious" belief.

In the report of the Congress, it was given that Ollie and I were from Chicago. We are from Hoopston. We want them to give our little orthodox town credit for one Freethinking family which is not afraid or ashamed to say so. We have nine denominations represented here, and we have no show at all, but we do the best we can, anyway.

Our town has a population of about twenty-six hundred people. We have electric lights, city water-works, a good college (Greer); two public schools, a nice greenhouse, and the two largest corn-canning factories in the world.

We have quite a little city, but the Lord saw fit to send no "rain upon the just and the unjust" this summer, and so nearly destroyed the vegetation in this part of the country.

Well, my letter is growing lengthy, so I will close. But first I wish to say that we all send our best love to you and your dear sister, and hope that sometime we may all meet again.

Wishing you all manner of happiness and prosperity, I remain,

Your loving niece, IDA L. JOHNSTON.

It was a great satisfaction to meet so many charming friends at the Congress, and especially do we remember the bright faces of our dear, adopted nieces, Ollie and Ida, and their parents. Yes, it was a grand gathering, which, let us hope, may sometime be repeated.—ED. C. C.

ADDISON, VT., Oct. 6, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I see you are editor of the Children's Corner of THE TRUTH SEEKER—this part being assigned to woman because she possesses more patience in giving attention and opportunity for young reasoners to give their testimony to the world denouncing old, long-taught ideas of God and Christianity. Truly a noble calling on your part and the part of the children. Now, may I be permitted to offer a few suggestions for consideration by young and old, thus giving a helping hand, which may not prove amiss—for there is a saying that children and fools are apt to speak the truth? Should you think my ideas a fool's reasoning, can you not even then spare a small corner to present a new theory for reasoning which I have carefully dug out through much study on cause and effect? There may be persons in the world who have arrived at like conclusions who wish to know that others have thought out similar theories. Men gain a hearing by their ready wit and eloquence, but women must gain a hearing by the most careful reasoning and regard for truth. How glad I would have been could I have been present at the truth seeker's congress to present my new ideas for further consideration; but circumstances forbade, so in agony of mind I exclaimed, "Is there not a friend who will take the trouble to bear the message for me?" All churches refuse me a hearing; all world's people who have been brought up under church teaching refuse me a hearing, and now, if the Freethinkers refuse me a hearing, my hard-earned pennyworth of reasoning ceaseth to be of any value in the world.

My object in speaking at this time is to try and show how the churches, the world, and truth seekers have come to be at such variance with each other. Truth seekers believe and say that all who allow themselves or their minds to be subject to church teachings are blind fools; while all those of church ideas believe and claim that Freethinkers are the devil's own, denying God and the Bible. Now, with such feelings toward each other and so much time being spent in telling the things about each other it leaves very little time to examine facts and principles carefully that we may find the truth in the warring systems and reach a common ground of good-will and harmony for the human family. Neither party is yet able to do the other, or itself, much real good. There is a saying that, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." Another saying is, "They who show no mercy shall receive no mercy."

The truth seeking party to do a truly good work must start right by finding out why the churches teach such false doctrines, deceiving and being deceived. Is it not right here? The churches take the Bible to be an exact history of ancient individuals and things; while, on the contrary, it is the exact history of all nations' and all peoples' spiritual beliefs, using the names of individuals and things as figures of speech to represent the ruling minds in the human family. Thus the Bible may not be a book of fables and lies, as truth seekers suppose; but it is those who read and teach it as a history of literal events who make the fables and lies, by giving it an entirely false rendering.

The clergy profess to be learned men of God, yet jump at conclusions without investigating in order to learn whether their conclusions are true or false, saying that all must take the Bible to mean just as it reads, otherwise it would be "caviling!" For instance, they begin at Genesis, and read that God made the world and all things thereto belonging in six days; then jump at the conclusion that the word God means a magic man, having a form and voice like men, and doing very much as the geni of children's fairy tales are represented to do, making a man out of literal dust, then blowing air from his own lungs into the mud man. Thus, say they, he became a living man in the likeness of God. Time spent by the clergy for long ages in heedlessly rehearsing these sayings has kept them from learning how to read the scripture in a shorthand way so as to describe elements of mind, by giving figurative illustrations, intended to show the belief and actions of a whole party or sect as if it were said and done by one person. Thus the word God implies good growing spirit of influence. The word man or dust implies a newly-made up element of ruling mind coming out from nature's mind, of the earth earthy.

Now, to prove that the Adam, who was called the first man, was not an individual person, as the clergy teach, we must examine things carefully in this age to comprehend how ruling elements of mind receive form and voice extending over the earth.

United teachings have become as great and mighty trees in denominations; grounds of faith, said by the churches to be the only truly cultivated grounds giving peace and plenty, where the voice of God is heard walking around teachings called trees, in the present Eden, happiness.

The reasoning voice of teaching in the New Testament being more than all the other twelve a ruling voice, was surnamed Paul, and taught reasoners in that age to compare spiritual things. Then why not do so in this age so as to get at the true knowledge of the nature and conditions of ruling elements of mind in past ages?

So the serpent and disciplin, which is called woman, of the churches have in the present Eden or grounds of faith nearly the make-up and nature which is represented in Genesis. One writer for THE TRUTH SEEKER said he was very sorry the foolish old Lord ever made the devil, thus proving that he has never studied into the nature of things, for it is much easier to jump at conclusions and make fun of others than delve for a solution of the story.

Any man, woman, or child in this age, who will stop to reason one hour, will admit that there are many spirits of influence—a test proves which is good or bad—not such spirits as churches pretend are flying up in the air invisible to natural eyes. Churches say the old archangel, devil, is going about like a roaring lion, yet is invisible. Truth seekers may see and comprehend this old serpent to be the enemy of truth; this selfish, unreasoning influence, which has long been the light of men, is now being cast into fiery torment because its days are few.

Churches and clergy will wrangle, seethe, and foam out their burning hate toward all who dare expose the old idolized spirit of influence, firm in the belief that the fallen angel light is outside of their greatly beloved Eden grounds of faith. Now, in plain words, what is this deceiving spirit of influence that has so long roared with a loud voice to all to come and eat of the great teaching in the midst of the churches' Eden grounds and be saved, learning there all truth?

This roaring, deceiving spirit of influence, called devil, is a false rendering of scripture, the light of the clergy and the churches who are fully determined that all the saved shall read and believe that the words of the Bible are to be taken in a literal instead of a spiritual sense. Most people who have lived sixty years have seen and heard of many who have become raving lunatics by taking scripture in a literal sense, which has led to killing their own offspring and other outrageous and shameful deeds. Is the Bible a mess of unmeaning, jumbled up words? or is it heedless mankind who read and teach it in a way to make so much trouble?

Most of the truth seekers are clamoring loudly to have the old mischief-making book thrown away, saying it is only a mess of fables and lies, jumping at the conclusion that nature is God, making all things in its own time and order. Such ones have never reasoned carefully on the matter, for nature is ever subject to good or bad influences, which would make it a chance, changeable god, subject to all manner of influences. Now let truth seekers take the story of Christ, the second man-Adam, in a spiritual sense, contrary to the Jewish way which the churches follow; then the word Christ means the true light and voice of reasoning influence born into the world among unreasoning ones having the nature of stilled beasts, which eat only what others and nature provides for them; thus this figurative language gives a perfect illustration of the ushering in of new light.

A new and true element of mind called true man to become the true light of reasoning among all men. The mother of the new reasoning element was, and now is, a young, new disciplin, which could not then nor now be governed by the church's old mother disciplin. Thus all Christendom of old mother disciplin in every age, when an entire new element of mind appears, seeks to kill it, shut it up, setting a seal upon truth or untruth; when it gets life again it is parted from sight by clouds in all minds made by false sets of reasoning. I beg of every truth-seeking man or woman to think carefully that you may know whether it is the shape of your animal body that constitutes true man or woman, or a true element of reasoning mind that must rule our animal natures, being rightly named spiritual man. Truth seekers are not half alive to the work begun; spending time laughing and jeering at churches instead of reasoning.

For truth's sake, please do not consign this production to the waste basket. Is it not of more consequence to the world than how many brothers and sisters children have, and how many kittens and their names? I am a very great lover of children, but I wish them to learn to write and talk something useful. Soon as I can find time I will talk directly with them through THE TRUTH SEEKER. I am sorry to give you so much trouble to correct mistakes in my writing, but I positively cannot do better with every care heaped upon me calling for my attention and labor.

MRS. S. W. SMITH.

SURVEYORS, ATTENTION!

A rare chance is offered for a surveyor to get a

TRANSIT CHEAP.

We have one for sale, in good order, with Tripod, which cost $160. We will sell it for half-price—$80. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AGENTS MAKE 100 PER CENT PROFIT
and more, get sample free, best-known goods in all America. Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Safety Razors, Cut-throats, Insoles, Plasters, and all our other popular goods. (Either sex.)
Address Dr. E. A. SCOTT,
842 Broadway, N. Y. City.

$75.00 to $250.00 can be made MONTHLY working for B. F. JOHNSON & CO., Richmond, Va.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelsa, A.M.

12mo. cloth. $1.00.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.	Elimination of Waste Substances,
The Earth.	In General.
The Chemical Aspect.	By the Lungs.
The Sun.	By the Skin.
Genesis—The Creation.	By the Kidneys.
Genesis—The Garden of Eden.	Digestion and Nutrition.
The Deluge.	The Elementary Substances.
The Scriptural God—The Creation.	Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.
The Creation of God—Abraham.	The Soul—What Is It?
Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.	The Mind.
Samuel the Kingmaker.	Sin and Salvation.
God Save the King.	The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.
Jehovah Takes a Rest.	Rational Review.
The End of National Life.	Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.
The Christian Era.	The Planetary Gods.
Organic Life—Vegetable.	Every Man His Own God.
Organic Life—Animal.	Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.
	(Morals; Whence They Spring.
	The Non Credo.
	Rules for Human Conduct.
	ILLUSTRATIONS.
	Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.
	Map of Theological Retrogression.
	Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Food and Food-Substances.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth; Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone; Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification: The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards? The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested? Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Force and Matter;

OR,
Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS: The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology), Man, Brain and Mind, Thought, Consciousness, Seat of the Soul, Innate Ideas, The Idea of God, Personal Continuance, Vital Force, The Soul of Brutes, Free Will, Morality, Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR
Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral. We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART BOSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible. Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing." In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right. Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE and OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story." In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Liars' Confessions of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Book Notes.

"Pleasure and Progress," by Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B., is the title of a volume in which the author attempts to prove that the pursuit of pleasure is indispensable to the highest intellectual, moral, and social development of mankind. While his arguments are not always conclusively, there is ample food for thought and reflection in much that he places before his readers. Issued in The Truth Seeker Library series, by The Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place, New York.—Banner of Light.

"Pen Pictures of the World's Fair," by Samuel P. Putnam, with map and illustrations of the buildings. Price, 25 cents. Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place, New York. It is too late to recommend this pamphlet as a guide for World's Fair visitors, though we found it useful in directing us to many interesting exhibits that might otherwise have been missed, but for those who were not able to "take in" that great affair, Putnam's "Pen Pictures" are even more useful than to the visitor, for it gives them a very instructive account of the world's progress as there exhibited. The actual trip most persons found very tiresome, but there is no tired feeling possible—exhilaration, rather—in reading about it in Putnam's breezy style.—Foot's Health Monthly.

"Woman, Church and State; A Historical account of the Status of Woman through the Christian Ages; with reminiscences of the Matriarchate." By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Crown 8vo, 556 pages, cloth, $2; half leather, $3. Mrs. Gage is widely and favorably known as a writer and platform speaker upon slavery and woman suffrage, and had a hand in preparing the great "History of Woman Suffrage" with Mrs. Stanton and Miss Anthony. Now she has completed a historical work of her own, which is no doubt "the effort of her life," and one of which she may be proud. It concerns a phase of "the woman question" which we do not attempt to discuss in the Health Monthly, not because it is unimportant, by any means, but because we cannot cover the whole field, and so prefer to devote our space, as far as woman is concerned, mainly to her relations to human regeneration. Those who want to know all about the status of woman, past and present, will find Mrs. Gage's book indispensable.—Foot's Health Monthly.

PLEASURE AND PROGRESS. By Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Here we have philosophy up to date, the advance word of the progressive thinker; not a dry, abstruse discourse, but a common sense essay in plain words upon the conduct of life, and all illustrated with such an abundance of anecdote and metaphor as add real entertainment to solid instruction. This is an important book, striking at superstition and unreasonable tradition, and upholding individual liberty in defiance of governmental law and social custom.

After reading this book one feels that the author will never be able to write another, for he has put all his life and knowledge into this one. Every page bristles with points; there is no padding or filling in, no mere literary embellishment; but clean-cut apothegms abound, and every line is dictated by hard-headed common sense.

The author states that the pursuit of pleasure is every man's aim. Food, comfort, and love are the chief sources of material pleasure; memory and imagination minister to ideal joy, and friendship and public opinion give social delight. How to secure these is the question which is treated. In answering it a rapid sketch is given of the development of society from the savage state, and the conclusion reached is that individual sovereignty is the condition precedent to progress and happiness. The author denounces all forms of church control and government regulation of private concerns or commercial intercourse. He is opposed to public schools, protective tariff, indissoluble marriage, and devotes a section to what must be called a diatribe against Socialism. Most Socialists will agree with his denunciations, and will tell him that he has put the wrong name on the evils he rails against, and they will turn the tables on him when they find at the end of the book that his grand panacea for economic ills is the application of State Socialism to distribution.

He would have the government establish large warehouses and be the wholesale distributor, paying out and receiving the money or receipts for the goods. This proposal, coming after a book full of protest against governmental action beyond a limited sphere, is rather startling. The author may have to write another book after all to explain the logic of his remedy.

But apart from this the book is a magnificent plea for individual liberty, and it is seldom that such serious questions are treated in so entertaining a manner and decided so fully in accord with the most advanced conclusions of rational thought. The main teaching of the book is found in these sentences: "Sane men always endeavor to pursue the course that is in their judgment most consonant to their happiness." "Society has no pretext for interfering in conduct that affects only its author." "Laws that protect and promote individual sovereignty alone deserve and receive respect from the best minds of the world." ROBT. C. ADAMS.

"Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" By John E. Remsburg. New York: Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place.

Mr. Remsburg has done his task well. The question whether Lincoln was a Christian is an old one, and its chronic revival is one of the proofs of the power of a church, a clergy, a creed, to keep a delusion alive. The unbelief of Lincoln was perfectly well known to thousands of well-informed Americans of his own day. The assertion of his essential orthodoxy, resting largely on the trumped-up testimony cited by Dr. Holland (the pietist who, while editor of Scribner's Magazine, refused to insert any contribution from Walt Whitman), in his "Life of Lincoln," was conclusively overthrown for all judicial readers by the counter-testimony cited in "Lamon's Life." No case of the kind was ever more decisively settled as regards the weight and balance of evidence. But in a case of this kind there are two great forces of delusion to be reckoned with: First, the general incapacity of religious people to form a sound opinion on a question of evidence; second, the self-interest of the religious bodies, operating through their professional mouthpieces, the clergy.

On the first head, we are making no mere partisan assertion. The fact that religious people in the mass are less well qualified to judge of evidence than unbelievers in the mass, is just as true as that Christians in the mass are better educated than Mohammedans. The "fidel" mind generally sets out with so strong a predisposition to believe what it would like to believe, that it can rarely attain the self-denial of abandoning even the disproved. A man may indeed remain nominally orthodox while exercising critical judgment on points where the orthodox mind is usually uncritical. Thus Dean Milman was able to see the utter unlikelihood of, as well as the lack of valid evidence for, the story of the dying Julian crying, "Galilee, thou hast conquered," where the average curate or archdeacon accepts the legend without hesitation; and Newman, so systematically credulous in so many cases, seems to have disbelieved in this. But these were exceptional religionists; the ordinary Christian believes every story he hears about infidel deathbeds and the piety of eminent statesmen, and Holland's story in proof of Lincoln's religiosity, though on the face of it unsound for any good judge of human nature, passes current easily with the church-going multitude. As for the motive to its circulation, we must not assume that all those who pass it on in the knowledge that it is disputed are unscrupulous. There is a kind of amiable sentiment in many unintellectual believers which makes them quite honestly delight in assuring themselves that a given unbeliever was "practically a good Christian." Many clergies and laymen now speak in this way of Mr. Bradlaugh, in some cases, it may be, the same people who once vituperated him. The uncritical Christian cannot realize that his creed-name is not in itself complimentary. In this way many Americans keep up the false idea about Lincoln when they merely mean to say that he behaved as they think a good Christian should behave. But there is no forgetting the further fact that hundreds of Christian partisans go on vending the worthless evidence adduced by Dr. Holland in the same spirit in which he adduced it—a spirit which is rightly to be described as the negation of intellectual rectitude.

A book like Mr. Remsburg's, however, must needs break down the delusion to a very great extent. He goes about the question in an orderly and straightforward way, citing all the evidence and comparing and analyzing it like a judge summing-up. It is a book that must convince ninety-nine fairly reasonable men out of every hundred, whatever their religious beliefs, if only they will read it through. Now and then, perhaps, he cites a story away from the main point, which does not sound quite credible or accurate, as that in which certain pietists are described (p. 246) as asking Lincoln to withdraw a clergyman's official appointment because he taught that even rebels might be "saved." It is hard to believe that even bigots would openly advance such a plea. But Mr. Remsburg's handling of the main problem is always satisfying. He deals with all the dozens of reckless assertions as to Lincoln's having latterly become a believer—assertions which for the most part promptly destroy each other—and leaves it perfectly clear that not only was Lincoln never an adherent of a Christian church (this is admitted all round), but he never accepted the Christian creed further than to hold by some form of Deism. And even his Deism seems to have been substantially very much of the kind seen in those rationalists who say "God bless you" because the phrase has a certain classic flavor of friendly sentiment about it. Practically, he was an Atheist; and some who knew him describe him as coming at times close to the theoretical position. The mass of the stories to the contrary—all of them going to make out that Lincoln was fool enough to keep secret a conversion which it would have been very advantageous to him to make publicly known—leave a strong impression of the abundance alike of imbecility and untruthfulness among believing Christians.

One effect of Mr. Remsburg's book will probably be to set some of the more astute champions of orthodoxy protesting that it matters nothing to the truth of Christianity whether Lincoln was a believer or not. Nor does it any more than the orthodoxy of Newman or Gladstone. But the vogue of Christianity depends immeasurably less on the arguments for its truth than on the amount of popular feeling to which it can appeal, and for the champions of popular Christianity it is practically a very serious matter that a great and adored democratic statesman, who contrived to settle one of the most desperate political difficulties of modern times, did his work on a basis of rationalism, and rejected the popular creed as absurd. His orthodoxy would only slightly and indirectly affect rationalism, since rationalists mostly become so on grounds of conviction and not of authority or example; but his rationalism is a serious blow to the credit of orthodoxy, which retains so much of its vogue by mere appeals to authority and example. Hence the persistent attempt to bolster up an utterly false case for Lincoln's Christianity.

This may be said without wholly indorsing the estimate put upon Lincoln by Mr. Remsburg, who finally pronounces him "the gentlest, purest, noblest character in human history." This outgoes even the poetic panegyric of Walt Whitman, and, said in prose, it can still less pass with critical people as a judicial verdict. But no good judge of character who reads Lincoln's life can miss recognizing in him a man of extraordinary strength of character, admirable soundness of practical judgment, and rare administrative power, combined with qualities of chivalry and goodness which amply suffice to account for the affectionate superlatives of his countrymen.—London National Reformer.

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in the Interest of and Owned by the Whole People.

By HON. THOMAS E. HILL.

of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms," "The Hill Banking System," and other works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted.

This book is "just in time" is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFERENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the Initiative and Referendum,

By J. W. SULLIVAN.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Free Thought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing. Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Not for Parsons.

MISS HICKS: How did you like going to church? DICK HICKS: Awfully funny! MISS HICKS: What was "awfully funny"? DICK HICKS: The felly what played the organ, an' all the old monkeys going around after pennies.—Puck.

MISS LAURA: O auntie! You remember Mr. Meeker, who went from here as a missionary? I have just heard that those awful cannibals ate him. Aunt Sophrina: La, me! I do hope they cooked him with turnips. The poor, dear man was so fond of turnips.—Vit-Bits.

CLERGYMAN: Is it true, Miss Ruth, that you said my last Sunday's sermon bored you? MISS RUTH (with a little gasp): Oh, my, no! Goodness, gracious, no! I said that it—er—penetrated my very soul. Isn't it strange how people will misconstrue things?—Truth.

THE BROWNS have a daughter who has been brought up with a due respect for the clergy. The other night the minister was coming to tea. She was carefully instructed as to her behavior; she was to say nothing unless addressed; she was to speak with the utmost politeness when spoken to; if it became absolutely necessary for her to ask a question, she must do it in the most respectful manner. All these injunctions she carefully obeyed until the festive meal was nearly over. Then she fixed her solemn eyes on the guest and said: "Dr. Blank, for Christ's sake, please pass me the butter."—N. Y. World.

A YOUNG girl in Miskolez, Hungary, pretended to see the holy virgin daily, and to converse with her. Her mother encouraged the pious, who brought presents, and when the priests interfered the excited crowd threatened to ill-treat them. Some days ago the would-be saint lay in a coffin. Her mother told everybody that the virgin had told her to die and she would resuscitate her on the third day. There was terrible excitement in the place, and thousands prepared to wait the prescribed three days in prayer and fasting. The local authorities came with a doctor to put a stop to the scandalous affair. In the presence of the crowd the doctor said: "It is very serious that she died so suddenly. We must have a post-mortem examination." Immediately the young saint sat up in her coffin, crying: "Oh, don't cut me up! I can be resuscitated immediately."—Argonaut.

A CERTAIN minister's sermons were a patchwork from numerous authors to whom he gave no credit. On one occasion there was a half-drunken wag in the audience who had read pretty much everything, and he announced the authors as the minister went on. The clergyman gave an extract, without any credit to the author, and the man in the audience cried out: "That's Jeremy Taylor." The speaker went on and gave an extract from another author, without credit for it, and the man in the audience said: "That's John Wesley." The minister gave an extract from another author, without credit for it, and the man in the audience said: "That's George Whitfield." When the minister completely lost his patience and excitedly cried out, "Shut up, you old fool!", the man in the audience replied: "That is your own."—Worthington's Magazine.

"Speaking of religion," said a prominent merchant who came out of a big church yesterday, "my folks have a sublime faith in the efficacy of prayer. One night my little girl, who is about a dozen years old, reminded me that she needed a pair of new shoes to complete her Sunday costume. I was interested in my newspaper, and made some badgering remarks about the duty of children to wear brogans at $1 a pair, and gave her a dollar. She went away without a word, a fact that surprised me, because I expected her to protest. But presently she came back and said: 'Papa, I'll match you for another dollar—heads I win, tails you lose.' The proposition nearly knocked me off my chair. I looked across the room at her mother, a devout woman, from whom I expected an emphatic lecture. She, however, was paying no attention, and so I said: 'Don't you know it's wrong to gamble? Where on earth did you hear of matching dollars?' 'Oh, I found out,' was her evasive answer. 'Will you match me?' Well, you know me. I don't take any bluffs like that, so I out with a silver dollar and laid it on my knee. The child was about to follow suit, when she hesitated, drew back, and then went to her mother and said, with much solemnity: 'Mamma, pray for me. I must have another dollar.' Her mother only smiled in a deprecatory way. Then she came back and said: 'Now, papa, heads I win, tails you lose.' And dodburn it all, I did lose, sure enough, and the child looked me in the face and said: 'Now, papa, you see what praying will do.'—St. Louis Republic.

Gems of Thought.

THERE are reformers who never think it worth while to work at their trade themselves.—Ram's Horn.

FORCE has never secured true followers of the church, and law never made morals. True reforms have come from a power in the reform itself that secured conviction in its justice and necessity, of which this Sunday closing movement seems entirely lacking. In the building of one good, care should be taken that others are not torn down.—Summerville News.

If you would wait to speak the truth until you can replace the old decaying formula by a completely elaborated system, you must wait forever; for the system can never be elaborated until its leading principles have been boldly enunciated. Reconstruct, it is said, before you destroy. But you must destroy in order to reconstruct. The old husk of dead faith is pushed off by the growth of living beliefs below.—Leslie Stephen.

BUT were the middle ages less cruel than Pawnees, Hebrews, Romans, or Assyrians? Obviously the mediæval tortures inflicted on political prisoners, witches, and heretics were as nefarious as any known to ancient or savage conquerors. Nothing is changed but the victims. Then you find Covenanters torturing witches, Episcopalians in England or Scotland torturing Jesuits, wizards, or Catholics at large. You find Covenanters burning naughty little boys alive; you find William and Mary just as ready with the "boot" as James II. was. Then the burning of witches slowly dies out as the educated class becomes skeptical.—Andrew Lang.

BUT the supposed divine origin of plants and animals is not the only theological error that evolution has exposed. It has destroyed other fictions that were for centuries promulgated by the church. In our youth we were taught by pious persons, not only that man was specially created, but that he appeared at first in a state of perfection. The consensus of opinion which now obtains among scientists is expressed by Mr. Herbert Spencer thus—That life, under all its forms, has arisen by an unbroken evolution, and through natural causes alone. Investigations have also shown that in early stages of humanity man was less perfect than he is to-day, and that his history has been one of progression, not retrogression.—Charles Watts.

OF course it will be readily seen that to exempt any class of property from taxation, to that extent adds to the taxes of the balance of the property. Why should the man who does not go to any church be made to pay heavier taxes because of the existence of the churches? It will not do to say that the churches make possible the peaceful government of the community, and thus repay the non-churchman for his tax. That is not a satisfactory nor a valid argument, for the law abiding citizen is not native to any particular church, nor to church circles. He is found as frequently in proportion to population outside as inside the churches. It is very evident that he is taxed not for a general purpose but for a special purpose, and that, too, in the interests of a sect whose tenets he may not hold.—Minneapolis Progressive Age.

IT is now abundantly clear that the Christian religion was one among a number of competing religions of the East, which became popular among the slaves and lower classes of the Mediterranean world towards the decline of the Roman empire; and Christianity was the winner in the race for the mastery of the world, just because it embraced and synthesized in itself so many separate elements of many other popular creeds and superstitions. But in displacing the civilized religions of Greece and Rome, it brought with it into Europe various ideas properly belonging to a lower and Asiatic stage of culture. It brought with it the ugly practice of burial, in place of the sane and wholesome practice of cremation. It brought with it the vulgar Jewish conception of resurrection, in place of the elevated though erroneous Platonic idea of immortality. It brought with it the hateful oriental notions of asceticism and repression, in place of the graceful and artistic Greek ideals of happiness, beauty, and equal development. By means of these false notions it has retarded the progress of the world for at least half a dozen centuries; and it is still doing its best to retard the progress of the world in future. But the forces which tend towards civilization are growing at last too strong for it, and reason and common-sense are beginning to overthrow the domination of the ascetic oriental creed of unwholesome restraint and unnatural repression.—Grant Allen.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged

As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by

Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Women; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbatic Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life,

delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason," are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath-Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of The World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
Single numbers sold at prices quoted.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK Price, 15cts.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and viceroyants of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER.

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MAGIC LANTERNS

And STEREOPTICONS, all prices. Views illustrating every subject for PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS, etc.
A profitable business for a man with a small capital. Also, Lanterns for Home Amusement. 250 page Catalogue free.
McALLISTER, Mfg. Opticians, 49 Nassau St., N.Y.
13 eow39

CHOLERA, DIPHTHERIA, Dysentery
Piles, Quinsy, Catarrh. The Antidote for $1.
Agents wanted. Dr. G. H. MILLER, 2,333 Hickory street, St. Louis, Mo., former address 1,441 South Twelfth street, Denver, Col. 20t23

150 AMERICAN WATCH

$1.50 will now buy a reliable AMERICAN WATCH in a strong GOLD PLATED Dust Proof Case. Will not vary a minute in 80 days. Is as durable as any watch made. FULLY GUARANTEED.

Has AMERICAN patent lever MOVEMENT, Patent Escapement and Regulator, Lantern Pinion, 240 beats to minute; No key required to wind and set; weight 4 oz.; exactly like our Patent for $1.50, $3 for $4.00, 12 for $16.00, by express. Mention paper and we will include handsome gold plated CHAIN & CHARM. AGENTS & Storekeepers send for TERMS. Catalogue of 1000 new articles FREE.

ROBERT H. INGERSOLL & BRO.,
65 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK CITY.

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position. Beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels, $15. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.5, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more Etched (teas only):

"The Time to be Happy is Now," 50 cents extra.
The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.
Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.
OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.
To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.
Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.
and say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

News of the Week.

PAPER is being made of sunflower stalks at Salina, Kan.

THE extra session of Congress came to an end November 3d.

IN Bosier parish, La., negroes were lynched for hog-thieving.

EARTHQUAKE shocks were felt at Pembroke, Wales, November 2d.

THE Harvard observatory in Peru has discovered a new star in Norma.

MORE than $200,000,000 worth of coal was mined in the United States last year.

THE supreme court of Michigan has decided that any act granting the franchise to woman is unconstitutional.

THE westward steamer record is again broken. The Lucania made her last trip in five days, twelve hours, and forty-seven minutes.

AN electric car plunged through an open draw in the bridge across the Willamette river at Portland, Ore., on November 1st, and thirteen persons were drowned.

GAIL HAMILTON is getting out a pamphlet history of the case of Mrs. Maybrick, of England, in prison under a life sentence for alleged poisoning of her husband.

THE British-Matabele war in South Africa continues. The natives fight bravely for their homes, but Maxim guns are more deadly than spears and primitiv fire-arms.

MACEDONIAN rebel Arnauts attacked and captured Prisend, a town of forty thousand inhabitants in Albania, European Turkey. The Turkish garrison was forced to retreat into the citadel.

THE Austrian cabinet crisis will probably result in putting in power Prince Windischgratz in place of Count Taaffe. The difficulties in Bohemia and the suffrage question are the main issues.

THE Chinese exclusion law was amended by Congress by extending the time for registration six months. Accordingly Attorney-General Olney has ordered the release of all Chinese held for failure to register.

VIENNA Socialists attacked a meeting of German Liberals and came into conflict with the police. A fierce encounter followed, and many men were wounded. The mob reassembled several times and was as often dispersed.

THE Brazilian government has purchased several vessels of American owners and is making them over into war ships with all possible dispatch. It is said that the insurgent Admiral Mello is also buying arms, munitions, and ships in New York.

THE New York Times, Post, World, and Herald, and the Brooklyn Eagle, all Democratic, opposed the election of Judge Isaac H. Maynard, nominated by the Democratic party for judge of the court of appeals. Many other Democratic papers in the state also bolted the nomination.

THE House concurred in the Senate amendment to the silver repeal bill by a vote of 193 to 94. The vote shows that 124 Democrats, 68 Republicans, and 1 Populist voted to concur, and 70 Democrats, 15 Republicans, and 9 Populists against concurrence. President Cleveland at once signed the bill.

The elections of November 7th were generally favorable to the Republicans. They elect their ticket in New York state by a plurality of perhaps 20,000, with the exception of Bartlett, for judge of Court of Appeals, who beats Maynard, Democrat, by 75,000 or more. Legislature and constitutional convention close. Republicans and independents in Brooklyn beat McLaughlin Democrats by heavy majorities. In Erie county (Buffalo) the Sheehan Democrats defeated by 5,000, at least; a complete revolution. Massachusetts, Greenhalge, Rep., over Russell, Dem., by 20,000 to 25,000 plurality. Ohio, McKinley re-elected by plurality of 40,000 or so over Neal, Dem. Pennsylvania, generally Republican gains. Iowa, Republican gains indicate defeat of Boies by large plurality. Virginia, strongly Democratic on state ticket, with legislature which will elect two United States senators. Colorado, returns meager at time of going to press; light vote. Probable victory for woman suffragists. South Dakota, very small vote. Republican judges probably elected. Maryland, Dem., by 18,000 majority. Kansas, county elections only. Republican gains over Populists. Nebraska, vote close, between Harrison, Rep., for Supreme court justice, and Holcomb, Pop. Chicago, reports indicate election of Gary, about whom the fight centered. New Jersey, overwhelming Rep. and anti-race track victories. Kentucky, Dem. by big majority.

THE LORD SAYS THEY SHALL EAT EACH OTHER.

Therefore the fathers shall eat the sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers: and I will execute judgements in thee, and the whole remnant of thee will I scatter into all the winds.—Ezek. v. 10.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By O. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Port. Pap., 50c.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure. By W. R. GREG.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents.

Address this office.

Books by Helen H. Gardener.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. Paper, 50 cents.

Pushed by Unseen Hands. SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth $1. Paper, 50 cents.

A Thoughtless Yes.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman - The Lady of the Club - Under Protest - For the Prosecution - A Rusty Link in the Chain - The Boiler House Mystery - The Time-Link of Our Ancestors - Florence Campbell's Fate - My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 98 Lafayette place, New York

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.
The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—(John Swinton's Paper).

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—(Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.
Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents. For all of the above address

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID RUME.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 46. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, November 18, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE FOOL-KILLER AFTER VICTIMS.

How To Preserve Health, Darwin and After Darwin.

By LOUIS BARKAN, M.D.

Fordyce Barker, M.D., Professor Bellevue Medical College says of it, writing to the author: "I regard your book as the most sound, sensible, and useful book on the topics which it discusses that I have met with. I wish it could be in the hands of every intelligent head of a family. I am particularly pleased with one feature of it, that it does not profess to teach dosing and drugging. I congratulate you on the wisdom and success of this effort."

Other noted physicians recommend it just as highly.

Price, cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette place, New York.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.
Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, - - - 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTB.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littré, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, Joan Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Voltaire, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.
Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.
Was Jesus Iusane? Price, 10 cents.
The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

Christianity a Fiction.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

THE
Astronomical and Astrological
Origin of all Religions.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents

The Most Magnificent Work Ever Published by the Freethought Press.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The object of this work is to present the Course of Freethought throughout the Civilized World for the last Four Centuries, from the time of Columbus and Bruno to the time of Ingersoll.

It will be a radical Historic Record of the Greatest Developments of the Human Race.

It will reveal Freethought as an Intellectual, Moral, Literary, Social, Industrial, and Political Movement.

It will show what Freethought is in itself and how manifold are its influences, and with what hope and promise we can hail its future triumph.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" will Embrace the most Illustrious Pages of Human History.

adorned with the brightest Genius, radiant with the most splendid Poetry, rich with the greatest Inventions and Discoveries and ennobled with Freedom's most shining advance.

Nothing Can be More Interesting,

more inspiring to the Pioneer Workers of to-day—to those who are still in the van for Human Rights and Progress. The struggle is not ended and what is already won must be carefully guarded. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty; and from the Past we must ever learn Great Lessons for the Future.

NO LIBERAL CAN AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT THIS BOOK.

It will contain the Greatest Thoughts and the Greatest Deeds of the Greatest Men

In One Harmonious and Magnificent Whole,

a vivid picture of man's sublimest evolution, with the added glory of

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION

from the chains and slavery of a barbaric creed and church.

THE FIRST PART of the book will deal with Freethought as a Universal Power, as a Spirit, a Method, a prevailing but unorganized Influence in every Department of Human Growth.

THE SECOND PART will deal with Freethought as an Organized Movement, especially in America and Europe; and this history is of equal importance with the first, and should be justly understood and the Pioneers of our work recognized.

The first part will embrace the following Grand Departments:

Philosophy.	Science.	Education and Ethics.	Literature.	Government and Politics.	Woman's Emancipation.
Bruno.	Copernicus.	Bacon.	Boccaccio.	Voltaire.	Madame Roland.
Spinoza.	Galileo.	Bacon.	Rabelais.	Rousseau.	Mary Wollstonecraft.
Descartes.	Kepler.	Comenius.	Cervantes.	French Salon.	Harriet Martineau.
Locke.	Da Vinci.	Pestalozzi.	Marlowe.	French Revolution.	Fraances Wright.
Hume.	Newton.	Froebel.	Shakspeare.	Thomas Paine.	Lucretia Mott.
Hobbs.	Humboldt.	Combe.	Gibbon.	Jefferson.	Ernestine L. Rose.
Kant.	Lyell.	Spencer.	Burns.	Mazzinni.	Lydia Maria Child.
Hamilton.	Darwin.	Owen.	Shelley.	Bentham.	Margaret Fuller.
Comte.	Tyndall.	Holyoake.	Byron.	Mill.	Elizabeth Cady Stanton.
Büchner.	Huxley.	Haeckel.	Pushkin.	Garibaldi.	Susan B. Anthony.
Feuerbach.		Girard.	Tcherny-chewsky.	Heinzen.	Matild Joslyn Gage.
		Lick.			Helen H. Gardener.
					Annie Besant.

THE PORTRAITS OF THESE ILLUSTRIOUS REFORMERS

in every domain of Human Thought and Progress will adorn the pages of this volume.

The Second Part of this volume will be devoted especially to organized Freethought and the Liberal Press in modern times. The Truth Seeker, Investigator, Ironclad Age, Secular Thought, Freethinkers' Magazine, Independent Pulpit, Lucifer, the Freethinker, Agnostic Journal, etc.

It will give a history of the

GREAT INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS

at Chicago, the Freethought Federation of America, the American Secular Union, the various state and local organizations, the Canadian Secular Union, the British Secular Union, and other Liberal associations throughout the world.

It will contain the portraits of those who, up to the present time, have been identified with Freethought work—editors, lecturers, officers of societies, and those who, as representative men, have won distinction in other fields of effort. There will be the portraits of

Horace Seaver,	George E. Macdonald,	Capt. R. C. Adams,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.,	Susan H. Wixon,
J. P. Mendum,	E. M. Macdonald,	John R. Charlesworth,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.,	Mrs. Charles Watts,
D. M. Bennett,	L. K. Washburn,	Samuel P. Putnam,	Prof. J. H. Cook,	Mrs. Robert C. Adams,
Parker Pillsbury,	Ernest Mendum,	John E. Remsburg,	E. H. Heywood,	Mrs. M. A. Freeman,
Elizur Wright,	Charles Watts,	Franklin Steiner,	Otto Wettstein,	Katie Kehm Smith,
T. C. Leland,	G. W. Foote,	J. D. Shaw,	Stephen Pearl Andrews,	Lucy N. Colman,
T. B. Wakeman,	Saladin,	E. A. Stevens,	James Parton,	Lillian Leland,
Judge C. B. Waite.	J. R. Monroe,	H. L. Green,	Abner Kneeland,	Amy Post.

and other men and women who have contributed to the advancement of Freethought and whose names should be remembered throughout the Liberal ranks. There will also be about

ONE HUNDRED BIOGRAPHIES,

and in these will be given a picture of Freethought progress which will be most interesting and valuable, for it is in individuals that we find the best interpretations of the age.

The Price of This Superb Book is $5.00,

and not for the same amount of money can there be found such an array of facts, such a survey of history, and such a galaxy of Freethought.

Mr. Putnam is now devoting his whole time to this work and it will be published at the earliest possible moment.

The name of every Subscriber who sends five dollars before the work is on the press will be enrolled in this book. DON'T FAIL TO SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE.

This book will contain

Over Six Hundred Pages of Printed Matter and Over One Hundred Portraits.

It will be elegantly bound. It will be a book for the home and the fireside. It will be a book to give to your friends when they ask, What is Freethought—what has it done and what is it doing in the world?

This is the most universal presentation of Freethought ever given to the public, and no Freethinker can afford to be without it. It is a library in itself.

Address orders to

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

HOW TO GET FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT FREE

SPECIAL OFFER.

We have made arrangements with Mr. Putnam whereby we are enabled to make our friends a most generous offer.

We need more subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and every Freethinker needs "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." Not all are able to pay $5 for it, but everyone can do a little work to obtain a copy—congenial work, that will do great good all around. This is the offer:

Send us Four New Yearly Subscribers at regular rates ($12 in all), and we will send the Getter-up of the Club a copy of "FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT," FREE OF CHARGES.

And further, to aid our friends in getting this book for themselves, we will offer

To the New Subscribers as a Premium,

post free, a copy in boards of

Old Testament Stories
Comically Illustrated
By WATSON HESTON,
THE GREATEST BOOK OF ITS KIND EVER
CONCEIVED.

Or, if preferred, a copy cloth-bound of
W. S. BELL'S

Handbook of Freethought.

With these Splendid Works as premiums there ought to be no difficulty in getting hundreds of clubs of subscribers.

Remember, to the Getter-up of The Club, FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT, free.

To each New Subscriber in the club, a premium of a Dollar Book—either "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought," in Cloth—all free by post or express.

This really brings the price of the paper down to $2 to each new subscriber, as they get THE TRUTH SEEKER one year and a dollar book for $3.

A Club of Four New Subscribers and $12 ($3 only from each) does this.

We want to extend our circulation, and we want to help our friends to help us.

It ought not to be difficult to get four New Subscribers in any town in the country, especially with these Splendid Premiums to assist.

Those who get up these Clubs will receive their copies of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" as soon as the book is issued.

Those who send a Club and Four New Subscribers and $12 before the book is printed, will have their names enrolled in its shining pages.

THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place,
NEW YORK.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 46. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, November 18, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - NOVEMBER 18, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

SOME HANDSOME PREMIUMS.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $6.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and S. P. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" ($5). By taking advantage of this or our Free offer of the book (see opposite page) there is no reason why every Freethinker in the country should not possess this splendid work.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" ($3). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and James B. Alexander's Dynamic Theory ($2.75). This is a splendid offer, for every one wants this book. It has over a thousand large pages and more than four hundred illustrations. It is a digest of Science, and every one who studies it cannot help but be well-informed in all scientific matters.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in board covers ($1).

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have, at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

What They Are After.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is a well-organized and powerful society. It is international. It holds in its grasp the consciences of millions of women. The elements of good in it blind the eyes of many careless and well-meaning people to its reactionary and dangerous character. It is popular, and educative in some directions, and hence draws to itself many who do not believe in the religious and theocratic objects of the organization. But their adherence adds to its strength, and gives it an appearance of breadth and liberality to which it is not entitled. And its associations and atmosphere must demoralize, to a greater or less degree, the Freethinkers who are enrolled in its membership. The commendable but misdirected desire to "do good" which affiliated them with a bigoted body will inevitably carry them along with the majority until they find themselves advocating the closer union of church and state, like Miss Willard, or behind prison bars, like the White Cappers of Stromsberg, Nebraska. The Union is Christian in name, reactionary in purpose, theocratic in spirit, arbitrary in methods. Crimes, such as that committed in Nebraska, show us how closely related in essentials are these Woman's Christian Temperance Union moralists and the mob moralists of other sections, such as the women whippers of Indiana, Missouri, and Arkansas. And they indicate also how easily and quickly moralistic emotions, subject to no other restraint than that of religion, blossom into hate and bear fruit in atrocious and cruel crimes. These women started out to force abstinence from intoxicating liquors upon all in the name of a Christ who demonstrated his divinity by making wine out of water for a crowd already drunk, and they claimed for this crusade the sanction of a Bible which might well be termed "The Drunkard's Handbook of Precept and Example." From this starting point of violence and fraud it was but a short step to the decoying, stripping, and savage whipping of girls who are the victims of a social system for which the Christian church is largely responsible. In the presence of the social evil Christianity has ever stood utterly helpless. A stranger to the scientific spirit and method, it has not deemed it necessary to inquire regarding causes. It has assumed that there is but one cause for all evil, and that that is the innate corruption of the human heart. So it has always striven to "stamp out" vice and to destroy those who cannot win ethically in the sadly unequal struggle with bad heredity and poverty. The Stromsberg barbarity is merely an illegal manifestation of the same spirit of vengeance against the women victims of inequitable conditions that constantly finds expression in legal fines, imprisonment and expatriation. Perhaps in no other city in this country is the dominance of the church more complete than in Pittsburg, and in no other city is the treatment of women of the half world more foolish and cruel. Hundreds, if not thousands of unfortunate women are turned into the streets to steal or starve, so inadequate are the resources of "Christian civilization" to deal with the problem their existence presents. It is perfectly safe to say that not one in a hundred of those active in the crusade against them would furnish one of them with honorable and remunerative employment in his household.

These observations are called out by the Stromsberg outrage taken in connection with an utterance of Miss Willard, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in her address at the national convention held at Nashville. She declared that the Union has "one vital, organic thought, one absorbing purpose, one undying enthusiasm. It is that Christ shall be this world's King—King of its courts, its camps, its commerce; King of its colleges and cloisters; King of its customs and constitutions. . . . Christ and his law, the true basis of government and the supreme authority in national as in individual life." The Christian Statesman's capital letters are in themselves evidence of treason to the Republic, which can accept no King. We can well believe Miss Willard's statement. Observing, thoughtful men and women have long known that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, ostensibly a temperance society, is in reality an auxiliary, a feeder, of the church. And it is more than this: Not merely is it its purpose to convert the world to Christ, but to place in the hands of the Christian church the reins of civil government. In its thought there is no longer Jesus, the sacrifice, the mediator, the savior, but Christ, the sacrificer, the ruler, the king. Persuasion and argument are only expedients—the law and the sword are finally to settle all controverted points in religion and morals. These women are making a way, not for the churches, simply, each of which is a voluntary aggregation of individuals brought together by a similarity of belief and held in union by a common purpose, but for the Church, a body politic, whose fundamental tenets are God, Christ, and Bible, and the units of which are brought and held together by "the cohesive power of public plunder." By the quoted clause we mean that in the church-state it is not sincere belief and a life ordered in accordance with definite principles that give title to honorable membership, but profession of belief in the dogmas acceptance of which is a prerequisite to the holding of any position of trust, power, or emolument in the state, which is the church, practically. No man can hold office who is not an acceptor of the creed of the church-state. This has been from the beginning the declared purpose of the National Reform Association. It wants only "godly" men on guard. Of course, this can be made possible in appearance only. Shrewd, unscrupulous men are bound to mount the ladder of fame to the citadel of power, no matter how many perjuries they commit. It is very easy to secure nominal acceptance of a creed when you make such acceptance the condition of possession of office, social position, or wealth. The God-in-the-Constitution bigots are bidding for hypocrites. They can get them. They are getting them. Every time they succeed in inducing a municipality, a state, or the nation to take another step in the direction of the church-state which is the goal of their ambition, they open new places for hypocrites, and the hypocrites are always ready and eager to profess Christ and him in power for an office or the hope of one. This is why we say that the success of the theocratic party, one wing of which is the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, will put in control of the civil power the church, an ecclesiastical organization held together by "the cohesive power of public plunder." We repeat the phrase, for we know of no other so exactly and graphically descriptive.

We are warned by all the tyrannies and martyrdoms of the past to beware of the political church. We cannot afford to temporize with it. Though their forms and names change with the fleeting centuries, religions and priests are essentially the same, yesterday, to-day, and forever. The liberties of the nation that puts into their keeping the scepter of power, are by that act of folly thrown away. Not only does the past warn us, but the present also. On every hand are revealed the serpentine tricks and the tigerish ferocity of the priesthood. Protestant or Catholic, it matters not which; both must be watched and resisted. We see what the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is capable of now, and what it intends to do when it comes into possession of greater power. That we have not misinterpreted Miss Willard's statement of its objects is shown by the Christian Statesman's declaration that no "more ringing, national reform sentences were ever uttered than those of the president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

"Christ and his law, the true basis of government and the supreme authority in national as in individual life." These are all-inclusive, bold, traitorous words. They are pregnant with ominous meanings. They suggest proscription; they threaten persecution; they prophesy martyrdom. Freethinkers, friends of justice, equal rights, and human liberty, read these quoted sentences once more, and again and yet again. Grasp fully their meaning; realize all that they imply and forbode, and then act. Act calmly, wisely, fearlessly, unceasingly. It is a campaign of education upon which we have entered. The people must be enlightened, for only an enlightened citizenship can successfully cope with a priesthood which seeks to rule through the state. Remember Ingersoll's words: "Let the church but touch again the sword of power and the splendid fruit of all the ages will turn to ashes on the lips of men."

Wanted—New Subscribers.

We solicit the kind attention of our friends to the need which exists of increasing the subscription list of THE TRUTH SEEKER. There are several reasons for this, which our readers will readily see. First, It will do a world of good, by making more Liberals and by interesting those already liberal in the work of Freethought. The church is making great encroachments upon our liberties, and the people need to know about it, in order to defeat its tyranny. And those who read THE TRUTH SEEKER are a hundred times more interested and active than those who do not. Second, It is a duty we owe to our fellow-men to give them the light of reason we have obtained. Liberalism makes for true civilization, and freedom from fear of an angry God makes men happier and better. Every Liberal should do all he can to lift up his neighbors from the darkness of superstition to the glorious plain of mental liberty. And, as Mr. Wakeman says, referring to the resolution regarding the Liberal papers passed at the late International Congress: "They are the very life of the cause of intellectual and practical emancipation of the people. As such they are to be built up and sustained by constant care, payment, encouragement, and solicitation for subscribers for them." Third, An increase in the list will relieve the readers from the occasional "duns" we are compelled to send out in order to get money with which to pay bills. If we can obtain two or three thousand new subscribers, the increased revenue will make the business work of the paper easier, and we can continue to improve the paper without fear of financial embarrassments.

To reward those who will do a little for us in this matter we have arranged to take a large number of Mr. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought," and to every one who sends us four new yearly subscribers at the regular rates of $3 ($12 in all), we shall send a copy of that magnificent work free. Those who send the club before the book is on the press will be enrolled among the original subscribers and patrons in the book.

And to make it easy to get these four new subscribers we will offer them as a premium either of two splendid works—The "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought" in cloth binding. Our readers know the value of these books, and that about every Liberal in the country would like a copy of one or the other. Either one of these, as may be chosen, will be given to the new subscribers obtained in these clubs of four, and a copy of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" to the one who gets up the club and sends the money and names.

We cannot afford to make this premium to single subscribers, but to enable old subscribers and single new subscribers to obtain these and other desirable works at a great reduction, we have made a list of premiums in connection with subscriptions to the paper, to be found in the first column of the first editorial page of THE TRUTH SEEKER. We are willing to do our part toward making the obtaining of good Liberal works easy and cheap, and hope our readers will take advantage of the terms offered.

Once more we ask that a favorable eye be turned in our direction, and a helpful hand extended. As the resolutions of the International Congress expressed it, Boom the Liberal papers and you boom the Liberal cause.

Sunday Enforcement in Missouri.

The Sunday battle is on in Missouri. In Kansas City the barber-shops were first closed and then the grocery stores. Now the enforcers are getting evidence against the saloons. Presumably the turn of the theaters, street-cars, and Sunday trains will come soon.

A barber at Mexico, Mo., was fined one dollar and costs for Sunday shaving. The case was carried to the Court of Appeals and Judge Gill decided that shaving on Sunday was not a necessity, as it was made necessary by the negligence of the individual. Now, while admitting that putting in defense the plea of necessity is not to be condemned as evasive or cowardly, we nevertheless should much prefer the issue to be made along the line of constitutional right and equal liberty. No citizen should be compelled to show that an act which he does at his own cost is an act of necessity. It is a personal affair. It makes no difference to the preachers, to the Barbers' Union or to the courts whether he gets a shave on Sunday because some overpowering necessity compels him to do so, or through mere caprice. In other words, it is not the business of the preachers, the Barbers' Union or the courts, but his own. He is the only one qualified to decide as to the necessity of his action. His face and his beard are his own, or should be, and if he chooses to pay a barber ten cents for manipulating the one and removing the other on Sunday he has precisely the same right to do so that he has to buy the same service on Monday. And the barber's constitutional and equal right to perform the service on Sunday is exactly the same as his right to do so on Monday. This is the only question involved. It is the one issue that should be fought out in the courts, and at the polls if necessary. The ministers' union and the barbers' union must be taught that they do not own the consciences of the people, and that the independent barber's shop and tools are his own, to be rented by him at his own discretion.

As intimated before, we do not wish to wholly eschew the defense of "necessity." No man is under obligations to be a martyr, and, if escape from fines or imprisonment for violation of an unconstitutional and iniquitous law seems probable through such a defense the accused is justified in making it. Furthermore, as the Sunday laws of most, if not all the States allow the doing of "necessary" work on that day the result of a trial where the defendant relies upon the plea of necessity is dependent upon the liberality and common sense of the judge. The widest conceivable or a very narrow construction of the law is equally possible. A broad-minded judge will be very apt to decide that the individual immediately concerned is the best judge as to the necessity of his Sunday work, while a Sabbatarian bigot will interpret the law in such a way as to give delight to those like himself. Others will find various ways to make the law as little oppressive in fact as they can while upholding it in theory. Every time the clerics and their allies and dupes are beaten a step forward has been taken, even if the real issue has not been as sharply defined as it should have been. No one can question the exceedingly great value of the open World's Fair, although the Sunday monopolists were beaten on technicalities and side issues. The moral effect of victory is not to be despised.

To return to the Missouri struggle: Judge Gill's decision was based on foolish reasoning, and his "opinion" is offensive and impudent. He had no business to uphold a decision against the barber who worked on Sunday on the flimsy pretense that the customer had been guilty of "negligence" in not getting shaved before Sunday. Perhaps this man was in the habit of getting shaved every day. In that case, what becomes of the judicial clap trap about negligence? In every such instance Judge Gill would be compelled, by his own logic, to discharge the offending barber. Would he do it?

J. B. Smith, manager of the Midland Hotel in Kansas City, refused to close his barber shop on Sunday, and so notified the Barber's Union. He says that Sunday shaving is a necessity, as viewed from the hotel standpoint. "I purpose to spend some money in contesting the point," he declares. This is good, so far as it goes. Let us hope that some one will make a fight on still broader grounds.

There are any number of "Sabbath Observance Unions." Is it not about time that a "Sunday Defense Association" was formed? We submit that the hour is ripe for action. We need a compact, active, aggressive society devoted to this work alone. A fund should be raised to fight the "Sabbath" robbers wherever they appear. The issue must be met sometime, and that soon. The longer we sit with folded hands the more bitter and costly the struggle when we do decide to defend ourselves.

Agents Wanted.

We believe that not only can good be done but money made by any Liberal who will canvass for our book "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." In fact we know one man who worked at it but a few hours weekly and sold nearly fifty copies in a month. The price is low; everybody knows the Old Testament stories, and nearly everybody would like a book applying nineteenth-century wit and knowledge to them. People like to laugh. Reverence for the Old Testament tales has largely disappeared and jokes at the expense of Jonah and Joseph and Esau and Samson and David, and the other worthies of unsavory reputation, are keenly appreciated. It seems to us that the book will sell at sight. It does here in the store. Liberals out of employment will find this a good way to make an honest dollar.

Terms to agents sent upon application.

Victor E. Lennstrand, the intrepid leader of the Swedish Freethought party, is sick again, and has had to submit to a surgical operation.

The editor of our children's corner spoke to an audience of nearly 2,500 Sunday before last at Fall River, Mass., where she resides and holds municipal office. Every seat to the topmost gallery was filled. Her topic was what she saw at the World's Fair. The local papers compliment her highly upon the lecture.

In view of the craze for repressiv legislation in the interest and at the demand of multitudinous cliques, factions, and sects a Georgia journalist rises to inquire why some one "does not introduce a bill to prevent the consumption of wormy chestnuts." Does he not see that this would be destructive of the sermon industry?

We shall soon have ready in neat pamphlet form Miss Susan H. Wixon's address at the International Congress—"Woman, Four Centuries of Progress." Of this address W. C. Sturoc, of Sunapee, N. H., says: "It was really the ablest and cleanest effort of that day (Woman's Day), and left the orator standing high up in the estimation of all." The price of this pamphlet will be only ten cents.

"The secret ballot law doesn't prevent God's seeing the ballot you select."—New York Voice.

But then, you know, "God is no respecter of persons," and so it does not matter if he does know who your favorites are. And if he did care, who cares? This is not his government, but the people's, and when they devised the secret ballot law they were thinking of the ward boss and the domineering employer, not of an alien, who can neither register nor vote.

It is reported that the members of the Ohio senate have agreed to hereafter employ no women as clerks and assistants, owing to scandals said to have grown out of the employment of such help in the past. This seems a very flimsy pretext. Why any discrimination should be made in favor of men as against equally competent women we cannot understand. It would not be surprising to find that some meddling minister is at the bottom of the mischief.

Anent the Stromsberg mobbing the Minneapolis Progressive Age tersely remarks: "The female lynchers are all 'respectable ladies' and members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. What was the motive of the crime? Was it to reform the girls? Hardly. No. It was to gratify a vulgar appetite for excitement, and virtue was made the pretext. It would be well for those—let us call them females—to remember the man who said, 'Go and sin no more.'"

A Swedish church at Hyde Park, a suburb of Chicago, had lately become convinced that the hour for the general wind-up of all sublunary affairs was at hand. On Sunday, October 5th, thirty-five women donned their ascension robes and waited expectantly in the church for the sounding of the archangel's trumpet. As usual, he failed to keep the appointment. The women watched all day and far into the night, but they saw nothing of the herald of the "risen Lord." He did not even send a telegram explaining the cause of his non-appearance. In this he was discourteous, to say the least.

The Sunday question is to the front in all parts of the country. Some time since one of the Presbyterian churches of Columbia, South Carolina, expelled Sadie Means because she worked in the telephone exchange on Sunday. The Charleston presbytery sustained the Columbia church. Then the South Carolina synod took a hand and ordered the Second church to "restore Sadie M. Means to all her rights and privileges as a member in full communion in said church." Whereupon the pastor of the Second church gave notice on behalf of the Charleston presbytery that the case would be appealed to the general assembly. When God gets into the Constitution such cases will be settled by the civil courts.

The World asked several well-known people what they thought of the candidacy of Judge Maynard, nominated by the Democratic party for judge of the Court of Appeals in this state. Among those interrogated was T. De Witt Talmage. He replied that he had had no time to investigate the charges and, anyway, he did not know what to believe about any candidate, so full was the air of misrepresentations. And he concluded with this: "My hope is in God and not in political parties." This is pretty good, considering the fact that he knows nothing about God, while he can and does know something concerning parties and their candidates. He is willing to take God wholly on trust but will not express an opinion even of a man because he does not know all about him.

"NEW CASTLE, PA., Nov. 5.—Rev. Mr. Bigham, one of the oldest United Presbyterian ministers in this neighborhood, while preaching at Plain Grove to-day, suddenly became incoherent and rambling in his speech. Before his congregation recovered from its amazement he fell heavily to the floor. He had been stricken with paralysis. Physicians state that he cannot recover."

This is one of the most startling and wholesale warnings which we remember to have ever read. Just think of it! Why, if this is true, nearly every minister in the country is in imminent danger of being killed by a stroke of paralysis. Just before Mr. Bigham fell he "became incoherent and rambling in his speech." It was all the warning that was vouchsafed. But how many such warnings are given every Sunday! And they are all unheeded.

The temerity of the ministers is something phenomenal.

"A candidate on the Prohibition ticket in Massachusetts announces that the Lord is on his side. If that is true the Lord might as well get ready for a bad snowing under."—Kansas City Journal.

"That's what the scribes and pharisees said nearly nineteen hundred years ago. But while Christianity still marches on, Caiaphas and Herod are in a place, we fear, where they would give anything to be 'snowed under' for even five minutes."—New York Voice.

The Voice should not jest in that heartless manner. As to the Massachusetts' candidate, he is mistaken about God being on his side, or else the Bible writers have forged God's name in a wholesale and scandalous way, for in the sacred record his signature is appended to hundreds of pro-liquor documents. Besides, he was the patentee and original manufacturer of alcohol.

Government by preacher is becoming daily more popular and common in this unhappy country. Here is a peculiarly flagrant case, illustrating the superlative impudence of the clerics and the abject subserviency of the "powers that be." At Topeka, Kan., on October 8th, Rev. M. Sheldon, in his forenoon sermon, inveighed after the manner of his kind against a balloon ascension that was advertised to take place that afternoon at the fair grounds. In his congregation was Police Commissioner Whiting, who immediately ordered the chief of police to prevent the ascension, which he did. Necessarily every such success emboldens the insolent ecclesiastics and makes more slavish the civil authorities. The difference between parties is inappreciable—Republican or Democrat, or Populist, as in this instance—all meekly take their orders from the church.

To those credulous people who harbor the delusion that the sponsors of the proposed 16th Amendment to the national Constitution intend to really separate church and state we commend the following excerpt from the leading editorial in a recent number of the Christian Statesman:

"Most appropriate of all legislative celebrations of '1900 A.D.' in our land would be the passage by Congress and the state legislatures, in these intervening years, of the proposed 16th Amendment, forbidding the states (as Congress only is now forbidden) to unite church and state or make sectarian appropriations, coupled with a preamble to the national Constitution that shall give our Christian institutions that constitutional protection in the future which custom has afforded in the past, by incorporating into our fundamental law that famous opinion of our national Supreme Court, 'This is a Christian nation.'"

The italics are ours. Is comment needed?

The Christian Standard, in a paroxysm of denunciation of the nude in the Art Palace at the World's Fair, inflicts this upon a long-suffering world:

"It is nothing in its favor that papers and reporters champion it, and literary and social somewhat admire it. They do the like in some countries as to bull-fights; in others, as to duels; in others, as to slavery; and in our own country, as to race-courses and saloons. They are all of a piece, and all stand on the same basis of lust."

What is to be thought of the brain that can place in one category of abominations chattel slavery and a picture of a beautiful human body? And this man, wholly lacking in the faculty of discrimination, utterly unable to segregate the like and differentiate the unlike, is one of a party of fanatics who think that the state should force their abortions of ideas upon all the people. The prospect of their accession to complete power is truly an enrapturing one.

Among the institutions which the church thinks she has a special commission to supervise (when she cannot suppress it) is her old enemy and rival, the theater. One of the editorial contributors of the Christian Statesman, Josiah W. Leeds, a perverted Quaker, reported by telegraph to the national convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in session at the time in Chicago, that a theater manager's advertising agent had just been convicted in the quarter sessions court of Philadelphia for exposing "indecent" show bills. The victory was Mr.

Leeds's. "Few evils can be so easily suppressed," comments the Statesman. The Quaker inquisitor might turn his attention, when he gets through with the theaters, to the Bible. Every Sunday it is in the hands of millions of susceptible young people, and no one can estimate the evil which it does. "Get some Christian lawyer to allow you to copy the law and then kindly call the attention of"—Sunday-school superintendents to its provisions! On second thought, we move that Josiah W. Leeds be appointed a committee of one to prepare an expurgated Bible for the use of Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues, Christian Endeavor Clubs, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the home. It will be much smaller than the present edition.

"It is a fact that gives one a feeling of awe that of the Christians sprinkled among this number so few were killed, so few wounded, and so few suffered in any way. In many cases theirs were marvelous instances of escape. Houses left standing when all around were in ruins, so as to cause the heathen themselves to make comments as to why this should be so. We are bound to acknowledge that God took care of his own."

The foregoing chunks of wisdom dropped from the pen of Miss Bickersteth, when she was writing her "Japan As We Saw It," and have reference to the great earthquake of Nagoya and its victims. If we believed in a God we should say that such talk was rank blasphemy, for we can conceive of no worse blasphemy against any person than to attribute to him criminal intentions and actions. But as we have no God to defend we are compelled to regard Miss Bickersteth's expressions as immeasurably stupid. Could any woman—or man—look out upon the world through a more narrow aperture? We do not see how it could be possible. Is Miss Bickersteth a near blood relative to Talmage? There is a kinship, surely. God cares for his "own"? By the logic of this argument the numberless supposedly Christian victims of accident and natural convulsions must have been Infidels or pagans in disguise!

"The national reform movement stands on this platform. It opposes both to secularism and to church and state Christianity and the state. It seeks to organize all the friends of Christian civil government against the encroachments and revolutionary demands of secularism. For in this conflict the advocates of secularism are the assailants. Their watchwords are 'discontinue,' 'repeal,' 'abrogate,' 'abolish.' They find the Bible in our public schools, and demand its expulsion. They hear the voice of prayer in our halls of legislation, and demand that it be hushed. The oath, with its solemn appeal to God, is administered to witnesses and jurors in our courts, and to our officers of government, and the demand is made that it shall be abolished. In these and many other ways the government has been and is connected with Christianity, without any union of church and state; and this existing connection of state and religion, which secularism labors to destroy, the National Reform Association strives to defend and maintain."—Dr. McAllister's Manual of Christian Civil Government.

Those are splendid watchwords. We would discontinue the payment of public money for the teaching of Protestantism in the public schools; we would repeal all laws which exempt church property from equal taxation with the homes of the people; we would abrogate all the unconstitutional and outrageous Sunday statutes; we would abolish all the Christian adjuncts of civil government. It is only a dishonest trick of speech to advocate "Christian civil government" in one breath and disclaim against "church and state" in the next. There can be no connection of any religion with civil government which is not at the same time and inevitably a union of church and state. Every chaplain who draws a dollar for his religious work in army or prison or Congress is a living refutation of Dr. McAllister's deceptive disclaimer.

Readers will aid the cause by forwarding us names of their friends who might be interested in sample copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding," provided he understands that "God's ways are not our ways" and that no matter how many people he used to kill, it was all right. They were no doubt Infidels and were in the habit of asking questions,

"As A Man Thinketh so is He."

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: When I was asked to come here to-night and speak upon this platform "as the representative of Woman," I began wondering which of the infinit varieties of womankind I was expected to represent; and I thought if it took such a number of distinguished and able men to represent Man, that I was surely expected to inflate myself tremendously if I was to represent Woman with a large W. But I accepted the invitation as a good "sign" in the zodiac that these gifted gentlemen did not feel wholly capable and willing, as men have felt heretofore, and as the stupid and the arbitrary ones still feel, of doing all the feminine "representing" themselves, so I agreed to come.

Then I fell to thinking that, although the very originators of this new society have probably not so believed, yet it is true that the work of such an organization will in the long run, mean more for, and do more to benefit, women than men.

"Science Sermons!" The scientific method of thought applied to the topics to be considered whether they be of fact, of speculation, or of philosophy. Ah, that is a great step upward for both Man and Woman; but in its application it will mean to her, in addition to what it will mean to and for him, all of that scope and opportunity of development which has so far been his alone.

In the strictly scientific method of thought alone will woman find her release from superstition and the bondage which barbarity bound upon her. The unreasoning emotionalism of woman herself, and about woman by man, has bred more sorrow and fed more crime than has almost any other one force.

Those who think unfairly act unfairly.

He whose mental processes are devious or befogged cannot be relied upon for conduct that shall be direct and wholesome.

Did it ever occur to you that most minds filled and educated by the unscientific method are like jugs into which marbles are dropped? There is no assimilation. The points of contact are so slight and so evasive that the mind itself never recognizes the relations of the material or facts it stores away. Each is a marble dropped in. It lies there alone. There is no blending; no dovetailing; no instinctive and unconscious mingling which gives to the student that grasp which enables him to see each thing in its relation to its fellows; which gives, in short, perspective or a sense of proportion, to his field of learning.

The result is that in after years much of the mass is utterly useless and the rest is so unevenly, disconnectedly laid away in his mind that it is of slight service. The application is as capricious and as uncertain as the whims of a child. Let me give you two or three illustrations which I have chanced to stumble upon in my reading in the past few days, and which illustrate the results of the unscientific "sermons" in school, in college, and in pulpit; which have gone so far to form the minds of those whose words I shall quote. These are taken quite at random and are simply to suggest the results of the old methods of mental gymnastics which we have heretofore called education. I am going to quote first from a leading statesman. It will be necessary for us to assume (if any of us have prejudices or opinions which would lead us to think otherwise) that these printed words are the sincere opinions of those who wrote or spoke them, and I for one, believe there is far less mental dishonesty in the world that is intentional than there is of that which is unintentional.

And remember that I am not going to "take sides" in these matters which I quote, but simply show the illogical and unscientific results of the old methods of education as they appear in expressions which we are bound to accept as sincere manifestations of the minds which gave them forth.

The first I take from a shining light, an able man whether you agree with him or not. It is Senator Sherman. In a recent debate on the silver question he said: "The government ought to encourage every industry in every part of the country, but it ought not to encourage those industries at the expense of the interests of the whole people of the United States." And that from a leading advocate of protection, tariff! His marbles don't assimilate. His silver marble and his tariff marble are on different sides of his mental jug.

In the same paper I saw a glowing editorial urging every "good and loyal citizen" to register and vote. The editor very eloquently argued that no one was entitled to the benefits of a free government who did not feel and show enough interest in its welfare—who had not enough pride in and patriotism for his country—to exercise his ennobling and lofty right and privilege and duty as a citizen of such government, by doing all that he could to place in power the best and worthiest candidates. He argued that citizens who do not vote should either be forced to vote or else be "disgraced by having the franchise taken from them and being placed upon the footing where they belong"—with "aliens, idiots, and criminals."

Well, that same paper had an editorial on the same day in which women were sneered at for wanting to register and vote—for not wishing to be placed upon a footing with "aliens, idiots, and criminals," for taking an interest in placing the best candidates in office, for taking an interest in the welfare of the government whose benefits they enjoy as citizens—in so far as the proscribed class of "aliens, idiots, criminal, and women" may be supposed to enjoy these and other things.

Another rather amusing illustration I shall give you.

All this past six months the papers have teemed with the "squabbles" of the lady managers of the World's Fair, and they said that such unseemly conduct showed anew "the folly of placing women in charge of large affairs, for which they are, and will ever be, wholly unfitted by nature." I went out to Chicago during the World's Fair, and while I did hear a good deal of difference of opinion and discussion among these women, it seemed to me a most normal and healthy sign, a promising indication of individuality and independence of thought of those who differed and did not feel that it was absolutely necessary to go about all day long saying yes to everything that anybody else said. Well, these same papers called the differences (of which there were quite as many) in the men's board of managers, "another spirited debate," etc., but never a "squabble."

But if, perchance, they had been so designated, who would have argued from that that it proved "the incapacity of all men (by nature) to deal with such topics"? Need I make the application?

We have heard ever since we were born—and some of us are in danger of believing it—that whatever the feminine brain might achieve it could never, never, never be good at mathematics, because in the scheme of nature, as interpreted by man, it wasn't constructed that way. Well, a year or two ago a Miss Fawcett, of London, stood in the Cambridge examination above the senior wrangler. When this was pointed out as proof that it was not sex in brain which had kept most women from high achievements in mathematics, we were met by the reply, "Oh, certainly; but she is an exception! She is not like other women"—a discovery about Miss Fawcett which had not been made, by the way, up to that time. Do you see where that will lead? She is something of an exception not only to women in general (since she is the first to take such rank), but to men in general, since it remains yet for even one man to prove that he is capable of the achievement! The ratio is rather on woman's side, isn't it? And time certainly is on his side, since he has the records of all the "exceptional" men from the time the first university was established to place against that of a petty scrap of time since woman has ever been permitted (as Miss Fawcett was) to eat the crumbs from the college table!

At our own Johns Hopkins recently it was a woman—the mother of children—who achieved the following, in what would seem to be a peculiarly unlikely field for women. Johns Hopkins University has enrolled among its students this year a rather remarkable woman in the person of Mrs. Arthur Davis. Before her marriage she graduated with high honors from Columbia University in Washington. She passed a perfect examination for the nautical almanac office, making one hundred per cent., while her competitors, all men, and all college graduates, retired from the examination room early in the day, unable to solve the problems presented. She invented a Washington-Greenwich table, which is now in observatory use. She will study for the degree of doctor of philosophy. The paragraph does not state, but the fact is, that she some time ago found and corrected blunders in the nautical tables which have stood the test of time—and masculine scholarship—for lo, these many years.

They headline her as "rather a remarkable woman!" Of course she is not an ordinary woman; but the "rather remarkable man" who will achieve the same triumph has yet to appear; and again the ratio is on the side of the proscribed and incompetent sex.

"There has never been a female Shakspeare" is an argument often put forth to prove that the highest mental achievement in literature is beyond woman's scope—that "nature has incapacitated her." There has never been but one male Shakspere. Well, there has never been any male Miss Fawcett, above the senior wrangler. There has never been a male Mrs. Davis; but does this argue that nature has incapacitated men for high achievement in mathematics, in nautical calculation—not to mention "wrangling?"

But seriously, the unscientific method of thought which leads to such non sequiter beliefs, editorials, and squibs—or "arguments," as their authors fondly believe them to be—would lead me to say, as when I sat listening to the Senate discuss the silver bill a few days ago: "Let us hear no more of this idiocy of self government by men! This 'squabble' proves anew that men are not fit for rulers—ergo, henceforth woman should make all laws and rule as she sees fit," which no one would deplore more than I. The scientific method handles premises and conclusions with a greater regard for sequence.

According to the marble and jug method there used to be a theory that if a man had epilepsy he had been consorting with the devil—with a big D—and that he had caught a lot of little devils.

Little devils of a migratory turn used to be as numerous and as handy as "microbes" are now when the doctors of medicine or of law or of theology were digging around in their jug of marbles for information to give out to their "lay" worshippers.

By and by they dropped the devil (as if he had grown too hot) and took out their "witch" marble, and their methods being the same their results were quite as logical and as satisfactory to everybody except, possibly, the witches.

I never had a chance—as they say in the South—"to meet up with" a devil; but a year or so ago I, with about seventy-five others, was taken on a special train to visit the witches in their haunts over in Salem, Mass. We were to have two treats—see and learn all about the places where Nathaniel Hawthorne lived and wrote, and visit (with guides and instructors) "Witch Hill" and "the witch house" and other scary places. I saw, carefully preserved in a sealed bottle, in the archives of the courthouse, some of the round-headed pins that various witches had mysteriously inserted in the flesh of sundry victims who had, later on, brought them to justice, producing these "pointed" proofs of the compact with the devil. I saw the "witch house."

We all stood—seventy-five of us—in the street to look at it. We gazed at a small, old-fashioned structure, the roof of which (in common with most of those about, which were of the old town) slanted at a sharp angle from a peak or ridge pole. Our guide was plied with questions from all sides.

"Why is it called the witch house?"

The guide hummed and hawed, and gave no legitimate reply.

"What did he say?" "Why was it?" "Oh!" "Don't he know?" "What did we come for?" "Did one of the witches live here?"

This last was addressed to the guide: "Well, I don't just know that one of them lived here, but—"

Some one suggested that perhaps the judge who tried them lived there or possibly it was the house in which they were tried, or—

The guide was hard pressed and desperate; and it is only fair that I tell you that he was a college professor, and was selected to pilot the party because of his learning and his witch and Salem lore. "Well," said he, somewhat in desperation, "I don't know that the judge who tried 'em lived there, and I wouldn't like to say that it is the house in which they were tried; but it is always called the 'witch house,' and people come to see it from everywhere. Nobody ever asked before why it was called that and I have never looked that up, but—"

Well, there we stood—seventy-five of us—in the middle of the street—doctors, lawyers, merchants, teachers, writers, and men and women of leisure and of labor, all staring at that house, and that was the information we had gone for from various cities on a special expedition to obtain! That was the definiteness and value of the information contained in the jug we had taken out as a guide, who was familiar with the history of the town. At last some one—determined to be appreciative—exclaimed: "Just see how the roof slants down!" and then we all turned and wended our way to the special train, and back to Boston!

Now, our guide, the professor, knew all the historical spots, and he took us to them, but right there his stock of information ended, although he had taken many others to see these same wonders. His method of thought had put the marbles of fact into his mental jug, and had taken them out from time to time and dropped them back again, but what he knew had no relation to anything else on the topic. It began no place and ended nowhere. Each was simply a cold, round, single fact dropped among a lot of other miscellaneous, cold, round, isolated facts, and from a scientific point of view might as well have been a shot or a huckleberry.

*Helen H. Gardener's lecture before the Science Sermon's Society.

That style of thought, that method of teaching and of learning, which leaves simply a deposit of the vagaries of nothingness as a result, is the very antipodes of the "Science Sermon" method which, as I understand it, is to be inaugurated here, according to which method of thought and teaching all facts are related—lead somewhere—begin some place—are a part of each and every other bit of knowledge gained; and instead of the echo of the rattle of a half hollow jug of more or less valuable marbles, will produce a mind so stored and developed that its unfolding will be like the spreading of the branches of a great live oak; or better still, like the sea, to which each river, or creek, or babbling rill brings its large or its small contribution to add to the one inextricable, mingled, powerful, mighty whole which bears upon its bosom the hopes, the wisdom, and the ambitions of man.

Perhaps it is not inappropriate for me to say that had it not been for the birth of the scientific method of thought I would not stand here—no woman would be represented here to-night. Womanhood would be where superstition and authority placed it—under the feet of man! That woman was created solely for his use, abuse, or pleasure was never doubted so long as "authority for truth and not truth for authority" was accepted as the creed of the world! And that is why I said at the first, that however much movements like this, which aim to achieve the true basis and method of thought, may do for man—however much it may mean for him—for woman it means salvation; and therefore to the race, her children, it is the star of hope. When both men and women shall be educated and learn to think by the scientific method their children will cease to be born intellectual cripples and moral idiots!

This beautiful world does not need to be, as it now is, a hospital, a prison, or a reformatory for the majority of the race! If we only had the judgment—the accurate and scientific capacity of thought to use them right—the materials are all here to make us healthy, and happy, and good. We have been blindly throwing these materials together as a wasteful or a vicious cook pitches perfect ingredients into the oven only to produce a worthless or an unwholesome dish.

We have but to apply the deft hand and the accurate eye of Science to make of this world an exquisite garden filled with happy and healthy children, who shall grow to manhood and womanhood lovers of justice; who shall be clear of head and clean of heart—for "as a man thinketh so is he."

HELEN H. GARDENER.

Freethought Federation of America.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, President.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH, Sec. E. C. REICHWALD, Treas.
Address all communications to Headquarters at 165 South Water street, Chicago, Ill.

The recent Congress has undoubtedly given the Federation a greater impetus than ever. The manifested enthusiasm of its members, who contributed largely to the great success of the Congress, has done much to encourage us in our work, and we are looking with confidence and hope to yet greater victories. From almost every state its members came, and by their continued presence added to the interest therein.

As may be seen by its reports, the Federation has now a membership of three thousand, five hundred. This constitutes it the largest and strongest Freethought organization upon the continent of America. The enviable position we occupy has been attained in the one short year of its existence, yet I am pleased to say, that with the assistance of its splendid allies and workers, its strength and numbers will be very largely increased during the ensuing year. In addition to the president and myself, Messrs. Steiner and Roloson will shortly be found working in its behalf, securing members and organizing them into election districts wherever an opportunity to do so arises. This is the work we have before us for the coming year, and in which we earnestly ask all Freethinkers to coöperate. We want to be prepared for the election of 1896. We must not wait longer. Now is the time to begin, and at our next convention a platform will be drawn up and presented to the country upon which all Freethinkers may unite. There are nine demands which Freethinkers have been making for some years past, but they have never got any further than the demands. Heretofore they have existed merely upon paper, and no effort has been made to bring them forth as a practical issue. The Federation proposes to formulate a platform based upon these demands and carry them to the ballot-box.

A Freethinker should be willing at any time to vote his opinions. If Freethought is worth living for and working for, it is worth voting for. My reports will show the success we may win if we only pursue the right method. This will be the chief line of work upon which our efforts will be concentrated. In addition to this we have several new campaign documents and a variety of Freethought literature which we wish to publish and distribute as early as possible. Lectures are a good means of spreading the cause wherever they can be given, but there are thousands of towns and villages where a lecture could not be given at all. In such places we must rely upon the distribution of Freethought literature. For this purpose the Federation will shortly publish some small pamphlets, and friends desiring to help us in this direction may do so at once by sending a subscription to the treasurer. One of the documents we wish to publish is the address given by Mr. Putnam at the late Congress. This will make a splendid pamphlet for our cause, and should be widely distributed. The Federation desires to get these out as soon as possible. We will distribute them free of cost upon application, but we must have the financial help we need with which to do it. The Federation has quickly become the most popular body of organized Freethinkers. Fifty-four new members were enrolled at the Congress, and with four workers in the field, we are expecting to increase our list of members threefold during the coming year.

All the leaders of Freethought in America are in sympathy with its aims and objects. It has now the undivided support of the Freethought press, and is in a good position to accomplish valuable work for our cause. Send in your names for membership; we set no price, ask no pay. We simply desire you to join yourself with us and fuse your enthusiasm with ours. No thoughtful man can fail to see that the zealous partisans of factions, creeds, and money-making sects have caused the greatest calamities that man has been doomed to suffer. We are cursed in free America to-day by a huge army of priestly parasites, who, by a corrupt system of artificial society, are divorced from all productive labor, and this, too, in addition to an enormous array of cumbersome and hopelessly entangled legislation. Our object is to prevent similar calamities befalling us in future; and every honest effort to free the humanity we love from serfdom ought, at least, to command respect. In this age, and owing to the present constitution of society, the feeblest suppositions of blind adherents to creed or party may easily be hardened into firm convictions, and notions that are merely frail dreams often become grave and solemn accusations, armed with venomous teeth and fed by slander. This is the direct result of an emasculating Christian education, and speaks plainly of the evil instincts of its adherents, with their concomitant and dependent follies. Eighteen hundred years ago, it is said, angels sang "Peace on earth and good will toward men," but it has never been sung since by orthodox Christianity. That glorious day and its consequent joys lies yet in the dim and distant future. Then let us work together, shoulder to shoulder, for the dawn of that bright and glorious morn. Already its sun shows a gilding upon the clouds, but it lies waiting until orthodoxy shall perish and Freethought reign triumphant o'er the earth.

Education is our salvation—on this we must rely. Then let us educate the people by a profuse distribution of Freethought literature and by means of Freethought lectures. We will guarantee to flood the country with Freethought if we can only get the means. Then help us to the extent of your ability, and let each send what he can afford. Times are hard just now, but cheer up, better ones are coming, and they will be here just as soon as the legislators will let the business of the country alone, and interested party organs shall cease trying to cause commercial panics. Remember the treasurer's address is 165 South Water street, Chicago, Ill., to whom all subscriptions may be sent, and all communications for the Federation addressed.

Since the publication of our last financial statement I have received the following amounts, by mail, and contribution at the Congress:

J. P. Miller.....	$2 00	John G. Kendall.....	2 00
C. K. Spencer.....	1 00	Sam. D. Moore.....	1 00
W. T. Galloway.....	1 00	G. B. Wyatt.....	1 00
J. Atkins.....	10 00	V. D. Vincent.....	1 75
J. R. Johnson.....	1 50	John Souter.....	30 00
E. W. Crouch.....	50	W. B. Clark.....	5 00
John J. Duffy.....	2 00	F. D. Rexford.....	2 00
Geo. W. Robinson....	1 00	A. R. Woodhams.....	2 50
Wm. C. Decker.....	1 00	J. M. Peck.....	5 00
Mabel W. Tarbell....	5 00	W. P. Light.....	1 00
J. H. Lindsay.....	1 50	J. B. Thorpe.....	1 00
Peter Wettstein.....	5 00	N. D. McDonald.....	1 00
Springfield Liberals,		J. B. Deane.....	1 00
Illinois.....	7 25	G. W. White.....	1 00

J. L. Tompkins.....	1 00	J. H. Brown.....	5 0
Boulder Liberals, Col-		Charlotte G. Palm....	5 00
orado.....	11 00	Byron C. Parsons....	2 00
Whitehall Liberals,		Mrs. Chris. Scofield..	5 00
Wisconsin.....	10 00	C. T. Houser.....	1 00
Dr. J. B. Schuller....	5 00	G. E. Kraunske.....	3 00
Liberal League, Phila	10 00	Carl Hayden.....	2 00
Herman Wettstein....	2 00	H. D. Ballard.....	3 00
E. C. Sly.....	1 00	A. C. Bennett.....	1 00
Christ. Schweitzer....	2 50	B. A. Roloson.....	5 00
John Springman.....	2 50	J. H. Schroeder.....	2 50
F. C. Schornhurst....	2 00	C. E. Andersen.....	1 00
Mrs. Paff.....	1 00	F. S. Kouhlin.....	1 00
M. V. Dadisman.....	1 00
Leroy Dutton.....	5 00	Total.....	$174 00

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,

Sec. Freethought Federation of America,

Paper vs. Gold.

Yes, friend Peck, THE TRUTH SEEKER does confine itself pretty faithfully to the all-important business of exposing the frauds and cruelties of priestcraft and witchcraft. But through its indulgence you have been allowed much valuable space in which you saw fit, with no good reason, to couple me with Mr. Brayton. I did not, and do not altogether, indorse him. While you may feel able to cope with two at once, you will no doubt accord to me, as I do to you, the virtue of sincerity. Each of us is aiming for the best way.

You think that were I to read Bryant on "Money," Brice's "Financial Catechism," etc., I would entertain far different opinions. I may retort, that were you to read Herbert Spencer's "Maddlesome Legislation," your views might be enlarged. You are pleased to say, in substance, that I must have got my ideas as the Christian dupe gets his. Perhaps you get yours more through reading crazy Socialistic theories than from observation and thought.

In your opening skirmish you make secretary McCulloch say, in 1865: "The people are out of debt, the business of the country is done on a cash basis," etc., and then you add, "there was not a dollar of gold or silver in circulation." Unfortunately for you, neither of these three assertions is true. But it is true that about that time all our paper money not redeemable in gold was at a discount—requiring a double quantity to buy gold or anything else.

You are "inclined to think that paper is of greater value than gold." It is hard to believe that you are sincere. You cite Venice as prosperous and using no coin. Venice was then governed by an absolute oligarchy, having its "bridge of sighs," over which no offender ever returned. And what is Venice to-day?

Yes, France paid an enormous war indemnity to Germany, and she had to pay it in gold. You say that France is now more prosperous than Germany; but you omit to say that France, with a smaller population, has a third more gold than Germany and three times the amount of silver. Your statement gives the impression that France has nothing but legal tender paper.

Did you ever think of the struggle our continental currency had? How much will you give to-day for a Confederate $5 note? Oh, there is no gold backing it!

You say, "if an act of Congress can make $1 in money out of ten cents worth of copper," etc. As you assume it can, I do not see how you can logically deny the Christian dogma that a God made the world out of nothing. Congress may violate, but cannot abolish, a natural law.

Savages use beads and trinkets, and sometimes more civilized communities use "shinplasters" as money, but such kinds of money have no value outside their narrow localities. And just so with a nation.

This country is one of a number of nations seeking foreign intercourse and trade, and it is necessary to recognize the usual international measure of value to adjust balances. Fiat paper won't do. Our national shinplasters do, and possibly your ten cents' worth of copper dollars might, pass current in our own land as the beads of the savage do in his; but what could you do with them in foreign lands?

A hobby should be carefully examined. Some Liberals have, most inconsistently, two hobbies—one at each extreme. At one time they deny the right or justice of any government at all; at another time they advocate a government to run and control everything and supply everybody with an unlimited amount of free money. Now, our general government does not own everything in the land; but, with the help of the many state and municipal governments, it exercises the power of taxing about everything heavily for everybody's protection, and almost everybody is pleased with its extravagant wisdom. And some Liberals hold that when a man owns a house that has increased in value, he should hunt up the men who worked on it and divide the gain with them. Well, I haven't spent any time in that business.

I deprecate contentions between Liberals. Our united and untiring force should be directed against the octopus-like priest, who is a robber from the beginning. The most important money question is, how to accomplish the just taxation of the millions of church property. I have asked many Protestants, in view of their fears of the growing influence of the Catholics, why they do not favor taxing all church property as a means of checking them? But I find Protestants generally too meanly selfish to accept the suggestion. L. G. REED.

The Brooklyn Philosophical Association.

EVOLUTION AND CREATION.—THE PAINE MONUMENT.—A GRAND CELEBRATION.

It was again my privilege to lecture before the Brooklyn Philosophical Association on Sunday afternoon, November 12th, and certainly I could not find anywhere a more appreciative audience, one more ready to listen to advanced thought, though all do not agree with the speaker, as will be seen by the animating discussions which take place after the addresses, which throughout the year present every variety of topic. My topic was "Evolution and Creation." One or the other of these theories, I said, must be accepted as an explanation of the universe, or else no theory at all be accepted.

The most modern, and the only reasonable theory of creation, is, not that God creates matter and its properties, which is inconceivable, but that he creates motion—that is, he keeps matter moving harmoniously.

But science in the great modern doctrine of the conservation of force affirms that motion is equally unbeginning and unending with matter, and motion cannot be created or destroyed any more than matter.

It is simply, therefore, a question of evidence. While a vast amount of evidence has been produced in favor of evolution, not a single fact has been produced to maintain the theory of creation.

Evolution is not a new idea; but it was only an idea to the Greek and Hindoo philosophers. To modern science it is more than an idea. It is a demonstrated fact.

The four great laws of evolution are, First, the law of persistency; Second, the law of variation; Third, the struggle for existence, for, through the operation of the first two laws, the universe becomes overcrowded with forms of life, and Fourth, natural selection and the survival of the fittest. These explain, as nothing else has ever explained, the origin and growth of the present cosmos. Accepting evolution, it changes all our thoughts of man's past, present and future; it gives us radically new ideas of religion, of morality, of the powers and progress of man.

To contrast the moral influences of the theories of creation and evolution, I read the Presbyterian creed, which is the logical result of the theory of creation, and over against this set the teachings of modern science, which, affirming the immutability of law, also affirms that man in and through the law can change phenomena, as is witnessed by what Darwin calls "artificial selection," and therefore man can produce changes in the universe, and so, to a certain extent, is master of his own destiny; while, according to the Christian's creed, he is only a slave bound by an iron fate, subject absolutely to the will of God, and, as St. Paul puts it, is clay in the hands of the potter.

These are the main points of an hour's discourse, and a pretty lively debate took place after the lecture. No one took the old theological ground and denied evolution altogether. Almost every one admitted evolution to a certain extent, but some of my critics wanted to mix God in with it. They didn't want God made absolutely useless and remanded to limbo. There was some use for him still, especially in the operation of the conscience and exhibitions of transcendent human genius, and changes from inorganic to organic life, and from vegetable to animal life and the origin of species, etc. In answer to these criticisms I said that evolution had not solved all problems, for the reason that man had not yet gathered all facts, but as all evidence so far taken was for evolution and nothing in favor of creation, it was but fair to presume that evolution would eventually settle these problems, and there was no need of any God to fill up the gaps, since God must be a pure assumption, while evolution is a demonstrated truth. Science does not know everything yet; it is willing to learn, but it is not willing to bar its pathway with that term "God," which represents only despair and ignorance.

But the main battle ground was about the Presbyterian creed. It was averred, in the first place, that I had no right to bring it in—it had no logical connection with the subject of the lecture; and, secondly, it did not represent Christianity in its essence; and thirdly, the Christian world to-day did not believe it, and what was the use of bothering about it. To these, I answered, First, that the creed did have a perfectly logical connection with the subject, for the Presbyterian creed is the irresistible conclusion of Theism and the doctrine of creation. If there is a God who made all things, then he is such a God as the Presbyterian creed describes, for he must be the author of all the horrors of the world, and such a God is simply a devil, and the church does not slander him. The New York Sun says that as a matter of logic the Presbyterian creed is one of the most magnificent productions of the human mind. This is so. There is no flaw in it. It is crystal clear. Grant the premise, a God, and the structure is unassailable. No Theist, and no Christian can escape it. There is no way out except by pure Atheism and the doctrine of evolution. Bring in a God anywhere, and you must bring in a Presbyterian God. If, therefore, the theory of creation must result logically in such a creed, then I have a right to produce that creed in a lecture on "Evolution and Creation."

Secondly: This creed is the essence of the Christian religion. Every statement in it is proved from the Bible. It is a Bible creed. It is the creed of Jesus, for Jesus himself taught fore-ordination. It is the creed of the Catholic church, of the Episcopal church, of the orthodox Congregational church, and of almost all the Baptist churches. It is the creed of the vast majority of Christian churches. The Methodists do not accept it. They put "fore-knowledge" in the place of "fore-ordination," but that does not help the matter, for if God foreknew all this horror and suffering, and did not prevent, then he is a helpless God. If he could prevent, and did not, then he foreordained this horror and suffering, and the Methodist God becomes a Presbyterian God. So with the Unitarian God, and all the Gods. The Presbyterian God is the boss God after all; and a creed founded upon the Bible, affirmed by Jesus as well as by St. Paul, believed in by over ninety per cent. of Christian churches—that, I say, is the essence of the Christian religion.

But the Christians themselves don't believe that creed. Presbyterian clergymen don't believe it. Then what is the result, I said. This, that Christians and the Presbyterian clergymen, in particular, are cowards and hypocrites; for they profess to believe the creed, and don't dare publicly to deny it. At this point of my answer one of my opponents became so angry that he left the hall, declaring that I was resorting to abuse, when I was simply stating a logical conclusion; for, if the Presbyterian clergymen do not believe that creed, and yet will not change the creed, but still stand by it as a church, then these clergymen must be cowards and hypocrites.

So ended the debate; but I purpose to use the Presbyterian creed every time, until the creed and the church go down together, for the church is built on that creed, and no man can escape that creed until he renounces God altogether.

I was pleased to meet Mr. H. A. Powell, who took part in the discussion, and who lectures next Sunday afternoon on "Reform in Politics." Mr. Powell was formerly in the Christian pulpit, but became too broad for that, and is now a lawyer and a political reformer. He is elected member of the Constitutional Convention, and I think we can rely on him to do some good work there for Free-thought. This convention is a matter of great importance to Freethinkers, and it must be carefully watched, and we must be on the ground to see if we can't get impartial taxation into the constitution. We must not be idle in this matter. We must see upon whom we can rely, and organize our forces.

The Brooklyn Philosophical Association in a public-spirited and generous manner has resolved to renovate Paine's monument at New Rochelle. Moss and lichen have gathered upon it of late years and the letters are somewhat obliterated. The association proposes to put letters of gold upon the monument, so that the memory of the great hero of Freethought may be the better preserved. This will be done the coming spring; then, when the decoration is complete, there will be a grand celebration around the monument the following Decoration Day. Let this be a noble and beautiful occasion indeed for Freethought. Let us gather from far and near; let us make this a day to be remembered. Bring flowers and cover the monument with all the glorious wonder and wealth of spring. Let us make that monument resplendent to the eyes of this generation. Let us show how deeply we love and honor this man, who sacrificed everything for freedom and justice. Let the Liberals of Brooklyn, New York, Newark, and all the surrounding country, come to this great gathering. Let New England, Boston, and Paine Hall send their delegations hither; for surely the glory of our new republic depends not simply on the battles of the great war, but upon the ideas that throbbed in the heat of the conflict; and who has given the world nobler ideas, more inspiring thoughts, more just and sublime sentiments, than the author of "Common Sense," "The Rights of Man," and "The Age of Reason"? Let us gather the flowers, let us strew his grave—let us symbolize thus the brightness of our memory and our hope.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Mr. Westbrook Writes About the Sunday Opening of the World's Fair and the late Congress of the American Secular Union.

Well, the Jackson Park Fair has come to an end—rather untimely, because of the brutal murder of the mayor of Chicago by one of the brutes. I can not call it an International or World's Fair, nor even a United States or National Fair, because, either through neglect or design, Jackson Park was never turned over to the Federal government for the purposes of the exhibition, and the commissioners had to be subject to the municipal laws which governed that suburb of the Mushroom city. The federal government had no jurisdiction over the grounds upon which the Fair was held, and therefore could only cover up its exhibits, and thus show what respect it could, for the more than two-thirds vote of Congress, appropriating $2,500,000 to the Fair on the condition that the gates should be closed on Sunday. It is worthy of note that an effort was made to get a repeal of this act of Congress after it had nearly a year to consider, but it failed to even get it out of the hands of the committee. Judges Wood and Jenkins, of the federal court, made a fair and square decision in favor of the condition made by Congress, but were over-ruled by Judge Fuller, who happens to be chief-justice, on the merest technicality. The remark about injunctions made by him in his decision, a boy who had been in a lawyer's office six weeks could successfully contradict! The decisions of the obstinate, local, petty Judge Stein, and of the incoherent local Judge Goggin, are not worth even a passing notice. But the most remarkable action was, at last, taken by the national commissioners by an almost unanimous vote, and was soon followed by the Chicago local commissioners, to close the Fair on Sunday. But then two local judges would not let them close. The commissioners had been "raised by their own petard!" This playing "fast and loose," and performing divers "somersaults," and "ground and lofty tumbling," was most marvelous to behold. The Jackson Park Fair kept its gates open until the last, because Judge Goggin decided not to hear the application for a vacation of Judge Stein's injunction until some weeks after the final closing of the Fair by limitation of time. But the question of Sunday closing was really decided by the people who were most interested in the matter; to wit, the large and influential body of representative exhibitors, who covered up their exhibits on Sundays. This killed Sunday opening. The people would not pay to gaze mainly upon a great sea of canvas, and the working people were not so zealous for Sunday education after all. When the commissioners found that the "gate money" would not pay, they voted to close. The whole management was a blunder, which, as Tallyrand said, was sometimes worse than a crime. Indeed, they were guilty of crime, too, in violating a contract made with Congress, not to open the Exhibition on Sunday.

And now to call attention to certain things I desire to mention, I must necessarily introduce certain personal matters, which I deeply regret. In September, 1892, I was officially invited by the Board of The American Secular Union to make a speech at the annual Congress, to be held in Chicago in October. I promptly accepted, and gave as my subject "The Sunday Question." During intervals of a protracted illness I made notes for my coming speech, but about a week before the Congress met I was forbidden by my physician to go to Chicago because of my increased illness. Sick as I was I called a stenographer and put my rough notes into a written speech. I sent this to the officers of the Secular Union and requested that my type-written address should be read to the Congress. Just before the meeting I received a postal card from a member of the board saying, "You are announced for Monday afternoon and program already out." Another postal card from the same person and same date said, "I am informed you are not coming, but send your lecture. Your picture is already in the hands of the Inter-Ocean. Come if possible."

Well, my request was not granted; my speech was not read, nor did I ever receive any explanation or apology. Personally I did not care a fig about the refusal, but there was a principle involved. I was the last preceding President of the American Secular Union and had been advertised as one of the speakers, and in my unavoidable absence I had a right to have my speech read by a substitute.

The Congress had no more right to deny this than they would have had to seize me by the collar and thrust me from the platform had I been present and attempted to deliver my address. It was, however, soon printed in the newspapers in extenso, without any thanks to the Congress. No Roman Catholic council, no Presbyterian synod or assembly, no Baptist convention, no Methodist conference, no Episcopal convocation, would have been so mean, narrow, intolerant, and bigoted as to treat a fellow-member with such contempt. Where were all their boasted professions about free thought and free speech? Orthodox Christians are sometimes very tyrannical, but if you want to find an example of doubly-distilled arrogance you must go to a handful of such extremists as controlled the American Secular Union Congress of 1893. I shall not give even a summary of my rejected speech, but shall call attention to a few points. Was not a very large majority of the exhibitors as I claimed conscientiously opposed to the Sunday opening? Did they not show it by covering up their articles? Had they not a right to do this, and were they not bound to do it, granting them even ordinary honesty and sincerity? Have we not reason to believe that multitudes "boycotted" the Fair by staying away? Did I not give warning of all this in my suppressed speech? On the Sundays that the gates were open there was, in the aggregate, a heavy financial loss to the Fair. The Freethinkers seemed to exert no influence whatever. They rather helped the Sabbatarians by their extravagances. They were not even allowed, on a week day, to hold a meeting in the Fair buildings, though all sorts of pagans were allowed to do so. They had to hold their Congress outside the gates in a remote part of the city, and pay for their private hall. When, in their Congress of 1892, they upset what had been done during the Centennial Fair in Philadelphia by the largest and most intelligent body of Freethinkers ever assembled in the United States, by amending (?) the Constitution so as to abandon all laws regarding Sunday, the last nail was driven into the coffin of the American Secular Union, and it became auxiliary to the Anarchists. But it makes very little difference where the corpse goes, as very many of its old friends pronounce it an offense. The financial receipts were so small in 1892 that the society seemed to be ashamed to publish them, and, in 1893, aided by the plea of the great demands for money to pay the lectures at their Congress, they raised, if I remember correctly, about $600. The receipts for 1894, I predict, will not be sufficient to furnish the secretary with pin-money. But the point I desire to emphasize is that the principles and policy I advocated in the suppressed speech have been proved by experience to be correct. If any one cares to read it he can find it in The Investigator and Progressive Thinker of November 2 and November 12, 1892. I would not change a word if I had the address to make to-day. I virtually said to Sabbatarians and to so-called Freethinkers, "a plague on both your houses!" You are both wrong. Neither of them has anything to be proud of in the matter of success. We do not want a Jewish or Puritanic or a religious Sabbath at all as a matter of legislation, but we want a secular Sunday established by law. Well, the Sunday show business of Jackson Park is now over. The gates were opened on Sunday at a heavy financial loss by a vote of the commissioners, and they were ordered to be closed by a vote of the same commissioners, but they would not close. The local judges having exclusive jurisdiction of Jackson Park said, "No—not until after the great exhibition dissolves." Now let us see whether the commissioners will refund the $2,500,000 they received from the United States government on condition of Sunday closing, or whether they prefer to go down in history with an infamy for which the English language has no word expressive enough to properly characterize. It is enough for me to claim that the principles and policy of my suppressed speech have been vindicated by the facts of history. The American Secular Union has done almost nothing in two years to advance the Nine Demands. A national society whose fundamental principles can be "amended" by a handful of cranks, without even giving the required notice, and that really does so little legitimate work deserves to die.

Requiescat in pace! R. B. WESTBROOK.
Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 10, 1893.

Kansas Notes.

The Catholic church at Newton recently caught fire on Sunday, and was damaged $2,000.

The Atchison Globe gives this sensible advice: "Instead of counting up those who belong to you in the next world, count up those who are left to you here."

In Kansas, when pious people lay aside dancing, they invariably resort to kissing parties for amusement. In a religious community in Brown county the church people waged war against dancing, and now kissing parties are held in the church.

A fair-sized audience, composed of the most intelligent people of the city, greeted Col. R. G. Ingersoll at the opera house in Atchison on the evening of October 21st. His subject was "Myth and Miracle," and a number of prominent citizens expressed themselves as being favorably impressed with the colonel's logical sentiments. The lecture has doubtless set many to thinking. The beautiful word pictures that illuminated the discourse charmed the audience. A number of people came overland a distance of twenty miles to attend the lecture. It was observed that several ministers were present.

Hon. Sol. Miller, the oldest and best known journalist in Kansas, in his paper, the Kansas Chief, thus refers to Lincoln's religion: "Our own belief, from what we have heard from authentic sources, and from the cast of his features, is that Lincoln was pretty much of a Freethinker, and did not have very much faith where there was no reason; but that he respected the beliefs of others. During the great struggle which occupied the whole of his administration, he realized that the country needed the assistance of all classes of people, and that the Christian churches were a mighty power being exerted for the preservation of the nation. In his speeches and writings he partook of the spirit of these people. He may not have believed as they believed, but he had a feeling in common with them, that toned his language in accordance with their beliefs. In time of great danger men naturally hope for or desire the aid of some mysterious power higher than themselves. It does not always signify, when a man asks for the prayers of Christian people, that he believes in the efficacy of prayer. But he feels that there is strength in the sympathy of those who do believe in it. A man may appeal to God, who does not believe in a God. Or a man may believe in a God, but not in religious creeds."

Atchison, Kan.

GEORGE J. REMSBURG.

Churchly Purpose and Performance.

Max O'Rell has been in South Africa. Piety there is six-ply. People would come to his hotel and request that they might kneel and ask God to convert him. In the Transvaal many of the Boers are "opposed to railways and telegraphs because they are not mentioned in the Bible."  How Christianity "elevates woman" in Japan is told by the Buddhist Kay. Some years ago an American woman, a procuress, went to Yokohama, and shortly after her arrival no less than fifty young daughters of respectable families disappeared. "Again, the foreign roughs, mostly, perhaps, the sailors going to the public bath-houses on pretense of bathing, often forcibly break into the women's department, and attempt to outrage their persons. From this horrible indignity Japan has no protection."  Rev. Nehemiah Boynton gives these directions how to make and can for winter use imbeciles and Christians: "Have your beliefs and have your doubts. Believe your beliefs and doubt your doubts. Never doubt your beliefs, and never believe your doubts."  We hear that the librarian of the Milwaukee City Library has decided that the Freethinkers' Magazine is not a fit publication to appear in the reading-room of that library.  Isaiah Kunzman, who keeps a small fancy goods store at 183 Grand street, New York, was arrested on Sunday. The detective is still at large. Why is not a handkerchief a merchantable commodity on Sunday as much as a newspaper, a pound of grapes, a hotel dinner, a car ride, or a sermon?  Canon Fisher, of Bournemouth, England, says: "Only a fortnight since, on my way to church, a boy offered me a newspaper for sale. Steady, concerted action must be taken to put that kind of thing down. . . . The sea and cliffs are tempting enough to keep many persons from church, and we do not want Sunday newspapers to increase the temptation." Cannot God's gospel hold its own in competition with a newspaper, the production of frail man?  Says the Church Times (England): "Every possible endeavor should be made to pass a restraining measure by which the church may be saved the indignity of having her affairs managed by Jews, Agnostics, and nondescripts." Probably it would not do any good to advise the divorce of church and state while American militant Christians want to have them married here.  Rome, November 5th.—A peasant boy visiting with his mother in Palermo was stricken with cholera on Thursday. When he fell in cramps and cried out for pain, the mother thought him possessed of a devil. She carried him to the convent of St. Antonio and begged the monks to drive the evil spirit out of him. They placed the boy in the middle of the church, surrounded him, and for hours said prayers and incantations over his body. The boy died in agony on the floor of the church. The municipal government in Palermo has begun an inquiry with the view of punishing the monks.  Local "Sabbath" committees auxiliary to the Wisconsin Sabbath Association have been organized during the last few weeks in Appleton, Wausau, Green Bay, Stevens Point, Tornado, Sparta, La Crosse, Racine, Janesville, Platteville, and Beloit. In each case the committee means a confederation of churches, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Young Men's Christian Association, Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, Epworth League, et al. These committees appoint sub-committees which attend to the various details of the "Sabbath reform" work. Do friends of Sunday liberty realize what this systematic propaganda portends?

It is perfectly safe to say that such union of church and state as is pleasing to the Catholic hierarchy must be offensive to Freethinkers and inimical to the liberty and prosperity of Americans. In a paper entitled, "What America Owes to Christianity," read in the World's Parliament of Religions by Prof. Thomas O'Gorman of the Catholic University of Washington, this occurs: "Such a wide and deep Christian life in the component parts of the state cannot but influence the state itself; of what I should call the State's Christianity, I give the following evidences:

"1. Not only does the federal government make Sunday a legal day of rest for all its officials, but the states have Sunday laws, which do not enforce any specific worship, but do guard the day's restfulness. Moreover, certain religious holidays are made legal holidays.

"2. Presidents and governors in official documents recognize the dependence of the nation on God and the duty of gratitude to him. As notable examples I will cite Washington's first and last addresses, Lincoln's second inaugural and Gettysburg speech, and Cleveland's second inaugural.

"3. Our courts decide questions of church discipline and property that come before them according to the charter and the constitution of the church in litigation.

"4. The action of Congress in regard to Mormonism is an upholding of the Christian marriage, and in all the states bigamy is a crime. Immorality is not allowed by the civil power to flaunt itself in public, but is driven to concealment, and the Decalogue, inasmuch as it relates to the social relations of man, is enforced.

"5. Celebrations of a public and official character, sessions of state legislatures and Congress are opened with prayer. Chaplains are appointed at public expense for Congress, the army, the navy, the military and naval academies, the state legislatures and institutions. When Franklin moved for prayer in the Federal Convention he gave the following reason: 'How has it happened that we have not hitherto once thought of humbly applying to the Father of Lights to illumine our understandings? The longer I live the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs the affairs of men.'

"6. More than once it has been decided by courts that we are a Christian people, and that Christianity is part of our unwritten law, as it is of the common law of England."

Lectures and Meetings.

FRANKLIN STEINER desires to come East this fall and winter on a lecture trip, and would like to secure many engagements. His terms are very reasonable, and he should be kept busy. Address him at Des Moines, Ia.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York:

November 17th.—Col. H. Charles Ulman, "The Rights of Man."

November 24th.—Prof. A. L. Rawson, "The Dualism of Consciousness."

J. E. REMSBURG recently held a debate with a Mormon elder at Tilden, Neb. He has the following dates in that state:

Cambridge, " " 18, 19 Danbury, " " 02

When these appointments are filled he will speak in Kansas.

John R. Charlesworth is now in the East. The following appointments are on his list, and friends along the route desiring lectures should address him at once:

" 19 Boston, Mass. | Dec. 3 Alliance, O.
Nov. 26 Philadelphia, Pa. | " 14, 15, 16, Waterloo, Ind.
" 17 Chicago, Ill.

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Association holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of Lectures for November:

November 19th.—Mr. H. A. Powell, "Reform and Politics."

November 26th.—Mr. S. P. Putnam, "Rights of Man."

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, will meet on and after October 17th in the Skerrett Building, northeast corner of Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock. Lectures for this month:

November 21st.—Ida C. Craddock, "Survivals of Sex Worship in Christianity and Paganism. What Christianity Has Done for the Marital Relation."
November 28th.—Mrs. C. B. Kilgore, "The Congress of Religions."

THE Ohio Liberal Society meets in College Hall, 168 Walnut street, Cincinnati, Sunday evenings at 7:45, prompt. Admission is free. Program to December:

November 19th.—Allen O. Myers, "Was Judas Iscariot a Traitor?"

November 26th.—Mrs. A. L. Fealy, of Dayton, O., "Truth and Fallacy of Christian Science"

THE Science Sermons Society has been organized in New York city, to hold Sunday evening meetings in the lecture room of Dr. Collyer's church, Park avenue and Thirty-fourth street. The lectures on "Life and the Conditions of Survival," provided for the Brooklyn Ethical Association, will be repeated in the New York meetings, and other lectures of similar trend will be given in alternation with them.

THE Pittsburgh Secular Society meets in Curry University Hall, Sixth street, near Penn avenue, every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Letters of Friends.

It Will Astonish the Pious Texans.

YEGUA, TEX., Nov. 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your book to hand. I like it very much, but I fear that I will find poor sale for it here, as everybody here believes in the Bible. I have been in the book business four years. I find that religious works sell the best. This is my first year to sell religious works, but I had to do it, as I am unable to perform manual labor and have been for ten years. I taught school until four years ago. As it happened, the trustees of the last school that I taught were religious fanatics, and when they found that I did not believe in the Bible they tried to take the school from me on the grounds that I was an infidel, but the county judge sustained me, not that he was a Freethinker, but because he saw that he could not suspend on religious grounds.

I have been selling the "Beautiful Story of the Bible," it is a picture-book. I am going to try to sell this one to the same parties that I sold the other to; maybe if they will read and compare them it will do some good.

W. H. L. BARNHILL.

He Helps Twice Who Helps Quickly.

ARCADIA, LA., Oct. 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am one of THE TRUTH SEEKER family, and am also the victim of one of the most destructive hail storms of which I have any knowledge. Total destruction marked its trail. Hail stones four and a quarter inches in diameter fell. All our crops were entirely destroyed. Sweet gum trees ten inches in diameter have died from the effects of the hail. Pine trees two feet in diameter have gone the same way. The hail fell May 30, 1893, and we planted our crops over in June and worked them well, but they have made nothing. We have done the work to make two crops, but the drouth has cut off late crops, so we will gather nothing. A living we must have, and I write this letter to you all to see if I can get some help. I am not a lazy man, but am a poor man; have helped to raise seventeen children, seven of my own and ten orphans; had my place destroyed by hurricane in 1867, and in 1886 my house and all else I had were burned down. Now, if any of you see fit to help me it will be thankfully received. I am an infidel; never belonged to any organization, never was drunk, never heard a case tried in court, and never had a fuss with my fellow-man. I have always helped in every reform movement that came in my reach to the full extent of my ability. If any of you feel willing to help me a little, take out money order on Arcadia, payable to L. P. Crossland.

L. P. CROSSLAND.

Pleased With the Congress, On the Whole.

OWATONNA, MINN., Oct. 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1.50 to renew my subscription for six months. I have never written anything to THE TRUTH SEEKER before, but am going to venture a few lines this time, even though it should get no farther than the wastebasket. Will first say that J. E. Remsburg delivered a lecture here on October 18th to a good-sized audience, and I think this was the first Freethought lecture ever delivered in this city.

Would also like to say that I attended the Congress of Freethinkers at Chicago, and in the main was much pleased with the program, and most of the speakers were very good. But I am sorry to say that there were some in the audience claiming to be Freethinkers who breathed the spirit of Anarchism in declaring that the government as well as the church should be destroyed, on account of the close connection between the two. Now, I do not believe anything can be more damaging to the progress of Freethought than expressions of Anarchism or disloyalty to our government, and I feel like giving a word of warning to all true Freethinkers. Let us show to the world by the example of our lives that we believe in truth, justice, and humanity; that we are moral, honest, and law-abiding citizens, and that we seek a remedy for all wrongs in a peaceful way. By so doing we shall eventually command the respect of the world. To the working people who complain of distress, let me say that I believe the liquor traffic has caused more hardship than millionaires.

L. K. JOHNSON.

Entered Into the Joy of the New Life.

PEORIA, ILL., Oct. 30, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find postage stamps for which send me "One Hundred and Forty-four Self-Contradictions of the Bible."

My transition into the new life upon which I have but recently entered, though towards which I have somewhat unknowingly and helplessly been drifting during the past few years, I feel marks a new and enjoyable era in my life and existence. For the first time in my life I am, because of the utter absence of superstitious thoughts and ideas, enjoying the life with all its surroundings given me, as I have every reason to believe was and is given for my enjoyment and improvement. My experiences in life have been many and varied. It is not my intention to enter upon the discussion of those experiences at this time. I may in the future give to the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER some of the things connected with my earlier years, which then seemed irresistibly to fetter and bind me down to a life which, because of its very nature, seemed one of slavery and hypocrisy. Also the forces and agencies which had to do with my ultimate conversion to Freethought.

I have just become a subscriber to your paper through a newsdealer of this city. I secured a number of copies of the paper from a friend. I like the paper very much, although I do not coincide with all it says. No paper can please every one, and none of us should look for a paper of any description to suit us in every particular.

M. W. SWARTZ, D.D.S.

Determined to Defy Christian Boycotts.

CODORUS, PA., Oct. 23, E.M. 293.

MR. EDITOR: For the amount inclosed please continue sending your good paper. Since taking it I have never missed reading a single item. I do not want any further improvement; in fact, I do not see how the "truth" can be improved—only continue giving us an abundance of it, and show up the falsity of orthodoxy, Catholicity and creeds of every type. So many ask in their letters, "Why don't we organize?" I say it is the best thing we could do so far as regards local organization. With whom could I organize? I stand alone in my community at present as a follower of Paine. A year ago I had two friends who possessed sense and reason instead of faith and hope. One of them moved to another part of the country, and the other succumbed to the inevitable, and, having a Christian wife, received a double funeral; i. e., two sky-pilots made a pretense of piloting his soul from this flat world through space to the New Jerusalem. Yet this man was an outspoken follower of Paine and never attended church, except in case of the funeral of a relative. Years back, for fear of being boycotted by those who say they love and pray for their enemies, I kept more or less in the background. For the past six years I have openly declared my sentiments, and attack sky-pilots at every opportunity. Wishing success to the Editor, contributors, and "cartoonist" of your valuable paper, I remain,

Yours and Liberty's friend,

J. W. F. COPENHEAVER.

A Wholesome But Drastic Prescription.

DUNCAN, WASH., Oct. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: It is just as impossible for me to keep from having something to say to A. F. F. Jensen as it is for me to believe in the sound information which he professes to find in the Bible. As for the mystery, I have never found any in the book, but I do know that the Old Testament is one mass of vulgarity and obscenity from beginning to end, and I can not call the New Testament an immaculate book, by any means. Perhaps such is what our friend from Wisconsin calls sound information. If he is satisfied with such information, and can call it sound, it is his right. I shall try to give our friend what I take to be sound advice in this letter. In the first place, Mr. Jensen, subscribe for THE TRUTH SEEKER, if you are not already a subscriber, and read it every week from beginning to end, and more particularly read the editorials and the Gems of Thought. Then invest in Ingersoll's "Mistakes of Moses." Then read your Bible and the "Mistakes of Moses" alternately and carefully. Do not mind if you find something that does not agree with your thoughts at the present time. That feeling will finally leave you, and by the time you have read that book through you will want to read some more like it. If you do this, my friend, I am sure that inside of a year you will be ashamed to call the Bible a book of sound information. You will also, I think, be sorry that you were so credulous as to want to debate on that subject with "Our Bob."

I hope you will follow this advice, as it is offered in the most kindly spirit for your good. This world is all we have knowledge of, and so let us try to make happiness and be happy. Your Freethinking friend,

CLEMEY LACEY.

Wanted, Wealth With Which To Help.

CLINT, TEX., Oct. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1, for which send copy of the "Martyrdom of Man." Was glad to see that the Liberals made quite a demonstration at Chicago, and had a pleasant time of it. My heart and sympathies were with you, although I could not be there bodily. If only I had the wealth of the Vanderbilts and Astors I would make Christianity howl. But for the present they seem to be getting the best of us. The great masses appear to prefer the slavery and degradation of superstition and the admiration and worship of priestcraft to the dignity and worth of manhood and womanhood. Look at the onward march of Catholicism in this "land of the free" and home of the slave! Satolli and the Mc's and O's have got this country by the umbilicus, and if the people do not wake up will soon have a union of church and state; our public schools will have to give place to "parochial schools," and such bad men as you and I will have to keep our mouths shut or go to jail. See how the secular press is aiding and abetting this thing. Take your leading paper, the World, one of the defenders (so called) of civil liberty and free republican institutions. Almost every issue contains columns of laudation of the doings of the minions of popery, and the titles of "his holiness," "his eminence," "his excellency" applied to a lot of crafty, designing, bigoted, fanatical Irish priests, seeking the subversion of American liberties, would lead the ignorant and credulous to believe that there were no other people of any consequence in the country.

The other day I happened to get hold of a Catholic school-book used in all of the Catholic schools hereabouts, and if you want to see what infernal rot and lies are being instilled into the minds of our children, just look into the Catholic National Fifth Reader, by the Rt. Rev. Richard Gilmore, D.D.; published by Benziger Bros.

S. L. ETHERIDGE.

The Drift Romeward

NEW YORK, Oct. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The Christian Leader of October 19th prints the following:

The Episcopal church appears to be inching along toward Rome. If some of its impatient spirits can be persuaded to wait awhile it is not improbable they may get to the goal of their ecclesiastical desire by simply sitting still in the Episcopal chariot. Mass was said with intention on the feast of the nativity of the blessed virgin. It shows that papal innovations are making headway in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Illinois, in a way that would have scandalized the whole Protestant Episcopal church in the United States thirty years ago.

In connection with the picture in THE TRUTH SEEKER comes in admirably.

The Converted Catholic says:

The compulsory submission of Archbishop Corrigan to the authority of Mgr. Satolli, the papal delegate, is the most striking manifestation of the power of the Roman church in this country that has yet appeared. Nothing like this dictation by the Roman power has ever before been witnessed in this country.

History is full of instances where the supreme rule of the pope was manifested. "Popish in all but name," says Archdeacon Farrar, referring to the church of England.

The caricature that Heston has drawn of the pope and the Catholic church in last issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER is good, also of the present situation of the Church of England. It deserves to be well considered. It is a volume of truth setting forth the plain facts. The child sucking the wolf's milk of Jesuitism; the poor bishop of the English church standing penitent with his finger in his mouth, tears running down his cheeks; the old woman, Leo XIII., with her finger pointing to papal money (pap) with cross and keys, and inscription on banner, "Death to Heretics;" the graves of the martyrs, Latimer and Ridley, who were burned alive at the stake for having free opinions—the whole idea is the conception of a master mind, and deserves recognition. It is one of Heston's happiest conceptions.

The canon law of the church is as binding to-day as it ever was, and the execution of its decrees is suspended only where it must be, and the whole work will be done in secret when Americans are unprepared.

S. R. THORNE.

Alleged Discovery of the Missing Link.

GOLDEN POND, KY., Oct. 23, 293.

MR. EDITOR: On the morning of October 19th John R. Charlesworth arrived at the hall in Golden Pond to deliver a series of lectures. We had a large and intelligent audience awaiting his appearance. He delivered a fine lecture on the Bible, and it looked as though we should have smooth sailing. However, the waters became troubled in the afternoon, and there appeared on the scene one of God's sky-pilots, commissioned direct from the throne. He heaped opprobrium upon the Atheists, Infidels, and Freethinkers of the world, and denounced in the bitterest terms all such men as Paine, Ingersoll, and especially Charlesworth, the two-legged brute, and Darwin, the stinking Evolutionist, who had the audacity to dispute the word of God on the creation of man, and to attempt to show that man had evolved from protoplasm. Darwin had utterly failed to show the link that connected the monkey with man. Now I hope the Christian world will stop its howling about this missing link, and credit Mr. Charlesworth with its discovery in the person of the Rev. Mr. Bently, the sky-pilot, commissioned by God. I venture the assertion that friend Charlesworth will complain if they cheat him out of this discovery.

After the missing link had been discovered, the reverend disappeared and was not seen on the premises again. So we had as fine a time as we could have wished. The Freethinkers of this county are well pleased with Mr. Charlesworth, and we recommend him to all Freethinkers as one of the ablest debaters and lecturers that we ever had the pleasure of hearing.

Yours for Liberty, Z. T. BOGARD.

A Free Field and no Favor.

CATHLAMET, WASH., Oct. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. W. W. Morris, in your issue of October 14th, finds fault with your paper and also the Investigator because they are true to themselves; because they are true to their principles, true to Liberalism; because they know that a man can be a Democrat and a free-trader, an indorser of the Jeffersonian doctrine, and still be a good citizen, an excellent neighbor, and a progressive Liberal.

The fault lies not so much in what he has written as the manner in which it is written. To use his own words, he (meaning Mr. W. W. Morris) gives timely warning, or notice, that if those Democratic free-traders' communications are printed in Freethought papers he will withdraw his patronage. Dear me!

If his communication of Oct. 14th, under the heading of "Roman Catholic Office-Holders Dangerous," is a fair sample of his efforts, of his support, his patronage, the sooner he withdraws his subscription the better, and with it his communications. If that is the best he can do I could form no estimate of his worst. If the future of either of the papers he names depended upon what he could furnish in the way of readable matter we would be in a deplorable state of ignorance.

If Mr. W. W. Morris had been one of the instruments through which all of the Freethought papers had found their way into every home, it would not justify him in his slanderous attack on Democracy as it is understood to-day. If the gentleman in question is a Liberal he is not a success. He is what people who support honestly the party now at the helm of state would call a monumental piece of ignorance and egotism, who does not know the difference between free trade and free importation of labor.

For the benefit of that gentleman I will state that there are others who subscribe, who give their patronage to Liberal papers—by Liberal I mean Freethought journals—who take as much, or more, delight in reading these than he does because they would not withhold their support from so good a cause for such a trifling matter as that for which he threatened to withdraw his.

So I think it is the duty of an editor to his subscribers, who look to him for news, who look to him for pointers, to enable them to hold their own with priests or politicians; and he can do all this and more if he knows how to be Liberal.

GEO. A. CASHEL.

In Death Vindicating Principles Accepted in Life.

ROYERSFORD, PA., Nov. 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Having read your paper for some time pretty regularly through the kindness of your subscriber of very long standing, Mr. R. H. Kline, of Spring City, Pa., who, by the way, is the only open and above-board Liberal of his locality, I would, on his advice, write you a few lines of encouragement. Our town of Royersford lies just across the Schuylkill from Spring City, and, although the two contain about three thousand people together, you could scarcely find two more church-ridden towns in three states, not excluding Brooklyn, the "city of churches."

Mr. Kline has had very lately a grievous misfortune to meet, the loss of his wife, but he met it as only a Freethinker can. He had a Liberal speaker to say a few words of cheer both at the house and at the grave, thereby showing his consistency to the last degree. His spouse, whose form was deposited last Sunday a week ago in her last resting place, held the same views as her husband, as does their only son, who is quite a philatelist.

Mr. Kline is a successful business man and has the respect and confidence of even the most rabid orthodox; something almost miraculous considering the state of churchianity his town is in. I would not say that there are no other Liberal thinkers, but if there are they are not as outspoken at all times as is Mr. Kline.

Born in Switzerland, I came over in 1884; having Americanized myself thoroughly and consequently I do not feel as a stranger among you. Although brought up in a Christian church, the doctrines which I thought to be true had never been investigated by me until I came to the age of thinking and reasoning, when some very preliminary efforts convinced me that there was something "rotten in Denmark." After a very short time I ceased to worship a Bible that I knew to be written by men of a very limited knowledge, and the subterfuge of ascribing it in toto to God did not go down with me any more. While still admiring some passages from a poetical standpoint I am well aware such things can be found in other "Bibles," not recognized by the orthodox. Admitting that I am not a Materialist, yet you will do me the justice to think that I am not a worshiper of Joss.

Yours fraternally, OTTO YORHO.

God.

October 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Why do we believe that the great auk and several other species of birds and animals are extinct? Simply because no one has seen them for a certain period of time, and we know they existed in the past, as their fossilized remains are found in the strata of the earth, and this is the only course reason can pursue, believe on well-authenticated evidence.

Let us apply this theory to our belief in God's existence and see how it stands the test. Ask our navigators and travelers who have been over the globe, and in every cranny and corner where the foot of man has trod, Did you see, her, or speak to God? and with a look of wonder and surprise the answer is, No. Ask the miner who is burrowing in the bowels of the earth, and resurrecting and bringing to the surface the sunbeams that were stored there so long ago, and again the answer is, No. Ask the diver, who explores the ocean's bed, and he can tell you of the denizens of the deep and their habits, but nothing of God. Ask the aeronaut, who sails over the mountain-tops exploring the upper regions of the air, and his answer is the same, no God seen or heard from. Ask the analytical chemist, the man who analyzes everything from the petal of a daisy to a granite rock, and can tell you to the fraction of a grain the elements of which they are composed, and he will tell you that he has never found one atom of God. Ask the astronomer, whose keen eye and powerful glass penetrate and search distant space, and he can explain the wonders of the starry heavens, but still nothing of God. Ask the geologist, who in the strata of the earth, as in an open book, reads of its past history and inhabitants, and he has never discovered a fossilized fragment of God. What an overwhelming amount of evidence is here to negative the existence of God, either in the past or present! And those who affirm have no evidence whatever; all they have to pit against this strong evidence is an imaginary belief in his existence; as they can no longer put forward revelation, seeing their best theologians have declared it anonymous, and nothing anonymous can be received in evidence. Ask the stony-faced priest how it comes that no one has ever seen, heard, tasted, smelled, or touched Jehovah, and with great gravity he will launch forth in a windy description of Jehovah, in which he will tell you that he cannot be comprehended by the senses. When he gets through ask him to describe nothing, and you can force him to use the same terms, as it cannot be seen, heard, tasted, smelled, or touched, and it will probably bring a startled look into his solemn face if told that the two words being identical, it would spare him the necessity of explanation if, when speaking of Jehovah, he used the simpler word nothing.

It has always been a priestly dogma that although a thing cannot be comprehended by the senses, that is no proof of its non-existence, and that if a great many people believe something, it proves its truth. And yet it is the most simple truth in the world, that although a million people believe something and another million accept the same belief, the second million do not add one iota of truth to that something. If false when one person believed it, it would be false although a billion did. I will tell a little silly story to illustrate how this theory would work if adopted in practical life:

Some time ago, as I was entering a store, a long-robed priest passed, and I overheard the following conversation between two boys: First boy: "That priest has a monkey's tail." Second boy: "No, he has no tail, and ma says he is a real nice man." First boy: "Oh, that is nothing; pa says, and he knows, that all women are priest-ridden, and"—a bright idea striking him—"what does he wear his long gown for, anyway, except to hide his monkey tail?" This staggered No. 2, and he reluctantly admitted that he knew of no other reason, and that it might be worn for that purpose. It would have been impossible for the priest to dispel this illusion, working by his own theories, as, although he had submitted to inspection and no caudal appendage had been discovered, that would have been no proof of its non-existence, and the boy believing it entitled it to as much credit as his own belief in God's existence.

TOM WALKER.

Something About Various and Peculiar Kinds of Matter.

SHERMAN, MICH., Oct. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: It is necessary when a person writes on any subject, unless he is known as absolute authority on that subject, to give reasons, and those reasons should be considered and nothing else. And a person making assertions without proof should know that he is imposing on the credulity of the people, unless they are well known or self-evident facts. Now, when a man states for a fact that man has a spirit or mind that lives after death, he is inflicting upon his auditors that imposition, and it matters not how strongly or honestly he may believe it, it is no more a fact or less an imposition. But if he gives reasons for his belief, then the reasons should be considered and conclusions drawn therefrom. I long since concluded that to promulgate a fact is was best to show that it was a fact. I wish to make a few statements, and give the reasons when they are not self-evident. All can be classed under the head of something; nothing is the opposite. Something has an existence; nothing has no existence, and so there is but one that has an existence, that is something, and that includes everything and, to use a common name, we will call it matter. This matter is infinite. It has no beginning or end. It is unlimited in amount, quality, coarseness, and fineness. But as fineness is the only quality I wish to use in this article, it is the only one I will attempt to show exists unlimited. It is well known that there is matter so fine that we recognize its existence only by the effect it has on recognizable matter. For instance, air, heat, and the like. Chemists have found matter so fine that they could not make a vessel so dense as to hold it, and only know of its existence by its effect on other matter. An example of this class of matter is seen in gold-bearing quartz. As the gold could not have been there when the quartz was formed, consequently it formed afterward, and as gold could not pass through the quartz in that form, the elements then must be so fine that they could pass through, and when they came together in the small crevices they united and formed gold there. Again, a company of people in a room may be in a great state of hilarity. A stranger enters, and they all become sedate. There has something passed to them that has produced this muteness, and if something, it is matter and so fine that is far beyond our comprehension. Another, one person may be sitting in a chair suffering from acute rheumatic pains or other disease; another man in the room places his hands on the invalid's head, holds them there a moment; then takes them away; the invalid gets up and walks away free from all pain or disease whatever. Some would call this a miracle, and probably it is as much of a miracle as there ever is, but it is no miracle at all. This invalid lacked something that was necessary to make his system move on all right; the operator possessed that something to excess, and when he put his hands on the invalid's head he imparted to him that something needed. It united with the system and all went on lovely, and this something was matter too fine for our comprehensibility. I think the above shows that if matter is not infinitely fine it is much finer than we can comprehend. We all know that everything that has life starts from a seed or germ, except, perhaps, that of spontaneous growth that has not formed sex or species. The vegetable has only a physical existence, which has only the power to attract matter such as will promote its growth and carry on its regular routine of life. The animal has in addition to the vegetable a nervous arrangement, through which the senses act, and in which all the sensualities are located. This the sensualist contends is all there is of animals.

That there is something more in animals is quite apparent, but I will consider only one class in this article, that is, man. That something more I will call mind, and the properties of this mind are its reasoning, its intelligence, its thought, its calculation, its comparison, its will, and many other things. Some think that memory and the affections are part of the mind, but I am inclined to think they are not, though they may be used by it sometimes. We will call the other physical, and in it are combined all the senses and sensual passions. This physical man grows up developing the different senses and sensualities. Until it is of quite a size, it has no apparent idea of right or wrong; it shows only a wish to gratify its own selfish desires. After a time we discover reason, judgment, calculation, and the like, displayed lightly. The physical man grows on to maturity, developing all the passions that belong to it, drawing from its surroundings the matter that makes it and supports it. At this stage we begin to discover mind taking form. It displays judgment, thought, reason, calculation, and such in a small degree, for it is only in its infancy. But we observe that it grows, drawing from its environments the fine matter that makes its growth. It is often noticed trying to govern the passions of the physical, but it seldom succeeds, as it is young and not strong, while the physical man is of mature age and strength. But as the mind grows stronger we sometimes see it governing the physical passions and at other times yielding and giving them full sway. In many we find the mind increasing and continually growing stronger, while the physical does not increase, but is on the wane; and frequently, when the physical body is weak and nearly defunct from old age, we find the mind active, energetic, deeper in calculation, further-reaching in its plans than ever before. In the life of David we read that when his passions were gone, his physical body almost dead, he called his son and made him swear to take vengeance on his enemy, showing that his mind was as active and strong for vengeance as ever. We read of some of our greatest philosophers and deepest-minded men making the greatest observation of a life-time near death. And we hear that Vanderbilt laid a greater plan to accumulate wealth when he made his will than ever before.

And now it seems to me that if mind was the consequent of physical action, it would lessen when the physical man began to wane, but the fact is exactly the opposite. No effect can be greater than the cause unless it itself becomes the cause, then it is entirely free from the first cause. It is well known that everything that has life that gradually grows into existence, gradually goes out when it goes, consequently the mind that continues to grow until the body dies cannot instantly drop into non-entity, but must exist separately and individually. Now, what becomes of these minds? I can give only comparative reasons for imaginary conclusions. Some of these minds are made of a combination of matter, the properties of which are to accumulate wealth, others to gain praise and approbation, and others to gain power over their fellow-man and gratify all their ambitious desires and sensualities. In another class the properties of their make-up is to relieve the needy, be kind and generous to all, and so make all happy they can among their fellow-creatures. There is still another class, whose only object is to gratify some degrading desire or satisfy some lust of the flesh; and when the physical man begins to decay, the mind goes with it, and before the body is fully defunct, the mind is frequently no more. The first class of minds spoken of are made up of a kind of matter, the properties of which have no attraction away from this world, so they will be attracted to it, but as they are in no condition to take support from it, they will continue to decline, shrink away, and finally die and be decomposed, thus ending their existence.

The other class of minds are made up of the finer grade of matter, the properties of which produce all that is good, such as benevolence, kindness, justice, equality, and so on; and when the physical man dies, and it is at liberty, it has no attraction back to a selfish scramble of a selfish physical existence. So it goes on increasing and growing from the fine matter that surrounds it, too fine to be used in the coarse physical world it has left; and as it grows on it finds others of the same character and together associate, and in this association and growth expand in thought, increase in ability of enjoyment, and become greater, nobler, and happier. With them time is not noted. They know no past, they imagine no future, but live in and enjoy the one eternal present. Thus they live on until they have discarded every vestige of coarser matter and become alike. Then they unite in one and lose their individuality in one great mass of intelligence, wisdom, goodness, and happiness. The comparative reason that they will eventually unite in one is that they, being of the same class of fine matter and continually associated together, will eventually become alike, and then will unite, for we observe, and there are but few exceptions, that when two bodies are alike and their texture will admit, they will unite into one.

DR. E. B. SOUTHWICK.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Gertrude.

So fair and fragile, waxen white,
Like purest ray of mellowed light,
Or star gleam in a stormy night.
When other stars have taken flight—
Thus gently falls thy influence here,
Serenely calm, and sweet, and clear.
And we, in passing, may not fear
To say we met an angel here;
For purest soul looks from thine eyes.
Thy thoughts beyond us all may rise,
May plainly trace without surprise
The onward way to paradise.

—S. H. W.

In Yosemite.

There's a fury of foam and a lonesome moan,
And crags and mournful pines,
With a grandness and hight that seems to blight
Most egotistic man.

There maidens dream dreams with beauteous themes

Near the whispering "Bridal Veil," Feeling half-formed fears as the "Virgin Tears"
Moan out some melodious tale.

Together these stand, by the same wind fanned,
And broken, and bent, and kissed.
We wanderers weave bright our sweet story,
In the spell of the tawny dusk,

And the falls sweep on in their glory,
As ever and ever they must.

There the elements guard us an Eden,
Where an Adam may whisper to Eve,
Where the breath of a God
Never cursed the sod,
Or gave man a cause to grieve.

There birds swing high their frail cradles
Adown where the thunderous roar
Is only an oft-tossed echo
Sweetly softened o'er and o'er.

With fierce delight, from some dizzy hight,
The playful, wild waters are dashing,
With mournful and musical crashing,
In the deep of the canyon below—
Away where the rocks are but guardsmen,
Where the wild rose and lichen sweep free.
Man's vexed that his feeling of greatness
Is replaced by humility.

Fishmore, Cal.

EDNA HEALD.

* Names of falls.

Uncle Sam's Indian Schools.

A number of years ago the United States government came to the wise conclusion that the only way (if there is any) by which to solve the much-mooted Indian question was to civilize the children of the redmen by educating them. So, for a number of years, Congress has made liberal appropriations for the establishment and maintenance of the Indian schools.

At present there are about twenty schools in successful operation. They are scattered all over the United States, one being as far east as Carlisle, Penn., and others are located on the Pacific Coast.

The largest school is the one at Carlisle, which can accommodate about one thousand children. The combined attendance at all the government schools is about 3,750; but the capacity of the schools are being enlarged each year so as to accommodate the ever-increasing demand for education.

When the schools were first opened it was with great difficulty that the Indians could be persuaded to let their children be taken from them to attend the schools; but now the Indian parents are beginning to realize that their children must be educated so they can more easily compete with their white brothers.

Haskell Institute, the second largest Indian school, is located near the historic city of Lawrence, Kan. The school was established there in 1882, Congress appropriating a small sum to start with; but each year since new buildings have been added, until now there are over thirty-five buildings belonging to the school. The grounds belonging to the school comprise six hundred and forty acres, most of which is used for farming purposes. It is well stocked, and is in fact a model farm in all respects. At Haskell both boys and girls are educated, and so far the co-education of the sexes has been a great success. Haskell Institute is an industrial school in every sense of the word, for the pupils are given over to books one-half of the day and the other half is spent in the various shops and in working the farm.

Each pupil is allowed to choose the trade he or she desires to learn, and then they are required to stick to it until they have fully mastered it. The trades that are taught the boys are blacksmithing, wagon-making, painting, harness-making, type-setting, shoe-making, etc.; the girls are taught the art of cooking and the care of the home.

The Indian pupils are very apt to learn and take great pride in their work, and make greater progress in the same length of time than their white brother does.

Some time ago the school sent several car loads of wagons, harness, shoes, etc., which they had made, to the Indian territory for use among the Indians. The school is under military discipline; the boys are all organized into military companies; when any of the rules of the school are broken, the offender is tried by a court-martial and punished accordingly; the superintendent of the school has very often to mete out mercy to the culprit; for the Indians want to inflict very severe punishment for the disobedience of any of the rules of the school.

The Indians take great interest in athletic sports. They have two base ball nines and one foot ball eleven. They play with all comers, and are very seldom beaten, for when they play ball, they "saw wood and say nothing."

Haskell Institute has another novelty in the way of an Indian band of sixteen pieces. It is the first Indian band ever organized. They play very well now, and by practice they will soon equal any ordinary band.

It has often been said that as soon as the pupils leave the school and go back home they forget all they have learned and degenerate to what they were before they attended the school; this is not so, for most of the pupils take great pride in their knowledge and try to help and teach their less fortunate brothers.

Denver, Col.

WM. L. PALM.

A Sweet Offering.

Some one in New York has discovered that the editor of the Corner has a candy tooth, and ministered to it last week in the way of an extremely generous box of very choice bonbons. They are as sweet as the large-hearted friend who sent them. The donor will please accept our thanks for the delicious gift. We expect several little hands will find the way to that box, and in imagination its contents will be shared with our many children, little and big, everywhere.

The editor of the Corner feels that in nothing else is she so rich as in her hosts of friends whose pure and unadulterated affection is better than gold, more precious than rubies or diamonds.

Correspondence.

ROANOKE, Mo., Oct 8, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Is there room for one more in the Corner? If so, please permit me to become a member of your little band of Freethinkers. I am twelve years old. I have two sisters, one of them older, the other younger, than myself. They have written, each of them, a letter to the Corner. I go to church and Sunday-school quite regularly with my two sisters. We find much there to interest us. The music, vocal and instrumental, is the principal attraction. I can assure you that the story of Jesus—the crown of thorns, his pathetic and anxious pleading that the cup might pass, his despairing cry, "My God! my God! why has thou forsaken me?"—awakens but little sympathy, interest, or admiration in the minds of the young folks who attend Sunday-school. These theological chestnuts have become stale, very stale. Though we do not believe in those silly, superstitious ideas about religion so much talked about at church and Sunday-school, we do not wrangle nor dispute with those who do. Neither do they insist on forcing their views on us, but treat us as kindly as though we were known to be sound in the Christian faith.

If Christians were better in any way than many of those who are not Christians it might be claimed that there was some virtue in their faith. Our superintendent prays for God to bless everybody. Is it not rather presumptuous for him to suggest to the all-wise the importance of looking after those who are entirely dependent on him? However, I suppose it shows the goodness of his heart provided, of course, that he is perfectly sincere. If our superintendent possessed the power of doing good that God is supposed to have, he would make everyone happy; he would relieve, without any prayer, everyone that is in distress. If he did not, he is not as good a man as everybody supposes him to be. We are told that if we would become Christians God would love us more and be kinder to us. Now I think this is doubtful. Some that are unbelievers are better provided for than others that do believe.

A very kind lady belonging to our Sunday-school says the reason God does not permit everyone to accumulate wealth is because they have not the Christian fortitude to endure prosperity. Why does not God supplement his blessings with an abundance of his all-sustaining grace? That would be so much nicer than to allow his children to suffer the hardships of destitution and want. The manifest injustice of willfully neglecting to provide for the wants of those committed to his care is clear to everyone.

I hope that all my little Freethinking friends that can do so will attend Sunday-school and report their observations to the Corner. One intelligent, ingenious, courteous, well-behaved little Freethinker in regular attendance at Sunday-school can neutralize the influence of a corps of well-disciplined, hard-working teachers.

I remain your faithful ally and co-worker in the cause of mental freedom, ANNIE WALTON.

Chats With Correspondents.

ANNIE WALTON.—Children may gain, occasionally, some good by attending orthodox Sunday schools; but, generally speaking, it is a waste of time. That which is greatly needed is a Sunday school of our own, where children of Liberals may learn the truths of science from a rational standpoint. We are thinking strongly of opening a Sunday school in the Children's Corner, if we can find time to attend to it.

PRESENTS :: FOR THE :: HOLIDAYS.

In selecting Holiday Presents for their friends, Liberals should remember that good books make lasting impressions, and please as well every day in the year. A Liberal book in the right hands often changes the views of several persons.

We have quite a number of books appropriately bound for Holiday purchasers, and we will pack them carefully so they can go any distance in the mail, or by prepaid express. The following are all good books for the purpose:

The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book, in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $2.50. In plain boards, $2.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated, in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $1.50. In plain boards, $1.

Around the World, by D. M. Bennett, 4 volumes, red cloth covers, $6.50; leather, red edges, $9.50; morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers, 1,075 pages. 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Ingersoll's Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; tree calf, $3.

Ingersoll's Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1,141 pages. In one volume, half calf, $5.

Life. A Prose Poem. By R. G. Ingersoll. In color, on boards, beveled, gilt edges, 50 cents.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll. 50 cents.

Apples of Gold, by Miss Susan H. Wixon. Gilt stamp. $1.25.

All In A Lifetime, by Miss Wixon. $1.

Voltaire's Romances, Profusely Illustrated. Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Darwin and After Darwin. By George J. Romanes. Silk cloth, gilt top, $2.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Conway's Life of Paine. Two large, handsome volumes. The best and only complete life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $5.

Parton's Life of Voltaire, Of which the same can be said as of Conway's Life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $6.

Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Leather, $3; cloth, gilt top, $2.

History of Christianity, Comprising all that relates to Christianity in the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $2.

Force and Matter. By Professor Ludwig Buchner, M.D. Half calf, $3; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind. By James B. Alexander. Cloth, $2.75.

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

Asleep and Awake. A new Liberal novel. By Raymond Russell. Cloth, side and back stamp, $1.

Cosmian Hymn Book. With music to all the songs. Edited by L. K. Washburn. Cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

For Other Books See the Advertisements, or Send to Us for a Free Catalogue.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.	Elimination of Waste Substances,
The Earth.	In General.
The Chemical Aspect.	By the Lungs.
The Sun.	By the Skin.
Genesis—The Creation.	By the Kidneys.
Genesis—The Garden of Eden.	Digestion and Nutrition.
The Deluge.	The Elementary Substances.
The Scriptural God—The Creation.	Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.
The Creation of God—Abraham.	The Soul—What Is It?
Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.	The Mind.
Samuel the Kingmaker.	Sin and Salvation.
God Save the King.	The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.
Jehovah Takes a Rest.	Rational Review.
The End of National Life.	Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.
The Christian Era.	The Planetary Gods.
Organic Life—Vegetable.	Every Man His Own God.
Organic Life—Animal.	Tables {Gateways to Knowledge.
	(Morals; Whence They Spring.
	The Non Credo.
	Rules for Human Conduct.
	ILLUSTRATIONS.
	Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.
	Map of Theological Retrogression.
	Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Food and Food-Substances.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—
The Jewish Sabbath—The
Christian Scriptures and the
Sabbath—Examination of
Sunday Arguments—Origin
of the Christian Sabbath—
Testimony of the Christian
Fathers—The Sabbath during
the Middle Ages—The
Puritan Sabbath—Testimony
of Christian Reformers,
Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS. AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth; Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone; Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards? The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested? Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter, Man,
Infinity of Force, Brain and Mind,
Value of Matter, Thought,
Motion, Consciousness,
Form, Seat of the Soul,
Immutability of Natural Innate Ideas,
Laws, The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Personal Continuance,
Laws, Vital Force,
The Heavens, The Soul of Brutes,
Periods of the Creation Free Will,
of the Earth, Morality,
Original Generation, Concluding Observations,
Secular Generation, tions.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Just Out.—25 Cents—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART BOSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—jauntic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius.

Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE and OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life.

Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardener's story." Is This Your Son, My Lord? In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFSSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Li tiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Abs on; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continuity even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism.

In paper, 25 cents.

See all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

Only Authorized Editions.

GODS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

GHOSTS AND OTHER LECTURES.

Including The Ghosts, Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence, About Farming in Illinois, Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876, The Grant Banquet, A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke, The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream, and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

SOME MISTAKES OF MOSES.

Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses, Free Schools, The Politicians, Man and Woman, The Pentateuch, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Fifth, The Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty, Conclusion. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

INTERVIEWS ON TALMAGE.

Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added a Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.25; cloth, gilt, $1.50.

BLASPHEMY.

Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled in a trial for "blasphemy." Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WHAT MUST WE DO TO BE SAVED?

Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity—the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25 cents.

THE GREAT INGERSOLL CONTROVERSY.

The famous Christmas Sermon by Colonel Ingersoll, the heated replies of the ministers, and Colonel Ingersoll's rejoinders to the same. Paper, 25 cents.

THOMAS PAINE'S VINDICATION.

A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll. Paper, 15 cents.

LIMITATIONS OF TOLERATION.

A Discussion between R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederick R. Conder, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10 cents.

ORTHODOXY.

A Lecture. Paper, 10 cents.

CIVIL RIGHTS SPEECH.

With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10 cents.

OPENING SPEECH TO THE JURY:

In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

Delivered Before the New York State Bar Association. Paper, 10 cents.

LIFE. A Prose-Poem. In color, on board, gilt edges, 9 x 13 (for mantel, wall, or easel), 50 cents.

LITHOGRAPH OF R. G. INGERSOLL.

22 x 28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents.

A LAY SERMON.

On the Labor Question. Paper, 5 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (CABINET) OF R. G. INGERSOLL, 50 cents.

" " " COLONEL INGERSOLL, WITH BABY BROWN.

(A home picture.) 50 cents.

PHOTOGRAPH (PANEL), 18 x 24 inches, $5. (IMPERIAL), 7 1/2 x 13 inches, $1.50.

STAGE AND THE PULPIT.

An Interview on their Comparative Merits and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3 cents.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

Centennial Oration. Paper, 6 cents.

INGERSOLL ON MCGLYNN.

Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL CATECHISED.

Paper, 3 cents.

BIBLE IDOLATRY.

Paper, 3 cents.

THE TRUTH OF HISTORY.

Comments on the assertion by an evangelist that Colonel Ingersoll had become a Christian, had admitted that Thomas Paine recanted, and that his own children had joined the church. Paper, 3 cents.

INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS BEFORE THE NEW YORK UNITARIAN CLUB.

The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end, which speaks well for the Unitarians. The pamphlet contains 11 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

MEMORIAL ORATION ON ROSCOE CONKLING.

Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 75 cents.

GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

INGERSOLL'S GREAT ADDRESS ON THOMAS PAINE.

At the Paine celebration in New York city in 1892. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

INGERSOLL'S LECTURES IN ONE VOLUME.

CONTENTS.—The Gods; Humboldt; Individuality; Thomas Paine; Heretics and Heresies; The Ghosts; The Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Centennial Oration, or Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1876; What I Know About Farming in Illinois; Speech at Cincinnati in 1876, nominating James G. Blaine for the Presidency; The Past Rises Before Me, or, Vision of War, an extract from a Speech made at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Reunion at Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 21, 1876; A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll; The Grant Banquet; Crimes Against Criminals; Tribute to the Rev. Alexander Clarke; Some Mistakes of Moses; What Must We Do to be Saved? Six Interviews with Robert G. Ingersoll on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.; to which is added a Talmagian Catechism, and Four Prefaces, which contain some of Mr. Ingersoll's wittiest and brightest sayings.

This volume has the greatest popularity, is beautifully bound in half calf or half morocco, mottled edges, 1,337 pages, good paper, large type, post 8vo. Price, postpaid, $5.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE.

Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An Address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also COLONEL INGERSOLL'S ADDRESS AT THE FUNERAL OF WALT WHITMAN, at Harleigh, Camden, N. J., March 30, 1892. Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

PROSE-POEMS AND SELECTIONS.

Fifth edition, enlarged and revised. A handsome quarto, containing 333 pages. This is, beyond question, the cheapest and most elegant volume in Liberal literature. Its mechanical finish is worthy of its intrinsic excellence. No expense has been spared to make it the thing of beauty it is. The type is large and clear, the paper heavy, highly calendered, and richly tinted, the presswork faultless, and the binding as perfect as the best materials and skill can make it. As to the contents, it is enough to say that they include all of the choicest utterances of the greatest writer on the topics treated that has ever lived.

Those who have not the good fortune to own all of Mr. Ingersoll's published works, will have in this book of selections many bright samples of his lofty thought, his matchless eloquence, his wonderful imagery, and his epigrammatic and poetic power. The collection includes all of the "Tributes" that have become famous in literature—notably those to his brother E. C. Ingersoll, Lincoln, Grant, Beecher, Conkling, Courtlandt M. Palmer, Mary Fiske, Eliza Wright; his peerless monographs on "The Vision of War," Love, Liberty, Art and Morality, Science, Nature, The Imagination, Decoration Day Oration, What is Poetry, Music of Wagner, Origin and Destiny, "Leaves of Grass," and on the great heroes of intellectual Liberty. Besides these are innumerable gems taken here and there from the orations, speeches, arguments, toasts, lectures, letters, interviews, and day by day conversations of the author.

The book is designed for, and will be accepted by, admiring friends as a rare personal souvenir. To help it serve this purpose, a fine steel portrait, with autograph fac-simile, has been prepared especially for it. In the more elegant styles of binding it is eminently suited for presentation purposes, for any season or occasion.

Prices.—In cloth, beveled boards, gilt edges, $2.50; in half morocco, gilt edges, $5; in half calf, mottled edges, library style, $4.50; in full Turkey morocco, gilt, exquisitely fine, $7.50; in full tree calf, highest possible finish, $9.

Any of the above sent to any address, by express, prepaid, or mail, post free, on receipt of price. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Gems of Thought.

God gives nuts to those who have no teeth.
—Portuguese proverb.

A MAN, so to speak, who cannot bow to his own conscience every morning is hardly in a condition to respectfully salute the world at any other time of day.—Douglas Jerrold.

As in a building
Stone rests on stone, and, wanting the foundation

All would be wanting, so in human life
Each action rests on the foregone event,
That made it possible, but is forgotten
And buried in the earth.—Longfellow.

THE only education that can avail to prevent crime in any substantial degree must be education in the true sense, an education that is as much physical and moral as intellectual, an education that enables him who has it to play a fair part in social life.—Havelock Ellis.

EVOLUTION is not the "handmaid of religion," it is its mistress, the interpreter of theologies, and of all else that has engaged the human mind from the earliest to the latest time. The result of this is a rational interpretation of life, of mind, and of matter, and even if their genesis is never certainly determined Free thought has everything to hope, and nothing to fear, from the truths of evolution that are already established.—Charles Watts.

WE are all of us willing to accept dead truths or blunt ones; which can be fitted harmlessly into spare niches, or shrouded and confined at once out of the way, we holding complacently the cemetery keys, and supposing we have learned something. But a sapling truth, with earth at its root and blossom on its branches; or a trenchant truth, that can cut its way through bars and sods, most men, it seems to me, dislike the sight or entertainment of, if by any means such guest or vision may be avoided. And, indeed, this is no wonder; for one such truth, thoroughly accepted, connects itself strangely with others, and there is no saying to what it may lead us.—John Ruskin.

SUBTLY and slowly ideas do their work; the end may not be accomplished so brilliantly or with so much display as is the case in war, but it will be accomplished more surely and more lastingly. For the victories of the cannon and the sword are transitory and trivial compared with the triumph of a great idea. The hero of the sword is soon forgotten, and a new generation, as Walt Whitman says, wipes the slate and begins afresh. The victories are reversed, and what was purchased at so terrible a price of blood to-day is given up in blood again to-morrow. Not so the triumphs of the mind. The thoughts of the great thinkers of the past—of Socrates, of Plato, of Aristotle—live on and influence the lives of men of to-day, long after the bodies that gave them birth have gone to dust.—Frederick Ryan.

EARLY Christianity was in all its essentials a special development of the common religious ideas of Asia Minor and Syria. It was the creed of Adonis, the creed of Attis, dressed up afresh and applied with minor differences to a certain historical or mythical personage, said to have lived in Galilee about the beginning of the Christian era. Of this personage himself we know really nothing but the name or names; every supposed fact or incident related of him is merely one of the common and universal incidents related of all the other gods, each of whom is represented as being a man as he was; each of whom is slain by a violent death; each of whom undergoes resurrection, as a rule on the third day; each of whom is identified with corn and the vine; each of whom is sacramentally eaten under the guise of bread and wine by his worshippers.—Grant Allen.

THE history of persecution is a history of endeavors to cheat nature, to make water run up hill, to twist a rope of sand. It makes no difference whether the actors be many or one, a tyrant or a mob. A mob is a society of bodies voluntarily be-reaving themselves of reason and traversing its work. The mob is man voluntarily descending to the nature of the beast. Its fit hour of activity is night. Its actions are insane, like its whole constitution. It persecutes a principle; it would whip a right; it would tar and feather justice, by inflicting fire and outrage upon the houses and persons of those who have these. . . . The martyr cannot be dishonored. Every lash inflicted is a tongue of fame; every prison a more illustrious abode; every burned book or house enlightens the world; every suppressed or expunged word reverberates through the earth from side to side. The minds of men are at last aroused; reason looks out and justifies her own and malice finds all her work in vain. It is the whipper who is whipped and the tyrant who is undone.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

A GREAT BOOK ON RADICAL, SOCIAL, AND ECONOMIC REFORMS.

The title of the book is

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

The author is

HENRY OLERICH, of Hawarden, Ia.

This book is in story form, well printed on good paper, well illustrated, and handsomely bound. It is a text-book on "Co-operative Individualism." For many it is perhaps too radical on some questions of reform, but it is nevertheless eminently thought-provoking.

The universal unrest manifested by the thinking world, particularly during these "hard times," plainly indicates that our social, economic, and religious institutions are not in tune with the best thought of the age. The author vividly portrays an ideal world from which all our present social, economic, and religious evils are eliminated. For the fulfillment of his prophecy, the author does not rely on miracles, but on the advancing intelligence of thoughtful men and women. If Mr. Olerich's ideal state can ever be attained the world will certainly be a paradise. Beautifully cloth-bound, price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MENTAL HEALING.

A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power.

By LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

A Book to explain the correct idea of Mental Healing, and what may be reasonably expected to result from an understanding of its principles. Price, $2.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the
Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in
the Interest of and Owned
by the Whole People.

By HON. THOMAS E. HILL,

of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms," "The Hill Banking System," and other works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted.

This book is "just in time," is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFER-
ENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the
Initiative and Referendum,

By J. W. SULLIVAN.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR
THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE
AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Free thought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing. Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed. Price, 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

28 Lafayette place, New York City.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, 75 cents.

Not for Parsons.

THE milliner is pointed at as a thing of vanity; but she is a mighty great aid to church-going religion.—Puck.

MOTHER: Horrors! What in the world are you singing, and on Sunday, too? Little Boy: O, this song is all right. It's about the prodigal son.—Good News.

HAGGARD STRANGER: My principal difficulty, doctor, is that I am unable to sleep. Famous Physician: Go and hear the Rev. Dr. Seventhly preach. Haggard Stranger: Alas, doctor, I am the Rev. Dr. Seventhly.—Chicago Tribune.

DR. FOURTHLY: I know how giddy fashionable life is; but do you not pause sometimes to think of your heavenly father? Miss Waite: Well—er—doctor, perhaps you never heard that papa's was merely a death-bed repentance.

MR. STEINBACH: Was you to dot synagog yesterday, Moses? Mr. Rosenbaum: No. Mr. Steinbach: Vell, der rabbi says if we want to be goot ve haf to make sacrifices. Mr. Rosenbaum: Oh, I don't go to no synagog vere a rabbi talks shop in der pulpit.

MR. SANDS (the village storekeeper): Mrs. Waters, I hav in some nice bottled beer. Shall I send some up? Mrs. Waters (W. C. T. U. severely): You forget, Mr. Sands; I never touch, taste, or handle alcohol in any shape or form. Don't forget to send the large-size bottle of cologne, and three gallons of white wine for preserving.—Puck.

WE are reminded of the old Vermont story of Ethan Allen at the special thanksgiving service after the capture of Ticonderoga. The officiating clergyman was ascribing all the praise for that cheering success of the American arms to heaven. The colonel stood it as long as he could; then he rose in his pew. "Parson —," he said, "would you mind mentioning that Ethan Allen was there?"—Hartford Courant.

THE Sentinel quotes a negro philosopher of Wakeeney, known as Uncle Nathan Brown, concerning the condition of things in western Kansas. The people hired a rainmaker named Boyd, who failed and pulled out. "I low dis heah country ain't nevah goin' to get no mo' rain," said Uncle Brown. "De good Lawd, in his justifi'catin', didn't see no use ob a fall ob de heavenly waters, an' you all done sent foh Mr. Boyd. Den the Lawd said, Ef you gwine to put yo'r trus' in Mistah Boyd, den trus' Mistah Boyd. Den de Lawd pulled out. Den Mistah Boyd pestiferated wif de elements a spell, an' he pulled out. Wif de Lawd pulled out, and Mistah Boyd pulled out, how you gwine to 'spect any rain?"

VICE-PRESIDENT STEVENSON told the following story to a group of senators the other night: There was an old darkey in southern Illinois who wanted to join the ministry. He had progressed through many years of trial and tribulation, from the position of chief hog stealer and hen-roost robber of the community to the mourner's bench, to membership, to a deaconate, and finally to the dignified office of sexton and chief bell-ringer of the white folks' church in the same town. He couldn't read, but his granddaughter Lucindy could, and he made her read to him every evening from the good book. He was finally brought before the board for examination, which was conducted as follows: "Brer 'Lias, do you know the Bible?" "Yas, praise de Lawd." "Brer 'Lias, do you believe it to be the word of God?" "Yas, dat I do, praise de Lawd." "Do you believe the parables?" "Dat I do. Ever w'ud ob dem par'bles is fac's, sho nuff. Gospel troof." "Do you know any of them well enough to repeat, Brer 'Lias?" "Dat I do. I knows dem all, but dat one of Potiphar and Jezebel is de truest an' mos' powerful one ob all. Hit goes dis away. You see Potiphar was a ridin' down in his charyit f'um Je'usalem into Jericho. He drove 'long lil bit w'en 'long come Jezebel. She say: 'Witeman, gimme a ride,' an' he done tuk her up behin' him in his charyit. An' dey went er-long a lil furdur an' fell among t'ieves. An' dey say: 'Frow down Jezebel!' An' Potiphar he say: 'Let him among you widout sin cas' de fus' stone.' But dey say all de louder: 'Frow down Jezebel!' An' finally he frow down Jezebel. But dey warn' satisfied, an' yell: 'Frow down Jezebel!' An' he frow her down ergin. An' den dey yell out: 'Frow her down some mo'.' An' he frow her down seb'n times. But dey was dat mean dey warn' satisfy no how, an' dey kep' a hollerin' 'Frow down Jezebel!' An' he frow her down seb'nty times seb'n. An' of de remains dey geddered up seb'n basketsful."—Washington Post.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged

As a Missionary Document it is unequalled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by

Scripture: Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life, describes the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason," are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1894. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath-Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50

ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.

Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Wait Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10

ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.

Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK Price, 15 cts

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Convent, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The
$2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH
SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH
SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gift bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

WANTED—500,000 Freethinkers to stop at
Richter's Hotel, Cullman, Ala. 6146

PATENTS OBTAINED.

Terms Easy.
Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. BAGGER & Co., Atty's, Washington, D.C.

CHOLERA, DIPHTHERIA, Dysentery
Piles, Quinsy, Catarrh. The Antidote for $1.
Agents wanted. Dr. G. H. MILLER, 2333 Hickory street, St. Louis, Mo., former address 1441 South 11th street, Denver, Col. 20128

THE:

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position. beautiful double-sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silver case, dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $28; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.
Silver case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels $15. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5,
$4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2;
best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons,
$3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6.
Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1.15, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange,
$2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more Etched (teas only):

"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds. 20 per cent. below market price.
Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

THE NOTED SPECIALIST, For Men Only,

Is a physician of a wide and extensive practice, and his remedies are of the best. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men, as the result of youthful errors and excesses, causing Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility, Idiocy, Insanity, and Death.

To those afflicted and who are desirous of being cured a booklet of some 33 pages will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving names and Symptoms of the Complaint and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.

Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

and say you saw this advertisement in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE LORD TAKES COMFORT IN HIS ANGER AND FURY.

A third part of thee shall die with the pestilence, and with famine shall they be consumed in the midst of thee; and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; and I will scatter a third part into all the winds, and I will draw out a sword after them. Thus shall mine anger be accomplished, and I will cause my fury to rest upon them, and I will be comforted.—Ezek. v. 12, 13.

THE HEARTHSTONE

Has the largest paid in advance circulation of any similar periodical in the world.

THE HEARTHSTONE is a very large and very interesting, illustrated literary and family publication, eight mammoth pages, forty-eight columns.

In order to secure 100,000 new trial subscribers during the season we make the following grand extraordinary limited offer to readers of this paper.

FOR ONLY THIRTY-FIVE CENTS

We will send THE HEARTHSTONE for the balance of this year and all of 1894, together with Twenty Complete Novels by Famous Authors.

These Twenty Novels are bright, breezy and very interesting, are printed in good readable type, from new electrotype plates on good quality of paper, and handsomely illustrated. We manufacture the books ourselves and therefore save all intermediate profits. The Twenty Novels are as follows:

THE TRUE LOVE OF HER LIFE,
BY AMANDA M. DOUGLASS.
UNDER THE WILL,
BY MARY CECIL HAY.
WANTED—A WIFE
BY JOHN STRANGE WINTER.
ONCE LOVED NOT FORGOTTEN,
BY WALTER BESANT.
HOW HE WON HER,
BY RETT WINWOOD.
MYSTERY OF STIRLING HOUSE,
BY MARY A. DENISON.
AN ENGAGED MAN,
BY MISS EIRENE KNOWLTON.
MY HUSBAND AND I,
BY COUNT LYOF TOLSTOI.
THE BEAUTIFUL WIDOW,
BY MARTHA H. WILLARD.
A HOUSEHOLD SAINT,
BY MRS. W. H. PALMER.

ALTHOUGH HE WAS A LORD,
BY MRS. FORRESTER.
IN DEADLY EARNEST,
BY ELIA CHEEVER THAYER.
MISS RIVERS'S REVENGE,
BY HUGH CONWAY.
A WOMAN'S PLOT,
BY AMANDA M. DOUGLASS.
TWICE SAVED,
BY AMELIA B. EDWARDS.
HE LOVED AND RODE AWAY,
BY MRS. J. H. RIDDELL.
THAT LAST REHEARSAL,
BY "THE DUCHESS."
THE LIFTED VEIL,
BY GEORGE ELIOT.
SHE LOVES AND LIES,
BY WILKIE COLLINS.
LUCY'S LOVER,
BY KATHERINE S. MACQUOID.

Make No Mistake! The literary matter contained in the Twenty Complete Novels would ordinarily make twenty books similar to those sold at ten to twenty-five cents a copy, and would therefore cost $2.00 to $5.00.

Upon receipt of Thirty-five Cents, in silver, postage stamps or postal note, we will send THE HEARTHSTONE for the balance of this year and all of 1894, and all the novels mentioned above. Not one novel but the whole list of Twenty. This vast amount of reading matter will afford you entertainment and pleasure for months. Address HEARTHSTONE PUB. HOUSE, Broadway, New York, N. Y.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.
By John R. Kelso, A.M.
12mo, cloth. $1.00.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.
Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, 10 cents.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Deutsche Freigeist-Bücher.

Wir haben folgende Bücher in Deutscher Sprache welche sehr berühmt sind.

„Die Irrthümer Moses,“

Eine kritische Beleuchtung des Pentateuch für Widerspruch zur modernen Weltanschauung und Gesittung.
von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 50 Cents.

Das Weib und ihre Stellung zur Religion und Kirche am Ende des 19. Jahrhunderts.

von Helene S. Gardener, Preis 50 Cents.

„Moderne Götterdämmerung,“

von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 25 Cents.

„Wunder und Wunderthäter,“

von John Peck, Preis 20 Cents.

„Glaube und Verunft,“

oder LE BON SENS.
des römisch-katholischen Priesters Jean Meslier.
Nach dem französischen Original überfetzt von Fräulein Anna Knapp.
301 Seiten, Leinwand, $1.00, Papier, 50 Cts.

Diese Bücher sind in Papier Umschlag und klaren Druck. Unsere Deutschen Leser sollten es weit verbreiten.

Adresse, „The Truth Seeker,“

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, New York.

SURVEYORS, ATTENTION!

A rare chance is offered for a surveyor to get a

TRANSIT CHEAP.

We have one for sale, in good order, with Tripod, which cost $160. We will sell it for half-price—$80. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

$525 Agent's profits per month Will prove it or pay forfeit. New articles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. CHIDESTER & SON, 28 Bond St., N. Y.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Free Thinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

News of the Week.

EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH, as King of Hungary, has signed the civil marriage bill.

MAY wheat dropped to 68½ at Chicago on November 6, the lowest ever known at this season.

FOUR negroes were tortured to death near Lake City, Fla., for the alleged murder of a white man.

JUDGE RICHARD PARKER, who sentenced John Brown to be hanged, has just died at the age of eighty-three.

It is reported that a new Triple Alliance has been formed; Spain, France, and Russia. Object: To keep England out of Morocco.

JUDGE MAYNARD was beaten in New York by 93,000 votes, running 64,000 behind his party. McKinley's majority in Ohio is over 80,000.

THE ordinances of Newburg, Ore., forbid any person under the age of eighteen to be on the streets alone after seven o'clock in winter and after eight in summer.

SAMUEL GOMPERS was a candidate on the Republican and Populist tickets in the ninth senatorial district of New York for delegate to the state constitutional convention.

HARLOW N. HIGINBOTHAM has contributed $100,000 to the Columbian Museum Fund, and John D. Rockefeller has added $500,000 to his previous gifts to the Chicago University.

DANIEL L. DAWSON, of Philadelphia, "poet, boxer, fencer, iron-dealer, and sport," died November 1st. He was one of the most promising American poets of his years.

In 1886 Ireland had the smallest number of divorces to each thousand marriages, and the United States the largest. Italy stood next to Ireland, and Switzerland next to the United States.

FRANCIS S. WEEKS, the New York embezzler of trust funds, is now in Sing Sing penitentiary, New York, under ten years' sentence. It cost the city $10,000 to secure his extradition from Costa Rica.

THE Augusta, Ga., Exchange asks Congress to repeal the ten per cent. tax on State bank issues, saying that this war measure "should become a matter of history rather than remain an existing financial farce."

In Humboldt county, Ia., several hundred acres of land are burning, the soil being consumed to the depth of fifteen feet. Until two years ago it was Owl lake. Interesting fossil remains are being exposed to view.

By a decree of the Russian post office department all registered letters are to be opened by the postman in the presence of the receiver, and if they contain money from abroad seventy-five per cent of the amount is to be seized for the government.

MARSHALL FIELD, of Chicago, has given $1,000,000 to the Columbian Memorial Museum, on condition that an additional $500,000 in cash and $1,500,000 in exposition stock shall be given. George M. Pullman gives $100,000 of the $500,000 cash required.

LONDON Anarchists, in a meeting commemorative of the Chicago labor agitators, applauded Pallas, who tried to kill General Campos, and the unknown murderer who caused the slaughter of thirty theater goers in Barcelona. Paris Anarchists voiced the same sentiments.

LILIUOKALANI will probably be restored as queen to Hawaii. Secretary of State Gresham's report to the president shows that she was driven out of power, not by a successful revolution of the people of the islands, but by United States Minister Stevens, with the aid of the naval power of this country.

EX-CONGRESSMAN GRAHAM FROST of St. Louis has found in a second-hand bookstore a vellum book containing a map made in 1690 from the original charts of La Salle, the French explorer. On this map, at the foot of the great lake, is a trading-post, spelled "Shee-kaw-gu." This shows Chicago to be older than St. Louis and New Orleans.

UNITED STATES consul Sandberg, at Bagdad, reports regarding the cholera: "Panic and flight of Christians and Jews. Mohammedans resigned to the will of God. Rumor here that seventy-five thousand died of cholera in Mecca during this year's pilgrimage, which was unusually large. No rational attempt is made to stay the disease. At any hour that I choose to look out of the window I can see a dozen women washing clothes soiled with cholera dejecta in the river, and immediately below water carriers obtaining our daily beverage."

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 47. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, November 25, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THANKSGIVING OBJECT LESSON.

TO NEW READERS OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

We send this issue of The Truth Seeker to a great many Liberals who are not subscribers, with an earnest invitation to them to become such, and thereby help along the Liberal cause.

We would also respectfully call their attention to the many points of excellence of the Paper.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is the Largest Freethought Journal in the World.

The Cartoons of Heston appear each week, and each picture is worth the cost of the paper a year to one who appreciates plain and telling arguments against ecclesiasticism.

THE TRUTH SEEKER constantly prints the most varied and entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal. Its Contributors are all the noted Liberals of the country. All that Col. R. G. Ingersoll gives to the Public can be found in THE TRUTH SEEKER, and that Poet of Freethought, Samuel P. Putnam, writes more for its columns than for any other. The Liberal speakers send us accounts of their journeys, and the best writers of Freethought freely devote their services to the cause of Liberalism through the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Charles Watts, perhaps the greatest Debater of our time, certainly the foremost Secular orator of England, will send us monthly letters from England with all the news of our movement there, and such reflections and pertinent observations as will surely make every English Secularist living in this country and Canada want to read THE TRUTH SEEKER. George E. Macdonald, one of the rarest combinations of humorist, satirist, philosopher, logician, has been engaged to write regularly for our columns. As the "Man With the Badge Pin," he is known to nearly all the Liberals of the country, and we are willing to make him known to more.

THE TRUTH SEEKER gives all the news of Freethought, and is always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

The Sunday Question is now to the front all over the country. On that THE TRUTH SEEKER will voice the demands of the Liberal minded men and women of the country, and nowhere else will the rights of the people as against Puritanism be found so sturdily defended.

To sum it up, THE TRUTH SEEKER is the biggest, best, and bravest Freethought journal in the world, and if you are a Liberal or Freethinker, you want it and ought to take it. We appeal also to fair-minded Christians to hear our side and then decide. Bigots and fanatics, we suppose, wouldn't take it on any terms.

SEE OUR PREMIUM OFFER FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS on the second and third pages. Take advantage of one of these offers, or send $3 for a Year's subscription, or $1 for four months' trial. THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Most Magnificent Work Ever Published by the Freethought Press.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The object of this work is to present the Course of Freethought throughout the Civilized World for the last Four Centuries, from the time of Columbus and Bruno to the time of Ingersoll.

It will be a radical Historic Record of the Greatest Developments of the Human Race.

It will reveal Freethought as an Intellectual, Moral, Literary, Social, Industrial, and Political Movement.

It will show what Freethought is in itself and how manifold are its influences, and with what hope and promise we can hail its future triumph.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" will Embrace the most Illustrious Pages of Human History.

adorned with the brightest Genius, radiant with the most splendid Poetry, rich with the greatest Inventions and Discoveries and ennobled with Freedom's most shining advance.

Nothing Can be More Interesting,

more inspiring to the Pioneer Workers of to-day—to those who are still in the van for Human Rights and Progress. The struggle is not ended and what is already won must be carefully guarded. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty; and from the Past we must ever learn Great Lessons for the Future.

NO LIBERAL CAN AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT THIS BOOK.

It will contain the Greatest Thoughts and the Greatest Deeds of the Greatest Men

In One Harmonious and Magnificent Whole,

a vivid picture of man's sublimest evolution, with the added glory of

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION

from the chains and slavery of a barbaric creed and church.

THE FIRST PART of the book will deal with Freethought as a Universal Power, as a Spirit, a Method, a prevailing but unorganized Influence in every Department of Human Growth.

THE SECOND PART will deal with Freethought as an Organized Movement, especially in America and Europe; and this history is of equal importance with the first, and should be justly understood and the Pioneers of our work recognized.

The first part will embrace the following Grand Departments:

Philosophy.	Science.	Education and Ethics.	Literature.	Government and Politics.	Woman's Emancipation.
Bruno.	Copernicus.	Bacon.	Boccaccio.	Voltaire.	Madame Roland.
Spinoza.	Galileo.	Comenius.	Rabelais.	Rousseau.	Mary Wollstonecraft.
Descartes.	Kepler.	Pestalozzi.	Cervantes.	French Salon.	Harriet Martineau.
Locke.	Da Vinci.	Freobel.	Marlowe.	French Revo-	Frances Wright.
Hume.	Newton.	Combe.	Shakspeare.	lution.	Lucretia Mott.
Hobbs.	Humboldt.	Spencer.	Gibbon.	Thomas Paine.	Ernestine L. Rose.
Kant.	Lyell.	Owen.	Burns.	Jefferson.	Lydia Maria Child.
Hamilton.	Darwin.	Holyoake.	Shelley.	Mazzinni.	Margaret Fuller.
Comte.	Tyndall.	Haeckel.	Byron.	Bentham.	Elizabeth Cady Stanton.
Büchner.	Huxley.	Girard.	Pushkin.	Mill.	Susan B. Anthony.
Feuerbach.		Lick.	Tcherny-chewsky.	Garibaldi.	Matilda Joselyn Gage.
				Heinzen.	Helen H. Gardener.
					Annie Besant.

THE PORTRAITS OF THESE ILLUSTRIOUS REFORMERS

in every domain of Human Thought and Progress will adorn the pages of this volume.

The Second Part of this volume will be devoted especially to organized Freethought and the Liberal Press in modern times. The Truth Seeker, Investigator, Ironclad Age, Secular Thought, Freethinkers' Magazine, Independent Pulpit, Lucifer, the Freethinker, Agnostic Journal, etc.

It will give a history of the

GREAT INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS

at Chicago, the Freethought Federation of America, the American Secular Union, the various state and local organizations, the Canadian Secular Union, the British Secular Union, and other Liberal associations throughout the world.

It will contain the portraits of those who, up to the present time, have been identified with Freethought work—editors, lecturers, officers of societies, and those who, as representative men, have won distinction in other fields of effort. There will be the portraits of

Horace Seaver,	George E. Macdonald,	Capt. R. C. Adams,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.,	Susan H. Wixon,
J. P. Mendum,	E. M. Macdonald,	John R. Charlesworth,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.,	Mrs. Charles Watts,
D. M. Bennett,	L. K. Washburn,	Samuel P. Putnam,	Prof. J. H. Cook,	Mrs. Robert C. Adams,
Parker Pillsbury,	Ernest Mendum,	John E. Remsburg,	E. H. Heywood,	Mrs. M. A. Freeman,
Elizur Wright,	Charles Watts,	Franklin Steiner,	Otto Wettstein,	Katie Kehm Smith,
T. C. Leland,	G. W. Foote,	J. D. Shaw,	Stephen Pearl Andrews,	Lucy N. Colman,
T. B. Wakeman,	Saladin,	E. A. Stevens,	James Parton,	Lillian Leland,
Judge C. B. Waite.	J. R. Monroe,	H. L. Green,	Abner Kneeland,	Amy Post.

and other men and women who have contributed to the advancement of Freethought and whose names should be remembered throughout the Liberal ranks. There will also be about

ONE HUNDRED BIOGRAPHIES,

and in these will be given a picture of Freethought progress which will be most interesting and valuable, for it is in individuals that we find the best interpretations of the age.

The Price of This Superb Book is $5.00,

and not for the same amount of money can there be found such an array of facts, such a survey of history, and such a galaxy of Freethought.

Mr. Putnam is now devoting his whole time to this work and it will be published at the earliest possible moment.

The name of every Subscriber who sends five dollars before the work is on the press will be enrolled in this book. DON'T FAIL TO SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE.

This book will contain

Over Six Hundred Pages of Printed Matter and Over One Hundred Portraits.

It will be elegantly bound. It will be a book for the home and the fireside. It will be a book to give to your friends when they ask, What is Freethought—what has it done and what is it doing in the world?

This is the most universal presentation of Freethought ever given to the public, and no Freethinker can afford to be without it. It is a library in itself.

Address orders to

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

HOW TO GET FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT FREE

SPECIAL OFFER.

We have made arrangements with Mr. Putnam whereby we are enabled to make our friends a most generous offer.

We need more subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and every Freethinker needs "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." Not all are able to pay $5 for it, but everyone can do a little work to obtain a copy—congenial work, that will do great good all around. This is the offer:

Send us Four New Yearly Subscribers at regular rates ($12 in all), and we will send the Getter-up of the Club a copy of "FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT," FREE OF CHARGES.

And further, to aid our friends in getting this book for themselves, we will offer

To the New Subscribers as a Premium,

post free, a copy in boards of

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated

By WATSON HESTON,

THE GREATEST BOOK OF ITS KIND EVER CONCEIVED.

Or, if preferred, a copy cloth-bound of
W. S. BELL'S

Handbook of Freethought.

With these Splendid Works as premiums there ought to be no difficulty in getting hundreds of clubs of subscribers.

Remember, to the Getter-up of The Club, FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT, free.

To each New Subscriber in the club, a premium of a Dollar Book—either "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought," in Cloth—all free by post or express.

This really brings the price of the paper down to $2 to each new subscriber, as they get THE TRUTH SEEKER one year and a dollar book for $3.

A Club of Four New Subscribers and $12 ($3 only from each) does this.

We want to extend our circulation, and we want to help our friends to help us.

It ought not to be difficult to get four New Subscribers in any town in the country, especially with these Splendid Premiums to assist.

Those who get up these Clubs will receive their copies of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" as soon as the book is issued.

Those who send a Club and Four New Subscribers and $12 before the book is printed, will have their names enrolled in its shining pages.

THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place,
NEW YORK.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 47. { PUBLISHED WEEKLY. } New York, Saturday, November 25, 1893. { 28 LAFAYETTE PL. } $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - NOVEMBER 18, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

SOME HANDSOME PREMIUMS.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $6.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and S. P. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" ($5). By taking advantage of this or our Free offer of the book (see opposite page) there is no reason why every Freethinker in the country should not possess this splendid work.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" ($3). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and James B. Alexander's Dynamic Theory ($2.75). This is a splendid offer, for every one wants this book. It has over a thousand large pages and more than four hundred illustrations. It is a digest of Science, and every one who studies it cannot help but be well-informed in all scientific matters.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in board covers ($1).

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have, at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

"No Union Between Church and State?"

So said Cardinal Gibbons in his address at the Baltimore Club banquet. So say the fomenters of the God-in-the-Constitution movement. Do they mean what they say? Do they mean what we mean when we say "No union between church and state"? Is there a mental reservation behind their declarations? Is what they call "religion and the state" or "Christianity and the state," a part of what we call "church and state?"

To answer the first question in the affirmative is to compliment their honesty at the expense of their intelligence. To the second question the answer is, No. To the third, Yes. To the fourth, Yes.

Let us analyze some paragraphs of Cardinal Gibbons' address. Perhaps when we get through we shall know whether he has both feet or only one foot on the Secular platform, or is trying to kick it over:

"In no country on the face of the earth has the difficult problem been better solved than in the United States—the problem of maintaining harmonious relations between church and state. Here the church and state run in parallel lines and do not conflict with one another. The church upholds the state; religion educates the state and proclaims the divinity of the laws under which we live. Religion tells us that there is no authority but from God, and that all law is sacred. Religion sanctifies the virtue of obedience and respect for civil laws by teaching that obedience to civil authority is not a servile homage paid to man, but a homage of freemen to God himself."

Do the church and the state run in parallel lines? Should they run in parallel lines? If so, in what sense? Why should the state and the church run in parallel lines any more than the state and Odd Fellowship, or the state and an insurance company, or the state and a Freethought club? The church is a religious organization; the Odd Fellows' lodge is a benevolent or fraternal society; the insurance company is a business enterprise; the Freethought club is an anti-religious or philosophical body. But the state is something entirely different from any and all of these. The ideal state is a union of the inhabitants of a given territory. Its sole function is that of protection of the equal rights of all its members. It exists in order to prevent invasion of the personal and property rights of each citizen and of all citizens. It is a police power created by the individuals composing it. It is a purely defensive combination. Its business is to restrain those who do not respect the equal rights of their fellows. Hence it does not run parallel with the church, nor with the lodge, nor the commercial company, nor the scientific society. It has no dealings of any nature with the Christian, as a Christian; it does not teach his creed nor does it outlaw it. It does not advocate the principles of Odd Fellowship, nor favor, nor discriminate against, a man because he is an Odd Fellow. It does not deal with the insurance company; it neither gives privileges to the company nor punishes nor rewards its members, as members. It does not propagate the ideas of the Freethought club, and neither smiles nor frowns upon those who adhere thereto, because of such adherence. In a word, it is strictly impartial as between all creeds, philosophies, sciences, charities, fraternities, industries. It takes note of the citizen only when his equal liberty has been trespassed upon, or when he trespasses. This is the ideal state. The nearer it is approached in practice the less the wrong and suffering and the greater the security and prosperity of the people.

"Religion educates the state"? No, the people educate themselves. The state is not a person, to be instructed. The church educates those who are put under her instruction. She teaches them religion and so much of science as she thinks is good for them to know. The history of the world shows indisputably that just in proportion as the people have permitted religion to shape their education have they departed from justice, have they been cruel and criminal. By education we mean education, not merely the learning by rote of a few rules and tables. There are two sanctions of right action, the human and the supernatural. "When men respect human life for the sake of man, tranquility, order, and progress go hand in hand; but those who respected human life only because God had forbidden murder have set their mark upon Europe in fifteen centuries of blood and fire," strikingly says W. Kingdon Clifford.

"Religion proclaims the divinity of the laws under which we live." But the Declaration of Independence solemnly affirms that all just laws are the creation of the people. Who are right—Paine and Jefferson, or Crafts and Gibbons? "Religion tells us that there is no authority but from God, and that all law is sacred." The Declaration and the Constitution declare that all authority comes from the people who rule themselves. By which are we to stand—the theocracy of the church or the democracy of the founders of the nation? Is all law sacred? Let the victims of the Inquisition answer; and answer, Washington, Adams, Otis, Henry.

"Religion sanctifies the virtue of obedience and respect for civil laws by teaching that obedience to civil authority is not a servile homage paid to man, but a homage of freemen to God himself." We will let Professor Clifford comment on this: "Wherever the allegiance of men has been diverted from Man to some divinity who seeks his own glory, one thing has happened. The right precepts might be enforced, but they were enforced upon wrong grounds, and they were not obeyed. But right precepts are not always enforced; the fact that the fountains of morality have been poisoned makes it easy to substitute wrong precepts for right ones."

I call those religions which undermine the supreme allegiance of the conscience to Man ultramontane religions because they seek their springs of action ultra montes, outside of the common experience and daily life of man. And I remark about them that they are especially apt to teach wrong precepts, and that even when they command men to do the right things they put the command upon wrong motives, and do not get the things done."

"The state holds over the church the ægis of her protection without interfering in the church's God-given mission. For my part, I would be sorry to see the relations between church and state any closer than they are at present; for, if the civil authority built our churches or subsidized our clergy, they might want to have something to say as to the doctrines we teach, and we believe that the gospel should be free. I thank God that we have religious liberty."

Does not the civil authority build your churches, to the extent of your exemption from taxation? Does it not subsidize your clergyman when it pays public money for their religious services in the army and navy, in the halls of legislation, in penal and charitable institutions? Hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of church property is deadheaded by the state and, of course, other property must pay a higher rate because of this unjust and unconstitutional favoritism. Religion is a private affair; churches and their adjuncts are private property; taxes are among the costs of maintaining private property; under an equitable system of taxation the members of churches would pay these costs; under the present inequitable system they are in part paid by other people, and these other people do not accept the religion which they are thus compelled to help support. In other words, non-believers are forced by the state to pay their money to maintain and extend the religion of believers. Is this what Cardinal Gibbons calls separation of state and church? Or is it what he would designate as the union of religion and the state? And in what consists the assumed difference between the two, that is, between a union of church and the state and of religion and the state? Is there at bottom any difference between voting a sum of money directly into the coffers of the church and voting it in indirectly by exempting the church from taxation? In both cases the church receives involuntary financial support; that is, in both cases the state gives her money which the earners of the money did not wish her to have; that is, to put it still more clearly, the state acts as a tithe-gatherer for the church, as the thug robs the belated and defenseless citizen that his mistress may have a wine supper or a silk gown. If this support of the church by the state does not constitute church and state union will Cardinal Gibbons please tell us in what said union does consist? And is it this enforced church maintenance that inspires his thanks to God for our "religious liberty"? Very probably it is.

"Another mistake is made in supposing that, because there is no union here between church and state, we are not a religious people. I maintain that no country in the world has a stronger religious basis than the United States. Our common law is taken from the common law of England, which is thoroughly permeated with the spirit of Christianity. Where is the Christian Sabbath better observed than it is here? The proceedings of our national and state legislatures are opened with prayer, and still another evidence of our respect and regard for religion is the fact of our setting apart a day in each year for special thanksgiving; the president of the United States and the governors of the states calling upon the people by proclamation to return thanks for the blessings they have enjoyed."

Who has supposed that, because there is here no formal union of church and state, the people of the United States are not religious? Does Cardinal Gibbons wish it to be understood that the people of other countries are imbued with the idea that the separation of church and state in any country carries with it the presumption that the people of that country are non- or anti-religious? Such would seem to be a fair inference from his words. And to those who had always been accustomed to a state church it might indeed not seem possible that people who believed in religion would dissociate it from the civil power, would cast it out, as it were, to shift for itself. Had Cardinal Gibbons, in referring to this not unnatural mistake, contented himself with showing that the majority of the people of this country are not Infidels, spite of the theoretical separation of church and state, he would have remained on safe ground and we might, by ignoring his previous utterances, herein criticised, have concluded that he honestly opposes union of church and state and was trying to demonstrate that a state church is not a necessity to religion. But he does not remain on safe ground. Instead of pointing to any evidences of the religiosity of the people, as individuals and churchmen, he concentrates all his energies in an effort to prove that the nation is officially Theistic and Christian. Instead of attempting to hold up before the world the faith, piety, and reverence of Christian men and women, he talks glibly of the "common law," which "is thoroughly permeated with the spirit of Christianity," of Sabbath observance; of prayer in national and state legislatures; of thanksgiving proclamations, etc. To state it in another way: Repelling the insinuation that our (supposed) separation of church and state shows that the people of this country are not religious, Cardinal Gibbons demonstrates that church and state are not separated; that we are free from politico-religious domination in theory only, and that a people, the majority of whom are Christians, cannot be trusted to establish a government which will make religious liberty a fact. Incidentally he lets in the light upon his own utterances, permitting us to see that the word "people" in the first sentence of the paragraph last quoted should have been substituted by "state" or "government." So at last we are brought back to the perpetual contention of all who defend as just the present privileges granted to the church, and ask for more—which contention is that, while they want Christianity recognized and coddled by the state and its Sunday forced upon the people, they do not wish a union of church and state!

Are they mentally blind? Or is it moral shortsightedness that makes them talk and act as they do? Whatever the correct answer, we have one thing to do, and that is to defeat every attempt they make to bring Christianity and government into closer union.

An Astounding Proposition.

The School Journal of October 14th says editorially:

"Every public school in this country should be opened by singing:

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise him, all creatures here below;
Praise him above, ye heavenly host,
Praise father, son, and holy ghost."

So should every teachers' institute and convention. And if the teachers would discuss this at the meetings this winter and agree to do it a mighty step in advance would be taken. It would ally the school with the church—they are natural allies. Nor is there anyone to object. Let every teacher begin his day's work with these noble lines; they will ring on like the sound of bells in the minds of his pupils when he has turned to dust."

The effrontery of this is unparalleled. Its cool ignoring of all who might reasonably be expected to object is simply insulting. It would appear to have been written by some one who has never heard of the principle of religious liberty, who knows absolutely nothing of the "right of private judgment." Had it appeared in a professedly religious paper it would not be so surprising, for long experience has taught us that Christian ministers and editors are strangers to the theory and practice of justice where the church is a party in action, but to find it in an educational paper is enough to take one's breath away.

There is no one to object, we are jauntily told. Is that so? How about the Jews? Have they no conscientious objections to singing praises to a three-headed God? When did they abandon Monotheism? When did they accept Jesus? When did they admit that he is a third part of God? And what of the Christian Unitarians? Are they also without rights at the bar of Trinitarianism? There are some Freethinkers in America, and their children attend the common schools; must they protest in vain? Have they no right to demand that the teaching of theological dogmas shall not be made a part of the curriculum of the public schools? And those Trinitarian Christians who believe in the total separation of church and state—for there are some—are they also not worth mentioning?

The School Journal should understand that the public schools are maintained by all the people for the primary education of the children of all the people. Religious instruction is wholly out of place in those schools. The Bible has no business there, prayers have no business there, pious songs and hymns have no business there. You could just as rationally and rightfully open instruction therein by reading the platform of the Democratic, the Republican, the Populist, the Socialistic Labor, or the Prohibition party, as with the singing of the stanza proposed by this belated editor.

Instruction in the schools is supposed to be based upon the latest verifiable scientific data. But now it is demanded that the pupils shall be required to praise God each morning. The teacher is there to guide the child in the way of ascertainable truth. It is no part of her vocation to write upon the plastic brain of the little one the unverifiable guesses of theology, the dogmas of priests, the dream-fantasies of desert mystics. What teacher can prove that from God "all blessings flow"? Can she show even the shadow of a reason why "all creatures here below" should praise him? Does she know that there is a "heavenly host" to join in any anthem? What single fact regarding the "Father," the "Son," or the "Holy Ghost" can she put before the pupil? Does she know anything about any supermundane personality? What business has she to substitute her beliefs for the demonstrable facts of science? She may believe in a triune or a unitarian God; in a "savior," half spook and half woman; in a holy wind; in a split-footed and barb-tailed devil, or in any other figment of the imagination, and she has a perfect right to tell the children at her fireside or in the Sunday-school that these are real persons, but when she enters the public school room and ranges before her the classes composed of the children of people of various religious beliefs and philosophic opinions, she is in a new environment and must adapt herself to it or cease to teach. There she is an instructor in science, not a pleader for Theism nor an attorney for Christianity.

We are informed that if "the teachers would discuss this at the meetings this winter and agree to do it a mighty step in advance would be taken." Advance toward what? The church-state? The Inquisition? And this leads to the question: What penalties are to be visited upon the children who decline to join in this hymn? Are they to be regarded as contumacious and rebellious and punished accordingly? This would be a fair presumption. Such children, then, would be looked upon as heretic to the state religion, and for them there would be no escape from the latter-day "educational" Inquisition. Freethinking, Jewish, Unitarian parents, how do you like the prospect? What are you going to do?

We are regaled with the further information that this "mighty step in advance would ally the school with the church." Undoubtedly, as the lamb is allied with the lion. The school and the church are "natural allies"! Indeed! Evidently the editor of the School Journal wants to convert the public schools into Theistic parochial schools. Perhaps he hopes in this way to remove, at least lessen, the distance between the Protestant and Catholic instructor, as the latter now objects to the common schools upon the ground that they are "godless." They are not, but they should be.

The Change from Saturday to Sunday.

There is rare fun to be found in the attempts of the Sunday worshipers to show that Jesus in some way changed the Jewish Sabbath obligations from Saturday to Sunday. Here are some nuggets of wisdom recently mined by three English clergymen:

Rev. J. Gretton, secretary of "The Lord's Day Observance Society," in a desperate attempt to explain how the sacred attributes of the original Sabbath got transferred to Sunday, says:

"There remains but one other question. Can the Lord's day be the Sabbath day, when the one is the seventh and the other the first day of the week? I reply, The Sabbath law is the separation of one day in seven unto the Lord—one day after six and not the seventh day absolutely. There came a time when one day in history fell out, as not being; for therein the Lord of life lay dead in the tomb, and the next day—when he rose again, the Prince of life—became at once the seventh and first; and this day, thus unique and glorious, was actually the Sabbath."

Did you ever? When that "one day in history fell out" where did it disappear? In the bottomless pit?

Rev. Dr. Pope, writing of Jesus and the Saturday-Sunday question, contributes this:

"He kept the old day always and to the last. He went from its most sacred observance in Jericho straight to his cross. He left the old Sabbath in his sepulcher, but it rose again with him on the third day, now to be the first day of the week."

The old day was left in the sepulcher and it was not left in the sepulcher and when "it" got out "it" was no longer "it" but another day! What undignified pranks for a grave and reverend "duration of time" to play!

But Bishop Ryle gets away ahead of the ordinary parson and the doctor of divinity. Feebly wrestling with the same subject he accidentally hits the crazy bone of the question and this is the result:

"Undoubtedly the day was changed. It was made the first day of the week in memory of our Lord's resurrection, instead of the seventh. But I believe the apostles were divinely inspired to make that change, and at the same time wisely directed to make no public decree about it."

We think that there will be no hesitation on the part of THE TRUTH SEEKER class in this case—it will unanimously vote that Bishop Ryle go to the head. God is charged with commanding a change which was destined to result in wholesale persecution and at the same time the instruments of his will were forbidden to make public his edict because, as it would seem, it was feared that some of the predestined victims of his changeableness might possibly learn of the substitution of Sunday for Saturday and so escape the snare laid for them. A wholly baseless assumption is put forth as an irrefragable truth and then we are coolly informed that no one has or ever could have the slightest chance to either prove or disprove the validity of the assumption. In other words, men and women are to be robbed, imprisoned, and killed because they have not obeyed a law which was never published, a law of which no one knew or could know anything.

Wanted—New Subscribers.

We solicit the kind attention of our friends to the need which exists of increasing the subscription list of THE TRUTH SEEKER. There are several reasons for this, which our readers will readily see. First, It will do a world of good, by making more Liberals and by interesting those already liberal in the work of Freethought. The church is making great encroachments upon our liberties, and the people need to know about it, in order to defeat its tyranny. And those who read THE TRUTH SEEKER are a hundred times more interested and active than those who do not. Second, It is a duty we owe to our fellow-men to give them the light of reason we have obtained. Liberalism makes for true civilization, and freedom from fear of an angry God makes men happier and better. Every Liberal should do all he can to lift up his neighbors from the darkness of superstition to the glorious plain of mental liberty. And, as Mr. Wakeman says, referring to the resolution regarding the Liberal papers passed at the late International Congress: "They are the very life of the cause of intellectual and practical emancipation of the people. As such they are to be built up and sustained by constant care, payment, encouragement, and solicitation for subscribers for them." Third, An increase in the list will relieve the readers from the occasional "duns" we are compelled to send out in order to get money with which to pay bills. If we can obtain two or three thousand new subscribers, the increased revenue will make the business work of the paper easier, and we can continue to improve the paper without fear of financial embarrassments.

To reward those who will do a little for us in this matter we have arranged to take a large number of Mr. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought," and to every one who sends us four new yearly subscribers at the regular rates of $3 ($12 in all), we shall send a copy of that magnificent work free. Those who send the club before the book is on the press will be enrolled among the original subscribers and patrons in the book.

And to make it easy to get these four new subscribers we will offer them as a premium either of two splendid works—The "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought" in cloth binding. Our readers know the value of these books, and that about every Liberal in the country would like a copy of one or the other. Either one of these, as may be chosen, will be given to the new subscribers obtained in these clubs of four, and a copy of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" to the one who gets up the club and sends the money and names.

We cannot afford to make this premium to single subscribers, but to enable old subscribers and single new subscribers to obtain these and other desirable works at a great reduction, we have made a list of premiums in connection with subscriptions to the paper, to be found in the first column of the first editorial page of THE TRUTH SEEKER. We are willing to do our part toward making the obtaining of good Liberal works easy and cheap, and hope our readers will take advantage of the terms offered.

Once more we ask that a favorable eye be turned in our direction, and a helpful hand extended. As the resolutions of the International Congress expressed it, Boom the Liberal papers and you boom the Liberal cause.

Four Good Books for German Freethinkers.

We can supply, in the German language, the following four books which everyone knows to be good:

"The Mistakes of Moses," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

"Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen H. Gardener, 50 cents.

"The Gods," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 25 cents.

"Miracles and Miracle-Workers," by John Peck, 20 cents.

These are neatly printed, bound in paper covers, and are complete. Our German-reading friends should circulate these widely.

Welcome Home.

Elsewhere in this paper will be found a letter addressed to Mr. C. H. Packard, of the Snohomish Eye. It will be gathered from the epistle that the Eye has lost an editor; certainly THE TRUTH SEEKER has gained a writer of most unusual abilities and rare genius. Incidentally, THE TRUTH SEEKER's Editor has also recovered a brother of genial disposition and affectionate nature, and, naturally, most highly valued. Hereafter, George E. Macdonald, who erstwhile wore one of Mr. Wettstein's badge-pins, will devote his rare talents to aiding THE TRUTH SEEKER demolish superstition. The old readers will, we know, give him the heartiest of welcomes back to his first love, and to the new readers we can extend the assurance that they are going to get a good deal more for their subscription money than they had reason to expect. The following from the pen of Mr. Packard, in the last Eye, may serve as an introduction:

"George E. Macdonald has resigned the editorship of this paper to accept a position in a larger field—in the city of New York. The change is voluntary, and it is not without regret on the part of myself that his connection with this paper is severed. He has ably filled the position, and as friends and co-workers our relations have been the most agreeable.

"His editorial work has added much to the Eye's popularity during the past eighteen months. That some good has been accomplished for the city and county is self-evident, and will not even be denied by those who may have differed with this paper's opinion on some subjects; the amount of good accomplished is left to the public to judge. During their residence here Mr. Macdonald and his estimable wife have gained many warm personal friends, who will join our readers in regrets to learn of their departure.

"As an all-round newspaper man Mr. Macdonald has few equals and no superiors. That he is not so well known, prominent, or wealthy as some alleged literary giants who gained fame and fortune in various special fields of journalism throughout the United States, is not because he is less talented, but because he preferred to champion truth and justice, even when to do so was unpopular, rather than sacrifice principle for profit in championing popular shams, hypocrisies, and frauds.

"A word artist whose pen work in poetry and prose is noted for its brilliant originality and its rare combination of pathos, wit, satire, philosophy, humor, and logic, he is a dangerous opponent to meet in controversy. He is a truth seeker in every sense of the term—liberal, generous, open-hearted, and good natured under all circumstances, yet unassuming and unobtrusive. He is a man whose acquaintance and friendship is well worth cultivating.

"In conclusion, I will humbly beg 'Mac's' pardon for indulging in these personalities, but on this occasion I feel justified in taking advantage of his absence from the proofreader's desk and violating a long-established rule of this journal. There are occasions when it is not necessary to wait until a man is dead before giving him well-merited praise or censure. This is one of them. Too often the good qualities of men (and women too) are never discovered, or, if discovered, are never made known until after they are dead, when a good word or a kind act can be of no benefit to them.

"Mac, may you continue to 'keep in the middle of the road,' even though in your new home it leads you under the shadow of the gold-bug hive in Wall street; and may good luck and prosperity (which naturally follow) ever attend you and yours. C. H. PACKARD."

We condole with Mr. Packard, as we know what the people of his town have lost, but we congratulate the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER. With us, George Macdonald's work will be wider, broader, deeper, better, more generally known, and, we hope, better appreciated and rewarded. The people he has left with regret and remembers with affection will find that he is helping them more effectively than ever, for the basis of all reforms is as well the greatest of all reforms—Freethought. Let the Snohomishans read THE TRUTH SEEKER and their lamentations will turn to rejoicing!

Agents Wanted.

We believe that not only can good be done but money made by any Liberal who will canvass for our book "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." In fact we know one man who worked at it but a few hours weekly and sold nearly fifty copies in a month. The price is low; everybody knows the Old Testament stories, and nearly everybody would like a book applying nineteenth-century wit and knowledge to them. People like to laugh. Reverence for the Old Testament tales has largely disappeared and jokes at the expense of Jonah and Joseph and Esau and Samson and David, and the other worthies of unsavory reputation, are keenly appreciated. It seems to us that the book will sell at sight. It does here in the store. Liberals out of employment will find this a good way to make an honest dollar.

Terms to agents sent upon application.

We have received too late for this number of the paper an interesting correspondence between Hypatia Bradlaugh Bonner, Rev. Allen Rees, and Sir Isaac Holden regarding the story that Charles Bradlaugh recanted his Atheism on the approach of death. Look for it next week.

We do not wish to precipitate another panic or "object-lesson" upon the country, but it is perfectly true that there are a number of our subscribers whose time has expired who have not paid us. And it is perfectly true also that there are some people down-town to whom we owe money whom we have not paid. But it will be perfectly easy to even this thing up if those subscribers will stop at the post-office and buy a money order for $3 and mail it here. If they meet a neighbor on their way who doesn't take the paper but wants it, make the money order $5 and it goes for a year to both. But please remember that the down-town fellows here are hard up.

There is one independent editor in Hutchinson, Kansas. The Christian Endeavorers held a convention there recently and the editor of the News said: "For weeks past the city has been besieged by committees making a house-to-house canvas, insisting and almost coercing people into taking care of the delegates to the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor meeting. . . . We insist and have always insisted that if religion is a good thing, then like all other good things, those who enjoy its benefits should pay for it. It is universally conceded by all denominations that no one is capable of enjoying religion except those who are in possession of it. It is also conceded by all religionists that the world is divided into two classes, those who have religion and those who have it not. It is also claimed by all orthodox churches that those who have this religion are extremely fortunate. They not only 'have these things added to them' in this life, but they also have a never-ending eternity of bliss in store for them. Those who have it not are regarded as 'of all men most miserable.' Their iniquities are not only 'visited on them to the third and fourth generation' here, but when this uneventful life closes they have only the promise of a good fire for the rest of eternity. With the odds all in the favor of the one, and against the other, these fortunate ones are eternally insisting that the unfortunate ones should do their mite to contribute to their comfort. We have no objections to those who from pleasure, or from sense of duty, contribute; but we do object to having the people burdened with the annoyance of keeping several thousands of people at their own expense, because they are too stingy to pay their hotel bills. This thing, which we call religious mendicancy, has done more to bring the churches into disrepute than all things else."

Communications.

Mr. Westbrook and Sunday Opening of the World's Fair.

I think the officers of the American Secular Union were perfectly justified in not reading the speech of Mr. Westbrook, since it squarely opposed the principles of the Union. Did not Westbrook once upon a time call down Charlesworth for the reason that he was going beyond the Nine Demands, though not against them? Where is the intolerance, then, of not reading a speech that is opposed to these Demands upon which the Union is founded?

The Union and Federation are opposed, and all true Liberals must be opposed, to any kind of Sabbath or Sunday laws. We want no laws on the subject whatsoever, any more than we want laws to regulate our sleeping, or our eating, or our drinking. This is not Anarchy, as Mr. Westbrook charges. It is simply the democracy of Paine and Jefferson, of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. It is simply the rights of man. Can't Dr. Westbrook see that if the government has a right to enforce a Secular Sunday, it has the same right to enforce a religious Sunday? It then becomes not a question of principle, but of the wish of the majority. Does Westbrook mean to maintain that the minority has no rights which the majority is bound to respect? I wish Dr. Westbrook would discuss principles and not wants. No matter what the majority of the people want; the question is what have they a right to enforce by law?

I affirm that as a matter of fact the opening of the World's Fair was in accordance with the wishes of a large majority of the people of the United States, and there is plenty of testimony on this point, given by A. T. Jones in the American Sentinel and our own Freethought journals, and in the public press generally. As a matter of fact there were two million signatures in favor of opening to less than five hundred thousand against it.

But to get at the gist of the argument, I will grant that two-thirds of Congress, of the National Commission, of the Local Directory, and of the exhibitors, home and foreign, wanted the Fair closed on Sunday. I will give Westbrook all the majority he desires, and then ask, Would this majority of two to one have any right to close the gates of the World's Fair on Sunday? I answer simply, No, and I challenge Dr. Westbrook to meet me on that point, the question of the right of the matter and not merely the wishes of the people.

I met this question fairly and squarely before the Congressional committee, and showed that government had no more right to enforce a holiday than a holyday. I am willing to throw out the whole question of religion—although, practically, it cannot be thrown out—but let the issue be, not the enforcement of a religious day, but of a holiday.

I absolutely deny that government has any right to enforce a holiday. It has no right to command people not to work—in other words, to enforce idleness—for in order to enforce a holiday, the government must enforce idleness. It must say to all the people on this day, "You shall not work; if you work, we shall arrest you; if you work we shall fine you; we shall put you in prison and in the chain gang, and send you into exile." That is the logic of the whole matter, and there could be no more damnable tyranny in the universe than a law that shall say to the people, on fifty-two days of the year "You shall not earn your bread, you shall not labor for your families, you shall sit in idleness. Though the corn grows, you shall not hoe it; though the grass waves, you shall not cut it; though the comet sweeps, you shall not set sail with merchandise; you can take rum and tobacco and go on a jamboree, but you shall not work; you are compelled by law to enjoy yourselves, but if you labor, then you commit a crime." All business and traffic must be stopped. Only excursion trains can run on Sundays. There may be picnics and church fairs and kissing bees, prayer meetings (no, I forgot, prayer meetings are generally such hard work that I guess they'd have to be forbidden); there may be all sorts of pleasure parties but no toil, no matter how much man needs work, he must not do it. The state hangs over him with a whip-lash, and says, "Now if you don't quit work and go to play I'll lick you." That is the position of Westbrook, and it is more infernally nonsensical than the position of the church itself; a position that grants everything that the church desires, a position that would make human society rotten to the core, a position as dark and terrible in its consequences as the logic of the inquisition, a position that necessarily violates the conscience, the rights, the freedom of everyone in the land who voluntarily keeps Saturday as a day of rest, compelling him to keep involuntarily another day at an expense of hundreds of dollars a year.

Will Dr. Westbrook meet this question fairly? Put the religious aspect entirely aside, ignore utterly the existence of the church, take it as a matter of purely secular legislation, and I will show that Dr. Westbrook is a tyrant, and that his so-called "secular Sunday," enforced by law, is at heart as cruel, unjust, and destructive of all right as the "religious Sabbath." They have different names and different aspects, but at heart they are the same despotism. To say that the wishes of a majority are to be the source of all law is all that the church has ever claimed of secular authority, for no church has ever been in favor of religious legislation when in the minority. But grant this principle—that the majority can do as it wishes with no regard to the rights of the minority—and the foundation of every claim of the church is established. But even if there were no church to take advantage of this principle, what an atrocious assumption it is, anyway; and in this particular matter of Sunday legislation, what an exasperating infringement of human rights. The idea of a government saying to the people, "You shall not work—you shall be idle. Play, if you will, but if you do any labor you shall be fined, imprisoned, and harnessed with the vilest criminals—the murderer, the thief, the robber, the ravisher—for by our 'secular Sunday laws' you are equally criminal with them and deserving of punishment." That is the logic of Westbrook. Where is the difference between it and all the outrageous persecutions of the past?

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

In the Metropolis.

MR. C. H. PACKARD, Editor of the Eye, Snohomish, Washington. Dear Clay: Since I reduced the intellectual 400 of your city to 399 by coming back to the States, I have traveled about as far as a man can without leaving the country or doubling on his trail. It is difficult to judge distances by looking on a map, for I have seen blue prints of Two Percent Hysom's addition to Mukilteo that were larger than the map of the United States which I brought in my pocket. You begin to get a notion about the extensiveness of the world when you have sat in a railroad car and kerplunk-kerplunked in one direction for six days at a high rate of speed.

Our journey from Puget sound to Long Island sound, as I might designate it, was performed in a tourist sleeper, upholstered in dark leather and presided over by a saddle-colored porter. The passengers were six adults and five babies. There was a German woman coming east, like the wife of John Rogers following that martyr to the stake, "with two small children and one at the breast." There was a young and newly married couple on their wedding tour, both very tender. I watched with much interest their endeavors to act as if they were used to it; but when I saw them slide slowly from the ends of their cushion toward the middle, gaze at each other with watery eyes, and then sort of melt into each other's grip, I slipped off my seat to the bottom of the car, and knew no more. The other tourists were a man from Iowa, accompanied by his wife and baby. He had been inspecting the Columbia river and sound countries with a view to settling there, but could not find a dry spot to light on, and so came back. I christened him Jake at once, though I found out afterwards that such is not his name. Jake imagined, I think, that there were desperadoes, Indians and other wild game to be shot in the northwest, for he went heeled. With a rifle on his shoulder, and a six shooter and a large knife for side-arms, he looked hard to curry, as Mr. Stinson would say. He spoke defiantly, and handled his weapons with lightness and freedom. He superintended the whole car and made the saddle-colored porter's life a fardel to him. The porter got mad and bucked, and Jake didn't know whether it was best to lick him or blow out his brains with a gun. After counting his cartridges and spending some time in meditation, he allowed his heart to be softened, let the darky live, and reported him to Superintendent Rice at St. Paul. Although of a truculent disposition, Jake had yet a streak of humor in him, and liked to hold his baby up to the young married couple and tell them how good a thing it was to be a parent. The couple were going to Europe, and Jake went so far as to offer a bet that when they returned they would be carrying a live bundle; to which he added much valuable advice about the care of children. The bride maintained that she should always be the baby herself, which her husband corroborated, whereupon both melted, and Jake yum-yummed in a high key and collapsed.

Jake helped much to relieve the tediousness of the trip.

When our fellow-townsmen, Judge Griffith, came East, he wrote to the Eye about the excellence of the meals furnished in the dining-cars of the Northern Pacific, but said, as you remember, that the mirrors placed opposite the passenger who was eating reflected his countenance with unnecessary distinctness. I can imagine that when the judge saw those long red whiskers of his in the glass, they appeared altogether disproportioned to the amount of hair on the intellectual head between them. Although my own sideboards are too brief to be oscillated by the wind, I thought it best not to subject myself to the embarrassment to which the judge alluded, and therefore brought along the large basket of comestibles which the neighbors so kindly provided us with, and out of which we lunched in a sticky and adhesive manner all the way from Snohomish to St. Paul. The pullets that Andy Hagarty sent us got to tasting a good deal like the cake contributed by Mrs. Knapp, and Mrs. Cairns's buns borrowed an oniony flavor from the dressing with which Mrs. Martin stuffed her chicken; but when I thought of the six-bits demanded by the caterer in the buffet car, and of my whiskers reflected with unnecessary distinctness by the mirrors, I washed everything down with a drink of alkali water and smoked my pipe with a contented mind.

By the way, if anybody wants to see a country as godforsaken as the desert of Sahara, and twice as cold, he should journey on the Northern Pacific from Washington to Minnesota. The land east of the Cascades, where the bunch-grass grows, looks as unwholesome as a mangy dog, but it is a paradise compared with parts of Idaho, Montana, and Dakota. On the soil of these places, as my fellow-passenger, Jake, truly observed, you couldn't raise a disturbance. The sun rises and sets on a prairie, rolling or flat, where a bird would starve. Your last glance out of the car window as the orb of day drops like a red-hot plummet in the black abyss of night falls upon a dreary waste; and in the morning you see a prospect so similar that you do not appear to have moved, though the train has run all night. Occasionally, in the neighborhood of a spring or stream, appear houses and other signs of attempts at habitation; also coyotes, cayuses, and cattle, all of which resemble one another and the land in general appearance. It is government domain and free as water, but, unlike some natural bodies of water, it is not worth a dam. Speaking of water, I may say that we crossed the Missouri where it is not much wider than Pillchuck creek, and bridged that portion of the Mississippi which does not suggest the Father of Waters. Further down the line, I understand, the confluence of the two form a stream rather larger than the Snohomish river where it passes Martin's boat-house.

The day before I left your city I interviewed Major Smythe, whom I found lying upon a bed of pain. That was Tuesday. On Monday I had taken a fond farewell of the major as he left Snohomish to resume his labors as editor, business manager, and compositor of the Whoop in Haller, when he said that he did not expect that he should ever see me again; but, by some strange fatality which is always hitting newspaper men who keep sober, Major Smythe broke his leg before he got to the office and was brought back to Snohomish. When I saw him he was resigned and said he couldn't kick. I asked him about that paragraph going the rounds of the press to the effect that in response to an inquiry regarding his circulation, he had replied that the Whoop went all over the five continents and that he had hard work to keep it from going to hell. He said the paragraph was true, that the circulation of the Whoop was as stated, and that the limitation alluded to was now likely to be removed. The major is a remarkable man, of a cheerful temperament, and not easily depressed.

I note in the Eye your report of the proceedings at Burton's hall, where, as the late General Grant would say, I received a reception on the eve of my departure. I pass over your description of my oratory on that occasion as "classic and awe-inspiring," but I want to say to the clergymen who wished me godspeed and success in my present labors that they are at liberty to withdraw their remarks. They probably did not know what I intended to labor at. I am breathing these thoughts in the office of THE TRUTH SEEKER; I am domiciled with the Editor and am pleased to find that his shirts and collars fit me. Yours until reunited on a free silver basis.

GEO. E. MACDONALD.

New York, 17th inst., '93.

Readers will aid the cause by forwarding us names of their friends who might be interested in sample copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A Farewell Reception

GIVEN TO GEO. E. MACDONALD BY THE SONS OF VETERANS AND FRIENDS.

From the Snohomish Eye.

The farewell reception given to Capt. Geo. E. Macdonald and wife at Burton's hall Monday evening by the Sons of Veterans and their friends, to the number of over one hundred, was an occasion which will bring back pleasant memories to the parting guests and to many of those who attended.

An entertaining program containing vocal and instrumental music, recitations, and impromptu speeches, was rendered.

Rev. W. C. Merritt, who enjoys the rare distinction of being both a veteran and the son of a veteran, after giving reminiscences of the war exhibit at Chicago, paid Mr. Macdonald a neat tribute for the active part he has taken in the camp.

Judge Whitney made a few general remarks pertinent to the occasion.

The presentation address was made by Hon. C. T. Roscoe, who said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, COMRADES AND FRIENDS: We have met this evening to say "farewell" to an honored citizen of this community and his amiable wife. They have resided in this city barely two years, but they have won the hearts of those with whom they have met, both in a social and an educational way. It is as a fearless advocate of principles with which he is profoundly imbued that George E. Macdonald has perpetually impressed the minds of the people of this city and county. Some believe in his reasoning, while others gainsay its conformity with truth; but all admire him for his learning and originality. It is said of him by his associates that as an all-round newspaper man he has few equals and no superior. However that may be, it is as an editorial writer that Macdonald has won his greatest laurels in this community. When the search-light of his pen was turned toward public officials, or when he called attention to his peculiar, witty, satirical style to popular errors, the whole public was aroused. Snohomish can ill afford to part with such a man, for, while we have a large number of bright and energetic citizens, yet the great majority, not only here but in the West generally, are entirely occupied with their own selfish purposes, and pay too little attention to their less fortunate brothers and sisters.

As captain and presiding officer of this camp of Sons of Veterans, for the year now drawing to a close, he has endeared himself to every member; they not only have found him a bold and dashing leader, but he has been a genial and courteous champion. Even upon first taking command of the camp, he besieged the hearts of the boys, and one by one they have unconditionally surrendered. He has ever reminded them that the objects of their meetings was to aid the members of the Grand Army of the Republic and their families, to perpetuate the memory of their historic dead, to inculcate patriotism and love of country, not only among our own membership but among all the people of the land, and to spread and sustain the doctrine of equal rights, universal liberty and justice to all.

Captain Macdonald's father fought for those principles with a musket, but he fights for them with a pen. In reading Macdonald's poetical works, I find these beautiful lines:

"The monarch who sways by the sword of war
Hath glory and praise of men;
Be it ours to sing of the mental king,
Who conquers the earth with his pen.
And the breezes of freedom shall waft the song
Of the triumph of poet and seer,
Through the aisles of the future, and bear along Every anthem we give to them here."

I hold in my hand the sword which Captain Macdonald has carried as the leader of this camp, and as I have something to say which directly concerns him, I wish he would come forward.

Captain Macdonald, First Lieutenant Paddon has handed me this sword which he claims you surrendered to him at our last muster, by reason of your approaching departure for the east. I find engraved on the guard these words: "Camp 13, to Capt. Geo. E. Macdonald, '93." The camp, through its council, has unanimously instructed me to present you with it, and to say to you that with this present go the best wishes of each member for yourself and for your family in your future home. Although, henceforth, we are to be divided by the broad continent, yet even this cannot part the ties of friendship which have continually grown firmer between us since our coming together. In the language of Lord Byron, I say to you, "Farewell!—a word that must be and hath been! A sound which makes us linger—yet, Farewell!"

The response was characteristic of "Mac," and was frequently interrupted by laughter. He is not a polished orator, and will probably never be as successful in wielding his tongue as he has been in wielding his pen. He has that classic, awe-inspiring style of delivery and gesture which is so noticeable in a bashful school boy. With a preliminary blush and a stammer he said:

CAPTAIN ROSCOE, BROTHERS, COMRADES, FRIENDS, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I never was the subject of a reception and presentation before; but I have been to funerals, and the solemnities of this occasion remind me of a funeral. A few days ago I read in the Eye quite a flattering obituary notice of myself. It was written by my friend Mr. Packard, and spoke so highly of the deceased that I expected to find at the end of it these lines:

Green be the turf above thee,
Friend of my better days;
None knew thee but to love thee,
None named thee but to praise.

And then to-night, when I heard the first note of the organ, I should not have been surprised if the choir had arisen and sung:

How blest the righteous when he dies,
How sinks the weary soul to rest;
How calmly beam the closing eyes,
How gently heaves the expiring breast.

I see, though, this difference: At a well-conducted funeral the corpse is not expected to respond. On this occasion, I might as well be stricken with the dumbness of death if I could not express my appreciation of the kindness shown me and the honor bestowed by this gathering. I might tell you that this presentation was wholly unexpected, but such language could be uttered only with the intent to deceive. Though I am something of a liar, there is a limit to my weakness. There are moments when one might as well tell the truth. The boys told me they would give me this sword, and in accepting the token I would express the hope that I may never be called upon to give it warmth and color by sheathing it in the stomach of an adversary. Also that no enemy of mine or my country's will ever deem it necessary to take the chill and glitter off a similar weapon by inserting it between the ribs of the undersigned. I shall keep this sword as a memento and souvenir. I can never look at it without remembering the boys with whom I have been associated for the past two years in this camp. When I see it I shall recall the members of the Grand Army of the Republic who have honored us with their presence. It will bring to my mind some of the most prized associations. I shall see the friends who still walk these busy streets; others who have gone east of the mountains, and still others who have passed beyond the purple twilight of those hills that separate us from the place where the innumerable dwell. On week days I shall think of the people here as I have known them at their ordinary avocations, in stores and offices. On Sundays I shall remember the ball players, putting up great games and humiliating the pride of Seattle. On the Fourth of July I shall see the great flag floating from the top of the liberty pole on Second street; I shall see it floating and hear it flap in the breeze, and along with that sound shall hear the objurgations of a clergyman who thought Sunday too good a day for the raising of the American flag. But with charity for all and malice toward none, these recollections will be pleasant to me, and this evening's reception and presentation will remain among the happiest memories of my life.

Rev. D. LeSourd expressed a hearty appreciation of the camp's efforts to keep alive the spirit of patriotism which is too oft forgotten in to-day's mad rush for wealth and political power. So long as we do not forget our obligations as citizens, and so long as there is respect for the old flag, the country is safe.

Professor Sinclair briefly reviewed the services which Mr. Macdonald had rendered the city and country with his pen, and viewed the departure of himself and wife as a loss to the community.

Mr. Gorham, of the Tribune, said he was not the son of a veteran, but it was not his fault. The audience held its breath in suspense until he explained that his father was an invalid at the time of the war. It had been said that the sword was mightier than the pen, but judging from his short acquaintance, he thought the pen in Macdonald's hand was a more effective weapon than the handsome emblem of war which had been presented him that evening.

A military lunch of hard tack, coffee and beans followed, after which some of the younger folks became tangled for a short time in the giddy mazes of the waltz and a few new round dances.

Mr. Macdonald and family started this morning on their journey across the continent. A number of their personal friends were at the train to bid them farewell.

Fifth Annual Convention of the Oregon State Secular Union.

In the face of the hardest times ever seen on this coast the Oregon State Secular Union has had one of the most successful conventions ever held in the state. Our firmest friends believed it would be best to postpone the annual convention until better times; but there was work to be done, and the few pushed bravely forward.

The existence of the First Secular church of Portland was the most encouraging feature of the undertaking, for we at least could feel sure of its assistance.

To the many appeals for money, but few responded. Friends up the Willamette valley said it was simply impossible to raise money, and finally the ladies of the First Secular Church decided that they would undertake to assist in defraying the expenses by serving meals twice a day during the convention. This idea received the hearty cooperation of country members, and chickens, eggs, butter, apples, potatoes, cabbage, etc., were donated by Mr. and Mrs. B. Friedrich, Mr. and Mrs. Spulak, Mr. and Mrs. David Wittenburg, and Mr. Hal Bogess, all of New Era. The veteran Freethinker and genial entertainer, Col. J. H. Blanchard, of New Era, took charge of the donations, and expressed the same to Portland, where the ladies of the Secular Church added their donation of cake, pies and all the good things which ingenuity could make, or which the market contained. Mrs. S. V. Lewelling, of Milwaukee, a vice-president of the First Church, has established a reputation as a "sandwich maker" second to none in the country. Everybody wanted to know who made those sandwiches, and no doubt similar ones will grace the table at every infidel banquet in the state.

The fine coffee and tea were donations from the well-known importers, Clossett & Devers; Malarkey Bros. gave the mammoth salmon, which was prepared by the chef of the finest restaurant in Portland, "The Model," of which Theo. Kruse is the proprietor. Sugar, spices, vinegar, etc., were donated by Messrs. Steinfurth and Saunders, two of Portland's staunchest Liberals and owners of large grocery stores; the proprietors of the Chicago Meat Market gave us as fine a roast as was ever handed over a butcher's counter; Captain Snyder, of the California Meat Market, made and gave the delicious bolognas; the crackers and cookies came from Burns's, the large retail grocer on Second street; the handsome young proprietor of a grocery store on Third and Yamhill donated all the condensed milk; the celery and parsley came from a successful poultry merchant on Second street; the potted plants, which added so much beauty to the tables and platform, were generously loaned by Phunder's floral establishment; the flags, Chinese lanterns, and festoons came from Ed. Alisky, president of the First Secular church; the twenty foot flag, that was gracefully draped over the speaker's platform, was one under which the Centennial procession had marched in Philadelphia in 1876, and was loaned by Mr. and Mrs. Kemp, of East Portland; a large banner, containing the words "Universal Mental Liberty," was the artistic work of G. H. Simpson, of the Simpson Sign Company. The hall was magnificently decorated with evergreens, flowers, and autumn leaves, the work of members of the First Secular church. A happier, more intelligent, or enthusiastic crowd of men, women, and young folks never met than those who worked so willingly for the success of this Convention.

Space forbids mentioning the names of all, but I want to put on record at least a few of them: Messrs. Chas. Hagner, H. E. Girard, Prof. C. A. Bauer, D. C. Hatch, and J. J. Tracy, while chief among the ladies who prepared and served the meals were Mesdames Chas. Hagner, Conrad Kehm, M. A. Squire, W. E. Jones, Emma Lee, J. J. Tracy, Misses Nettie Kenyon and Nettie Olds. Over two hundred meals were served, nearly half of which were paid for.

Liberals who had attended almost every state convention and who hardly felt acquainted, became as "brothers and sisters," while enjoying the delicacies at each of these Secular banquets. The after-dinner speeches were among the finest things of the convention.

Friends like Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Mount of Silverton, at each meal paid double the price charged, so pleased were they with the entertainment.

The convention was called to order Friday, Oct. 20, at 10 a.m., by President W. W. Jesse, of Portland, then took a recess until 2:30 p.m. On reassembling, President Jesse delivered a short address of welcome and explained the objects of the Oregon State Secular Union.

A committee on Credentials was appointed as follows: Judge T. B. Handley, of Tillamook; E. A. Hansee, of Sellwood, and Judge D. W. Smith, of Oregon City. After ten minutes intermission the committee reported the following persons entitled to seats in the convention:

J. G. Abbott, Grant's Pass; O. C. Lee, Chas. Hagner, Mrs. Chas. Hagner, Mrs. Amanda Jesse, W. W. Jesse, Ed. Aliskey, Mattie Blaisdell, Mrs. Emma Lee, all of Portland; J. K. Sears, McCoy; W. J. Dean, Talent; B. F. Linn, S. C. Linn, D. W. Smith, and Katie Kehm Smith, Oregon City; J. McNaughton, William H. Schroeder, J. Henry Schroeder, Arago; Caroline Wittenburg and David Wittenburg, New Era; E. Stewart, Dayville; D. C. Stewart, Forest Grove; B. F. Hyland, Corvallis; Wm. Barlow, Barlow; Dr. and Mrs. M. Pfefferle, Baker City; Benj. Forstner, Louise Forstner, Martha S. Coulter, Lottie Drinnon, Salem. The committee recommended that all Liberals present be invited to take part in the discussions of the sessions. The report of the committee was adopted. Reports of officers being next in order, the president's report was read, as follows:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION: As many of you know, the old Oregon State Secular Union was incorporated Jan. 13, 1893, at the last convention, which was held in Salem. The by-laws then adopted placed the affairs of the Union in the keeping of the executive committee, which is composed of the president, four vice-presidents, secretary, and treasurer. This committee was required to meet every three months, viz.: March, June, September, December.

At the March session, which was held at Barlow, only the secretary and Vice-President D. W. Smith and myself were present. Only matters in general pertaining to the union were discussed, because of lack of attendance.

and doubt as to the power of three to act. In June the committee met at Castle Kehm, when the secretary, Vice-Presidents B. F. Hyland and D. W. Smith and myself were present. This being a majority of the whole committee, the rule was established that in all future meetings of the executive committee, three should constitute a quorum, with power to transact all business.

The importance of securing a camp-ground was mentioned and discussed, and the committee went in a body to personally look over Rock Island, situated in the Willamette river, about three miles south of Oregon City, which had been suggested by reason of its accessibility by rail and steamboat transportation as a suitable place for that purpose.

Since that session of the committee, Mr. and Mrs. David Wittenburg, of New Era, made a proposition to the committee to donate five acres at New Era for a secular camp-ground, on the condition that the land should be used only as a secular park, or for college purposes, but never be sold. The committee still has the latter proposition under consideration.

Also the advisability of securing other lands formerly used as a public park, and adjoining the Wittenburg land, now opened by the O. and C. Railroad Company. I deem the matter of securing a Secular camp-ground or park of great importance, and hope the coming year the Union will have title to land for that purpose, somewhere where we may meet and possibly erect a secular college.

Our secretary, Katie Kehm Smith, having reported the organization of the First Secular Church of Portland as an auxiliary to this Union, a charter was ordered issued to that society. A Sunday-school having also been organized in connection with said church, it was found necessary by the committee to prescribe and adopt some system of books for use in Secular science schools. After correspondence and procuring samples of all books published by several leading Liberal publishers, the committee found only the following books which it deemed suitable to adopt, namely: Paul Bert's "First Steps in Scientific Knowledge" and L. K. Washburn's "Cosmic Hymn Book," and they were adopted.

The character of instructions proper for young children in Secular Sunday schools was fully discussed and the secretary was instructed to prepare a set of fifty-two lessons in leaflet form and submit them to the committee as soon as it could be done, and she will make a report to this convention of the progress made.

The committee has prepared forms and had printed a supply of letter pads, envelopes, membership blanks, and by-laws.

The secretary was authorized to procure a seal for the society, which is now in the hands of the engraver. For list of members at the present time and the financial condition of the Union, I refer you to the reports of the secretary and the treasurer.

While our membership is not large, nor our treasury overflowing, I feel satisfied that the Union has made substantial progress, and that it will continue to do so. I desire to urge upon you especially the importance of sustaining the First Secular Church of Portland and its Secular Sunday school. Let us help all we can to place and keep this society on a permanent footing, and it in turn will help to sustain the state organization and be a guide and encouragement to the formation of other similar auxiliaries.

This society has been in existence now for nearly a year, and it seems to be established on such lines that with age it increases in numbers, influence and popularity. If the plan it has adopted will solve the problem of making auxiliary unions live and flourish, it will have accomplished a step in the direction of the permanent organization of Freethinkers, which for years has been discussed but never before attained.

Respectfully submitted, W. W. JESSE,
President Oregon State Secular Union.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE OREGON STATE SECULAR UNION: Before presenting to you report of actual work done by secretary I deem it advisable, in fact necessary, in order that you may understand the obstacles which have been met, to recall to your minds the fact that when the present officers assumed control the Oregon State Secular Union was almost without funds, and with only a very few—about six—active members. The convention held at Salem, January 11th, 12th and 13th, having incorporated the Union, thus giving it a legal existence, was the star of hope held out to those who undertook the then almost hopeless task of resuscitating the Oregon State Secular Union.

The writing of letters urging renewed interest in the cause, and showing at length the necessity for the same, began soon after the convention. Of the scores of letters written by your secretary—two hundred and eight from January 14th to October 17th—only a few answers were received, and of these the majority, while expressing sympathy for the cause, yet the writers failed to identify themselves with the Union. "Times are too hard," "It is no use, as long as we are such a hopeless minority," "I have given money time and again, and see no returns," "Why should I stand in the breach, when Liberals do nothing?" "There is too much money spent for long speeches instead of work." These are some of the reasons given why our friends have failed to respond to appeals for aid. No funds, no friends. Rather discouraging outlook, but it certainly aroused a desire to show that the members of the old Union were mistaken; that we are not a "hopeless minority," and that persistent effort on the part of the few would surely win the approval and assistance of the many when they realized that work was being done.

The secretary commenced field work by the organization of the First Secular Church of Portland on Paine's birthday, January 29th. By delivering a lecture each Sunday a most successful organization has been built up, with an active membership of about a hundred, while the average attendance at each lecture is from one hundred and fifty to two hundred. In connection with this society there has been organized a Secular Sunday-school and Progressive Bible class. The work of maintaining this society and Secular Sunday-school has been very great, but in my opinion the plan pursued by our Portland friends is the most feasible one to build up a successful and permanent organization.

During the month of September no meetings were held in Portland, in order to give me an opportunity to fill engagements at other points.

Everywhere I lectured I found our friends enthusiastic, but, owing to the financial depression, unable to join the Union.

Through the generosity of D. C. Hatch, an active member of the First Secular Church, we have been enabled to distribute three thousand printed copies of my lecture, entitled, "Preachers, Prayers and Chinamen."

Hundreds of copies of Liberal and reform papers have been sent out, and at my own expense copies of Westbrook's "A Few Plain Words on Church Taxation," and pamphlets on Sunday legislation. Through the courtesy of the Freethought Federation of America a large number of World's Fair leaflets have been distributed. Since January 13, 1893, there have been two meetings of the executive committee, of which I have kept the minutes as required by by-laws.

Our valued friends, Mr. and Mrs. David Wittenburg, of New Era, are ready to donate five acres of land to the Union for a secular park, college or camp-ground, and an additional acre for a secular cemetery.

Among the enjoyable affairs given by Auxiliary No. 1, the First Secular Church of Portland, was a steamboat excursion to Castle Kehm-on-the-Willamette, when upwards of one hundred and fifty Liberals spent Sunday, June 4, fishing, dancing, playing games and wandering over the rocks and hills. It was a gala day for Freethought.

While we have received scores of letters and have been told by hundreds that they would like to identify themselves with the Union, yet in the face of hard times they could not do so. There are now thirty-one members of the Oregon State Secular Union (incorporated). Eleven more have paid dues; but, having failed to sign the membership blank, as required by law, cannot be counted members.

I want to say in conclusion that within the past month more encouragement has been received than ever before; our friends are becoming interested; with better times, financially, our membership will number hundreds, where now we have tens.

We have sincerely and earnestly tried to get our friends interested, and though the task has been a difficult one, we believe that, having heard this report, you will see that our efforts have not been without some measure of success, and that you will aid my successor to the best of your ability.

Respectfully submitted, KATIE KEHM SMITH,
Secretary Oregon State Secular Union.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Amount in treasury from all sources as per statement in TRUTH SEEKER, Feb. 11, 1893.....	$44 25
By cash on order to secretary.....	$5 00
April 27th, cash to Forest Grove Times for printing 1,000 by-laws.....	12 00
do 1,500 letter-heads.....	7 00
do 500 envelopes.....	2 50
do 500 membership blanks.....	4 00
Express on stationery.....	70
July 1st, cash to TRUTH SEEKER, per order executive committee.....	5 15
July 1st, to cash on hand to balance.....	7 90
	$44 25

D. C. STEWART,
Treasurer Oregon State Secular Union.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF OREGON STATE SECULAR UNION.

Received from H. E. Lee, $1; Dr. M. Pfefferle, $1; Wm. Barlow, $2; B. F. Hyland, $3; D. and C. Wittenburg, $2; J. H. and W. H. Schroeder, $2; J. McNaughton, $3; B. F. Linn, $1; Reuben Wright, balance as ex-treasurer: W. J. Dean, $2; Chas. Hagner, 50 cents; J. G. Abbott, $1; a friend, $1; Mrs. S. Miller, $1; Mrs. W. W. West, $5; John Price, $5, Mrs. H. West, $1; John Diamond, $5; J. P. Geer, $2; R. V. Short, $1; H. Bennett, $1; Nettie Olds, 50 cents.

Collections during convention, $13.85; dance tickets and meals, $28.60; Mrs. H. Bennett, 25 cents; J. and A. Long, $2; B. F. Hyland, $2. Total, $88.45. In hands of treasurer per his report, $7.90. Total, $96.35.

Expenses of Convention.....	$49 65
Secretary's bill of expenses allowed.....	9 20
Allowed secretary for services since organization, January, 1893.....	50 00
Deficit to balance.....	$12 50

$108 85 $108 85

After reading of officers' reports, Ed. Alisky, President First Secular Church, gave an interesting address, following which Robert Scott, of Woodburn, the sturdy and wealthy old Scotchman, who, with his wife, has done so much for the cause of Freethought, gave his "religious experience," which provoked a great deal of merriment and applause.

At Friday evening's session, the convention was addressed by O. A. Phelps, of Pueblo, Col., his subject being "Secular Philosophy."

Saturday morning and afternoon were devoted to business sessions, when ways and means were devised for future work in this state. The plan of the First Secular Church was commented on and recommended as a sure plan for permanent success; the plan of dividing the state into circuits, and putting a lecturer in charge of each circuit, was fully discussed, and the executive committee instructed to complete this work; the secretary outlined her plan of leaflets for Secular Sunday schools, which was enthusiastically received and adopted by the convention; the necessity of a state camp-ground was discussed, and steps taken to secure one; D. W. Smith offered the following amendment to the By-laws, which was adopted unanimously: "Resolved, That Article III. of the By-laws of the Oregon State Secular Union be and the same is amended to read as follows:

ARTICLE III.—MEMBERSHIP.

SEC. 1. Any person in sympathy with the objects of this society may, without fees or dues, become a member thereof by subscribing to its objects on one of the membership applications of the society, which will be furnished for that purpose on request, and filing the same with the secretary, provided that the duly accredited delegates of any auxiliary Union shall be entitled to seats, voice, and vote in all state conventions to which they may have been chosen; provided further, that all persons who have heretofore signed and filed a membership application shall be deemed members.

SEC. 2. For the convenience and information of members, membership applications shall have printed thereon, Section 1 of this Article, and also a subscription blank to be filled by those able and willing to pay for the support of the society.

SEC. 3. All clauses, sections, articles, or parts thereof, of the by-laws which conflict with this article, as herein amended, are hereby repealed."

Other plans were offered which will be fully considered by the executive committee at its regular quarterly meetings.

The following officers were elected and will take their seats next January: President, W. W. Jesse, Portland; first vice-president, J. Henry Schroeder, Arago; second vice-president, B. F. Hyland, Corvallis; third vice-president, D. W. Smith, Oregon City; fourth vice-president, Nettie Olds, McMinnville; secretary, Katie Kehm Smith, Oregon City; treasurer, D. C. Stewart, Forest Grove.

Saturday night was made memorable by a fine musical and literary entertainment and a grand ball. Those who participated in the program were Nettie Olds, Mrs. A. H. Wensley, Mollie Squire, Mrs. Chrisman, Mr. Glen. Mrs. Chrisman, who sang the convention song, "A Thousand Years, My Own Columbia," is acknowledged to be one of the finest singers on this coast. Her voice is rich, sweet, and of rare volume, and the large audience assembled Saturday night would not be satisfied until she responded to a second encore. The grand march was led by Judge D. W. Smith and Miss Nettie Olds, and it was difficult to decide whether they or the second couple, President W. W. Jesse and Miss Mattie Blaisdell, were the finest appearing. The annual ball of the Oregon State Secular Union will not soon be forgotten. At the close of the literary program a letter filled with valuable suggestions from John R. Charlesworth was read.

SUNDAY MORNING.

Executive committee held a business meeting.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

Exercises were opened with a song by the choir, after which the secretary read a note from the Rev. Mr. Brown, of the Portland Methodist Episcopal church, expressing regret that he could not be at the Convention. He was to deliver an address on "The Co-equality of Sex and Property." Mrs. Anna E. Barker then addressed the meeting, her subject being, "My Views on the Liberal Question." Short speeches were made by Mr. Read, president of the Portland Theosophical Society; O. A. Phelps, Pueblo, Col.; B. F. Hyland, Corvallis, and Mary A. Squire and J. J. Tracy, of Portland.

SUNDAY EVENING.

Miss Olds and Mrs. Wensley again delighted the audience with musical selections. Rev. Dr. J. Bloch, the well-known Jewish rabbi of Portland, delivered an address on "Our Agreements and Disagreements." Katie Kehm Smith closed the Convention with an address on "The Necessity for Aggressiveness on the Part of Liberals."

The Convention adjourned to meet at the call of the executive committee. KATIE KEHM SMITH,
Secretary Oregon State Secular Union.

The Newark Liberal League.

Several years ago, after I first left the Christian pulpit, I used to go over to Newark and lecture before the Liberal society there, and found many warm friends. Picnics, sociables, etc., used to vary the path of intellectual debate. All sorts of opinions fraternized in this League and the sparks of thought were quite numerous, and I guess there was no creed but what had its defender on this platform. So, after many years' wandering in the great West, it was a pleasure to again come to this old battlefield, shake hands with friends, while finding that many have gone and new ones have taken their place; but the old colors are still flying from the same fort. I gave my lecture on "Evolution and Creation," and it was curious to note how differently the currents of thought flowed in the discussions at Newark from those in the discussions at Brooklyn. There was more of a theological element at Newark. One critic wanted to know who made nature—was not there a God back of it? Who are we, where did we come from, and where are we going? I replied that we came from the monkey and the protoplasm. There is no doubt about that; it is simply a matter of fact, and we need not trouble ourselves about the question. As to where we are going, no man knoweth unto this day. No priest, or church, or Bible has ever answered that question. We only know that we are, and that the best thing for us to do is to be happy here and now and help make others happy.

Another critic wanted to know, if there was so much time in the past, why the world was not already perfect by the process of evolution, and couldn't a god be evolved? I answered that no matter how much time there was in the past, so far as we are concerned it is limited time, and therefore there was not enough of it from our standpoint to evolve perfection; and as to god-making, the time was certainly past for that; and although, as Ingersoll wisely and wittily says, "An honest God's the noblest work of man," still, after all, it is better to make an honest and a happy man than a god, for a god is a useless appendage anyway, seeing that he must be made out of nothing.

Another critic remarked that there was no conscience in the breast of man. It was in the brain, to which remark I fully assented. He said a Christian's conscience was generally india-rubber, and was capable of a great deal of stretching, which experience undoubtedly proves if one has ever done any trading, especially horse trading, with a Christian. Conscience is what the smart Sunday-school boy defined it to be, "That which makes one feel bad when he is found out."

Another critic wanted to know if the monkey was still evolving. I told him I didn't know but what he was. There is no telling what might happen.

President Bird closed a variable and interesting discussion with an object-lesson as to the differentiation of sex, which was easily explained by evolution; but could not be explained on the theory of creation unless we take the ground that God did a very foolish thing. Why the mammal glands in man? Evolution answers: It is a survival of the primitive no-sex form of life. But for God to thus create man would be an absurdity.

I was glad to find the Newark League in such a flourishing condition. A large audience was present. Every seat in the hall was occupied. President Bird was elected two years ago, and since then there has been a manifest improvement. The hall has been refurnished; music is one of the attractions, and the purposes of Freethought are kept constantly in view; and so the League is a working and progressive force. It stands for something. President Bird was formerly in the Congregational church, and was side by side with Pentecost in his battle for truth and liberty, and never retreated, and he still keeps at the front. I was also pleased to meet with friend Avery, who reads THE TRUTH SEEKER every week, and has followed in its pages the Secular Pilgrim in his crossings and recrossings of the continent. The Booth family I also meet, and others who are stalwarts in the cause whatever may be the fortune of war.

I spent a delightful evening at the home of Mr. Bird, where Mrs. Bird, who is as Liberal and radical as her husband, gives cordial welcome; and there were books and music and conversation to inspire. Mr. Bird lives in a world of flowers, and he understands well the growth and evolution of these beautiful children of earth that give such grace and comfort to man himself. Mr. Bird is a florist, and it was quite delightful to wander through his extensive hot-houses and gaze upon these shining ranks, the green masses decked with all colors of the rainbow; and right here do we see, as Mr. Bird pointed out, the most brilliant evidences of evolution and its most remarkable facts. It is a matter to be noted that Mr. Bird, although a noted Infidel, was invited to give a lecture before the High School, on trees and plants, their growth, variations, etc., and this lecture was given strictly in accordance with the principles of evolution, and was received with hearty congratulations by those who could understand its truth—although the ultra orthodox were rather taken aback at the idea of such a lecture being given by an Atheist. But the large majority of intelligent people approved; and this is a sign of progress, and such lectures do a great deal toward the advancement of thought. By simple science, by study of plants and flowers, orthodoxy receives an indirect blow from which it seldom recovers, especially in the mind of youth.

I shall lecture at Brooklyn again next Sunday, and at Newark December 3d, and so on Sundays I hope to be kept busy, while on week-days I write on my "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." I only hope that my readers will enjoy the perusal of the book, as I do the writing. I am continually receiving letters from all over the country rendering me generous support. I don't know as I could do this work without such reminders of friendly interest, for really, as I traverse this vast period, it at times seems as if I were climbing a mountain high, and not easily can I reach the broad expanse that opens upon Freethought; but always there is the excitement of the chase, and the reward of seeing something new in the difficult ways.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Friends Brayton and Reed.

I was a little afraid that my reply to these friends might stir up a hornet's nest. And now I am afraid the humane society will be after me because so many have been stung.

I am satisfied that if one wants to inherit eternal life he had better not try to get out of the old ruts. Damnation seems to await every one who seeks better conditions.

Fire in each eye and paper in each hand,
They rave and tear and madden round the land.

Garrison was dragged through the streets of Boston for teaching the equality of man. Kneeland, Bennett, and the editor of Lucifer served unpleasant terms in prison, because they tried to lift the people out of the quagmire of ignorance and place them on the broad turnpike of reason.

The old barbarous notions of money have to do with the welfare of the people, and gods, ghosts, musty forms, and old chestnuts must be scattered to the four winds, when they undermine the interests of the great, plain, common people to which I belong. I shall work in their interest as long as strength is given me, without fear or favor from anyone. Some day these matters will be taken to a higher court, and I can patiently await the decision.

When a wheezing, whining Christian spends half his time talking about Sunday rest and drives his hired help all through the week like beasts of burden, the best way is to tear the scalp off the hypocrite without ceremony. But friends Brayton and Reed are no doubt honest, and therefore deserve consideration. At the same time I would not try to convince them any more than I would try to convince the Indian that his dog will not accompany him to the happy hunting-ground. It is all folly to attempt to demonstrate propositions in geometry to an untutored mind, and all minds are untutored in regard to something.

All things considered, it is not astonishing that the Inquisition condemned Galileo. He taught the rotundity and revolution of the earth and the central position of the sun. For fourteen hundred years the people had been taught that the earth was a central and fixed body around which the sun, planets, and stars revolved. How could they conceive the idea that the earth, with its solid structures, lakes, rivers, and oceans, was revolving on an axis?

Friend Reed tells me to read Herbert Spencer. So the Inquisitors told Galileo to study the Ptolemaic system. The mind of a Christian can never be reached as long as he believes in God-written books. Neither can the mind of a man be reached as long as he believes that money is like the law of gravitation—something fixed and natural—not an invention and a creation of law, as it really is.

Mr. Reed asks: "How much will you give for a Confederate $5 note?" He will never be able to see how silly this question is until he learns the difference between money and notes. A note is always a promise to pay, whether given by a government, a bank, or an individual, and expected in some way to be redeemed or cancelled. These promises are always far in excess of the redeemer, and somebody is drawing interest on these cheap promises. The Southern Confederacy never issued a dollar of money—it issued promises to pay, and had nothing to pay with. If the colonial government had issued paper money instead of "promises to pay," it would have been far better for the government and the holders of the notes. Mr. Reed intimates that I would have the man who builds a house divide the profits with the workmen. I do not ask the robber to stand and deliver his plunder. I only ask that the wealth-producer may be allowed to keep his own.

There is a vast machine in operation to-day which the people do not understand. Could friend Reed look into this machine and see how one belt runs to Washington, another to each of the state legislatures, and another to the courts, and how other belts are running the presses of all the great papers; and could he understand how the wealth-producers of the country are constantly pouring their fortunes into this great hopper while the discharge spout empties into the coffers of Wall street, his innate love of justice would make him tear the hair from his head.

But recently Chauncey M. Depew said that fifty men by their money had the power to stop all the wheels of business from rolling—they could stop every car and strike every electric key dumb. The entire country is revolving on a pivot in Wall street; and what is still worse, John Swinton said there was not an independent press in America, save in the country towns. He said the editors of all the great papers were jumping-jacks. Rich men behind the screens pull the strings and they dance. And all of this hellward tendency is brought about by the manipulation of money. But I cannot expect to bring the people up to a knowledge of what constitutes money, and the function it is designed to perform, through the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER—it would take too much space.

I have been much interested in many articles which have appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER on tariff and finance and other kindred subjects from time to time, but have never attempted a reply until the appearance of the articles of Brayton and Reed, and have much regretted that. It seems to me that I committed the unpardonable sin which cannot be forgiven in this world, neither in the world to come.

Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us
To see ourselves as others see us.

Naples, N. Y.

JOHN PECK.

Thanksgiving, 1893.

O Lord, let the millions of hungry beggars and tramps in this bountiful land give thanks that the dogs have not eaten all the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table. Let them also give thanks that in this Christian country there is yet room out of doors to sleep.

The thugs and criminals in our jails and penitentiaries return thanks that there is not an Infidel among them; and also, as in Stillwater, Minn., that they are confined to Bible stories and religious tracts for reading.

The murderers and cut-throats give thanks to the clergy who have made the gallows the gate to glory.

We return thanks, O Lord, for the railway accidents during the last three months of the World's Fair, by which was shown God's righteous wrath at reckless people trying to attend an open Sunday fair.

We return sincere thanks that the Sunday-rest fanatics show no signs of letting up in their evil church-and-state designs on American freedom.

Let us be thankful that the nation is in no danger of sudden destruction, all its many sins having been prayed for, and that its salvation is, for the present, assured.

And we thank thee, O Lord, for making this a Christian nation, which we hope now will become more and more like Christianity's founder—poor and forsaken, with nowhere to lay its head.

And thine shall be the glory, for another Christian year, in sickness and distress. AMEN.

Lectures and Meetings.

THE Newark Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner Market. Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, T. B. Wakeman, of New York, will lecture. Subject: "What We Owe to Christianity, and What We Don't."

DURING the month of December, Franklin Steiner will lecture in Correctionville, Pierson, Atlantic, Walnut, Carlisle, and other places in Iowa.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York:

November 24th—Prof. A. L. Rawson, "The Dualism of Consciousness."

John R. Charlesworth is now in the East. The following appointments are on his list, and friends along the route desiring lectures should address him at once:

Nov. 26 Philadelphia, Pa. | Dec. 14, 15, 16, Waterloo, Ind.
Dec. 3 Alliance, O. | " 17 Chicago, Ill.

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Association holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of Lectures for November: November 26th.—Mr. S. P. Putnam, "Rights of Man."

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, will meet on and after October 17th in the Skerrett Building, northeast corner of Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock. Lectures for this month: November 28th.—Mrs. C. B. Kilgore, "The Congress of Religions."

THE Ohio Liberal Society meets in College Hall, 168 Walnut street, Cincinnati, Sunday evenings at 7:45, prompt. Admission is free. Program to December: November 26th.—Mrs. A. L. Fealy, of Dayton, O., "Truth and Fallacy of Christian Science."

THE Pittsburg Secular Society meets in Curry University Hall, Sixth street, near Penn avenue, every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

When Christ could not get what he wanted by praying he would curse. The example was bad, but the result was the same.

Letters of Friends.

A Subscriber from the Beginning.

VILLA PARK, NOV. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I send $5 for which please send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year to myself and one year to Leonard Parker, Anaheim, Cal. I cannot do without the grand old paper. I have taken it ever since it started; it is worth more to me than all the old superstitious Bibles in the world for it deals in facts.

Respectfully, JOEL B. PARKER.

Would Grasp the Hand of Heston.

ELMWOOD, MICH., NOV. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: You will find inclosed $3, for which you will please continue THE TRUTH SEEKER for another year, as I cannot get along without it, and especially Heston's daring blows at the gods. Tell him I would like to see him and shake his hand. May the powers that control him continue to support him in his noble work.

DANIEL M. SMITH.

Truth Seeker, Panic or No Panic.

SAGNOCHE, COL., NOV. 5, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have neglected to remit on account of scarcity of funds, but in order not to have you precipitate another panic or object lesson upon the country at this time I inclose postal note for $2, which will extend my subscription and also enable you to relieve those fellows down-town, who are hard up. THE TRUTH SEEKER, however, we must have in the family, panic or no panic.

Yours truly, W. H. MONTGOMERY.

Truth Seeker Is an Alert Champion.

LUGGOUCH, ARIZ., OCT. 31, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Herewith I send a money order for $5 to pay my subscription two years in advance to the grand old TRUTH SEEKER.

Your paper is the best I have ever read. It always is ready to champion the cause of Freethought, and is on the alert to guard against the insidious encroachments of ecclesiasticism.

Long may it live and continue to exert its wholesome influence, until the intellectual emancipation of all mankind is accomplished, and all the gods have abdicated.

PAUL S. TOOKER.

Best Paper He Has Ever Read.

DEERFIELD, IA, NOV. 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: While I don't know that I need to care but little about those down-town fellows you refer to in the last TRUTH SEEKER as being hard up, I don't like to be owing for one of the best papers I have ever had the pleasure of reading. I wish the circulation of the paper could be extended until its influence would be felt in every home in this republic. Inclosed find draft for $5 for which please renew my subscription and send the TRUTH SEEKER to party named in my order.

Respectfully yours, GEORGE BROWN.

The New Ideas Hurt Them.

CANTRIL, IA., OCT. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have neglected to renew my subscription. In this letter I will send you $3 for a year's subscription. We had Mr. Remsburg here in Cantril some time ago. He gave us one lecture, and he raised the wind among my Christian friends. The day after he went away they yelled awfully. It does hurt my Christian friend terribly to tell him of something in his Bible that he has not seen. Three miles south of Cantril a meeting has been carried on by the Methodists for two weeks, and no converts yet. People have gone to reading more for themselves and using their liberty more in thinking and judging for themselves, and so they let those sky pilots move the clouds as they please.

Yours truly, ALEX. FIX.

Jesus is Losing Lambs.

PHOENIX, A. T., OCT. 29, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3 for the "Freethinker's Text Book" and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." As we are living among Christians who cannot read, we must have some pictures to show them what they believe. They are mostly Mexican Catholics, and the most ignorant outfit I have ever met, but in the last fifteen years I have been among them I have caused Jesus to lose many a lamb from his flock. There are a number of Liberals here who would like to start an association, and would be obliged for any advice you can give us on this subject. As we have no place to go Sundays except to church or saloons I think if we can organize, and have regular meetings, we will have many members and get a number of subscribers for your paper and purchasers for your books. Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain, Yours truly, FRANK WAGNER.

The Church's Miserable Work at Chicago.

FREDONIA, N. Y., NOV. 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1 to continue my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER. It has not reached its limit, because it is constantly rising, rising, in saving knowledge.

I have just returned from the World's Fair. Wherever I turned I could see the blighting hand of superstition upon all nationalities. On Sunday there was a decided exhibition of it in covering the displays. Even our own state of New York closed its eyes and compelled others to do the same as far as the times would admit.

Now is a good time for all Freethinkers to show to the people the blighting curse of Christianity on all progress. In all that has been spoken and written good people would not believe one-half because it was so repulsive to all common sense. Now it has united and exerted all its powers to close on Sunday the World's Fair, one of the best opportunities of all ages to see in object lessons the manners and customs of all nations. Keep it before the people until a hearing is had, as never before.

PLINY SMITH.

Long Live the Federation.

FORT TRUMBULL, NEW LONDON, CONN., NOV. 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As you see by the heading of this letter, I have again changed my station, and although New London is a nice town I regret having left Portland, for there were quite a number of Liberals in Portland, some of whom I have enrolled among my best friends. H. R. Norton is a champion of Freethought, one who never lets a chance slip of giving orthodoxy a rap over the knuckles. Here in New London we have a few Freethinkers, but most of them are of the week-kneed kind for fear of the overwhelming numbers of the enemy. New London is a pretty nice old town, but spoiled by the too numerous church spires, dotted about like ghosts of bad deeds. I see that Mr. Charlesworth is going to Boston soon to lecture, and I wish he could stop at New London for one night or more. We could make him as miserable as any other place could.

I have just finished reading Helen H. Gardener's "Men, Women and Gods," which is in itself enough to make any sane person hate the Bible, if not all who uphold it. I have also read the first part of Susan Wixon's lecture, which is grand. I will take a copy of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" as soon as it is published, and hope it will be published soon.

Long live the Freethought Federation of America.

SAMUEL B. PRICE.

Is "Honest Error" a Crime?

ESKRIDGE, KANS., OCT. 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: For many years I have made the various religions of the world a careful study. I examined the Bible to the best of my ability. I always regarded it as a deep and serious question, and what the result of that investigation might be I did not know. I think honesty is the noblest principle of man. I made up my mind to try to be honest, and I have never regretted it. I consider the Bible (like other books) simply a record of the thoughts and motives, and desires and hopes and doings of mankind. So many contradictions, so many statements that are inconsistent with the nature of things, and many passages too strange to be true. The first lecture I ever delivered was at Clinton, Kansas. Subject: "Is the Bible Inspired?" I will never forget it; there was an old Presbyterian minister present who took issue with me and got his fingers in a hot pie. He often laughed about it afterwards; by nature he was a good man, too good to be in the Presbyterian Church. Still, he did not preach Calvinism in full bloom. I often discussed the question with him, as he was my nearest neighbor, and was a sincere friend. He would admit that he could not answer my argument, and I sometimes think that he entertained many doubts as to the infallibility of the Bible and the truth of Calvinism. After all, I said: "There can be no crime in honest error." Many Christians still insist that the crime of crimes is to deny that there is any power independent of or superior to nature. Let us be honest: Suppose a certain man had a little boy in some other state who had never seen his father, and no one could make the little fellow believe that his father existed, what would we think of that man if he should fly into a rage and say, "Just wait till I get my hands on that little Atheist and there will be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth?" That is the Christian's view of infinit kindness. A friend came to me the other day and handed me a paper, saying, "Mr. Williams, here is a chance for you to get $100." The paper contained a sermon by the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, in which he had offered $100 as a gift to any Infidel who had read the Bible through twice. He then proceeded to render it impossible for any one to obtain the money by saying that he would not take an Infidel's word for it; that he would not believe an Infidel about anything. This is not the first time that Mr. Talmage has made a public declaration that he had no confidence in any one who might differ from him. Why did he make the offer? Can he show us the design in that offer? Mr. Talmage, in saying that he has no confidence in any one who might differ from him, may cause many people to have no confidence in Mr. Talmage. He may be willing to accept as true the testimony of any man who claims to be a Christian; if so, the recipients of his confidence can frequently be found in the penitentiary and the asylum. We often find honest people who differ from us on the subject of religion. Mr. Talmage does not seem to love his enemies.

C. V. WILLIAMS.

Work Proposed For the Federation.

ST. LOUIS, MO., APRIL 24, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I desire to say a few words in regard to Freethought propaganda. The Freethought Federation of America is a splendid organization, and can be utilized in various ways for the spread of enlightenment. Now my idea is just this: We are not active enough, or we do not use our activity in the right direction. Would it not be well to use some of the weapons of the church and disseminate our doctrines in their way? If the Federation will, it can send out lecturers all over this country—that is, if Liberals will only keep up contributions as well as church people do. Let these lecturers be authorized agents for the establishment of secular churches and Sunday schools. If this is done, I have an idea that in the course of a few years Christian God shops and Sunday schools will be rather slimly attended. I merely submit this idea for the consideration of the Liberals of the country in general and the Freethought Federation in particular, and hope that some step in that direction may be taken soon. I wish you would hand in my name to the Federation for membership. Times are pretty hard with me now, but will try to save enough from the wreck to chip in as soon as possible. Wishing you success, I subscribe myself,

J. F. CLANCY.

[Liberals lecturers—those connected with the Liberal League and the Secular Union of past years and with the present Freethought Federation, and those working independently—have always labored to build up local societies. They have recognized the vital necessity of such societies or "churches," and can be depended upon to do their part in this work. With the necessary local assistance much can be accomplished in this direction; without it, nothing. At present we lack the appropriate books, etc., for use in Sunday schools. The supply will come when a sufficiently urgent demand is heard. The most imperative present needs, however, are local and state organizations to combat the church in the city councils, the courts, and state legislatures. The call is not for bombast and spreadeagleism, for discursive and diffusiv talk about everything in general and nothing in particular, but for deliberate, well-planned, purposeful action, which includes, of course, the wide distribution of coherent, pointed, fact-laden arguments against church and state union, for religious and civil liberty. Especially important is organization against Sunday observance enforcement. "Sunday Defense Associations" should be formed without delay.—ED. T. S.]

Saving Souls and Sinching Shekels.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., OCT. 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: An evangelist by the name of Mills, who, for sixteen days and nights, has been holding forth in Binghampton to an average audience of 4,000 people, mostly women and children, members of the churches and Sunday schools, has taken his way to Scranton, Pa., there to preach the original and interesting doctrine of eternal salvation through Christ and the Bible, and eternal and awful damnation to those who will not, because they cannot, believe in the doctrine.

For many weeks previous to the advent of this evangelist, nearly, if not all, the Protestant churches of the city, as part of the machine for grinding up sinners, had been steadily at work advertising his coming, and soliciting aid and attendance. A huge shed was erected on Water street, filled with seats and called a tabernacle. Great expectations filled the hearts of the pietists, and great were the prophetic boasts of the preachers in the various churches of the immense increase of church membership that was to follow this big blow-out of the evangelist. To the superficial observer, what followed in the course of the sixteen day's reign of the revivalist in Binghampton, the doom of Infidelity seemed sealed. The culminating point seemed to be reached when, on Tuesday, October 17, nearly every business house was closed. Even the saloons displayed the big printed card distributed by the machine, announcing that another new Sabbath had been created. The opera houses were closed, and the street railway company stopped its cars during services that the employees might also get religion. The street car company has had a big business on account of the so-called revival. It could well afford to stop its cars on the newly-created Sabbath.

Statistics to show how many new souls have been gobbled up by the machine may possibly be furnished by the leaders and representatives thereof in a near future. If so, these statistics will have to be accepted, without question, on the score of their divinity.

A word or two of personal mention concerning Mills and his staff, consisting of an assistant Evangelist named Gillum and a singer named Hillis, may not be out of place. Mills speaks very plainly, and has the natural gifts of oratory, coupled with a fair, though not large amount of personal magnetism. During the three times I heard him I was naturally a little interested in the beginning of some of the anecdotes he related, and about as disgusted in their ending as most people are who read a story and find at the close that it refers to some patent medicine which can be obtained of any druggist at a dollar a bottle. I didn't hear him try to describe an orthodox hell, but there was ever and ever a final appeal to fear and a reference to an awful eternity that awaited all those who failed to get converted, own up to a belief in the indescribable absurdities of the Christian doctrine and flop into the innocent looking tentacles of the church octopus. This idea seemed to be the soul and body of every peroration, and a great many girls and boys, and occasionally a man with a sloping forehead and weak physiognomy, stood up. You cannot blame them for it—they really believed that if they didn't do this they would have to suffer in an awful eternity. "Self preservation is the first law of nature." Much force was added by a solo by Hillis, who, in a very strong voice of a baritone tendency, sang a song, the burden of whose subject was "Eternity." I would have liked his singing better if he had struck his tones squarely. He seems to have to slide up or down to his next note to get it. Of Gillum I cannot speak from personal experience. He is a kind of a "second fiddle." I have been told, however, that he relies more upon excitement than Mills. It has been reported that Mills was once a gambler, and Gillum at one time president of an Infidel club. In the eyes of our good Christian people Gillum's offense was greater. They are hunkidora now, and when Hillis gets to heaven we shall hear from him, sure.

J. B. SWETT.

Talmage Says the Earth is God's "Awful Example."

MR. EDITOR: Some months ago I suggested through THE TRUTH SEEKER that "Sabbatarians" take advantage of the occasion and ask our pious Congress to appropriate money and make a special effort on Sundays to illustrate the sacred history of our planet on a grand scale. To make this an entertaining and profitable enterprise I suggested the propriety of appointing Rev. T. D. Talmage and Prof. Joseph Cook as artists for scenic effects, with money ad libitum.

The wisdom of the selection is more fully illustrated in a sermon reported in the Globe Democrat of December 19th from the Brooklyn pulpit of the first-named gentleman. There are certainly many scenes recorded in the so-called "sacred writings" which, if graphically illustrated, would highly entertain and edify the intelligent auditors of any small world, but it never occurred to me until I read this wonderful man's sermon of November 18th that, if it had been put artistically before Chicago's assembled multitudes, it could and would have been enjoyed at once by all appreciative intelligences throughout nature's wide domain.

This thing comes so like a new revelation to me that I cannot help asking you to give room to the inspired words as they fell upon the ears of that astounded Brooklyn audience. Mark them well:

Furthermore, I get from all this an answer to the question which every intelligent man and woman, since the earth has stood, has asked and received no answer. Why did God let sin and sorrow come into the world when he could have prevented them from coming? I wish, reverently, to say I think I have found the reason. To keep the Universe loyal to a holy God it was important in some world, somewhere, to demonstrate the gigantic disasters that would come upon any world that allowed sin to enter. Which world should it be? Well, the smaller the world the better, for less numbers would suffer. So our world was selected. The stage was plenty large for the enactment of the tragedy. Enter on the stage, Sin, followed by Murder, Pain, Theft, Fraud, Impurity, Falsehood, Massacre, War and all the abominations and horrors and agonies of centuries. Although we know comparatively little about the other worlds, lest we become completely dissatisfied with our own, no doubt the other worlds have heard, and are now hearing, all about this world in the awful experiment of sin which the human race has been making. In some way interstellar communication is open, and all worlds, either by wing of flying spirits or by direct communication from God, are learning that disloyalty and disobedience doom and damn everything they touch, and the spectacle practically says to all other worlds, Obey God, keep in the orbit where you were intended to swing or you will suffer that which that recreant world out yonder has been suffering for thousands of years.

It is no longer to me a mystery why so small a world was chosen (as ours) whereon to enact the tragedy. A chemist can demonstrate all the laws of heaven and earth in a laboratory ten by five feet, and our world was not too small to demonstrate to the universe the awful chemistry of unrighteousness, its explosive and riving and consuming power. I do not believe there is a world that has been in existence from the time Copernicus knocked on the door of heaven, to the world that last week came within sight of the observatory at Greenwich, but has heard of our terrific terrestrial experiment, and the awful object lesson has thrilled the multimillions of stellar population, especially when they heard that in order to arrest the disaster of centuries, the world-maker and world-starter and the world-upholder must give up his only son to assassination to expiate and restore and save the planetary shipwreck.

On the tower of Pharos, Egypt, a metallic mirror was raised which reflected all that occurred on land or sea for a distance of three hundred miles, and so Egypt was informed of the approach of her enemies long before their arrival. By what process I know not, but in some way the ship of a struggling earth is mirrored to distant worlds. Sure this one experiment of a world unloosing itself from God will be enough for all worlds, and for all eternities.

This makes clear enough the importance of bringing out vividly the salient features in the divine history of our planet so as to make an object lesson for all-outlying space—for Gods and devils, angels and men. But this is not all. It is greatly to be feared that our terrific terrestrial experiment will not have proven sufficiently thrilling to the multimillions of stellar population ere it shall be everlastingly too late, as our Brooklyn seer has mirrored through St. John:

The last scene, when the earth itself shall become a falling star, when not only fidgety meteors but grave old stars, shall fall, fall to the earth, "even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind." What a time that will be when worlds drop. Rain of planets. Gravitation letting loose her grip on worlds. Constellations flying apart. Galaxies dissolved. The great orchard of the universe swept by the last hurricane, letting down the stars like ripened fruit. Our old earth will go with the rest, and let it go, for it will have existed long enough, existed long enough to complete its tremendous experiment.

I would add: Let it go after the great rehearsal proposed; but I am not so certain as the Brooklyn orator that after the last hurricane has swept the orchard of the universe there will be enough worlds left to make a heaven out of—if any more heaven is needed—for I am not informed what kind of worlds are used as raw material in building heavens. Still, this is probably all clear to the fertile mind which has just discovered "why God let sin and sorrow come into this world when he could have prevented them from coming."

I can understand how creatures calling themselves men (from whom the brutal passions of savagery have not as yet been eliminated by culture), should be entertained by gladiatorial feasts; but how a holy God could in any sense create an illimitable universe, and in order to keep the sentient creatures therein loyal to himself, think it well to make on our earth an example of the most unholy kind, for spectacular effect, is what the author of this ingenious theory is asked to explain before applying for copyright.

J. H. CRAIN.

The Underlying Reality and the Permeating Potency.

ALHAMBRA, ILL., Nov. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: By reading Brother Otto's article in THE TRUTH SEEKER of August 12, 1893, I am fully satisfied that he is convinced that there is such a being as Otto Wettstein, and from his manner of logic I suspect that, as the Methodist preacher would say, he has been passing through the gloomy scenes of doubt as to whether there was actually such a being as Otto Wettstein; but it is pleasing to me to see that he has come to the conclusion that he actually exists and that he exists per se, which I understand to mean that he exists within himself, and being convinced that the brother again finds himself on a rock foundation of existence, we shall quote that grand injunction, "Man, know thyself." In philosophizing on man, it appears necessary to give him material quantity and psychological quality, and while the two are inseparably connected, yet when viewed in minutiae it becomes necessary to make that distinction, and I can see no need to change Brother Otto's axioms, as laid down in the Free-thinker not long since, viz.: Axiom—1, force or energy; 2, matter; 3, energy giving matter potency; 4, energy and matter inseparably connected; 5, energy and matter eternal. Brother Otto laid down these axioms as the basis of Materialism, and I lay them down as the basis of the Spiritual philosophy, and, in fact, so far as the evolution of man from the animal atom there is no difference in the two theories until we reach that condition in life called death; and there the issue comes; the Spiritualist claiming that man still goes on evolving in the same manner as before, while the Materialist claims that man at death involutes into what is termed primordial or first elements. If I understand Brother Wettstein, he now, in the TRUTH SEEKER, contends that the underlying principle of animal organization is matter without life, or energy, or mind, yet wishing to be understood as having a fine class of rhetoric, he talks of matter and ego (energy or soul) in the following strain: "The objective reality (matter) underlying all phenomena which we subjectively perceive in its final analysis must be matter or substance, or substantive existence, or all phenomena would vanish from the infinite realms of space; boundless expanse would be one limitless, absolute vacuum, and the ego itself, purely a product of such material, would, of course, be impossible." Let us strip this paragraph of its rhetoric and it reads thus: "Without matter the ego could not give itself geometrical form, and, in fact, could not exist." That is all there is of it. It is true that energy or the ego could not give itself geometrical form without matter, and matter could not exist without energy, god, or the ego, or soul of things. As to which is the horse or the cart in the brother's metaphor, so far as Spiritualism is concerned, makes no difference, for if the body makes the ego and both are inseparably connected, they will both appear, and if the ego (soul) makes the body both will appear just the same, and where is the point he has made by his rhetorical flourish of high-sounding words?

Again, he says: "There no more exists a logical necessity for denying that matter is the underlying reality of all existence." Yes, to be sure, matter is the underlying of all existence and the overlying of all existence, and the sidelaying, top and bottom-lying of all existence, and in one short and simple sentence it is the universal environment of a universal force, energy, ego or soul, and this universal energy has been giving itself geometrical figures of matter since the dawn of eternity in accordance with the teachings of Darwin, Huxley, Haeckel, Helmholtz, Tyndall and Edison, and after matter evolves up to man, man evolves into angels. If matter evolved from nebula to man, why cannot matter evolve a plane higher into beings called angels? And if energy evolved matter into the millions of geometrical figures it has, is it inconsistent to suppose that energy or God can raise man into a still higher grade of life? Thomas Paine said: "I believe in a personal immortality, because the same power that brought me from chaos to where I am can much more easily carry me on from where I am," and "if it be necessary for me to have wings I can easily imagine that God can change my arms into wings." As to the possibility, I can not see how any logical mind can deny the possibility of a personal immortality; the probability is all that is in doubt.

I would here say parenthetically that Brother Wettstein, in connecting Idealism or Transcendentalism with Spiritualism, shows a great want of logical acumen, for the Idealists teach that the whole universe is but a huge bulk of imagination, while Spiritualism teaches that the whole universe is full of energy or God and matter, and that there will never be any less or more energy and matter, but that all crude matter is eternally changing from a lower grade to a higher until it reaches man, and that the same energy in man at death takes a sufficient quantity of attenuated matter to environ itself.

Brother Wettstein says: "Of course, assuming without proof the existence of a non-material entity, soul or spirit, it is easy enough to manufacture a universe in like manner." Spiritualistic philosophers never made any such assumption—such assumptions are but the wanderings of his own mind. The spirit is a material entity possessing every organ, passion and function it possessed while environed in its coarser material, enjoying every pleasure it did before death took place, all in a refined condition. Sleep more refreshing, labor more pleasant, taste more refined, hearing more acute, seeing clearer—in short, we are the identical persons, refined in mind and matter.

But how do I happen to know that such is the case? I answer, simply, because I myself have seen disembodied persons or angels (there never were angels until first men and women lived, and by dying evolved into angels), and mothers have come and talked with us and told us of the neighbors who aforesaid had lived and died in the same neighborhood, and were neighbors in spirit life. Said Professor Hare's mother's spirit to him through the mediumistic power of Mrs. Gowery: "Yes, my son, we indulge in all the passions of earth life, in a refined sense of the word."

All of Brother Wettstein's postulates respecting Idealism and Transcendentalism in which he concludes, "Hence Spiritualism is absurd," are surely ridiculously illogical. The Spiritual philosophy has nothing but matter and its inherent qualities. No logical mind ever denied that each effect must have a cause; each material phenomenon must have been produced by either an outside or an inside force or energy, and he never once thought of discarding energy from his thesis on Materialism until he discovered that it was the right bower in Spiritualism, and then he commenced to either discard or renig in his hypothesis.

In the phenomena of matter called man we must have some cause of this geometrical figure; we may call it force or energy, or God or causator. God is most generally treated as an outside force creating man, like a person making a wagon, but that thesis is fast disappearing, and creative power is now being considered a center-stance and is termed energy by evolutionists and Spiritualists. To the physical body of man belong all the quantities of man as taught in physiological schools, and to energy belong hearing, feeling, seeing, smelling and tasting; those qualities belong to the soul or energy which created the body. Energy (of which soul, and senses are synonyms), is the creator of all phenomena. In our solar system all the god or energy that we have was environed in the sun when it was evolved from our sun's primordial planet as taught by the Laplace theory of cosmogony. This energy permeated the entire body of the sun when in size it reached from the planet Neptune to its present center, and still further, if those comets were evolved from the sun, as now supposed. The energy or the God was the ego of the sun, and commenced separating the surface nebula of the sun into ether and the various minerals which in time formed the mineral kingdom by radiation, as claimed by Laplace, and when the mineral kingdom was evolved the energy within it by atomic radiation evolved the vegetable kingdom, and the same energy being the ego or soul of both kingdoms evolved the animal kingdom, and the same energy which fills the entire universe evolved man from the atoms emanating from the mineral and vegetable kingdoms, much as Haeckel's spontaneous generation and Darwin's evolution claim. What is man? Answer: Man is an infinitesimal of God or energy environed in flesh, or God incarnated. Man is the ultimatum of all earthly life, and can no more be annihilated than can God and matter. Personally, man is an infinitesimal of the male part of a universal God incarnated, and personally woman is an infinitesimal of the female part of God or energy incarnated. God is as much woman as man, and the Grecian philosopher, Pythagoras, who lived three thousand years ago, was correct when he said the universe was permeated by male and female qualities striving to give themselves geometrical figure in separate quantities.

In conclusion: How does man reach angelic life? One simple illustration and I am done: Just the same as a caterpillar reaches the butterfly state. Take a person who is not acquainted with the various changes that take place in the silkworm, and he will doubt the possibility of such a change as much as Brother Wettstein does the change of the human into angel. The silkworm feeds on the coarsest diet during its earthly life, so to speak; after changing to its aerial life it feeds on nectar and traverses the air with ease. Comparatively speaking, here is a greater change than takes place in the transition of man into angel, yet nobody wonders at this mystery. We do not see the spirit when it leaves the earthy tabernacle because it is perfectly colorless, so far as our sight is concerned, consequently it is not visible until it clothes itself slightly with a coarser matter than the atmosphere.

HENRY SHARP.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Address to the Magi.

I look away beyond the trees
And see the gray-blue sky
Serene, unmoved by storm or breeze
Or clouds that pass it by;
The orchard, the meadow, the valley, the hill,
Are spread out in beauty my vision to fill.

You claim that paradise unfurled
To fancy's blindfold view
Is finer than this pictured world
Bedecked in varied hue;
If by my faith heaven-lands I may see,
Why do you paint them, O Magi, for me?

The birds are singing in the wood,
The bees hum in the hive,
The chickens prate in happy mood,
All nature seems alive;
Sounds musical, social, and joyous I hear,
But could I, O Magi, without any ear?

Must I disdain surrounding joys
For fancy-fed desire
Of sky-hid realms and fairy toys
To which the saints aspire?
Nay; life is right here with its actual bliss;
Oh why, why exchange it for shades I may miss?

Ye lauded Magi, all of you,
Ye promise elfin lands
Behind the sky of cold gray-blue
If I keep your commands;
Joy, life eternal you say shall be mine
If to your leading my ways I confine.

When hearing, touch and taste and sight
Lie buried with the brain,
How can I feel that great delight?
O Magi, please explain.
Hav I a duplicate body on high
Which will awake at this body's last sigh?

But how can thought and love and hate
And memory arise
And in good order navigate
To realms beyond the skies?
Magi, if never your word I may doubt,
Show me just how these strange things are found out. M. C. COOMER.
Hubbard, Ia.

A Railway Ride.

As Mr. Marden is in Chicago attending our Freethinkers' congress and the Fair, I take a ride along the banks of the Merrimac river.

The foliage is gorgeous in its autumn dress, and as the river winds in and out, making graceful curves and occasionally a little "wooded island," the view is lovely indeed. I really felt that I was riding through Nature's fair-grounds. O beautiful Nature, I bow to thee in silent adoration.

My ride is on the cars from my home in Penacook, N. H., to Franklin, twelve miles. Just after leaving the depot we cross Dustin island—it is formed by the Contoocook river dividing here and emptying into the Merrimac. This is where the Indians brought Hannah Dustin and her nurse after raiding her home in Haverhill, Mass.; and here is where she killed them as they slept around their campfire, and after taking their scalps, got into a canoe and returned safely to her home. You can find it in history if you wish to know more about it. Some years ago the state appropriated a sum of money, and public-spirited citizens gave more, and erected a granite monument to her memory. The figure of a woman stands on top, with a tomahawk in one hand and the scalps in the other.

As I gazed up into the sculptured, resolute face as the train rushed past, I could but wish that we had to-day a Hannah Dustin to scalp some of our dishonest Congressmen, who make enormous Indian appropriations and then use the most of it to enrich themselves. They evidently belong in the Christian missionary societies.

This is the inscription on one side of the monument:

March
15 1695 30
The War-whoop, Tomahawk,
Fagot and infanticide,
Was at Haverhill.
The ashes of
Wigwams, camp-fires at night,
And ten of the Tribe are here.

On another side is:

STATUS.
Know ye that we with many, plant it,
In trust to the state we giv and grant it,

That the tide of time may never cant it,
Nor mar nor sever.
That Pilgrims here may heed the mothers,
That truth and faith and all the others,
With banners high in glorious colors,
May stand forever.

It fills me with awe to think of those terrible times almost two hundred years ago.

The next place of interest we pass is the Merrimac County Farm in North Boscawen, a good set of brick buildings with all modern improvements, and under good management—the only fault here is there is no separate place for the children. Although there has been some agitation tending to a change, I fear it will be a long time coming.

If any of our readers live in a state that does provide differently for such children, will they please mention it in their letters to the Corner?

A few miles on we pass the State Orphan's Home. This is in Franklin, and was once the home of Daniel Webster, one of our great statesmen. I do not know how many children are cared for here. They take great pains to get good homes for all that they can, and I know of several who have been adopted and found loving care and good homes.

Now the conductor is shouting "Franklin! Franklin!" and my pleasant ride is at an end.

Dear children and friends, let us all so live that as we approach life's autumn, it may be beautiful, and thus shall we leave pleasant memories for our friends. If we seek to be useful and are kindly toward all, especially the aged and unfortunate, it will help us to become lovely and attractive.

I am often reminded that children are never taught these things, and how much of real happiness they miss. We must ever bear in mind the words of the immortal Paine: "The world is my country; to do good, my religion."

ETTA MARDEN.

[A system obtains in Massachusetts, whereby such children are boarded in private families until old enough to be helpful.—Ed. C. C.]

Correspondence.

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Oct. 9, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I often read the Children's Corner and see a good many little girls' writing to you, so I thought I would write a few lines for the Corner. My papa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER since 1878. I have one sister and four brothers. I am going to school every day. My studies are spelling, reading, arithmetic, physiology, mental arithmetic, geography, and grammar. I like to go to school. I am nine years old. I will close hoping this will escape the waste-basket.

From your Liberal friend,

CARRIE DIETZ.

[Glad to hear from Carrie and hope she will write often.—Ed. C. C.]

DRESDEN, IND., Oct. 29, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: For the second time I attempt to write to you. I suppose you have forgotten me, since it has been so long since I wrote last. I have visited a Mormon conference, and obtained some of their views of religion. I think it is about like all the rest.

I was glad to hear that you reached home in safety. There is no use to say that I hope you had a good time, for I know you did. This is Sunday, and I can say I broke one of the Ten Commandments, by changing a drove of cattle to another field; but I don't think it will bother my conscience much.

I go to church when there is any, but that isn't very often, only every three weeks. School began one month ago, and I have been every day.

The weather was very cold last night, and there was a heavy frost, but the sun shines bright now. Sundays here as a general thing are very dull, and I usually go nutting or some place else where I can see some fun. Your Freethinker friend,
EVERETT PAGE.

P.S.—I would like to correspond with some member of the Corner. E. P.
[A sensible boy is Evert. Please tell us the kind of nuts you gather, how they grow, etc.—Ed. C. C.]

YUCCA, ORE., Oct. 22, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As this is my first attempt to write to the Children's Corner I hope it will escape the waste-basket. I was born in California. We came to Oregon about three years ago and we like it much better than California. We live one-half mile from town. I go to school every day and I like our teacher very well, although she is a lover of Christ. My papa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER about two years and likes it very much. I read it Sundays instead of the Bible. I am afraid I am writing too much, so I close.

Yours for truth, NELLIE BRUMMETT.

[Nellie shows that she has sensible ideas by her choice of Sunday reading. We hope to hear from Nellie often.—Ed. C. C.]

WICHITA FALLS, TEX., Oct. 28, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I am a constant reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Mother has taken it for nine years. She is a widow and I have one little sister. We have been to California on a visit to see my grandma and aunt. California is a lovely country.

This is a bigoted town with nine churches.

We live near the school-house, and my sister and I attend school. I study reading, spelling, arithmetic, language, and geography. My teacher's name is Fannie Burgess. She belongs to the Baptist church. Mamma owns a farm three miles south of town. It has been very dry, crops are short, prices low, and times very hard. I have one of your books, "The Story Hour." I also have "Papa's Own Girl," "For Her Daily Bread," and "Little Lessons for Little Folks." I enjoy reading the Corner very much. If any of the Cornerites will write to me I will gladly answer their letters. I am thirteen years old.

Hoping this will escape the waste-basket, I remain your Freethinker friend,

MAGGIE CUMMINGS.

[Maggie is a progressive girl, and we will always be glad to hear from her.—Ed. C. C.]

VOSS, N. DAK., Nov. 2, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Thinking you would like to hear from a little girl in North Dakota, I thought I would write you a few words. I like living here very much. It is a rich farming country. Our farmers here raise mostly wheat. The wind blows sometimes, and we have some very cold weather. We that live here become used to these things and don't mind them; yet we have many pleasant and sunny days. But we can't expect all sunshine anywhere.

My papa is a merchant. I am eleven years old. I go to school. My teacher is very religious. She teaches religion half the time. For an object, she draws a picture on the blackboard of Jesus nailed to the cross for us to look at and be reminded of how he loved us to suffer so for our sins, that we might be saved. For my part, I think it would be quite selfish myself if I were to wish some one else to suffer for my sins, and if Jesus is the son of God, as the teacher says, I don't think God is a very good father to allow his son to be treated in that way. The teacher talks good and sweet about her religion, and tries to make it appear real nice. My little brother, six years old, thinks she is just right. I think it is only little children that haven't come to the years of understanding, or grown-up folks that never have much understanding, that believe in such trash. My mamma is a Spiritualist. She takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and thinks it tells lots of truth, and so do I.

I will have to close for this time. I am your Liberal friend,

NELLIE A. WOODBURY.

[A good letter from a good girl. Write again, Nellie. Kind regards to mamma.—Ed. C. C.]

ATCHISON, KAN., Oct. 27, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON AND CORNERITES: At the age of ten I wrote my first letter to the Corner; at the age of eighteen I write my second, and I hope by twenty-six my third will be forgotten. I trust after eight years of study the second will show an improvement over the first, and it will unless the Lord has given me destruction of mind instead of trying to build it up as he should have done; and if while at work on it he knew my feelings for him and his family, he surely impaired it to some degree. It seems a shame to abuse the poor old withered man, but the harm he did while young can't be forgiven in his old days. In the eight years I have been silent I suppose the Corner has (in point of correspondents) grown up with the country, and may it grow high enough to get a peep through the pearly gates of God's great domain, and I believe we will have to go there on some other plan than that adopted by Christians, of waiting until we are dead and buried. If Christians believe they will go to heaven when dead, why don't they throw their dead bodies in the oceans or in the rivers or any other place out of the Infidel's way, and by so doing save paving for coffins and other articles which death demands? If I was as sure there was a heaven as I am that there isn't, and I knew I could get there by joining the church I would be baptized before finishing this letter, so I could tell you all how it felt, and if I took cold and if I "cussed" the preacher for not warming the water or using soap, and in fact, everything that happened during the performance.

I will have to finish this letter without the baptismal story included, and can assure you all that my pen will never write the sad story of my downfall. All the Talmages in nature's green world couldn't change my present belief. Talmages? "Let me alone that I may destroy them and blot out their name from under heaven; and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they" (Deut. ix, 14). Yes, Talmage, let me alone, and I'll make it mightier with my mouth closed than you will with your wide open pouring out slanders on some man who could teach you something worth knowing, providing your brains are not limited. Fearing that I'll hurt the feelings of some poor Christian, if I continue, I'll close my mouth on them.

Yours for anything Talmage does not preach, CHARLES B. REMSBURG.

[Charles, we are delighted to get a letter from you. It is of the right ring, too; but do not wait eight years before you write again.—Ed. C. C.]

OUR NEWEST BOOKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? By JOHN E. REMSBURG. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Pen-Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper, 25 cents.

Religion a Curse, a Lie, and a Disease. By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper, 25 cents.

Design Argument Fallacies. A Refutation of the Argument that Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being. By the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Paper, 15 cents.

Crimes of Preachers in the United States. By M. E. Billings. Paper, 25 cents.

Handbook of Freethought. By W. S. Bell. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Pleasure and Progress: An Attempt to Prove that the Pursuit of Pleasure is the sine qua non of Intellectual, Moral, and Social Development, and that the Promotion of Pleasure is the Duty of Philanthropy and Statesmanship. By Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Creation of God. Tracing the God-idea to Its Source. By Jacob Hartmann, M.D. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Resurrection of Jesus. By Don Allen. Cloth, 75 cents; cloth, 40 cents.

Facts and Fictions of Life. By Helen H. Gardener. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Cloth, $2; leather, $3.

IN PRESS.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought. By Samuel P. Putnam. Subscription book, elegant binding, over one hundred portraits, $5.

Woman: Four Centuries of Progress. By Susan H. Wixon. Paper, 10 cents.

The Church and Freethought. By Franklin Steiner. Paper, 10 cents.

The Giant Delusion. One of Otto Wettstein's Friendly Arguments with the Spiritualists. Paper, 10 cents.

Bible Inquirer. By Andrew Jacobson. Paper, 25 cents.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.
The Muscular Tissues.
The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances.

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables {Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—
The Jewish Sabbath—The
Christian Scriptures and the
Sabbath—Examination of
Sunday Arguments—Origin
of the Christian Sabbath—
Testimony of the Christian
Fathers—The Sabbath during
the Middle Ages—The
Puritan Sabbath—Testimony
of Christian Reformers,
Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth; Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone; Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards? The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested? Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things in Immortality of Matter, Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Force, Man,
Infinity of Matter, Brain and Mind,
Value of Matter, Thought,
Motion, Consciousness,
Form, Seat of the Soul,
Immutability of Natural Innate Ideas,
Laws, The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Personal Continuance,
Laws, Vital Force,
The Heavens, The Soul of Brutes
Periods of the Creation Free Will,
of the Earth, Morality,
Original Generation, Concluding Observa-
Secular Generation, tions.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

(Editor of the)

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 80 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius.

Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life.

Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin.

In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardner's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Li. tiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Abs. on; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism.

In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Not for Parsons.

You can't tell what a man will do in a horse trade by the amount of noise he makes in church.—Ram's Horn.

FAGAN: An' doesn't yer short mimory giv yez a gheat dale o' trouble, Moike. O'Rourke: Shure, Tim, it's the coorse av me life, ixcept whin Oi goes to confession?—Puck.

SMITH: I was sorry to hear, Brown, that you hav failed in business. Brown (a pious grocer): Yes, I struggled hard, but I lost everything save my honor, thank God, and the property I was wise enough to settle on my wife when I found myself getting into trouble.

A good old lady said to her nephew, a poor preacher: "James, why did you enter the ministry?" "Because I was called," he answered. "James," said the old lady anxiously, as she looked up from wiping her spectacles, "are you sure it wasn't some other noise you heard?"

PEABLOSSOM: Uncle Mose, does you beleeb we is all made ob dust? Uncle Mose: Sutinly we is. Peablossom: Den de cultured folks must be made ob coal dust. Uncle Mose: De Lor! I nebber thunk ob dat, but I reckon we is. Peablossom: How erbout de yaller niggers?—Texas Siftings.

"AND how do you like my 'Adam and Eve in Paradise'?" asked Smudge of a farmer during his last sojourn in the Catskills, where he had removed his studio. "The general effect is fine, but allow me to call your attention to the fact that you've placed in Eve's hand a variety of apple that has been grown only the past twenty years."—Vogue.

In a French churchyard is a monument having an epitaph of which the following is a translation: "Here lies Jean Pinto, the Spanish vocalist. When he reached heaven he united his voice with the voices of the archangels. As soon as he heard him the Deity cried, 'Keep quiet, all you fellows, and let us hear alone the illustrious singer, Jean Pinto!'"—Chicago Tribune.

AUNT EUNICE is conscientiously opposed to the words "dead," "death," and "die" as being both pagan and repulsive. When her father died, therefore, and it became her duty to send the sad tidings to her brother out West, she telegraphed as follows: "Jesus has taken father home." What was her amazement and distress to receive, hours later, the somewhat disgusted reply: "Who is Jessie, and where is her home?"—Life.

A SCOTTISH congregation presented their minister with a sum of money, and sent him off to the continent for a holiday. A gentleman just back from the continent met a prominent member of the church and said to him: "Oh, by the way, I met your minister in Germany. He was looking very well; he didn't look as though he needed a rest." "No," said the church-member, very calmly, "it was na' him; it was the congregation that was needin' a rest."

BEFORE Tennessee had seceded Peter Turney had organized a brigade and gone to the front. Once, while in winter quarters with a Georgia brigade, a religious revival broke out among the soldiers. After a few days Turney asked how things were progressing and was informed that twelve Georgians had been converted. "And how many Tennessees?" inquired the governor. "Not one," was the reply. "What, twelve Georgians and not a Tennessean? Never shall it be said, if I am able to prevent it, that Georgia has excelled Tennessee. Detail eighteen men immediately for baptism."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A WISCONSIN minister got a bicycle recently and took it to the top of a hill to learn to ride. He thought it would be feasible to get on and ride downhill. He got on and away he went like a sinner down the toboggan slide of temptation. Faster and faster flew the bicycle and wilder grew the preacher's look as he steered the thing with clenched teeth. At the bottom the bicycle ran into sand and away the rider flew. In other words, such as railroad tourists use, the wheel laid over and he went on. He ran his nose about eight inches into the sand, when he reached the earth, and disfigured his face. He breathed a missionary vow or two and went home. The chief feature of his face for the next four days was patchwork. It is rumored that he has remarked that all men should come to Jesus, but as for bicycles they can go where they have pavements of good intentions.—Grafton (N. D.) Record. No wonder he took a header if he steered the bike with his teeth instead of using his hands for that purpose.

A GREAT BOOK ON RADICAL, SOCIAL, AND ECONOMIC REFORMS.

The title of the book is

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

The author is

HENRY OLERICH, of Hawarden, Ia.

This book is in story form, well printed on good paper, well illustrated, and handsomely bound. It is a text-book on "Co-operative Individualism." For many it is perhaps too radical on some questions of reform, but it is nevertheless eminently thought-provoking.

The universal unrest manifested by the thinking world, particularly during these "hard times," plainly indicates that our social, economic, and religious institutions are not in tune with the best thought of the age. The author vividly portrays an ideal world from which all our present social, economic, and religious evils are eliminated. For the fulfillment of his prophecy, the author does not rely on miracles, but on the advancing intelligence of thoughtful men and women. If Mr. Olerich's ideal state can ever be attained the world will certainly be a paradise. Beautifully cloth-bound, price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MENTAL HEALING.

A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power.

By LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

A Book to explain the correct idea of Mental Healing, and what may be reasonably expected to result from an understanding of its principles. Price, $2.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

A. UNODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, 75 cents

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in the Interest of and Owned by the Whole People.

By HON. THOMAS E. HILL,

of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms," "The Hill Banking System," and other works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted.

This book is "just in time," is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFERENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the Initiative and Referendum,

By J. W. SULLIVAN.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed. Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

28 Lafayette place, New York City.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

PRESENTS :: FOR THE :: HOLIDAYS.

The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book, in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $2.50. In plain boards, $2.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated, in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $1.50. In plain boards, $1.

Around the World, by D. M. Bennett, 4 volumes, red cloth covers, $6.50; leather, red edges, $9.50; morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers, 1,075 pages. 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Ingersoll's Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; tree calf, $3.

Ingersoll's Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1,141 pages. In one volume, half calf, $5.

Life. A Prose Poem. By R. G. Ingersoll. In color, on boards, beveled, gilt edges, 50 cents.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll. 50 cents.

Apples of Gold, by Miss Susan H. Wixon. Gilt stamp. $1.25.

All in a Lifetime, by Miss Wixon. $1.

Voltaire's Romances, Profusely Illustrated. Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Darwin and After Darwin. By George J. Romanes. Silk cloth, gilt top, $2.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Conway's Life of Paine. Two large, handsome volumes. The best and only complete life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $5.

Parton's Life of Voltaire. Of which the same can be said as of Conway's Life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $6.

Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Leather, $3; cloth, gilt top, $2.

History of Christianity, comprising all that relates to Christianity in the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $2.

Force and Matter. By Professor Ludwig Buchner, M.D. Half calf, $3; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind. By James B. Alexander. Cloth, $2.75.

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

Asleep and Awake. A new Liberal novel. By Raymond Russell. Cloth, side and back stamp, $1.

Cosmian Hymn Book. With music to all the songs. Edited by L. K. Washburn. Cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

For Other Books See the Advertisements, or Send to Us for a Free Catalogue.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Gems of Thought.

WHEN women reason and babes sit in the lap of philosophy, the victory of Reason over the shadowy host of Darkness will be complete.—R. G. Ingersoll.

THE hour has struck when men should be made to understand that any thought of ownership in wifehood is more than degrading and immoral; it is positively criminal.—B. O. Flower.

If you want knowledge you must toil for it; if food, you must toil for it; and if pleasure, you must toil for it. Toil is the law. Pleasure comes through toil, and not by self-indulgence. When one gets to love work his life is a happy one.—Ruskin.

On two days you need not be anxious about your life—the appointed day and the unappointed.

“On the first, neither balm nor physician can save,

Nor thee, on the second, the universe slay.”—Persian Proverb.

THE constitution of man is such that, for a long time after he has discovered the incorrectness of the ideas prevailing around him, he shrinks from openly emancipating himself from their domination; and, constrained by the force of circumstances, he becomes a hypocrite, publicly applauding what his private judgment condemns.—Dr. J. W. Draper.

ANOTHER theological romance taught in the past was that family life, as it at present exists in the domestic circle, was ordained from the beginning. The facts of evolution entirely contradict this statement. True, we find family life at the head of civilization; but that is a very different matter from its being coeval with the first appearance of man in tribes or hordes. It is not correct to say that man and woman always lived together as they now do, with a supply of domestic utensils. Evolution is seen in this sphere of life as clearly as it is in other departments of existence.—Charles Watts.

It is the common belief of the inhumane stage, then, that there will be at some time or other a “general resurrection.” No doubt this general resurrection has been slowly developed out of the belief in and expectation of many partial resurrections. It is understood that each individual corpse will, or may, resurge at some time; therefore it is believed that all corpses together will resurge at a single particular moment. So long as burial persists, the belief in the resurrection persists beside it, and forms the main feature in the current conception of the future life among the people who practice it.—Grant Allen.

THIS is Paine's greatest title to remembrance. He attacked oppression in its stronghold of superstition. His blows told with such force that to-day the positions he attacked are being gradually abandoned. His services to mankind embittered against him all the ministers of superstition and the forces of privilege. Lying stories were told of his declining years and death-bed. These have been happily dissipated by Mr. Conway, his latest and most painstaking biographer, and the name of Paine is being gradually recognized all over the English-speaking world as that of one of the most valiant liberators of humanity.—J. M. Wheeler.

No two men but being left alone with each other enter into simpler relations. Yet it is affinity that determines which two shall converse. Unrelated men give little joy to each other; will never suspect the latent powers of each. We talk sometimes of a great talent for conversation, as if it were a permanent property in some individuals. Conversation is an evanescent relation—no more. A man is reputed to have thought and eloquence; he cannot, for all that, say a word to his cousin or his uncle. They accuse his silence with as much reason as they would blame the insignificance of a dial in the shade. In the sun it will mark the hour. Among those who enjoy his thought he will regain his tongue.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

INDIVIDUAL sovereignty is the condition to progress. Man is prudent only when he is his own protector. He is persevering only when he is his own provider. Moreover, he must be permitted to exercise choice in his indulgences, if he is expected to exercise his best capacities in business. His judgment must be unmolested if his ingenuity is to be developed. Restraint of an appetite is tantamount to robbery of its object. Regulation of conduct is emasculation of the mind. Man is a factor in progress only when he is free. Wherever individuals were sovereign, progress was a fact. It is to individual sovereigns that we are indebted for everything that is admirable in our civilization. If the larger proportion of men continue individual sovereigns progress will proceed until science extorts the last secret from matter, until invention enslaves the last force of nature, until a wish is a performance and a hope is a fact.—Albert M. Lorentz.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers; and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged

As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by

Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiotcy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life,

delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from “Common Sense,” “American Crisis,” “Rights of Man,” and “Age of Reason,” are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1894. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	30
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath-Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel F. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BARCOCK Price, 15 cts.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during two years of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was “no better than she should be,” but investigation disclosed that her “child of shame” was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the “Confessional Unmasked,” from the “Master Key to Popery,” etc. The work is a protest against an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR,

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR,

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and Truth Seeker, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WANTED—500,000 Freethinkers to stop at
Richter's Hotel, Cullman, Ala. 6146

MAGIC LANTERNS

And STEREOPTICONS, all prices. Views illustrating every subject for PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS, etc.
A profitable business for a man with a small capital. Also, lanterns for Home Amusement. 250 page Catalogue free. McALLISTER, Mfg. Opticians, 49 Nassau St., N.Y. 13 eow39

CHOLERA, DIPHTHERIA, Dysentery
Piles, Quinsy, Catarrh. The Antidote for $1.
Agents wanted. Dr. G. H. MILLER, 2,333 Hickory street, St. Louis, Mo., former address, 1,441 South Twelfth street, Denver, Col. 20t28

THE

“Otto Wettstein” WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position. Beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $36; hinged case, $23 to $30; hunting, $30 to $36; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels $15. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleared for $1 and returned free.

Sundries. Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more Etched (teas only):

“The Time to be Happy is Now.”

50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
P.S.—The “Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon” free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

STRONG, HEALTHY MANHOOD

Those Afflicted with Early Decay,
Loss of Manhood,
Wasting Discharges,
Varicocele,
etc., Mental and Physical Debility and who are desirous of being cured, a booklet will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and symptoms of the complaints, and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success.
Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS,
Say where you saw this adver. Vineland, N. J.

THE LORD'S HAND FALLS ON ZEKE.

And it came to pass in the sixth year, in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I sat in mine house, and the elders of Judah sat before me, that the hand of the Lord God fell there upon me.—Ezek. viii. 1.

News of the Week.

ITALY's financial situation is very serious.

PRINCE ALEXANDER, of Battenberg, is dead.

FRANCIS PARKMAN, the American historian, is dead.

THE trolley has been successfully applied to Erie canal boats, experimentally.

CANADA is to have a forest reservation of thirteen hundred square miles in the Nipissing district.

REV. CHARLES F. DEEMS, pastor of the Church of the Strangers, of New York, died on Nov. 18.

THE Sultan of Morocco has ordered the Riff tribes to cease their warfare against the Spaniards at Melilla.

WILLIAM H. BEERS, who built up the business of the New York Life Insurance Company, died last week.

GENERAL BOOTH, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, is coming to the United States for a six months' tour.

SECRETARY CARLISLE has ordered the release of the ten Russian convicts picked up at sea and landed at San Francisco.

The new, pro tem., mayor of Chicago, George B. Swift, has ordered the closing of all the gambling houses in that city.

PETER ILITSOH TSOCHAIKOWSKY, the famous Russian composer, died at St. Petersburg on Nov. 5th of cholera, six hours after he fell ill.

STRIKE of street car employees in Marseilles, France. Fifty cars destroyed and number of horses injured. Troops dispersed the rioters.

I. F. MENAGE, the embezzling president of the Northwestern Guaranty Loan and Trust Company, has been arrested in Guatemala.

THE great coal strike in England is over, after a four months' fight that has been as disastrous as a real war. Lord Rosebery acted as arbitrator.

THE House of Commons adopted an amendment to the Parish Councils Bill conferring the suffrage upon women in local government and parliamentary elections.

HENRY LABOUCHERE, in his paper, London Truth, characterizes the "struggle" of the British South African Company with the Matabeles as "a battue, not a war."

THE Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New York has brought suit against the Northern Pacific Railroad for the foreclosure of mortgages aggregating $53,000,000.

A CATHOLIC paper opposes the indictment of members of the American Protective Association for conspiracy. For such "martyr-making" proceedings it would substitute the boycott.

ROBERT BEAR has been sent to prison in Australia for selling the paper, Hard Cash. Others are threatened with the same fate. The offense consists in exposure of the crimes connected with the recent great bank failures in that country.

THE World's Fair of 1900 will be held in Paris. The site will include the Champs de Mars, the grounds of the Palais du Trocadéro, the Quai d'Orsay, the Esplanade des Invalides, the Quai de la Conférence, the Cours la Reine, and the Palais de l'Industrie.

By the joint action of Congress and the Supreme Court of the United States, the fund arising out of the sale of the property of the Mormon church, held under orders by the courts for the past few years, has been turned over to the Mormon church authorities for distribution. The fund amounts to several hundred thousand dollars.

A NEW Paris invention, recently introduced in New York, is likely to be hard on the druggists. "Laundering the stomach" consists in running into the stomach, through a rubber tube, a quart of warm water. It is allowed to remain a short time, and four doses are given at each treatment. "Laundering" is aimed particularly at dyspepsia.

It is proposed to form "The Catholic Women's National League of America." It has for its aim "self-improvement and the enterprise of philanthropic work for the uplifting and advancement of humanity." This includes reading circles, day nurseries, free kindergartens, temperance societies, homes for working girls, mothers' meetings and training classes, and societies for the solution of the domestic service problem. Unlike the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, it does not appear to contemplate any resort to law.

The
LAST TENET Imposed upon
the
KHAN of TOMATHOZ
Hudor Genone

Illustrated by
Louis M. Glackens.

Price, 50 cents.

ADDRESS
The Truth Seeker.

Deutsche Freigeist-Bücher.

Wier haben folgende Bücher in
Deutscher Sprache welche sehr berühmt sind.

„Die Irrthümer Moses,“
Eine kritische Beleuchtung des Pentateuch für Widerpruch zur modernen Weltan-
schauung und Gesittung.
von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 50 Cents.

Das Weib und ihre Stellung zur
Religion und Kirche am Ende
des 19. Jahrhunderts.
von Helene S. Gardener, Preis 50 Cents.

„Moderne Götterdämmerung,“
von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 25 Cents.

„Wunder und Wunderthäter,“
von John Peck, Preis 20 Cents.

„Glaube und Vernunft,“
oder LE BON SENS.
des römisch-katholischen Priesters Jean Meslier.
Nach dem französischen Original überetzt von Fräulein Anna Knoop.
301 Seiten, Leinwand, $1.00, Papier, 50 Cts.

Diese Bücher sind in Papier Umschlag und klaren Druck. Unsere Deutschen Leser
sollten es weit verbreiten.

Adresse, "The Truth Seeker,"
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, New York.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By Mrs. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

A NEW WORK

BY

ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by
J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bedrock of human liberty.

Price, - - - 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

How To Preserve Health.

By LOUIS BARKAN, M.D.

Fordyce Barker, M.D., Professor
Bellevue Medical College says of it, writing to the author: "I regard your book as the most sound, sensible, and useful book on the topics which it discusses that I have met with. I wish it could be in the hands of every intelligent head of a family. I am particularly pleased with one feature of it,
that it does not profess to teach dosing and drugging. I congratulate you on the wisdom and success of this effort."

Other noted physicians recommend it just as highly.

Price, cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette place, New York.

SURVEYORS, ATTENTION!

A rare chance is offered for a surveyor to get a

TRANSIT CHEAP.

We have one for sale, in good order, with Tripod, which cost $160. We will sell it for half-price—$80. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New articles just out.
A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us.
CHIDESTER & SON, 26 Bond St., N. Y.
1846

AGENTS MAKE 100 PER CENT PROFIT
and more, get sample free, best-known goods in all America. Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Safety Razors, Curlers, Insoles, Plasters, and all our other popular goods. (Either sex.)
Address Dr. GEO. A. SCOTT,
842 Broadway, N. Y. City.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.

Price, 15 cents.

Address this office.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 48. { PUBLISHED WEEKLY. } New York, Saturday, December 2, 1893. { 28 LAFAYETTE PL. } $3.00 Per Year.

A GOOD COMPARISON—THE FOLLY OF PRAYER.

TO NEW READERS OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

We send this issue of The Truth Seeker to a great many Liberals who are not subscribers, with an earnest invitation to them to become such, and thereby help along the Liberal cause.

We would also respectfully call their attention to the many points of excellence of the Paper.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is the Largest Freethought Journal in the World.

The Cartoons of Heston appear each week, and each picture is worth the cost of the paper a year to one who appreciates plain and telling arguments against ecclesiasticism.

THE TRUTH SEEKER constantly prints the most varied and entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal. Its Contributors are all the noted Liberals of the country. All that Col. R. G. Ingersoll gives to the Public can be found in THE TRUTH SEEKER, and that Poet of Freethought, Samuel P. Putnam, writes more for its columns than for any other. The Liberal speakers send us accounts of their journeys, and the best writers of Freethought freely devote their services to the cause of Liberalism through the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Charles Watts, perhaps the greatest Debater of our time, certainly the foremost Secular orator of England, will send us monthly letters from England with all the news of our movement there and such reflections and pertinent observations as will surely make every English Secularist living in this country and Canada want to read THE TRUTH SEEKER. George E. Macdonald, one of the rarest combinations of humorist, satirist, philosopher, logician, has been engaged to write regularly for our columns. As the "Man With the Badge Pin," he is known to nearly all the Liberals of the country, and we are willing to make him known to more.

THE TRUTH SEEKER gives all the news of Freethought, and is always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

The Sunday Question is now to the front all over the country. On that THE TRUTH SEEKER will voice the demands of the Liberal minded men and women of the country, and nowhere else will the rights of the people as against Puritanism be found so sturdily defended.

To sum it up, THE TRUTH SEEKER is the biggest, best, and bravest Freethought journal in the world, and if you are a Liberal or Freethinker, you want it and ought to take it. We appeal also to fair-minded Christians to hear our side and then decide. Bigots and fanatics, we suppose, wouldn't take it on any terms.

SEE OUR PREMIUM OFFER FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS on the second and third pages. Take advantage of one of these offers, or send $3 for a Year's subscription, or $1 for four months' trial. THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Most Magnificent Work Ever Published by the Freethought Press.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The object of this work is to present the Course of Freethought throughout the Civilized World for the last Four Centuries, from the time of Columbus and Bruno to the time of Ingersoll.

It will be a radical Historic Record of the Greatest Developments of the Human Race.

It will reveal Freethought as an Intellectual, Moral, Literary, Social, Industrial, and Political Movement.

It will show what Freethought is in itself and how manifold are its influences, and with what hope and promise we can hail its future triumph.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" will Embrace the most Illustrious Pages of Human History

adorned with the brightest Genius, radiant with the most splendid Poetry, rich with the greatest Inventions and Discoveries and ennobled with Freedom's most shining advance.

Nothing Can be More Interesting,

more inspiring to the Pioneer Workers of to-day—to those who are still in the van for Human Rights and Progress. The struggle is not ended and what is already won must be carefully guarded. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty; and from the Past we must ever learn Great Lessons for the Future.

NO LIBERAL CAN AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT THIS BOOK.

It will contain the Greatest Thoughts and the Greatest Deeds of the Greatest Men

In One Harmonious and Magnificent Whole,

a vivid picture of man's sublimest evolution, with the added glory of

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION

from the chains and slavery of a barbaric creed and church.

THE FIRST PART of the book will deal with Freethought as a Universal Power, as a Spirit, a Method, a prevailing but unorganized Influence in every Department of Human Growth.

THE SECOND PART will deal with Freethought as an Organized Movement, especially in America and Europe; and this history is of equal importance with the first, and should be justly understood and the Pioneers of our work recognized.

The first part will embrace the following Grand Departments:

Philosophy.	Science.	Education and Ethics.	Literature.	Government and Politics.	Woman's Emancipation.
Bruno.	Copernicus.	Bacon.	Boccaccio.	Voltaire.	Madame Roland.
Spinoza.	Galileo.	Bacon.	Rabelais.	Rousseau.	Mary Wollstonecraft.
Descartes.	Kepler.	Comenius.	Cervantes.	French Salon.	Harriet Martineau.
Locke.	Da Vinci.	Pestalozzi.	Marlowe.	French Revolution.	Frances Wright.
Hume.	Newton.	Froebel.	Shakespeare.	Phillips.	Lucretia Mott.
Hobbs.	Humboldt.	Combe.	Gibbon.	Thomas Paine.	Ernestine L. Rose.
Kant.	Lyell.	Spencer.	Burns.	Jefferson.	Lydia Maria Child.
Hamilton.	Darwin.	Owen.	Shelley.	Mazzini.	Margaret Fuller.
Comte.	Tyndall.	Holmes.	Byron.	Bentham.	Elizabeth Cady Stanton.
Büchner.	Huxley.	Haeckel.	Pushkin.	Mill.	Susan B. Anthony.
Feuerbach.		Girard.	Teherny-chewsky.	Garibaldi.	Matilda Joselyn Gage.
		Lick.		Heinzen.	Helen H. Gardener.
					Annie Besant.

THE PORTRAITS OF THESE ILLUSTRIOUS REFORMERS

in every domain of Human Thought and Progress will adorn the pages of this volume.

The Second Part of this volume will be devoted especially to organized Freethought and the Liberal Press in modern times. The Truth Seeker, Investigator, Ironclad Age, Secular Thought, Freethinkers' Magazine, Independent Pulpit, Lucifer, the Freethinker, Agnostic Journal, etc.

It will give a history of the

GREAT INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS

at Chicago, the Freethought Federation of America, the American Secular Union, the various state and local organizations, the Canadian Secular Union, the British Secular Union, and other Liberal associations throughout the world.

It will contain the portraits of those who, up to the present time, have been identified with Freethought work—editors, lecturers, officers of societies, and those who, as representative men, have won distinction in other fields of effort. There will be the portraits of

Horace Seaver,	George E. Macdonald,	Capt. R. C. Adams,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.,	Susan H. Wixon,
J. P. Mendum,	E. M. Macdonald,	John R. Charlesworth,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.,	Mrs. Charles Watts,
D. M. Bennett,	L. K. Washburn,	Samuel P. Putnam,	Prof. J. H. Cook,	Mrs. Robert C. Adams,
Parker Pillsbury,	Ernest Mendum,	John E. Remsburg,	E. H. Heywood,	Mrs. M. A. Freeman,
Elizur Wright,	Charles Watts,	Franklin Steiner,	Otto Wettstein,	Katie Kehm Smith,
T. O. Leland,	G. W. Foote,	J. D. Shaw,	Stephen Pearl Andrews,	Lucy N. Colman,
T. B. Wakeman,	Saladin,	E. A. Stevens,	James Parton,	Lillian Leland,
Judge C. B. Waite.	J. R. Monroe,	H. L. Green,	Abner Kneeland,	Amy Post.

and other men and women who have contributed to the advancement of Freethought and whose names should be remembered throughout the Liberal ranks. There will also be about

ONE HUNDRED BIOGRAPHIES,

and in these will be given a picture of Freethought progress which will be most interesting and valuable, for it is in individuals that we find the best interpretations of the age.

The Price of This Superb Book is $5.00,

and not for the same amount of money can there be found such an array of facts, such a survey of history, and such a galaxy of Freethought.

Mr. Putnam is now devoting his whole time to this work and it will be published at the earliest possible moment.

The name of every Subscriber who sends five dollars before the work is on the press will be enrolled in this book. DON'T FAIL TO SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE.

This book will contain

Over Six Hundred Pages of Printed Matter and Over One Hundred Portraits.

It will be elegantly bound. It will be a book for the home and the fireside. It will be a book to give to your friends when they ask, What is Freethought—what has it done and what is it doing in the world?

This is the most universal presentation of Freethought ever given to the public, and no Freethinker can afford to be without it. It is a library in itself.

Address orders to

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

HOW TO GET FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT FREE

SPECIAL OFFER.

We have made arrangements with Mr. Putnam whereby we are enabled to make our friends a most generous offer.

We need more subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and every Freethinker needs "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." Not all are able to pay $5 for it, but everyone can do a little work to obtain a copy—congenial work, that will do great good all around. This is the offer:

Send us Four New Yearly Subscribers at regular rates ($12 in all), and we will send the Getter-up of the Club a copy of 'FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT,' FREE OF CHARGES.

And further, to aid our friends in getting this book for themselves, we will offer

To the New Subscribers as a Premium,

post free, a copy in boards of

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated

By WATSON HESTON,

THE GREATEST BOOK OF ITS KIND EVER CONCEIVED.

Or, if preferred, a copy cloth-bound of W. S. BELL'S

Handbook of Freethought.

With these Splendid Works as premiums there ought to be no difficulty in getting hundreds of clubs of subscribers.

Remember, to the Getter-up of The Club, FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT, free.

To each New Subscriber in the club, a premium of a Dollar Book—either "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought," in Cloth—all free by post or express.

This really brings the price of the paper down to $2 to each new subscriber, as they get THE TRUTH SEEKER one year and a dollar book for $3.

A Club of Four New Subscribers and $12 ($3 only from each) does this.

We want to extend our circulation, and we want to help our friends to help us.

It ought not to be difficult to get four New Subscribers in any town in the country, especially with these Splendid Premiums to assist.

Those who get up these Clubs will receive their copies of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" as soon as the book is issued.

Those who send a Club and Four New Subscribers and $12 before the book is printed, will have their names enrolled in its shining pages.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, NEW YORK.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 48. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, December 2, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - DECEMBER 2, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

SOME HANDSOME PREMIUMS.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $6.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and S. P. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" ($5). By taking advantage of this or our Free offer of the book (see opposite page) there is no reason why every Freethinker in the country should not possess this splendid work.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" ($3). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and James B. Alexander's Dynamic Theory ($2.75). This is a splendid offer, for every one wants this book. It has over a thousand large pages and more than four hundred illustrations. It is a digest of Science, and every one who studies it cannot help but be well-informed in all scientific matters.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in board covers ($1).

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have, at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

The Mission of Freethought.

Referring to episcopacy, the Living Church remarks: "What is not of divine institution must be a matter of human choice. What is a matter of human choice cannot be essential."

Religion presupposes that certain things are of divine institution. Which are they? How is the divine to be recognized? How shall it be distinguished from the human? Who are competent to judge?

Religion also assumes that what is of human choice is non-essential. Hence there at once begins a struggle to determine which of any two views is based on divine truth and which has the sanction of human wisdom only.

The devotees of each religious system brand as heretical the adherents of all others. They charge that their beliefs and forms of worship are human inventions.

In these disputes time, money, and vital forces are prodigally wasted. Antipathies and bitter hatreds are engendered. Victories are won and defeats are suffered which make the victors proud, vainglorious, and domineering, and the vanquished deceitful, morose, and revengeful.

The sects are jealous and watchful of each other. All desire to be in the good graces of the civil power, and each fears that the other will thus secure advantages. Gradually the more powerful gain substantial recognition from the state. This makes them all the more greedy and unscrupulous. They begin to dream of supremacy over the unchurched masses and the smaller sects which disagree with them on questions which are more important on the human than the divine side. To gain their ends they somewhat tone down the sectarian differences and soften the denominational asperities which have held them apart. They speak with unwonted emphasis of the few beliefs which they have in common, and ignore as much as possible the many minor dogmas which are now tacitly assumed to be human in their origin and therefore non-essential, although once held to be of divine parentage and hence vitally important.

As this work of federation proceeds politicians become in turn attentive, obsequious, subservient, slavish. They stand ready to do the bidding of the confederated priesthood. The Constitution and all state guarantees of religious liberty are disregarded and defied. Persecution grows apace. Every hour the ecclesiastical hierarchy grows more insolent in its demands, more aggressive in its encroachments, becomes more firmly seated on the throne. At last the people awake. But is it not too late? Can they win back what they have so foolishly lost? Time alone will reveal. We of this generation cannot know. The outlook is black; the portents are ominous.

Once there was only one Christian church. Where its black flag waved religious liberty was unknown. Slowly and in spite of the most relentless and destructive persecution there evolved from this through the centuries hundreds of religions. Light and succor and weapons had come to the poor slaves of the One and Universal from beyond its domains and from the hands of the students of nature. Here and there the principle of religious liberty secured attention. The right of private judgment was recognized. State and church were wrenched apart. It seemed that at last it had come to be understood and even accepted by Christians that religion must stand unproped by the civil power. But this belief was illusory. There have always been those here in America who were heretic to the new glad gospel of liberty. From the close of the Revolution to this hour the work of involution has proceeded. The sects have come closer and closer together; contiguity gave additional social and political power and fanned into intense heat the dream of universal dominion; synchronously religious freedom was lessened and the love of it grew weaker as men became habituated to its practical denial. To-day the faces of nearly all the sects are turned homeward, which is Romeward. Involution gains in velocity every decade. Greater and greater grow the throngs which year following year make the journey to Canosa. None who worship God and find the Bible divine are immune; all such are liable to the contagion. There is but one prophylactic, and that is scientific Freethought. Put no trust in phantoms; do not think that because invention and literature have given us dominion over nature and a superficial culture that the Universal (Roman) church, towards which Christianity is surely gravitating, will be, except under compulsion, any the less a curse than it was in the Middle Ages. Any liberty that then may be enjoyed will not be the gift of the Church. She never gave the world any freedom which she could withhold, and she will be no better in her new incarnation than she was in the old.

Thus we are led to see that the mission of Freethought is two-fold: It must lift the people out of the mire of superstition, and it must give them the light without which they cannot establish justice.

So long as the people believe in gods and saviors and heaven-sent books they cannot be trusted with political power. They have it, to be sure, but they no more know to handle it than the baby knows how to safely play with a loaded pistol. So long as the masses can be humbugged with talk about "divine institutions," and believe the falsehood that "what is a matter of human choice cannot be essential," it will be impossible to permanently divorce church and state. So long as the human is subordinated to the alleged divine, equity and liberty can be only names. Jehovah and Jesus must be laid in the tomb of the dead gods and saviors; the Bible must part with its sacred attributes; Christian morality must give way to the ethics of evolution. While any of these old myths and unscientific conceptions maintain their hold on the human brain it is impossible to have a just and free society.

Education is the medicine which Freethinkers must administer to a creed-sick world. Get men and women to thinking inductively and they will approach the study of social problems in a spirit which will clarify for their eyes the most disturbed of moral and economic pools where questions of transcendent importance to the race are drowned in floods of ink shed by the pens of men who have reasoned from God to man instead of from man and his environment to a just social state. Freethought to-day rests on evolution and its corollaries. God is an assumption. Jesus is a myth, in one view; a very imperfect ideal, in another. The Bible was not written by a god or at the dictation of a god. It was written by men, as all other books were or are written.

Freethought, then, is commissioned to bring home the truths of science to the people and so free them from the bondage of ignorance and fear. Until they are thus freed we can have no belief in a future for religious freedom and social justice. While they remain Christians they are unsafe citizens, for until they become free from theological chains they will be possible recruits for the army of theocracy, potential perverts to the Universal (Roman) church. Protestantism has never understood the logic of the Protest. It has ever been as ready to damn those who exercised their freedom of judgment in the examination and rejection of its creeds as the Catholic church was to damn it for the same offense against the mother church.

Never before were the Protestant churches so closely united in an attempt to force their beliefs upon dissenters by the use of the powers of the state. Never before were they so willing to join hands with the Catholic church in this reactionary work. Would that we could truthfully say that never before were the Freethinkers so wide awake and so resolute to defend their rights and to keep church and state separate, but, alas! we cannot.

It is to arouse them to the necessity of action, prompt and untiring action, that a few sentinels continually sound the alarm. Freethought has a mission and that mission is to defend and preserve human liberty.

Wanted—New Subscribers.

We solicit the kind attention of our friends to the need which exists of increasing the subscription list of THE TRUTH SEEKER. There are several reasons for this, which our readers will readily see. First, It will do a world of good, by making more Liberals and by interesting those already liberal in the work of Freethought. The church is making great encroachments upon our liberties, and the people need to know about it, in order to defeat its tyranny. And those who read THE TRUTH SEEKER are a hundred times more interested and active than those who do not. Second, It is a duty we owe to our fellow-men to give them the light of reason we have obtained. Liberalism makes for true civilization, and freedom from fear of an angry God makes men happier and better. Every Liberal should do all he can to lift up his neighbors from the darkness of superstition to the glorious plain of mental liberty. And, as Mr. Wakeman says, referring to the resolution regarding the Liberal papers passed at the late International Congress: "They are the very life of the cause of intellectual and practical emancipation of the people. As such they are to be built up and sustained by constant care, payment, encouragement, and solicitation for subscribers for them." Third, An increase in the list will relieve the readers from the occasional "duns" we are compelled to send out in order to get money with which to pay bills. If we can obtain two or three thousand new subscribers, the increased revenue will make the business work of the paper easier, and we can continue to improve the paper without fear of financial embarrassments.

To reward those who will do a little for us in this matter we have arranged to take a large number of Mr. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought," and to every one who sends us four new yearly subscribers at the regular rates of $3 ($12 in all), we shall send a copy of that magnificent work free. Those who send the club before the book is on the press will be enrolled among the original subscribers and patrons in the book.

And to make it easy to get these four new subscribers we will offer them as a premium either of two splendid works—The "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought" in cloth binding. Our readers know the value of these books, and that about every Liberal in the country would like a copy of one or the other. Either one of these, as may be chosen, will be given to the new subscribers obtained in these clubs of four, and a copy of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" to the one who gets up the club and sends the money and names.

We cannot afford to make this premium to single subscribers, but to enable old subscribers and single new subscribers to obtain these and other desirable works at a great reduction, we have made a list of premiums in connection with subscriptions to the paper, to be found in the first column of the first editorial page of THE TRUTH SEEKER. We are willing to do our part toward making the obtaining of good Liberal works easy and cheap, and hope our readers will take advantage of the terms offered.

Once more we ask that a favorable eye be turned in our direction, and a helpful hand extended. As the resolutions of the International Congress expressed it, Boom the Liberal papers and you boom the Liberal cause.

Four Good Books for German Freethinkers.

We can supply, in the German language, the following four books which everyone knows to be good:

"The Mistakes of Moses," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

"Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen H. Gardener, 50 cents.

"The Gods," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 25 cents.

"Miracles and Miracle-Workers," by John Peck, 20 cents.

These are neatly printed, bound in paper covers, and are complete. Our German-reading friends should circulate these widely.

"The nation has no better friend than the mother who teaches her child to pray."—Ram's Horn.

Yes, it has, and that friend is the mother who teaches her child to help itself by productive work.

It is easy to understand why the clergy are so opposed to any places but the churches being open on Sunday. They know that they cannot successfully compete with rational teaching and good amusements. Why, here is Rev. W. R. Andreck declaring that the World's Fair was a great detriment to church work. What was true of his church, he said, was true of almost every other congregation in the country. Presumably he will oppose the opening of the next American World's Fair on any day of the week!

MONTICELLO, N. Y., November 14th.

Joseph Osterhout, a retired farmer, dropped dead in a Methodist revival meeting here last night while engaged in prayer.

"God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." Probably no Christian will be able to give a reasonable explanation of the killing of Mr. Osterhout in church. Had it been in an Infidel meeting we should at once have understood that it was because he was caught in bad company. But it must have been some kind of a "judgment."

The ministers of Savannah are nearly unanimous in the opinion that the practice of women preaching and exhorting should be discouraged. These are your simon-pure Paulists. They know what the Bible teaches. They want none of the infidelity of woman's rights in theirs. But they are very "chivalrous" in their defense of the sex—when it costs nothing more than the trampling of law and the infliction of torture. If their "honor" called for the recognition of the principle of equal justice, they would be as meek as Moses and as unresisting as Quakers.

The American Bible Society has sent a donation of four hundred Bibles and Testaments, worth, at first cost, $177 50, to the Sea Island sufferers. The Red Cross Society, acting through Clara Barton, will distribute these volumes. Therein the victims of the cyclone, who saved nothing but their lives, can read that "the Lord hath his way in the whirlwind and the storm," and so have definite information as to the cause of their misfortunes. If he has his way in the storm, and if in the storm they lost their Bibles, it is nothing less than flying in the face of providence to send them more Bibles to take the place of those he deliberately destroyed.

The Churchman says: "That the excise fund and the taxation and general fund of the city treasury should be diverted from their proper use to support any institution whose purpose is the spreading of any particular form of Christianity is an atrocious scandal, and should call up in arms every one who values the true principles of the American republic." Good for our Episcopalian contemporary! But we have seen so much halting and limping logic in Christian publications that we are almost afraid to ask the Churchman if it favors the taxation of church property. And what does it think of the payment of public money to chaplains? And of the atrocious scandal of religious instruction in the public schools?

Talk about "cranks"! Just listen to William, Germany's young war lord:

"I want Christian soldiers who say their Lord's Prayer. Soldiers are not to have a will of their own. You must have but one will, and that is my will; one law, and that is my law."

Let the soldiers of Germany be humble and obey. As good Christians they must not murmur. Peter, who stood next to "the chiefest of the Apostles," has distinctly indicated their duty in the thirteenth, fourteenth, and eighteenth verses of the second chapter of his first general epistle, in these words:

"Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, whether it be to the king, or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well. . . . Servants, be subject to your masters with all fear; not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward."

William is "froward" enough, undoubtedly, to test to the fullest their Christian virtues. But they must put up with all his cantankerous crankiness or go to hell; no doubt about that. "The throne and the cross have always leaned against and supported each other," said Ingersoll in one of the first of his lectures. He must have had a prophetic vision of the present emperor of Germany.

The Bible says that God gave us, through our ancestor, Adam, dominion over all the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air. This Christians have generally interpreted to be a license to slaughter, in mere wantonness, helpless birds and animals. One Rev. Thomas Dixon, of this city, thinks it compatible with his labors as an expounder of the teachings of the "meek and lowly" to murder robins and other song birds in pursuit of "sport." Last year he was heavily fined for killing robins on Long Island and was very indignant because the game wardens interfered with this work of "sweetness and light." Now the dailies inform us that he and his wife are hunting robins in Virginia. "She accompanies him in all his hunts, carries her own gun, and shoots the birds on the wing." A sweet, gentle pair, fit exemplars and instructors of the young! By the way, Christian ministers and moralistic newspapers make a great fuss over prize fights, where nobody but willing participants is hurt, but who has heard a word from them in protest against the cruel and cowardly "sport" of pigeon shooting, where the only ones hurt are the unwilling participants, the poor birds? But was the Christian ever known to be consistent or to show a comprehension of justice?

The resolutions adopted by the International Congress of Freethinkers vigorously and rightly denounced the whole brood of amateur vice and crime societies with which this country is cursed. The Gerry Society of this city has just given us another object lesson in impudence and uselessness. One of its agents recently went into the Irving Place Theater and tried to get on to the stage to take off Miss Elvira Clemens, a young woman of eighteen, who has a part in a play now being performed there. He had a suspicion that Miss Clemens was under the age which girls must attain before the Society will graciously permit them to act. The manager, however, would not permit him to go behind the scenes, and so a summons to the police court followed. There it was established that the actress is eighteen, sure enough, whereupon Superintendent Jenkins, of the Society, "expressed himself as satisfied, but thought that Manager Conried should have allowed the Society's agent to see the young lady, and then all this trouble would have been avoided." It does not appear to have entered his mind that "all this trouble would have been avoided" if he and the other meddlers of the Society had kept their fingers out of other people's pie. And no one seems to have had presence of mind enough to tell him so.

The Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier forcibly contends that some questions cannot properly be submitted to the arbitrament of the ballot. And it gives a sharp point to its objections in this way: "It is interesting to reflect what would be the state of the country by this time if the people had been allowed to determine its religious conditions by ballot. A pretty mess they would have made of it, to be sure." Well, the "mess" is fairly well mixed already, but it is not very "pretty." The people are determining religious conditions by the ballot, or perhaps it would be slightly more accurate to say that the politicians are determining those conditions for fear of the ballot. The Sunday-closing condition was tacked on to the World's Fair appropriation bill by Congress because the members of the law-making body were fooled by the forged petitions of the priests into believing that the people would vote them out of their nice berths if they did not vote a religious dogma into the statutes. And all over the country the people are using the ballot to settle religious controversies. This is done every time a Sunday law is passed, every time the Bible is voted into the common schools, every time the exemption of church property from taxation is sanctioned. Will the News and Courier follow its own logic to the end?

There is no place in the Bible where God has promised to make a loafer happy.—Ram's Horn.

Let us see about that; it is not always safe to accept without examination the assertions of Christians in regard to the contents of the Bible. In the sixth chapter of Matthew, verses 25, 26, 28 to 31, inclusive, and 33, 34, we read:

"Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment? Behold the fowls of the air, for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?"

"And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin. And yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?"

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Take, therefore, no thought for the morrow, for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

By loafing around, a la preacher, seeking the "kingdom of God, and his righteousness," all other things were to "be added unto" the imitators of the larks and lilies; they were to have food and raiment and all other good things given them, gratis. We should say that this was a very clear and definite promise to make loafers happy. The Ram's Horn should be blown to a different note.

Theodore N. Shulz is a wealthy jeweler of New York. He was summoned the other day as a juror before Justice Truax, of the Supreme Court. "He refused to swear or affirm. He said he believed in only what he knew. He did not believe in God or in hell. He would not credit the evidence of any witness, who would consent to be sworn or who had to take an oath to keep from lying. Judge Truax indorsed the notice to attend with these words: 'Excused on the ground that he is not mentally qualified to act as a juror.'" The World adds that Mr. Shulz is a well educated, intelligent man. What Justice Truax means by his statement that Mr. Shulz "is not mentally qualified to act as a juror" probably no one but himself knows. His words may have been "writ sarcastic." It is quite possible that he sees, as we do, that Mr. Shulz is altogether too keen-witted a man to make a good juror, estimating the qualifications of jurors by what they are, rather than by what they should be. Certainly our independent fellow citizen has got it back neatly on the "good people." They say that they cannot believe a person who will not take the oath; Mr. Shulz sharply retorts that he will not accept the evidence of any witness who has to take an oath in order to keep from lying! His is the more reasonable position, for when a man confesses that he would lie if he did not put himself under bonds to God to take a thrashing if he does lie we can not rid ourselves of the suspicion that he will lie, trusting to his cunning to enable him to dodge God and escape the thrashing by "confession and avoidance" before he dies.

Madison C. Peters, pastor of a New York church, writes in the Christian Intelligencer: "Coming home from Chicago a few weeks ago, a man who, seeing nothing of the parson about me, spoke his mind freely on matters in general, finally boasted that he drew from thirty to forty per cent on his tenement investments, and said that there was no money in first-class buildings. Yet this man, whose vast incomes are wrung from the poor, stands high in society and hopes to go to heaven when he dies. The wonder is that God Almighty does not grind such men to pieces between the millstones of his wrath. If there is no hell, according to some people's theology, I would be glad to head a subscription list to have one built for these grasping, greedy, tenement-house landlords, who thrive by oppressing the poor and fare sumptuously every day because of the enormous profits that come from investments in the vilest tenement houses." No doubt Mr. Peters is sincere in the expression of his indignation against the landlords, but it does not seem to have occurred to him that God made the landlords to oppress the poor and the poor to become the victims of the landlords. It is futile to reply that God gave them all free will, so that they could choose the good and refuse the evil. To refuse the evil is more than God has done, for, if he is the all-powerful being he is supposed to be, he has deliberately chosen the evil, and that from eternity. With infinite power foreknowledge is foreaction. There is no possible logical escape from this conclusion. God decreed, uncounted ages before Mr. Peters was born, that the landlord he mentions should take his thirty to forty per cent rental.

Churchly Purpose and Performance.

Sunday bigotry is rampant in Missouri. The Kansas City Grocers' Association is trying to force a few stores which remain open on Sunday to close. Of course the law is being appealed to by the Sundayites. . . . In Chicago petitions are being circulated whose signers promise not to buy anything on Sunday—except sermons and church music, presumably. Following this we are not surprised that some merchants want a law compelling everybody to lock up on Sunday. It is always law in the priest's interest. . . . Seventh-Day Adventists will be tried for violation of the Maryland Sunday statutes at the November term of court in Kent and Queen Anne's counties. . . . The Baxter County, Ark., grand jury has indicted sixty persons for using profane language. . . . Now it is the turn of Cleveland, O. The Congregational Club is setting about the suppression of all Sunday work and recreation. . . . The Mail and Express announces that the Sunday question has got into politics at Newport, R. I. One of the candidates for mayor was proclaimed to be a churchman and favorable to the project to "close up the numerous small places of business on Sunday." One more straw. . . . In Montreal the Minerve, a Catholic organ, is shocked by the passing of Jewish bakers' wagons and the sight of Jewish milliners working at their windows on Sunday. . . . The Lord's Day Observance Association of Canada will ask of the Ontario legislature that it specify the classes of electors who will be permitted to vote in Sunday car elections. . . . Retail meat shops in Sioux City, Ia., which fail to close voluntarily on Sunday, will be forced to do so by the law, put in operation by the other butchers. . . . The Grocers' Protective Association of Indianapolis has set out to "procure a proper observance of Sunday." It is proposed to prosecute Robinson's shirt factory at Bayonne, N. J., for noisy Sunday work. Nothing is said about the church bells. . . . At Knoxville, Tenn., four barbers were arrested for Sunday work. It was at the instigation of another barber. Dogs in the manger are very numerous. . . . Sabbath committee formed at Cramer Hill, Pa., October 5th. . . . On October 16th sixty-three tailors were arrested in this city for violation of the Sunday law. They were held in bonds of $100 each for appearance on November 16th. . . . The disciples of the "gospel of peace" set an excellent example. When Protestant Sunday-schools and Catholic temperance and other societies organize juvenile military companies doubters may well question where can be found Christians who intend to "resist not evil." . . . The attitude of law-enforced Sunday observance toward justice is well shown in this dispatch from Victoria, B. C.: "A remarkable thing in connection with the Rathdown homicide trial to-day is the fact that when it was sought to introduce the dying statement of the dead man, Jones, an objection was made, and sustained by the court, on the ground that it had been taken on Sunday, and it was therefore thrown out." . . . In most of the cases where Second Adventists have been prosecuted for violation of the Maryland Sunday laws Judge Robinson refused to grant continuances until the decision of the Judge's case by the Court of Appeals, unless the prosecuted men would promise to abide by that decision when rendered. . . . Wails Rev. Crawford Johnson, Belfast: "No Sabbath, no worship; no worship, no religion; no religion, no morals; no morals—pandemonium." . . . Westbrook's "legislative Sunday," like all other legal Sundays, is the preacher's and swindler's own. In the Westminster (England) county court recently a tailor was non-suited because the person who had failed to pay for his coat had ordered the garment on Sunday. . . . Is superstition dead? This, from the London Freethinker, would seem to answer the question in the negative: "During the recent cholera panic at Tunis a woman named Nina Boucli gave out that she had been told by an angel in a dream that whoever drank of the water in her cistern would escape the malady. In two days twenty thousand persons passed through her courtyard to drink there. Their eagerness was so great that riots took place among them. The street where Madam Boucli lived was blocked. Able-bodied adults carried their aged or paralytic parents and their infants to touch with their lips the water, one drop of which, they hoped, would be enough to act as a charm. Another woman sells bits of ribbons to be pinned on the clothes the purchasers wear. She declares them to be a sovereign preservative, and is believed by many. A third makes a mark with charcoal on the foreheads of those who come to her." . . . Those good Christian ministers who went to Africa to carry the gospel of peace to the poor heathen seem to think that as they cannot convert they had better turn their attention to killing. Says Rev. Mr. Miller: "All are ready for the fray, and would only be too happy to wipe out Islam from the land. Captain Macdonald wants the Mohammedans put out of existence as well as out of the country; he says, quite rightly, that there will be no peace as long as there are Mohammedans about." . . . "Blasphemy" is still a crime in Spain. The Freethought writer and poetess, Angela Lopez de Azala, has been sentenced to prison in Barcelona, her blasphemy being found in a contribution to the Nueva Catorra. . . . At Camden, N. J., the ministers asked the chief of police to prevent a yacht race on the river on Sunday. The smaller yacht clubs are composed of young men whose only time for recreation is Sunday. . . . Of missions in South Africa the Natal Advertiser says: "The resident missionaries themselves are very far from above reproach, and the most charitable thing that can be said of them is that they have failed—utterly and irretrievably failed—to achieve a hundredth part of the work they are supposed to perform. . . . As in warlike Mashonaland, in Pondoland the missionary is working on the side of war and bloodshed; he seems determined to secure his ends even at the risk of unrighteous war, and in the case of Pondoland there are many who would rejoice to see his Jesuitical designs frustrated." . . . The idea of good Catholics utilizing the heretic Garibaldi for miracle purposes! But the Elveria, of San Francisco, reports this: "As you are aware, in the north of Italy and Ticino, for some time past, there was nothing else talked about but the dry weather; and for the purpose of getting some rain, all the saints of the calendar were for their amusement carried about in procession. A wealthy Novarese farmer, having spent some hundreds of francs in benediction, three days of prayers, wax candles, offerings, etc., without result, came to the conclusion that there were neither saints nor madonnas in paradise now worth a dry fig for imploring favors near the throne of God. And do you know what he did? One fine day he mustered his laborers, also all those of his neighborhood, and greatly surprised them by presenting to them a small statue of Garibaldi. 'This man,' he said, 'has done some miracles for us in life, why should he not do so in death?' Shortly, Garibaldi was religiously carried in procession among the arid fields; and twenty-four hours after the rain came! It will now require a special spiritual missionary to bring those good Novarese back to the Roman Catholic Apostolic Christian faith." . . . Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 23.—The grand jury has returned indictments against eight barbers for violation of the Sunday-closing law. A bill was also found against James H. Smith, manager of the Midland Hotel, for keeping the hotel barber's shop open Sunday. Indictments were also returned against six grocers for violation of the Sunday law. . . . Margaret Sidney has gotten out a new book for the stupefaction of the brains of children. It is called "The Child's Day Book" and it contains morning and evening prayers, grace before meals, a text of scripture, and a selection of prose or poetry for each day. . . . The Mahoning (Ohio) Dispatch tells of Frank Miller, of Columbiana county, that state, who saw at the World's Fair a picture of the crucifixion of Jesus, and it made him a violent maniac. Now he talks only of the crucifixion. He must go to an asylum. . . . Freethought lecturers in England have plenty of rough Christian opposition to encounter. At Brighton Mr. Guest was speaking. The platform was stormed, the stand smashed, blows were given and taken, the lecturer received Christian spittle on his face, and at last the secretary and lecturer were taken by the police to the police station to protect them from the meek and non-resistant Christians. . . . Sunday-closing agitation is rife at Danville, Ill. . . . A Cincinnati saloon-keeper announced a "grand Sunday opening." He spent the Sunday in jail. Sunday prosecutions were begun recently against tradesmen of the same class in Wallingford, Conn., Montreal, and Minneapolis. . . . At Fond du Lac, Wis., cigar-makers have passed resolutions of sympathy with barbers in their fight for Sunday closing. . . . Covington, Ky., barbers have closed on Sunday and are now sharply watching one another, fearing desertions. . . . The pastors of Syracuse, N. Y., are moving for the "preservation of the Sabbath." The "pastors" are very officiously in evidence these days. . . . The Illinois Methodist Conference is strongly in favor of the "American Sabbath" and declares that consistent Christians can not "patronize any newspaper which debauches the Sabbath of God, and defiles and defiles the Sunday of the state by a Sunday edition," but it does not say anything about the papers which get out a Monday issue. The Conference also praises the Chicago Record, which should be a sufficient hint to Freethinkers. . . . Rev. Dr. Scudder, of Jersey City, says that hereafter politics and religion "are to be combined. A religion that cannot enter politics is not worth having."

Readers will aid the cause by forwarding us names of their friends who might be interested in sample copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Communications.

Did Mr. Charles Bradlaugh Die an Atheist?

SIR ISAAC HOLDEN, M.P., THE REV. ALLEN REES, AND MRS. BRADLAUGH BONNER.

30 VICTORIA ROAD, CLAPHAM COMMON, S.W., Nov., 1893.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York: The inclosed gives the latest example of a statement frequently made since Mr. Bradlaugh's death. It is a source of considerable pain and annoyance to Mr. Bradlaugh's friends, and entails upon me the ungrateful task of contradiction.

You will be doing a great service if you will help me to make it clearly understood, through your columns, that Mr. Bradlaugh's opinions on theological matters were absolutely unchanged at his death. The only person to whom he spoke on religious matters during his last illness was myself, and then he merely uttered a few words as to the futility of the Design Argument, as exemplified in his own condition and the present state of medical knowledge compared with the sufferings and treatment of the sick in the past, and the possibilities of greater alleviation of pain in the future.

Mr. Charles Bradlaugh, I once more repeat, died, as he had lived, firm in his convictions as a conscientious Atheist, and it can serve no useful purpose to assert the contrary.

Asking for the favor of your help in the matter, I am, Yours truly, H. BRADLAUGH BONNER.

The following correspondence speaks for itself:

I.—LETTER FROM MRS. BRADLAUGH BONNER TO THE REV. ALLEN REES.

30 VICTORIA ROAD, CLAPHAM COMMON, S.W., }
Oct. 18, 1893.

SIR: I have been informed that you preached a sermon on October 15th in the Wesleyan chapel, City road, upon "the death of the National Reformer," that in the course of your sermon you asserted that the Atheism of my father, Mr. C. Bradlaugh, weakened as he grew older; and that you further stated, on the authority of Sir Isaac Holden, M.P., that Mr. Bradlaugh had been deeply impressed by the "conversion" of his brother, and that he had often wished he were "half so good a man as his brother."

I should be glad to hear from you as to whether you still adhere to these statements, and beg to inclose a stamped and directed envelope for your reply. H. BRADLAUGH BONNER.

II.—THE REV. ALLEN REES TO MRS. BONNER.

WESLEY'S CHAPEL, CITY ROAD. Oct. 21, 1893.

MADAM: In reply to your letter, which I find awaiting me on my return from the country, I wish to say that I made no positiv statements with respect to any change of view on the part of your father.

I was very particular as to the language I used, being anxious to avoid, first, making too much of what I had been told, and secondly, putting myself into the position of being unable to substantiate what I did say. I have nothing to add and I have nothing to retract, but so as to avoid mistake I send you the verba ipsissima used by me. I am, madam, Faithfully yours, ALLEN REES.

INCLOSURE.

As a rule, men who profess Atheism do not become stronger in their belief as time goes on. I think I may almost say that this was true of Mr. Bradlaugh. Sir Isaac Holden has told me that he frequently conversed with Mr. Bradlaugh on religious subjects. The conversion of his brother deeply affected him, and on one occasion he had said to him: "I wish I were half as good as my brother." It was the unreality of much of the Christianity with which in early life Mr. Bradlaugh was associated and the worldliness and uncharitableness of religious professors, which made an Atheist of Mr. Bradlaugh, as it has done of many others.

III.—MRS. BONNER TO THE REV. A. REES.

Oct. 21, 1893.

SIR: I beg to thank you for having sent me the exact words you used in respect of my father, Mr. Charles Bradlaugh. I wrote because I was wishful to know whether your words had been accurately reported to me. I was not asking you to retract, and if your own sense of honor does not impel you to do so after you have learned from me that you have spoken in error, rest assured that I shall not press you.

You now have my deliberate word for it that Mr. Bradlaugh's Atheistic convictions were as strong when he lay on his deathbed as ever they were during his time of health and strength. Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh never was "converted," because he was always a professed Christian, and as it is quite impossible that an honorable man could wish he were "half as good" as a dishonorable man, either Sir Isaac Holden is laboring under some misapprehension, or you have misunderstood Sir Isaac Holden. If you did but know the truth, you would see as plainly as I do how utterly impossible it is that my father could have made such a statement, and much as I dislike to enter upon any details concerning the conduct of Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh, if you care to call upon me I will acquaint you with the facts of the matter.

I am writing Sir Isaac Holden to-day.

Yours truly,

H. BRADLAUGH BONNER.

IV.—MRS. BONNER TO ISAAC HOLDEN, M.P.

Oct. 21, 1893.

DEAR SIR: The Rev. Allen Rees, in a sermon preached at Wesley's chapel, City road, on Sunday last (Oct 15), made the following statement: "Sir Isaac Holden has told me that he frequently conversed with Mr. Bradlaugh on religious subjects. The conversion of his brother deeply affected him, and on one occasion he had said to him, 'I wish I were half as good as my brother.'" I wish to ask if you really did tell this to the Rev. Allen Rees? As I feel greatly concerned about the matter, I should esteem it a great favor if you would send me an early reply, for which I beg to inclose a stamped and directed envelope.

Yours respectfully, H. BRADLAUGH BONNER,

(Daughter of the late Charles Bradlaugh).

To this letter Sir Isaac Holden has sent no reply.

V.—REV. A. REES TO MRS. BONNER.

Oct. 23, 1893.

MY DEAR MRS. BRADLAUGH BONNER: I am afraid from the tone of your letter that you misunderstood my remark that I had nothing to retract. I simply meant to say that I had, so far as my knowledge and conviction went, exactly stated what had been told me, and I gave my authority. Of course, I should not make my assertion concerning your father, or anybody else, if it were shown to me that in doing so I was wrong. As it was, I made no absolute statement; I knew I had no positiv evidence. My remark was a bare suggestion, and there I left it. There was, however, another remark which your father uttered at the Hall of Science, the tendency of which, apparently at any rate, was in the same direction. He said—and I can give you the name of the person who heard him say it—"A man twenty-five years old may be an iconoclast, but I cannot understand a man being one who has passed middle age."

I am, yours faithfully,

ALLEN REES.

VI.—MRS. BONNER TO THE REV. A. REES.

Oct. 23, 1893.

DEAR SIR: I thank you for your letter received to-day. During the last twelve years of my father's life I was present at all his lectures at the Hall of Science, unless absent from London or kept away by illness, and at none of the lectures at which I was present did he use an expression such as you quote, bearing the meaning you put upon it. He himself lectured and published all his Freethought works under the name "Iconoclast" until he was thirty-five, and only gave it up then because his own name had become so well known that a "fighting name" had become useless. I once more give you my assurance that, in spite of all you have been told to the contrary, Mr. Bradlaugh never at any time wavered, or showed the least inclination to waver, in his Atheism. But instead of taking my word or anybody else's word for my father's views, or other people's versions of his conversation, will you not take his own written words? They can be open to no dispute. I send you herewith a copy of the collection of his "Doubts in Dialogue," and I will ask you to read the latest, commencing with the one on page 53. Those dated January, 1891, were partly written and published in the very month in which Mr. Bradlaugh died. The final paper left his hands only three or four days before the commencement of his last illness. I must apologize for the very soiled cover, but it is the only copy I have at hand. Please do not trouble to return it.

Without "positiv evidence" that you were inclining towards Atheism, would you think it quite honorable in me to make from the public platform the "bare suggestion" that you were?

Yours truly,

H. BRADLAUGH BONNER.

VII.—REV. A. REES TO MRS. BONNER.

Oct. 30, 1893.

MY DEAR MRS. BRADLAUGH BONNER: I would not on any account misstate. Accordingly I inclose you a letter which I received this morning from Sir Isaac Holden, which, although slightly varying in phraseology, nevertheless taken in association with the circumstances is to my mind something much stronger than what I said. Thank you for the dialogues. I am greatly disappointed in them. I thought they would have been far abler than what they are. You will excuse me if I say with all respect that the statements of "Infidel" are simply sophism, whilst the answers put in the mouth of "Christian" are the merest puerilities. For real argument I have a profound respect. For such misstatements I have a simple contempt. May I request that you will kindly favor me by returning the inclosure. I am, very faithfully yours,

ALLEN REES.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER FROM SIR ISAAC HOLDEN, M.P., TO MR. REES.

Your rendering of the story is a little different to what I spoke—"Mr. Bradlaugh was affected to tears when I told him that his brother James said to the Rev. Richard Allen that his brother Charles was too good a man to die an Infidel, and he believed that before his death he would become a Christian. Tears started in his (Charles's) eyes, and he simply smiled: "My brother James is a good fellow," not "I wish I were half as good as my brother." There was evidently a very kind feeling in each of the brothers towards each other.

VIII.—MRS. BONNER TO THE REV. A. REES.

Nov. 3, 1893.

SIR: I have read the letter dated 28th October, of Sir Isaac Holden to yourself, with mixed feelings of surprise and indignation that a man bearing a name usually esteemed so honorable could lend himself to such false statements.

1. My father, Mr. C. Bradlaugh, had no brother named James.

2. The only brother he had was most distinctly not a "good fellow," and Mr. Bradlaugh's opinion of him was exactly the opposite to that given by Sir Isaac Holden. I offered to make you privately acquainted (by means of documentary evidence) with the facts, but it has been your preference to ignore my offer.

3. There is no evidence whatever of a "very kindly feeling in each of the brothers towards each other;" as a matter of fact, the mutual feeling was the reverse of kindly; of this also I have documentary evidence.

I entirely decline to discuss my father's literary merits with such as yourself; and were I to do so it would be entirely beside the point at issue. The view you take of alleged "misstatements" of doctrine by an Atheist contrasts strangely with the lower standard of conduct you require from yourself as Christian minister in reference to the indisputable misstatements which you have uttered from the pulpit against a dead man.

H. BRADLAUGH BONNER.

P.S.—I beg to inform you that in consequence of the attitude you have taken, it is my intention to give this matter publicity.

IX.—REV. A. REES TO MRS. BONNER.

Nov. 4, 1893.

MADAM: I am surprised at your last letter. I treated you openly and unhesitatingly when you addressed me your first letter, although I was under no obligation to do so, having in public given the authority for the statement I made. Now you threaten to make public a private correspondence. With what was said in public you have a right to deal as you please. With the private correspondence you have no right so to deal. Why in your last letter you should personally abuse me, I cannot understand. I replied to your communication because as a gentleman I was bound so to do, and in return I of course expected to be treated in a similar way. As, however, you are not honorable enough to respect private correspondence, and are not laylike enough to keep from vulgar personal abuse, I entirely decline to have any further correspondence with you.

I am, yours obediently,

ALLEN REES.

The story, as it stands here, rests on the obviously loose reminiscences of Sir Isaac Holden, who can have known nothing of the family history, since Mr. Bradlaugh never disclosed the facts; and on the still looser reminiscences and surmises of Mr. Rees, who had materially altered what he heard from Sir Isaac. There is not a shadow of real evidence that Mr. Bradlaugh changed his opinions, and there is abundant evidence that they remained unaltered to the last.

As to the "private" nature of the correspondence, I have only to say that privacy was never suggested, and that I most assuredly did not contemplate keeping private a contradiction of a public misstatement, although if Mr. Rees had seen his way to accepting the evidence of my father's own writings I should not have thought it necessary to print these letters. In addition I would point out that if any such conversation took place between Sir Isaac Holden and Mr. Bradlaugh (the possibility of which I absolutely deny), it would necessarily have been of a private nature; yet Mr. Rees had no scruple in retailing it from the pulpit. I will not trouble to defend myself from Mr. Rees's charges, since my demerits are entirely beside the point under discussion, which is: "Did Mr. Bradlaugh weaken in his Atheism?" To this I answer emphatically, "No."

HYPATIA BRADLAUGH BONNER.

Sparks From the Lecture Field.

With the rattle of firearms which were never fired, and the smell of gore that had never been spilled, with visions of battles that "might have been" but were not, I made my way from the grand and historic old hills of Kentucky and turned my face towards the more effete and conventional East. On my way to Louisville I ran across a preacher, of what denomination I cannot say. He occupied the seat next to me. Two or three times he looked me hard over, as though desirous of conversing with me. His right cheek bulged out considerably, and his breath gave forth a perfume redolent of whisky and tobacco. Suddenly he turned round and ventured to remark: "To what denomination do you belong?" Great Scott, he had taken me for a preacher!

Instinctively, I looked him over and subjected him to a close scrutiny, to see if I could discover any point of resemblance between us. My cheek did not bulge out like his; I did not expectorate all over the floor of the car; I did not take up a double seat all to myself, the other portion of the car being crowded. So, proudly, I replied to his query, "None, sir; I am an Infidel lecturer."

He gave a "grunt" for a reply, and never ventured to address me further. What hogs these preachers are!

With a short stay at Pittsburg, where I spent a few pleasant hours with Messrs. Staley, Hoover and Graham, I came straight on to the grand and glorious American metropolis. I arrived in New York city in the early morning hours. From the Jersey side the broad expanse of harbor spread out before me as a large mirror. The sun gave out its wonted munificence and tinted the crest of every wave with a golden hue. 'Twas a glorious morn, and the surging waves seemed to sing me a glad welcome. I soon made my way to THE TRUTH SEEKER office, where I broke in upon the editor and the venerable, snow-capped Putnam before they had even prepared for the morning meal. I had always been told never to enter an editor's sanctum before meals, always after, if possible; but I did it this time unthinkingly, and due repentance is hereby expressed. I found our editor just as busy as ever dispensing the gospel of Freethought through the medium of books and papers, and Putnam seemed to be almost buried beneath piles of manuscript and proof, hard at work preparing his new book, "Four Hundred Years of Freethought," for the press. A few days' leisure was afforded me in which to renew old friendships and acquaintances, and then I resumed my work once more.

On Friday, November 3d, I lectured before the Manhattan Liberal Club. I was greeted by a splendid audience. Messrs. Foote, Wakeman, and Chamberlain were in their accustomed places, while in the rear of the hall, at the little table, there sat—"sphinx-like"—THE TRUTH SEEKER Editor, with notebook and pencil. He never says anything, but thinks a great deal. My lecture brought out a very good discussion, and as a full report thereof has already been published, anything I could say now would be superfluous.

On the following Sunday, I lectured again before the Liberal League of Newark, N. J., the scene of my first conquests for our cause in America. As I entered the hall, there rose before me in vivid colors the many conflicts I had fought and won in that place. Once more I was favored with a magnificent audience. The hall was crowded, not an empty seat could be found in the place. There is one grand thing about the Newark Liberals that I like, they are always full of enthusiasm. I found them just the same as ever; there was nothing of the old times lacking upon this occasion. Like all things else, the League has changed, but the change has made a decided improvement. There were many new faces in my audience to fill up the gap occasioned by the absence of old ones. The League boasts a larger membership than ever, which increases at every meeting. Henry Bird, loved and respected by all, is still at the helm, and by his earnestness and enthusiasm he seems to put new life into the meetings and keeps things in good shape. The audience joins in, and they thoroughly appreciate the selections from the "Cosmian Hymn Book." A pretty fair discussion followed, though in the main the participants all agreed with me, so that nothing was said really adverse to my lecture. My venerable colleague, Mr. Putnam, was present, and had quietly taken his seat among the audience. No one seemed to know he was there, but he was not allowed to remain long in obscurity, for when the audience learned of his presence, he received repeated calls to come forward, to which he graciously responded by taking a seat upon the platform at my side, and later on he said his little piece. Before leaving Newark, I enjoyed once more the old-time hospitality of Mr. Bird and his charming wife, whose doors are always open to the Secular Pilgrim.

Highly elated and in extreme good spirits, I push on again, this time to Northport, situated on Long Island Sound. I was booked here for two lectures. They were the first of the kind ever given in this little seaport town. Considerable speculation had been made as to their probable result, and I am happy to report that our highest and best anticipations were fully realized and the cause of liberty, sweet liberty, has taken a firm foothold where for years orthodoxy had reigned almost supreme. There is a large number of Freethinkers here, though but a few of them had ever ventured to express themselves. My first lecture brought out a good-sized audience, and the second was a glorious improvement on the first. It was an audience of which any preacher would have been proud, and their highest aspirations fully realized. Mr. Olmsted presided at each meeting, and at each lecture the platform was occupied by Dexter K. Cole and Mr. Lew Pidgeon; while old Captain Scott could be seen in the front row, his pleasant face beaming with smiles. He enjoyed the situation immensely. The audience gave me the strictest attention, and were appreciative throughout. At the conclusion of each lecture they burst out with a round of applause, and it filled the Methodist preacher's heart with envy and rage. He had called in at the second lecture with a few of his flock, the latter being a few girls and young children, but afterwards the preacher showed by his actions that he was sorry he had come. No one attempted to criticize me, not even the preacher in question, so I opened out my little stock of Freethought books, exposed them for sale, and called for subscriptions to the Liberal papers.

Notwithstanding the hard times, I had sold several of my pamphlets in less minutes, and received orders for more. When the preacher learned that I had some Freethought literature with me, he elbowed his way through the crowd and, running his eye over them, he finally selected two pamphlets—"Religion a Curse," etc., and "Crimes of Preachers." He looked up and inquired, "How much?" I replied, "Fifty cents." "Any reduction to preachers?" he asked further. "None, sir," I answered; "they can travel on children's tickets upon the railroads, but when it comes to our books they have to pay full fare, preacher or no preacher." These preachers are always looking for a reduction; they are an army of dead beats. But when it comes to their salaries, they are always listening for God Almighty to give them a better call. He got hold of two good pamphlets, however (and which, by the way, were the self-same books that Bonney found himself in trouble through). I would give ten dollars to hear that preacher's first sermon after I left town. These gentlemen of God had tried their level best to make my lectures fail in their purpose. They had hoped that they might be a quiet fizzle, but they were sadly disappointed, for they were successful to a degree. The preachers had talked of them from their pulpits, cautioning and advising the people not to go. By these means they had given me a month's advertising, and that too entirely free of charge, for which I publicly thanked them. It was the worst thing they could have done for their own part, while they could not have served me better. The opposition of the clergy towards my lectures had caused the people to talk them over; their curiosity had been aroused. They knew that if the preachers opposed them, there must be something good in them; they came to get their curiosity gratified, and went away satisfied.

These lectures terminated with honor and glory to our cause. Though the churches had organized special evangelical meetings, I had by far the larger audiences. They could not report a single convert, not even a little child, while I secured quite a few names for membership in the Federation, although Northport had previously sent in a large list. Our friends were in high glee. The great battle of opinions had been fought on the enemy's bulwarks, and a brilliant conquest had been made.

The Christians began to score me the next day. That is just what I want. My lectures are not meant to please them, but to start them on the way to Freethought. "The wounded dog always whines," and the Christians making such an exhibition of their temper showed that my lectures had had the desired effect. The people were well pleased, and our noble cause has made a grand move onwards in this little town. Victory is ours, though the work may be slow. We are bound to win in the end. For our cause is the cause of human freedom, the cause of human happiness, and of human love.

During my stay here I was the guest of Dexter K. Cole, a sturdy old Freethinker; and his family sharing in his beliefs, the home is made an ideal one. The weather was fine; and during the day my host spread out the sails on his beautiful little sloop and took me for a visit round the bay. The surrounding scenery was grand; the boat glided over the water like a swan, and these filled my heart with joy. The afternoon was spent in fishing and otherwise tempting the briny deep to cast into our hands its finny inhabitants. Our chief executive occasionally indulges in this sport, so why should not I leave for a moment the cares of the world? Though I presume that some people will think that this is the only point of resemblance between us. And perhaps it's as well that it should be.

My thanks are due to my friends for their many kindly considerations, for they have made my first visit among them one to be remembered for years. Thus ended my first lectures on the Sound. Success is inscribed upon our banner. Plant it high and keep it before the breeze; it will ever be a guiding signal for our future work. The sun of victory shines upon us. It is a sure, a certain, and a lasting victory. No terrible future have we to look forward to, of a world to be destroyed under the terrible will of an angry God; but a fair future, a glad and happy future, a future which by means of labor and skill shall be made nearer and more beautiful. The world will be what we ourselves make it. Let this be our "guiding star by day, and our pillar of fire by night." Keep the ball rolling. We must not relax our vigil or our work. There are plenty of towns in this land where the feet of a Freethought lecturer have never trodden or his voice been heard. They must get there. Our friends must do what they can to help them there. "Now is the time of salvation." Do what you can to encourage the work of human emancipation, and the terrors occasioned by priestcraft shall soon melt and vanish before the sun of righteousness, truth, and joy.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,

Sec. Freethought Federation of America.
165 South Water street, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Watts Enjoyed His Visit.

From the London Freethinker.

Mr. Charles Watts has returned from his American trip in excellent health, ready for a good winter's work in Secular propagandism. He arrived on Friday evening, Nov. 3d.

Mr. Watts speaks very highly of our Freethought friends in the United States and Canada, and he has but one regret in connection with his American visit, and that is his inability to see Colonel Ingersoll, who was thousands of miles from New York on a lecturing tour.

The last few days Mr. Watts was in New York he spent with the able Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, Mr. E. M. Macdonald, and Mr. S. P. Putnam. Both these gentlemen sent hearty greetings to their English co-workers. THE TRUTH SEEKER is the leading Freethought journal in the United States, and we are happy to hear that its circulation is constantly increasing. Its editor sends an urgent invitation by Mr. Watts to Mr. Foote to visit America at as early a date as possible.

Mr. Washburn's Opinion of "Pleasure and Progress."

From the Investigator.

This book, as it asserts, is an attempt to prove that the pursuit of pleasure is the sine qua non of intellectual, moral, and social development, and that the promotion of pleasure is the duty of philanthropy and statesmanship.

The man who wrote this book knows how to write a book, and knows what he is writing about. There is not a padded sentence in the volume, not an attempt to fill up with words for lack of knowledge. The author deals hard blows at shams and falsehoods, and hard blows for realities and truth. We do not see how anyone can read this book and disagree with the leading proposition.

The work is good; every chapter is worth reading. It is a work of common-sense socialism. The chapter on public schools ought to be put into a tract and sent to every teacher in the land. Thousands of sentences are worthy of being framed as political maxims and hung up all over the nation. The book deserves a wide reading, not only for its literary style, which is clear and incisive, but for its bold, honest sayings. 398 pages. Paper; price, 50 cents. Truth Seeker Company, publishers.

There are many good women who join the church, but whether they realize it or not there are a great many who join because God, Jesus Christ, the Holy Ghost, and the preacher are all men.

"Rights of Man" and "Shakspeare."

I lectured on "The Rights of Man" before the Brooklyn Philosophical Association on Sunday afternoon, November 26th. This may seem at first glance a simple theme, but when we come to analyze it, it is a very complex affair, as was demonstrated by the discussion which took place after the lecture. It branched off in various directions—Socialistic, Anarchistic, etc.

The first question which arises in the philosophic mind is, Are there rights? Professor Huxley seems to deny their existence, and others also, maintaining that the Declaration of Independence is only a "glittering generality." One might as well deny existence as to deny rights. If there are no rights, then existence is of but little value, except to the privileged classes. The American principle is the affirmation of rights and the foundation of all government on rights.

But rights granted, What are they? The Declaration says, "The right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;" or again, as Spencer puts it, the right to do as one pleases, provided he does not interfere with the equal rights of any other. After a definition of rights, then comes the question of the extent and limitation of rights. Practically there are limitations, as Paine, Jefferson, and Spencer admit. There must be a state as things now exist—that is, there must be a social organized physical force for the prevention of crime. Paine says the state is a necessary evil. Whether evil or not, it is necessary. If a medicine, we must take it, since social disease—crime—exists.

But the limitation, as Jefferson and Spencer affirm, should be the smallest possible consistent with social order. The function of government should be carefully guarded. The power of a majority should be under the restraint of a constitution, and "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." The first and all-important limitation of government is the total separation of church and state. This is a great step to freedom and justice. We have not reached it in our own country. The exemption of church property from taxation, the appointment of chaplains, the appropriations to sectarian institutions, the Bible-reading in schools, thanksgiving and fast day proclamations, the oath instead of simple affirmation, and Sabbath laws—all these are in violation of rights, and should not be allowed in the American republic.

These were the points I made, and they were generally accepted by the audience; but friend Hanson, who is a philosophical Anarchist, took exception. There should be no compulsory taxation, etc.

I suppose that between philosophical Anarchy and Jeffersonian democracy there is a radical difference. Anarchy, ideal or otherwise, I answered Mr. Hanson, was simply impossible. We must accept the state, but we accept it as "of the people, by the people, and for the people." Wrongs exist, of course, but we must constantly point out the wrongs and seek to abolish them. The state cannot do everything; but it can do some things. It is a machine for certain purposes, and it must be the servant of the people, and not over and above the people. The greatest of all problems is to harmonize individual liberty with social order. In Freethought and democracy only is there any solution of this problem.

After this political discussion, which was quite breezy, I wended my pilgrim's way over to Newark, and found an entirely different world of thought before me, in Shakspeare as presented by Ingersoll. Mr. Henry Bird kindly gave me an invitation to occupy his box at the theater, which I accepted, and it was indeed to me a gala occasion. It was one of those rare enjoyments which make life full of meaning. We reach its heights and see all its vast extent. Shakspeare is a wonder in himself, the greatest genius of the world; but to have him interpreted by a kindred genius, to have the noblest poetry unfolded by the finest oratory, is a pleasure, I guess, which only this age will enjoy; for as there will not be another Shakspeare, so there will not be another Ingersoll. They are original geniuses wrought by nature apparently in the same mold, with the same passion, imagination, wealth of thought, splendor and variety of expression, and the lecture, like a beautiful and wondrous picture, gave a revelation of Shakspeare—"the great intellectual ocean," as Ingersoll called him—which has never been equaled; for Ingersoll is a child of nature like the immortal bard of Avon, and through nature, and not through art merely, makes manifest the universal excellence of Shakspeare, which no art or learning can ever measure. Ingersoll knows nature, her heights and depths, her glory, her intensity; and through nature he knows Shakspeare, for with his own vision he has seen what the poet beheld in his glance "from earth to heaven and heaven to earth." It is fortunate for the lover of Shakspeare that his own deepest thoughts of this mighty genius can be made vivid to him in the sparkling words of Ingersoll, every one of which is a jewel so set, with such skill and harmony, that Shakspeare is mirrored as never before to the intellectual vision of the world.

Mr. Henry Bird presented Ingersoll with a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums, which indeed was a fitting accompaniment to the eloquence of the occasion; and one inspiring lesson to me both of the flowers and the lecture was, that Freethought is both truth and beauty, and that all that is enchanting and delightful in music, in poetry, in art, shall yet be for man, in that path of reason and freedom which hitherto has been so harsh, so bloody, and apparently so fruitless. Ingersoll is the prophet of that beautiful time, when freedom, having won its battles, and reason having borne its torch from darkness to day, there shall be for man the fruits and flowers of earth, the beauty and tenderness of music, and all the riches of all the poetry of the world.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Obituary—Reuben L. Lunt.

Reuben L. Lunt died in Des Moines, Ia., Friday evening, November 17th, at the age of seventy-four years. The deceased was born in Mendon, N. Y., and in his younger days was a member of the Methodist church, an exhorter, and a Sunday-school superintendent. Happily, while yet a young man, the light of reason dawned upon his mind, and he cast off the dogmas of Christian theology. The best years of his life were devoted to the cause of Freethought. While his health was good he often arranged for Freethought lectures, and many a lecturer can testify to Father Lunt's unflinching devotion to the cause of universal mental liberty. He was a natural orator himself, and I have often heard him entertain an audience by his eloquence and words of wisdom. He was outspoken at all times, no matter who suffered in consequence. The absurdities and cruelties of orthodox Christianity found in him an uncompromising foe, and he dealt with them in no easy manner. He was a true reformer in every sense of the word. The oppressed had in him a friend. In his youth he espoused the cause of Abolition. Side by side with Wendell Phillips, Lloyd Garrison, and Parker Pillsbury he fought in the great conflict that finally banished the great curse, human slavery.

Mr. Lunt was a believer in Spiritualism, but he was at all times rational, and never tried to force his peculiar views upon others. Though he thought that there is a future life, he troubled himself but little about it, and seldom spoke of it. This world occupied his entire attention. In all things Reuben L. Lunt was a model Freethinker—honest, candid, kind, and generous. He loved his fellow-men, rejoiced with them in happiness, and shed tears with them in sorrow. With a long farewell, I can truly say of my departed friend,

His life was gentle,
And the elements so mixed in him, that Nature might stand up and say to all the world,
This was a man.

Des Moines, Ia.

FRANKLIN STEINER.

Are We a Free People?

If there is one set of patriotic platitudes which, above all others, we, as a people, are fond of proclaiming from the house-tops, it is that which, in one form or another, lays the flattering unction to our "souls" that in this, "our own dear native land," there are none of the petty interferences with the rights of men which are permitted and encouraged by the "effete monarchies" beyond the seas. Here, we declare, is freedom, unchained and chainless—of thought, of speech, of the individual, of the press. This is the home of the exile, the asylum of the persecuted, the refuge of the denounced and oppressed. Here "the free spirit of mankind, at length, throws off its last fetters," and an illimitable field is open for every seed of truth to germinate; here the mind may pursue an untrammelled career, where no tyrant, no creed, no church can lay its heavy interdict upon the growth of human thought.

But, as the child asked with reference to the star, "Is it true?" Are not our patriotic rhapsodies somewhat in advance of our perception and reason? Do we enjoy that perfect immunity from despotism whereof we boast? Have we no authorities practically claiming infallibility and seeking to control opinion? Are there no institutions, no self-constituted judges desirous of imposing injurious restrictions upon freedom of thought? Has the spirit of persecution vanished with its tangible symbols? All chains are not of iron, all dungeons are not of stone, all inquisitorial devices are not material, all banishment is not literal, all ostracism is not proclaimed, all tyranny is not coarse and unrestrained. The grosser applications of force, by which opinion was wont to be controlled in ages past, have disappeared before an advanced civilization, yet a less barbarous, a more refined tyranny is still compatible with the general sense of propriety and justice. Intellectual fetters are still forged, mental prison-houses are yet constructed, and men and women who dare to think, speculate, and speak for themselves are denounced for the heterodoxy of their honest sentiments, exposed to public odium, and if they will not retract, or remain silent altogether, compelled to lead lives of perpetual hypocrisy.

By both the church and the state the attempt is made to preserve old and erect new barriers to prevent entrance into the vast realms of intelligence yet unexplored. These barriers are founded upon creeds and laws which admit of no possibility of truth beyond their own formulas, and discourage inquiry in the largest and most important domains of thought and progress. The church, especially, appears to have become largely a body of fierce and bigoted disputants, not only within its own province but in secular fields; and many of its denominations, instead of pressing forward under the ever-living inspirations of hope and freedom, still array themselves on the side of gross superstitions, musty traditions, and moldy abuses. Hence we have exhibitions, the prototypes of which may readily be found in mediæval history, and criticism of which always raises the cry, "Procul, O procul este, profani!" the same profane being invariably referred to, sneeringly, as Atheists, Infidels, or Agnostics.

Can they who have investigated and prosecuted the numerous trials for heresy in recent years be called champions of any other freedom than that to speak in the most obnoxious terms to and of all who hold opposite opinions? Is there no tyranny in the desire of a few to abridge the rights of the many, as evidenced in repeated attempts to stop the issuing of newspapers, the running of public conveyances, the sale of the necessaries of life, and the opening of public libraries and art galleries on Sunday; or in the efforts to subject the press to censorship, prevent free speech, control literary and artistic taste, and cast odium upon the theater and other sources of innocent amusement?

The recent instance in St. Paul, Minn., shows how much "freedom" we might expect if one class of "divines"—quo jure?—had the power to enforce their dog-in-the-manger code of morality. A Methodist parson, one E. S. Pilling, preferred charges to the conference in session in Minneapolis against a "brother" minister, Rev. Thomas McCleary, of the Bates Avenue Methodist church of St. Paul, because the latter while at the World's Fair attended a theatrical performance of "America," wrote up his experience and impressions (which were favorable, on the whole), and published the same in the Methodist Herald, the leading exponent of Methodism in that section.

To such a pitch of fury did this very natural and innocent proceeding work the Pilling that he not only attacked the liberal McCleary, but the paper which published his observations, saying, in a letter to the editor:

I am astounded that you would allow an article by a minister of our church describing a ballet show and play, also advising our people to go, in the words, "the best of them annually attended." It is a disgrace to the Methodist Herald, the church, and to Rev. Thomas McCleary. You are not responsible for his views, but you are responsible for allowing such an article to go in. The question is not an open question. It is unlawful for minister or member to attend any play or theater, no matter how little they think of their solemn promises to the church and God. Unless you make some statement in your next issue deploring this article and putting your paper right, not referring to Rev. Thomas McCleary, I shall use my influence to try to have every copy of the Methodist Herald stopped in my neighborhood. I am against the theater in every form and shape. I am trying to get all people I come in contact with to keep from it, but this article is directly against my influence and the law of the church.

The obvious deduction from that screed is that when a person joins the Methodist church (and observe, the Pilling puts the church first and God last), he surrenders his individuality and becomes a serf, whose enjoyment of any intellectual pabulum, save the rotten husks left over from the Dark Ages, renders him liable to the lash of intolerance. But what shall we think of the position assumed by this Christian exemplar of love and charity toward the freedom of the press? He arrogantly says to the editor, in substance: "I and the like of me only are capable of conscientious convictions. Unless your views coincide with mine and favor my influence, I will do all in my power to ruin you." Here is freedom of opinion, literally with a vengeance. A newspaper must not give all its supporters a fair and impartial hearing, but must subject itself to the dictation of the self-conceited, Pharisaical, and bigoted cranks among them, whose virtues do not include the faculty of minding their own business.

Observe, too, that the editor is ordered to deliberately stultify himself by a lie. Had he not considered the article in question proper for publication he would not have printed it. But here is a command, accompanied by a threat, that he shall say he "deplores" it, when, in fact, as an honorable man, he can do nothing of the kind. As the Pilling probably accepts the Bible as an infallible authority, we advise him to refresh himself with some of its passages on lying. Otherwise, he may expect to eventually find himself in that "outer darkness" in which he professes to believe, and where "are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." JAMES T. CUMMINGS.

The Fact Is Admitted—What is the Cause and the Remedy?

"But our antagonists go on and say that Christianity is falling back, because of the fact that Infidelity is bolder and more blatant now than it ever was. I deny the statement. Infidelity is not near so bold now as it was in the days of our fathers and grandfathers. There were times in this country when men who were openly and above board Infidel and antagonistic to Christianity could be elected to high office. Now let some man wishing high position in the state proclaim himself the foe of Christianity, and an Infidel; how many states of the Union will he carry; how many counties; how many wards in Brooklyn? Not one."—Tal-mage.

This fact we have to admit. A man with the avowed opinions of Thomas Jefferson could not be elected to the office of president. It is true that a man who declares himself antagonistic to Christianity cannot get votes enough to make him governor of a state. It is pretty hard work to even elect an Infidel to the legislature. It can be done only where his opinions are not known. Religion to-day is more than half of our politics. Christianity not only makes our statutes, it dictates our elections. Colonel Ingersoll could not carry a town or city in the Union were he nominated for president of the United States, simply because he opposes the Christian superstitions. Freethinkers are partly to blame for this. They have not made themselves felt as they might have done. We need to band together and work together and vote together if we are ever to be a factor in government.—Boston Investigator.

Colonel Ingersoll on the American Protective Association.

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll's well-known pronouncedness of views is further illustrated in the following interesting matter which he furnished to a Post reporter at the Adams House last night.

To the query as to what he thought of the introduction of religion into American politics, as evidenced in the late action of the American Protective Association, Colonel Ingersoll replied emphatically:

"Apart from my peculiar religious or irreligious belief, I am a firm believer in the divorce of church and state. I do not think that religion, that is to say, sectarianism, should be taken into account in the political world. I do not think that the churches should be taken into account in the political world. I do not think that the churches should unite against a man because he disbelieves their creeds; neither do I think the unbelievers should unite against the believers. Men should be judged, not by their peculiar superstitions or beliefs, but by their actions—by their conduct.

"I do not believe in taking into consideration the race to which a man belongs. If he is a citizen I do not care where he was born. I am opposed to all combinations on religious questions and to all combinations that combat citizens simply because they were born in some other land. I believe in the equality of all the citizens of the republic.

"I believe in fighting anything that I think wrong in the open field; that is to say, by argument, not by combinations. I have no prejudice against a man because he is a Catholic; none because he is a Presbyterian. At the same time I do not believe in Catholicism, and I do not believe in Presbyterianism; but I do believe in the sacredness of human rights.

"I do not join in the cry that immigration should be stopped. We have lots of room in this country for several hundred millions more of people. I do not want Europe to send its paupers or its criminals, but I believe in allowing the people of other countries, who are in love with our government, or who hope to better their condition, to come here, and in welcoming them when they do come, and in treating them in the kindest and best manner possible."—Boston Post

Observations.

This has been a good season for Thanksgiving proclamations of extraordinary devoutness, which might have been expected, since nothing stimulates piety like hard times. When people are able to live well on the proceeds of their own industry or enterprise, they congratulate themselves; whereas, for the crust and rag thrown to them by others in their extremity, they thank God, being convinced beyond doubt that providence has concluded to let up on them. And, having become accustomed to the rag and the crust, they do not often pray for anything more elaborate.

Here I desire to call attention to a Thanksgiving proclamation by Governor Penoyer, of Oregon, the gist of which is, that while God has given this country an abundance of natural resources, he has allowed Congress and the president, by ill-advised legislation, to so dwarf and paralyze business that these natural bounties have been withheld from hundreds of thousands of people within the national domain, throwing them out of employment and leaving them destitute of means to procure food, raiment, or shelter. Penoyer has attracted the almighty's notice to the oversight, and asked the residents of Oregon to join with him in imploring providence to correct its error by softening the hearts of those in high places, and moving them to allow a little circulating medium to circulate. He is quite specific and does not hesitate to let providence understand that the blessing which lingers below the horizon of hope is the resumption of free silver coinage. He also declared that an emergency existed, and, instead of waiting until November 30th for his proclamation to go into effect, named Thursday, the 23d, for the experiment. This, I think, is practical, carrying out as it does the suggestion of the late D. M. Bennett—to wit, when thou prayest, pray at a mark.

The almighty gave you your heads for you to use. If he had intended that somebody should use them for you, he would have put handles to them.—General Weaver.

General Weaver is a person destitute of the faculty of observation if he has not discovered that the average human head has a handle to it, whereby the priest and the politician lead the owner thereof to the altar or to the polls, according as it may affect their individual interests. The handle is the nose, and if General Weaver would abandon his pretensions to a knowledge of the purposes of the almighty, he might fall less under suspicion of attempting to direct his constituency by using that organ for steering gear. Peradventure the inclination of many Freethinking political reformers to take themselves by the nose, and to direct their own movements thereby, has led Mr. Weaver to the erroneous conclusion that the handle here discussed does not exist.

If the editor of the School Journal, who would that each day's session of all public educational institutions be opened with "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," performed on the vocal organs of pupils, to the tune of "Old Hundred," will incline his ear; I will admonish him that affliction cometh not forth from the dust, that water does not run up a tree, and neither is the Doxology a curtain-raiser. It is a closing sketch. Were my son to be enticed into a school where they doxologize before discussing the definition of a unit, I should advise him to remain standing until the benediction had been pronounced, and then fly his kite. The rule of procedure suggested by the editor of the School Journal would indubitably necessitate that a school be dismissed immediately before the opening hour, which would certainly be preferable if he were to conduct the obsequies of secular education in the manner prescribed.

It was not my privilege, nor my hankering, to attend the Congress of Religions at Chicago. I would not have gone there even if I had been a Christian clergyman and had secured reduced transportation rates for myself and the partner of my hilarity and gloom. As I told a minister who came to shake hands with me and leave a local item before departing for the Congress under the above conditions, in a body of that kind the members meet as equals. Nevertheless, the Protestant Christian is bound to maintain that the Mohammedan is the dupe of an impostor, that the Brahman is the adherent of a godless cult, and that the church of Rome, like Queen Liliuokalani of the Sandwich Islands, has been a good deal talked about. The clergyman may have had it on the end of his tongue to reply that he was something of a humbug himself—perhaps he settled that way with his conscience; anyhow, he went to the congress of humbugs, walked in the counsel of the ungodly, stood in the way of sinners, and sat in the seat of the scornful.

I am informed that this Congress was made up wholly of foreign religions—that is, those having their origin outside of America—while the Mormon religion, the only one ever revealed to an American citizen (if we except the Koreshanity of Teed) was turned down and out. The fact that we have no other state church except the Mormon, the property of which is administered by the United States government through the hands of a receiver, seems to have been entirely overlooked by President Bonney; so, therefore, we Americans have a right to feel that our native and official product was not given a fair show in the general exhibit. The time has come, as I maintain with boldness, for us to discard these Eurasian fads, patronize domestic industry, and keep our money at home. GEO. E. MACDONALD.

Lectures and Meetings.

Colonel Ingersoll's Lecture appointments are:

Dec. 3, Brooklyn, N. Y. | Dec. 10, New York City.
" 7, Worcester, Mass. | " 17, Williamsburg, N. Y.

DURING the month of December, Franklin Steiner will lecture in Correctionville, Pierson, Atlantic, Walnut, Carlisle, and other places in Iowa.

THE Newark Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner Market. Sunday, Dec. 3d, at 3 o'clock, Samuel P. Putnam, of New York, will lecture. Subject: "Rights of Man."

THE Science Sermons Society meets every Sunday evening at 7.45 o'clock in the lecture room of the Church of the Messiah, Park avenue, corner of 34th street. Lecture for Dec. 3d, "The Atmosphere: Its Past History and its Place in Life," by Dr. Robert G. Eccles.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM will lecture before the Friendship Liberal League of Philadelphia on Sunday afternoon and evening, December 10th, at 2.30 and 7.30 o'clock. Subject for afternoon, "The Rights of Man." Subject for evening, "Evolution and Creation."

THE Pittsburg Secular Society meets in Curry University Hall, Sixth street, near Penn avenue, every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

THE First Secular Church of Portland, Ore., meets in Central Labor Council Hall, 170½ Second street near Yamhill, every Sunday at 7.30 P. M. Sunday-school in same place at 10.30 A. M.

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Association holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of lectures for December: December 3d.—Mr. John Mott, "The Consequences of Society." December 10th.—Prof. A. L. Rawson, "The Dualism of Consciousness."

Others to be announced later on.

John R. Charlesworth is now in the East. The following appointments are on his list, and friends along the route desiring lectures should address him at once:

Dec. 3, Alliance, O. | Dec. 14, 15, 16, Waterloo, Ind.
" 17, Chicago, Ill.

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, will meet on and after October 17th in the Skerrett Building, northeast corner of Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock. Lectures for this month:

December 5th.—Henrietta P. Westbrook, M.D., "Tobacco: Will the Coming Man Use It?"
December 12th.—M. Ball, "Methods of Punishing Crime."
December 19th.—Prof. E. D. Cope, "The Material Relations of Sex."
December 26th.—Voltairine de Cleyre, "Economic Independence for Women—Reply to Professor Cope."

THE Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York:

December 1st.—Mrs. Matilda Joselyn Gage, "The Church of the Future."
December 8th.—Hon. Chas. S. Smart, A.M., "What Interest Has the State in Education?"
December 15th.—Edgar C. Beall, M.D., "Phrenology Scientifically Treated—With Readings."
December 22d.—Walter S. Logan, "Arguments for An Eight Hour Law."
December 29th.—Ye Club Maketh Merrie. Program to be announced later.

THE Ohio Liberal Society meets in College Hall, 168½ Walnut street, Cincinnati, Sunday evenings at 7.45, prompt. Admission is free. Program:

December 3d.—Edward Q. Norton, "Are We Nearing the Danger Line?"
December 10th.—Prof. Chas. Augustine, "The True Historic Christ." A reply to Prof. J. S. Van Cleave.
December 17th.—G. Gordon Sattler, "The Miraculous."
December 24th.—C. O. Wilmot, "Do Christians Believe in Prayer?"
December 31st.—Judge R. W. McNeal, subject to be announced.

The Turnerbund of New Ulm, Minn., has ordered five copies of Remsburg's "Abraham Lincoln."

Letters of Friends.

For Two Decades.

BURLINGTON, KAN., Nov. 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: From the looks of my tab my time is up, and you will please find inclosed postoffice order for $3 for another year. I have taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for twenty years, and I can not do without it. I am sincerely yours, R. A. LINEBAUGH.

Wants the Old Testament Stories Done in German; We Are Willing.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 13, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Would it not be a good idea to have the friends of THE TRUTH SEEKER in the various towns and cities pledge the number of Bible picture books they are willing to risk if printed in German? For instance, I will pledge myself for twenty-five copies. Now, certainly there is no subscriber of the paper but could pledge one copy, or say from one to twenty-five.

I make the above suggestion for your consideration. German books were received this morning all right. L. B. SILVER.

Liberals, Including Editors, Don't Skip This.

VINELAND, N. J., Nov. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: My "Last Song" is now ready for sale. It consists of eighty-seven verses of eight lines each, and places the man-made Bible, its man-made God, and their priests in their proper position. I want every true Liberal to send me a ten and a five-cent piece for a copy of it, or $1 for ten if they want them to sell or give away, and I think they might afford to do it, as I have spent more than seventy years of my life working for the Liberal cause and all other reforms, with hardly compensation enough to make a large dog comfortable.

Will all Liberal papers please copy this? By so doing they will help me make Liberals and increase the number of their subscribers. J. HACKER.

The Truth Seeker a Sower of Good Seed.

SUB ROSA, ARK., Nov. 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your journal increases its circulation here every year. And by it "good seeds are sown;" the people are beginning to think for themselves, and this soon results in death to spooks, spirits, and dogmas. "Sky-pilots" are as numerous here as elsewhere, but their influence is waning.

We had a good lecture by Dr. W. R. Bachelor, a veteran Agnostic, in our town hall, and the result was that the "Sunday evening services" at church were meagerly attended. The preacher himself said that the doctor's address took away two-thirds of his congregation.

Yours for Truth, N. J. RICE.

The Experiences of the Liberal Colporter.

CLAY CENTER, KAN., Nov. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In my experience in making an effort to sell Freethought literature to the people throughout the country I find many obstacles in the way. Some Christians make the remark that it is too bad that I am allowed to go about the country selling that kind of literature. Rev. H. B. Vennum (his name ought to be spelled "venom"), of Industry, Kan., made the remark one Sunday evening in his sermon that he did not see "why the good Lord lets such a fellow as him live; traveling through the country poisoning people's minds with Infidel trash." No doubt he was wishing he was God almighty for about five minutes; he would send me to the Christians' hell in a hurry, he so loves his Jesus. If the Christians had the power they once had they would burn a poor, one-armed Infidel at the stake for selling Freethought publications. J. B. WISE.

Blind for Twenty-five Years, But Now He Sees Clearly.

KANSAS CITY, KAN., Nov. 14, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have read a few numbers of your valuable paper, and I must say that I regard it as the ne plus ultra of all Freethought papers of the day. I got it through the news agent here. I intend as soon as practicable to send direct to the office for it, as I wish to purchase some of the valuable books you have for sale on the advance thought of the times. It is time now that something was done to discredit the doctrines that have blighted and retarded the progress and the good of man. Religious vagaries are on the increase, and so are all forms of crime and diabolism. Train-robbery, bank-robbery, and all other kinds of plundering and murder as well as the order of the day. What a boon Christianity is! A man can commit any crime under the sun and therefore be absolved thereafter.

I tell you, Mr. Editor, I was blinded for twenty-five years by this amaurosis of heathen mythology. I now see clearly, and shall to the best of my ability fight this deadly nightshade of human liberty to the end. May the prosperous hands, guided by "infinite mind"—for there is no power in the universe of matter, except mind—move on the great work and cause that is to elevate mankind to a nobler plane of civilization.

Yours for the good of man,

DR. SIDNEY MURPHY.

Consistent Objector to Political Disension—He Attacks Neither Side.

RIDGEWAY, N. Y., Nov. 19, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to say, whenever I see a letter from our friend Peck on one side of the question of finance, or our friend Reed on the other side, I feel quite a strong inclination to take a hand in—I will not say on which side, for it seems to me the discussion of the subject at all in the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER is entirely out of place. I believe I give expression to the wishes of nine-tenths of the subscribers of the paper when I express the hope that the time will come in the near future when you will print no letter on the subject on either side. By the bye, as I am writing I would like to say that the letter of R. B. Westbrook in last TRUTH SEEKER in relation to the Sunday opening of the World's Fair clearly demonstrates, in my opinion (if there remained any doubt before), his unfitness to represent any Liberal association as president, or even a representative speaker on the Liberal platform. It is to be hoped he will not attempt to pose further as a Liberal leader, until he has "evolved" up into the free atmosphere of Freethought.

GEO. L. PRATT.

Paul and Paine of One Mind About God.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: In conversation with many people, I am surprised to learn how many are ignorant of the value of Thomas Paine's works. They had heard a great deal about him, but never read his "Age of Reason." The other day, while talking on the subject of religion with a prominent member of the orthodox church, the subject of Thomas Paine's belief in religion was broached. The church member was rabid when any reference was made to Paine's morality. "Why," said I, "have you ever read 'The Age of Reason?'" "Yes," "Did you find in it aught but truth?" "I found in it infidelity." "Now, my friend, Thomas Paine professed to be a Deist, and acknowledged only one God—not the three-in-one that reason cannot understand. You believe that every word in the Bible is the word of God?" "Yes." "Well, the Apostle Paul believed as Thomas Paine did—that there is no God but one, the father of all things. You will find it in 1 Cor. viii, 5; also in Gal. iii, 20; again in 1 Tim. ii, 5—"For there is one God." This staggered my friend; he refused to talk with me any more. Oh, what ignorance, superstition, and bigotry there are in the majority of church people! Freethinkers are few, but thanks to reason and good understanding they are multiplying. S. R. THORNE.

Where Is the Victory?

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 7, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The fact that the civilized world has not yet been one quarter converted to the Christian faith can only be accounted for by the fallibility and unnaturalness of the teachings and doctrines of the church; and its present existence and strength in the Caucasian race and those dominated by this race, proves a victory whose extent and value is far from being commensurate with its gigantic and terrible cost.

By every known and imaginable means, fair and foul, practiced by the dominant powers of the world, the conversion of the human race to Christianity has been sought with an ardor that must have achieved the most complete success had it been that the religion were true and based upon a foundation of fact or even probability.

Throughout the entire Christian era conversions to the faith have been secured by an appeal, not to reason and intellect and by the production of palpable evidence, but to fear, superstition, and blind faith in the existence of supernatural conditions and beings as unknown and unproved to those who asserted their existence as to those who listened to the assertions. Add to this the thousand-and-one temporal advantages offered to the worldly and strong, and the spiritual joys offered to the imaginative, superstitious, and weak.

During this era men have lived in great numbers whose opinions, formed by the evidences of nature, were contrary to the Christian doctrines. During all that time these doubters have been in a vast majority. The millions who have chosen death and torture rather than to utter falsehood in recanting and accepting the faith were certainly fewer in number than those who, under the circumstances, have taken the most reasonable and practical course and either kept their opinions a secret, or, when forced to speak, have represented themselves believers in the faith when they were not.

Any religion, to establish which such means were found necessary, must, in the nature of things, become weak in time and finally obsolete. In spite of biblical and modern evangelical assumption and boast, the supernatural doctrines of Christianity will fade out of human life, out of the memory of man, and possibly even from the printed and written history of man. We note an upward, perfecting process in the mental, moral, and physical growth of humanity, the result of an increasing understanding of nature, and the non-reliance in supernatural as an agent in itself for either good or evil.

J. B. SWETT.

Did Not Know What Is in the Bible.

GARDEAU, PA., Nov. 11, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5.25 to apply on the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. It is beyond my comprehension how anyone can give up Liberal works for the religious trash with which the country is flooded. Many of my acquaintances in this part of the moral vineyard are of that stamp for popularity. They are not worthy of the name Freethinker; they are not Freethinkers, so to speak.

A short time ago I had some sport with a runner from the Young Men's Christian Association, in the shape of a Bible agent. He lingered long and lovingly upon the beauties of his faith. I became tired of such nonsense, and turned the tables on him. At first he seemed to think I was just ready for the lunatic asylum. I referred him to several works on Freethought which I have. He asked if the authors of these works could substantiate their statements. Most assuredly; we do not base our doctrines upon myth. Then I referred him to the Bible for proof. He said such statements are untrue; they are not that way in the true Bible. "True Bible," I said, "I should like to see one." "I can show you one," said he, "and I would like to see yours." Bibles compared and found to be the same. All he could say was, "I must go." "No, not yet," I said. "I have a beautiful and instructive little work which I presume you never saw; it will just suit your case." (Producing "Bible Morals," by John E. Remsburg.) He just glanced at it and remarked, "It is blasphemy." "Is it, indeed?" said I; "really, I was not aware of it; is it wrong to quote passages of scripture?" "Oh, no!" "Then permit me to read a few verses, and you may look them up in your Bible." I proved to him that falsehood and deception, theft, robbery, and murder were sanctioned and even encouraged by the Bible. He could stand it no longer; he put his precious idol in his pocket and started for the door. Said I: "Stop! I have one thing more of great importance to you; that is something for your banner, or rather one you support (the Woman's Christian Temperance Union banner)—'Wine which cheereth God and man;' 'Destroy it not, for a blessing it is.'" "Say, Mrs., what will you take for that book—I want it?" "To destroy it?" I asked. "No, I want to read it." Said I: "I will give it to you if you will read it carefully all through and not destroy it." He replied: "I promise to read it all through with care, and return it by mail if you have no other." "Oh," I said, "I know where I can get plenty more; this is only the sixth one, and I will give it to you, asking only that you read it." "I will do so with pleasure," he said, "and return it." Then he departed, feeling much calmer in his mind, and in two weeks it came back with name and address.

MRS. E. N. FAIRCHILD.

This Man Is on the Freethought Anxious Seat.

FAIRVILLE, N. B., Nov. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Several weeks ago I sent you $3 for THE TRUTH SEEKER for six months and the "Cosmian Hymn Book." I am well pleased with my investment. The "Cosmian Hymn Book" is away ahead of the blasphemous "Gospel Hymns." I now inclose $1, for which please send me "Some Mistakes of Moses," by Colonel Ingersoll. I am interested in Moses. I think that the Commandments he gave to his people are the best part of the Bible, and would like to get the opinion of an educated man of this time on them. However, the character, Jesus Christ, tried to improve on the Commandments and made a muddle of it. In fact, he broke the second one in telling people to worship something in the likeness of the earth beneath. I also would like to have a copy of the "Age of Reason," by the much-talked-of Thomas Paine. I am not one of that kind of people who will look on only one side of a question, and burn all literature on the other side without looking at it. The remaining twenty-five cents will also buy a copy of "Sabbath-Breaking," by John E. Remsburg. Mr. Remsburg takes a good picture and writes a good hand, and will, no doubt, have some very clever thoughts to propound on the Sabbath.

In your last issue, Watson Heston represents his General Booth in rather a dangerous position. It is to be hoped that he may recover his reason before he plunges into the abyss. It is the music and excitement that keep the Salvation Army together. Why don't you Infidels unite and form a new sect? Take the good part of the Bible for a foundation in order to please the people and the government. You know the book is not all bad. Then weed out the bad part and replace it by good. People don't like sudden changes. They want things done gradually. It is right, too, to sing praises to the God of Nature, although he ought to be ashamed of himself for having allowed so much cruelty, injustice, and misery to come into the world through having made people bow to violations of the second Commandment of Moses. However, God knows what he is about, and in fifty years, more or less, Jesus Christ will be a thing of the past, and there will be universal peace, a universal language, and no paupers. The English language will conquer. First, it will be spelled phonetically and then people will see improvements that can be made in its words. I am doing what I can on the side of truth and happiness. The people here say: "We admit that nature doesn't make sudden changes like those mentioned in the New Testament, but what would the country be without churches? Why, people would be robbing and killing one another." I reply that there are too many churches and they don't give more than ten per cent of the morality they ought. FRANK JARVIS.

[The Commandments of Moses were evolved from the experiences of the race. He was not their originator, nor the formulator of several of them. Some of them are good, some bad. Some are in no sense adapted to this age, notably those concerning the making of images, the worship of gods, and the observance of the seventh day. Freethinkers accept the "good part" of the Bible as they do of all other books. A "sect" founded on the good part of the Bible would have a very narrow foundation, for knowledge has made tremendous strides since the various parts of that work were written. One-book worship has been the curse of the world; Freethinkers want none of it. Our friend's "God of nature" seems to be a sorry thing to sing praises to, as he sees and honestly admits. Much more rational and healthful exercises can easily be found. How does Mr. Jarvis know that "God knows what he is about"? Language is a growth, and the English language, like all other live ones, is constantly undergoing modification. Those who say that crimes would be rampant were it not for the restraining influences of Christianity forget that there were high civilizations before its birth, that the most colossal crimes of the ages were committed by peoples wholly under the domination of the churches, and that crime is almost epidemic in Christian lands to-day. Do these objectors mean that they would steal and murder and torture were it not that they believe in spooks and a sacred book? Is that all that makes them decent citizens?—Ed. T. S.]

The "National" Heresy and Its Fatherhood of Monopolies.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Nov. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I notice from time to time that some of your correspondents in their communications indulge in a little dig at politics. Taking license therefrom, I will deviate from an Atheistic or theological essay, and write a short political one.

Having studied politics to some extent I am satisfied that our forefathers in establishing our government never intended that it should have any national powers whatever. Therefore, they established a foundation for a government by adopting a federal constitution. The two kinds of government—national and federal, if the terms be rightly understood—are directly opposed and antagonistic in their nature.

Not a single clause or sentence in the Constitution made by our fathers can be found that by any fair or honest interpretation can be construed to show our government has or ever had any national or sovereign powers whatever. There is, however, part of a sentence, composed of two words, "general welfare," in Article I., section 8, for raising means to pay the legitimate expenses of the government, which, if taken out of the sentence and placed alone by themselves—which by printers and others is not considered an honest way to interpret written sentences, as it conveys ideas that are absolutely different from what the whole intends to convey—might give a shadowy justification of the nationalistic idea.

By many these two words are so taken out of the sentence and construed. If the construction be correct, then, of course, our general government has national and supreme powers over federal or any other powers. Otherwise not, if not a fair and honest construction. No one having a word to say on any legislation whatever, but Congress. All the rest must submit without question or protest, or even without being consulted or asked. A national government de facto, indeed. The result of legislation under this construction is plainly visible. Every heavy capitalist, and corporations of all kinds having abundant wherewith to support and back them, from all parts of the country, at almost every session, are at the doors of Congress (many members of which are deeply interested in "general welfare"), with the idea of "general welfare" in their minds or for their especial benefit, concocting innumerable schemes of some sort in the way of subsidies, loans of credit, land grants, protection to American industries, etc., in the interest of "general welfare," whereby millionaires are made. Many of these millionaires put their illegitimate gains, paid for by labor, into church properties, educational and so-called charitable institutions, which are run under the care and control of churches at an enormous expense, exempt from taxation, thereby increasing the burden, all of which must be paid in the end by increased taxes upon the laboring masses. All these schemes are inaugurated under the unconstitutional idea of "general welfare," in order that the general government may aid them in their schemes whether they be legitimate or entirely of a speculative nature.

Almost all the men employed by or living in the neighborhood of these political schemers are taught and made to believe that their wages, their living, their prosperity, and the happiness of themselves and families, depends entirely upon supporting these political schemers by their votes at election, notwithstanding the fact, which they ought to know, that whatever advantage or pecuniary profit may accrue to the already rich, to rich corporations, monopolists, and political schemers, has to be paid for in the end by taxes upon the consumers, and by those who patronize their money-making schemes that are carried by the general government. All of these taxes have to be paid in wealth that agricultural and other labor has produced, the rich paying no more than the poor man, for the reason that he is engaged in trafficking in the wealth that labor produces, and thereby does not produce a dollar's worth of wealth himself, and cannot consume any more wealth—except in the way of luxuries—that he can eat and wear out, than the poor man does. Agriculturists and all other laboring classes engaged in laboring and producing the wealth that the rich traffic in, should thoroughly study these principles and examine all the schemes concocted by the wealthy and non-wealth-producing classes for the government to carry in the interest of "general welfare."

Witness the purchasing clause of the silver or "Sherman act," which is only one of the many schemes for the government to carry rich corporations and monopolists to their advantage and profit. A large contract cannot be made with a single one of them except upon the basis of gold payments. Would it not be just as legitimate, and just as much for the "general welfare," for Congress to pass a bill compelling the general government to purchase and carry for the benefit of farmers 2,500,000 bushels of farm products a month, or to purchase and distribute to the laboring masses $2,500,000 worth a month of provisions and clothing, in order to carry them along, which in any event—no matter what the scheme—they are obliged to pay for in the end, with all the costs of collecting and handling added?

GEO. DAVIS.

Reconstruct.

MR. EDITOR: It has been said—by Professor Tyndall, I think—that "nothing is absolutely stable. From the smallest particle to the ocean everything oscillates. Oscillation is the condition of life; immobility a sign of death; and the general powers of nature which regulate the inorganic as well as the organic world never rest."

Yes, laws change, creeds change, governments change—because the minds of men change. And would it not now be an appropriate time to calmly and reflectively consider the status quo of our own boasted "best government on earth"? If really the best, as many over-patriotic enthusiasts proudly and defiantly claim it to be, where, oh, where have intelligence, truth, and justice secreted their diminished heads? Look for a moment at some figures which represent facts:

The state of New Hampshire embraces in a territory of 9,280 square miles a population of 376,530. She has a governor, lieutenant-governor, and state officials generally, local officers of counties, cities, and towns; 24 state senators, 358 representatives, and two senators, and her quota of representatives in Congress—thus giving an office to every fortieth one of her population!

Several other of the small states are alike—or nearly alike—tax-ridden for the support of their vast armies of officials. They certainly ought to be well governed—or plundered!

Now, a few figures as to the area of states, each of which, according to our "very just laws," requires alike two senators in Congress:

	Square miles.
New Hampshire has.....	9,280
Vermont.....	10,212
Massachusetts.....	7,800
Rhode Island.....	1,806
Connecticut.....	4,750
Delaware.....	2,120

Total for the six states.....35,468

Excluding that of Massachusetts, the combined population of the other five states numbers less than one-third the population of New York state, and only a little more than one-third that of Pennsylvania.

The territory of the above six states combined is less than one-half that of either Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, or Wyoming; less than one-third that of the territories of either Arizona or New Mexico; less than one-fourth that of California or Montana, and more than one-seventh less than that of Texas. In other words, forty-two states, each with a greater area than that of the combined six, or two hundred states more than equaling the territory of Rhode Island, might be carved from Texas, with a considerable number of acres to spare!

Without some special line or mark of indication, how many persons are there who can point out the boundaries of a state, or even of a county; and what, if anything, inheres in the soil to render it more fertile or more to be revered under one title than under another, when it happens to be geographically a few yards or miles east, west, north, or south of an imaginary line? Is not state sentimentality, in our day of railroad and telegraph, extremely uncivilized, if not ridiculous?

In behalf of Justice (with a big J) let us adopt a common-sense form of government, instead of stolidly adhering to that of the dark and troublous ages of war-whooping savages. Let us have, not a union with plainly visible disintegrating elements, but a union of uniform laws, of equal and exact justice, of universal liberty, and unmistakable loyalty.

SUGGESTIV.—Let us then, as soon as it can be legally done, divide the 3,580,000 square miles now comprising our territory into twenty equal parts or states of about 179,000 square miles—each of which states to be again divided into twenty parts or counties, and these counties into conveniently sized precincts or districts. For the sake of brevity these states may be designated as A, B, C, D, E, G, H, J, L, M, N, O, P, R, S, T, V, X, Y, Z; the counties by numbers, in figures, from 10 to 29, and the precincts by numerals. No two cities, towns, or post-offices should be of the same name. In case of the acquisition of other territory on the continent (which seems probable) it should be similarly divided, and may be distinguished as Aa, Bb, Cc, Dd, etc., or by any other simple method agreed upon. Islands acquired may retain their own names.

Is not every great city, with a population of more than 500,000, an incubus upon a nation—a concentration of vice, immorality, and suffering?

In Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, and many other states and territories, there are millions of acres of land which require only irrigation to render them productive. Now, as no one can honestly earn so much as will amount in value to $1,000,000, would it not be just, proper, and right to enact a law forbidding the transmission by will, gift, or otherwise, to heirs, friends, or any others, individually or combined, or to any society, institution, or organization of any designation whatsoever, a sum total of more than $1,000,000; and, further, that in all cases where any individual may, at or prior to their death, be found possessed of a greater amount in value than that sum, should it not inure to the accretion of a government fund, primarily to be used in the work of securely damming various canyons in the Sierra Nevada, the Rocky, and other mountains, and the construction of the main sluice-ways to facilitate such irrigation? It is quite necessary for us to remember that "public liberty cannot progress except by the decay of personal greatness and personal wealth," and that "the overbalance of one man is tyranny, of a few oligarchy."

It may seem radical—perhaps very radical—but nevertheless it is the writer's opinion, founded on just principles, that there should be no gambling in the price of stocks, bonds, or securities of any character; cotton, grains, or anything produced by labor or used by the public; and that all banks, excepting simply a few for the convenience of secure deposits, should be rendered virtually non-existent by declaring it illegal and penal for any individual or institution to exact more than one per cent per annum on loans of any amount or for any purpose. For by the aggregation of dollars, either honestly or by fraud, the privilege being granted of obtaining from five to twelve per cent, as at present the codes of various states declare to be "legal," the inert dollars do their owner's share of labor, while he is "lawfully," though unjustly, exempted from soiling his hands.

After an equal division of our territory, full power being granted, we should enact an entirely new and uniform code of general laws for the governance of the people of all the states in the Union. Something like what is, in part, suggested here might prove effective. To the dictums of Moses, "Thou shalt not kill," and "Thou shalt not steal," we should add, "under penalty of death," leaving no mythical loophole through which to crawl to glory. We should have the Confucian exhortation enforced: "Do nothing unto others that you would not have others do to you."

We should inhibit voting by the ignorant and the foreigner until after their due qualification; render illegal all political primaries and conventions, and make the unsolicited choice of the people the only legally elected officers for any official position.

In all cases where violations of law are indubitably proven, the mandates of the statute in such case made and provided should be, without further trial or ceremony, immediately enforced.

All persons, children as well as adults, male and female, should be daily and duly instructed in the laws—particularly of meum et tuum—and warned as to their undeviating and inexorable features.

These laws should go into effect Jan. 1, 1900, or sooner if lawfully ordered by the voice of the people. Why?

Because, since our earliest history, there have been Confucius, Lao-tse (of the Tao), Buddha, Brahma, Moses, Mohammed, Jesus, Joe Smith, Miller, and numerous others not necessary to mention, who have, in their way, apparently endeavored to inculcate the principles of truth, honesty, justice, etc., and notwithstanding all the mythical penalties threatened to be thundered upon them from Sinai by a wrathful, offended creator, and all the labors of the priestly callings—at a cost to the people of many hundred millions of dollars per year—we are yet, in this "advanced age" of law and so-called justice, compelled to expend an equal number of millions of dollars every year in support of policemen, constables, jurymen, lawyers, sheriffs, judges, and many other officials, to "enforce law and order."

From the days of Moses to the days of Jesus, the most incessant cries among Asiatics, Egyptians, and Europeans were "War, war," "slaughter, slaughter," "plunder, plunder," "death to heretics!" From the days of Jesus, with brief intervals, until a very recent period, nearly similar dread cries have been heard in various lands. Our own "civilized" and "Christianized" people have not escaped a fearful struggle, in order to maintain a national existence, even with all the "prayerful aid" rendered by the multi-million infallibles of—

"Hold!—too radical—too harsh."

Say you so? Why tamper with truth? 'Tis true it may not always be "politic." Let politics await—"skedaddle!"

"Magna est veritas, et prevalebit," was written by a Latin sage, many, many years ago, and

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again," was penned by Bryant before the—the—trial of Dr. Cook; but when will "truth prevail"? when will she "rise again"? Mr. Bryant has poetically answered:

"The eternal years of God are hers."

Too long, oh! too long to wait for the "returns."

"Fiat justitia, ruat cælum!" And yet, as the heavens cannot fall, give, oh, give us more of justice, that we may be endowed with the power to lift truth from her down-trodden, in-the-mud, "crushed-to-earth" condition. Then, and not till then, can our Union hope to blaze out as a beacon light for the betterment of the people of the world.

H. C. R.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

How the Leaves Came Down.

I'll tell you how the leaves came down.
The great tree to his children:
"You're getting sleepy, yellow and brown,
Yes, very sleepy, little red;
It is quite time you went to bed."
"Ah!" begged each silly, pouting leaf,
"Let us a little longer stay;
Dear father tree, behold our grief;
'Tis such a very pleasant day,
We do not want to go away."
So just for one more merry day,
To the great tree the leaflets clung;
Frolicked and danced and had their way,
Upon the autumn breezes swung.
Whispering all their sports among.
"Perhaps the great tree will forget,
And let us stay until the spring,
If we all beg and coax and fret."
But the great tree did no such thing;
He smiled to hear their whispering.
"Come, children, all to bed," he cried;
And ere the leaves could urge their prayer,
He shook his head, and far and wide,
Fluttering and rustling everywhere,
Down sped the leaflets through the air.
I saw them; on the ground they lay,
Golden and red, a huddled swarm,
Waiting till one from far away,
White bed-clothes heaped upon her arm,
Should come to wrap them safe and warm.
The great bare tree looked down and smiled—
"Good night, dear leaves," he said;
And from below each sleepy child
Replied, "Good-night," and murmured,
"It is so nice to go to bed."

SUSAN COOLIDGE.

Swans.

Bennie and Mamie Nelton came running in one day from Mrs. Lang's, where they had been sent on an errand for their mother.

"Oh, mamma!" exclaimed Bennie, "Mrs. Lang gave us two goose eggs."
"Real goose eggs," added Mamie.
"Hong Kong goose eggs," said Bennie, "and when they are on the water they arch their long necks and look like swans."
"Who ever heard of goose eggs swimming on the water and looking like swans?" This from papa.

"It's the geese that look like swans," explained Bennie, "and they are all over white, and the goose says—"

"Honk! konk!" interrupted Mamie, "and the—the—"

"Gander says 'Eureka! eureka!'" finished Bennie.

"But these are only eggs, and not geese," said mamma.

"But the white hen wants to sit," returned Bennie; "can't we put them under her to-night and let her hatch them? Mrs. Lang said they would be just right for Thanksgiving."

Mrs. Nelton gave them the required permission, and they were happy. The hen sat upon these eggs one week; then some hen's eggs were added; thus in four weeks there were seven little chickens and two downy, golden goslings. The latter the hen refused to own, and pecked at them savagely.

"Oh, oh, the bad hen!" exclaimed Mamie.

"What shall we do with them?" queried Bennie.

"The hen will kill them, and they are so sweet," said Mamie.

"We will bring them up by hand," replied mamma.

Papa made a little pen for them near the house.

"What are you digging that round hole for, papa?" asked Bennie.

"Wait a minute and you will see," and presently he placed in the hollow a brimming pan of water.

"You see," said mamma, "if the pan was on the top of the ground they could not reach the water."

"What will they eat?" questioned Mamie.

Mamma put one spoonful of corn meal and three spoonfuls of shorts or middlings in a cup and wet it with sweet milk, which she fed to them. "Now they are sleepy, and we will put them in this box, cover them over with flannel, and take them into the house."

How cunning they were, and how they did grow. By Thanksgiving they were a beautiful pair, and would follow Bennie and Mamie everywhere when allowed to do so; and when they commenced to say, "Honk! konk!" and "Eureka!" the children jumped for joy. They persisted in calling them swans, and Mr. and Mrs. Nelton fell also into the habit.

"Well," said Mr. Nelton one day, "tomorrow is Thanksgiving and I must go out and kill those swans, so they will be ready for to-morrow."

Mamie commenced to cry, while Bennie exclaimed: "O papa! we'd rather eat just nothing 'cept bread and milk, or 'tato';" then he too broke down and they sobbed in concert.

"'Twould be 'most murder, 'twould papa," said Mamie.

"Would it be any nearer murder to kill the swans than to deprive any other living creature of the life to which I think they have the same right that human beings have?" asked mamma.

"But we like meat," returned Bennie.

"Then perhaps you would like a piece of swan?"

"Oh, no, mamma, I'd rather never see any meat."

"Mamma never eats it," observed Mamie.

"That's so," assented Bennie.

"Suppose we say we will never eat any meat or have any in the house," said papa.

"We will have milk, cream, butter, eggs, olive oil, vegetables, and plenty of fruit."

"And bread?"

"Yes, and sometimes pudding and pie."

What do you say—shall it be meat or no meat?"

"No meat," they answered.

"I don't think I could eat meat any more," said Mamie. "I'd always think of swan."

S. ATHENA MAGOON.

Correspondence.

PENACOOK, N. H., Nov. 6, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I have lately read your "All in a Lifetime," and I do so wish everybody could read it. Our friend, Mr. Rockwood of Boston, kindly sent it to me. I think it the very best story I ever read. And now I am more anxious to see you than ever. As soon as I can I am going to have "All in a Lifetime" do missionary work by sending it through the mails to those I wish to read it. Mr. Broadbelt sent me "Almost Persuaded" by Will N. Harben. I am seeing how many I can get to read it. It is very nice. Sincerely thine, ETTA MARDEN.

SPOKANE, WASH., Oct. 30, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I will try to write to the Children's Corner for the first time. I will be eight years old the eleventh of January. I have been going to school seven months and I am in the A second reader. My papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. I have a little brother. He is one year old. His name is Lloyd Ingersoll Sharpless. If I see this in print I will write again. I will close my letter now. MAUD SHARPLESS.

[Maud will always see her letters to the Corner in print when they are as good as this one.—Ed. C. C.]

WESTMINSTER, CAL., Oct. 30, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to the Children's Corner. This is my second letter. It has been a long time since I last wrote. Our school has started. I go to school. I am in the fifth grade. I study reading, language, arithmetic, spelling, drawing, music and writing. Yesterday was my birthday. I was eleven years old. We have two teachers. My teacher's name is Mr. Conley. This is the second term he has taught here. I like him very much. On October 15th. we and a few of our neighbors went to the ocean. We had a little picnic and we had a nice time. It was too cold to go in bathing. I remain your Liberal friend,

LILLIE B. GALLUP.

[Will you not tell us something of what you saw at the ocean—along the shore, the rolling billows, etc.—Ed. C. C.]

HOOKSBURGH, O., Nov. 7, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Children's Corner. My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and we like to read it very much. My age is twelve years. We live two miles from Hooksbush and nine miles from McConnelville, our county seat. I don't go to school, for we have vacation before our winter school begins. I live in a hilly country. We cultivate corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, and have some fruit, such as apples, peaches, pears, and plums. I would like for some of the little Freethinkers of the Corner to write to me. I will close, hoping to see this in print. Your Liberal friend, ODESSIE A. HOOPER.

[Another bright girl added to our Corner family. Here are the Freethinkers of the future, and all must admit they are a splendid lot.—Ed. C. C.]

CENTRAL POINT, ORE., Nov. 2, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As I haven't written any letter to the Corner for some time I thought I would write one to-day.

Near where I live is a camp-ground on which was held a meeting, lasting about two weeks. I went once or twice and it disgusted me.

Nearly all my school-mates are church-members, and they try to shame me, but I hold my own.

Well, I will close. I wish some of the girls of the Corner would write to me.

I remain your true Liberal friend, LULIE BEALL.

[Never mind, Lulie, what they say to you. You know the right is on your side. Show by your daily actions how superior a little freethinking girl can be. Be kind and good and just to all.—Ed. C. C.]

SALMON ARM, B. C., Oct. 29, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Having seen in a recent number of THE TRUTH SEEKER that De Etta Hooper wanted a name for her baby brother, I wish to propose mine. It is not at all a common name—Bella.

There was a good joke on one of our Methodist neighbors who keeps a boarding-house. A well-dressed young man went in there and had his supper and a bed, but before breakfast he said he had to read a chapter from the word of God. This he did, and he was served with the best. But after eating he slipped out the back way and forgot to pay; he then made for the railway tracks. We do not take THE TRUTH SEEKER, but my brother-in-law does. I like to read it, especially the Children's Corner. I am named after a Freethinker; the late Bella Bishop of Wisconsin, U. S. Your Liberal friend, BELLA BOLTON.

[Our Corner can boast of a large number of very bright girls and boys. Bella is among that number.—Ed. C. C.]

DELAIR, N. J., Nov. 5, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write a few lines. This is my first attempt to write to the Children's Corner. I am nine years old. My little sister is only seven years old. Her name is Maud. She is a cripple, and has to wear braces. She has a club foot. She is just beginning to walk a little each day without her braces, and we are so very glad to think she may get well.

Papa has been taking THE TRUTH SEEKER for ten or twelve years. I think it is a nice paper. I read the Children's Corner every week, and take great pleasure in reading the letters of little girls.

Delair is a little village of fifty houses, five miles from Camden. Papa goes to work every day in Philadelphia, and he goes to Camden one night a week to take music lessons. He is learning the clarinet. Papa says he wants me to learn the violin and Maud the cornet when we get a little older. ELSIE JACKSON.

[A good letter from a good girl. We hope Maud will soon be well and able to write a letter for the Corner. If prayers would avail, we would pray for her lameness to be overcome. But praying is useless and a waste of time. So we must trust to skill, good care and attention, and await results.—Ed. C. C.]

ATCHISON, KAN., Nov. 4, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: The hour has once more arrived when I feel it my duty to write a few lines to the Children's Corner. It seems to me that I am not doing my duty towards Freethought unless I can write and express my thoughts often in the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. Our great orator, Col. R. G. Ingersoll, has just lectured here, and I must say that we ought to feel very proud to have such a grand man in our field. I think it is impossible to find a grander man or a finer orator. It seems strange that anyone could believe differently from him after once seeing him, let alone hearing him. Just think: The smartest man living, and then for people to believe differently and curse and slander him for the way he believes. His subject here was "Myth and Miracle." He had a very large audience, consisting of the best people in town. There were some that went with the intention of disturbing and to make fun of him, but he had scarcely commenced when everybody in the house seemed to be charmed. The Christians barked around terribly when they heard he was coming. But you know barking dogs never bite. I heard several say that they were going to think after this. That is where the question comes in.

That is the reason there are so many fools in the church, because they don't think what they are doing when they accept the dogmas of superstition. It is the same way when they steal and murder; they don't think until after it is too late. I think if we could keep the ball rolling and have several more such lectures here they would all get to thinking. In England and Wales, in 1873, there were five hundred Christians to one Infidel confined in their prisons. It is because they did not think until after the deed was committed that confined them there. In 1880 a gentleman of Kansas wrote to Chaplain McCleery, asking this question: "How many Infidels are confined in the Kansas penitentiary?" McCleery is reported to have replied in these words: "There is but one Infidel confined in the penitentiary, and his infidelity is of a mild form." Too mild, you see, to keep him out of the penitentiary. So you can see that the Infidels are the thinkers, or there would have been more criminals.

The old soldiers are holding a reunion here this week. Over two hundred and fifty from the Home at Leavenworth are present; also the band from the Home. It is counted one of the best in the state. They are having a grand time. It is rather a pitiful sight to look at some of the old fellows to think of the hardships they have gone through and the fighting they did to free our country.

I wish to state that I meant "Christian hereafter" in my last letter.

Hoping that I have not taken up too much of your valuable space, I will close for this time. Yours for Liberty, JOHN REMSBURG, JR.

[Yes, if people would only use their reasoning powers a little more this world would be a much better place in which to live. Why, many of our young people of the Corner are better reasoners and thinkers than some gray heads who have always accepted the dictum of a priest without stopping to think whether it was reasonable or not.—Ed. C. C.]

OUR NEWEST BOOKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? By John E. Remsburg. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Pen-Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper, 25 cents.

Religion a Curse, a Lie, and a Disease. By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper, 25 cents.

Design Argument Fallacies. A Refutation of the Argument that Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being. By the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Paper, 15 cents.

Crimes of Preachers in the United States. By M. E. Billings. Paper, 25 cents.

Handbook of Freethought. By W. S. Bell. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Pleasure and Progress: An Attempt to Prove that the Pursuit of Pleasure is the staple qua non of Intellectual, Moral, and Social Development, and that the Promotion of Pleasure is the Duty of Philanthropy and Statesmanship. By Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Creation of God. Tracing the God-Ide to Its Source. By Jacob Hartmann, M.D. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Resurrection of Jesus. By Don Allen. Cloth, 75 cents; cloth, 40 cents.

Facts and Fictions of Life. By Helen H. Gardener. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Cloth, $2; leather, $3.

IN PRESS.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought. By Samuel P. Putnam. Subscription book, elegant binding, over one hundred portraits, $5.

Woman: Four Centuries of Progress. By Susan H. Wixon. Paper, 10 cents.

The Church and Freethought. By Franklin Steiner. Paper, 10 cents.

The Giant Delusion. One of Otto Wettstein's Friendly Arguments with the Spiritualists. Paper, 10 cents.

Bible Inquirer. By Andrew Jacobson. Paper, 25 cents.

THE AGNOSTIC ANNUAL

—FOR—

1894.

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:

The True History of the Bible. Prof. Edwin Johnson; A Practical View of Life, Charles Watts; The Decadence of the Old Theology, Mrs. E. Lynn Linton; Inspiration in Extremis, Samuel Laing; "The Gospel of Love, A Poem," Capt. W. B. McTaggart; Agnostic Types, R. Bithell, B.Sc., Ph.D.; On Spiritual Wickedness in High Places, Edward Clodd; A Priest of Nature, A Poem, Hon. C. K. Tuckerman; The Dream of Immortality, Frederick Millar; Is Immortality a Dream, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin); Practical Consequences of Agnosticism, F. J. Gould; The Religious Propensity, Furneaux Jordan, F.R.C.S.

Price, 25 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.

Price, 15 cents.

Address this office.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.
The Earth.
The Chemical Aspect.
The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.
Genesis—The Garden of Eden.
The Deluge.
The Scriptural God—The Creation.
The Creation of God—Abraham.
Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.
Samuel the Kingmaker.
God Save the King.
Jehovah Takes a Rest.
The End of National Life.
The Christian Era.
Organic Life—Vegetable.
Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.
The Muscular Tissues.
The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,
In General.
By the Lungs.
By the Skin.
By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.
The Elementary Substances.
Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.
The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.
The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.
Rational Review.
Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.
The Planetary Gods.
Every Man His Own God.
Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.
Morals: Whence They Spring.
The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.
Map of Theological Retrogression.
Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.
We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are, at once, the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

BOOKS

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 80 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardner's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Liars of the Protestant Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Lignori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attitudes at Continency even more Ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.
AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth; Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone; Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards? The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested? Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order or the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology).
Immortality of Matter, Man.
Immortality of Force, Brain and Mind.
Infinity of Matter, Thought.
Value of Matter, Consciousness.
Motion, Seat of the Soul.
Form, Innate Ideas.
Immutability of Natural Laws, The Idea of God.
Universality of Natural Laws, Personal Continuance.
The Heavens, Vital Force.
Periods of the Creation, The Soul of Brutes.
Of the Earth, Free Will.
Original Generation, Morality.
Secular Generation, Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Not for Parsons.

CRECULITY is not altogether bad. It aids greatly in keeping money in circulation. — Galveston News.

A CHINESE witness, asked in what form he would swear, said: "Kissee bookee, blowie matchee, blackee saucee, shelpie Bob, allee samee."

THE Clergyman: And why should little boys say their prayers every night? The Good Boy: So's the Lord can have a chance to get what they want by morning — Life.

"Did Jones get an office?" "You bet!" "What was it?" "Minister." "Where to?" "Hanged ef I know—they keep a-movin' him so fast." "Moving him?" "Yes. He's one o' these here Methodist ministers." — Atlanta Constitution

SUNDAY-SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT: Now, when David took the sling, do you suppose he realized what was coming to him? Model Boy (glibly): No; he probably thought it was just one drink, and he could stop any time he wanted to. — Puck.

ONE of the stories that drifted out of the Plaisance is of the mosque where prayers were said daily at regular intervals for the natives. A pious woman passing accosted a young Oriental and chatted with him, finishing with a nod toward his prayer-house and the remark, "I hope you go to church every Sunday, like a Christian." "No," was the quick reply, "I go every day, like a Turk"—which must score one for the heathen. — New York Times.

A REAL backwoodswoman, born and bred through a long life in the Vermont hills, was lately transported by a relative to the heart of Boston culture. She was taken to lectures on every "ism" and "ology," to talks on dress reform, and exhibitions of model living. The effect of it all was to be seen in a soliloquy overheard one night, as the poor old soul was trudging up stairs to bed: "No hell, no flannel petticoat," she murmured drearily. "What's a body goin' to do?" — World.

ABIDE with me, fast falls the bankrupt tide,
Depression deepens, Cash, with me abide;
When other helpers fail and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, Cash, abide with me.
I fear no debt, with thee at hand to bless;
By Mammon's aid I meet each tax and cess;
Blest Gold! Whatever else away should flee,
No rap I care, so thou abide with me!
— Melbourne Liberator.

A FARMER asked the well-known Father Tom Maguire what a miracle was. He gave him a very full explanation, which, however, did not seem quite to satisfy the farmer, who said: "Now, do you think, your reverence, you could give me an example of a miracle?" "Well," said Father Tom, "walk on before me and I'll see what I can do." As he did so he gave him a tremendous kick behind. "Did you feel that?" he asked. "Why wouldn't I feel it?" said the farmer, rubbing the damaged place. "Begorra, I did feel it, sure enough." "Well," said Father Tom, "it would be a miracle if you didn't."

INSTRUCTION supposed to have been imparted by an Irish farmer to his son: "You see, my boy, a man's life naturally divides itself into three distinct periods. The first is that in which he is plannin' and contrivin' all sorts of villainy and rascality; that is the period of youth and innocence. The second is that in which he is puttin' into practice the villainy and rascality he contrived before; that is the prime of life or the flower of manhood. The third and last period is that in which he is makin' his soul and preparin' for another world; that is the period of dotage."

He walked into the bookstore and stopped before the Bible department. He leaned over the counter and said to the ministerial-looking salesman: "Is them Buffalo Bill books over thar?" "Nope. Religious works." "Don't nun o' them read about chasin' Injuns and shootin' wild varmints?" "Not exactly." "Nothin' about a feller 'at could knock 'em out like John L., ner a feller 'at's slick with er Winchester, er hed the nerve to tackle er b'ar?" "Oh, yes. One better than that." "Who's he?" "Samson." "What'd 'e do?" "Oh, he had a fight with a lion." "Laid 'im out, did he?" "Yes, he killed the lion." "Jes' bored 'im with er Winchester?" "Nope." "Biffed 'im in the head with er ax, I 'spect?" "Nope." "Jes' kyarved 'm with his bowie?" "No, he just caught the beast by the throat and choked it to death." "You don't say!" "Yes, he was the strongest man that ever lived." "Wusser'n John L.?" "Yes." "An' wusser'n Jimmie Corbitt?" "Samson could knock them both out at once." "Whoopee! ain't he the stuff? I'll take two o' them Samson books." — Atlanta Constitution.

A GREAT BOOK ON RADICAL, SOCIAL, AND ECONOMIC REFORMS.

The title of the book is

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

The author is

HENRY OLERICH, of Hawarden, Ia.

This book is in story form, well printed on good paper, well illustrated, and hands mely bound. It is a text-book on "Co-operative Individualism." For many it is perhaps too radical on some questions of reform, but it is nevertheless eminently thought-provoking.

The universal unrest manifested by the thinking world, particularly during these "hard times," plainly indicates that our social, economic, and religious institutions are not in tune with the best thought of the age. The author vividly portrays an ideal world from which all our present social, economic, and religious evils are eliminated. For the fulfillment of his prophecy, the author does not rely on miracles, but on the advancing intelligence of thoughtful men and women. If Mr. Olerich's ideal state can ever be attained, the world will certainly be a paradise. Beautifully cloth-bound, price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MENTAL HEALING.

A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power.

By LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

A Book to explain the correct idea of Mental Healing, and what may be reasonably expected to result from an understanding of its principles. Price, $2.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Price, 10 cents.

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in the Interest of and Owned by the Whole People.

By HON. THOMAS E. HILL,

of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms," "The Hill Banking System," and other works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted.

This book is "just in time," is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFERENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the Initiative and Referendum,

By J. W. SULLIVAN.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed. Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

28 Lafayette place, New York City.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Free Thought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin.

[ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, . . . $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents

PRESENTS :: FOR

THE :: HOLIDAYS.

The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book, in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $2.50. In plain boards, $2.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $1.50. In plain boards, $1.

Around the World, by D. M. Bennett, 4 volumes, red cloth covers, $6.50; leather, red edges, $9.50; morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages. 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Ingersoll's Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; tree calf, $2.

Ingersoll's Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1,111 pages. In one volume, half calf, $5.

Life. A Prose Poem. By R. G. Ingersoll. In color, on boards, beveled, gilt edges, 50 cents.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28. inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll. 50 cents.

Apples of Gold, by Miss Susan H. Wixon. Gilt stamp. $1.25.

All in A Lifetime, by Miss Wixon. $1.

Voltaire's Romances, Profusely Illustrated. Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Darwin and After Darwin. By George J. Romanes. Silk cloth, gilt top, $2.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Conway's Life of Paine. Two large, handsome volumes. The best and only complete life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $5.

Part n's Life of Voltaire. Of which the same can be said as of Conway's Life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $5.

Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Leather, $3; cloth, gilt top, $2.

History of Christianity, Comprising all that relates to Christianity in the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $2.

For e and Matter. By Professor Ludwig Buchner, M.D. Half calf, $3; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind. By James B. Alexander. Cloth, $2.75.

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

Asleep and Awake. A new Liberal novel. By Raymond Russell. Cloth, side and back stamp, $1.

Cosmian Hymn Book. With music to all the songs. Edited by L. K. Washburn. Cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

For Other Books See the Advertisements, or Send to Us for a Free Catalogue.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Gems of Thought.

THERE are men who go to a gymnasium for exercise while their wives are sawing the wood.—Ram's Horn.

THE creator who could put a cancer in a believer's stomach is above being interfered with by prayer.—Bret Harte.

THERE can be no true marriage until woman is industrially independent, until she is perfectly free to accept or reject the terms offered her.—Gertrude Kelly.

TRUE freedom is to share
All the chains our brothers wear,
And with heart and hand to be
Earnest to make others free.

—John Boyle O'Reilly.

It has often and confidently been asserted that man's origin can never be known; but ignorance more frequently begets confidence than does knowledge; it is those who know little, and not those who know much, who so positively assert that this or that problem will never be solved by science.—Darwin.

No great deed is done
By falterers who ask for certainty.
No good is certain, but the steadfast mind,
The undivided will to seek the good;
'Tis that compels the elements, and wrings
A human music from the indifferent air.
The greatest gift the hero leaves his race
Is to have been a hero. —George Eliot.

DURING almost a hundred and fifty years Europe was afflicted by religious wars, religious massacres, and religious persecutions; not one of which would have arisen if the great truth had been recognized, that the state has no concern with the opinions of men, and no right to interfere, even in the slightest degree, with the form of worship which they may choose to adopt.—Buckle's History of Civilization in England, Vol. I.

THERE was once a man who had a disagreeable way of fitting all wayfarers to his bedstead by stretching the short and lopping off the long. Many classes in society ruthlessly endeavor to do the same thing by making their own habits the standards for their neighbors. The mental stature of these busybodies, however, is so small that the fitting process usually consists in lopping off. Only now and then, among heathens, do they come across a character so midgety that it has to be stretched.—Albert M. Lorentz.

I AM not in favor of taking the property of the rich and giving it to others; but let us see: We are invited this very night to a banquet. There ought to have been a chair and a plate for each, and there was. Suppose when we arrived here we found that to a certain nobleman and millionaire they had given fifty seats, and forty-nine gentlemen were compelled to stand. The forty-nine gentlemen would pass a law in favor of eminent domain. Nature is my mother; I was invited to this great feast of life, and I do not propose to stand while there is a seat in the world that another fellow is not occupying.—Robert G. Ingersoll.

IDEAS are mental food, and, as the brain of man is one of the greatest and most imperious of his organs, it follows that the food it consumes is of the utmost importance. Hence it is that we should be careful that the ideas we propound and the opinions we advocate are high ideas and lofty opinions, and that, in following their impulse, the race will advance to higher states of mental development than those in which it now rests. And for this purpose we claim that the essential condition of progress is that the thinker should think sincerely and propound his thoughts truly. It matters not how reactionary his thoughts may be, if they are uttered wholly and sincerely we believe the result will be good. For we have sufficient confidence in truth to believe that it will never be worsted, as Milton said, in a free and open encounter, and sufficient confidence in true sincerity to believe it will follow where truth leads.—Frederick Ryan.

MORAL progress is occasioned by the gratification of desires. This does not imply that we should be idle spectators of progress. On the contrary, we should, on occasion, help men to help themselves. In the lower classes are many whose circumstances are inferior to their tastes; many whose opportunities are less than their merits. We should not be indifferent when they are blindly groping for a better life. We should not manifest indifference when they manifest aspiration. But we should not help them. We should help them to help themselves. Teach them the best manner of gratifying the desires that they, not you, possess. Give them opportunity to realize their hopes. If you pursue this policy consistently, you will be gratified by now and then seeing a noble character emerge from squalor. But as to the mass of men, you must be satisfied with progress. Pining for perfection is but a display of puerility.—Pleasure and Progress.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged

As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by

Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbatic Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Sabbath; the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per dozen, 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the perils cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason," are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath-Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK Price, 15 cts.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and viceregents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price,

30 cents

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WANTED—500,000 Freethinkers to stop at
Richter's Hotel, Cullman, Ala. 6146

PATENTS

TERMS EASY.

Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. BAIGER & Co., Attys., Washington, D.C.

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double-sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silver case, dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silver case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels $15. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filed, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons $3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 4. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more Etched (teas only).

"The Time to be Happy is Now."

50 cents extra.
The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds. 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

Otto WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

STRONG, HEALTHY MANHOOD

Those Afflicted with Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility and who are desirous of being cured, a booklet will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and symptoms of the complaints, and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—An Ocular Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success. Address,

DR. R. P. FELLOWS,
Say where you saw this adver.

Vineland, N. J.

DROPSY

TREATED FREE. Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail, DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

News of the Week.

CABINET crisis in France—ministry resigned.

HEAVY SNOW storm in the Mississippi valley last week.

YALE beat Harvard in the football match at Springfield on November 25th.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, the novelist, was very ill in Samoa, at last reports.

THE Servian ministry has resigned, owing to disagreement over the tariff with Austria.

It is reported that the "war" between the Matabeles and the British South Africa Company is over.

KOKHAN, in Persia, was wrecked by an earthquake on November 17th. Many thousand lives were lost.

ARRANGEMENTS have been made whereby Chicago will keep most of the World's Fair buildings for several years.

Two American women died recently in Berlin of a disease caused by eating oysters infected with typhoid bacilli.

TWENTY-ONE hat factories have closed down at Danbury, Conn. It is said to be a movement against the unions which control the hat industry.

A STATUE of Nathan Hale, the young martyr of the Revolution, hanged by the British as a spy, was unveiled in New York on November 25th.

ONE of the insurgent Admiral Mello's war ships, the ironclad "Javary," was sunk by a shot from the government fort St. John, on November 22d.

LOUISE MICHEL approves the bomb throwing in the Lyceum Theater in Barcelona, whereby thirty men and women were killed and many more injured.

THE Prohibitionists of Minneapolis want to impeach Mayor Eustis because he declared that he would permit the saloons to keep their back doors open on Sunday.

GOVERNOR PENNOYER of Oregon designated November 23d as Thanksgiving, but it was not observed as such except by the state officials and commercial institutions.

DESTITUTION and suffering prevail in western Kansas. A severe blizzard accentuated the scarcity of coal and provisions and necessitated a call for assistance.

DISTRESS prevails in Newfoundland. The fishing villages, cut off from medical assistance, are ravaged by diphtheria and consumption, and starvation adds its horrors.

IN Maryland a circular—said to emanate from an authoritative Catholic source—which advocates taking all denominational schools under state control, is being widely distributed.

TERENCE V. POWDERLY has resigned the office of general master workman of the Knights of Labor, and J. R. Sovereign, labor commissioner of Iowa, has been elected in his place.

THE Giolitti ministry of Italy has been forced to resign. The trouble is largely due to the bank scandals, in which members of the ministry as well as many deputies are involved.

EX-SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE JEREMIAH M. RUSK died at his home near Viroqua, Wis., November 21st. He had been three times governor of Wisconsin and three times member of Congress.

THE Waldenses, so bitterly persecuted during the Middle Ages, have established a colony near Asheville, North Carolina. An addition of 166 members recently arrived from the Piedmont region in Italy.

EMPEROR WILLIAM of Germany has ordered that when he goes to church all seats which he can see or from which he can be seen shall be filled with soldiers so that he may not be distracted in his prayers.

IN Kansas the Populists are divided into two parties, the friends of Governor Lewelling, and his opponents under the lead of Jerry Simpson. Congressman Simpson wants to form a new party standing on the one plank of free silver coinage.

AN extensive strike has nearly paralyzed business on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. It involves all classes of trainmen. The question at issue is not one of wages but of the recognition of the Federation of Unions, which the company declines to give.

THERE have been stormy scenes in the general assembly of the Knights of Labor, in Philadelphia. The hottest fight was between Master Workman Powderly and Secretary-Treasurer Hayes. The latter was reelected, although Powderly had previously secured the election of some of his candidates for other offices.

ZEKE IS UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF THE SPIRIT AGAIN.

And he put forth the form of an hand, and took me by a lock of mine head; and the spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north; where was the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy.—Ezek. viii, 3.

The
LAST TENET Imposed upon
the
KHAN of TOMATHOZ
Judor Genone

Illustrated by
Louis M. Glackens

Price, 50 cents.

ADDRESS
The Truth Seeker.

A NEW WORK
BY
ARTHUR B. MOSS,
Author of "The Bible and Evolution,"
ENTITLED
Christianity and Evolution.
With preface by
J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.
Price, $1. Order at once.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Clergyman's Victims.
A LIBERAL STORY.
By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.
RELIGION NOT HISTORY.
Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.
By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price 25 cents.

Deutsche Freigeist-Bücher.

Wier haben folgende Bücher in
Deutscher Sprache welche sehr berühmt sind.

„Die Irrthümer Moses,“
Eine kritische Beleuchtung des Pentateuch für
Widerspruch zur modernen Weltan-
schauung und Gesittung.
von Col. R. G. Ingerfoll, Preis 50 Cents.

Das Weib und ihre Stellung zur
Religion und Kirche am Ende
des 19. Jahrhunderts.
von Helene S. Gardener, Preis 50 Cents.

„Moderne Götterdämmerung,“
von Col. R. G. Ingerfoll, Preis 25 Cents.

„Wunder und Wunderthäter,“
von John Peck, Preis 20 Cents.

„Glaube und Vernunft,“
oder LE BON SENS.
des römisch-katholischen Priesters Jean Meslier.
Nach dem französischen Original überfetzt von Gräfin Anna Knapp.
301 Seiten, Leinwand, $1.00, Papier, 50 Cts.
Diese Bücher sind in Papier Umschlag und flaren Druck. Unsere Deutschen Leser
sollten es weit verbreiten.

Adresse, "The Truth Seeker,"
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, New York.

SURVEYORS, ATTENTION!

A rare chance is offered for a surveyor to get a

TRANSIT CHEAP.

We have one for sale, in good order, with Tripod, which cost $160. We will sell it for half-price—$80. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New articles just out.
A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us.
CHIDESTER & SON, 26 Bond St., N. Y.

MARLIN SAFETY

Made in all styles and sizes. Lightest, strongest, easiest working, safest, simplest, most accurate, most compact, and most modern. For sale by all dealers in arms.
Catalogues mailed free by

The Marlin Fire Arms Co.,
NEW HAVEN, CONN., U. S. A.

REPEATING RIFLES

How To Preserve Health.

By LOUIS BARKAN, M.D.

Fordyce Barker, M.D., Professor
Bellevue Medical College says of it,
writing to the author: "I regard your book as the most sound, sensible, and useful book on the topics which it discusses that I have met with. I wish it could be in the hands of every intelligent head of a family. I am particularly pleased with one feature of it,
that it does not profess to teach dos-
ing and drugging. I congratulate you on the wisdom and success of this effort."

Other noted physicians recommend it just as highly.

Price, cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-
rock of human liberty.

Price. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 49. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, December 9, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

Saint Peter—"Here comes another converted murderer! Give him a crown and a harp!"

Disgusted Devil—"Well, Jesus may love such bloody scoundrels, but I am glad my realm is not polluted with them!"

ANOTHER SAINT ENROUTE TO GLORY.

Books by Helen H. Gardener.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1.

Paper, 50 cents.

Pushed by Unseen Hands. SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth $1.

Paper, 50 cents.

A Thoughtless Yes.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Link of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

A NEW DISCOVERY IN ELECTRICITY.

Within the Reach of All.

THE SECRET OF TRANSFUSION FOUND AT LAST!

The simplest of all devices conducts ozone, oxygen, and medicine from a saturated sponge, through the tissues, into the blood, to the seat of disease. How is this done? By Electro-endosmosis. What is that? Read our pamphlet: that will tell you. You will find explanation and evidence there that electro-endosmosis produces molecular changes that restore the organs and rejuvenate the system. Tumors, cancer, rheumatism, consumption, etc.—diseases that might never have been cured by any other method, succumb at once to this treatment. It is the only treatment that cuts short the duration of typhoid fever, destroys the germs of diphtheria, supplies oxygen to the lungs in asthma, produces sleep in insomnia, cures nervous prostration, disease of the kidneys, constipation, neuralgia, headache; reduces the pulse and temperature in one hour in acute fever, etc. Each battery is warranted to produce the requisite Thermo-Galvanic current for two years, or refilled without expense. It is not a cure-all, but it has cured these. A case of medicine that anyone can understand and use, is included in the outfit. INVAID: A trial will convince you! Physicians craves: This is a matter of interest and importance to you! AGENTS: You can sell one in every household! PARENTS: It is your duty to have it always at hand! Consultation free. Describe your symptoms. Send for our pamphlet.

S. R. BECKWITH, 114 Fifth Ave., New York city.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Most Magnificent Work Ever Published by the Freethought Press.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The object of this work is to present the Course of Freethought throughout the Civilized World for the last Four Centuries, from the time of Columbus and Bruno to the time of Ingersoll.

It will be a radical Historic Record of the Greatest Developments of the Human Race.

It will reveal Freethought as an Intellectual, Moral, Literary, Social, Industrial, and Political Movement.

It will show what Freethought is in itself and how manifold are its influences, and with what hope and promise we can hail its future triumph.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" will Embrace the most Illustrious Pages of Human History,

adorned with the brightest Genius, radiant with the most splendid Poetry, rich with the greatest Inventions and Discoveries and ennobled with Freedom's most shining advance.

Nothing Can be More Interesting,

more inspiring to the Pioneer Workers of to-day—to those who are still in the van for Human Rights and Progress. The struggle is not ended and what is already won must be carefully guarded. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty; and from the Past we must ever learn Great Lessons for the Future.

NO LIBERAL CAN AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT THIS BOOK.

It will contain the Greatest Thoughts and the Greatest Deeds of the Greatest Men

In One Harmonious and Magnificent Whole,

a vivid picture of man's sublimest evolution, with the added glory of

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION

from the chains and slavery of a barbaric creed and church.

THE FIRST PART of the book will deal with Freethought as a Universal Power, as a Spirit, a Method, a prevailing but unorganized Influence in every Department of Human Growth.

THE SECOND PART will deal with Freethought as an Organized Movement, especially in America and Europe; and this history is of equal importance with the first, and should be justly understood and the Pioneers of our work recognized.

The first part will embrace the following Grand Departments:

Philosophy.	Science.	Education and Ethics.	Literature.	Government and Politics.	Woman's Emancipation.
Bruno.	Copernicus.	Bacon.	Boccaccio.	Voltaire.	Madame Roland.
Spinoza.	Galileo.	Cervantes.	Rabelais.	Rousseau.	Mary Wollstonecraft.
Descartes.	Kepler.	Pestalozzi.	Marlowe.	French Salon.	Harriet Martineau.
Locke.	Da Vinci.	Frebel.	Shakspeare.	French Revo- lution.	Frances Wright.
Hume.	Newton.	Combe.	Gibbon.	Thomas Paine.	Lucretia Mott.
Hobbs.	Humboldt.	Spencer.	Burns.	Jefferson.	Ernestine L. Rose.
Kant.	Lyell.	Owen.	Shelley.	Mazzinni.	Lydia Maria Child.
Hamilton.	Darwin.	Holyoake.	Byron.	Bentham.	Margaret Fuller.
Comte.	Tyndall.	Haeckel.	Pushkin.	Mill.	Elizabeth Cady Stanton.
Büchner.	Huxley.	Girard Lick.	Tcherny- chewsky.	Garibaldi.	Susan B. Anthony.
Feuerbach.				Heinzen.	Matilda Joselyn Gage.
					Helen H. Gardener.
					Annie Besant.

THE PORTRAITS OF THESE ILLUSTRIOUS REFORMERS

in every domain of Human Thought and Progress will adorn the pages of this volume.

The Second Part of this volume will be devoted especially to organized Freethought and the Liberal Press in modern times. The Truth Seeker, Investigator, Ironclad Age, Secular Thought, Freethinkers' Magazine, Independent Pulpit, Lucifer, the Freethinker, Agnostic Journal, etc.

It will give a history of the

GREAT INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS

at Chicago, the Freethought Federation of America, the American Secular Union, the various state and local organizations, the Canadian Secular Union, the British Secular Union, and other Liberal associations throughout the world.

It will contain the portraits of those who, up to the present time, have been identified with Freethought work—editors, lecturers, officers of societies, and those who, as representative men, have won distinction in other fields of effort. There will be the portraits of

Horace Seaver,	George E. Macdonald,	Capt. R. C. Adams,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.,	Susan H. Wixon,
J. P. Mendum,	E. M. Macdonald,	John R. Charlesworth,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.,	Mrs. Charles Watts,
D. M. Bennett,	L. K. Washburn,	Samuel P. Putnam,	Prof. J. H. Cook,	Mrs. Robert C. Adams,
Parker Pillsbury,	Ernest Mendum,	John E. Remsburg,	E. H. Heywood,	Mrs. M. A. Freeman,
Elizur Wright,	Charles Watts,	Franklin Steiner,	Otto Wettstein,	Katie Kehm Smith,
T. C. Leland,	G. W. Foote,	J. D. Shaw,	Stephen Pearl Andrews,	Lucy N. Colman,
T. B. Wakeman,	Saladin,	E. A. Stevens,	James Parton,	Lillian Leland,
Judge C. B. Waite.	J. R. Monroe,	H. L. Green,	Abner Kneeland,	Amy Post.

and other men and women who have contributed to the advancement of Freethought and whose names should be remembered throughout the Liberal ranks. There will also be about

ONE HUNDRED BIOGRAPHIES,

and in these will be given a picture of Freethought progress which will be most interesting and valuable, for it is in individuals that we find the best interpretations of the age.

The Price of This Superb Book is $5.00,

and not for the same amount of money can there be found such an array of facts, such a survey of history, and such a galaxy of Freethought.

Mr. Putnam is now devoting his whole time to this work and it will be published at the earliest possible moment.

The name of every Subscriber who sends five dollars before the work is on the press will be enrolled in this book. DON'T FAIL TO SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE.

This book will contain

Over Six Hundred Pages of Printed Matter and Over One Hundred Portraits.

It will be elegantly bound. It will be a book for the home and the fireside. It will be a book to give to your friends when they ask, What is Freethought—what has it done and what is it doing in the world?

This is the most universal presentation of Freethought ever given to the public, and no Freethinker can afford to be without it. It is a library in itself.

Address orders to

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

HOW TO GET FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT FREE

SPECIAL OFFER.

We have made arrangements with Mr. Putnam whereby we are enabled to make our friends a most generous offer.

We need more subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and every Freethinker needs "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." Not all are able to pay $5 for it, but everyone can do a little work to obtain a copy—congenial work, that will do great good all around. This is the offer:

Send us Four New Yearly Subscribers at regular rates ($12 in all), and we will send the Getter-up of the Club a copy of 'FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT,' FREE OF CHARGES.

And further, to aid our friends in getting this book for themselves, we will offer

To the New Subscribers as a Premium,

post free, a copy in boards of

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated

By WATSON HESTON,

THE GREATEST BOOK OF ITS KIND EVER CONCEIVED.

Or, if preferred, a copy cloth-bound of
W. S. BELL'S

Handbook of Freethought.

With these Splendid Works as premiums there ought to be no difficulty in getting hundreds of clubs of subscribers.

Remember, to the Getter-up of The Club, FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT, free.

To each New Subscriber in the club, a premium of a Dollar Book—either "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought," in Cloth—all free by post or express.

This really brings the price of the paper down to $2 to each new subscriber, as they get THE TRUTH SEEKER one year and a dollar book for $3.

A Club of Four New Subscribers and $12 ($3 only from each) does this.

We want to extend our circulation, and we want to help our friends to help us.

It ought not to be difficult to get four New Subscribers in any town in the country, especially with these Splendid Premiums to assist.

Those who get up these Clubs will receive their copies of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" as soon as the book is issued.

Those who send a Club and Four New Subscribers and $12 before the book is printed, will have their names enrolled in its shining pages.

THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place,
NEW YORK.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 49. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, December 9, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - DECEMBER 9, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

SOME HANDSOME PREMIUMS.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $6.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and S. P. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" ($5). By taking advantage of this or our Free offer of the book (see opposite page) there is no reason why every Freethinker in the country should not possess this splendid work.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" ($3). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and James B. Alexander's Dynamic Theory ($2.75). This is a splendid offer, for every one wants this book. It has over a thousand large pages and more than four hundred illustrations. It is a digest of Science, and every one who studies it cannot help but be well-informed in all scientific matters.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in board covers ($1).

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have, at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

"Applied Christianity."

The National Reform Association was organized thirty years ago. Its object is to apply the dogmas of Christianity. It proposes to do this by the adoption of an amendment to the national Constitution and the enactment of national and state statutes and municipal ordinances. It accepts Jesus as the "King of the World," and intends that all governments which it can control shall recognize and obey this king.

We do not think it necessary to argumentatively combat the claims of the Theocrats in this, the first paper of a series designed to show what are the principles and resources of the National Reform Association and its affiliated and recruiting societies. Of necessity, all Freethinkers must be antagonistic to theocratic designs and able to see the fallacies and inconsistencies of the arguments urged in their favor. The danger which threatens at present is this: But very few realize the gravity of the situation; it is difficult for most men and women to believe that there is any real danger of the overthrow of religious liberty in the United States; so many and engrossing are the tasks which the struggle for existence imposes upon us that only the comparatively few whose daily work brings them into contact with the currents of thought and streams of propagandism know, even approximately, the strength of the Christian party in this country. They—the great majority of Liberal-minded people—reason subjectively in this matter. Because they do not wish to unite church and state, they appear to think that no considerable number of their fellow-citizens do, forgetful of the facts that church property is exempt from taxation, despite their desire to have it taxed; that the Bible is used as a text-book in the schools, although the Nine Demands have been in print for years; that the Sabbath party can truthfully claim ten victories to offset each defeat, in face of the combined opposition of the Freethinkers and Adventists, and that in scores of other contests the theocrats have the nine points of possession to play against the solitary one of just demand.

It is time that we gravely consider the issue. As compared with the English Secularists and our church-state enemies, we lack many elements which are necessary in a deadly struggle of this kind. We are too diffuse, too boastful, too optimistic, too careless of detail. Very few of us keep ourselves thoroughly informed in regard to the doings and intentions of the would-be subverters of our institutions. It is impossible to be too clear, too concise, too coherent, too watchful, too purposeful. Above all else, we must discriminate between the essential and the merely incidental, the trifling, the transitory. We must know where we are to fight first, and how to help one wing of the enemy's army get in the way of the other. And more: Not until we realize, as our opponents do, that the local battles are to decide the issue of the war, that the aggregate of victories won or defeats sustained in the school districts, townships, counties, towns, and cities will give national victory or inflict national defeat—not, we insist, until this primary truth is fully understood and acted upon will we be in a position to do much effective work. Leadership and organization are helpful only in the degree and to the extent that they enable us to concentrate a sufficient force at the points attacked or threatened. If a national society cannot do this there is no adequate reason for its existence. The National Reform Association and its auxiliaries are finely organized, wisely directed to accomplish the objects aimed at, and can be successfully resisted only by organizations no whit inferior to them in the machinery of propagandism and the ability to fight. Truth and justice will win—if their battalions are strong enough.

The National Reform Association declares its purposes unblushingly in the second article of its constitution, as follows:

"To maintain existing Christian features in the American government; to promote needed reforms in the action of the government touching the Sabbath, the institution of the family, the oath, the public morality as affected by the liquor traffic, and other kindred evils; and to secure such an amendment to the Constitution of the United States as will declare the nation's allegiance to Jesus Christ, and its acceptance of the moral laws of the Christian religion, and so indicate that this is a Christian nation, and place all the Christian laws, institutions, and usages of our government on an undeniably legal basis in the fundamental law of the land."

A member of the Association, D. S. Littell, says: "These objects are one—viz., the making of the nation wholly Christian." The same commentator proceeds to amplify and explain the fundamental principles of the Association, as outlined above. Of the claim that God is the fountain of all power in civil law, Mr. Littell says:

"That Almighty God is the source of all power and authority in civil government. Government is a divine ordinance. Its powers and prerogatives proclaim it such. It wields divine powers. It exercises divine prerogatives. Civil government is an absolute sovereign in the sphere of man's civil relations."

After enumerating some of the acts of government which indicate its possession of sovereign power, our essayist says:

"Now whence these prerogatives? They certainly are not from men themselves. They are not in the possession of men to give or surrender at will. They are sacred trusts for which men are responsible to God alone. They cannot be alienated without his authority. Yet civil government possesses and exercises the right. It must have the right to be adequate to the ends for which it exists. And hence, in the very nature of the case, civil government must be regarded as God's ordinance. God's rights and prerogatives are in it. It is a grand usurpation, to be resisted and overthrown, if it is not this. Civil government is the embodiment and instrument of the authority of the great Moral Governor over men in their civil relations. And such the scriptures declare it to be. They assert that 'There is no power but of God. The powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever, therefore, resisteth the power resisteth the ordinance of God. And they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation.' They declare that the ruler is a minister of God. The sword is put into his hand. 'For he is a minister of God, an avenger for wrath to him that doeth evil.' They enjoin obedience to the civil authority, not simply because it has power to punish for disobedience, but as a duty to God, 'for conscience' sake.' They require subjection to the civil government for the Lord's sake. And while they call it an ordinance of man, because its form and administration are in the hands of men, yet the power and authority with which it is vested is everywhere claimed to be of God."

It will be observed that it is expressly denied that the prerogatives of government inhere in the people themselves. On the contrary, it is maintained that government—which, rightly organized and administered, is merely a society formed for purposes of defense against aggression—is a colossal usurpation if it be not from God, and his instrument. The founders of this republic held differently; they said that all just government had its source in the people; they distinctly repudiated the old notion of divine rule, and in place of the theocracy, or the empire ruled by a king God-appointed, they established the democracy of man. Kings then said they were in the wrong, and the National Reformers now repeat the charge.

Jesus is God's representative on earth, although he is popularly supposed to be in heaven. Into his hand has been put the scepter of civil authority. The people of this land must accept him as King for these reasons, as stated by Mr. Littell, speaking for the theocratic party:

"The scriptures declare that all divine authority over men is in the hands of Jesus Christ. He himself declared just before his ascension, 'All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.' In the epistle to the Ephesians he is said to have been made 'head over all things to the church.' In the 2d, the 3d, the 72d, and the 110th Psalms, in the vision given to Daniel by the inspired Apostles Peter and Paul, and in the Apocalyptic vision of John, Jesus is distinctly and repeatedly declared to be the ruler of states and nations, and in the latter book is again and again called King of kings and Lord of lords. Civil government, according to these scriptures, is a divine ordinance in the hand of Jesus Christ. And it is in his hands for the accomplishment of his purposes in men in their civil relations."

Italics are ours.

That is, Christian lawmakers, assuming to know exactly what are the "purposes" of Jesus, will order the "civil relations" of men in accordance with their own notions of what those relations should be, and relieve themselves from all responsibility by declaring their crimes against man to be the expression of the "purposes" of the "King." Charming prospect!

Once more interpreter Littell:

"It follows from this that the civil government ought to embody the will of God concerning men in their civil relations. If it is his ordinance of government, it certainly ought to express to men and enforce upon men his law or rule of government. It ought, therefore, to embody the Decalogue. This is the divine summary of human relations, rights, and obligations. It is the supreme standard of morals. It is the supreme law to govern men in their civil relations. The laws of the government must therefore embody the moral law of God. What it requires the government ought to require. What it forbids the state ought to forbid. If the government requires more than God's law requires, it becomes a tyranny. Men have a right to ask, By what authority? If it requires less, it is defective. The entire claims of government are not secured."

If the Decalogue is to be embodied in its entirety in the civil law there is no limit to the persecution that must result. "Sabbath desecration" and "blaspheming" will be capital crimes. Freedom of thought on religious questions will be mercilessly suppressed. No escape from such a catastrophe is possible in a state which legislates in regard to belief in or acceptance of a God. "Thou shalt have no other gods before me" is ample warrant for any crime when it is a part of the civil law. Every page of church-state history is crimson evidence of the truth of this.

Another quotation from this writer follows:

"Dr. McAllister, in his 'Manual of Christian Civil Government,' has shown by extensive quotations from national documents at the beginning and all along the history of this nation, that our national history has exhibited in most definite form the following principles of political and national life:

- "1. That Almighty God is Supreme Ruler of nations.
- "2. That nations are bound to acknowledge his authority.
- "3. That Jesus Christ is the appointed way of acceptance for nations as well as individuals before God, whether in confession of sin or services rendered.
- "4. That God's Word, the Holy Scriptures, is given for national encouragement and guidance."

Whether it be true that this nation has from the beginning accepted the foregoing principles we do not stop here to inquire; the assertion will secure attention at another time. But whatever be the truth as regards the past it is not to be questioned that all these dogmas receive at present at least partial recognition by the state, and that the tendency is toward fuller and fuller recognition, while their complete acceptance is inevitable in the not distant future if the friends of religious freedom do not bestir themselves much more actively than they have hitherto.

One more excerpt from Mr. Littell's essay and we leave him for the present:

"Must nations answer for, and pay the penalty of disobedience to their moral obligations? They have had to do so in the past. The record of the cases is just the world's history. It is divine declaration too. 'The nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish.' God will have Sabbath yet on the shore of the lake at Chicago. A rest from loving obedience, or a rest from desolation is his alternative. 'Each drop of blood drawn by the lash has been answered by one drawn by the sword.'"

"Do as I want you to do, because you love me, or I will cut off your heads," seems to be God's alternative to his children, if Mr. Littell, National Reformer, is to be accepted as his mouthpiece. There can be no doubt that if the Sabbatarians could have their way they would willingly do God's work for him by desolating Chicago, or any other city which should have the temerity to disobey their commands in regard to Sunday observance. Men's gods are the reflections of themselves, and they are sure that they are his instruments for the discipline of his enemies, so, when they think that he would commit a crime to vindicate his majesty, you may be sure that if they have the power they will commit the crime in his name, debit him with it in the ledger in which they keep their accounts with the Court, and felicitate themselves because they have got rid of their enemies at God's expense, as they think.

Anyone can quote, "Each drop of blood drawn by the lash has been answered by one drawn by the sword," but it is not easy to see how Sabbatarians can find comfort in that statement of fact. They have recently lashed with the whip of medieval law several Adventists who had injured no man, woman, or child by their Sunday work. When retribution comes it will be Sabbatarian blood which will be drawn by the sword of justice. If the friends of Sunday liberty do the work that they should do it is not without the bounds of possibility that the bigots who have persecuted the Adventists will have to put their hands deep into their pockets to pay damages to their victims or their victims' families. That would be a valuable object lesson to the promoters of "Applied Christianity."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

This Minister Wants to Swear.

Colonel Ingersoll's lecture on Shakspeare, in the Boston Theater, November 12th, drove to frenzy Rev. J. B. Brady, of the People's church, of that city. On the evening of November 19th he preached a sermon which had Ingersoll for its text. Below will be found a few choice excerpts therefrom. They are fairly representative of the whole discourse. Of Ingersoll's power and leadership he says:

"His splendid presence, his audacious daring, his exuberant imagination, his florid rhetoric, his abundant eloquence and his reckless treason to the high court of this universe have made him the idol of the infidelity of this commonwealth. The men who traitorously design to dethrone the deity listen to his glittering scurrilities with rapture. They rend the air with applause, as with polished spear he stabs all things and beings sacred and sublime. His most blasphemous thrusts have been most welcome, and thousands of deluded deserters have rallied around him as the standard bearer of the flag of hell."

Note the political tone of this fervid criticism. It is clear that Mr. Brady would very quickly bring a charge of "high treason" against every Ingersoll if the God-in-the-Constitution people were firmly seated in the saddle. "Blasphemy" statutes have their inspiration in the idea that the "blasphemer" is an enemy of the state because he calls in question the authority of the "court of the universe," from which the earthly potentate is supposed to derive his administrative powers. Not as "heretics," but as "traitors," would the church-state try, and imprison, exile, or execute Free-thinkers.

"Although he [Ingersoll] is the son of a clergyman, whom he eternally dishonors, yet he was born with a brilliant but defective brain. He has no more power to perceive spiritual things than a hog has to perceive mathematics or a mule to perceive the laws of astronomy."

It seems to surprise Mr. Brady that Colonel Ingersoll should be the son of a clergyman and "yet" have a brilliant brain. But he proceeds to abuse him just as vituperatively as though he were the offspring of an Infidel.

"Ingersoll is a brilliant but a heartless fool. Esthetic in taste, ornate in rhetoric, eloquent in speech, but yet a fool. Now, as a watchman on Zion's tower, I am constrained to cry out to all Boston, Beware of this madman! A mad dog, a wild bull, is not one-millionth part as dangerous."

Oh, dear! But what a scene for Heston's pen! Just imagine the reverend gentleman stationed on "Zion's tower" (Zion's Herald is published in Boston—so he would be Zion's herald No. 2), frantically calling out to "all Boston"—including Boston proper, South Boston, East Boston, Somerville, Charlestown, Chelsea, Revere, Brookline, Cambridge, Cambridgeport, Winthrop, Roxbury, and the other suburbs—"Beware of Ingersoll! He is dangerous! He'll BITE!"

"In other generations he would have been swung from the first limb of the nearest tree, but Christianity has now so permeated society that according to its charities he is permitted to run at large."

The triple essence of gall in that almost estops comment. Its impudence is absolutely sublime. What must this man's congregation think of such an insult to their intelligence? Does he suppose that cultured Boston does not know that in "other generations," when Christianity was supreme, Ingersoll could not have lived a day? That it does not know that Christians would have racked and burned him? That it does not know that he lives to-day because Christianity is not supreme? That it does not know that if such men as Brady could have their way Ingersoll's life would not be worth a copper? And see how he reveals the real nature of the Christian when he says that it is only according to the "charities" of Christianity that the Infidel is "permitted to run at large"! The Freethinker has no rights; he lives and enjoys his liberty only by the gracious permission of the Christian! Thanks for nothing.

"The restraints of the very system he defames prevent the indignant and outraged populace from taking his life. God have mercy upon him. In the next life his fate must be a fearful and terrific one."

It may be of interest to Mr. Brady to know that intelligent people know that he knows that the only portion of the "populace" which would have the least desire to take the life of Colonel Ingersoll because of his opinions is the portion which has implicit faith in the dogmas of Christianity.

"God have mercy upon him. In the next life his fate must be a fearful and terrific one." The sweet "charities" of Christianity permit the Freethinker to complete his allotted days on earth, but let him look out for God when he gets into the next life! His fate will be so horrible that even Brady, his Boston traducer, in anticipation of it, calls upon God, the immutable, to have mercy upon him! This cry for mercy would convince us that the Christian is better after all than his God, if we did not know that his talk about charity and toleration is the most hypocritical pretense.

For Once Talmage Had An Impediment In His Speech.

It may reasonably be doubted if Talmage is entirely at ease since he made that offer of $100 to any Infidel who has read the Bible through twice. Moses Hull made him several fair propositions, which, to refuse to accept, will be to confess that he was merely bluffing when he offered the $100.

A New York Recorder reporter called on Talmage for further information concerning his "dare." Here is a part of the conversation that ensued:

"Is it true," asked the reporter, "that you offer $100 to any Infidel who can prove that he has read the Bible through twice in course?"

"Yes," answered the doctor, "and you may have noticed I added that it must be proved by witnesses." Dr. Talmage rubbed his hands and smiled blandly.

"Well, doctor, that witness clause is just what the Recorder would like to know about. Are you yourself in a position to prove by any single credible witness that you have read the Bible through once?"

"Dr. Talmage started; his features took an expression of consternation, and he coughed slightly.

"Ahem!" he said. "That is a matter—m—that—it—ah—lies with me—ahem!—entirely to decide. Yes, as I was saying—ahem!—that is a matter that I don't care to go into—um—ah."

"The reporter suggested that the reverend doctor might be expected by the Infidels to at least show that he had fulfilled the terms of his own offer.

"Ye-s," said Dr. Talmage. "But that is my own lookout. Is there anything else you would like to ask me about?"

"Have you nothing more to say on this subject?" was asked.

"No," said the clergyman."

No, he had nothing more to say. The question was assuming an aspect not at all pleasant to contemplate. It had dawned upon him that he had once more thrust himself with his usual heedless impetuosity into a position where the feathered inhabitants of heaven would not have dared to venture.

Shall We Ever Hav Fair Play in Education ?

The school question is to the front in this state. The various anti-Catholic Protestant organizations are up in arms against the proposition to give the Catholics a part of the public school funds for their schools. As between the Catholics and the Protestants, the former have the best of the argument. The Protestants have insisted, and still insist, that their Bible shall be read in the schools, and that in various other ways the children shall be indoctrinated with Protestantism. Practically, they get the benefit of all the public school fund, and grow purple in the face with rage when their fellow-taxpayers, the Catholics, ask for their share of the spoils. The New York Times well says, editorially: "If anything could justify the hostility to the public schools of the [Catholic] zealots, whose zealotry it is the mission of the papal delegate to suppress, it would be the attempt of the Protestant zealots to convert the public school system into a Protestant propaganda. It is a matter of regret that, whereas the Pope, through his delegate, has exercised the power to suppress the Roman Catholic bigots, there is no ecclesiastical power for the suppression of the Protestant bigots. That must be left to an enlightened public opinion."

But where is the "enlightened public opinion"? Will the Times help make it, by saying in distinct terms, so that even the most stupid can understand what is meant, that the use of the Bible, the utterance of prayers, and the singing of religious hymns in the public schools is unconstitutional and in flat denial of the equal religious rights of all taxpayers and patrons? No man of brains who has an atom of honesty in his make-up can oppose the Catholic demand as being unjust, while he favors the retention of the Protestant Bible in the public schools. This applies to Rev. J. O. Wilson, of Brooklyn, the American Protective Association, and all others whose war against Rome is in defense of the Protestant grab instead of in behalf of fair play and religious liberty.

Agents Wanted.

We believe that not only can good be done but money made by any Liberal who will canvass for our book "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." In fact we know one man who worked at it but a few hours weekly and sold nearly fifty copies in a month. The price is low; everybody knows the Old Testament stories, and nearly everybody would like a book applying nineteenth-century wit and knowledge to them. People like to laugh. Reverence for the Old Testament tales has largely disappeared and jokes at the expense of Jonah and Joseph and Esau and Samson and David, and the other worthies of unsavory reputation, are keenly appreciated. It seems to us that the book will sell at sight. It does here in the store. Liberals out of employment will find this a good way to make an honest dollar.

Terms to agents sent upon application.

Colonel Ingersoll speaks in the Broadway Theater next Sunday, the 10th inst, on "The Gods." No more than the announcement will be necessary to bring out an immense audience.

The House of Representatives of New Zealand is a noteworthy one, from the fact that one-eighth of its members are outspoken and avowed Freethinkers. Our House of Representatives is noteworthy from the fact that seven-eighths of its members are outspoken and avowed hypocrites.

OWEN THOMAS DAVIES, of Brighton, Sacramento county, Cal., died on Wednesday, Nov. 29th. Mr. Davies had for many years been a staunch and enthusiastic supporter of Freethought, and next week THE TRUTH SEEKER will print a tribute from the pen of Mr. S. P. Putnam, together with a report of the funeral, which was very numerously attended.

If John Most is a man of his word, he certainly did not keep it last Sunday with the Brooklyn Philosophical Association, where a large audience had gathered to hear what he had to say about "The Consequences of Modern Society." However, the time was pleasantly passed with remarks on the subject from various speakers who make it a rule to have their "say" every Sunday.

Next week we shall have the first installment of Mr. Charles Watts's "Freethought and Secular Notes from England." It will be noted that Mr. Watts differentiates "Freethought" and "Secularism." In the first of his monthly series of Notes he tells us why he does this, and we bespeak for his explanation the thoughtful attention of our readers. We have no doubt the Notes themselves will be eagerly read by all our thousands of subscribers.

We do not wish to precipitate another panic or "object-lesson" upon the country, but it is perfectly true that there are a number of our subscribers whose time has expired who have not paid us. And it is perfectly true also that there are some people down-town to whom we owe money whom we have not paid. But it will be perfectly easy to even this thing up if those subscribers will stop at the post-office and buy a money order for $3 and mail it here. If they meet a neighbor on their way who doesn't take the paper but wants it, make the money order $5 and it goes for a year to both. But please remember that the down-town fellows here are hard up.

In his Thanksgiving sermon, Rev. J. O. Wilson, Methodist, of Brooklyn, said:

"Let Rome keep her hands off the American schools. The Protestant Bible must be read to our public school children. Rome must not be allowed to banish it from our schools."

Is not that nery? Why, a man who has no more conscience than that should not be trusted alone with a grindstone, unless it is broken. Can he tell us why the Protestant Bible should be read to the public school children in preference to the Catholic Bible, or the Talmud, or the Age of Reason? The very terms of his own declaration would bring home to him the conviction, if he had even the most rudimentary sense of justice, that no religious instruction has rightfully any place in the public schools.

"Prendergast, I say, had as much right morally in murdering Carter Harrison as had Carter Harrison in protecting the gambling hells and saloons of Chicago."

The foregoing is an extract from a recent sermon of a Presbyterian minister of Chicago. It is to be presumed that the reverend gentleman believes in majority rule. The people of Chicago knew just what Carter Harrison was and what he would do should he be elected mayor. So knowing, they elected him by a rousing majority, by that action declaring that they wanted the gambling houses and saloons left alone. To say that Harrison's conduct, under those circumstances, and Prendergast's crime have the same moral value is to utter nonsense, to put it very mildly. And it makes the Presbyterian divine an apologist for the worst kind of law-breaking.

We have received from C. P. Farrell a new edition of that splendid prose poem, "Life," by "the prince of orators," Col. R. G. Ingersoll. It is larger and better than the old edition, and can be framed or placed upon the table as an ornament. In the center of the card appear the portraits of the Colonel and the baby, surrounded by the prose poem, which has been truthfully described as "one of the masterpieces of the orator and poet, who now, as far as we know, stands alone in the living world." It will make a delightful Christmas present, and will be a souvenir not only of intellectual greatness, but of artistic workmanship. It is printed on heavy board, gilt beveled edge. The size is 12x16 inches, and the price only 75 cents, post-paid. We would advise our friends to get this at once. The words alone are worth the money.

The New York Times points out how the character of Thanksgiving Day has changed in the last few years. The old Puritans would think they were in sheol instead of "Christian America," could they be brought to consciousness on one of these degenerate days of supposed "prayer and praise," especially if they should awaken near a game of football between two college teams. The Times says that "suggestions of a new designation would be timely, but football day will not do and turkey day is frivolous." How would "hypocrites' day" do? Suppose a committee be appointed to select an appropriate name? Let the committee be composed of the president, the governors of several states, and a number of clergymen; they are the cads who know all about politico-religious "functions."

"Stricken dumb while blaspheming" is the heading the World gives the following dispatch:

"SHAMOKIN, PA., November 23d.—Eight months ago James Starks, an iron worker, became angered and swore in a most frightful way. He was stricken dumb at the time and did not speak again until yesterday, when he attended a protracted meeting and made a profession of religion, after which his speech came back to him. The next day, however, he was speechless again, and he is now losing his sight. When he first lost his speech, he saw a vision and imagined it reproached him for his wickedness. When it vanished he was unable to speak or hear."

How did he make the profession of religion before "his speech came back to him?" By pantomime? If God restored his speech because of the profession, did he take it from him again the next day and his sight with it, and why? It would seem that God is playing fast and loose with the poor sinner! It is apparent to all sensible people that the man is high-strung, nervous, and superstitious, and that the action and interaction of violent passions produced the physical phenomenon which the learned reporters and editors attributed to an act of "God." It argues little for the general intelligence of the people that the publishers of metropolitan papers think it pays to give countenance to such gross delusions.

Lectures and Meetings.

Colonel Ingersoll's Lecture appointments are:
Dec. 10, New York City. Dec. 12, Holyoake, Mass.
" 17, Williamsburg, N.Y. " 13, Lowell, Mass.

DURING the month of December, Franklin Steiner will lecture in Correctionville, Pierson, Atlantic, Walnut, Carlisle, and other places in Iowa.

THE Science Sermons Society meets every Sunday evening at 7.45 o'clock in the lecture room of the Church of the Messiah, Park avenue, corner of 34th street.

THE Pittsburg Secular Society meets in Curry University Hall, Sixth street, near Penn avenue, every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

THE First Secular Church of Portland, Ore., meets in Central Labor Council Hall, 170½ Second street near Yamhill, every Sunday at 7.30 P. M. Sunday-school in same place at 10.30 A. M.

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Association holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of lectures for December: December 10th.—Prof. A. L. Rawson, "Theosophy." Others to be announced later on.

John R. Charlesworth is now in the East. The following appointments are on his list, and friends along the route desiring lectures should address him at once:
Dec. 14, 15, 16, Waterloo, Ind. Dec. 17, Chicago, Ill.

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, will meet on and after October 17th in the Skerrett Building, northeast corner of Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock. Lectures for this month:

December 12th.—M. Ball, "Methods of Punishing Crime."
December 19th.—Prof. E. D. Cope, "The Material Relations of Sex."
December 26th.—Voltairine de Cleyre, "Economic Independence for Women—Reply to Professor Cope."

THE Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York:

December 8th.—Hon. Chas. S. Smart, A.M., "What Interest Has the State in Education?"
December 15th.—Edgar C. Beall, M.D., "Phrenology Scientifically Treated—With Readings."
December 22d.—Walter S. Logan, "Arguments for An Eight Hour Law."
December 29th.—Ye Club Maketh Merrie. Program to be announced later.

THE Ohio Liberal Society meets in College Hall, 168½ Walnut street, Cincinnati, Sunday evenings at 7.45, prompt. Admission is free. Program:

December 10th.—Prof. Chas. Augustine, "The True Historic Christ." A reply to Prof. J. S. Van Cleave.
December 17th.—G. Gordon Sattler, "The Miraculous."
December 24th.—C. O. Wilmot, "Do Christians Believe in Prayer?"
December 31st.—Judge R. W. McNeal, subject to be announced.

Communications.

The Giant Delusion.

PAPER READ AT THE INTERNATIONAL FREETHOUGHT CONGRESS AT CHICAGO, OCT. 5, 1893, BY OTTO WETTSTEIN.

We are assembled here because we have found the truth and are desirous of imparting the same to others. We are here because we want the truth—the entire truth—lead it into the pearly gates of paradise, or straight into the caverns of an orthodox hell. What does the brave man care for sentiment, for childish cravings or longings? Once determined to get out of the ruts of mental bondage, to subject his belief to the analytical tests of science and reason, and to repudiate a blind faith in myths and miracles, and he will traverse the world and soar through the skies in search of facts, in search of truth, and forget his own little individual self in proud determination to attain that one grand and superlative object, TRUTH! Truth agreeable, or truth disagreeable, what matters it to him? Would he hesitate to learn the result in a lottery in which he may have drawn the great prize or—lost it? Others go elsewhere, into grander halls, ostensibly for the same purpose, but it is not at all certain that their motives are as pure as ours. Why? Because others may go to their places of meeting or to their churches for selfish purposes—for money, profit, power, votes, social advantages, etc.—but no such sinister motives can possibly be attributed to us. I insist there is absolutely no motive thinkable why anyone should voluntarily assume an attitude of hostility towards the prevailing religions unless, indeed, prompted by highest principles of duty and honor. If we were in the least inclined to be dishonest we would not be here, but there, because here we have much to lose socially, politically, and financially; there, much to gain. Here hard continuous struggle, ostracism, and persecution; there gliding smoothly with the stream of popular conventionality. Not that all who worship are dishonest. No! But because all those in the least inclined to be dishonest go there to worship.

Thus, indirectly, the church offers continually the most tempting inducements—both in the shape of present bliss and future happiness—to induce the masses to affiliate with their institutions, with which we, being as yet sadly in the minority, cannot compete; and consequently it requires no ordinary degree of courage and honesty publicly to renounce the church and its powerful influences. But all of which tacitly implies that those who do so are honest men and honest women, and that their deliberations, therefore, are entitled to profound respect.

There was only one basis of unity in the great Parliament of Religions, which has just ceased its grotesque deliberations in this city, and that was—paradoxical as it may seem—not religious. Upon all questions theological and religious, the several representatives of the world's most powerful religions were radically divided—and always will be because of conjecture and fiction. Upon the necessity of ethical and moral culture all were agreed, because practical and universally beneficial. But not an intelligent effort was made to define or locate a God; and soul and spirit were unanimously taken for granted without proof. Now we propose to indorse enthusiastically every word said in favor of the brotherhood of man and every sentiment breathing love, virtue, justice, and charity. If there is any good in the millions of churches outside of myth and miracle we want to preserve and perpetuate it. All this we cherish, all this we indorse; and we will cheerfully unite with them in all practical efforts to elevate and fraternize the entire human race. But myth and miracle we want to overthrow. We know the basis of theology and of all religions (in a supernatural sense) is a stupendous error, taught and perpetuated by ignorance or deceit, and therefore shall not hesitate to proclaim the entire truth, though contrary to popular clamor and the belief of a vast majority of the human race.

It is about time, in this grand age of science and progress as graphically and magnificently represented by the World's Columbian Exposition, and even by the great city in which we are assembled itself, that the doctrine of man's immortality be divested of its sacred and mysterious aspect, subjected to rigid scientific analysis, and then, if found untrue, consigned to a place in the category of other exploded doctrines and illusions, where it properly belongs.

To us who have earnestly and thoroughly investigated this ancient belief, still cherished by all nations, it has ceased to be a problem, because it can now be absolutely demonstrated that such phenomena as eternal or immortal forms have no existence and are impossible in the economy of nature.

And neither will the true and honest man or woman cry "halt!" for fear some cherished institution may be destroyed, or ardent hope blasted, but all will insist to learn the whole truth, lead it where it may. But fortunately, in this case, a universal realization of the entire truth and all the facts in the case, and a philosophical submission to nature's requirements, will be a far greater factor to establish in the near future a more exalted degree of purity, morals, and a higher order of civilization than any other truth ever revealed to mankind.

One of the principal reasons why the belief in man's post-mortem existence has not yet been finally disposed of and is still cherished by millions of the human race, is because many unscrupulous individuals are financially and otherwise interested in perpetuating such belief and in leaving the problem unsolved. Add to this the important fact that man is prone to accept a faith which so entirely gratifies his vanity, encourages his hopes and desires, and fully conforms to his notions of ideal bliss during all eternity, and the mystery why a problem so simple and so self-evident is still unsolved in the minds of many otherwise intellectual men and women is explained.

But suppose to-day it could be demonstrated to the entire world, savage and saint (as I think it could be with proper facilities), that eternal individual life after death were not worth living, were not desirable, in fact a fate seriously to be dreaded, how many persons not now completely under ecclesiastical subjection would continue to entertain such belief? Suppose to-day it were to the financial interest of every priest, preacher and medium to oppose such belief, how many of them would remain in their pulpits or in their cabinets to preach about an unknown God, spirits, and an unknown life after death? Suppose our politicians could "catch" more votes out of the church than in it, how many would continue to enroll their names on the church docket? Suppose our merchants, doctors, and lawyers could sell more wares or obtain more patients and clients by professing Atheism than Theism, what belief would they subscribe to? Suppose the masses were convinced that all the social and financial advantages now conferred upon them by the church would follow them outside, and that it were otherwise to their advantage to abandon church life, how many would continue to support them? Only those still crouching in abject servitude and obedience at the feet of an arrogant priesthood? All of which goes to show that it is from motives of selfishness and hopes of gain that the masses still uphold religion, not from honest convictions that their faith is based upon facts and truth.

Now, it will be cheerfully conceded that if any living being should be immortal and forever happy, it should be man—the highest animal—"the crowning work of nature." But alas! in spite of most acute researches I can discover no facts in nature, no logic, reason or analogy, which justify the conclusion that such is the case, or that because man thinks it should be therefore it will be.

Nature in general is very inconsiderate of man's welfare, wishes, and whims, and positively ignores his strongest yearnings and desires. Are we not all ushered into existence with a death warrant for us in the hands of Fate, and destined to go through life like convicts sentenced to an early death? Do we not all long (in vain) for continued happiness and unalloyed bliss, but, instead, are afflicted with disease, pain, and grief? Are we not all stunted in growth, restricted in power, unmercifully tossed here and there by unfavorable conditions and environments, and sadly limited in capacity to fully enjoy physical and mental pleasures? Is it not true that we are but an insignificant monad, born by chance and destined soon to vanish from existence like all other living forms?

What preëminence has man over other brutes? True, we are the highest brute, but in a world where all gradations of brutes exist, some brute necessarily must be the highest brute. But so is a hyena higher than a worm, but is this any reason why the worm should die and the hyena be possessed of a "dual body," which survives the destruction of its physical cadaver? But human beings are separated in the scale of physical and mental development as far as the lowest and highest brute. Is the chimpanzee immortal, the gorilla, the Bushman and the cannibal? If not, what physical distinction over the lower races are we endowed with which enables us to survive the dissolution of our physical bodies? And if we must concede immortality to these, what preëminence have these over the brute? Are we not all conceived, bred, and born like brutes? By what rule of logic, then, can we reasonably deny that we must also die like brutes?

"Terrible fate!" do I hear you say? Would you prefer the more terrible fate of the Christians, ninety per cent. of whom—if Christianity is true—are unavoidably and absolutely doomed to an eternal existence in a burning hell, without even the consoling thought that eventually death may release them from their agony? And, pray, why is non-existence of the dead any worse than non-existence of the unborn?

I am an optimist and drink deep from the fountains of pleasure, scattered along the pathway of life. I let good sense prevail, borrow no trouble, and humbly bow to my fate decreed by Mother Nature. I believe with Ingersoll: "The time to be happy is now." Hence I study to obtain the highest degree of enjoyment out of the brief period of life allotted to man. This, I insist, consists principally in the gratification of the desires, appetites, and passions dependent upon and concomitant with our physical body, foremost of which is the sentiment of love for the opposite sex; marriage; building and beautifying our home; children and the intense pleasures incident to their daily growth, changes, and development, etc. But all these delights cannot possibly survive the physical body, and, consequently, a monotonous existence, extended through the countless ages of endless time without physical corporeity or capacity, with no wife to embrace, no children to caress, no three meals a day, occasional banquets, wine and cigars. This would be, to say the least, very far from my ideal "heaven" and all it implies. And rather than to live such prosaical eternal life as an airy spirit, with the vivid recollection of the many good things enjoyed on earth, but henceforth denied us forever, I, for one, cheerfully submit to the inevitable, satisfied that when life ends all will be as serene during the eternity after my existence as it was during the eternity before I was born. Shall I fear nothing? Dread to go to sleep? Hesitate to meet eternal peace or shudder at the thought that life's struggle—its dire calamities and fearful possibilities, menacing our existence continually—will soon be over, as far as I am personally concerned? Shall I not rather rejoice, that when I die I shall have escaped all impending danger?

But whether eternal life is desirable or not has, as stated above, nothing to do with the possibility of man's eternal existence. We must discuss this question philosophically, regardless of our likes and dislikes, inherited notions and cunningly assumed authoritative pretensions. We must apply science, reason, logic, and sense.

That the sole reason of the survival of the faith in immortality is egotism, is best illustrated by the almost general repudiation of late of the doctrine of a literal "hell" as taught by the Bible and all consistent Christians for eighteen hundred years. This "monstrous doctrine" (as Beecher called it in righteous indignation) has the same basis and identical origin as its associate doctrine of "heaven," yet to-day it is complacently consigned to realms of fiction by all thinking minds, simply because it is not considered a comfortable climate in which to spend eternity. Yet it is the corner-stone and foundation of the Christian religion.

Without "hell" there can be no Christianity. Christ came to save sinners from "hell." Discard hell and Christianity falls. It is like "Hamlet" with Hamlet left out. There is either a "hell" for heathens, sinners, and Atheists like myself, or Christianity is a farce and a lie. Believe this doctrine and all the terror it implies and you may subscribe yourself an honest, consistent Christian. Repudiate it, and if you remain in the church, you are either a hypocrite, ignorant, or dishonest. If no "hell," Christ's death was deliberate and cruel murder, and the whole scheme of man's fall and redemption, and the entire Bible, must be repudiated.

"Adam's fall," according to Christianity, consigned humanity to death and "hell." So God decreed. But after four thousand years God repented of peopling the world with billions of human beings irredeemably lost without fault of theirs and damned to eternal torment. So "he sent his only begotten son" and caused him to be crucified, and decreed that "whosoever believeth shall be saved, but whosoever believeth not shall be damned." This is Christianity, pure and simple, and all those who discard "hell" discard Christianity, and, consequently, are not Christians.

But how many intellectual men and women believe in this "hellish" doctrine at the present time? Comparatively few, but a vast majority of those who have discarded this most emphatic declaration of Christianity now rally under the banner of the "New Theology" as taught by Channing, Parker, Savage, Swing, Thomas, and many others; still cling to the hope of immortality, but without even a shadow of authentic proof of such doctrine, without a revelation, and purely from the selfish motives stated above. They are practical Atheists—without a Bible, without a God. They have substituted human fallibility for "divine infallibility," the gospels according to Tom, Dick, and Harry for the gospels according to Mathew, Luke, and John—each his own prophet, each his own authority.

The Bible discarded as a basis of our faith, can we by science and reason demonstrate that man survives death? I emphatically insist we cannot, and though the burden of proof devolves upon those affirming—which proof, however, has never been forthcoming—I think I can now produce uncontrovertible argument that the doctrine of immortality must be consigned to realms of fiction.

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

Sparks From the Lecture Field.

An early breakfast at Northport, an early ride to New York, thence to Boston, and from Boston again, on to East Dennis, made all in all a ride of at least fourteen hours.

It was late when I reached my destination, but a good supper was awaiting me, and Joshua Crowell and wife did all in their power to make things comfortable for me. This is my first visit to Cape Cod. At this time the cranberry season is at its height, and here, almost in sight of the very spot where all kinds of torture were inflicted in the name of religion; here, where hangings occurred, where the most horrible butcheries took place but a few years ago, the light of intellectual freedom has penetrated to such an extent that many people could be seen picking the fruit on the "blessed Sabbath," and preparing it for the market.

Work should be man's only worship, and these people now residing on Cape Cod, where the feet of the Pilgrim Fathers first trod on American soil, have so far attained to the heights of intellectual and religious liberty that they hold to the right of occupation on any day. Let Tennessee take a lesson from Massachusetts.

I gave two lectures in East Dennis, and each time I was favored with a good audience, considering the sparsely settled condition of the district. The lectures were opened and closed with music and singing. Again the "Cosmian Hymn Book" was brought into use, while Miss Alice Crowell and Miss Hall took turns in presiding at the organ. The society here is one of the oldest Freethought organizations in America. For more than twenty years it has stood the storm and stress and flourished in the bloom and flower of prosperity. They have a good membership and a list that any church in the vicinity might envy. Mr. Joshua Crowell is its president, and Mrs. Lydia Hall its secretary. They put our cause before the people at every favorable opportunity, and I can safely predict a long career of usefulness. I was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Crowell, who entertained me right nobly while there, and in the spare moments they initiated me into the mysteries of cultivating the cranberry. My first visit here ended favorably all round, and everyone seemed satisfied with our present efforts to disseminate the glad gospel of truth. From East Dennis I went to Osterville, where I gave two lectures under the auspices of the Cape Cod Liberal Association. This, too, is an old and extensive organization. Its ramifications extend through various towns and villages along the cape. It boasts a good membership and has some splendid and active workers in the ranks. Daniel Crosby, of Osterville, is one of its vice-presidents. The Crosby family are well known as Infidels throughout the whole district, and they are never afraid of expressing their views. My lectures here were successful to a degree. The topics upon which I held forth caused a wide-spread discussion, and the little stores in the town were filled with eager disputants. I had a quantity of literature with me for free distribution, and Mr. Crowley saw to it that each person in the audience was well supplied. Even the preacher's wife came in for an abundance thereof. My stay in this locality was made at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Crosby, a home made sweet and pleasant by the perfume of flowers, for it is surrounded by chrysanthemums and "myrtle." Mr. Crosby placed his boat at our disposal, and Captain Handy took me for a sail round the bay. Even in rough weather I would have entertained no fear. My companion had been a sea captain for years, and knew every inch of the boat from stem to stern. For years he had plowed the seas, but now he has given his life to plowing the land and destroying superstition. Captain Handy attended both my lectures at Osterville and upon the occasion of my second lecture he came over with his daughter from Cotuit, a distance of seven miles. There may be found a large number of Freethinkers in this country. The hospitality enjoyed and the intellectual freedom displayed cheers the heart of the traveler on his way.

My lectures in Osterville coming to a close, Captain Handy drove me over to Cotuit where I was down for one more. We had not been long in Cotuit when a carriage drove up, and Mrs. Crosby, with her daughter, alighted therefrom. They had decided to follow us and attend another of my lectures; the last one for the time being on the Cape. Another splendid audience greeted me. Captain Handy preceded me with a short and well adapted address upon the objects and principles of our cause. I thoroughly enjoyed this visit and I have made many new friends and acquaintances whose kindness and generosity have gone straight to my heart. A pleasant little home in the country surrounded with nearly everything to be wished is indeed conducive to one's happiness and comfort. Music and singing were among the chief of our entertainments. In the homes of our friends here the glorious light of Freethought shines with brilliant luster. Nothing but the ordinary cares and disappointments of life can cloud the present or even dim the future. The splendid hospitalities showered upon me by Mr. and Mrs. Crosby were repeated by Mr. and Mrs. Handy in Cotuit. The contentment of mind, the happiness of sympathy, all combined to produce a paradise that makes one almost loath to leave. But still I must up and away. Yet these lectures and the occasion will form another of those pleasant episodes in life for whose return we shall often long.

Harwich was my next camping-ground. I had expected to lecture there, but owing to the non-delivery of my message no arrangements had been made; consequently no lecture was given. B. F. Robbins came to the depot to meet me, showed me around the town, and entertained me for the day. On the following morning I was up again to take an early train for Boston, where I lectured once more in the grand old "Paine Memorial" before the Ingersoll Secular Society. This time I was favored with the largest audience that I have ever had in Boston. The old hall was crowded and many went away unable to find seats. Reuben Rush, the "Rattler" of Congress fame, presided at the meeting and sent things off with one of his famous "Rushes," equal to any of Princeton's, Yale's, or Harvard's. Reuben is a whole team by himself, and he did much by his opening remarks to start the enthusiasm of the audience.

The crowded audience, together with the presence of L. K. Washburn, Ernest Mendum, Marston, Foster, Babcock, and other well-known ones of the mighty host, tended to put me on my mettle and urge me to my best efforts. The platform was occupied by Messrs. Rush and Rockwood, the latter having for years carried the work of humanity onward and the former ready to take his place and continue it. The lecture was followed by a good, though short, discussion, in which a Mormon elder participated. He is a man with a big heart. He said "he had no sympathy with ancient or modern creedism," but expressed a firm belief in that unknown quantity called God, and a future life somewhere, though where he did not know. It will be seen that he holds on to just enough creedism to float the boat in which he rides.

While in Boston I was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Rush. The Rushes are all Freethinkers, and the audience at Investigator Hall on each Sunday afternoon would be incomplete without Reuben's father, who occupies his accustomed seat in the front row and never fails to manifest his appreciation of good sentiments by an occasional "Hear, hear!" accompanied by applause. I was well entertained by host and hostess. Reuben and his brother Thomas could never tire of showing me around the "Hub."

Sunday evening Reuben secured seats for us at the Boston Theater, and we went to hear a discourse on "Abraham Lincoln" by the Demosthenes of modern times, that great and accomplished orator whose glowing eloquence is capable of swaying the multitude, first to tears, and then to laughter—Robert G. Ingersoll. What a treat, what an intellectual feast was there spread out before me! The vast crowd thronged in every part of the theater. A line of people three deep stood around every balcony and even on the ground floor. No seats could be bought Sunday night, and the people paid for the privilege of standing. The moment Ingersoll stepped upon the platform the audience broke out with a storm of applause. The magnetism of his presence and his glowing oratory, with his occasional humor, moved his hearers both to pain and pleasure. The mind was forever swaying to and fro, surging as a sea, now carried upwards with his lofty word pictures, and again depressed by the graphic illustrations of the horrors and cruelty of the slave traffic. At the conclusion the vast crowd broke out in a mighty cheer, and "America's greatest orator" was compelled to return and bow his acknowledgments.

I spend Monday in Boston, and on Tuesday morning I return to New York city, where I must attend to my duties in connection with the Federation, and prepare once more for my return to the West.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

Sec. Freethought Federation of America.
165 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respects to E. O. Roscoe.

When I offered my criticism on the articles of friends Brayton and Reed I thought it might raise a little breeze, but did not think it would cause an earthquake.

If all the letters which I have received in regard to my comments on those articles could be spread out in THE TRUTH SEEKER it would be interestingly funny to observe that no two of them agree. Each is very positive that he is right, and they agree only in one thing, and that is that John Peck has gone daft.

Of course I cannot answer all of those letters, nor need I; they answer themselves. For a cursory examination reveals the fact that they not only refute, but utterly annihilate each other.

But I must pay my respects to Mr. Roscoe. Colonel Ingersoll says he has been called everything but a fool. Since the strictures of Mr. Roscoe, I can go him one better. No doubt he (Mr. Roscoe) has been fed on angel's food, and drank only the pure dews of heaven. It is evident that he has not been contaminated with the companionship of ordinary men but has "dwelt apart." Probably he is in spiritual communication with Koot Hoomi and other Mahatmas of India and Ceylon.

He is a nineteenth century wonder. When Daniel Webster entered the arena with Colonel Hayne he placed his name on the scroll of honor as the greatest living debater. Mr. Roscoe has thrown down the gauntlet, but "O! ye Gods," I dare not pick it up, for has it not been on the "hand of Cæsar?"

How he came to notice such a lilliputian specimen of humanity as myself, and how he came to stoop to the consideration of so trivial a matter as the financial question is past my understanding.

He asks me if I would take confederate scrip for cows. This shows that he has studied the money question deeply. Right here I would like to ask him a question. But it is not likely that a glowworm would attract any attention under the broad glare of his calcium light.

Is there not the power in every independent government to make money? If not, where does the money come from? And has not every government the right to choose its own material?

But I must not overload THE TRUTH SEEKER. I think Mr. Roscoe would do better to use the energy of his powerful intellect in solving the great problems of nature. Tell us, Mr. Roscoe, why the waters pour over the falls of Niagara. Why don't the wind smooth down the waves of the ocean? Why don't the rainbow rest on the arch with the legs pointing upward? Don't you think it necessary for the man in the moon, away up in the cold, to take a "smile" occasionally? Don't you think that old chestnuts are unpalatable?

Naples, N. Y.

JOHN PECK.

A Sample of Christian "Love."

At Angerburg, Prussia, while making excavations beneath the church, workmen came across a small walled-in space, in which they found a human skeleton, a broken chair, and the remains of a helmet and a pair of boots. The walls bore marks as if of finger-nail scratches, and there was only too much evidence that some person had been walled in alive. This punishment was a common one among the religious orders in the good old times. All the convents had an in pace, as it was called. The church would not shed blood, but for any offender, who betrayed the secrets of the order, there was eternal peace in some cave or cell where, after a service for the dead, the offender was immured. Bibliophile Jacob, in his preface to Le Convent de Baiano, a story of scandalous doings at Naples in 1577, says: "In several convents Christian charity and monastic humanity consisted in prolonging the life of these unfortunates by giving them a three-pound loaf, a pitcher of water, and a lighted candle." At the demolition of convents in France in 1789 a number of these in pace prisons were discovered with skeletons. In several the water and bread were untouched, either because the victim was killed for want of air, or refused to touch food intended to prolong misery.—London Freethinker.

The earth has never been an instant slow in its rotations on its axis, or its revolutions around the sun; there has never been a mistake or collision in the plan and operation of the material universe, yet the Bible is full of recitals of mistakes and failures on the part of the almighty. If it be true that the Bible is the word of God, it must be literally true and free from all error.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

It is a pleasure to peruse the letters I receive from all over the country. The interest manifested in "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" is delightfully encouraging. I suppose my readers would like to know how the book is accepted throughout our scattered ranks, and I think it will be well to publish these indications of good-will.

Everyone knows J. H. Burnham and the splendid work he has done. He writes:

I want your book, and intend to have it. I am sure it will be the book of this generation in the interest of Freethought.

James Turner writes from Nashville, Tennessee:

I hope you will find abundant encouragement in spreading the true light. Accept my warmest regards, and my hopes for a pleasant future for you and success for the cause you love so dearly. No doubt as light spreads among the common people superstition and despotism will vanish.

E. Livezey, of Baltimore, who has done noble work in our cause for many years, gives cheering word:

I shall be pleased to do all I can for your great undertaking. I am satisfied this will be a grand book. I inclose $5, for I think you ought to have the money now to aid you.

Dr. De Lespinasse is always ready, and the following is his good word:

Inclosed find $10 for your book. I see that under the head of "Government and Politics" you do not mention Proudhon and Carl Marx.

Of course the radical work of these men will not be omitted in a history of this kind, which is intended to give all sides. Whatever my own opinions, I shall endeavor to express a clear view of the opinions and the labors of those who have in any way aided human progress.

Says L. D. Crine:

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" has a missionary work to perform. The author will certainly have the satisfaction of holding the torch of reason up to the world.

Dr. M. O'B. Ward, of Montreal, adds:

I am sure the book, "Four Hundred years of Freethought," will be most interesting, and I hope it will prove a great financial success.

That is a good wish, for as the world now is finances play a most important part in the success of any enterprise. It isn't an inspiration of course in writing the book, but it is a very beneficial result, even to the author. But generally in the case of Freethought literature the golden rule applies, "Blessed is he who expects nothing, for he will not be disappointed."

The land of the South sends a good message from Captain Garner, of Florida:

I will do all I can to get all the Liberals of my acquaintance to take "Four Hundred Years of Freethought."

And Wm. Mansfield, of Texas:

I am satisfied your book will prove itself worth more than the small sum asked for it. If ready in time I would like to order several copies for Christmas presents, for it would make a most suitable and valuable gift.

Louis Levine says:

Do your work well. Your friends will expect no less of you. You will not be satisfied with anything short of it yourself.

And the following from J. F. Hauenstein:

I am confident this will be the grandest book ever published, and I hope that the time will come when it will be for sale in every bookstore. When I get my book I shall make good use of it in passing it around among my neighbors, as I am doing with THE TRUTH SEEKER. I was at the Congress and had a glorious time.

I want you to make a grand success of this work; and I have all confidence that you will. I want to have a record of the part taken by Liberals in advancing the human race that I can refer men to with pride and confidence. I want a work at hand to show what Freethought is, and its martyrs, reformers, and pioneers. I think I shall want more than one copy, for I feel like spreading the truth and giving Freethinkers the praise they have so dearly won.

H. D. BALLARD.

I know your book will be grand, and I wish you every success in your undertaking. I shall join the Freethought Federation soon. I advocated, through our paper here, the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday, which led to quite an argument with one of the leading "divines." A short time ago I took a decided stand against the class of literature that is being adopted in the public schools. I was on this issue elected member of the school board, which of course aroused to a degree the Christian element; but the majority of the parents agree with me, I think.

LUELLA K. WEBSTER (AND O. F. WEBSTER).

This is doing good work for the Liberal cause in a most important direction. Our friends in Michigan have kept their Freethought and radical opinions before the people and against wrong in the church and out of it. This must be done all along the line.

Money was never so scarce in my memory, but it must come somehow for the purpose of helping you in this enterprise and furnishing the world with such a concise and well-connected history of progressive Freethought as yours will be. I want to leave no stone unturned that may lead some to see the falsity of the superstition that they revere.

WILLIAM J. WHITE.

The last from Washington, while from Oregon comes this word:

I hope you will have your book ready before winter is over, as I have promised myself some very interesting reading out of it during the long winter evenings. I hope we shall meet again before we have to apply to St. Peter for "admission." The weekly appearance of THE TRUTH SEEKER keeps me up in Freethought.

CHARLES G. CASPARY.

I must send you $5, knowing your ability as a writer and speaker on the great Liberal questions of the day, which are now shaking the old superstitions from center to circumference, and it is only a matter of time when they must pass away. I have passed my eighty-first birthday, yet I feel I must see this work and be able to read it, and call it mine, and let it pass down into the hands of my children and grand-children, as it will be a work to be read when the present generation has returned to the earth.

SAMUEL D. MOORE.

This next comes from glowing youth, as the last from hopeful age, and both look forward:

I was glad when my father told me that he had subscribed for a copy of your proposed work, "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." I eagerly await its appearance. If I can do anything here among our little band of Freethinkers, I will do so with pleasure. I have always taken a great deal of interest in your work for our cause, and I want to thank you a thousand times for what you have done. Your lecture on the "Glory of Infidelity" is one of the grandest things I ever read. I have read it several times. May you receive hearty encouragement in your future work is the wish of

GEORGE J. REMSBURG.

Francis S. Brettell and Ruth Brettell give the music of cheerful old age:

I am getting to be what is considered old, eighty on November 12th, and my wife is nearly the same age. Never having been poisoned much with tobacco, alcohol, or medicine, my constitution is not yet used up. We take many Liberal and Freethought papers—Investigator, Truth Seeker, etc.—and we found your description of the various exhibits and sights at the World's Fair in the "Pen Pictures" very interesting, and also Mrs. M. A. Freeman's in the Investigator. Enter our names jointly for one copy of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." We think it will be all you represent, and a very valuable and interesting work for all Liberals and Freethinkers.

Our young and brilliant orator of Boston says:

I want this book, a monument to its author and the cause to which he has given his best efforts. I shall do all I can to help you.

REUBEN RUSH.

That grand old man, John Peck, sends greeting:

Stress of circumstances kept me from the Freethought Congress at Chicago, but I was with you in spirit. Your book no doubt will prove a great acquisition to our Freethought literature. I wish you abundant success. My life has been one continued warfare. In the anti-slavery movement, land-tax, temperance, and secular reforms I have spent my time and energies. But I shall die without regrets. When a man lays his all upon the altar of progress he can do no more.

This is good for California:

I have read many of your works, and I am determined to have "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" if I have to work nights and Sundays to pay for it.

CHAS. F. HARRIS.

Dr. Paoli, of Chicago, writes:

I take deep interest in your great work, and I know you are a man well fitted to give your book an enviable reputation. Please put me down as one of your subscribers. I was very much disappointed not to meet you at the Freethinkers' Congress.

I sincerely hope you will be successful in your great undertaking. I hope every Liberal will help according to his or her means. If they do, your reward will be only what you justly deserve.

WM. JENSEN.

I trust you may be completely successful. I only fear that your many absorbing duties will not allow you sufficient leisure for that thoroughness such a great work demands, and which people who know you have a right to expect.

R. J. MOFFAT.

I send you inclosed the price of your book, which I of course want. I was always religious, and I am living in the anticipated delight I expect to have in reading the biographies of the saints to be sketched in your book.

D. C. ROUNDY.

This is what Colorado says:

The firm has raised the $5 due for your book, and I assure you we all are as glad to send it to you as you will be to receive it. You are duly entitled to it. We wish you the most abundant success in its publication.

M. H. COFFIN.

I inclose you $5 for "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." It is cheap enough. I wish I could double it, but times are hard out here in Oregon. With best wishes for your success,

L. C. GILMORE.

These are some of the letters I receive. I hope I shall be able to satisfy all expectations. The theme of course is a great one; but the difficulty is to so evolve it that it shall be a true picture of human progress, with color, form, and perspective harmoniously blended. As some of my correspondents hint, I must take time to do justice to the work. In answer to many questions, I cannot say just when the book will be published. I fully expected to have it ready now, and I could have written it after a fashion, but not so as to satisfy myself or the critical world. I do not want any imperfection in this book if I can possibly help it. If it were merely a matter of dates, events, and statistics, I could easily complete it. But it is more than this: It is a description of character, an evolution of ideas; it is a work of combination—not merely of record. There must be a rearrangement of vast material. It is impossible to hurry a book like this, any more than one could hurry a poem or a painting. One can hurry on a city directory—names and dates are easily put together; but not philosophy, science, and history. Whatever happens I must take my time writing this book. Do what I will, other matters will press upon me. I have to do the work of two men right along. I have to be my own clerk and write about one hundred letters per week. That is the business part of it, which breaks in terribly upon hours of literary composition and disturbs the flow of thought. Then I have to lecture more or less to keep the "pot boiling," and write articles; so that spite of all I have scarcely one uninterrupted day when I can forget everything except this work and have all my faculties bent upon it. Not being endowed with riches, I cannot command the leisure I desire. In some respect this is a good thing, and in others not. Poverty is a hard school, but it gives good results. If I had plenty of cash and plenty of leisure I don't think I should write so good a book as I now will under the stress of circumstances. Poverty compels a concentration of energy, a quickness of judgment, a choice of ideas, a selection of the best, that is not necessary when one has all the time in the world. I think I shall write a better book, because I've got to get it done this winter, than if I had five years to do it in. In my case I find there's a great deal of inspiration in the "printer's devil" constantly calling for copy. It has a very stirring effect. Still, however, only about so much of real good writing can be done in a day, whatever the demand. One can't write like a hack. He must brood and dream, and give time for ideas to be fully born, and he must study compactness and clearness of expression, etc. There must be exhausting labor, and it can be kept up but a few hours each day. As somebody says, "Easy writing is blanked hard reading." I hope my subscribers will not be impatient about the appearance of this book. I am giving up everything else to its production, but there are conditions which cannot be overcome. If I have to live on a crust a day for the next six months I mean to finish this book to my satisfaction, and not omit any labor necessary to make it more valuable. This is the child of my brain, and I want it perfect so far as time and study can make it so. I won't, therefore, make any promises as to the day of publication; but until it is completed it will be the all-absorbing work and pleasure of my life. Of course I shall get it done this winter. I was hoping to have it ready for Christmas and New Year's, but must now give that up, since I cannot do the work as it ought to be done by that time.

It will cost nearly $2,000 for the first edition. The portraits will cost over $500. I have to depend entirely on the subscriptions to meet these expenses. I hope that those who are going to take the book will give me their names at once, as now is the time I most especially need their assistance. It is the expense of publication that weighs so heavily, and which I cannot possibly meet except by the cooperation of friends. I hope that those who have already so generously subscribed, will, if possible, secure subscriptions among their Liberal acquaintances. Every new subscription at the present time will be a mighty help to the financial success of this work. Don't wait to lend a hand, even if I have to wait a little while longer in order to produce a better book. It is so much easier to take bills out of the pocket than ideas out of the brain. But do your share, and I'll do mine. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Man and The Gods.

The main criticism of my lecture at Newark, on Sunday, December 3rd, was that I didn't go deep enough and far enough; that in confining myself to the total separation of church and state I did not touch upon the burning question of the rights of labor, which is a most important part of the rights of man. It is thus often said: "Settle the labor question and Freethought will take care of itself." And I have been urged to devote myself to that kind of political work—Labor reform, People's party, etc., as this was the best way to win for Freethought.

I endeavored to reply to this criticism but had not time to fully express my views. But these are some of the points. In the first place, as President Bird said, we are all in the same boat, all going the same way, all having the same large end in view—the enlightenment and amelioration of the millions who inhabit this world.

But the end is so large and so magnificent that it must be reached by many means and many diverse efforts. We cannot follow one straight line, nor can one man in himself include all means and methods any more than one soldier can be artilleryman, cavalryman, sharpshooter and infantry. Each man must choose his line of battle and stick to it, and not scatter himself over the whole field and so really do nothing. The process of civilization is differentiation and concentration; otherwise humanity cannot greatly advance. I do not criticise anyone for choosing a different line from my own. I say if that is his work it is all right. Why, then, should I be criticised for being simply a Freethinker and fighting it out on that line, when it is conceded that Freethought is absolutely necessary to human advance? I admit that the questions of rent, of interest, of money, of free trade, of land tax are of supreme importance; but no one man can settle all these questions; and the demands of Liberalism are also of supreme importance, and must be equally insisted upon. Now I have chosen the Demands of Liberalism and Freethought for my life work, and it is all that I or any one man can attend to. I have not time to attend to other questions in an adequate manner. I can give my sympathies to these reforms, but I cannot be thoroughly devoted to them as I am to Freethought. I, however, do not find any fault with those who put the emphasis of their work upon these other questions. I have no creed of method; I am not so wrapped up in my particular line of duty that I cannot see the advantage of other lines of duty which it is impossible for me personally to pursue. Of this, however, I am positive, that no great reform will be accomplished in this world without the triumph of Freethought. And, though I have to neglect many important things, I am engaged in a fundamental and far-reaching work. I am satisfied with the work I have chosen to do. It requires all my faculties and time and the point I make is that I ought not to be criticised for not being God Almighty and engaging in every reform under the sun. Let us recognize the vastness of reform, the manifold means by which it must be accomplished, and the necessity of each individual choosing a particular line and being thorough in that, rather than to dabble in all sorts of reforms and be good at none. No man can do all. Each man can do something. Let him find out what that something is and do it with might and main. In this age there must be specialized effort, not only in science but in reform. But don't let one specialist criticise another specialist for being a different specialist. Let all realize that digging away at diverse points they will some day reach the same goal.

After the "Gods" have ruled this world so long and so harshly it was a pleasure indeed to see them utterly demolished with glittering wit and reason, and forever set aside by Ingersoll in his famous lecture, "The Gods," which I heard at Brooklyn on Sunday evening. A magnificent audience was present, and everyone seemed to be in sympathy with the brilliant orator. How rapidly the gods who had so long tortured humanity disappeared in the light of that splendid eloquence. How helpless they were when logic and science attacked them. Special providence, miracle, prayer, vanished into nothingness. Only humanity remained free and glorious, and working out its own destiny. It was a fine turning of the tables, to see man in his pre-eminence, without a particle of superstition, or fear, remanding the gods to the darkness from whence they sprang—all the multitude of gods, and "Our God," with the rest of them; and of course if the gods go, the devils go too; for as there is no god without a devil, so there is no devil without a god. And so the vision of humanity becomes clear and bright, and wonderful indeed is the picture of men's progress after the gods are set aside. It made the heart swell to listen to those golden sentences which breathed a requiem over the cemetery of the past, not in anger, but in pity; and thence called us to the living future.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Observations.

C. H. PACKARD, Esq., Editor of the Eye, Snohomish, Wash.

Dear Clayt: To-day I received a letter from a resident of your city, wherein the writer, touching upon the current financial stringency, says that the cinch appears to have been taken up another hole since the date of my departure from Snohomish. I am sorry to hear that, for the situation then was too binding for the untrammelled exercise of trade. The residents of the East are not, I judge, quite so money-bound as those of the West, where the coin-owners have the people by the very umbilicus of their systems, but the financial question is uppermost here nevertheless.

The other night the New York Chamber of Commerce entertained Secretary Carlisle, of the United States treasury, with a dinner at Delmonico's restaurant. Delmonico's place here is a more expensive lunch-room than the one that Van Loon kept there by Hagarty's wharf in Snohomish, for the guests at the dinner mentioned paid $20 for a chance to eat with the secretary; but I should guess that chambers of commerce are pretty much alike all over the country. You remember what ours did out there a year or two ago—held several meetings and then listened to the secretary's report on local developments, prepared by Eldridge Morse, who was not a member. I do not know whether the New York Chamber ever hears a report on the conditions of trade or not. Its main function is to entertain distinguished visitors like Carlisle and Comptroller Eckels the kid, who was also present on this occasion, and who stridulated after the habitual manner of the gold insect. When each of the guests had consumed his $20 worth of grub, the president of the Chamber arose and proposed the following sentiment, to which Secretary Carlisle was slated to respond, to wit:

Commerce demands and the honor of the country requires that the obligations of the United States shall be paid in coin current in any market of the world, and that this question shall be settled for all time and beyond controversy.

The proposition was followed by prolonged cheers, of course; for when men have a week's wages under their belts in the form of champagne it is easier to arouse their enthusiasm than to keep them quiet. So all hands howled.

You will note the general terms in which this proposition is made; also that it is not a proposition intended for the relief of embarrassed citizens. These fellows profess to be deeply concerned about the "honor of the country." It is none of their business, they think, if the farmer is unable to pay the interest on his debt, owing to contraction that makes gold twice as hard to get, without increasing the purchasing power of subsidiary coin. "The honor of the country," said President Smith of the New York Chamber of Commerce, "requires that the obligations of the United States shall be paid in coin current in any market of the world." That means gold, though it might mean girls, for among the nobility of England a few years ago maidens were accepted as tribute without anything more than a cursory examination. The reference to the demands of commerce is not against the girl theory; the only objection to maidenhood as coin is its frequency. Like silver, it is abundant, convenient, and economical. "Alas!" says the humanitarian poet; "alas! that bread should be so dear and flesh and blood so cheap."

"Commerce demands and the honor of the country requires," chirps Mr. Smith, "that the obligations of the United States shall be paid in coin current in any market of the world." You, my friend Clayton, and I, your friend George, know that there is no coin current in all the markets of the world. A view unobstructed by rear brick walls and high fronts of encaustic tiles or other hardware, has enabled us to see that honor requires no more than this, That obligations shall be paid in money current in the community where such obligations are assumed. When I borrowed that dollar of Judge Van Bowen I did not feel bound to pay it back in coin that would buy twenty beers in South Africa.

By the way, I wonder if you could guess what the chamber of commerce or Secretary Carlisle understands by "the honor of the country." Do you think it consists in robbing the people of said country for the benefit of the bankers on this side of the Atlantic and of the English creditors on the other? I should judge that the honor of this country, or of the Atlantic ocean, or of the desert of Sahara, the Rocky mountains, or the upper atmosphere, is of less importance than that the citizen of Snohomish should be able to pay his grocery bill or take up his tabs at Fred Cleland's hostelry. The "honor of the country" and the "demands of commerce" are fine words for the auriferous insect to conjure with, but they won't buy land or a grub-stake. I often think that the patriots who take refuge in the honor of the country, while the citizen lives on sour-belly and salted potatoes, is as much of a humbug as the reverend gentlemen who tell us the will of heaven and exalt the glory of God.

I see that you still keep prodding away at the editor of the Tribune, as if he, instead of George Head and Billy Whitfield, had been responsible for the premature announcement of an increase in the family of Deacon Sorrenson and his bride, who have not been married the full length of time in such case made and provided. You would do better to take Head and Whitfield apart and talk seriously to them about the sinfulness of giving bogus news items to editors who are young and unmarried tenderfeet. I shall watch the Eye carefully. Some day, Brother Gorham's statement may come true, and if it is a girl, and the physician's certificate shows that he has called the turn, he will be able to begin his announcement, "as stated exclusively in the Tribune," and the joke will not be on him so much as present appearances would indicate.

Last week, while writing thinklets, the thought came to me that, whereas the drowning catch at straws, therefore the hard times must be responsible for a good deal of the present activity in religious circles. I wrote that statement with some degree of uncertainty, not being more than reasonably sure that it was true. Now comes Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, the dive sharp, who states, upon information and belief, that the coming winter will witness a more than usual interest in religion. This, he says, will be the natural result of the business stagnation. "There are some plants," says he, "that will not thrive in too rich a soil, and religion is one of them. In prosperous times people are apt to say, 'This world is good enough for us.' The shrinking of values and the loss of faith in securities will tend to turn the mind toward serious thought." This is in harmony with a statement I see in one of your papers that lumber is being laid on the ground for another church building in Snohomish. When the building is erected, making six houses of worship for a population of 3,000, or one for every 500 people, your local means of grace will amount almost to an over-production. There are but 200 churches registered in this city—one to every 8,000 citizens—and they are not crowded. Saloons occur with greater frequency, our city boasting of 10,000 of them. What a paradise this would be for Jim Pearl and myself if "morning's mornings" were complimentary, as in Snohomish, and we could walk fast enough to touch them all before breakfast.

The solemnities attendant upon Thanksgiving day went off first-rate last Thursday. This place was infested with a thousand college students, who came here to see the Yale-Princeton football game and to incarnadine the municipality. Such was the disorder of the day that people forgot to be thankful as they truly ought, and for the occasion praised heaven with faint damns. Football is a violent form of the sporting mania, and compared with it the practice of indulging in prize-fights is an intellectual diversion. Teach the youth of Washington to shun it as they would a bucking cayuse.

GEO. E. MACDONALD.

Freethought Progress.

Dr. Huber, of Berlin, has written a work entitled "Morality Without Dogmas." He sent his pious young emperor a copy, asking permission to dedicate the work to him. He received his book back with the gracious answer that a book with such a title could not be accepted. How naïve some folks are! ... Dr. Bruno Wille has assumed the editorship of Der Freidenker, published at Köln, Germany. ... Mrs. Hedwig Henrich-Wilhelmi, the well-known German-American Freethought lecturer, has started on another lecture tour in Germany. Her last one ended in imprisonment and exile for blasphemy. ... Der Freidenker, Milwaukee, accepts subscriptions for the family of Dr. Voelkel, who is himself serving in the prison at Erfurt a two years' sentence for blasphemy. We notice that Mr. George Wilson, of Lexington, Miss., an old TRUTH SEEKER subscriber, is among the contributors to the fund.

El Clamor Setabense, a Freethought journal edited by Manuel Soriano Lopez, is published at Valencia, Spain. ... Ramon Chiés, the editor of Los Dominicales and leader of the Spanish Freethought party, died October 15th. The hearse was followed by three hundred carriages and eight thousand persons. Those who attended were members of the Freethought societies and associations to which Chiés belonged. All of the chief papers were represented by their editors or by substitutes. Could there be found in the United States eight thousand members of Freethought societies to follow to the grave the remains of any Freethought leader? Spain is swiftly coming to the front. But Freethinkers there have a stupendous task before them. According to the just published Spanish census, Spain has 39,000 teachers and 72,000 priests. Of its 17,000,000 inhabitants only 3,318,000 men and 1,687,000 women can read and write. Certainly men like Ramon Chiés cannot be spared.

At Lincoln, Neb., the mayor vetoed the resolution of the city council granting permission to the state band to give Sunday concerts. The council passed the resolution over the mayor's veto, spite of the objections of the parsons. ... A fight over the Bible in the public schools is in progress at Lowellville, O. There the Catholics are doing the work which dishonest Protestant officials have made necessary and which should have been done by the local Freethinkers, if there are any. ... Pitman Grove, N. J., is a Methodist resort where Sunday trains have not been permitted to stop. Now a majority of the population have petitioned for them. ... In the Phonographic Monthly for September Edward F. Underhill has an appreciative and interesting sketch of the life of the late Theron C. Leland, Freethinker, philosopher, wit, and Humanitarian. A portrait of Mr. Leland accompanies the sketch. ... Arguments for church taxation were presented on November 4th to a committee of the Massachusetts assembly by J. M. L. Babcock, J. F. Foster, Dr. Wilson, and Mr. Moulton. Later the arguments were continued by F. M. Holland, Dr. J. Van Elderen, Walter C. Wright, Charles Alexander, Charles H. Holmes, J. F. Foster, and E. H. Dunbar, all favoring taxation. ... The Granite Monthly for December opens with a biographical sketch of that earnest New Hampshire Freethinker, W. C. Sturges, of Sunapee. It is from the pen of H. H. Metcalf and is accompanied by a portrait of the subject.

Letters of Friends.

Brevity is the Heart of Generosity.

BARNHILL, O., Nov. 21, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5, post-office money-order, for one year's subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER and "One Hundred and Forty-four Self-Contradictions of the Bible;" the remainder to be used for the benefit of THE TRUTH SEEKER. JOSEPH HIRST.

Freethinkers of the Pacific Coast, Attention!

PORTLAND, ORE., Nov. 25, 1893.

FRIENDS: What have you to donate to the Portland Secular Sunday-school Library and Museum? The children want books, minerals, shells, fossils, insects, etc. Send what you can and help make the Sunday-school one of the finest in the country. All donations will be acknowledged by the secretary.

NETTIE OLDS, Superintendent.

WILL JESSE, Sec., 10 Union Avenue.

A Man Who Puts Religious Liberty Above Party.

RIDGEWAY, N. Y., Nov. 24, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose clipping relative to a proposed bill to give state aid to private schools in New York state, to which I call your attention, although you may have seen it in the World.

I am a Republican, but I am ready to leave any party in order to throw my influence against any coalition or combination between church and state. Let us try to stop this matter above alluded to. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

GEO. L. PRATT.

Such as This Will Make Mr. Putnam's Blushes Indelible.

LIBERAL, MO., Nov. 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I must have that book, the book of all books, that book by the man with a soul like a mountain, a heart like an ox, and energy like a flea, the man who is always working for the emancipation of his fellowmen, one of the best men that ever lived—Samuel P. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." If the books are to be bound in leather, I want one of the leather bound. Will send check for $5 now, and if it costs any more let me know, and I will send the rest.

Yours truly, P. J. UMBRITE.

Brother Smith Doesn't Understand the Colonel Aright.

CADAMUS, KAN., Nov. 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I see I have got behind, as my time expired on the 1st of the month. Find inclosed $5 for another two years' trip. This may be the last time I shall be able to renew, as every year gets worse for the laboring man.

I did want to go to Kansas City on the 22d to hear Brother Robert Ingersoll, but I have got a little tame on his talk of happy homes, etc., when, as it seems to me, he indorses the very principles that destroy those homes. I think he means homes of the rich. No, I am not yet ready to vote for him for president. ASA SMITH.

From a Victim of Persecution in Germany.

ERFURT, PRUSSIA, Oct. 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am here in prison, since seven months ago. I am bodily well, and am sure to be released in some months with unbroken courage. Would you be kind enough to send me H. Gardener's "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" "Pray You, Sir, Whose Daughter?" "Story Hour," and "For Her Daily Bread"? I have got permission to read and write, and should be glad to translate those books, since we have nothing similar in German. But you must send me at the same time the authors' permission to translate. I read in your paper the note on my incarceration. Thanks.

With kind thanks, faithfully and fraternally yours, DR. VOELKEL.

The Parasites of Industry.

TWIN MOUND, KAN., Nov. 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: You will find inclosed a check for $3. I intended to remit some time ago, but there were others whose demands admitted of no delay. I think, as a class, the farmers are as prompt in meeting their obligations as any others; the trouble is, we are compelled by corrupt laws to part with the greater portion of the fruits of our labor to support a host of idlers, who absorb our industry and make laws to crush us. I have lived in Kansas for over eighteen years, and up to date I know of no law that has been passed by the state or nation which has benefited the wealth-makers of this state. On the contrary, the laws are made to benefit Shylocks every time, and we take great pride in having the glorious privilege of voting these leather-heads into office to steal our hard earnings, and to give it as a bribe on condition that the World's Fair be closed on Sunday to please a lot of fanatics, of whom nine-tenths are too mean for hell. How long will the people stand such humbuggery, anyway? ALEX. MCBRIDE.

Money Close, But Not Close Enough to Reach..

BOULDER, COL., Nov. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $10, to apply on account. Money is close, but not close enough to be reached here. With an abundance of all the natural products of the earth, men and women willing and anxious to work are suffering for the necessities of life, and even starving in this land of plenty. Why? All because of an artificial panic, gotten up by the bankers of Lombard and Wall streets. What for? To add another delegation to the great army of tramps and homeless vagabonds, and to swell the already bursting pockets of the bloated and rapacious bondholders; to gobble up all the land; to add another link to the chain that is intended to make the majority of the people of America slaves, in a worse slavery than negro slavery ever thought of being. The negro slave was at least fed, however poorly, and had medical attention when sick, lest his property value should be lost; but we must tread life's weary treadmill, and at the same time sing the jolly treadmill song. And if we go under, who cares? There is not even the property inducement to pull us out of the mud and mire, but another is crowded in to take our place and deliver the tale of brick with or without straw, as the case may be. And he must sing the same old jolly song, lest with an idle tongue he might be plotting for freedom.

Enough of this; I did not start to lecture you; I am going to stay with you as long as I can, and help you all I can, but I wished to impress it on you that things move very slowly here just now.

L. Z. COMAN.

Missouri's Sunday.

OREGON, MO., Nov. 23, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Your article on Sunday enforcement in our state, suggested by the fining of a barber for shaving on Sunday, suggests a reminiscence and a few thoughts to me. We have a legion of misdemeanor acts (not laws, for, with Barnes, I deny that it is in man's power to make a law—he can only ascertain what the true law is, and regulate accordingly), which acts punish one party to the transaction—the seller, not the buyer—the doer, not the employer, etc. They have grown out of the fanatical temperance legislation and vice society efforts. The injustice and absurdity of all such attempts at statute making are apparent enough. But the Sunday legislation is so unconstitutional, so hideously one-sided and inequitable, that all reasonable people will admit the charge. Last year, in Holt county, in Missouri, a railway delivered a car-load of bricks one Sunday, at Forest City, and ordered that it should be unloaded at once. The bricks were for Oregon, a town on the hills two miles above and east of the depot. The brick mason, who had the contract for building the house for which the load was intended, to save the double expense of unloading and loading up, just had the bricks placed on wagons and hauled up to the town where they were to be used. Some "unco guid" people coming out of church took offense at this display of Sunday labor, and had the parties arrested and fined for laboring on the holy day. The drivers and contractor were punished, not the railway company. Oh, no! The writer of this called for the enforcement of the law against the big corporation. Not a bit of it—not a foot would the pious souls stir. It could not be possible that the law, as they call it, exempts the railways. They come rushing, roaring, screaming through the towns, shaking the very church foundations and deafening the congregations—stop and deliver freight, order cars to be unladen, or do it themselves by their employees, and we never hear of a righteous soul complaining. In the name of all that is democratic or republican, free and enlightened, how can these things be?

If laws (?) educate us, what kind of education are we getting? One man sells a harmless book, and goes to the penitentiary at hard labor for years. Half a dozen other book-sellers keep for sale and sell with impunity books as vile as "Decameron," Rousseau's "Confessions," etc. (and the Holy Bible, too), and it is all right. We talk about liberty and equality. Yet we have built up a monstrous system of injustice and despotism during the past thirty years. HOLT.

Hellgrimite—A New Word for the Lexicographers.

SATANK, COL., Nov. 6, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As a Freethinker I take the privilege to write you a letter which, if you choose, you can put in THE TRUTH SEEKER for all Freethinkers to read.

I read the "Rich Man Defended," both that of Mr. Brayton and that of Mr. John Peck, and I congratulate Mr. Peck upon the gallant defense he made. I think it is the best article on the hard times I ever read. As to Mr. Brayton, I think if he will go out in some new country and take some of Uncle Sam's land as a homestead, without money, and make a living till he raises a crop he will find it is harder than he imagines it to be. I had an argument with a Hellgrimite the other day that was amusing, and I thought you and the friends would like to read it. As to the word "Hellgrimite": I suppose you would like to know what I mean by using this word; well, I mean a man who pretends to belong to church, and as soon as services are over is scheming to beat his neighbor out of a few dollars. That is what I mean by Hellgrimite. The argument was this: He asked me what was my religious belief; I told him I believed religion to be a humbug of the worst kind. Says he: "Do you expect to go to heaven when you die?" "Well, I don't know but that I will, if there is such a place," I replied. Then he asked: "How do you expect to get there if you believe religion a humbug?" And I answered him to the effect that if there was a heaven, as he claimed there was, I had as much show as he had, if not more, for I believed if a man lived uprightly and honestly and did what was right toward his fellow-man—helping him along in need and distress—and if there was a golden city the man who did right (and we all know right from wrong if we know anything) would be the man who would get there, and he didn't need to be a hypocrite, Hellgrimite, or sky-pilot to enjoy such a place as they (the Christians) are going to have some of these fine days. He then said: "How does it come that we Christians get along better and have money and are provided for better than those who believe religion a humbug?" "Well," I answered, "the money you get is begged from the poor, ignorant class of church-members who slave and work for a living and then you come along and tell them it is their duty to give it to the church for some confounded sky-pilot, and they believe you because you are an officer in the church, and hand the money over to you, and that is where you get your money to live on; it is somebody else's money, not yours, that you spend." At this little speech my opponent dropped the subject for that time, and so I must close for the present.

SAMUEL HOLLABAUGH.

The Need of Scientific Schools.

ORTHODOX SCHOOL OF LEARNING, }
Nov. 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: There is a girl's college in this country, where it is very unpopular to be anything but a Christian. And a Freethinker is held a—well, I can't express it. It has at the head of it for president a minister, who says and teaches that a woman is not refined unless she is a Christian, and so models his school accordingly. This school has a large attendance of young ladies, and every week the president of the said institution has his Bible-classes, which he teaches regularly, and every student is required to take the Bible work, and under no condition whatever is she excused from it. So the work of drilling in superstition goes on. This institution is nothing but a daily Sunday-school affair. It is quite true they have a capable faculty (all Christians, however, to carry out the one idea), and are very thorough in the other branches, but no one may study them unless she studies the Bible too. So you see the Bible is put first. What will this school turn out? A set of one-sided bigots, who never have heard of anything but Christianity from the cradle up; have never been allowed a free thought in their lives. They, perhaps, represent several hundred homes every year. You say this does not amount to anything—but it does. Just think for a moment; this is one school, one drop in the bucket; there are a great many others of the same ilk.

Where are the free colleges? There may be free public schools, but when one has finished there and looks around for a college in which to complete one's education, nothing but colleges run by retired ministers meet the eye. Where are the colleges in America that stand without religion for their foundations and a faculty who dare to say: "We put science above everything?" Has America any such?

With the younger generation lies the destiny of this country. It lies with them whether Freethought or superstition prevails. If they are educated in Christian colleges we cannot have much security in prophesying a very decided growth in Freethought. I do not mean that girl's colleges alone are needed; grand co-educational schools are demanded where not a breath of superstition can enter, and these would have a very large influence in shaping the future belief of this country. They are needed, yes, badly needed. Freethinkers who have children to educate send them to the public schools, and when they have finished there, hesitate to send them to colleges of superstition, to blight the freedom of thought they have already gained.

Let us have this idea talked—boomed! Had I as much money as feeling on this subject, I should endow a college of Freethought very liberally. But, unfortunately, I am not quite through one of these religious grist-mills yet and have not tried my fortune in the rough old world, but should fortune ever beam on me, I will certainly remember our educational needs and do my share. AN ATOM.

First Secular Church of Portland, Oregon.

PORTLAND, ORE., Nov. 16, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Noticing in your paper communications from all parts of this great and glorious land of the "free" and home of the brave, and very seldom seeing anything from Portland, Ore., I feel that a few lines concerning the progress of Freethought and Freethinkers here would be of interest to the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER. After the excitement attending the rousing convention of the state Secular Union, we, the small fry of the First Secular church of Portland, have finally settled down to regular business and resumed our meetings, "which we had suspended for a time," and they have been thus far so largely attended as to necessitate our increasing the seating capacity of our hall. Ours, you will see, is a church, but I think there is no other church in the country like ours, founded on good common horse sense, instead of God, Jesus, Holy Ghost, & Co. Every Sunday evening at 7.30 we hold our doors open for the reception of all, and then we introduce, after some preliminaries, our trump card in the person of our lecturer, Katie Kehm Smith, and she generally takes a trick every time. The Secularists and Liberals have tried and failed repeatedly in this very Christian city of Portland, to organize a society of Freethinkers, but through the persistent efforts of our trump card, Katie Kehm, assisted by several others of untiring energy, we now hold a hand that will be hard to euchre. Last Sunday evening, instead of our regular lecture, we held a literary and musical entertainment, followed by a card party. The hall was packed and all present were highly pleased and voted the affair a thorough success. Too much praise cannot be given to the parties who did all in their power to make it such, among whom were Miss Nettie Olds, Mrs. Wentzle, Mrs. Wheeler, Mrs. Lee, Misses Mollie Squire and Edith Kemp, and Messrs. Kemp and Spalm, and last but not least, though neither a singer nor a speaker, but a first-class financier, our treasurer, Mr. Charles Hagner, a man of energy and push, to whom a great deal of praise is due for his zeal in insuring the success of the Portland Secular church. We are doing, we are confident, a great amount of work, as can be seen by our large audiences and the many new faces appearing. We have also a Sunday-school started, meeting at 10.30 A. M. at our hall, where we will, under the superintendence of Miss Nettie Olds, endeavor to stuff the attending children full of common sense instead of superstition. Hoping, Mr. Editor, that these few lines will be the forerunner of others from this section of the country, I will now conclude by requesting, as a favor, that you insert in the valuable TRUTH SEEKER a small notice of the meeting of the First Secular church of Portland every Sunday evening at 7.30 at the Central Labor Council hall, 170½ Second street, near Yamhill. THE TRUTH SEEKER is very extensively read in Oregon, and we ask for the insertion of this weekly notice for the purpose of informing Freethinking people throughout the country where we are to be found.

Fraternally yours,
H. E. GIBBARD.
Sec. First Secular Church of Portland.

A Nice Prayer to Utter in Church, RICEVILLE, IA., Nov 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $6, for which please give me credit on my subscription. Every mite will help to keep the "Grand Old TRUTH SEEKER Ship" sailing upon the stormy waves and muddy waters of theology and superstition, so that it may save many who have suffered shipwreck on the dangerous rocks and sandbars of priestcraft. To change the metaphor, the paper is a light-house to guide those who are lost on the dark ocean of mental slavery and credulity to the safe harbor of Liberty and Science. If I had the genius of a Shakespeare or a David I would write poetry and sing praises in honor of the immortal Watson Heston. His cartoons alone are worth the subscription price of the paper, there is so much meaning and truth in them. The heathen rage furiously in this church-ridden town at present. The Methodists are having revival meetings. I attended a few times. Their actions made me think of Heston's cartoon in the "Pictorial Text-Book," where he compares the howling Methodists with the howling monkeys of Africa; a good comparison indeed. The first time I attended the meetings some church members urged me to have a debate with the pious tramp, and as I was willing to comply with their request, they grinned and snickered at the prospect of having the fun of seeing an infidel knocked out of time by a preacher. But, to their great disappointment, I worsted the gospel-sharp so badly that they all left the church, snapping and barking at me like a pack of wolves. I finally found myself all alone with the peddler of piety. At last he pleaded that I should get on my knees and pray. I promised him that I would prepare a prayer, and with his approval I would say it in church; but before I had time to attend again the good man had left for other parts of the Lord's vineyard. But in the hope that he or some other Christian may read THE TRUTH SEEKER, I will give a copy of my prayer here.

There have been so many gods, in fact the woods have always been full of them, and every nation has made its own gods under different names, but that there be no misunderstanding among all the (dead) gods, I will direct this message to the god of the Christian, to G. Hovah, J. Christ, H. Ghost & Co.:

"Great God in Heaven (if there be a God and a Heaven), I have been induced by some of your dupes here to pray to thee, and as I have not prayed for many years, for I am not such a beggar as to trouble thee very often, I will take the liberty to-day and direct a few words to thy imaginary heavenly throne. O Lord, I have but very little hopes that thou wilt answer this prayer, because thou hast never answered any of the many prayers I directed to thee many years ago. I also fear, O Lord, that all the prayers and pious groans and Amens which this ignorant and deluded people here utter are all in vain. Great God, this thy superstitious people almost have fits because I am such a hydra-headed monster of an infidel. Now, good God, if thou art a reality then I beseech thee to please let me know for sure, for how can I be blamed for not believing in thee, as I have not the least proof of thy existence? Thy book called the holy Bible contains so many absurd and foolish stories called miracles, and they tell me that I must believe all and everything which thy holy queer contains or be damned, but I will be if I do. I pray thee, O Lord, if thou shouldst ever write another book, please write it so as to promote Love, Justice, Liberty, and Peace; for the Bible promotes hatred, slavery, and persecutions. This people call thee all-wise and all-merciful, and still they believe that thou hast drowned all human beings with the exception of one man and his family and that that man felt so good because thou hadst saved him that he went on a spree and got dead drunk as soon as the drowning business was over. Why didst thou not drown them all and make a new start? They also tell me that thou hast made a hell and a devil to torment the most of us forever and ever for thy pleasure and glorification. O God, wilt thou forgive this foolish people for making such a monster out of thee, but thou knowest (if thou knowest anything at all) that the sky-pilots have to keep the devil wide-awake and hell red-hot so as to keep their dupes in fear; thou also knowest that the devil and hell are the preachers' right and left bowers, and their salvation. At last I ask thee to forgive the pious drones and their poor dupes for accusing thee of having killed thy only son or allowing others to kill him (which would make thee equally guilty of the crime). O God, if there be one, save our souls if we have souls. Amen."

I have one sentiment for the Christian, and another for the Freethinker. The Christian may be compared with a monkey in a cage, for he is surrounded by the iron bars of priestcraft and superstition and he defends himself with the weapons of fables, myths, faith, imagination, and bigotry. The Freethinker is like an eagle; he swings himself far above the dark clouds of superstition, and enjoys the crystal-clear sunshine of science, and keeps far above the detestable mire and slush of theology.

HENRY BISSON.

Have We Certitude in Philosophy or Science?

Nov. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have this day received a few pamphlets from Otto Wettstein. I have carefully read them, yet I fail to arrive at the same conclusions he does, and why?

His mode of reasoning would lead to the absurd consequence of denying the ability to discover anything as yet unknown. Furthermore, it would make an impossibility of the universe itself, were we to deny the preservation of force.

For what is it that distinguishes the dead, inert matter of this earth from the living, palpitating, moving matter, called man or animal? Scientists tell us that every particle of our bodies is renewed at certain intervals gradually but surely, and the cessation of said renewal is death. Are we not always the same individuals with the same peculiarities and characteristics at all times during our life? Nature, that does not make any distinction between man and man, still endows one man better than another, and unjustly so; the same catastrophes, the same hardships, befall man, even were we to enthroned deaf and dumb, cold law on the seat of cosmic government. In short, Materialists have a god whom they call nature, law, necessity, and what not, with this difference, that they are more consistent and deny the probability or even possibility of conscious existence hereafter. Admitting that question as very uncertain, it seems to me rather irrelevant to man whence he comes or whither he goes; the matter of greater importance being to live to-day as if to-morrow were never to come (in a certain sense), for to-day well spent earns another to-morrow. To dive into metaphysics, discussing the pros and cons of an existence only anticipated, will help us not one particle in acquiring those facts innumerable but as yet unknown, which the universe holds. It ill behooves the dabbler in the multiplication table to discuss the higher mathematics and to make assertions and advance theories on matters entirely beyond his ken. In my humble opinion it would be far better for man to go a little slowly, to acquire all the necessary facts first before advancing as facts a mere patchwork of conclusions arrived at possibly by a false arrangement of appearances. Agnostics, asserting the impossibility of knowing anything positively, should of all men be the slowest to commit such a blunder and couple with it the daring challenge to disprove them. Religions (I mean all kinds and all stages) have had their origin in man's heart and mind. That that innate desire to worship something has been turned by unscrupulous men to wrong advantage has naught to do with that fact. Consider it as a remnant of medieval times or in any other way you will, some natural reason and explanation can be given for it. How well does Ingersoll explain it? Why, people must or will have a religion, so-called. Then, if it is natural for man, why should the stickler for nature declare it unnatural? Remember I am not defending the Christian religion; oh, no. My visual horizon reaches very much beyond the meager fund of spiritual knowledge that it can give; but as we believe in evolution I have the brightest hopes that a light will appear, perhaps not long hence, for men with clear eyes can already perceive the dawn; mental freedom has long been struggling for existence, sometimes succeeding in rattling its chains forged by old Father Time. The rust of ages is slowly eating them away, and ere we know it the human mind will stand unfettered by any interests that have kept it enslaved for such long ages. Whether things will prove to be as I anticipate, or whether they will be more to Mr. Wettstein's taste, I cannot know yet, but I am certain that it will mean a greater change than any reformer of any age has sought to bring about.

The spirit of the times is at work; it has put its divers agents, be they called Materialists, Agnostics, Infidels, Spiritualists, Freethinkers, Bible-critics—yes, even fanatics on religion—to the task of enlightening the existing and next generations.

I will close with the information, which you may have already gathered from the foregoing, that I am leaning strongly toward Spiritualism; at least, I am investigating. As yet I have not been able to decide certainly; I am lingering on its threshold. I wish to thank Mr. Wettstein for his kindness, and can assure him that I can relish his outspokenness, even for that which I as yet disbelieve, differing herein from many of my old friends (the Christians), who have turned the cold shoulder to me since discovering my disposition to stand on my own feet. I do not beat around the bush, either, and hope thereby to earn the respect and friendship of both Mr. Wettstein and your contributors and readers.

OTTO YONHO.

Some Speculations About Gods and Other Intangibilities.

NEW BRITAIN, CONN., Nov. 27, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I was once traveling in a covered business wagon over some flat, undrained roads which were in a dreadfully bad condition, with deep ruts on each side alternately. I had for my traveling companions my wife—a little, round woman who had to keep a firm grip on my right arm, underside midway between the elbow and armpit, to keep from rolling off the rear seat—and a Mormon preacher by the name of Clapp. He did not call himself a Mormon, but "one of the reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints." It is a long name, but there was quite a colony of them on the upper Calapoia river in Oregon, and they were real good people, and did not believe in polygamy nor have any illegitimate children, as far as I could learn. Mr. Clapp was a good talker, and I think I was born that way myself. And so it was not long before we got into a conversation about our religious opinions. I did not know he was a preacher, and, although I had often discussed with those of most religious beliefs in the United States, I had never talked with a Mormon, and so was much puzzled to guess what he was. He was very liberal, and seemed willing to debate the merits of the Christian religion. So I guessed that he was either a Universalist, a Unitarian, a Spiritualist, a Campbellite, or an Adventist. Well, to get nearer to his views I asked what was his belief regarding a life after death. "Well," he said, "it is somewhat speculative, of course, but I believe there is a life after death." He kept perfectly calm during the whole of our talk, and never failed to score a point when the opportunity occurred, even though it seemed at times that our lives were in jeopardy, and, when the "stage" gave an extra lurch—which was about once a minute—my wife would give the little fistful of flesh a wrench to save herself. Well, Mr. Clapp proved future existence by saying that "if God was just we would live again, because anyone could see that very few, if any, get their just deserts here." I replied by saying that there could be no personal all-powerful, all-wise God who created everything, because if he was perfect certainly nothing but perfection could be the result of his creation. But since we see much imperfection in the creation, we are forced to one of two conclusions: God was imperfect and could not, or would not—which is the same—create perfect beings, or else there was no creation and probably no God. Is it not speculative to affirm a God to account for nature, full of imperfections, and imperfect nature to prove a perfect God? Therefore, the argument is invalid. It is no reply to a reasoning, thinking being to say, as did Paul in Romans ix., 14, 20: "What shall we say, then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid. Nay, but, O man, who art thou that repliest to God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why has thou made me thus?" All this language either comes of superstitious fear, or is a game of bluff by a wily priest to a superstitious devotee, so that no answer shall be required where none can be made. The question remains: Can perfection produce imperfection? "Oh, what blasphemy!" says the devotee. "You limit the power of God." I ask Paul: "Who art thou, O man (you 'thing,' Rom. ix., 20), that assumes to know so much more about God than others, and speak in such dictatorial manner?" Or, as a little boy is reported to have asked, "Can God make a two-year-old calf in a minute?"

But then come the questions: Where did we come from? What are we now? and What will be our future? Darwin has made answer to the first and second; the last can probably never be guessed. We are composed of a certain number of chemical elements which can be found in other animate and inanimate forms, which go to make up an articulated bony system, each bone not only connected with, but correlated to a muscular system, a venous and arterial system, and also a nervous system, with many organs, such as heart, liver, lungs, stomach, kidneys, and brain, the whole correlated by life forces—of which we know little, except that they permeate the whole, while all are in good order, and this leads us to guess that they produce thought. Yet to us Agnostics, if we confess the truth, one thing seems certain, that there are no two formed alike, nor do any two think exactly the same. So we guess one is the cause and the other is the effect. If matter, when organized, forms mind, then the idea of a future personal (or individual) existence seems impossible, because it seems impossible for the same physical body to be formed exactly the same, to produce the same thought, and the difficulty appears greater when we discover that our thoughts are changed by what we come in contact with, and there seems no probability that the same things will occur again at the same ages of each of us respectively. But it is assumed that God can and may change our arms to wings. I say it is assumed, but it is not proven probable, or even possible, or even that there is a being such as God is conceived to be, and probably no two persons have the same conception of God—and that is all we know of "him."

Yours truly,
GEORGE F. ELLIOTT.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Rock-a-By Lady.

The Rock-a-By Lady from Hushaby street
Comes stealing; comes creeping;
The poppies they hang from her head to her feet,
And each has a dream that is tiny and fleet—
She bringeth her poppies to you, my sweet,
When she findeth you sleeping!
There is one little dream of a beautiful drum—
"Rub-a-dub!" it goeth,
There is one little dream of a big sugar plum,
And, lo! thick and fast the other dreams come
Of popguns that bang, and tin tops that hum,
And a trumpet that bloweth!
And dollies peep out of those wee little dreams
With laughter and singing;
And boats go a-floating on silvery streams,
And the stars peek-a-boo with their own misty gleams,
And up, up and up, where the Mother Moon bears,
The fairies go winging!
Would you dream all these dreams that are tiny and fleet?
They'll come to you sleeping;
So, shut the two eyes that are weary, my sweet,
For the Rock-a-By Lady from Hushaby street,
With poppies that hang from her head to her feet,
Comes stealing; comes creeping.
—Eugene Field in Chicago Record.

Quiet Workers.

The strongest forces are those making the least noise in the world. Gravitation and electricity move quietly, yet are powerful in results. Silently are the coral reefs raised, inch by inch, until they present an impregnable and wonderful wall. So there are men and women who move without noise or bluster, and yet accomplish a vast amount of good in the world. In the ranks of Freethought there are those of whom the world never hears. They do not lecture, they write no books, but they go about doing good. They reach the men and women that never hear a Liberal lecture, who would never see a Liberal book were it not for these silent workers, who buy books and copies of lectures, leaving them in convenient places—in halls, railway cars, or wherever they may chance to be. They drop a word here and there, which sets the hearer to thinking. The good they do has not been estimated, nor can it be. And when praises and thanks are rendered to those who are known as public expounders of the truths of Freethought, the efficient forces whose names are never seen in public print should not be forgotten, for their labors, though silently performed, are of great and permanent value. S. H. W.

Dullness.

He is not only dull himself, but the cause of dullness in others.—Johnson.
We can ever be cross, surly, dull, or out of heart, but what we affect in like manner those around us. One person who feels dull and gloomy will make a room full of people feel out of sorts and out of humor. It is a duty we owe to ourselves to be cheerful, hopeful, and pleasant. It builds up health and makes life worth living. It attracts friends and sows seeds of gladness all around us. Every glad day paves the way for more. Every hopeful thought opens the door for its successor. Banish dullness and be bright, cheerful, and hopeful. Enjoy the now, for of the now only can we be really sure. Tomorrow we may sleep the sleep that lasts forever and forever. Make glad then the present and rejoice that so much of good is ours.
AUNT ELMINA.

What the Little Folks Are Saying.

"Mrs. Smith's got a dog that likes me," said little Emily, coming home from a visit with her aunt. "How do you know he likes you?" her mother asked. "Cause he tasted of me?" answered the little girl.—Youth's Companion.

Mamma: Georgie, where is the five cents I gave you to put in the contribution box for the heathen? Georgie: I'm saving it for Aunt Hetty when she comes. Why? Georgie: 'Cause I heard papa say, "Is that old heathen coming here again?"—Washington Star.

"I say, mother, didn't I hear you say last night you thought vegetables had feelings?" "Why, yes, my son, it is very pleasant to believe so." "All right, then, you don't catch me running that old lawn-mower again. I'm not going to hurt the feelings of the grass."—Boston Transcript.

"The following," writes a correspondent, "is an actual occurrence in a near-by public school." Teacher: Give a sentence with the word "healed" in it. Scholar: A lady—Teacher: Stop right there. Begin again. What was the lady's name? Scholar: The lady I mean has no name! Teacher: What! A lady with no name, Give her a name then. Scholar: Mrs. Smith touched Christ's garment and was healed. (Collapse of teacher.)—New York Tribune.

Correspondence.

ELBERTON, GA., Nov. 19, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my second letter to the Corner. I was twelve years old in October. I go to school and like my teacher very much. I study spelling, reading, geography, grammar, history, and arithmetic. I live in sight of the railroad. When I wrote before I had two little kittens, and now I have four more little kittens. Their names are Fritz and Harry, and I haven't named the rest of them. My father is a doctor. Yours truly,
OLIVE BELL.

[Will Olive tell us what it means to be a Freethinker?—Ed. C. C.]

SPOKANE, WASH., Nov. 7, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I have never seen any letters to the Corner from this place, so I will try to write a few words. I am nine years old. Papa says I was the first infidel born in this city. I have been going to school about ten months. I am now in the second reader. Some years ago we all went to hear Mr. Putnam lecture, and he said I was the smartest Freethinker in the audience.

Well, this is all I can think of this time. So good-bye. P. TERENCE MOE.

[And we are glad to get a letter from the smartest little Freethinker in Spokane. Mr. Putnam is correct in his estimate.—C. C.]

SENeca FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 7, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: To-night I came across your note containing the bark from that yew tree at Stoke Bogie.

So I thought I would send you a fern from the Himalaya mountains and a specimen of braid which women weave to trim their garments.

I expect to sail for India in about two weeks. In memory of our pleasant voyage together, I remain,

Very sincerely yours,

FANNIE M. ENGLISH.

[Miss English returns to India as a teacher. We wish her success, and may her efforts ever point to truer and higher light, and a better comprehension of life's great duties and interests. Thanks for the interesting specimens.—Ed. C. C.]

PORT TOWNSEND, WASH., Nov. 12, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Will you allow another stranger to enter your cosy parlor and have an afternoon chat with you?

I have been a Freethinker for quite a while, owing to the fact that I was converted by my friend Louisa Ifland. I have the books "Apples of Gold" and "The Story Hour," and have read them a great deal. I read THE TRUTH SEEKER and I am very fond of it. I would like my mother to subscribe for it, but, as she does not think as I do, my wish cannot be fulfilled. I attend school every day and study arithmetic, Latin, geometry, civil government, algebra, and general history.

I fear my letter is getting too long for the first time. I will now close. Hoping that my letter will escape the waste-basket, I remain, Your Freethinker friend,
ANNIE L. BARTHOLOPE.

[A brave girl and one who thinks for herself. Perhaps some one will be kind enough to send Annie copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER, after reading the same, until such time that she is able to subscribe for it herself.—Ed. C. C.]

SCRANTON, PA., Nov. 6, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As I now have the time to write a letter I write one to the Corner.

I live in Scranton, but I do not like it here much—there is too much coal-gas. There is a breaker not more than a hundred rods from our house.

I have never been down in the mines, but would like to go.

Now, to change the subject, I will say that I like to read the Corner very much. I take delight in reading it. There are so many pretty pieces in it. This is my first letter to the Corner, but I hope it will not be my last.

I am eight years old. I have no brothers nor sisters, and I never had one. My mamma and papa are Freethinkers, and we take THE TRUTH SEEKER. I do not go to church very often, because when I do go, I never take any interest in it, nor Sunday school either.

As my letter is so long, and I have to go to school, I will close, but I will write more next time. Good-bye.

MARY LILY MERRITT.

[Not every girl of eight years can compose so good a letter. We are pleased to welcome Mary Lily to the Corner, and hope to hear from her often.—Ed. C. C.]

CLOVERDALE, VA., Nov. 17, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As I have been sitting here thinking about you, I will now put my thoughts into words. Well, the harvest is past, summer is ended, and there is left a pile of the biscuit material at many households.

The cold weather has set in, and the old hare is scouting around through the country. I have caught thirteen this fall in my traps.

I am enjoying good health at present. Well, I'll tell you. I went to church the other night, and there was a pretty girl there; she was so pretty it made my head swim to look at her, and every time the preacher prayed I would turn around to look at her. I looked at her so much that I didn't remember a word he said. My mother asked me to let her read this letter, but I didn't do it, for I told her if she knew what was in it, she wouldn't sleep a bit. Now, that is a pretty tale to tell my mother, is it not?—ha, ha!

Well, as I am getting sleepy, I will close this time. I would like to correspond with any of the readers of the Corner at any time—prefer the feminine gender. With best wishes for your Corner, I will now close for fear this letter will reach the waste-basket. CHARLIE WM. POWER.

[Beauty is always attractive, whether seen in tree, flower, or human face. There is no harm in it, Charlie, and you need not hesitate to tell your mother. Always confide in your mother. She is your true friend.—Ed. C. C.]

FORD, KAN., Nov. 9, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first attempt to write to the Children's Corner. I am thirteen years old, and I like to read the Corner very much. I am living with my grandpa, Major Harvey R. Van Voorhis. We live on the Arkansas river, twenty-two miles below Dodge city, and four-and-one-half below a small town by the name of Ford city, the nearest town around here. It is about one mile and one-half to our nearest neighbors. We are all Freethinkers, and grandpa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for a long time. I read your paper all the time, especially the Corner. I read a letter a good while ago (back in April or May) in the Corner from Daisy Sutter, of Alexandria, Egypt. I would like to correspond with her very much, and if you don't mind it I would like you to send me her address. I go to church sometimes for fun, not because I believe in it.

I am not afraid to tell any priest or preacher that I am a Liberal and a Freethinker.

Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain, Your Freethinker friend, CYRUS S. DAULER.

[Some one was bemoaning the other day that the older Liberals were passing away, and there were none to take their places. Nonsense. Read the Corner and know that thousands of children are growing as fast as they can into men and women, young Freethinkers now—and among the number is Cyrus—and they will be ready to take up the work that others are obliged to lay down.—Ed. C. C.]

ATCHISON, KAN., Nov. 10, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON AND CORNER: It is again my pleasure to send my thoughts to the Corner, and express them in a willing way, and while my sayings will be few, I hope you will accept them with good grace. Since last writing to the Corner, the minority have been holding a revival at Atchison. All denominations have clubbed together in the hopes of capturing the town, but I think their hopes will be shattered. A few weak-minded sinners (mostly children) have asked forgiveness, and may the poor creatures be forgiven in the wish of many. The leading lawyers, bankers, merchants, and educators of Atchison are Freethinkers, and we hope to secure some lectures the coming winter, then we will teach the bigoted how to convert people. People must be converted by the truth and not by falsehoods. All preachers, as a rule, will get up before their congregations, and utter falsehood after falsehood, in hopes of getting conversions, and for that reason fail. A lady said to me recently that Freethinkers were composed of the lower class of people; when she uttered those words, she fairly insulted the names of the grandest men that ever lived, the men who made this country free, and made it possible for her to speak her opinions freely, but when she uttered those words, she uttered them most too freely, because I believe we have as large a band of Freethinkers in the United States, and a better class of people than the Christians can boast of. If this woman had been aware of this fact, she would probably have spoken the same words, as Christians seldom admit the truth when they know it. Christians will some day rejoice in seeing their error and be glad to hold to the banner of Freethought. May this day soon come is the wish of your Freethought friend,

CHARLES B. REMESBURG.

[We must pity the ignorant, Charles, while we try to show them a better way than the one they walk in. Hand that lady a Freethought tract, or a good Liberal book, and let her read, if she will.—Ed. C. C.]

OUR NEWEST BOOKS.

- Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? By John E. Remsburg. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
Pen-Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper, 25 cents.
Religion a Curse, a Lie, and a Disease. By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper, 25 cents.
Design Argument Fallacies. A Refutation of the Argument that Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being. By the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Paper, 15 cents.
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. By M. E. Billings. Paper, 25 cents.
Handbook of Freethought. By W. S. Bell. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
Pleasure and Progress: An Attempt to Prove that the Pursuit of Pleasure is the stine qua non of Intellectual, Moral, and Social Development, and that the Promotion of Pleasure is the Duty of Philanthropy and Statesmanship. By Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
The Creation of God. Tracing the God-Ide to Its Source. By Jacob Hartmann, M.D. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
Resurrection of Jesus. By Don Allen. Cloth, 75 cents; cloth, 40 cents.
Facts and Fictions of Life. By Helen H. Gardener. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Cloth, $2; leather, $3.

IN PRESS.

- Four Hundred Years of Freethought. By Samuel P. Putnam. Subscription box, elegant binding, over one hundred portraits, $5.
Woman: Four Centuries of Progress. By Susan H. Wixon. Paper, 0 cents.
The Church and Freethought. By Franklin Steiner. Paper, 10 cents.
The Giant Delusion. One of Otto Wettstein's Friendly Arguments with the Spiritualists. Paper, 10 cents.
Bible Inquirer. By Andrew Jacobson. Paper, 25 cents.

THE AGNOSTIC ANNUAL

—FOR—

1894.

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:
The True History of the Bible. Prof. Edwin Johnson; A Practical View of Life, Charles Watts; The Decadence of the Old Theology, Mrs. E. Lynn Linton; Inspiration in Excerpts, Samuel Laing; The Gospel of Love, A Poem, Capt. W. B. McTaggart; Agnostie Types, L. Bithell, B.Sc., Ph.D.; On Spiritual Wickedness in High Places, Edward Clodd; A Priest's of Nature, A Poem, Hon. C. K. Tuckerman; The Dream of Immortality, Frederick Miller; Is Immortality a Dream, W. Stewart Ross, (caladin); Practical Consequences of Agnosticism, F. J. Gould; The Religious Propensity, Furneaux Jordan, F.R.C.S.

Price, 25 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 23 Lafayette place, New York.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Christianity a Fiction.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

THE Astronomical and Astrological Origin of all Religions.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances,

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables {Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—
The Jewish Sabbath—The
Christian Scriptures and the
Sabbath—Examination of
Sunday Arguments—Origin
of the Christian Sabbath—
Testimony of the Christian
Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The
Puritan Sabbath—Testimony
of Christian Reformers,
Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS. AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth; Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone; Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards? The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested? Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Force and Matter,

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order or the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things in Immortality of Matter, Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Force, Man,
Infinity of Matter, Brain and Mind,
Value of Matter, Thought,
Motion, Consciousness,
Form, Seat of the Soul,
Immutability of Natural Innate Ideas,
Laws, The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Personal Continuance
Laws, Vital Force,
The Heavens, The Soul of Brutes
Periods of the Creation Free Will,
of the Earth, Morality,
Original Generation, Concluding Observa-
Secular Generation, tions.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles away."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART ROSS),

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible.

Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing."

In two volumes, cloth, gilt-lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN.

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right.

Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with a Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of strong literature like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historic verse, aglow in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE and OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardner's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Li- tiousness of the Pre-Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Abs- on; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continence, even more ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

WHOEVER speaks to me of God wants my purse or my liberty.—Proudhon.

"Isms," "ologies," and toadstools, as a general thing, are fungi which spring up in a night from decaying matter no longer needed in the world's business.—Galveston News.

INNOCENCE has often fallen a victim to the first outcry raised by indignation against the crime, and the person suspected of committing it; public clamor should be allowed to subside before carrying into effect a sentence of condemnation.—Tacitus.

PAINE was a better man than is commonly supposed, and a better writer than any contemporary in his adopted country. He deserves the eternal gratitude of Americans; he received from them contempt during life and denunciation after death.—The Athenæum.

I CAN find no evidence that seriously militates against the rule that the priest is at all times and in all places the enemy of all men—Sacerdos semper, ubique, et omnibus inimicus. I do not deny that the priest is very often a most earnest and conscientious man, doing the very best he knows of as well as he can do it. Lord Amberley is quite right in saying that the blame rests more with the laity than with the priesthood; that it has insisted on magic and mysteries, and has forced the priesthood to produce them. But then, how dreadful is the system that puts good men to such uses!—W. K. Clifford.

The policy of repression only results in defeating your purposes. Enforcing a custom is not philanthropy; it is persecution. Restraining a desire is not benevolence but intolerance. Good intentions do not always condone bad acts. When religionists put a martyr to the rack their sincerity did not lessen their brutality. The character of conduct is determined by its effects rather than by its purpose. If you cause chagrin, your kindness does not retrieve the cruelty. If you occasion misery, your sympathy does not extenuate your malignity. Vulgar habits may be obnoxious, but not so obnoxious as intolerance. Coarse appetites may be base, but not so base as persecution.—Albert M. Lorentz.

It seems to be the peculiar mission of modern science to demonstrate the permanency and universality of law; to drive from the universe the very thought of caprice, and to introduce inviolable harmony where was the wildest discord, rudest fancy, and merest fiction. To modern science nothing is more impossible than miracle, nothing more absurd than accident. The rational philosopher recognizes no causes but such as are reducible to law, and all causes are natural and immutable. He discovers the play of law, not only in the motion of a planet and the falling of an apple, but in the prevalence of a crime and the rise of a religion. All things have causes—all are in their turn causes, and governed by perfect and consistent law. The thoughts we think, the emotions we feel, and the acts we perform, are links in a chain no effort can break, and that will endure when we shall have crumbled into dust; and in our graves we shall still be governed by a law we obeyed before the cradle of infancy received us. There is no escape, no truce, no delay; science has torn the mask of fable from the face of nature, and revealed the marvelous features that no skill may interpret.—Frederick R. Marvin, M.D.

Why was the Christian Sabbath established? Because the clergy could not close their eyes to the importance of having a day set apart for their especial work. With Constantine, they had, for the first time, the power to secure such an institution by legal enactment; with Constantine, Christianity became the state religion of the Roman empire, and so, with the advice of the priesthood, this Sabbath edict was issued. Why was Sunday selected for the Christian Sabbath? Various reasons have been assigned. But the correct one has, so far as possible, been withheld from the public. With the pagans comprising a large portion of the empire, Sunday was already the chief day of the week. It was the day which they had consecrated to the sun; and although they did not observe it as a Sabbath, it was yet their sacred day, and we see how much easier it would be to compel them to abstain from labor on this day than on any other. To blend, as far as possible, into one harmonious whole the discordant systems of paganism and Christianity was the ambition of Constantine's reign. In the prosecution of this work, it is charged by Protestants that Christianity was corrupted, that in order to unite the young and rising faith with the old and waning one, compromises were made. They are loth to tell us however, that one of these compromises was the adoption of the old pagan holiday of Sunday for the Christian Sabbath. And yet it was.—John E. Remsburg.

A GREAT BOOK ON RADICAL, SOCIAL, AND ECONOMIC REFORMS.

The title of the book is

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

The author is

HENRY OLERICH, of Hawarden, Ia.

This book is in story form, well printed on good paper, well illustrated, and handsomely bound. It is a text-book on "Co-operative Individualism." For many it is perhaps too radical on some questions of reform, but it is nevertheless eminently thought-provoking.

The universal unrest manifested by the thinking world, particularly during these "hard times," plainly indicates that our social, economic, and religious institutions are not in tune with the best thought of the age. The author vividly portrays an ideal world from which all our present social, economic, and religious evils are eliminated. For the fulfillment of his prophecy, the author does not rely on miracles, but on the advancing intelligence of thoughtful men and women. If Mr. Olerich's ideal state can ever be attained the world will certainly be a paradise. Beautifully cloth-bound, price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MENTAL HEALING.

A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power.

By LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

A Book to explain the correct idea of Mental Healing, and what may be reasonably expected to result from an understanding of its principles. Price, $2.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - 75 cents.

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in the Interest of and Owned by the Whole People.

By HON. THOMAS E. HILL,

of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms," "The Hill Banking System," and other works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted.

This book is "just in time," is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFERENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the Initiative and Referendum,

By J. W. SULLIVAN.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed. Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

28 Lafayette place, New York City.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most Startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin. [ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

PRESENTS :: FOR THE :: HOLIDAYS.

The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book, in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $2.50. In plain boards, $2.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $1.50. In plain boards, $1.

Around the World, by D. M. Bennett, 4 volumes, red cloth covers, $6.50; leather, red edges, $9.50; morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers, 1,075 pages. 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Ingersoll's Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; tree calf, $9.

Ingersoll's Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1,141 pages. In one volume, half calf, $5.

Life. A Prose Poem. By R. G. Ingersoll. In color, on boards, beveled, gilt edges, 50 cents.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28. inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll. 50 cents.

Apples of Gold, by Miss Susan H. Wixon. Gilt stamp. $1.25.

All In A Lifetime, by Miss Wixon. $1.

Voltaire's Romances, Profusely Illustrated. Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Darwin and After Darwin. By George J. Romanes. Silk cloth, gilt top, $2.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Conway's Life of Paine. Two large, handsome volumes. The best and only complete life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $5.

Parton's Life of Voltaire, Of which the same can be said as of Conway's Life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $6.

Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Leather, $3; cloth, gilt top, $2.

History of Christianity, Comprising all that relates to Christianity in the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $2.

Force and Matter. By Professor Ludwig Buchner, M.D. Half calf, $3; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind. By James B. Alexander. Cloth, $2.75.

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

Asleep and Awake. A new Liberal novel. By Raymond Russell. Cloth, side and back stamp, $1.

Cosmian Hymn Book. With music to all the songs. Edited by L. K. Washburn. Cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

For Other Books See the Advertisements, or Send to Us for a Free Catalogue.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Not for Parsons.

ANY minister may get up a sensation, and the sensation may get down the minister. —Plain Dealer.

SOME men hav an idea that they will some day walk in the streets of glory because they now and then giv away an old coat. —Ram's Horn.

FLATTERING FRIEND: Oh, yes, I always keep your books on my center table, and I read them as I do my Bible. Fluttering Author.—What! Not oftener than that? —Somerville Journal.

BRER FOX: I knowed dat Zion revival would be a sizzle. Brer Coon: How you know hit? Yo' hain't no mind-reader? Brer Fox: Dey put on one frill too many when dey tacked up that sign about razzers bein' lef' outside.

"I SEE that you hav been elected a member of the Chamber of Deputies, and I would like to know what policy you intend to adopt." "Oh, I shall do as the others do. In other words, I am determined not to swerve one inch from the path of tradition." —Paris Figaro.

ASTONISHED MAMMA: Frankie, how could you tell your aunt Annie that you didn't know who made you? Frankie: Well, I don't know. Astonished Mamma: But, dear child, how often hav you heard that God made you? Frankie: Oh, but I don't believe everything I hear.

LITTLE May wrote a composition on "The Cow." It was brief. "The cow is a very useful animal." The mother requested her to read it to the minister, which she did, amending it thus to suit the occasion: "The cow is the most useful animal except religion." —Woman's Journal.

STRANGER (in Brooklyn): Where are all these gentlemen going? Resident: They are going to bid farewell to a popular missionary to China, who has been very successful in teaching the heathen the gospel of love and peace. "I see. And where is this gang of boys going?" "They are going to stone a Chinese funeral."

As an example of what Lady Morgan called "hating one another for the love of God," Mr. Le Fann says: "Not very long ago an old Orangeman in the county of Down was asked: 'Are the times as good now, Tom, as when you were a boy?'" "Faith they are not," answered Tom; "they'd take you up now and try you for shooting a Papist!"

A GOOD instance of how the Bible can be used to defend anything is mentioned in Alsop's Inquiry, and also by Henry Stephens, the printer. Pope Julius II. had a peacock stolen, about which he raged blusterously. Advised to moderation by a cardinal, he replied: "God could be angry and plague the world for a sorry apple, and shall not I much more for a delicate peacock?" —London Freethinker.

A CERTAIN minister during the course of his sermon spoke in regard to the use of the word "damn." He said that it was not a profane word; that men did not use it as such; that it was simply a forcible adjectiv or verb used to emphasize things. Well, the next morning the reverend doctor walked down-town to giv some spiritual counsel to one of his recreant sheep, and on the way he met Miss Jones. "Good-morning, Miss Jones, good-morning," said his reverence, lifting his shiny tile (Miss Jones was a pretty girl, and preachers hav an eye to beauty as well as other men), and he made his best bow. "Good-morning, doctor. That was a damn good sermon you preached yesterday." The minister almost fainted, and the evening paper came out with an article headed "An Attack of Paralysis." —Washington Post.

PARROTS are often used as the means of pointing a good joke in instances where perhaps the poor bird would be amazed—were that possible—at the quick-wittedness attributed to him. However, the following is told as true by a friend whose veracity we hav hitherto found no reason for doubting: A pleasant group had just seated themselves at the supper table of a family whose custom was to offer thanks for the food about to be partaken of. A guest was present whose customs had not lain in the line of verbal expression of his gratitude for blessings none the less appreciated. This same guest was called upon to "say grace," and, wishing to be polite, and likewise disliking to appear awkward, he struggled bravely for something appropriate to the emergency. But his embarrassment consumed more time than he realized; and presently, on his amazed and bewildered senses fell these impatient words: "For the Lord's sake! Say something, and let us begin to eat!" It was the parrot! The pet of the family! —Boston Ideas.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged

As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Amos: the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents; singly, 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by

Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiotcy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life,

delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason," are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of The World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
Single numbers sold at prices quoted.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, and to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and The Truth Seeker one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER

ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and Truth Seeker, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AGENTS MAKE 100 PER CENT PROFIT
and more get sample free, best-known goods in all America. Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Safety Razors, Cutters, Insoles, Plasters, and all our other popular goods. (Either sex.)
Address DR. GEO. A. SCOTT,
842 Broadway, N. Y. City.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

WANTED — 500,000 Freethinkers to stop at Richter's Hotel, Cullman, Ala. 6446

MAGIC LANTERNS

And STEREOPTICONS, all prices. Views illustrating every subject for PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS, etc.
A profitable business for a man with a small capital. Also, Lanters for Home Amusement. 250 page Catalogue free.
McALLISTER, Mfg. Opticians, 49 Nassau St., N.Y.
13:60w39

THE "Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 18 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silvering dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $28; 14 karat gold case, $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 karat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silver case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels $13. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 karat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $50 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries. Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons $3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver spoons, $1.35, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonial Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more Etched (teas only).

"The Time to be Happy is Now," 50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $4, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $8, $15, $20, $30. Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in goods and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1 and returned free.

O.T.O. WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

STRONG, HEALTHY MANHOOD
Those Afflicted with Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicose Veins, Mental and Physical Debility and who are desirous of being cured, a booklet will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and symptoms of the complaints, and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Say where you saw this adver. Vineland, N. J.

ZEKE IS INSPIRED TO DIG FOR A HOLE.

And he brought me to the door of the court; and when I looked, behold a hole in the wall. Then he said unto me Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door.—Ezek. viii, 7, 8.

Deutsche Freigeist-Bücher.

Wier haben folgende Bücher in Deutscher Sprache welche sehr berühmt sind.

„Die Irrthümer Moses,“

Eine kritische Beleuchtung des Pentateuch für Widerspruch zur modernen Weltanschauung und Gesittung.
von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 50 Cents.

Das Weib und ihre Stellung zur Religion und Kirche am Ende des 19. Jahrhunderts.

von Helene S. Gardener, Preis 50 Cents.

„Moderne Götterdämmerung,“

von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 25 Cents.

„Wunder und Wunderthäter,“

von John Peck, Preis 20 Cents.

„Glaube und Vernunft,“

oder LE BON SENS.

des römisch-katholischen Priesters Jean Meslier. Nach dem französischen Original übersezt von Fräulein Anna Knoop.

301 Seiten, Leinwand, $1.00, Papier, 50 Cts.

Diese Bücher sind in Papier Umschlag und Flaren Druck. Unsere Deutschen Leser sollten es weit verbreiten.

Adressire, „The Truth Seeker.“

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, New York.

URVEYORS, ATTENTION!

A rare chance is offered for a surveyor to get a

TRANSIT CHEAP.

We have one for sale, in good order, with Tripod, which cost $160. We will sell it for half-price—$80. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New articles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. CAIDESTER & SON, 26 Bond St., N. Y.

13446

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

IN THE

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER,

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Walls and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Free Thought Romance. Price, 25 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette place, New York.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY

PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible 'of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.

The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.

Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.

Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.

Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,

28 Lafayette place, New York.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A Nineteenth Century Novel.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with a little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroine. The narrative is, in the main, a history of a working-girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business-men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrites. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price,

20 cents.

News of the Week.

J. J. VAN ALLEN has resigned the ambassadorship to Italy.

IN Morocco the Rifs are ready to stop hostilities against the Spaniards.

HEAVY snow storm on the night of December 2d in western New York delayed trains.

THE German Reichstag has adopted a motion, by a vote of 173 to 136, to readmit the Jesuits to that country.

THE police of Marseilles have made important seizures of explosives on the premises of Anarchists in that city.

EARTHQUAKE shocks were recently felt in Canada, northern New York, Massachusetts, Vermont, and New Hampshire.

ADMIRAL MELLO's flagship, the Aquidaban, has forced a passage out of Rio Janeiro harbor, and is now on the high seas.

THE Afro American convention at Cincinnati was attended by more than seven hundred delegates. Bishop H. M. Turner was elected permanent chairman.

PROF. JOHN TYNDALL is dead. He passed out of life at his home in Haslemere, county of Surrey, England, December 4th, aged seventy-three years.

JOHN BURNS, English Socialistic leader and member of Parliament, had an attack of chills while addressing his constituents in Battersea. Caused by overwork.

BANK-WRECKER and state boss Charles W. Mosher, of Nebraska, is at last in prison. He is incarcerated in the United States prison at Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

TWENTY Catholics were killed by Russian troops in the government of Kovna. The government had ordered the church closed, but the people refused to leave it.

FRANCE is still in political turmoil. Senator Spuller was unable to form a cabinet, and now the task has been undertaken by Jean Casimir-Perier, moderate Republican.

ATTEMPTS have recently been made upon the lives of Chancellor von Caprivi and Emperor William, of Germany. Infernal machines were sent to them through the mails.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL OLNEY says that certain notes issued by corporations during the recent money famine are not taxable ten per cent. under the bank note circulation law.

IN the Massachusetts Superior Court Mary A. Fisher recovered $40 damages against the election registrars of South Deerfield for failure to put her name on the voting list.

AMERICANS returned from China think that that country will retaliate upon citizens of the United States now resident there for the treatment accorded the Chinese by this Christian nation.

KENTUCKY elected eight women as county school superintendents at the recent election. One is a widow of forty-five, with fourteen children, seven of whom are under twelve years of age.

THE New York police forbid the danse du ventre in this city. Clubber Williams may be enjoined, but his order was probably intended to put him in Parkhurst's good graces and so save himself from Devory's fate.

GOVERNOR TILLMAN, in his annual message to the legislature of South Carolina, takes occasion to savagely score the federal judges who have lately in railroad cases given decisions which are favorable to the receivers as against the state.

NEW YORK City lacks an efficient system of police signals, and is also in need of a complete patrol-wagon service. In these respects, as in so many others, she is away behind other American cities. The subject is now under discussion in the city papers.

THE destruction by earthquake of the town of Kuchan, Persia, caused the death of twelve thousand persons. Between November 17th and November 24th one hundred and sixty shocks were felt. Among the survivors great destitution prevails.

AN attempt is being made to form a new United States out of the now independent five states of Central America. The final conferences, intended to perfect arrangements to this end, will be held soon. Already there is much intriguing for the position of first president of the new confederacy.

THE police of London closed Trafalgar square to the Anarchists on December 2d. Hitherto there has been no restraint upon their liberty of utterance in London, but at their last meeting they applauded the massacre of innocent theater-goers in Barcelona, and advised or threatened similar "propaganda by deed" in England.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 50. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, December 16, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

A TOTTERING STRUCTURE—THE GREAT CHRISTIAN IDOL.

TO NEW READERS OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

We send this issue of The Truth Seeker to a great many Liberals who are not subscribers, with an earnest invitation to them to become such, and thereby help along the Liberal cause.

We would also respectfully call their attention to the many points of excellence of the Paper.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is the Largest Freethought Journal in the World.

The Cartoons of Heston appear each week, and each picture is worth the cost of the paper a year to one who appreciates plain and telling arguments against ecclesiasticism.

THE TRUTH SEEKER constantly prints the most varied and entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal. Its Contributors are all the noted Liberals of the country. All that Col. R. G. Ingersoll gives to the Public can be found in THE TRUTH SEEKER, and that Poet of Freethought, Samuel P. Putnam, writes more for its columns than for any other. The Liberal speakers send us accounts of their journeys, and the best writers of Freethought freely devote their services to the cause of Liberalism through the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Charles Watts, perhaps the greatest Debater of our time, certainly the foremost Secular orator of England, will send us monthly letters from England with all the news of our movement there and such reflections and pertinent observations as will surely make every English Secularist living in this country and Canada want to read THE TRUTH SEEKER. George E. Macdonald, one of the rarest combinations of humorist, satirist, philosopher, logician, has been engaged to write regularly for our columns. As the "Man With the Badge Pin," he is known to nearly all the Liberals of the country, and we are willing to make him known to more.

THE TRUTH SEEKER gives all the news of Freethought, and is always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

The Sunday Question is now to the front all over the country. On that THE TRUTH SEEKER will voice the demands of the Liberal minded men and women of the country, and nowhere else will the rights of the people as against Puritanism be found so sturdily defended.

To sum it up, THE TRUTH SEEKER is the biggest, best, and bravest Freethought journal in the world, and if you are a Liberal or Freethinker, you want it and ought to take it. We appeal also to fair-minded Christians to hear our side and then decide. Bigots and fanatics, we suppose, wouldn't take it on any terms.

SEE OUR PREMIUM OFFER FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS on the second and third pages. Take advantage of one of these offers, or send $3 for a Year's subscription, or $1 for four months' trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Most Magnificent Work Ever Published by the Freethought Press.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The object of this work is to present the Course of Freethought throughout the Civilized World for the last Four Centuries, from the time of Columbus and Bruno to the time of Ingersoll.

It will be a radical Historic Record of the Greatest Developments of the Human Race.

It will reveal Freethought as an Intellectual, Moral, Literary, Social, Industrial, and Political Movement.

It will show what Freethought is in itself and how manifold are its influences, and with what hope and promise we can hail its future triumph.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" will Embrace the most Illustrious Pages of Human History,

adorned with the brightest Genius, radiant with the most splendid Poetry, rich with the greatest Inventions and Discoveries and ennobled with Freedom's most shining advance.

Nothing Can be More Interesting,

more inspiring to the Pioneer Workers of to-day—to those who are still in the van for Human Rights and Progress. The struggle is not ended and what is already won must be carefully guarded. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty; and from the Past we must ever learn Great Lessons for the Future.

NO LIBERAL CAN AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT THIS BOOK.

It will contain the Greatest Thoughts and the Greatest Deeds of the Greatest Men

In One Harmonious and Magnificent Whole,

a vivid picture of man's sublimest evolution, with the added glory of

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION

from the chains and slavery of a barbaric creed and church.

THE FIRST PART of the book will deal with Freethought as a Universal Power, as a Spirit, a Method, a prevailing but unorganized Influence in every Department of Human Growth.

THE SECOND PART will deal with Freethought as an Organized Movement, especially in America and Europe; and this history is of equal importance with the first, and should be justly understood and the Pioneers of our work recognized.

The first part will embrace the following Grand Departments:

Philosophy.	Science.	Education and Ethics.	Literature.	Government and Politics.	Woman's Emancipation.
Bruno.	Copernicus.	Bacon.	Boccaccio.	Voltaire.	Madame Roland.
Spinoza.	Galileo.	Comenius.	Rabelais.	Rousseau.	Mary Wollstonecraft.
Descartes.	Kepler.	Pestalozzi.	Cervantes.	French Salon.	Harriet Martineau.
Locke.	Da Vinci.	Fröbel.	Marlowe.	French Revolution.	Frances Wright.
Hume.	Newton.	Combe.	Shakspeare.	Phillips.	Lucretia Mott.
Hobbs.	Humboldt.	Spencer.	Gibbon.	Parker.	Ernestine L. Rose.
Kant.	Lyell.	Owen.	Burns.	Sumner.	Lydia Maria Child.
Hamilton.	Darwin.	Holyoake.	Shelley.	Mazzini.	Margaret Fuller.
Comte.	Tyndall.	Haeckel.	Byron.	Bentham.	Elizabeth Cady Stanton.
Büchner.	Huxley.	Girard.	Pushkin.	Mill.	Susan B. Anthony.
Feuerbach.		Lick.	Tcherny-chewsky.	Garibaldi.	Matilda Joselyn Gage.
				Heinzen.	Helen H. Gardener.
					Annie Besant.

THE PORTRAITS OF THESE ILLUSTRIOUS REFORMERS

in every domain of Human Thought and Progress will adorn the pages of this volume.

The Second Part of this volume will be devoted especially to organized Freethought and the Liberal Press in modern times. The Truth Seeker, Investigator, Ironclad Age, Secular Thought, Freethinkers' Magazine, Independent Pulpit, Lucifer, the Freethinker, Agnostic Journal, etc.

It will give a history of the

GREAT INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS

at Chicago, the Freethought Federation of America, the American Secular Union, the various state and local organizations, the Canadian Secular Union, the British Secular Union, and other Liberal associations throughout the world.

It will contain the portraits of those who, up to the present time, have been identified with Freethought work—editors, lecturers, officers of societies, and those who, as representative men, have won distinction in other fields of effort. There will be the portraits of

Horace Seaver,	George E. Macdonald,	Capt. R. C. Adams,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.,	Susan H. Wixon,
J. P. Mendum,	E. M. Macdonald,	John R. Charlesworth,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.,	Mrs. Charles Watts,
D. M. Bennett,	L. K. Washburn,	Samuel P. Putnam,	Prof. J. H. Cook,	Mrs. Robert C. Adams,
Parker Pillsbury,	Ernest Mendum,	John E. Remsburg,	E. H. Heywood,	Mrs. M. A. Freeman,
Elizur Wright,	Charles Watts,	Franklin Steiner,	Otto Wettstein,	Katie Kehm Smith,
T. C. Leland,	G. W. Foote,	J. D. Shaw,	Stephen Pearl Andrews,	Lucy N. Colman,
T. B. Wakeman,	Saladin,	E. A. Stevens,	James Parton,	Lillian Leland,
Judge C. B. Waite.	J. R. Monroe,	H. L. Green,	Abner Kneeland,	Amy Post.

and other men and women who have contributed to the advancement of Freethought and whose names should be remembered throughout the Liberal ranks. There will also be about

ONE HUNDRED BIOGRAPHIES,

and in these will be given a picture of Freethought progress which will be most interesting and valuable, for it is in individuals that we find the best interpretations of the age.

The Price of This Superb Book is $5.00,

and not for the same amount of money can there be found such an array of facts, such a survey of history, and such a galaxy of Freethought.

Mr. Putnam is now devoting his whole time to this work and it will be published at the earliest possible moment.

The name of every Subscriber who sends five dollars before the work is on the press will be enrolled in this book. DON'T FAIL TO SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE.

This book will contain

Over Six Hundred Pages of Printed Matter and Over One Hundred Portraits.

It will be elegantly bound. It will be a book for the home and the fireside. It will be a book to give to your friends when they ask, What is Freethought—what has it done and what is it doing in the world?

This is the most universal presentation of Freethought ever given to the public, and no Freethinker can afford to be without it. It is a library in itself.

Address orders to

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

HOW TO GET FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT FREE

SPECIAL OFFER.

We have made arrangements with Mr. Putnam whereby we are enabled to make our friends a most generous offer.

We need more subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and every Freethinker needs "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." Not all are able to pay $5 for it, but everyone can do a little work to obtain a copy—congenial work, that will do great good all around. This is the offer:

Send us Four New Yearly Subscribers at regular rates ($12 in all), and we will send the Getter-up of the Club a copy of "FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT," FREE OF CHARGES.

And further, to aid our friends in getting this book for themselves, we will offer

To the New Subscribers as a Premium,

post free, a copy in boards of

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated

By WATSON HESTON,
THE GREATEST BOOK OF ITS KIND EVER
CONCEIVED.

Or, if preferred, a copy cloth-bound of
W. S. BELL'S

Handbook of Freethought.

With these Splendid Works as premiums there ought to be no difficulty in getting hundreds of clubs of subscribers.

Remember, to the Getter-up of The Club, FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT, free.

To each New Subscriber in the club, a premium of a Dollar Book—either "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought," in Cloth—all free by post or express.

This really brings the price of the paper down to $2 to each new subscriber, as they get THE TRUTH SEEKER one year and a dollar book for $3.

A Club of Four New Subscribers and $12 ($3 only from each) does this.

We want to extend our circulation, and we want to help our friends to help us.

It ought not to be difficult to get four New Subscribers in any town in the country, especially with these Splendid Premiums to assist.

Those who get up these Clubs will receive their copies of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" as soon as the book is issued.

Those who send a Club and Four New Subscribers and $12 before the book is printed, will have their names enrolled in its shining pages.

THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place,
NEW YORK.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 50. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, December 16, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - DECEMBER 16, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

SOME HANDSOME PREMIUMS.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $6.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and S. P. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" ($5). By taking advantage of this or our Free offer of the book (see opposite page) there is no reason why every Freethinker in the country should not possess this splendid work.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" ($3). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and James B. Alexander's Dynamic Theory ($2.75). This is a splendid offer, for every one wants this book. It has over a thousand large pages and more than four hundred illustrations. It is a digest of Science, and every one who studies it cannot help but be well-informed in all scientific matters.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in board covers ($1).

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have, at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

"Applied Christianity."—II.

All Freethinkers should be thoroughly informed as to the principles and purposes of the National Reform Association and its allies. It is our purpose to lay before the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER an authoritative statement of those principles and purposes, together with a condensed history of the central organization and an impartial estimate of its present strength, not omitting a summary of the victories it has won, directly and indirectly. It must not be for a moment forgotten that a large and influential number of the citizens of the United States are striving to apply the dogmas of Christianity, not through individual acceptance and practice, but by means of municipal ordinances, state and national statutes, and an amendment to the Constitution. The objects of this attempt to apply religion by law are really to compel those who cannot voluntarily accept the tenets of the dominant theology to appear to do so, and to force them to render financial support to said theology. As parts of this theocratic scheme we have the denial by law of the right of the citizen to pursue his usual avocations or seek recreation on one day of each seven, and the legal imposition of various anti-natural, inequitable, and misery- and crime-producing canons of Christian morality.

Last week we quoted at length from a paper read by D. S. Littell at the convention of the National Reform Association, held at Alleghany, Pennsylvania, Nov. 14 to 16, 1893. Following are some of the resolutions adopted and excerpts from others. This is the third:

"That the ultimate, authoritative moral law for nations in their own proper sphere, as for individuals in theirs, is the law of Christ; that this obligation of nations to conform all their affairs in the sphere of national morals to the law of Christ is but the simple practical statement of the truth that Christ is King of kings and Lord of lords and governor among the nations; and that this convention of Christian citizens has met to do, by way of discussion, just what this nation, affirmed by the United States Supreme Court to be 'a Christian nation,' ought to do in its fundamental law, and in all the departments of government founded in it, and that is to apply the law of Christ as the nation's king to every moral question that calls for national action."

That is to say, all citizens, including those who do not accept as authentic or true or scientific the teachings ascribed to Jesus, and even those who can find no proof of his existence, shall be compelled to order their lives in practical harmony with the interpretation put upon those teachings by the ruling majority. This is the monstrous doctrine of a national religion, in all its nakedness and deformity. This means that the Christians of the United States shall be empowered by organic and statute laws to take the doubtful and contradictory and irrational utterances attributed to one Jesus, said to have lived some eighteen hundred years ago in a country called Palestine, and work them over into such a moral code as they can agree upon among themselves, and force that code, by means of the civil power, with all its pains, penalties, and tortures, upon the American people.

Here is the fourth resolution:

"That one of the most prominent of national moral questions at this time demanding prompt and right settlement is the relation of our nation and government to the Sabbath. We note the following momentous facts in the present attitude of our nation to the Lord's day: (1) The act of Congress, in connection with an appropriation to the World's Fair, honored the Sabbath. (2) When a determined effort was made to repeal this act, Congress deliberately and firmly maintained it. (3) This was in harmony with the Sabbath laws of nearly all our states, and with the sentiment of the great majority of Christian citizens, about twenty-five millions of whom expressed the Sabbath sentiment of the country in meetings and petitions to Congress. And yet, (4) all this was not enough to prevent the United States Circuit Court and two county courts of one of our states from defeating the will of Congress and of the Christian people of the country. And, (5) this defeat of Sabbath sentiment and Congressional action was, on the other hand, in harmony with the great tide of Sabbath-breaking amusements and Sabbath-desecrating traffic, especially by great railway corporations and newspaper companies and the United States mail. This divided and opposing condition as to Sabbath law cannot continue. As President Lincoln said of slavery, so it must be said of the Sabbath here: Our nation cannot continue to be both for and against it. It must become wholly the one or the other. As our nation in that struggle in Lincoln's day put itself in right relation to Christ's law against slavery, so to-day we call upon it to put itself in right relation to the Sabbath which was made for man, and thus also to him who is therefore lord of the Sabbath."

The momentous facts which Freethinkers will note are that Congress did trample the Constitution, as claimed in other terms by the Reformers; that that disregard of the fundamental principle of religious liberty is in harmony with the Sunday laws of most of the states, and that the National Reform convention has deliberately and solemnly reiterated the falsehood that 25,000,000 of the people of this country petitioned and protested against the Sunday opening of the World's Fair. What justice can we hope for from a party which has so little regard for the truth? By the census of 1890 the population of this country was 62,500,000, in round numbers. Children of school age (five to twenty) 22,500,000, in round numbers. This would leave 40,000,000 of adults and of children under five years of age. Subtracting from this number 7,500,000 children under five years, we have left 32,500,000 adults. Now who is simple enough to believe that all but 7,500,000 of the adults of the United States petitioned for the closing of the Fair on Sunday? Who so credulous as to accept the Sabbatarian claim that ten of each thirteen men and women in this country wanted Jackson Park shut up on Sunday, saying nothing of their demanding that it should be done? We repeat: What hope of justice can we reasonably entertain in the event of these contemners of truth obtaining that for which they are so desperately striving—supreme power in the states and the nation?

It will be noted that it is asserted that in freeing the slaves the government of this country "put itself in right relation with Christ's law against slavery." More falsehood in the interest of the "king." Jesus gave no law against slavery, any more than he did against the then universal subordination of woman or the world-old evil of intemperance. Modern theocrats would read into his teachings the reformatory ideas and credit him with the civilizing achievements born of Freethought and then in their names conjure into baleful life a state-church designed to crucify every thinker who shall refuse to shut his eyes and swallow whatever is proffered him by the falsifiers of the records.

Concerning the Sunday paper resolution five says:

"That the 'Sunday newspaper' is one of the most insidious and dangerous of all the enemies of the Sabbath; that the publication and sale of this article of merchandise has no more right to legal exemption from prosecution than other worldly business."

The Sunday paper must be legislated out of existence, but nothing is said regarding the Monday paper, which involves more Sunday work, relatively to its size, than does the former. This shows that not solicitude for the Sunday worker but fear of the rivalry of the Sunday paper is the cause of the bitter clerical hatred of the paper which is dated the day their sermons are delivered.

The tenth resolution reads:

"That our multiplied sets of divorce laws, rendering adulterous connections that are criminal in one state perfectly legal in another, are chargeable with the yearly wrecking of many thousands of homes and the early sapping of the morals and virtue of many more thousands of children and youth; and that the only arrest of this loathsome social cancer is to be found in the enactment into uniform and authoritative statute, either by the national legislature, or by the legislatures of our several states, of the one divine marriage and divorce law of the Savior King."

In a paper read by Rev. T. P. Stevenson we find the foregoing declaration divided and amplified as follows:

"1. The family is a divine institution; not a human arrangement. Every family belongs to God, for he has made it. The law of God is, therefore, the rule of its life.

"2. God's rights in the family, as in everything else, are all vested in Christ. God's law for the family is revealed and administered by Jesus Christ, to whom all authority is given in heaven and earth. All families are responsible to Christ, whether they acknowledge the fact or not.

"3. The state, in making laws for the family, must have respect to the supreme law of the family, the law of Christ. The state has no right to legalize, in the case of any family, what the law of Christ forbids.

"4. This is the more evident because the state itself is responsible to Christ, who is the ruler and lawgiver of nations, and who judges and punishes them for disregard of his laws."

Here it is affirmed with insolent frankness that the institution which more than any other can make or mar human happiness rests wholly on the "law" which a young man, who is reputed to have lived about two thousand years ago in a barbarous Eastern land, is asserted to have authority from his "father" to administer upon earth. Human rights and needs are nothing; the dictum of this youth is everything. The dead are to rule the living; the past is to dominate the present; the priest is to sit at the head of the family table and in the name of "Christ" decide what is right and what is wrong. When the priest can no longer control marriage and divorce, and pray at the bedside of the dying, his reign is over. He knows this well. In the United States he fights as wildly against rational divorce laws as the Catholic priests of Hungary are now fighting against the proposed civil marriage law in that country.

This is the eleventh resolution:

"That we pledge ourselves anew to the maintenance of our public schools, both against the assaults of Secularism or political Atheism, on the one hand, and on the other hand against the ecclesiastical system which seeks, by a specious plan already in operation, according to the statement of one of the highest dignitaries of the system, in over one hundred schools in the Northwest, to make its own schools nominally the schools of the state, while they continue in reality to be sectarian schools that draw their support from the state; and that we renew our protest against the decision of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin declaring the Bible to be a sectarian book, the reading of which is consequently affirmed to be illegal in every school in that state; against the clause in the constitution of Idaho which prohibits the reading of the Bible in the public schools; and against the action of the boards of education in many cities and towns, excluding from the common schools the Bible and all religious exercises, and text-books inculcating religious ideas."

In other words: The National Reformers are determined that the public schools shall be Protestant schools, regardless of the equal rights of Catholics, Jews, and Freethinkers. This shows that they antagonize state-supported Catholic parochial schools not because they are on principle opposed to teaching religion at public expense, but because state-aided Catholic parochial schools would not propagate their kind of religion. They think that the people are too short-sighted to see that the public schools as they run them are simply Protestant parochial institutions. And their confidence in the blurred vision of the masses seems to be fairly well-founded.

"15. That we request the executive committee of the National Reform Association to send one or more agents to Washington to press at every opportune time, in co-operation with agents of other kindred reform organizations, any such bill or bills as may be before Congress in defense of our public schools, for the investigation or suppression of the drink traffic, or for divorce or any other Christian reform; that the committee labor as far as possible for the enactment of a national Sabbath law, and for the promotion of such an amendment to the national Constitution as will justify beyond all peradventure the declaration of our Supreme Court that 'this is a Christian nation;' and that in aid of this practical work the members of this convention pledge their active, prayerful, and financial aid."

What are Freethinkers prepared to do to neutralize at Washington the tireless efforts of the theocratic enemies of religious liberty? The question is one of present and vital importance. Congress is now in session. What are we going to do? Wait until nothing we can do will avail to turn back the tide of repressive legislation and Constitution-perverting adjudication? Churchly purpose is ambitious and everywhere-permeating; churchly performance will not be less vaulting and wide-reaching unless Freethinkers do their duty fearlessly and thoroughly. It is a matter of self-preservation. We must educate the people; we must fight with every legitimate weapon at our command.

This subject will be further considered.

Tyndall's Prayer Test.

Commenting upon the death of Professor Tyndall, the Voice remarks:

"His death brings back to mind his famous prayer test, by which he very foolishly insulted the sentiment of the religious public. He proposed to divide the patients in a hospital into two classes, treat each class exactly alike medicinally, and have those who believed in prayer pray for one class and not for the other, and see which class recovered first. Whether the proposition was meant as an insult or not, it was so construed, and very naturally so. The conflict between science and religion, which so raged thirty years ago, has happily been discovered by most thinking persons to be due chiefly to the incursions of scientists into theological fields, where they went generally astray, and of theologians into scientific fields, where they were equally astray. Professor Tyndall is to be judged as a scientist, not as a religious controversialist, and so judged his reputation will endure as long as the glaciers of the Alps, whose motion by regelation he so cleverly divined."

If Professor Tyndall's famous proposition did insult the religious sentiment of Christians, the reason must be sought in the irrationality of the sentiment rather than in the proposition itself. But what does the Voice mean by saying that the "religious sentiment" was insulted? In the first place, can a sentiment be insulted? Does not the Voice mean that the people who were dominated by the sentiment felt themselves to be insulted because the infallibility of their feeling was challenged? But if their faith in the efficacy of prayer had no other foundation than a vague sentiment which could not stand the rude shock of experiment, they were wise to decline to put their nostrum to the test of comparison. Still they should not have been insulted, for Professor Tyndall's offer was a tribute to their honesty of belief. It does not avail to say that such an experiment would have been derogatory to God. If prayer is what its advocates have always claimed it to be; if "Ask and ye shall receive" is indeed God's promise to his children, and if God is a man of his word, to speak humanly, and really loves sinners, he would have jumped at the chance to demonstrate the worth of prayer, the truth of Christianity, and his desire to save men and women from hell.

The utterances of the Voice indicate the present position of the more astute theologians. They find that it is suicidal to attack science and futile to attempt to reconcile science and the Bible. So they ignore, to the utmost extent possible, the irreconcilable antagonism between the two, contenting themselves with the declaration that they are two phases of God's truth, each of which is to be studied as something apart from the other. The statement that the scientists who have entered theological fields have generally gone astray is to be interpreted as meaning that the methods of scientific inquiry cannot be employed in the investigation of "religious truths." If an attempt is made to so employ them a "conflict between science and religion" is at once precipitated. Hence the anxiety of prudent theologians to keep scientific inquiry and religious exposition entirely separated. This attempt to educate the young in science and at the same time keep them from seeing the bearing the facts and laws of nature, as discovered and synthesized by modern science, have upon the dogmas of religion is foredoomed to failure. It may postpone but it cannot prevent the coming of the day of emancipation from theological guesswork. It is impossible to thoroughly train men in scientific methods and keep them in the Christian fold, unless Christianity parts with all its ancient savor, retaining only its name. And the process of elimination of erstwhile vital dogmas has already proceeded so far that the name Christianity is become a synonym for hypocrisy, so far as Protestantism is concerned. For this reason alone sincere students of science must shun it, as inevitably debasing to simple manhood and womanhood.

Agents Wanted.

We believe that not only can good be done but money made by any Liberal who will canvass for our book "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." In fact we know one man who worked at it but a few hours weekly and sold nearly fifty copies in a month. The price is low; everybody knows the Old Testament stories, and nearly everybody would like a book applying nineteenth-century wit and knowledge to them. People like to laugh. Reverence for the Old Testament tales has largely disappeared and jokes at the expense of Jonah and Joseph and Esau and Samson and David, and the other worthies of unsavory reputation, are keenly appreciated. It seems to us that the book will sell at sight. It does here in the store. Liberals out of employment will find this a good way to make an honest dollar.

Terms to agents sent upon application.

"We are asked by the Western Watchman whether we are serious in our treatment of the subject of the Roman Index, and whether we would keep "The Age of Reason" where a child could get his hand upon it? Well, no, we would not. We would exercise the right of private judgment."—Independent.

Whose right of private judgment, yours or the child's?

The United States has an extradition treaty with Russia, which is eminently proper in view of the fact that Russia still resorts to the torture in securing confessions. A late dispatch from that dark land says that "liberal application of the knout extorted a confession," and that "the others arrested were also subjected to terrible torture and the knout."

We do not wish to precipitate another panic or "object-lesson" upon the country, but it is perfectly true that there are a number of our subscribers whose time has expired who have not paid us. And it is perfectly true also that there are some people down-town to whom we owe money whom we have not paid. But it will be perfectly easy to even this thing up if those subscribers will stop at the post-office and buy a money order for $3 and mail it here. If they meet a neighbor on their way who doesn't take the paper but wants it, make the money order $5 and it goes for a year to both. But please remember that the down-town fellows here are hard up.

The Independent is not disposed to agree with some of its orthodox congeners in their contention that the assassination of Carter Harrison was God's reprisal upon Chicago for keeping the World's Fair open on Sunday. It says positively: "God does not instigate a crime to punish a sin." If God did not foreknow, and, foreknowing, did not wish and will this crime, what becomes of his omnipotence? Could he not have prevented the assassination? Why did he not prevent it if he knew it would be committed unless he intervened? If he did not know this, is not his knowledge limited? If his knowledge is limited, what is he but an enlarged man, wise and powerful, perhaps, yet so constrained by extraneous conditions that he is unable to foresee, or, foreseeing, to prevent, a crime which he loathes? The Independent's "heart" is all right in this instance, but its logic stumbles hopelessly.

"Lobengula sent three envoys to the white men's camp; two of them were slain, and the third narrowly escaped with his life. Lobengula's capital has been taken by the white men, who found the white traders and missionaries all protected by the king's order. Still, Lobengula is a bloodthirsty savage. There can be no doubt about it. The white men say so, and they are Christians. That's enough, isn't it? Who says no? Blasphemous wretch! To hell with him! And now let's get on with the slaughter."—London Freethinker.

And the London Spectator declares that the bloody conquests by the white race are not in conflict with the teachings of Jesus. In the work of "civilization" conflict is inevitable, it says, and the accompanying bloodshed is not to be regretted. Probably not, by Christians, but people of ordinary humanity would be sorry for the butchery of inferior races, even if they deemed it unavoidable. But the Christian is anything but a Christ-follower when it comes to the non-resistant teachings of Jesus.

In Pawnee, Illinois, the question of Bible reading in the schools came up through the action of the Catholic parents of thirteen children, who demanded that this sectarian instruction be discontinued. The directors requested the young woman who had been in the habit of opening the morning exercises in her room with Bible reading and prayer to stop the practice. This she refused to do. Then the Catholic parents threatened to appeal to the law, and upon this the school board consulted with State Superintendent Raab. He said that the state law merely guarantees religious freedom, and neither requires nor forbids Bible reading in the schools. Now the directors have decided to sustain the teacher. If the Catholics do not make a test case of this they will miss an excellent opportunity to get a legal decision regarding the meaning of the words "religious freedom" when embodied in a state bill of rights. Who has so little regard for truth and justice as to maintain that the state secures religious freedom to its citizens when it permits one sect to control the religious education of the children of all the people? State Superintendent Raab has been credited with more liberality of opinion, a clearer sense of justice, and a stiffer backbone than this Pawnee affair would indicate that he possesses.

"The higher criticism helps us to understand the Bible better, and to love it more, because it presents it to us as a human book, and God, not as apart from men, speaking through them as a fireman speaks through a speaking-trumpet, but in men, speaking through them as a teacher speaks through his pupil, or a father through his child. This is the message of the higher criticism: Not that there are errors in the Bible, but that it is a human book. True, if it is human, there are errors in it; but it is the humanity, not merely the errors, in the Bible which the higher criticism discloses to us. And this, its message, brings the Bible nearer, and makes its meaning clearer, and makes the divine life experienced by its writers, and transmitted through its pages to its readers, dearer and more sacred."—Outlook (formerly Christian Union).

We are pleased that our contemporary has so fully accepted the rational estimate of the Bible for which all scholarly Freethinkers have contended. True, it tries to save God by supposing that he speaks through the Bible writers, as the father speaks through his child, but it must soon be forced to admit that if this is so he is a very imperfect and a very human God who so speaks. Its simile carries a wider and more profound meaning than its orthodox readers will cognize. The God who speaks through the Bible penmen is Humanity, the father of us all, who was before the Gods and the Bibles, and who has made, now interprets, and will outlive them all. The Outlook at last perceives the truth that only those who hold the Bible as human and errant can understand it and be really benefited by it, as only the miner who knows which is gold and which inclosing rock can separate the former from the latter and make it of service to him.

How to Help The Truth Seeker

1. When renewing get a friend to subscribe and thus save a half dollar apiece.
2. Get your newsdealer to display it on his stand or in his shop window. Be sure that he displays the pictures.
3. Get your newsdealer to keep in stock one or more copies, with your guarantee to take off his hands at the end of the week any that remain unsold. If he exhibits them the pictures alone will sell them.
4. Take a few extra copies and circulate them among your acquaintances. On your request, we will send you back-number sample copies free.
5. Leave a copy occasionally where it will be picked up—in the train, in the factory, in the meeting room, in the cigar store, in the barber-shop. Leave it picture-side up.
6. Keep in your pocket some of our cheap tracts and when convenient hand one to a friend.
7. Get a new subscriber by persuading some friend to take it.

News and Notes.

Colonel Smart lectured before the Liberal Club on Friday, December 8th, on the "Relation of the State to the Schools," and it was quite an interesting discourse, with sound thoughts and pregnant suggestions. The colonel hasn't spoken upon the platform for eighteen years, but he still knows how to talk. He has a quiet, taking way of putting things that captured his audience; besides, he had something to say. The lecture was the result of much experience in the line of teaching and of the schools; and I hope that Colonel Smart will give this lecture whenever he can. It comes pat with the present agitation on the common school question. I haven't time in this short review to note all the fruitful matter of this lecture; but in the issue now before the people it is well to understand the true theory about the common school—what it should be as an educator of the masses. It should be a truly democratic school and cultivate the spirit of fraternity, not by set lessons, but constant influence. Besides the secularization of the schools insisted upon by the speaker as well as by all Liberals, two other points I wish specially to note as of first importance, namely, the abolition of the system of "cramming" and the "high school." Colonel Smart made these points perfectly plain. The "high school," sustained by the state, is a humbug—only three per cent. of the scholars attending the primary schools enter the high school, and only one per cent. graduate. It is not for the masses of the people, and yet the high school costs more than the primary schools. Concentrate all effort, give more teachers and more time to the primary school. That is what the people need.

The colonel's vivacious, and still somewhat imposing, way of expressing himself stirred up a good deal of thinking, and the discussion afterward was one of the most lively to which I have listened, and the audience was hugely delighted with the intellectual battle. Mrs. Burnz made two good points. First, that the spoken language should be taught as well as the written, the sounds as well as the letters. On this point there is very little training. Children do not understand the sounds of the language, only the words, and it is for this reason that there are so many poor readers. There isn't one good reader in a hundred of our scholars. Secondly, the spelling reform. Not one in a thousand can write a letter without being obliged to consult the dictionary. This is simply absurd. Why not spell by sounds? THE TRUTH SEEKER has begun this reform, sanctioned by the best scholars, and it is hoped that other journals will do the same. On the whole, this was one of the best meetings of the Liberal Club. The club is still alive. It has an illustrious history, and it keeps on the path of inquiry. It is one of the institutions of New York in which every Liberal should take a deep interest. It is a thought-awakener. Its lectures are good on every variety of topic, and its audiences are both critical and appreciative, and demand live speeches and clear ideas.

Sunday I am in Philadelphia, where I meet George Longford at his post, and the Liberal friends of this beautiful city. I lecture afternoon and evening to crowded houses. The "Rights of Man" and "Evolution and Creation" are the subjects. The discussions after the lecture are quite animating and add to the interest of the lecture. There is fine Liberal material in this city, and Longford and his associates have kept things on the move with persistency and hope, and the Quaker city is always a bright spot for the Secular Pilgrim. There is good welcome and good cheer all round. In the audience I was pleased to note Mr. Longshore, whose contributions to Liberal science and scholarship are so well known to the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Other friends, also, it was a pleasure again to meet in these familiar places, where Freethought has so long kept to the front. THE TRUTH SEEKER, the Investigator, the Freethinkers' Magazine, and the latest Liberal publications greet our eyes in tempting array. Also the picture of Mother Eve with her first baby, which is quite historical no doubt, and the portraits of Charles Darwin and Thomas Paine, presented to me with the pamphlet of the Assembly for Free Discussion on Religious, Political, and Scientific Subjects, and the compliments of George Longford, secretary. This shows the breadth of the association; that its platform is wide as the universe; that it wants the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. If Mother Eve was an ape it is no use to fret about it. We have advanced to Darwin and Paine and a bright future is before us, of which our far-off ancestor never dreamed, were she in orient forest or the garden of Eden. We will keep moving on to the music of that glorious sentence, "The world is my country, to do good my religion."

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Freethought Progress.

The Illinois branch of the American Anti-vivisection Society has issued the twentieth edition of the London address of Philip E. Peabody of Boston, with an introduction by Colonel Ingersoll.

The London Weekly Dispatch says that Rouen, France, which was formerly a city of churches and priests, has become sadly neglectful of both. The churches are still there, but most of them are little used, and the old fervor has wonderfully cooled. . . . Three hundred delegates and more, sent by 230 groups, attended the National Congress of the French Freethought Federation. The Federation was presented with a new hall by Deputy Hubbard. . . . The Independent reports that the vicar-general of the diocese of Cahors, France, has great difficulty "because of the perversity of the times," in finding a man to serve mass, and has been compelled to ask the Sacred Congregation of Rites at Rome if he can have recourse to the services of a woman for the responses.

The Jewish method of slaughtering by throat-cutting is denounced by Dr. J. Lawrence Hamilton, himself a Jew by birth, in a letter to London Vanity Fair: "To accept and applaud the dietary of the dirty, foul, filth-feeding, ancient Egyptians, whose senseless superstitions were accidentally adopted and incorporated into the Jewish ritual, and to state that these food laws are still superlatively superior to the up-to-date knowledge of modern scientists and food experts is ridiculous. One might as well consult Adam on agriculture, Cain on chemistry, Noah on navigation, Sara on the sewing machine, Moses on microbes," or Paul and Jesus on Religion. . . . The Rationalist Press Committee of England is distributing literature—in particular a prize essay, "The Practical Value of Christianity"—through the branches of the National Secular Society. . . . The Civil and Religious Liberty Extension Bill—a measure for making Freethought bequests legal—was read the first time in the House of Commons. . . . Rev. Dr. Fairbairn says that "there are not wanting signs that the church is seeking reconciliation with the working classes. But as yet there are no signs that the working classes are inclined to meet the church."

The Swedish Freethought champion, Viktor E. Lennstrand, is at the hospital Sofiahemmet yet. During his illness Fritänkaren is edited by Dr. Knut Wicksell. . . . "Matsägalser i Biblen" is the name of a pamphlet of forty-seven pages, dedicated by the author, Viktor E. Lennstrand, to the ministers, missionaries, and other Christians of Sweden. The work is divided into chapters, and contains self-contradictions about God, All Kinds of Contradictions, Dogmatic Contradictions, Historic Contradictions, Contradictions Concerning the Resurrection of Jesus, and closes with the genealogy of Christ, according to Matthew, Luke, and 1 Chronicles. . . . Viktor E. Lennstrand's "Disputationer med Komminister L. Meijer i Malmö och Kyrkoh. O. Nyman i Shepparslof" is also now ready. These discussions were taken down by an official stenographer, and are additional proof of the fact that a minister has no business debating with a representative Freethinker, unless he wishes to excite that sympathy and pity which all men give to the vanquished. The arguments and logic of Mr. Lennstrand give no chance of success for even a well-armed and learned champion of orthodoxy. . . . "Luceifer," 1893, Swedish, the workman's almanac, is in our hands. It is an excellent number, containing several good articles and numerous portraits. Among its contributors we note Viktor E. Lennstrand, Knut Wicksell, Anna B. Wicksell, and Galmer Branting.

Lectures and Meetings.

J. E. Rensburg will start on a tour through Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, and New England early in January.

DURING the month of December, Franklin Steiner will lecture in Correctionville, Pierson, Atlantic, Walnut, Carlisle, and other places in Iowa.

THE Science Sermons Society meets every Sunday evening at 7.45 o'clock in the lecture room of the Church of the Messiah, Park avenue, corner of 34th street. December 17th.—"Water, Its Place in Evolution," by Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Association holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of lectures for December: December 17th.—Dr. L. G. Janes, "Cosmic Evolution as Related to Ethics."

John R. Charlesworth is now in the West. The following appointments are on his list, and friends along the route desiring lectures should address him at once: Dec. 14, 15, 16, Waterloo, Ind. Dec. 17, Chicago, Ill.

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, will meet on and after October 17th in the Skerrett Building, northeast corner of Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock. Lectures for this month:

December 19th.—Prof. E. D. Cope, "The Material Relations of Sex."

THE Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York:

December 15th.—Edgar C. Beall, M.D., "Phrenology Scientifically Treated—With Readings."

THE Ohio Liberal Society meets in College Hall, 168½ Walnut street, Cincinnati, Sunday evenings at 7.45, prompt. Admission is free. Program:

December 17th.—G. Gordon Sattler, "The Miraculous,"

THE Pittsburg Secular Society meets in Curry University Hall, Sixth street, near Penn avenue, every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Communications.

The Giant Delusion.

PAPER READ AT THE INTERNATIONAL FREETHOUGHT CONGRESS AT CHICAGO, OCT. 5, 1893, BY OTTO WETTSTEIN.—CONCLUDED.

If a dual form inhabited the physical form (a natural impossibility) and survived the dissolution of the body, spiritists could prove it and analyze such form. And if all beings who have died now lived in duplicate form somewhere around us or off in space, we would know it and astronomers would discover such place of abode. But no such evidence exists.

There are no eternal forms in nature. Man is simply a form of matter. Hence man is not eternal.

I challenge the world to refute this argument—to prove that eternal forms exist, which implies miracle; beginning but no ending; birth but no death; eternal youth, perpetual motion, without wear and tear, and eternal statu quo, all without analogy in the economy of nature. I go further than this and insist that nothing exists per se but inorganic matter or the segregate atoms in infinite aggregation and these the only real immortal or eternal elements in nature. Man does not exist. Brutes do not exist. Houses, rocks, worlds, suns, and systems do not exist per se. Never did. All are but transient forms of greater or lesser aggregations of immutable elements which temporarily unite and then constitute all these diversified forms, but which by virtue of the inherent potencies in such elements or matter, no sooner evolve to maturity or perfection, when the slow process of disintegration begins, resolving back into their respective atoms all such transient forms; but these possessing all the necessary physical and chemical attributes to evolve again and again into new forms, thus perpetuating, by evolution and involution, such formation processes forever. Thus the end, death, of all finite forms is an inexorable necessity in nature, to insure the eternal existence, life, of the infinite eternal whole.

To illustrate: The pyramids do not exist. Never did. Certain forms composed of certain aggregations of matter we call the "pyramids." But such forms at one time were not, and consequently some time in the future will not be. What begins must end. The stone which constitutes the huge piles does not exist. The only actual underlying reality of this and all other forms, is the matter which, in aggregation, constitutes such forms. Remove the matter composing the stones, and where would the pyramids be? At one time in the past these forms called pyramids were not. Then enormous quantities of mutable stone, composed of certain immutable elements or atoms, were placed in a certain position, forming (not creating) what we know as the pyramids. But after this building process was consummated, not a particle of matter was created or added to existing entities. And when nature, maybe millions of years before, by fortuitous concurrence of atoms or chemical affinity formed the stone from pre-existing elements, even then not a grain was added to the sum total of existing eternal matter—only a certain quantity of matter was transformed into certain forms we call "stone." These forms—stone, pyramids, Columbian Exposition (I regret to say), worlds, systems, and man—all at one time were not, and consequently in due course of time and in the order of natural events, when nature shall have accomplished its work of evolution, involution, and disintegration, such forms will of an inexorable necessity again vanish from existence, their components, however, perpetuating such formation processes forever.

There is absolutely no analogy in nature for an immortal form or proof that matter ever evolves into certain forms, which then remain in eternal statu quo. But this is what spiritism, both ancient and modern, of all schools and countries, implies. It means beginning of certain forms, then stand still, eternal sameness, eternal youth, miracle, sudden transition from imperfect or decrepit physical form to angelic perfection. (Nobody claims that peg-legs, glass eyes, false teeth, crutches, cripples, bald heads, monstrosities, fat freaks or lean freaks will retain their hideous characteristics during all eternity!) It implies miraculous restoration to full vigor of manhood, to the full flush of maiden or womanhood, of the aged and withered. Restoration of limbs, noses, ears, hair, teeth, and often even old clothes, canes, spectacles, and jewelry! Then perpetual youth, vigor, golden hair, sound teeth, and—in the opinions of some more rational than others—even the addition of a pair of wings! Then eternal sameness forever! If not miracle, what is it?

As stated before, man is simply a form of matter. Remove this matter and he is no more. Born in time, he must end in time. Did you ever admire the beautiful forms in a complex kaleidoscope? If kept in motion it will ever exhibit new forms, composed of the old, which have vanished forever. But suppose we remove the material composing such forms one by one to perpetuate such forms, how long before such material would be all absorbed by such special forms? Then behold! No more kaleidoscope. So the universe would not exist to-day if only one solitary atom had been taken away daily from the infinite aggregation of worlds and been made into such special eternal forms, because such processes, having already been in operation during all eternity and from all existing worlds, past and present, would, of course, have exhausted the supply of raw material to make "souls" of even an eternity ago!

Man is purely a physical result of purely physical causes, and, consequently, is subject to some order of nature which peremptorily decrees that, like all other transient forms which are born or begin, he must die or end. Others have died before him that he may live, so he must die that others may live after him.

Have we any proof that mind is ever manifest in the absence of physical organism? Have we ever heard, has anyone ever claimed to have heard or known of the existence of any soul or spirit not first born by woman? No? Spiritists have claimed to have seen the spirits of Christ, Cæsar, Washington, Stonewall Jackson (horse, saddle, boots, stirrups, and all!), and innumerable other dead men, all born by woman, but not one has ever had the audacity or cunning to pretend to have seen or made the acquaintance of spirits not of animal or rather human origin. And there is where they have made a stupendous oversight. All of which proves that mind, or so-called soul or spirit, originates with and exists synchronical only with the physical body. It proves conclusively that such mind is a function, product, or process of this complex vital-electromagnetic animal organism only, and is manifested by or produced and generated from such organism, and must cease when such organism is no more. Body and mind are cause and effect. In one sense mind is an evolution like the body. The animal organism in its crudest form is an invisible cell, sack, or stomach. In this crude organism a certain chemical process occurs. It assimilates food which is agreeable to its existence and creates a pleasurable sensation. ("How?" Let spiritists explain how their disembodied spirits enjoy sensations or experience pain, and then the problem of mind will be solved, but—without spirits!) This sensation causes the crude animal to struggle to obtain more food—this develops mind. The new-born Spencer or Humboldt has a stomach. The first mouthful of food it draws from the "fountain of life" creates a pleasurable sensation. It partakes until the cravings of the stomach cease. Soon this food is assimilated. It craves more food. It remembers and struggles again and again to gratify its appetite. This process gradually develops mind, and thus it becomes plain that mind is literally dependent upon a stomach.

But it is not my intention, nor is it in my power, to shed new light upon the mysterious relations of body and mind, but only to prove that the spirit hypothesis does not solve the problem, and that without such physical body mind does not originate, exist, continue, or survive. Also that of all profound mysteries such spirit-bodies, in the abstract, cap the climax of profound mysteries, and that they are utterly beyond human comprehension and scientific analysis.

Do you insist that the physique of a Humboldt does not explain his colossal intellect? Place his spirit-body, which you assume exists within his physical body, beside the latter, if in the power of your imagination, then please tell me how much nearer you are to explain his mind in conjunction with such spirit, or this spirit's mind, than in the physical body alone. Do you insist on a spirit within his physical body during life to explain his psychical powers, then, by parity of reasoning, you are compelled to conjecture or conjure another such spirit inside of this spirit to explain this spirit's mind, and another in this, and so on ad infinitum; and when you are through calling up "spirits from the vasty deep" of nothing and from nowhere, how much nearer are you then to explain mind? Do you know how these spirits think, do you know how such spirit-bodies can see, feel, hear, and remember? Or have you simply divested the most complex form in nature (an automatic mechanism bewildering in its complicated and delicate construction, and of capacities far beyond our present knowledge and which no doubt is the source and basis of all psychical phenomena); have you divested this form of all potentialities to feel, think, and reason and have complacently invested an "airy nothing" or ghosts with miraculous powers to do it instead? Sadly, however, failing to explain your explanation, a la Theists, who have divested nature of and invested an imaginary God with miraculous powers to create all natural phenomena!

Mind is a function of a living animal organism. When the body dies and is buried or cremated, such functions cannot continue, or we posit a miracle. What is a spirit body? What are its constituents? Has it anatomy, organs, flesh, blood, nerves—all essential to continued life? How does it survive bullet shots, decapitations, or dynamite explosions? To be a spirit and all it implies, it must be organic—a counterpart of man, internal and external, or our departed spirit relatives can hardly be wife, husband, mother, father, or child to us and all it implies, when we meet them by and by. How do spirits see without eyes? hear without ears? breathe without lungs, live without circulating fluid and organs, and think without a nervous system and brains? All these are consigned to the grave and destruction. Are these organs—the entire anatomy—for a purpose? Is physiology a science or a farce? Is phrenology based upon fact or fiction? Are these organs, nerves, etc., for something or nothing? Are they a necessity to the life and existence of man? If such necessity during the brief career of man on earth, how in the name of reason can he exist during all the ages of endless time without them?

Some facts about life and mind cannot yet be explained, but I insist, the spirit hypothesis infinitely complicates the mystery. As we gain nothing by positing a God, involving all the mysteries of nature in addition to those of his own being, so we positively gain nothing by assuming a dual-form in man to explain psychical phenomena, which again involves us in identical mystifications. Rather let us seek the explanation in the crowning work of nature—the human body—then we have at least a tangible basis for mind, mesmerism, hypnotism, clairvoyance, and memory, which latter faculty permits us to soar through space in imagination at least, if not in bodily form.

As a God—an Omnipotent Being—is a natural impossibility in omnipresent nature, so a dual-body within man is an absolute impossibility. Both God and spirits—to be such and all it implies—must be organic animal forms—but when you find such forms, they are never God or spirits!

But it is insisted that both nature and psychical phenomena can be explained only on the basis of a God and spirits, and, consequently, both theories must be correct. But if such explanations involve the analytical mind in infinitely greater complications, logic and reason certainly bid us to discard them. Furthermore, as something cannot spring from nothing, this proves conclusively that a God is not needed to create that which was never created or to rule that which rules itself. Also, as there is absolutely not a shadow of proof of actual spirit existence, as such abstract spirit existence cannot be analyzed, dissected, or resolved into tangible component parts, and upon close analysis vanishes or explodes like a soap-bubble, such "airy nothing" cannot be reasonably accepted as the basis of any phenomena whatever; and therefore the only rational conclusion is, that if we continue our researches faithfully, discarding all preconceived notions, we shall, no doubt, find the true source of all such phenomena, and of all so-called spirit-manifestations, in the wonderful, subtle, and complex form of man.

I insist it is infinitely more difficult for spiritists to scientifically establish spirit existence, or place abstract spirit upon a scientific basis, than for others to explain the modus operandi of so-called spirit manifestations. How many mediums, once indorsed by the entire spiritistic world, have not been exposed? How many manifestations accepted to day as truth will not be rejected to-morrow as fraud? But it is not my duty to explain such phenomena. Spiritists affirming, upon them devolves the burden of proof; and unless such proof—placing abstract spirit upon a scientific basis—is forthcoming, all phenomena based upon such hypothesis must be relegated to the repertoire of the theurgist or vendor of legerdemain.

Conditions favoring so-called spirit phenomena always favor fraud. Why are oil paintings or crayon drawings made in a few moments behind drapery, or on the surface of a canvas reverse from the spectators, but never in plain view of the audience? Because these conditions favor fraud. Why can spirits write between two slates under a table, but not simply on one slate on the table in plain view? Because such conditions favor fraud. Why can spirits play a guitar when hidden by a single board of the cabinet, but never unless so hidden? Because the board supplies the condition favoring fraud. Why is darkness a necessary condition to all successful "seances"? Because it favors fraud. Why can spirits do so many things man cannot do (?), but not do the simplest things man can do? Does this not imply fraud? Conditions—except those favoring fraud—in all these cases would be practically identical.

If spiritism were true we would know it. Both an infinite spirit and human spirits would make their presence known in methods alike plain to all and without the aid of preacher or medium. But now, without preachers, we would know nothing of God—without mediums, nothing of spirits. Hence the only knowledge we have is of the existence of preachers and mediums, all the rest is conjecture and faith. And for this the world pays a tremendous price! If spiritism were true all would worship the same God and all would know whether spirits remain in the body till resurrection day, go to purgatory on approval, or soar at once, frail and nude, to the spirit world. All would agree on the characteristics of God—all would know his place of abode and that of human spirits. All would agree whether spirits can come back and commune with mortals or not, whether animals are immortal, and whether reincarnation is a fact or fiction. The all-important problem, how the spirit of a departed wife can hover lovingly around her surviving husband after he has taken unto himself a second, third, or fourth wife, and yet be eternally happy in the sweet by and by, would then, no doubt, also be solved to the entire satisfaction of the husband and all the wives concerned. As it is, we are sadly left in the dark, as the testimony concerning these vital subjects is as conflicting as the opinions concerning God of the several representatives at the great Parliament of Religions.

I thoroughly appreciate that these views differ radically from those held by many of my best friends and by many noble men and women who have enthusiastically unfurled the grand banner of Freethought in the conflict with superstition. But as they have taken the liberty to repudiate the religion of their fathers and neighbors, so they must grant me the privilege boldly to repudiate the last vestige of that superstition they still indorse. In denouncing some of the phenomena as fraud I must not be understood as insinuating that the vast body of Spiritualists are dishonest; on the contrary, I believe they are honest men and women, confident that their motives are sincere, and that if they will continue to investigate closer and keener and continue to attend our meetings or read our papers they are on the correct road to salvation.

Let us then differ on minor subjects as we may, but unite our energy, wealth, and talent to place morality upon a natural basis, scatter our literature of common sense liberally throughout the world, support our papers and lecturers as freely as the Christian does his, and we will soon emerge from our present obscure position and become the leading factor in civilizing the world and consummate the only possible unification of the human race on the basis and by the means of Freethought, Science, and Reason.

In Memoriam.

On Wednesday, November 29th, I received this message from my old friend, Mr. N. D. Goodell, of Sacramento:

DEAR MR. PUTNAM: I have sad news to tell you. Our mutual friend and brother, Owen T. Davies, passed over the river of death. He died yesterday at his home, in peace and happiness. He was sick but little more than a week. He called on me about four weeks ago, and he was then as happy and vigorous as ever. He was always a whole-souled man, and we have certainly lost one of the best friends to our cause.

Later on Mr. Butterfield sent the following:

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 25, 1898.

S. P. PUTNAM, Dear Sir: Herewith I send you the address of C. P. Massey at the funeral of our friend, O. T. Davies, who passed to his long rest on Wednesday, November 22d, at 11 P.M., after a short illness of fourteen days. He was himself until the last moment. He did not fear death, nor have any regrets for the life he had lived. He passed away without a struggle. On taking a last look at the remains, I could not realize that my friend Davies was asleep in death. He looked just as if he was sleeping, with a smile upon his countenance, as in a dream.

Dr. W. W. Light says that he counted one hundred and thirty vehicles in line going to the grave. I must say in truth I never saw so many people attending a country funeral. Mr. Davies had many friends, both far and near.

Mr. J. H. Atkins made some good remarks before Mr. Massey spoke. The greater part of Atkins's discourse was from Freethought authors.

The following gentlemen, intimate friends of the deceased, acted as pall-bearers: R. Butterfield, N. D. Goodell, Dr. W. W. Light, J. H. Atkins, A. Goldberg, T. Jenkins.

J. H. Atkins, an old friend of Mr. Davies, delivered a brief address. He said that he had known the deceased brother for about twenty-five years. "Though younger in years than he was," said Mr. Atkins, "I am older in Liberalism or Freethought, and I took great interest in his emancipation from superstition to reason. He was a man of great reasoning powers. In regard to the theory of life, he said, using the language of Pope:

Whate'er of life all quick'ning ether keeps,
Or breathes through air, or shoots beneath the deeps,
Or pours profuse on earth, one nature feeds
The vital flame, and swells the genial seeds.

"The bubble of life with him has broken; but though we shall never see his corporeal substance again, his memory is enshrined in our hearts. Let us all try to emulate his good deeds."

Rev. C. P. Massey, a Unitarian minister, officiated, and in the course of his remarks paid the following tribute to the memory of a worthy man:

With Mr. Davies in his lifetime I did not chance to be acquainted, but from the testimony which has been given to me by his companions and intimates, I feel that I am justified in saying that in his business and social and family relations he has met the requirements of honesty and generosity; and that now, when his mortal career is ended, he goes, crowned with years and clothed with integrity as a garment, to meet the mysteries of the beyond.

Yesterday morning, when a son of Mr. Davies, in company with another gentleman, waited upon me, to solicit my presence here this afternoon, I inquired as to Mr. Davies's religious belief. I was informed that of late years Mr. Davies had discarded all technical faith, having long since cut loose from any church anchorage whatever. And I understood that I was selected to serve upon this occasion for the reason that, as a Liberal minister, I might be more sympathetic regarding such a religious attitude than some gentleman attached to one of the orthodox Christian denominations, who might not be able to understand how essential integrity and great moral and intellectual elevation can accompany a denial of many of the positive tenets of faith.

For myself I will say that, while still clinging to the church, reverencing its forms and treasuring its associations, it still, in many of its organizations, represents the medievalism of Rome and teaches the exploded beliefs of earlier centuries, so that many a man of frank and earnest nature, with intellect keenly alive to its incongruous position in this age, when the foundations of so many technical faiths are crumbling to the earth, scorns all compromise in his dealings with what he believes to be essentially insincere, and absents himself forever from its worship.

Mr. Davies thought, doubtless, as many of us are forced to think, that, in the old historic and theological way, the church, upon all questions bearing upon God and the future, has no positive testimony to give. It may be possible, although I do not know, that your friend dwelt too much upon the negative aspect of the question of religious faith, and, in his enthusiasm for truth, emphasized too greatly the unknown and the unknowable in the domain of belief.

I can imagine how the moral nature of a man in its essential integrity should become strengthened by such a course, how in scorning all subterfuge and in being unwilling to swerve one particle from the direct path of truth, as truth is conceived by him, a character of impregnable virtue would come gradually to be built. And I take it that such a character as this your friend exhibited, self-reliant and truthful, just and firm.

Some things you may regret in him, the lack of qualities that soften conviction, and touch thought with imagined spiritual suggestion, but if he was simply and entirely sincere, if he was just and kind, if his word was his bond, making his integrity unassailable, it matters not what faith or doubt he held; by his faith, Mr. Davies will be saved, his faith in that moral order regulating this world of ours, a moral order which resents every assault upon it, with punishment sometimes, even unto death.

The doubt Mr. Davies entertained will have no adverse bearing upon his eternal fortune; it was an honest doubt, better far, perhaps, than half the creeds; but such faith as he did possess, the belief in human affection, the conviction of the importance of the practice of virtue, the insistence upon truth in every relation of life, will save him eternally, as these have ever saved him here.

But let us not insist too greatly upon the negative aspects of religious subjects. The veriest doubter entertains some faith. It may be felt at times to be illusory, but it is not regarded finally as a delusion. Our affections, some how, seem destined to endure. Generosity and justice seem to us to merit more than our own approval or that of our fellows; and the practice of them appears to place us in alliance with some infinitesimal and eternal power, in whose protection, if we would only adjust our conduct to its high demands, we are safe here, and safe forever.

This is the faith the higher poets of our modern age proclaim most loudly from their signal towers, and Whittier, perhaps, expresses it more truly and more beautifully than any other, when he sings:

For truth must live with truth, self-sacrifice
Seek out its great allies,
Good must find good by gravitation sure,
And love with love endure.

Mr. Davies was one of the first men I met in California, and the first thing he did was to hand me $50 for the Liberal cause. He was generous in his contributions. He was a staunch supporter of Freethought, and stood by it to the end. He was vice-president of the California Liberal Union. He never kept his convictions to himself. He was frank in their utterance. He thought matters out for himself. He was a great student of the Bible, the result of his Mormon training, and he was a thorough master of its contents, and could use them to the discomfiture of his theological opponents. He was always ready for an intellectual battle. He was enthusiastic in his Freethought sentiments, and his life illustrated the honesty and nobility of Liberal ideas.

Mr. Owen Thomas Davies was born in South Wales, Great Britain, Feb. 7, 1820. He left Liverpool Oct. 17, 1850, for America. He landed at New Orleans November 23d of the same year. He went to St. Louis and engaged in coal mining, and afterwards to Caseville, Ill., where he pursued the same business. His invention, which lessens the dangers of mining, is used to this day at the latter place.

He left Caseville, Ill., in April, 1854, and went to Salt Lake City; but he remained but a little while in this place or in the Mormon faith. From this time on he was a Freethinker. He came to California July 4, 1856, and settled at Brighton, Sacramento county, where he has resided ever since, adding both by his labors and his inventions to the prosperity of the country. Mr. Davies possessed a fine mechanical genius, and as a practical farmer was successful in contriving means to cultivate and improve the lands.

He was an honor to our cause and his memory will be cherished. He has done his duty well. He has never flinched. He was an original character, and carved out his own fortune by his energy and ability. He was a typical pioneer—free, liberal, independent, bold, and forward looking; a representative citizen, a helpful neighbor, and a kind father and husband; a man of genius in his way, who was ready to live and ready to die as an honest man and a brave thinker. May the flowers bloom over his grave in sweet remembrance of his many virtues.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Affirmation or Oath, Which?

One thing that cannot be too strongly urged upon individual Liberals, and upon which energetic work should be done by the Federation, is the substitution of affirmation for swearing.

As long as Liberals consent to be sworn, so long must they take to witness their reputation for truth and veracity a god or some other superstition in which they do not believe. And if they do not believe in the god they call to witness, what is the use in calling him to witness?

If anyone can tell the truth as well after taking a hypocritical oath as though he really believed if he lied an angry god would destroy him, what valid reason can be advanced that the swearing superstition should not be done away with and the simple affirmation substituted?

Upon this question the Constitution of the United States is, as its noble architects intended, broad as any Liberal could wish, as the following will show: Paragraph 8, Section 1, Article II: "Before he [the President] enters on the execution of his office, he shall take the following oath or affirmation: 'I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will,' etc. And Paragraph 3, Article VI: "The senators and representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several state legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several states, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

Italics are mine.

If persons desire to affirm instead of swearing there are not a great many states at present which will deny them this right, upon their declaring that they wish to do so from conscientious scruples. Let all Liberals then exercise this right whenever opportunity offers; and let them remember that if affirmation is insisted on, and the one insisting on it states that it is done from conscientious scruples, no person has a right to inquire deeper or more closely into what those conscientious scruples consist of. Also let the Freethought Federation of America take up this subject, prepare a list of the states, territories, and counties within its jurisdiction which do and do not allow affirmation, and carry the war into the enemy's country. Let us have equal rights!

As bearing upon this subject the Central Law Journal, published in St. Louis, Mo., Vol. 20, page 281 (April 10, 1885), says:

In several of the states of the Union, whose statute books are still encumbered by the accumulated superstitions of the Middle Ages, the rule of the ancient common law exists making such exclusions [of the testimony of Infidels, Atheists, and Agnostics]. It is so in Pennsylvania, unless there has been a recent change. It is so in Massachusetts, a state which is unsurpassed by any state in the Union in the diffusion of culture among its inhabitants, and which probably has more Atheists, Infidels, and Agnostics per capita among its population than any other state in the Union. A bill, the effect of which was to allow Infidels, Atheists, and Agnostics to testify in the courts of that state, was recently defeated in its legislature. According to newspaper reports the vote in the senate stood twenty-two against the bill to ten for it. When we think of this bill in the Massachusetts senate, we feel like saying, "Poor, old, narrow-contracted, hide-bound, bigoted, Middle-Aged, antediluvian, crustacean, superstitious, puritanical, praise-God-barebones, hew-Agag-hip-and-high, zeal-of-the-land-busy, I-am-better-than-thou, Massachusetts."

Liberal publications please copy.

A. B. LENNOX,

Freethought and Secular Notes from England.

It is my present intention to send a communication once a month to THE TRUTH SEEKER, which will contain "Notes" on the position and progress of Secularism and Freethought in England. It will be observed that the terms—Secularism and Freethought—are both used, for the reason that in my opinion the two words do not mean precisely the same thing. The former always includes the latter, but frequently Freethinking is to be found where Secular principles are not observed. Moreover, in England, as in America, Freethought is an active factor where Secularism is not even professed. Freethought indicates the mental condition of one who can honestly surrender views that do not harmonize with increased knowledge. Secularism goes further than this, inasmuch as it supplies ideas, based upon purely mundane considerations, which will replace the notions that have been discarded. In these "Notes" I shall report events that occur in each of these departments in the Old Country, hoping that what is recorded may prove interesting and instructive to the thousands of readers of this journal in the great republic of America.

In England the spread of Freethought manifests itself in many new circles. It is no longer confined to one section of the community, but its power permeates society in general. Its influence has ceased to be limited to Secular associations or to depend for its propagation and defense on the pens and tongues of a few daring spirits—men who for years have courageously stood alone against the mighty hosts of the Lord. A few years ago the Christian denominations thought that it was sufficient to put forward one champion for the purpose of silencing at least all public advocates of Secularism. Experience, however, taught them that the task they had undertaken was more difficult by far than they anticipated, hence an army of theological Daniels rushed forward as defenders of the faith. But where are they now? The arena of debate is almost entirely abandoned by these defenders. Controversy in magazines has taken the place of free and open discussion on the platform. It is impossible to induce representative clergymen now to debate with us. The few laymen, or hard-up parsons, who occasionally try their hand at discussion, are not worth naming, for they are not even supported by their own people, while their manners on the platform are not such as recommend their cause to persons of intelligence. It must not be inferred, by this change of front upon the part of the orthodox, that Secularists are ignored. The truth is, we never commanded so much public attention as we do at the present time. Not only at church congresses, but also at Dissenting conferences, papers are read on "Secularism, and How to Deal With It." But the successful "how" has not yet been discovered by these servants of the Lord. Still, the fact of theologians being in arms, who yet dare not fight, shows their weakness. It is also a proof that our efforts are being recognized among people beyond the sound of our own voices. The progress of the Freethought movement could not be gauged by a higher standard than this, it being of much greater importance than any estimate of our own.

Freethought is also active in the pulpits here as it is in the United States. Scarcely a Sunday passes but what some minister from his pulpit makes mention of the progress of skepticism and of the advocacy of Secular principles in "Christian England." And many of those very preachers, who once denounced Sunday lectures when given by us, now lecture upon secular subjects themselves, instead of preaching, as they did in former times, from texts of scripture. They are even confronted in their Bible classes with doubts and queries which defy answering, put by men who are known to be "Infidels;" but the minister dare not denounce them as such, as would have been the case in former times. Voltaire and Paine are no longer held up as scarecrows in the presence of reading men and women. If some of the old-fashioned Christians were to reappear at the present time in some of our churches on Sundays they would be astonished at a flaming placard announcing, "An address to men only; with special music. The tenor or bass of some cathedral will give a solo from the 'Messiah'!" These performances are regularly advertised side by side with those of theaters and music halls. Then we have Sunday societies, under whose auspices lectures, with music and limelight views, are regularly given on the "Lord's day." They do not supply sermons or prayers, neither do they dispense with laughter and applause. Thus the secular plan of making Sunday a free and enjoyable day is adopted instead of maintaining the old orthodox method of rendering it one of gloom, groaning, and praying. So great has the power of Freethought become in the church that its ministers are frequently announcing their change of views and leaving the congregations to which for years they have been attached. Two instances have just occurred here in the Midland district. The Rev. Mr. Sale, a Congregational minister, has resigned his office as preacher through having studied the foundation of his faith. He has discovered that if one God cannot save him neither can three. Now he announces himself as a "Free Christian." The Rev. J. H. Chamberlain has also left the Methodist denomination, to which he has belonged from his childhood, and has joined the Christadelphians. In his published reasons "Why I Left the Methodist Ministry," he observes: "I know that many thoughtful persons in orthodox circles are seriously disturbed and dissatisfied, unable to find mental repose in their traditional belief. I know that my case is only one of many, as far as theological uneasiness is concerned. There is much uncertainty and misgiving in the ministerial world." Thus the very foundation of the theological fabric is giving way from within, and a brighter day of mental freedom is dawning.

Similar progress is apparent in other directions. Freethought literature now circulates without legal interference and in quantities that were unheard of in the past history of England. Moreover it is no longer confined to publications by avowed Freethought publishers, who, in former times, risked having their goods confiscated when parsondom ruled through the medium of the magistrates. The extensive sale of secular literature was the burden of complaint made at a great church congress just held in Birmingham. It was there stated that Freethought sentiments are found in high-class books which are considered "respectable" enough to find a place in fashionable drawing-rooms. The fact is, there is an ever-increasing quantity of Freethought and scientific literature published under the name of Agnosticism. This is dealing a fatal blow at the influence of theological publications in England. A striking instance of the power of Freethought literature is afforded in the recent appearance of some remarkable books by Professor Johnson, who was formerly a Christian minister. After many years of extensive research he announces his belief that the Bible and many of the so-called ancient ecclesiastical writings are of comparatively recent origin. He is unable to trace them further back than about the sixteenth century. According to his contention, they were produced in Europe and not in Eastern countries. It will be seen that he presents a stronger case against the authenticity of Christian records than any previous writer has ever done. Of course he has given up his pulpit and many of his former friends have deserted him. Unfortunately, in the history of human thought, the fate of the originator of new ideas has seldom been otherwise than his. Even to day, men in many instances are fettered in their associations with those who doubt the correctness of church "histories." Freethought propagandism is still necessary as a means of testing the popular theological pretensions, however sacred they are supposed to be. No doubt Professor Johnson's indictment is a bold one, but the duty of the searcher for truth is to examine the evidence upon which it rests. It is a very old device to denounce and persecute the man who has the courage of his heretical opinions instead of testing whether they are true or not. Galileo and Darwin are instances that opinions of the most ancient type, which once were deemed accurate, may be discovered to be palpably and absolutely erroneous.

The Birmingham Church Congress, referred to above, lasted a whole week, and $30,000 were spent upon its arrangements. It was a curious assembly of "loving" Christians. The adherents of the High Church hissed the Low and Broad Church folks, who returned the compliment with interest. To us the amusing feature was the manifestation of malice and ill-will in a congress held for the avowed purpose of promoting "the union of Christians." In spite of this exhibition of pious wrath, Canon Gore, the "heretical" editor of Lux Mundi, had a splendid reception, while his violent opponent and orthodox detractor—Father Ignatius—was suppressed by the president of the Congress. There was much talk about the relation of "the poor workingman" to the national church. It was intimated by one clergyman that there was a place in heaven for all the laborers in the city, only it required the church to prepare them to occupy the position. This appears to be a reckless statement, when we remember that the people are so many and that the churches are so few. Nine-tenths of the inhabitants of the city keep outside the church, either from want of inclination to enter, or from some other cause. One speaker thought that he had solved the question, after the fashion of Mohammed and the mountain. He said "if the work-people would not come to the church, the clergy must take the church to them." This is easier said than done. Supposing it were possible to convey the church to the working classes, in all probability the intelligent portion thereof would have nothing to do with it. They have learned by a bitter experience that the church, instead of being their friend, has been and still is their foe, counseling obedience and contentment under social wrongs and political injustice. The mode the Congress dealt with the social problem—how to remove poverty, ignorance, misery, and crime—indicated that the church is no real helper in the present deplorable social condition of the masses. The principal suggestion offered was, that the rich members of the community should subscribe a fund to maintain an increased staff of parsons to visit the poor folks and dispense the love of God and the bread of life in the person of his only son. It is true that some speakers urged the necessity of such adjuncts as coal, soup, and blankets; but these, it was assumed, must be given under the pious control of the church. Here we have the old priestly plan of seeking to obtain supremacy over the poor through the pangs of their poverty. The acceptance of religion is considered by these preachers to be of the first importance, while the satisfying of the material wants of the people is deemed as being worthy only of secondary consideration. The spirit of the age is opposed to such clerical monopoly. Benevolence is not necessarily allied with any form of theology; the one is a human aspiration and the other is a priestly invention.

There has been much talk in England during the last few years of what is called "Christian Socialism." Its advocacy dates back to the first quarter of the present century, but recently it has come to the front more prominently than at any previous time. It is now publicly asserted that it is only Christianity that can bring about a successful social revolution which can be of any practical service to the community. In a recent debate that took place in the columns of the Daily Chronicle, one of our leading London newspapers, it was contended that Jesus was the originator and the prophet of the Socialism of to day. Jesus was declared to be the herald proclaiming the liberation of the land from private ownership, the elevation of the poor, the downfall of the rich, and the triumph of democratic equality throughout the world! We regard this as one of the great delusions of the age. So far as history is concerned there is no evidence that Jesus instituted "all things in common," or that he formed any society or organization for the solution of the problems of capital and labor. He himself apparently lived on his friends, and he gave distinct instructions to his successors to depend upon the public wherever they went. His disciples were to make no provision for their personal wants, and to carry with them neither "purse nor script." Moreover, Jesus never expressed any desire for the social well-being of man in this world, or intimated that such was either possible or necessary. To call a man a Socialist who held the most conservative and exclusive Jewish notions of his time is a misnomer. We cannot forget his references to "the children" and to the "Samaritans." Even admitting his sympathy for the poor and his denunciations of the rich, the fact remains that the issues were not to be reached on earth, but in heaven. He made no effort to remove the two great evils of his time—poverty and slavery. What history records the continuity of any social scheme that he inaugurated? Christian Socialism is a modern invention, based upon a questionable application of certain texts of scripture. But Shakspeare has said that the devil could quote scripture to suit his purpose.

Although there is still room for improvement in the Secular movement in England, the progress it has made during the last few years is exceedingly gratifying. The National Secular Society is stronger and in a better condition in every way than it has ever been. It was my privilege to be present at its formation, and I have watched its developments, and I am pleased to record that it is now in a most flourishing position. Its president, Mr. G. W. Foote, has lately made a new departure at the Hall of Science, London, by having admission free, seats being reserved for paying visitors. The new plan has proved hitherto successful, and the financial result has been about equal to the former income. The great advantage, however, is that this new arrangement allows opponents to hear the Free-thought gospel without charge. Another important change recently made is the doubling the price of the Freethinker, and giving cartoons and portraits on superior paper. It is pleasing to note that advancing the price has not reduced the circulation of what is now the leading Free-thought journal in England. A new monthly, entitled the Free Review, has been started by Mr. J. M. Robertson, the late editor of the National Reformer, which was so long conducted by Mr. Bradlaugh. The interest in Mr. Bradlaugh's great personality secured for his paper a wide circulation, which could not be sustained after his death, therefore it had to be discontinued.

Another indication of progress on this side of the Atlantic is the letting of public halls by town councils or by other responsible officials of various institutions. This is not yet the universal rule, as our orthodox opponents do their best to prevent us hiring those buildings. The plan adopted by them is to intimidate the landlord by urging that it is illegal to take money at lectures given on Sundays. Hence proprietors of halls dread a prosecution, and we have simply, as a rule, to make a collection, and in some instances to suppress discussion. On Sunday, November 12th, I lectured in the Town Hall, Birmingham, to an audience that numbered over two thousand persons, but admission had to be free, and no discussion was permitted by the authorities who had control over the hall. The National Secular Society, however, is determined to defeat this Christian bigotry by having halls of its own under the control of the Secular party. A hall company has been started in London for the purpose of securing the Hall of Science, wherein Mr. Bradlaugh really made his reputation. The great success this company has met with justifies the belief that the time is not far distant when efforts will be made to have Secular halls in all the larger towns in England and Scotland.

There is a general desire among English Secularists to have a better communication with their Secular brethren of other countries. There are thousands of Freethinkers in America, Canada, New Zealand, Australia, France, and Spain, but as yet we have but comparatively little intercommunication with them, and we are only partially acquainted with the proceedings of our co-workers in these different countries. Is it not possible by some means to have official correspondents to supply interesting and reliable information pertaining to each nationality? I should be pleased to read the opinions of some of the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER upon this important subject.

CHARLES WATTS.

Observations.

Somewhere in this city, between Harlem and the Battery, exists Mr. Fritz Schmidt, who, at an undefined period in the past, wrote an Article and forwarded it to THE TRUTH SEEKER office. The article has not as yet bulged forth in print, as Mr. Schmidt thought it would.

The fact is, that for about two weeks pneumonia has confined the Editor of this journal to his bed, where he has been adorned with a bladder full of cracked ice on his brain and with hot and moist cloths on his superheated person; and all this time the author alluded to has been making epistolary demands for the return of his manuscript. I don't know where it is; nobody but the Editor ever knew where it was put, and he has forgotten. Mr. Schmidt now writes, under a special delivery stamp: "Evidently politeness has no effect upon you. I will now see whether 'The Law' can have any. If my article is not immediately returned to me, I shall bring up against you a suit for damages. I have the money, the brains, and the will to do so. I have at my disposal one of 'the best lawyers' in New York." The loss of many hundreds of dollars to the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER is foreshadowed by the correspondent in case the above suit is "brought up against" him.

I hereby notify Mr. Schmidt that he is out of order, that he is ignorant of the amenities of the case, and that his proceedings are irregular. If he has a grievance, why doesn't he follow custom, and call at the office, ask if the Editor is healed and warn him to fix himself. Of course the Editor would summon his myrmidons and have Mr.

Schmidt placed on the sidewalk, where a police officer, with a padded front and an unpadded club, would take cognizance of him; but the code would be observed, Mr. Schmidt's honor vindicated, and himself abated as a nuisance. As for the Editor, he could avenge himself by digging up Mr. Schmidt's manuscript and publishing it over the author's signature.

The worship of the Spook according to the faith of Islam is upon us and the voice of the muezzin is heard in the land. Last Sunday morning at 10 of the clock a man wearing the red cap of a Turk appeared in the door of Union Square Hall, turned his face toward the east, and offered the following remarks:

God is great! God is great! God is great! God is great!

I bear witness that there is no god but God.
I bear witness that Mohammed is the apostle of God.
Come to prayers! Come to prayers! Come to salvation!

Prayer is better than sleep!
God is great! God is great!
There is no god but God! There is no god but God!

There being no corrections to be made, this may stand approved as read. There is no god but God, and, comparatively speaking, there is no other character in fiction worth naming.

A mimeographed work entitled "The Danse du Ventre (Dance of the Abdomen): Its Value as an Educator in Marital Duties," by Ida C. Craddock, has just come to my notice.* I was at first somewhat surprised that an unmarried lady, as Miss Craddock is popularly supposed to be, should assume the function of an instructor in conjugal amenities, as I could hardly imagine that she would know much about the root of the matter herself; but a detached slip, accompanying the work here discussed, explains her conduct. From this it appears that Miss Craddock is not single, though her husband is in the world beyond the grave, and had been for many years previous to their union, "which took place in October, 1892." Still, notwithstanding that Mr. Craddock, as he may be called for convenience, is in the spirit world, the lady testifies that their union is as real and actual and physical as though he were around the house bodily all the time, day and night. In fact, she thinks very few marriages turn out as well as hers has. It is true that Mr. Craddock does not light the fire in the morning and put on the tea-kettle, nor does he pay for rents, groceries, or dry-goods; and they are not keeping house or raising a family, but in other ways which married people will readily call to mind it is a bona fide marriage. It is monogamous on her part, and on his likewise for anything she suspects, which is often the situation where both parties live in this world.

Owing to her year's experience in wedded life, Miss Craddock is enabled to give husbands and wives a great deal more information than I could, although I have been married ever since '88 and have had the care of an infant son more or less for the past three years. Such is the advantage of having a conjugal mate in heaven instead of on the Pacific coast, where I have resided.

The danse du ventre, as Miss Craddock interprets it, teaches the married a valuable lesson, which is, that whereas the performer stops dancing before she drops dead, therefore the rule is a good one to follow in other departments of life. To our authoress the six tassels worn by the dancer are symbolic, and the serpent about her waist also, as anyone whose mind runs that way will not fail to understand. Still the symbols are capable of other interpretations; for instance, each tassel might represent the cork of a bottle, the reptil around the waist suggesting snakes. The admirable discretion of the dancer in desisting before she drops dead teaches the citizen to quit before he falls down.

This is a skeptical world, not inclined to believe that every meaning injected into a dance was really intended to be expressed by the inventor of such saltatory exercise. The dance of the abdomen may be the outward and visible part of a whole system of philosophy, but it is proper to remember that it may not. As for spirit husbands, they are no new fad. It is recorded that in the year 1671, one Mary Alacocque, a pious French female, having experienced a cataleptic attack, immured herself in a convent and became a bride of Christ. While there she wrote:

Our Lord showed me that that day was the day of our spiritual betrothal; he afterwards made me understand that he wished me to taste all that was most sweet in the tender caresses of his love. In fact, these divine caresses were so overpowering that they made me quite beside myself, and rendered me almost incapable of any physical exertion; and it was a subject of such strange embarrassment to me that I dared not show myself.

* For sale by the author at 1032-34 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa. Price, 50 cents.

Physicians have a name for these derangements, and say that they are susceptible of adjustment by judicious means. An agreeable person of the opposite sex, and the services of some official empowered to perform the marriage ceremony, have been prescribed with gratifying results. A living character should be selected. Let the dead marry the dead.

GEORGE E. MACDONALD.

Professor Tyndall.

John Tyndall was born at Leighlin Bridge, Ireland, Aug. 21, 1820. His parents were of English descent, and were religious; they wished him to prepare for the ministry, but their means were quite limited and they could give him only an ordinary school education. He had a natural taste for geometry. Physical science did not attract him until later in life. He left school in 1839 and joined the Irish Ordnance Survey, becoming a draughtsman and surveyor. Later he went to England in connection with the same work. He now thought of emigrating to America, but accepted, instead, a place as locomotive engineer, where he remained three years. Losing his savings through unfortunate stock speculations, he returned to his engine and his studies, having taken up the latter while on the Ordnance Survey.

When he took his hand from the throttle it was to enter Queenswood College, Hampshire, as instructor in physics. Here he found a warm friend in Dr. Edward Frankland. In 1848 he accompanied Frankland to Germany and heard lectures from Stegmann on mathematics, Bunsen on chemistry, and Erling and Knobloch on physics. In conjunction with the latter Mr. Tyndall conducted experiments in line with the then recent discoveries of Faraday, determining the polarity of the diamagnetic force, etc. Feeling the need of recreation, he went to the Alps in 1849. He went for rest, but pursued his studies with increasing ardor. In studying the glaciers, he was the first man to scale the Weiss-horn. He made researches upon the movements of the Mer de Glace, and established a series of thermometric stations on Mont Blanc. He revisited the Alps regularly for twenty years. He published "The Glaciers of the Alps" in 1860. Professor Tyndall had graduated from Marburg in 1851, and upon his return to England Faraday succeeded in having him elected a Fellow of the Royal Society. The next year he was admitted to membership in the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and was soon given the chair of natural philosophy. Just before he had received these honors the University of Toronto refused him a chair, as it did Huxley. Upon the death of Faraday he was made superintendent of the Royal Institute.

In 1870 he went to Algiers to witness a solar eclipse, and two years later he came to America on a lecture tour. The net proceeds of his lectures, $10,000, he placed in the hands of a committee of American scientists, to be used to help students who devoted themselves to original research. While here he wrote to the Contemporary Review, and enclosed a letter from a friend suggesting that one ward of a hospital be made the special object of prayer for a number of years, and the result compared with that in the same ward in previous years when it had not had the benefit of prayer. This common-sense proposition earned him the hatred of the advocates of the prayer panacea.

Professor Tyndall devoted many years to original investigations of radiant heat, gaseous conductivity, properties of sound, and the germ theory.

Of the remarkable scientific discoveries of the last half century he ranked easily first the law of the conservation of energy, next evolution, and third, spectrum analysis.

Professor Tyndall was a clear, pleasant, and instructive scientific writer, who did very much to make scientific knowledge the property of the common people. He has left us a large number of valuable works, and in them he lives, though dead.

Letters of Friends.

Of Course He Doesn't Like to Be With- out It.

KALAMAZOO, MICH., Nov. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5 to renew my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER and for "Paine's Great Works Complete." I have taken the paper a number of years, and don't like to be without it.

JAMES P. FORBES.

The Retort Courteous and Conclusiv.

MR. EDITOR: "H. C. R.," in his article in THE TRUTH SEEKER, of December 2d, gives evidence that he is thinking; but he seems to be a little confused yet. For instance, he says:

"To the dictums of Moses, 'Thou shalt not kill,' and 'Thou shalt not steal,' we should add, 'under penalty of death,' leaving no mythical loophole through which to crawl to glory. We should have the Confucian exhortation enforced: 'Do nothing unto others that you would not have others do to you.'"

Would he have others inflict the death penalty upon him? A. A. ORCUTT.

Proclamations Will Not Banish Poverty.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: To-day I inclose to you $5 to apply on indebtedness—due to THE TRUTH SEEKER, that is spreading the light its founder, D. M. Bennett, ignited years ago, and am happy to see it is made to blaze and shed its effulgence in thousands of homes, and help disperse the darkness that beclouds their mental sky.

Watson Heston's "Thanksgiving Object Lesson" is the most forcible argument I've yet seen. It gives a true and living picture of the real condition of things that has existed and exists to-day, and it ought to be convincing of the utter worthlessness of any "proclamation" from the president down to the governors of the various states to observe any day and give thanks to any God or gods. The foolishness of such action must be apparent to all who think.

This city is besieged with tramps—tramps who are willing to work but find no work to do. Justice Mulholland sends from one to seven tramps to the penitentiary [jail?] every day—a charitable refuge for the poor during the cold winter months. Crime and poverty stalk abroad in our city. Fully five thousand men here are without employment—great opportunity for charity. Putnam School building will be turned into a lodging-house for the poor, and the city gives fifteen-cent meal-tickets for the Salvation Army restaurant. The poor are sick, dying, and dead in the Seventh and Fifth wards. Poverty implores the gods for relief, and it comes slowly; yet "God is happy," "the angels sing," and "God doeth all things well." Bah!

Truly yours, ROBERT R. JONES.

Man Made in the "Image" of An Omnipotent God.

NEW LONDON, CONN., Nov. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to say through the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER (for the information of the Freethought family at large) that I have been doing a little bit of missionary work here in New London, but owing to the weight of public opinion against me it has been rather up-hill work; but I do not despair of doing some effective work. I have induced one preacher to read John E. Remsburg's "Bible Morals," and got him to make some admissions that are rather damaging to the Methodist cause, but in return I had to promise to go to his church. I went, and paid particular attention to his sermon, which was not altogether as orthodox as I had expected. He said that scientific men were saying that matter has always existed, and that evolution had worked out everything to its present state of perfection; he said he believed it, but then he added that there was a God to direct the course of evolution, for which I took him in hand in this wise: "How do you know that there is a God at the helm of nature?" He replied that he could feel him and see him in everything around us. Then I asked him how it was possible that man was made in the image of God and yet God could be everywhere and in all things? That was a stunner he could not answer, but he was honest enough to say he could not tell. He had defined an Agnostic as an ignoramus, and before I got through with him I made him admit that he was an Agnostic—an ignoramus!

The churches here have been raising a fund for the foreign mission, but if they would take the advice that I gave them they would distribute it among their own poor, who are unable to purchase clothing and food sufficient to keep out cold and hunger. It is strange how the people interest themselves in the religious welfare of a few naked savages, when there are so many of our own flesh and blood who are clothed in filthy rags and have to live on the refuse of the tables of more fortunate people. I have offered a plan to be followed on the day set aside for prayer: Instead of going to the churches and offering up long-winded prayers to we know not what, we should take our baskets, filled with good things, and hunt up poor persons who will not be able to otherwise obtain Thanksgiving dinners, and make them happy. And I said that all the prayers they could offer to their triple-headed God would not fill one empty stomach or clothe one naked body.

Please hand my name in for membership in the Federation. SAMUEL B. PRICE.

"The Universal Church of Archeans."

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Oct. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I beg to inform the gentleman who lives on the famous isle across the sea that there are great efforts being made in the "City of Brotherly Love" to bring into existence a "church," in the organization and constitution of which eternal principles shall have precedence over and above debatable theories and dogmas, and in which deeds are recognized above creeds, acts above professions, etc. "Religious liberty" is the watchword of this new church, and a person's character and actions, not his beliefs and professions, receive cognition—what he does, not what he believes, is counted, and the doors of this church or society are open alike to Atheist and Theist as well as the Agnostic, Spiritist, Pantheist, Theosophist, Christian, or Jew. It declares that "Religion is being, not believing;" that "Heaven is earned, not hired," whether it be realized in this world or in some other. Its religion is, "to do good;" its gospel, intelligence, industry, and integrity; its message, to mankind, "Do your duty." It is to be an industrial, economic body, and asks for more work and less talk, more practical action and less effusion from reformers. There are thousands advocating a condition where justice would secure all against adversity and starvation, but are not willing to do a hand's turn to secure those blessings to themselves and their posterity until a time when the people shall have become thoroughly enlightened and developed (which may not be for generations), but prefer to go on in suffering and anxiety and then growl about it—totally regardless of the welfare of their little children. It is this work that this church wishes to perform first, and then it will be not only ready but able to help others to help themselves. It may not be many years before this church will reach the shores or realm of England, and then our brother across the ocean may have an opportunity to work for that which he advocates and much more. The church above referred to is known as "The Universal Church of Archeans."

J. S. EATO

A Modern Rams' Horn Miracle.

NORTH YAKIMA, WASH., Nov. 26, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As the van of the noble army of faithful and fearless defenders of the honest few against the hypocritical, superstitious, and intolerant many, and the ever bold and vigilant champion of mental freedom and equal physical rights, I readily and cheerfully recognize your splendid journal. Its healthful influence is constantly spreading and ever increasing, and I, with thousands of others, earnestly hope and honestly believe the time is comparatively near when the walls of bigotry and superstition—dank with the putrid breath of licentious priests, fetid with the foul emanations of a myriad chained heretics, and blackened with the smoke of countless burning martyrs to honest doubt and quenchless reason—will tumble into irremediable ruin before the vibrating and persistent blasts of the rams' horns of justice and liberty.

Reforms never retrograde, and this warfare is for the right, and must never cease, and no quarter can be asked or given till state and church are completely and forever divorced, and the goddess of justice is permanently enthroned at the capitol of the nation and of every state as well.

If my prose proves worthy of space in your columns, perhaps the subjoined "poetry" may keep it company:

Ne'er sheathe the sword of justice,
Nor let the arms grow weak
That bear the torch of reason
For those who freedom seek,

Till prelate, priest, and preacher
The lesson fully learn:
Who'd live in ease and comfort
Themselves the means must earn.

If the everlasting dropping
Of "Peter's pence" would cease,
The soft skinned, unctuous parsons
Would rapidly decrease.

If every "foreign mission"
Were banished from the earth,
Of holy, lying mendicants
There'd be a healthy dearth.

If youthful minds were guided
Long reason's lighted path,
Instead of taught to tremble
At black Jehovah's wrath,

There'd be more honest dealings,
Fewer hypocrites and knaves,
More stalwart sons of freedom,
Less daughters born of slaves.

If every "house of worship"
Were turned into a school,
Where each inquiring pupil
Were taught the Golden Rule;

Where faith and fears and dogmas
Were banished from the brain,
And superstitious worship
Were learned to be in vain;

Where virtue, love, and justice
Were made to take the place
Of myth and mist and miracle,
To save the human race;

Then would men pay oblation
At reason's glowing shrine,
And hail the God of nature
The only one divine.

GARY H. MOULTON.

Too Much "I Don't Know" Concerning God and Future Life.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 4, 1893

MR. EDITOR: Will you permit me to briefly criticize the critics? (I know you will, but this introduction is pro forma.) I have heard and read the utterances and expressions of so many of our popular Freethinkers during the last ten years to the effect that, while the existence of a personal God and the possibility of a "hereafter" could not be asserted from facts or sound logic, neither could they be absolutely denied. Ingersoll "does not know," and is willing to take his chances as to the state of future rewards and punishments. Putnam, in THE TRUTH SEEKER of the 25th ult., observes: "As to where we are going, no man knoweth unto this day." So it is, as far as my experience goes, all along the line. Presumption in the Christ-man is so disgusting to a Liberal man that the latter seems to consider it a virtue to oppose it with professed utter ignorance.

Now, I cannot believe in the honesty of our critics. To be sure, I measure them by my selfish standard. Ingersoll and Putnam, and you and I, know absolutely that there is no God and that there is no hell, heaven, nor hereafter. And we can prove it, too. Perhaps not unto the satisfaction of a fool or the conversion of a bigot, but fools and bigots are not supposed in the jury box. We know who made God and the other accessories of priestcraft, and we know the process by which the present Christian civilization (?) was evolved. We know also that we successfully negatived any proposition by disproving the alleged facts on which it depends. Freethought has advanced too far, it seems to me, to longer say to the deluded follower of myths, fables, and lies: "Well, you may be right; I don't know, but I know I can't believe your dogma." I recognize that evidence is not proof, and that exact expression in the English language is almost impossible.

If Putnam knows where a fagot goeth when consigned to the furnace, he knows where we are going. If Ingersoll can prove that there is no "Chris Kringle," he can prove there is no God. But everything should be based on reason, and the common-sense principle (universally acknowledged, I believe) that the burden of proof rests on the party affirming, applies. For some time past those who assert that there is a God and a hereafter have adduced arguments to support their assertions. Unless new matter be introduced by them, it is sufficient to successfully combat their evidence. I do not anticipate any new matter from their side. To my mind this is the situation: A prisoner establishes an alibi; he proves the negative—that he was not at the scene.

If any considerable number of intelligent men and women substantially coincide with me, I regard myself as entirely justified in asserting that our oracles do not tell the whole truth. Only charity would excuse me for adopting their policy and holding: Perhaps they do not know, but I believe they do. T. B. CONNER.

The Dying Atheist.

FALMOUTH, N. S., Nov. 25, 1893.

Leave me alone! I am sick of your prayers and your tears;

I will die as I have lived, whether guilty or just.

I have fought for my faith through a lifetime of wearisome years,
And will stand by it now till this body dissolve into dust.

"Do I not shrink from death?" No; why should I fear to die,
When I know that death ends all and the grave is the only goal?
When I know that eternal life is but an eternal lie,
And the dust alone is immortal in nature and not the soul?

You may picture the horrors of hell, you may pray and preach and plead,
But your faith will scarcely quicken the cold gray stone and the sod.
With my dying voice I will mock at your cant and your creed,
And cry with my latest breath that there is no God.

Hark, how the mighty wind howls! Is the voice of the Almighty there,
Or is it the crash of the elements waging eternal strife?

That warfare that summoned the Universe up from the realms of air
And peopled the myriad planets with this that we call life.

You would blacken with superstition the beauty of Nature's work;
You would startle the peace of death with your dreams of a life to come;
The half-hearted faith of the faithless may call it "a leap in the dark."
But I die in the hope I have lived by and look for repose in the tomb.

"I was a preacher once?" Oh, yes! I could rail with the best,
And consigned the accursed unbeliever to death and eternal pain;
But falsehood has fled before reason, like clouds with the wind in the west,
And I know that your fears are but follies and I know that your faith is in vain.

If your God in his infinit mercy made man and has made him to sin
And provided a torment eternal for those whom he called into birth,
Let me suffer with those who may suffer;
I care not how soon it begin,
He bows to no tyrant of heaven who bowed to no tyrant of earth.

Return to your flock; you may tell them—
This dust will be cold in the tomb;
No tongue will be near to dispute it, no thoughtful voice to deny—

That the Atheist cried to his God for the comfort that would not come;
That he prayed too late for pardon, and trembled and feared to die.

Stand back! let the pure breath of Nature blow in on my fever-scorched brow;
The lights grow dim in the distance; the moon has gone from the skies.

What power shall scatter the darkness that stoops to encompass me now?
Oh, welcome, thou slumber eternal! Behold how the Atheist dies.

W. P. LAWRENCE.

Infidelity in Southern California.

ELSINORE, CAL., Dec. 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: F. H. Heald, attorney-at-law in Elsinore, met us at the railroad station, two miles away, with carriage. A quiet, Quaker-like gentleman is Mr. Heald, and his daughter Edna, who is but eighteen, and already making her mark as a poetess of great promise, is a highly-refined, freethinking young woman, with the courage of a Mary Wollstonecraft.

Next day Mr. Heald and daughter, Mrs. J., and self took a carriage drive of twenty-six miles completely around Lake Elsinore; visited alfalfa fields, prune, orange, lemon, pomegranate, apricot, and fig orchards; walked over the twenty-four-acre orchards of Mr. Yates; took dinner with old friends whom I knew at Shenandoah, Ia., Mr. and Mrs. Farnham, when I held my debate with Elder Dungan—the best, most gentlemanly debater the Campbellites have. Mr. Farnham owns ninety acres near the lake—orange grove, lemons, etc. He has a fine cement reservoir near the mountain side. Mrs. Farnham is a splendid woman. I regret they have not fifty years longer to live.

I wish to mention something of the Freethought outlook here. Candidly, it is not encouraging. The little Freethought society is struggling against great odds. The opposition to it is of the most bigoted and unreasoning stamp I ever knew. Even the school children are infected with holy hate. The brand of piety in Elsinore is as mean as was that of Massachusetts in her Cotton-Mather-Christianity-witch-hunting times.

Mr. Heald is the "Father of Elsinore." He is a young man of forty; his town less than ten years old. Why Christians should hate this Jesus-like, gentlemanly Freethinker I cannot tell—nor can they, as far as I am able to learn. Within ten years he has been a millionaire. Litigation and Christian love have tried to lay him low. If Christians here manifest the "spirit of Christ," then I know what it is like—it is simply devilish. Mrs. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Styffe, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Reynolds, of Elsinore; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Reynolds, of Manifee; Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds, of Temecula; Mr. Wright, and Mr. Park were out to the lectures. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham came a thirty-mile carriage-drive from Riverside. They would like to live here with our Elsinore Liberals, and will visit us whenever we have lectures. Our society will have to grow (from the outside world, by accretion) before we can expect to hold regular meetings, and perhaps it will never be necessary for Liberals generally to hold meetings every Sunday. Liberals do not need to be meetingized continuously like Christian sheep. Teaching, more than preaching, will be the new order. Science offers a boundless field for Freethinkers to explore. Science, literature, and art will take the place of the "foolishness of preaching." By the way, "Society of Science, Literature, and Art" is the name of this tiny organization of Liberals in Elsinore. Young and feeble as the child is, it has earned the contempt of the church, which sneeringly asserts that the name is too grand for its size! But Mr. Heald has more science in his head, and more artistic taste, than ninety and nine of the Elsinore evangelicals. The Liberals readily admit that the Society's name embraces a wider field of knowledge than they will ever be able to acquire; while the saints of Zion have such narrow and shallow creeds that they need to grow but a trifle to discover they have not a dud which they have not outgrown. The joke is, they try to make us believe that their old Jew second-hand clothes are fashionable!

I do not know how this venture will terminate. I am to address the people whenever I feel like it. This will be our home. The climate is superb. Other families are coming here to locate. By my arrangement with the Elsinore people I am at liberty to accept calls for lectures anywhere between the two oceans. I cannot consent, not yet, to tie myself down to any one locality while thousands of my fellow-beings are hungering for Freethought.

Elsinore, Cal., is my address, and I will say to Californians, for the present, that if you desire Liberal, radical lectures I will come and give them. W. F. JAMIESON.

Joseph E. Huffman—Funeral Address.

[Mr. Joseph E. Huffman died in Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 26, 1893. Being a firm Freethinker, he declared that no clergyman should officiate at his funeral, and when first taken ill made a request that in case of his death, Mr. Franklin Steiner should deliver an address at the burial. Mr. Huffman was a member of the Woodmen's order, which came out in full force, making the funeral a very large one. Mr. Steiner delivered the following eulogy:]

MY FRIENDS: After a painful illness, lasting several weeks, our friend and brother, Joseph Huffman, passed from the scenes of life. We are here assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to one whom we all knew only to love and admire, and to express our profound sympathy for those whom the hand of death has robbed of a kind husband and father, stricken down by disease in the prime of his manhood.

We realize that death is a mighty monarch. All must one day bow down before his shrine. The most powerful must submit to his decree. Before him the weakest creature in the universe stands upon an equality with the most powerful. It takes the father from his fireside, the mother from her dear ones, and the children from the homes where they were a perpetual joy.

Death brings grief to the heart, and hot tears to the eyes, when we think that we will see no more those whom the ties of affection made dear to us in life. Yet we should be made to realize that however irreparable our loss, to him who is suffering from the pains and tortures of a disease that is incurable, and which renders life itself intolerable, death comes indeed as a welcome visitor. When we know that he whom we mourn to-day is free from the suffering which life imposed upon him, there is a beam of joy in the thought that death, many times an angel of mercy, came to his relief.

The heart may cease to beat, the mind cease to perform its functions, and the body moulder into dust, but the power and influence of the man of good deeds and noble thoughts is greater in death than in life. Behold the mighty dead of past ages, those who strove to make the world better, and improve the condition of their fellow-men. Did death cover the light they shed upon the race? By no means. Their acts and words live to-day, an inspiration to humanity to complete the work they left unfinished, and to proclaim new truths that they were not permitted to know.

Joseph Huffman was a man who made the world better by his life. While we regret that he has not lived longer, we can rejoice that he was permitted to be among us, as a neighbor and a friend. Honest, manly, true to his convictions, he bravely stood the test of true manhood. He suffered as but few have, but he endured with a composure that would have done honor to a stoic.

Our friend lived for this world. He knew of no other. He believed all that could be required of anyone was to faithfully fulfill his obligations to his fellow-men. Having done this, he had nothing to fear in death. How well can we here call to mind the words of the poet:

So live
That when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, that moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death, Thou go not, like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

After all, it is the life, and not death, that should concern us most.

Joseph Huffman was a soldier in the great army of human progress. He rejected the creeds of the world as relics of the ignorance and fears of man while yet in a savage state. His eyes were ever turned toward the dawn of the age of reason, when superstition should no longer curse the world, all strife be ended, and the brotherhood of man established. By this he was joined to the greatest minds of the past and the present, and he now shares their immortality, the immortality of the poet, the sage, and the philosopher, who, though dead, live in their works.

To him a future life was a mere matter of speculation. He had no knowledge of personal existence after death, but he knew that we are unable to fathom all the mysteries of the world and of life. He never dogmatized upon this great question. It has been said by the greatest of living orators, "We do not know whether death is a wall or a door." Our friend is now where all doubts have vanished. With him the great problem of immortality is settled. To us it is still a mystery.

We are about to consign his body to the earth, there to sleep the sleep of nature, unmindful of the blasts of winter, or the bright freshness of the spring time. As we take a last look at his features, now peacefully reposing before us, we say:

Forever and forever a long farewell,
If we should meet again, why, then we shall smile,
If not, this parting was well made.

May his last resting-place ever be a sacred spot, and over his grave the flowers give forth their sweetest odors, and the birds sing their sweetest songs.

An Adventist Talks to His Sunday-Law-Enforcing Fellow-Christians.

SAN PEDRO, CAL., Nov. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Of the clergy I would ask: What day do you recognize as the Sabbath? One would infer from your claims and arguments that Sunday is the Sabbath. No, brothers, you are mistaken; Sunday is Constantine's day. What was Constantine? Why, he was a heathen, a sun-worshiper; also the emperor of Rome. He ignored the great and all-wise God's divine law of the Sabbath and instituted Sunday as the Sabbath; hence the people are compelled by law to keep Sunday as the Sabbath. It is wrong to so delude the people and to preach up such a false doctrine. If you take the Bible for authority, God's law must be obeyed. An apostate church will unite with the powers of earth and hell to place upon the forehead or in the hand the mark of the beast, and prevail upon the children of God (the Seventh-day Adventists) to worship the beast and his image. They seek to compel them to renounce their allegiance to God's law and yield homage to the papacy. The savior says: "Blessed are they that do his [i. e., God the Father's ten] Commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city" (Rev. xxii, 14). But where is that Commandment that speaks about Sunday? It is not in the Bible, but it is in the Roman Catholic catechisms. Read your Bibles through a hundred times with reference to this subject and you will each time become more and more convinced of the truthfulness of the following notable facts:

1. There is no divine command for Sunday observance.
2. There is not the least hint of a Sunday institution.
3. Christ never changed God's Sabbath to Sunday.
4. He never observed Sunday as the Sabbath.
5. The Apostles never kept Sunday as the Sabbath.
6. There is no prophecy that Sunday would ever take the place of the Sabbath.
7. The word Sunday never occurs in the Bible.

8. Neither God, Christ, angels, nor inspired men, have ever said one word in favor of Sunday as a holy day.—G. W. A.

God made the Sabbath at creation (Gen. ii, 2, 3; Ex. xx, 11).

It was observed before the law was given on Sinai (Ex. xvi, 23-30).

The command to observe it is associated with nine moral precepts which are binding upon all men during all time. It is placed in the bosom of unchangeable law (Ex. xx, 8-11).

It is a sign between God and his people (Ex. xxxi, 17; Eze. xx, 20).

Wrath came upon ancient Israel for breaking the Sabbath (Neh. xiii, 15-18).

If the Sabbath had been kept Jerusalem would not have been destroyed (Jer. xvii, 24, 25).

Prophecy foretells a reform on the Sabbath (Isa. lviii, 12-14).

The Sabbath will exist in the new earth (Isa. lxvi).

Christ observed the Sabbath (Mark i, 21).

He called himself its Lord (Mark ii, 28). It was his "custom" to preach on that day (Luke iv).

The disciples "rested" on the Sabbath while Christ was lying in the grave (Luke xxiii, 56).

Matthew, Mark, and Luke, who wrote after the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ, spoke familiarly of the Sabbath as an existing institution (Matt. xxiv, 20, 28, 1; Mark xvi, 1; Luke xxiii, 56).

It was Paul's "manner" to make the Sabbath a preaching day (Acts xvii, 2).

The "gentile" believers also observed the Sabbath (Acts xiii, 42, 44).

Paul preached by a "river side" where there was no synagogue, on the Sabbath (Acts xvi, 13).

He reasoned in the synagogue at Corinth "every Sabbath" (Acts xviii, 4).

He continued there a year and six months (78 Sabbaths) "teaching the word of God" (Acts xviii, 11).

Finally, in the last mention of the Bible, it is called the "Lord's day" (Rev. i, 10. Compare this text with Ex. xx, 10; Isa. lviii, 13; Mark ii, 28).

And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it; because that in it he had rested from all work which God created and made (Gen. ii, 2, 3).

Ye shall keep the Sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you. Everyone that defileth it shall surely be put to death; for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut from among his people. Six days may work be done; but in the seventh is the Sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord: whosoever doeth any work in the Sabbath day he shall surely be put to death (Ex. xxxi, 14, 15).

God claimed the seventh day as his own in many scriptures and at many different times. He never so claimed the first day, but gave it to man for labor.

He blessed and sanctified the seventh day; he neither blessed nor sanctified the first day.

He commanded that the seventh day be kept holy; he never commanded anyone to keep the first day. There is but one commandment in the Bible for a weekly Sabbath, and that is for the seventh day.

God uttered fearful threatenings against those who profane the seventh day. He has spoken nothing against laboring on the first day.

He has given great and precious promises to those who keep holy the seventh day; he has not spoken one word of promise or blessing for keeping the first day.

Everything that is necessary to give importance to the day—that is calculated to induce a proper observance of the day—is produced in favor of the seventh day. But nothing of this kind can be produced in favor of the first day—no sanctity, no commandment, no penalty, no blessing.—J. H. W.

The Bible tells us that "sin is the transgression of the law" (1 John iii, 4). But what law do we "transgress" when we work on Sunday? If the reader will find a text which says, "Thou shalt do no work on the first day of the week," or "Remember Sunday to keep it holy," or its equivalent, then will his Sunday observance in place of God's Sabbath stand the test of the judgment; otherwise it will not. Will you consider this point?—G. W. A.

Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter:

Fear God and keep his Commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil (Eccles. xii, 13, 14).

Blessed are they that do his Commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. The word of the Lord endureth forever (Rev. xxii, 14).

Will Sunday-law-enforcers obey God?

Respectfully yours, N. A. STEVENS

A SECULAR MARRIAGE AND FUNERAL RITUAL

AND COLLECTION OF SECULAR HYMNS.

By A. R. AYRES.

"A good book written with a purpose."

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Children's Corner.

Edited by Miss Susan H. Wixon, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

He Wrote for All.

"The world is cruel, careless, cold,"
I sighed, "and cares for naught but gold!
Why should my troubled pages plead
A brother's woe—a brother's need!"

"My song is drowned in Mammon's roar"
(I flung my pen upon the floor),
"The hand that fortune stoops to bless Must crush the buds of tenderness."

My toddling wee one put the pen
Into my trembling hand again;
And, clambering upon my knee,
Said, archly: "Papa, write for me."

I wrote—a homely, childish tale
Of hope and love—no pensive wail
Of others' wrongs—but what her smile
Had awakened in my heart the while.

And when the ink had scarcely dried,
I heard the song on every side;
It filled the land from sea to sea,
While thousands cried, "He wrote for me!"

J. S.

Some Answers.

The school board education of to-day is not a failure. A day or two ago a government inspector visited a south London school, and the following vive voce examination was overheard:

Inspector (to class of girls): Why is America called the New World?

Bright Pupil: Please, sir, because it was made last.

Inspector: No, no; it was discovered last. Who found it?

First Girl: Our teachers.

Second Girl (triumphantly): Governess.

Third Girl (desperately): Why, the inspector!

Their youthful minds could not imagine an authority higher than the "government inspector," and the name of Columbus fell very flat, and was greeted with murmurs of "Who's he?"

Miseries of Exclusiveness.

First Little Girl: Your folks is sort o' exclusiv, isn't you?

Second Little Girl: Awfully. Mamma won't let me 'sociate with little girls who isn't exclusiv, and I don't like it, 'cause they is always just as pokey as I am.

Correspondence.

DORA, Mo., Nov. 28, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This my second attempt to write to the Corner. I was fourteen years old yesterday. Next Thursday is Thanksgiving; we are intending to have turkey, and also a good time. Our school closed last week, but will begin again in about two weeks.

I like to go to school so much. I study higher arithmetic, history, civil government, grammar, physiology, and spelling. As my letter is getting long, I will close.

CLARA FISCHER.

[Learn all you can. Education is the best treasure in the world. Combined with common sense, it is of great help.—Ed. C. C.]

FRUITLAND, CAL., Nov. 14, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As I see but few letters in the Corner, I will write again. One day, while working at my claim, I cut my finger off, so I am laid up. But the worst thing of all was Peggy's death; that was my favorite horse. I will tell you about this place up here. There are madrone, oak, poison oak, live oak, white oak, and pine. This is a healthy climate. Mamma was sickly, but now she is quite well.

"Be the matter what it may,
Always speak the truth;
If at work or if at play,
Always speak the truth."

"Never from this rule depart,
Always speak the truth;
Fix this deeply in your heart,
Always speak the truth."

I will close, hoping to see this in print.
Your friend, MARY E. KIRBY.

[Yes, always speak the truth, and do your duty well. Sensible advice to everybody.—Ed. C. C.]

Box 35, WATHENA, KAN., Nov. 30, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I know this Corner is intended for children only, and, although there are silver threads in my hair,

I still claim in one way to be a child, and that is that my childish questions on religious matters have not yet been satisfactorily answered. I was told to wait till I was older before I asked questions, and then as I grew older I was told that it was wrong to ask questions, and the more I persisted in my inquiries the more I was censured for it, so I don't know yet when it would be proper to ask questions.

I have a great deal of sympathy for children who grow up wondering and wondering what it all means, and why the bad is justified and the good ignored. I have sympathy for children who cannot get some one to answer their questions. So, children, I thought I would like to correspond with a few young people under fifteen. I will let them ask two questions in one letter, and I will patiently answer all I can as well as I can. Please write; I think I can interest you; state age.

EMMA A. ABBEY.

[Our thanks are due Mrs. Abbey for her kindness. No doubt our young people will be pleased to correspond with her, and she will be patient with them and answer their questions promptly and intelligently.—Ed. C. C.]

EAST ADDISON, VT., Nov. 27, 1893.

DEAR OBLIGING EDITOR OF THE CHILDREN'S CORNER: Words are inadequate to thank you for permitting me to speak in the Children's Corner; also I lovingly thank you for your reproof. If I am a genuine truth seeker I will be as ready to receive reproof as I am to reprove.

I have been told many times that I expected a greater reasoning power manifested in my own children than experience warranted, but I never allowed such talk to daunt my energy or expectations, and now, when people say to me that I have very great reason to be proud of their success, I quietly say, "Yes, my children are repaying me more than a hundredfold for my early care in teaching them to have observing eyes and attentive ears, making it a rule to try to improve upon all they heard, saw, or did." In this simple manner a strong reasoning power is developed in the brain of a child at a very early age. I learned these things by the study of human nature; children having proper care and instruction in the very beginning of life have ten times greater capacity for questioning and reasoning than even their own parents and other grown people. Why is this? All because they are not joined to a custom of thinking and doing at first.

I sincerely hope in good time the editorial department will see the necessity of adding another page to the Children's Corner, giving mothers room to send in their letters with the children's, expressing such simple, plain reasoning that we cannot help experiencing a rapid progress in building up a higher standard of worth, thus proving that we really do comprehend some truths. It is one thing to say we are seekers after truth, but it is quite another to prove that we have learned even a few of its secrets. We should always guard with very great care against becoming another set of vain boasters like the churches.

When I read your letter in the Children's Corner on your return from the Fair and the Freethinkers' Congress, I said, Truly Miss Wixon is the right person in the right place; she has such a wealth of love and joyous exhilaration that children, and even the beasts and birds, are made glad by her presence.

Lovingly your friend,

MRS. S. W. SMITH.

[We did not intend our words as reproof to our correspondent—far from it. But we have not much space at our disposal, and, like Col. Ethan Allen, we believe in short speeches and long puddings. We thank our friend for kind words, and her communication will appear soon.—Ed. C. C.]

Electro-Endosmosis.

The most recent discovery and method of applying electricity in the treatment of diseases, is that of electro-endosmosis. The Boston Transcript gives the following explanation of it:

"The theory that by the application of the poles of a galvanic battery to our bodies we can introduce into the sewers of our system that greatest of all purifiers, ozone, where it will destroy disease germs, disease products, and the vast variety of animalcules or parasites, which produce such destructive diseases as diphtheria, small-pox, cholera, typhoid fever, etc., should not be allowed to remain a theory, but should be the subject for experiment until its efficacy is either shown or disproven. Dr. S. R. Beckwith of New York has invented a thermo-galvanic battery, which, when applied to the surface of the body with wet sponges under each pole, he claims, sets free from the water contained in the sponge under the positive pole oxygen, and liberates from the surrounding atmosphere pure oxygen or ozone. These curative agents, he says, are conveyed into the impure or venous blood, by absorption and by the galvanic current in its passage to the negative pole, forming an electric circuit. It is also claimed that soluble medicine can be conveyed along with the oxygen to the seat of disease and cures sooner than by other method. This force, which is very active, was first described by Professor Lubbeck of Berlin, in 1821; and called by him Electro-endosmosis. The battery is charged with chemicals which act only by immersing in ice-water of 40 to 50 deg. F. and connecting the poles with the body, which is about 92 deg. F. The method is not original, it being a discovery by Professor Matteucci as early as 1820."

OUR NEWEST BOOKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? By John E. Remsburg. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Pen-Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper, 25 cents.

Religion a Curse, a Lie, and a Disease.

By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper, 25 cents.

Design Argument Fallacies. A Refutation of the Argument that Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being. By the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Paper, 15 cents.

Crimes of Preachers in the United States.

By M. E. Billings. Paper, 25 cents.

Handbook of Freethought. By W. S.

Bell. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Pleasure and Progress: An Attempt to Prove that the Pursuit of Pleasure is the sine qua non of Intellectual, Moral, and Social Development, and that the Promotion of Pleasure is the Duty of Philanthropy and Statesmanship. By Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Creation of God. Tracing the God-

Ide to Its Source. By Jacob Hartmann, M.D.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Resurrection of Jesus. By Don Allen.

Cloth, 75 cents; cloth, 40 cents.

Facts and Fictions of Life. By Helen

H. Gardener. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda

Joselyn Gage. Cloth, $2; leather, $3.

IN PRESS.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

By Samuel P. Putnam. Subscription book, elegant binding, over one hundred portraits, $5.

Woman: Four Centuries of Progress.

By Susan H. Wixon. Paper, 10 cents.

The Church and Freethought. By Franklin Steiner. Paper, 10 cents.

The Giant Delusion. One of Otto Wett-stein's Friendly Arguments with the Spiritualists. Paper, 10 cents.

Bible Inquirer. By Andrew Jacobson.

Paper, 25 cents.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE AGNOSTIC ANNUAL

—FOR—

1894.

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:
The True History of the Bible, Prof. Edwin Johnson; A Practical View of Life, Charles Watts; The Decadence of the Old Theology, Mrs. E. Lynn Linton; Inspiration in Extremis, Samuel Laing; The Gospel of Love, A Poem, Capt. W. B. McTaggart; Agnostic Types, R. Bithell, B.Sc., Ph.D.; On Spiritual Wickedness in High Places, Edward Clodd; A Priest of Nature, A Poem, Hon. C. K. Tuckerman; The Dream of Immortality, Frederick Millar; Is Immortality a Dream, W. Stewart Ross (aladin); Practical Consequences of Agnosticism, F. J. Gould; The Religious Propensity, Furneaux Jordan, F.R.C.S.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,

28 Lafayette place, New York.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Christianity a Fiction.

By DR. J. H. MENDENHALL.

THE
Astronomical and Astrological
Origin of all Religions.

Explanatory notes compiled and arranged by the late Jonathan M. Roberts. Price, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO

Books by Helen H. Gardener.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. Paper, 50 cents.

Pushed by Unseen Hands. SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth $1. Paper, 50 cents.

A Thoughtless Yes.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Loose of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,

28 Lafayette place, New York

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A Nineteenth Century Novel.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with a little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroine. The narrative is, in the main, a history of a working-girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business-men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrites. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A NEW BOOK.—AND A MOST ORIGINAL ONE.

The Creation of God.

By DR. JACOB HARTMANN.

An explanation of the origin of the God Idea, and the mental processes that led to the formation of idols and the worship of them. From the time of Terah's apostasy, Abraham's reformation and his banishment for heresy and blasphemy against the Chaldean idols, to Christ's coming, the principal characters are analyzed and shown to be human, by thought and deed. It is made plain that the peculiar phraseology, cant sayings, subterfuges, miracles, wonder-workings, and supernatural padding are the proper offspring of the then existing barbarism, ignorance, and superstition, constituting the peculiar politics of the day.

CONTENTS IN DETAIL:

The Universal Aspect.

The Earth.

The Chemical Aspect.

The Sun.

Genesis—The Creation.

Genesis—The Garden of Eden.

The Deluge.

The Scriptural God—The Creation.

The Creation of God—Abraham.

Moses—Confirmation of the Idea of God.

Samuel the Kingmaker.

God Save the King.

Jehovah Takes a Rest.

The End of National Life.

The Christian Era.

Organic Life—Vegetable.

Organic Life—Animal.

The Master Tissues.

The Muscular Tissues.

The Nervous Tissues.

Food and Food-Substances.

Elimination of Waste Substances.

In General.

By the Lungs.

By the Skin.

By the Kidneys.

Digestion and Nutrition.

The Elementary Substances.

Alcohol and Its Effects on the System.

The Soul—What Is It?

The Mind.

Sin and Salvation.

The Ecclesiastical Kindergarten.

Rational Review.

Visions—Bible Dreams—Revelations.

The Planetary Gods.

Every Man His Own God.

Tables (Gateways to Knowledge.

Morals; Whence They Spring.

The Non Credo.

Rules for Human Conduct.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Map of the Intellectual Faculties—The Mind.

Map of Theological Retrogression.

Map of the Deluge and Garden of Eden.

Thirty Chapters—Four Hundred and Thirty-two Pages
Large 12mo.

In Cloth, $1; in Paper, 50 Cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SABBATH - BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—
The Jewish Sabbath—The
Christian Scriptures and the
Sabbath—Examination of
Sunday Arguments—Origin
of the Christian Sabbath—
Testimony of the Christian
Fathers—The Sabbath during
the Middle Ages—The
Puritan Sabbath—Testimony
of Christian Reformers,
Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws

—BY—

JOHN B. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS. AN AGNOSTIC'S VIEW.

CONTENTS: The Christian Dogma of Salvation; The Christian's Belief; Why Was the Resurrection a Secret Affair? The Age of a Story Does Not Prove Its Truth; Pilate's Attempt to Save the Life of Jesus; Christ Before Herod; A New Indictment Against Jesus; Were the Guards Hired by the Priests? Pilate's Motive for Secreting the Body; Matthew's Account of the Resurrection; Why the Angel Sat on the Stone; Mary's Visit; Angels; Renan's Theory; The Disciples Were Deceived; The Identification; The Ascension; Why Did Jesus Disappear? Other Strange Phenomena; The Chief Priests Did Not Believe in Resurrection; What Became of the Roman Guards? The Origin of the Story; St. Paul's Account; St. Paul's Conversion; A Modern Example; The Roman Governors and the Resurrection Story; The Testimony of Contemporaneous Writers; Miracle-Workers; Is the Resurrection Well Attested? Inspiration; Conclusion.

Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 40 cents.

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order or the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter, The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology), Immortality of Matter, Man, Immortality of Force, Brain and Mind, Infinity of Matter, Thought, Value of Matter, Conscience, Motion, Seat of the Soul, Form, Innate Ideas, Immutability of Natural Laws, The Idea of God, Universality of Natural Laws, Personal Continuity, Vital Force, The Soul of Brutes, The Heavens, Free Will, Periods of the Creation, Morality, of the Earth, Concluding Observations, Original Generation, Secular Generation, tions.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE ELIMINATOR;

OR

Skeleton Keys to Sacerdotal Secrets.

"Write me no more fables, lest I be a fool and read the riddles avry."

By R. B. Westbrook, D.D., LL.B.

CONTENTS: The Whole Truth; Sacerdotalism Impeached; The Fabulous Claims of Judaism; Moses and the Pentateuch; Ancient Symbolism and Modern Literalism; Astral Keys to Bible Stories; The Fable of the Fall; Search for the "Last Adam;" What Is Known of the New Testament; The Drama of the Gospels; The Ideal Christ; Jesus and Other Christs; A Reverent Critique on Jesus; A Few Fragments; Blood Salvation; The Things That Remain.

Price, cloth, $1.50. For sale at this office.

Just Out.—25 Cents—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral. We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

BOOKS

BY

SALADIN

(W. STEWART BOSS).

Editor of the

LONDON AGNOSTIC JOURNAL.

GOD AND HIS BOOK:

When he had read this book Colonel Ingersoll wrote to the author: "You have earned the thanks of all who really think." It is a work of vast research, of sound criticism, of caustic humor, of sledgehammer vehemence, of scathing satire, of pathos and eloquence. It is one of the heaviest iconoclastic broadsides ever fired at the Jewish God and the Bible. Cloth, gold letters, $1.25.

WOMAN: HER GLORY, HER SHAME, AND HER GOD.

The Rev. Archdeacon Farrar said that "Christianity elevated the woman; it shrouded as with a halo of sacred innocence the tender years of the child." The object of Saladin's work is to show the archdeacon his error, and he has succeeded. An English writer said of it: "This certainly is one of the most marvelous books ever issued from the press. The authorities cited are unquestionable, and the result is convincing." In two volumes, cloth, gilt lettered, $2.50.

JANET SMITH: A PROMISCUOUS ESSAY ON WOMAN

This is one of the most delightful of Saladin's books, a dissection of woman, with incidental tearing apart of man—caustic, sarcastic, yet philosophical withal, and permeated with a tender reverence for woman and exalted opinion of what she is and should be. A merciless satire upon certain of the conventional foibles of the day, full of facts, fancies, truths, rare touches of genius, and bursts of eloquence. Most of the satirical shafts aimed at the woman go past her and stick in the man behind her, and it serves him about right. Cloth, uncut edges, gilt top, $1.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

A condensation of the known facts upon this subject, proving that Christianity did not abolish but aided this infamous traffic in human beings. To which are added such comments as only Saladin can make. In paper, 30 cents.

THE TRANSITION.

A consideration of the antagonism of the Bible and science, and of the question whether the veiled or allegorical portions of the Christian Bible can be interpreted by modern science. In paper, 20 cents.

ROSES AND RUE.

Being Random Notes and Sketches. Some of its subjects are: A Last Interview with Man of Genius; An Essay on Stirpiculture; Asceticism and Superstition; Capital Punishment; Poverty; God in the Constitution; Bruno; Gods; Witchcraft, etc. This may be called Saladin's own book, for it is poetry in prose, and is one of the books that lovers of "trivial literature" like to read again and again. In cloth, gold- and silver-lettered, $1.50.

LAYS OF ROMANCE.

This book reminds one of Sir Walter Scott, being romantic, historical, glowing in every page with the energy of a true and high poetic genius. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

ISAURE AND OTHER POEMS.

The title poem is a story of intense passion, touchingly told. The other twenty poems are fresh, fragrant, thoughtful, and every verse reveals the thinker, observer, and reformer. Every page glows with passion and throbs with life. Cloth, gold-lettered, 75 cents.

A FEARFUL FLOGGING.

By one who endured it. Based upon a manuscript in the possession of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

THE AGONIES OF HANGING.

Studies in Psychology. By one who was cut down from the gallows. Printed from manuscript in the hands of Saladin. In paper, 10 cents.

WHIRLWIND SOWN and REAPED.

A short story of clerical crime and villainy founded on fact. Of this book the Open Court said: "This novel will command the same, or more, interest than Helen Gardner's story, 'Is This Your Son, My Lord?'" In paper, 25 cents.

THE CONFSSIONAL.

Being an exposure of that infamous religious rite. Contents: Liars of the Reformation Church; Lechery of the Confessional; The Priest in Absolution; Confessions of the Escaped Nun; Extracts from Dens and Liguori; Examination of the Church's Claim to have Fostered Learning; Her Attempts at Continency even more ruinous than Her Self-Indulgence; The Relative Criminal Statistics of Catholicism and Protestantism. In paper, 25 cents.

For all of these works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of Paine's "Age of Reason," it enables somebody in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

NEVER trade horses with a stranger who brings his religion forward to secure a trade.—Galveston News.

THE essential nature of science is that its formulation does not depend upon our idiosyncrasies. Science is objective, not subjective; and scientific truths are discovered, not invented. Their character is foredetermined by the nature of things.—Paul Carus.

COMMON justice requires that the natural tastes of children should be studied, and the bent of nature obediently followed. It is unfair to force a child to a study repugnant to his natural instincts, or to repress a development that his instincts crave.—American, Baltimore.

LET us see what this idea of obedience to truth means. What is it to surrender one's self to truth? Surrendering one's self to truth does not mean lying down on truth and expecting truth like a stream to carry us along. Surrendering to truth means to be an active servant of truth.—Henry L. Southwick.

IT cannot be expressed how great unhappiness mankind has drawn upon themselves by imagining such phantoms as gods, and attributing to them wrath and severity; by reason whereof, men's minds being dejected, everyone trembles with fear when they hear the thunder, or when any other phenomenon happens which he thinks indicates the anger of his God, and his intention to punish or awe him, poor, miserable man.—Epicurus.

LIFT not your principles against men as tests, however you use them for your personal solace and guidance. Ethical or other societies, holding freedom precious and making the claims of freedom, must offer more generous honors than go with the institutions of the fathers. No matter how simple your logic may seem to you, nor how obvious your principles to your neighbor, who is as good a man, as much concerned for the public welfare, as you are, a different chain of reasoning appeals. The condition of fellowship is your birth to its need, and the proof of your right to enjoy freedom is your willingness to give it.—Horace L. Traubel.

MEN in general incline toward the right. They do not gravitate to squalor when they appreciate the attractiveness of refinement. They do not practice obscenity when they appreciate the felicity of purity. They do not show preference for vice when they appreciate the advantages of virtue. When truth is untrammelled we need not fear error. Forcible suppression of wrong does not further the supremacy of right. A man is wise, not because he is ignorant of evil, but because he has a knowledge of good. He is good, not because he cannot commit injustice, but because he prefers justice. He is noble, not because it is impossible for him to be vicious, but because his proclivities are virtuous.—Albert M. Lorentz.

WHEN that great apostle of liberty [Paine], after fuller experiences of revolutionary struggles than any man who ever lived, confessed that the people could not be trusted with power before they understood principles; that the liberty they might so earn must be a mere word, not a fact; we may conclude a fortiori that the rest of the world had reached that conclusion. Liberty ceased to be a watchword either in Europe or America (where slavery steadily gained sovereignty through the "self-government" of states). Although during the century which has intervened since the French Revolution, the Africans in America have been freed, and the serfs of Russia; in neither case was emancipation the result of any popular love of liberty. Slavery in America committed suicide, and serfdom in Russia ended by the moral sentiment of a czar.—Moncure D. Conway.

IN vain the student of nature explained the famine, the astronomer the eclipses, and the general the defeat. Men would have miracles, and when they could not find them they invented them. But science, who touched the fables of the past, and they vanished like empty vapor, who laid her finger on the miracles of the medieval world, and they faded away like summer clouds in a twilight sky, is at work in this age, and many are the dreams she is dispelling, and many the visions she is dissolving. Of all the delusions that have spread themselves over the earth, making and destroying the philosophies of the world, none are so thoroughly disintegrating as that of moral agency. From pole to pole, from zone to zone, all round our little planet, men have vainly imagined themselves their own Parcae, the weavers of their own destiny. But the old dream of moral agency is over, and the philosopher now detects the working of natural law, as much in the rise of a religion or the growth of a crime, as in the revolution of the seasons and the flowing of the tides.—Dr. Frederick R. Marvin.

VALUABLE ENGLISH PUBLICATION.

The Student's Darwin. By Edward B. Aveling, D. Sc., Fellow of University College, London. The purpose of this book is to tell something of Darwin's work to those who have neither the time nor the opportunity to investigate it fully for themselves. 1. The Naturalist's Voyage Around the World. 2. Geological Works. 3. Botanical Works. 4. Zoological Works. 5. Works on Evolution. With a copious index. Price, $2.

A GREAT BOOK ON RADICAL, SOCIAL, AND ECONOMIC REFORMS.

The title of the book is

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

The author is

HENRY OLERICH, of Hawarden, Ia.

This book is in story form, well printed on good paper, well illustrated, and handsomely bound. It is a text-book on "Co-operative Individualism." For many it is perhaps too radical on some questions of reform, but it is nevertheless eminently thought-provoking.

The universal unrest manifested by the thinking world, particularly during these "hard times," plainly indicates that our social, economic, and religious institutions are not in tune with the best thought of the age. The author vividly portrays an ideal world from which all our present social, economic, and religious evils are eliminated. For the fulfillment of his prophecy, the author does not rely on miracles, but on the advancing intelligence of thoughtful men and women. If Mr. Olerich's ideal state can ever be attained the world will certainly be a paradise. Beautifully cloth-bound, price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MENTAL HEALING.

A Practical Exposition of Natural Restorative Power.

By LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

A Book to explain the correct idea of Mental Healing, and what may be reasonably expected to result from an understanding of its principles. Price, $2.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in the Interest of and Owned by the Whole People.

By HON. THOMAS E. HILL,

of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms," "The Hill Banking System," and other works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted.

This book is "just in time," is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFERENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the Initiative and Referendum.

By J. W. SULLIVAN.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed. Price, 15 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York City.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE;

OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

Ancient Voices from the Spirit Realm disclose the most startling Revelations.

Proving Christianity to be of Heathen Origin. [ILLUSTRATED.]

Price, - - - $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents

PRESENTS :: FOR THE :: HOLIDAYS.

The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book, in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $2.50. In plain boards, $2.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $1.50. In plain boards, $1.

Around the World, by D. M. Bennett, 4 volumes, red cloth covers, $6.50; leather, red edges, $9.50; morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers, 1,075 pages. 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Ingersoll's Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; tree calf, $3.

Ingersoll's Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1,141 pages. In one volume, half calf, $5.

Life. A Prose Poem. By R. G. Ingersoll. In color, on boards, beveled, gilt edges, 50 cents.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28. inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll. 50 cents.

Apples of Gold, by Miss Susan H. Wixon. Gilt stamp. $1.25.

All In A Lifetime, by Miss Wixon. $1.

Voltaire's Romances, Profusely Illustrated. Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Darwin and After Darwin By George J. Romanes. Silk cloth, gilt top, $2.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting book. Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Conway's Life of Paine. Two large, handsome volumes. The best and only complete life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $5.

Parton's Life of Voltaire, Of which the same can be said as of Conway's Life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $6.

Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Leather, $3; cloth, gilt top, $2.

History of Christianity, Comprising all that relates to Christianity in the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $2.

Force and Matter. By Professor Ludwig Buchner, M.D. Half calf, $3; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind. By James B. Alexander. Cloth, $2.75.

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

Asleep and Awake. A new Liberal novel. By Raymond Russell. Cloth, side and back stamp, $1.

Cosmian Hymn Book. With music to all the songs. Edited by L. K. Washburn. Cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

For Other Books See the Advertisements, or Send to Us for a Free Catalogue.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Not for Parsons.

MAMMA: Well, dear, did you enjoy yourself at church? Charlie: Oh, yes!—and papa shut his eyes and prayed through his nose the whole time!

QUILL: I'm writing a poem on the "loaves and fishes," but can't for the life of me determine what kind of fishes were used. SCREED: Call 'em sardines. QUILL: Why? SCREED: Because that rhymes with marines.

In a small village in the south of Scotland an elder in the parish church was one day reproving an old woman, who was rather the worse for liquor, by saying: "Sarah, don't you know that you should fly from the tempter?" Sarah (not too well pleased): Flee yersel'. Elder: Oh, Sarah, I hav flown. Sarah: A well, I think ye'll be nane the waur o' anither flutter.

A WESTERN minister's farewell sermon to his congregation was pert and to the point. He said: "I leave you, brethren, for three reasons. First, you do not love me; if you did you would pay me my salary. Second, you don't love one another; if you did there would be more weddings and less fighting. Third, the Lord does not love you; if he did there would be more funerals."—Washington Star.

SMALL Robert had one desire that transcended all others—namely, a bicycle. Now, Robert's family are of a religious turn, and here was an opportunity to inculcate devotion in the boy. So they told Robert if he prayed regularly perhaps God would send him a bicycle. Robert prayed. After he had been praying regularly for about a month or more the anniversary of his birth arrived, and the family decided it was about time to reward his devotion; but, thinking a bicycle might endanger the boy's life, they bought him a tricycle. Small Robert came down on the morning of his birthday and was told that there was something out in the yard for him to look at. He went out to see, and there was the tricycle. But a tricycle was not what Robert wanted, and he looked up to heaven in disgust. "O Lord," he said, reproachfully. "O Lord, don't you know the difference between a bicycle and a tricycle?"—Boston Budget.

HOW NOAH GOT DRUNK.

Whin ould father Noah kim out av the ark
He felt jist in the moind to go out on a lark;
But he hung round the bar-room, distriss-
ful and sad,
As if waitin' for some one to trate him, bedad.

He'd laid in good stock, but the voyage had been long,
An' a diet of codfish had made the thirst strong,
An' whin the ark struck ivery bottle was dry—
There wa'n't a drap left of rum, burbin, or rye.

An' he said to himself: "It's disgusted I am,
Wid thim thaves av the world, Shem, Ja-phet, and Ham;
Be the howly St. Patrick, they'll taste av
the strap—
Not to lave their ould father the smell av a drap.

"Sure I'm manely quandaried wid wather
all round,
In which haythen people and craytures
were drowned;
But altho' wid the thirst I'm jist ready to sink,
That's a mixture that no dacint Christian can drink."

Jist then an archangel, who'd come down from on high,
To assist in expandin' the bow in the sky,
Drew, wid foine fellow-felin', a flask from his hip,
An' politely remarked: "Say, ould man,
hav a nip?"

Noah stuck his shillelah beneath his left arm:
"Sure your riverence has hit it," says he,
"to a charm;
Not a sup hav I tasted—it's truth that I say—
Since last night, an' to-morrow will be the third day."

Thin he took a long pull, an' he rolled up his eyes,
An' he smacked his ould lips, an' exclaimed
wid surprise:
"Such an illegant drink I ne'er tasted before!
Who the devil 'stilled that, now?—Yis, thank ye, once more!"

Noah tuk the resate, an' meandered away,
An' wint on a roarer that very same day;
But how, thin, did he come by the stuff,
do you ask?
The ould say-dog abstracted the arch-angel's flask!

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged

As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by

Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Pygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Sabbath; the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life,

delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason" are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE Truth Seeker Library.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath-Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infinite Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cents.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Convent, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER.

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PATENT FOR SALE! THE ROLLER SLED

FOR SUMMER COASTING.

Patented October 21, 1893, is a complete success. Any ten-year old boy or girl can guide it and stop it almost instantly, without touching the ground. It can be readily converted into a winter sled by removing the trucks. Its construction is simple and durable. It can be manufactured on very little investment. It is sure to be a great seller, North and South. The patent is for sale by state, or counties.
For particulars address A. R. AYRES,
2149 810 Broadway, Hannibal, Mo.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

A new edition of that splendid prose poem, "Life," by "the prince of orators," Col. R. G. Ingersoll. It is larger and better than the old edition, and can be framed or placed upon the table as an ornament. In the center of the card appear the portraits of the Colonel and the baby, surrounded by the prose poem, which has been truthfully described as "one of the masterpieces of the orator and poet, who now, as far as we know, stands alone in the living world." It will make a delightful present, and will be a souvenir not only of intellectual greatness, but of artistic workmanship. It is printed on heavy board, gilt boveled edge. The size is 12x16 inches, and the price only 75 cents, post-paid.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.50. The
$2.75 Pin and THE TRUTH
SEEKER one year for $5.

THE Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND
THE TRUTH SEEKER
ONE YEAR.

Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and TRUTH
SEEKER, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WANTED—500,000 Freethinkers to stop at
Richter's Hotel, Cullman, Ala. 6146

PATENT'S Terms Easy.

Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and Reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and Description to L. BAGGER & Co. Attys. Washington D.

THE "Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position. Beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silver case, dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.
Regular Grade American Watches.—Silver case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels $15. In finer cases, add as above.
Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.
All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.
Sundries. Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons $3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1.15, $1.50, $2 to $3.
The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more Etched (teas only):
"The Time to be Happy is Now."

50 cents extra.
The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.
Diamonds. 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

Otto Wettstein, Rochelle, Ill.
P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

STRONG, HEALTHY MANHOOD

These Afflicted with Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility and who are desirous of being cured, a booklet will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and symptoms of the complaints, and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.
I wish to say that I am an out-and-out LIBERAL, and I trust the Freethinkers of the land will give me their patronage and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors.—Dr. Fellows.

ZEKE HAS GOT 'EM AT LAST.

So I went in and saw; and behold every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, portrayed upon the wall round about.—Ezek. viii, 10.

Deutsche Freigeist-Bücher.

Wier haben folgende Bücher in Deutscher Sprache welche sehr berühmt sind.

„Die Irrthümer Moses,“

Eine kritische Beleuchtung des Pentateuch für Widersprüche zur modernen Weltanschauung und Gefittung.
von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 50 Cents.

Das Weib und ihre Stellung zur Religion und Kirche am Ende des 19. Jahrhunderts.

von Helene S. Gardener, Preis 50 Cents.

„Moderne Götterdämmerung,“

von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 25 Cents.

„Wunder und Wunderthäter,“

von John Beck, Preis 20 Cents.

„Glaube und Vernunft,“

oder LE BON SENS.

des römisch-katholischen Priesters Jean Meslier. Nach dem französischen Original überfetzt von Fräulein Anna Knoop.

301 Seiten, Leinwand, $1.00, Papier, 50 Cts.

Diese Bücher sind in Papier Umschlag und klaren Druck. Unsere Deutschen Leser sollten es weit verbreiten.

Adressire, „The Truth Seeker,“

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, New York.

URVEYORS, ATTENTION!

A rare chance is offered for a surveyor to get a

TRANSIT CHEAP.

We have one for sale, in good order, with Tripod, which cost $160. We will sell it for half-price—$80. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New articles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. CHIDESTER & SON, 26 Bond St., N. Y.

13446

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

IN THE

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,

A NEW DISCOVERY IN ELECTRICITY.

Within the Reach of All.

THE SECRET OF TRANSFUSION FOUND AT LAST!

The simplest of all devices conducts ozone, oxygen, and medicine from a saturated sponge, through the tissues, into the blood, to the seat of disease. How is this done? By Electro-osmosis. What is that? Read our pamphlet: that will tell you. You will find explanation and evidence there that electro-osmosis produces molecular changes that restore the organs and rejuvenate the system. Tumors, cancer, rheumatism, consumption, etc.—diseases that might never have been cured by any other method, succumb at once to this treatment. It is the only treatment that cuts short the duration of typhoid fever, destroys the germs of diphtheria, supplies oxygen to the lungs in asthma, produces sleep in insomnia, cures nervous prostration, disease of the kidneys, constipation, neuralgia, headache; reduces the pulse and temperature in one hour in acute fever, etc. Each battery is warranted to produce the requisite Thermo-Ga vanic current for two years, or refilled without expense. It is not a cure-all, but it has cured these. A case of medicine that anyone can understand and use, is included in the outfit. INVAID: A trial will convince you! Physicians: This is a matter of interest and importance to you! AGENTS: You can sell one in every household! PARENTS: It is your duty to have it always at hand! Consultation free. Describe your symptoms. Send for our pamphlet.

S. R. BECKWITH, 114 Fifth Ave., New York city.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents. Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents. Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents. The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT O. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THOMAS PAINE; WAS HE JUNIUS?

By W. H. BURR.

Second edition, enlarged to 32 pages; with the engraved likeness of Paine. Price, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2.

Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.

The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.

Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.

Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.

Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,

28 Lafayette place, New York.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bedrock of human liberty.

Price, - - - 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

News of the Week.

THE majority for woman suffrage in Colorado was 6,347.

In Paris Napoleon I. is the hero of the hour in books and the drama.

THE Harvard Board of Overseers has made the Woman's Annex a part of the University proper.

THE Manchester ship canal—connecting Liverpool and Manchester, England—was formally opened Dec. 7.

THE New York Academy of Medicine protests against the wholesale free vaccination which the Board of Health has been doing.

A PETITION against medical monopoly is in circulation in New York. It will be presented to the legislature at its coming session.

PROFESSOR TYNDALL's death was caused by an overdose of chloral, given by Mrs. Tyndall, who thought she was presenting magnesia.

GREAT suffering among Russian peasants. Owing to tariff war with Germany they have been compelled to sell their grain at half price.

MISS GEORGIANA F. PUTNAM, the colored teacher of Brooklyn, deposed some months since, has been restored to the head of her department.

FACTORY INSPECTOR CONNOLLY, of New York, has decided that children under fourteen cannot work in brickyards, nor any children before 7 A.M.

THE Jesuits in Germany are more flourishing than elsewhere, supposedly due to the fact that their establishments have been officially closed for so many years.

THE British ship Jason, nine months from Calcutta to Boston, was wrecked on Cape Cod December 6th. Of her crew of twenty-five, only one was saved.

GOVERNOR WAITE, of Colorado, is going to call an extra session of the legislature to consider the silver question. He is not generally sustained by his own party.

THE United States District Court at Omaha denied the application of the receivers of the Union Pacific railroad for an order fixing their salaries at $18,000 each per annum.

GEN. EFFA HUNTON was nominated by the Democratic caucus for the short term for United States Senator from Virginia and Thomas S. Martin for the long term, beginning March 4, 1895.

THE Chilean government has indorsed the claims of the South American Steamship Company for $225,772 against the United States, damages for the seizure of the steamship Itata during the last Chilean war.

SALINA, Kan., this month hears a quadrangular debate on political issues. General Caldwell represents the Republicans, David Overmeyer the Democrats, Mrs. Lease the Populists, and John P. St. John the Prohibitionists.

J. R. SOVEREIGN, new master workman of the Knights of Labor, declares himself in favor of the free coinage of gold and silver, at the ratio of 16 to 1, against the veto power of the president and in favor of the initiative and referendum.

THE poor of Chicago are very destitute. The number of unemployed is phenomenally large. The Catholic churches of the North side have been thrown open to the suffering, and the Protestant pastors have rented a hall for the same purpose.

ON December 9th a bomb was thrown from a gallery into the French Chamber of Deputies by an Anarchist, who was subsequently arrested and confessed his deed. A large number of people were injured, including several deputies and the would-be assassin.

THE symbolical and physiological dance called the "Danse du Ventre" has been driven out of New York, the performers being heavily fined. One of the policemen who testified against them could not tell the location of the stomach, which he said the dancers "extorted."

DISORDERLY houses in New York are being raided by the police, under the stimulus applied by Rev. Dr. Parkhurst and his society. The keepers and inmates are fined or sent to Blackwell's Island, while the male patrons who are caught in the dragnet are released, as is customary.

IN Danbury, Conn., the town meeting voted $50,000 for the relief of workmen out of employment. This was done by the haters, who are in the majority. The manufacturers did not oppose the appropriation, saying that as they own but one-thirteenth of the taxable property they can stand the tax if the others can.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 51. { PUBLISHED WEEKLY. } New York, Saturday, December 23, 1893. { 28 LAFAYETTE PL. } $3.00 Per Year

A FEW ITEMS CONCERNING AN ANCIENT PAGAN FESTIVAL.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

IT WILL CORNER
THE PARSON.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

MONEY FOUND.

Brought Into the Absolutely Reliable Government Banks Established in the Interest of and Owned by the Whole People.

By HON. THOMAS E. HILL, of "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms," "The Hill Banking System," and other works of great service to the world.

Professor Hill has given several years of careful study to the elaboration of a system of sound money, that may fit immediately into present methods of doing business and be easily introduced and universally adopted. This book is "just in time," is an absolutely original book from the beginning to the end, is a good-sized volume in clear type, and is the clearest exposition of money, uses of money, causes of money panics and remedies for the same, ever published. Orders are rapidly coming in and we want yours. Send twenty-five cents for copy. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED THE REFERENDUM MOVEMENT.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

By the Citizenship through the Initiative and Referendum,

By J. W. SULLIVAN.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Is Controversy Dangerous?

By W. F. JAMIESON.

This little book goes down to the very bed-rock of human liberty.

Price, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Most Magnificent Work Ever Published by the Freethought Press.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The object of this work is to present the Course of Freethought throughout the Civilized World for the last Four Centuries, from the time of Columbus and Bruno to the time of Ingersoll.

It will be a radical Historic Record of the Greatest Developments of the Human Race.

It will reveal Freethought as an Intellectual, Moral, Literary, Social, Industrial, and Political Movement.

It will show what Freethought is in itself and how manifold are its influences, and with what hope and promise we can hail its future triumph.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" will Embrace the most Illustrious Pages of Human History,

adorned with the brightest Genius, radiant with the most splendid Poetry, rich with the greatest Inventions and Discoveries and ennobled with Freedom's most shining advance.

Nothing Can be More Interesting,

more inspiring to the Pioneer Workers of to-day—to those who are still in the van for Human Rights and Progress. The struggle is not ended and what is already won must be carefully guarded. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty; and from the Past we must ever learn Great Lessons for the Future.

NO LIBERAL CAN AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT THIS BOOK.

It will contain the Greatest Thoughts and the Greatest Deeds of the Greatest Men

In One Harmonious and Magnificent Whole,

a vivid picture of man's sublimest evolution, with the added glory of

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION

from the chains and slavery of a barbaric creed and church.

THE FIRST PART of the book will deal with Freethought as a Universal Power, as a Spirit, a Method, a prevailing but unorganized Influence in every Department of Human Growth.

THE SECOND PART will deal with Freethought as an Organized Movement, especially in America and Europe; and this history is of equal importance with the first, and should be justly understood and the Pioneers of our work recognized.

The first part will embrace the following Grand Departments:

Philosophy.	Science.	Education and Ethics.	Literature.	Government and Politics.	Woman's Emancipation.
Bruno.	Copernicus.	Bacon.	Boccaccio.	Voltaire.	Madame Roland.
Spinoza.	Galileo.	Comenius.	Rabelais.	Rousseau.	Mary Wollstonecraft.
Descartes.	Kepler.	Pestalozzi.	Cervantes.	French Salon.	Harriet Martineau.
Locke.	Da Vinci.	Froebel.	Marlowe.	French Revolution.	Frances Wright.
Hume.	Newton.	Combe.	Shakspeare.	Thomas Paine.	Lucretia Mott.
Hobbs.	Humboldt.	Spencer.	Gibbon.	Jefferson.	Ernestine L. Rose.
Kant.	Lyell.	Owen.	Burns.	Mazzini.	Lydia Maria Child.
Hamilton.	Darwin.	Holyoake.	Shelley.	Bentham.	Margaret Fuller.
Comte.	Tyndall.	Haeckel.	Byron.	Mill.	Elizabeth Cady Stanton.
Büchner.	Huxley.	Girard.	Pushkin.	Garibaldi.	Susan B. Anthony.
Feuerbach.		Lick.	Tcherny-chewsky.	Heinzen.	Matilda Joselyn Gage.
					Helen H. Gardener.
					Annie Besant.

THE PORTRAITS OF THESE ILLUSTRIOUS REFORMERS

in every domain of Human Thought and Progress will adorn the pages of this volume.

The Second Part of this volume will be devoted especially to organized Freethought and the Liberal Press in modern times. The Truth Seeker, Investigator, Ironclad Age, Secular Thought, Freethinkers' Magazine, Independent Pulpit, Lucifer, the Freethinker, Agnostic Journal, etc.

It will give a history of the

GREAT INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS

at Chicago, the Freethought Federation of America, the American Secular Union, the various state and local organizations, the Canadian Secular Union, the British Secular Union, and other Liberal associations throughout the world.

It will contain the portraits of those who, up to the present time, have been identified with Freethought work—editors, lecturers, officers of societies, and those who, as representative men, have won distinction in other fields of effort. There will be the portraits of

Horace Seaver,	George E. Macdonald,	Capt. R. C. Adams,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.,	Susan H. Wixon,
J. P. Mendum,	E. M. Macdonald,	John R. Charlesworth,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.,	Mrs. Charles Watts,
D. M. Bennett,	L. K. Washburn,	Samuel P. Putnam,	Prof. J. H. Cook,	Mrs. Robert C. Adams,
Parker Pillsbury,	Ernest Mendum,	John E. Remsburg,	E. H. Heywood,	Mrs. M. A. Freeman,
Elizur Wright,	Charles Watts,	Franklin Steiner,	Otto Wettstein,	Katie Kehm Smith,
T. O. Leland,	G. W. Foote,	J. D. Shaw,	Stephen Pearl Andrews,	Lucy N. Colman,
T. B. Wakeman,	Saladin,	E. A. Stevens,	James Parton,	Lillian Leland,
Judge C. B. Waite.	J. R. Monroe,	H. L. Green,	Abner Kneeland,	Amy Post.

and other men and women who have contributed to the advancement of Freethought and whose names should be remembered throughout the Liberal ranks. There will also be about

ONE HUNDRED BIOGRAPHIES,

and in these will be given a picture of Freethought progress which will be most interesting and valuable, for it is in individuals that we find the best interpretations of the age.

The Price of This Superb Book is $5.00,

and not for the same amount of money can there be found such an array of facts, such a survey of history, and such a galaxy of Freethought.

Mr. Putnam is now devoting his whole time to this work and it will be published at the earliest possible moment.

The name of every Subscriber who sends five dollars before the work is on the press will be enrolled in this book. DON'T FAIL TO SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE.

This book will contain

Over Six Hundred Pages of Printed Matter and Over One Hundred Portraits.

It will be elegantly bound. It will be a book for the home and the fireside. It will be a book to give to your friends when they ask, What is Freethought—what has it done and what is it doing in the world?

This is the most universal presentation of Freethought ever given to the public, and no Freethinker can afford to be without it. It is a library in itself.

Address orders to

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

HOW TO GET FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT FREE

SPECIAL OFFER.

We have made arrangements with Mr. Putnam whereby we are enabled to make our friends a most generous offer.

We need more subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and every Freethinker needs "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." Not all are able to pay $5 for it, but everyone can do a little work to obtain a copy—congenial work, that will do great good all around. This is the offer:

Send us Four New Yearly Subscribers at regular rates ($12 in all), and we will send the Getter-up of the Club a copy of "FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT," FREE OF CHARGES.

And further, to aid our friends in getting this book for themselves, we will offer

To the New Subscribers as a Premium,

post free, a copy in boards of

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated

By WATSON HESTON,

THE GREATEST BOOK OF ITS KIND EVER CONCEIVED.

Or, if preferred, a copy cloth-bound of
W. S. BELL'S

Handbook of Freethought.

With these Splendid Works as premiums there ought to be no difficulty in getting hundreds of clubs of subscribers.

Remember, to the Getter-up of The Club, FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT, free.

To each New Subscriber in the club, a premium of a Dollar Book—either "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought," in Cloth—all free by post or express.

This really brings the price of the paper down to $2 to each new subscriber, as they get THE TRUTH SEEKER one year and a dollar book for $3.

A Club of Four New Subscribers and $12 ($3 only from each) does this.

We want to extend our circulation, and we want to help our friends to help us.

It ought not to be difficult to get four New Subscribers in any town in the country, especially with these Splendid Premiums to assist.

Those who get up these Clubs will receive their copies of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" as soon as the book is issued.

Those who send a Club and Four New Subscribers and $12 before the book is printed, will have their names enrolled in its shining pages.

THE TRUTH SEEKER—
28 Lafayette Place,
NEW YORK.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 51. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, December 23, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - DECEMBER 23, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

SOME HANDSOME PREMIUMS.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $6.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and S. P. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" ($5). By taking advantage of this or our Free offer of the book (see opposite page) there is no reason why every Freethinker in the country should not possess this splendid work.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" ($3). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and James B. Alexander's Dynamic Theory ($2.75). This is a splendid offer, for every one wants this book. It has over a thousand large pages and more than four hundred illustrations. It is a digest of Science, and every one who studies it cannot help but be well-informed in all scientific matters.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in board covers ($1).

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have, at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

"Applied Christianity."—III.

The National Reform Association originated in the idea that "the great original sin of our nation consisted in adopting our National Constitution without any distinct recognition of God, Christ, or the Divine law—in setting up our national government in the name of the new deity 'we the people,' " to quote the words of Rev. John Alexander, the "father" of the Association. On Feb. 3, 1863, a convention "for prayer and Christian conference" was held at Xenia, Ohio. To this convention Mr. Alexander submitted a paper elaborating the before-stated idea and suggesting that the preamble to the National Constitution be amended so that it would read as follows, the amendatory words in brackets:

"We, the people of the United States [recognizing the being and attributes of Almighty God, the divine authority of the holy scriptures, the law of God as the paramount rule, and Jesus the Messiah, the Savior, and the Lord of all], in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves, and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America."

The paper was referred to a committee consisting of one member from each of the eleven denominations represented in the Convention, which included delegates from seven states. This committee reported that it "approved the spirit and objects of the paper." In his paper Mr. Alexander had also suggested that steps be taken to secure unity of action by the press and the pulpit and by memorials "that the Christian patriotic sentiment of the nation may be brought to bear upon all citizens—on Congress and the state legislatures, to secure the adoption of the constitutional amendment that may be proposed." From that day to this "Christian patriotic sentiment" has been brought to bear upon state legislatures, upon Congress and the courts, and with such force that within two years the Supreme Courts of several states have affirmed the constitutionality of Sunday laws, Congress has, by an overwhelming majority, attached a Sunday-closing amendment to the World's Fair appropriation bill, and the Supreme Court of the United States has unanimously decided that "this is a Christian nation." Have not the National Reformers very substantial reasons for feeling encouraged?

It will not have escaped the understanding of observant readers that this movement was from the first a religious rebellion against the sovereignty of the people. The principle that "we the people" are the source of all just government was distinctly repudiated by Mr. Alexander and his associates.

The conflict between the secular and the theocratic theories of government manifested itself immediately. In Xenia and Cincinnati the clergy did not give much encouragement to the enterprise, and so the Reformers made Pittsburg and Allegheny the centers of their propaganda. Of the attitude of Allegheny's three Presbyterian seminaries Mr. Alexander says:

"The representatives of the seminary of the great Presbyterian church seemed to base their opposition principally upon their approval of the secular theory of civil government, and those of the other seminaries based their approval upon the Christian theory of civil government, to wit: That civil government is the ordinance of God as truly as the church is the ordinance of God. Subsequently Dr. Wilson of the Presbyterian seminary cordially espoused our cause."

There can be no doubt that as the Association and its allied societies grow stronger and their political victories more numerous, the scruples of multitudes of Christians will grow weaker and many who thirty, or twenty, or ten years ago, opposed the God-in-the-Constitution movement will align themselves in its ranks. To sincere Christians no appeal could be stronger than "He that is not for me is against me," and they will be told that if they ally themselves with Infidels to support a Godless government, they are against Jesus and his kingdom. And of course time-servers and politicians need no more alluring inducement than that of success or promised success to carry them into the crusade for Christianizing our constitutions and statutes. That active Christian opposition—except that of the Adventists—to the monarchical reaction has never since been so pronounced as it was when the reaction set in we have the testimony of Mr. Alexander, who says:

"The arguments in favor of 'the Christian state' as being God's ideal of civil government among men were so conclusively in these assemblies in 1863 and 1864 that since that time we have heard but few objections to them in our meetings."

Following these initiatory and educative meetings at Xenia and Pittsburg came the convention of Jan. 27, 1864, at Allegheny City, when the permanent organization of the National Reform Association was effected. The headquarters was removed to Philadelphia, and there prominent divines of the Covenanter, Presbyterian, and Episcopal churches early identified themselves with the work of the Association. Here the Christian Statesman was published until two years ago, when it was removed to Pittsburg, the present headquarters of various theocratic societies, including that of the National Reformers.

There can be no doubt that to this Association is to be attributed the greater part of the influence which secured the Sunday-closing of the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, in 1876. It had from the first the zealous assistance of many men prominent in education, literature, politics, and jurisprudence. Among its vice-presidents for many years was Justice Story of the United States Supreme Court. "At the annual meeting of 1888 one hundred and twenty-three vice-presidents were found to be enrolled from thirty-two states or territories of our country, not one of whom is enrolled without his personal consent," says Mr. Alexander.

"Christian Sociology" is now being taught in their schools by these advocates of theocracy, and we can easily conceive that those instructed therein will be the bitterest enemies of the secular republic and the most remorseless foes of rational thought and humane institutions. Desperate efforts are being made to unite the various branches of Protestantism, that the retrograde march to kingly rule may be accelerated. To quote again from Mr. Alexander:

"When this unity is secured the combined Christian patriotic sentiment of the nation will become practically omnipotent, and so irresistible that all great national reforms may be made successful, and 'Sunday mails,' Sunday trains, and 'Sunday newspapers' may all by the power and force of law and public sentiment be controlled and made subservient to the Christian patriotic sentiment of the nation."

The historian of the Association, from whom we have quoted in this article, declares that the two greatest obstacles which the National Reform movement has encountered is the secular theory of government which "is so intrenched in many minds and churches," and "the deep veneration almost akin to idolatry in which the Constitution is held by the American people." Freethinkers of to-day may well be glad that religious liberty is safeguarded by the teachings of the Freethinkers of the Revolution. It is gratifying to be assured by the would-be destroyers of the temple of justice that they have run against the abutments and stumbled into the moat wisely put about it by Paine and Jefferson and their compeers who were taught by the great Infidels of France and warned by the fearful deeds of the state-churches of past ages. Our danger consists in the optimism of Liberals, Christian ignorance of, and antagonism to, the Secular theory, and the lamentable tendency of our courts to explain away and nullify the best provisions of the Constitution when asked so to do by the priest-led majority.

The amendment to the Constitution which the Reformers seek is but the first step in their program. Once they get the amendment any Christian law will be constitutional, and any tyranny possible. Mr. Alexander says:

"I would suggest that as the kingship of Christ and the supremacy of his law is the central idea from which all our proposed reforms logically emanate, we should now crystallize all our attainments in efforts to have our Constitution amended; as, upon the principle that the greater contains the less, an amendment, proclaiming the authority of Christ over all men and nations, would be an acknowledgment of his kingship, and furnish an unanswerable argument in our fundamental law for the preservation of our Christian Sabbath and for all the other reforms which we advocate."

It was unanimously voted by the Saratoga convention, which included among its members Joseph Cook, Bishop Newman of the Methodists, Dr. Herick Johnson of the Presbyterians, and representatives of the Baptist, Episcopal and other churches, "that because the kingly authority of Christ is the central idea of the National Reform movement, its principles are destined to revolutionize the world." In the advocacy and practical furtherance of these principles the National Reform Association has the direct or indirect assistance of the American Sabbath Union, of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, the Prohibition party, and other organizations, saying nothing of the Covenanter church and large portions of many other church bodies. Even the Populists in their national convention give aid and comfort to the enemy by putting into their resolutions a "recognition of God as the ruler of the nation."

It is the purpose of these Reformers to so change constitutions and laws that none who fail to accept the principles of political evangelical Protestantism can have equal rights in the state. This is shown by their attitude on the Bible-in-the-schools issue. In a paper read before the last national convention of the Reformers by Rev. C. W. Buoy, occur these passages. The italics are Mr. Buoy's:

"Schools are not only a necessity for rule but they are also a great social power. We want America not for Americans particularly, but for men and women of American principles. If you lay upon the child the responsibilities of government you must fit him by education to meet them. We want to leaven up the great mass of our citizens that the burdens of government may be distributed. How far shall the state educate the child? There must be moral education to secure good citizens. The state has its demands upon the child; therefore, it is her duty to train him not only intellectually but morally to meet these demands.

"The state is a conscious moral organism. It is a moral agent. The state is of God. The education of the child should be such as will protect him along the avenues of life. The weakest part of our nation is the moral; the state should help to strengthen the youth. What morality shall the state inculcate—not heathen but Christian. There is but one book of morals; as Walter Scott said on his dying bed, 'there is but one book.' We hold the child responsible when he reaches manhood to the morality of this book. It contains just what you demand of your citizens. It opens to us the highest avenues of life. It is the basis for civic culture and its teachings develop the noblest manhood."

We need not combat here the extravagant and absurd claims made for the Bible. Even if it were the best book in the world it would be a crime for the majority to force the minority to accept it as a book of moral and religious instruction for their children. It is a book accepted by a part of the people as an oracle of religion. Hence it has no place in the public schools. Right here is the issue.

Next week we shall call attention to some other aspects of this question.

In the next issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER will be published a letter from Dr. R. B. Westbrook in defense of a "physiological" Sunday law; to which will be appended a reply by Mr. S. P. Putnam.

Sunday Work and Sunday Laws.

Barrels of ink and millions of reams of paper are being wasted in a futile attempt to prove that Sunday laws are necessary to protect labor from the exactions of capital. Christian sociologists are more than anxious to smuggle their holy day into the laws under the name of rest day, and a minority of the wage-workers and here and there an unassigned gentleman like Dr. Westbrook have eaten of the ecclesiastical gulls' seed scattered by the priestly caste to catch the unwary.

A Sunday law is a Sunday law, regardless of whether it is enacted and enforced in the name of religion or of rest. Its punishments are equally painful whether inflicted by the lash of ecclesiastical or of civil law. What does the priest care whether a Sunday law is enforced in the name of God or of rest so only that he is given a monopoly of the day for the prosecution of his labors? He wants the church open on Sunday and he wants all other places closed. That is what he needs a Sunday law for and that will be the effect of any Sunday law, whether called a Sunday rest law or a Sunday gospel law. Perhaps Dr. Westbrook will say that he wishes to stop nothing but work on Sunday; that he would keep open the art galleries and the libraries and the parks and other places of instruction and recreation. But no such saving clause is worth the paper on which it is written, as is very easily shown.

Sunday work is a necessity—saying nothing of the right of the individual to work, whether it is or is not necessary, if he chooses so to do. That is his affair, not Dr. Westbrook's nor ours. But Sunday work is a necessity if the people are to rest on Sunday. This is not a paradox. A considerable minority of the people must work in order that the others may satisfactorily rest. It is impossible for millions of our people to get into the country, to the museums, art galleries, and libraries, to the parks and the seashore, unless hundreds of thousands of other people work on Sunday. This every person who has got out from under the shade of his rural birth tree knows, and it is nonsense to talk of this work as an injustice to the laborer. And even if it did in some instances involve injustice there are plenty of rational and feasible ways of eliminating that undesirable factor without wrapping the country in the icy blankets of Sunday legislation. This is the nineteenth century, not the tenth. Ours is the civilization of the nineteenth, not of the tenth century nor of the Puritans. It is not a model civilization, but it is a great improvement upon that which the church inflicted upon the world. Sunday work no less than Sunday recreation is a concomitant of this civilization. For all the people the latter would be shorn of the larger portion of its joy and benefits were the former successfully forbidden. A consistent and impartial Sunday law would work immeasurable suffering and disaster. Sunday travel; Sunday transportation, collection, and distribution of mails; Sunday cooking and serving at seashore and mountain resorts; Sunday sale of innumerable articles at the same places; Sunday movement of through and perishable freight; Sunday care and guarding of art galleries, museums, libraries, parks, and other similar agencies of civilization; Sunday performances at theaters; Sunday work on the Sunday and Monday papers; Sunday labor in barber shops, restaurants, hotels, bakeries, news stands, meat markets, and lecture halls in villages, towns, and cities; Sunday work in the great iron industries—all these and many more kinds of Sunday work are necessary if the masses of the people are to be permitted to seek proper rest and enjoyment on that day. Why should not this work be done on Sunday as well as that of the preacher and Liberal lecturer, and could either of these have audiences were it not for the assistance of many other people, among whom may be mentioned the janitor, the usher, the organist, the car driver, the gripman, the conductor, the engineer—one or all! It is fatuous to talk of the cessation of Sunday work, or of its being diminished. The tendency is all the other way; iniquitous laws may temporarily check the tide, but eventually—unless the allied forces of Rome, Russia, and National Reform crush out all our manhood and carry us back to the Dark Ages—the puny dam will be swept away and the people will have a Free Sunday.

There is no need of overworking anybody. The laborers are many. There is no necessity that any man should be forced by the fact of Sunday work to labor more than six days in the week. Keep out the hand of the priest, and everything can be satisfactorily arranged. As for the farmer and all other people who employ themselves, they certainly need no law for their protection. And we do not believe that the wage-workers do. But if any of them need any law to safeguard their right to rest it certainly is not a Sunday law. All that would be required would be a provision that no man should be expected to work more than six days consecutively. Then he could arrange with his employer and his fellow-workers his six days of work and his one day of rest. Under such a system no man would be wronged, either by being compelled to work seven days consecutively, or by being denied the opportunity to spend his day of rest in the library, at the theater, the beach, or in the field of sport. Those who worked on Sunday would rest or play on some other day. There in a nutshell is the solution of the great Sunday problem. The trouble is that we have permitted the theological cuttle-fish to darken the waters of counsel, thereby temporarily deceiving the eyes of truth and misdirecting the sword of justice. The only laborer who needs a Sunday law to protect him is the preacher, himself a Sunday worker. Hence his hue and cry, and the liberal minded man who is deceived thereby is not wise. The talk about a universal rest day is arrant humbuggery. To be sure, on a given Sunday, by the employment of a sufficiently large force of policemen and soldiers, all work—except that of the policemen and soldiers—might be prevented, but that would not secure true rest. Peace of mind and self-chosen use of time—be the holiday spent in quiescence, recreation, or work—are the sources of real, enjoyable, healthful Rest. Rest, no more than religion or morality, is the child of force.

The absurdity of attempting to legislate a universal rest day is shown by a comparison. The people look upon the Fourth of July as a holiday, and a large majority abstain from work thereon, but who would be foolish enough to propose to punish by fine or imprisonment those who refused to play or rest? Who says that the laborer is not protected on the Fourth of July merely because there is no law to punish those who work? As a matter of fact, just as in the case of Sunday, the enjoyment of most of those who do not work would be greatly lessened were it not for the services of those who labor. This is also true of Christmas and other holidays. The minister thinks it a sin to work or play on Sunday; therefore, he asks for Sunday laws. If he is cunning in his day and generation he says he wants these laws to protect the poor laborer. He does not think it a sin to work or play on the Fourth of July; therefore, he does not ask for a law to prohibit work and play on that day. However, maybe he will do so, now that his attention is called to the oversight, so as to preserve his reputation for consistency and help get his dear Sunday laws enforced. Such a law would be less irrational than Sunday laws, for, as the Fourth of July comes but once in three hundred and sixty-five days, those wage-earners who work on that anniversary in 1894 will have to wait a year before they have another opportunity to celebrate, whereas, as regards the weekly rest day, they would have to wait but six days after their previous period of recreation.

Sunday laws are in the interest of the church alone. Labor does not need them, for all needed rest can be easily secured without them. If work on Sunday is forbidden, the masses of the people cannot get the full benefit of their holiday.

Such are some of the irresistible conclusions to which a fair examination of the Sunday law and Sunday labor question must lead all reasonable and unprejudiced men and women.

"We do not advocate union of church and state, an error into which many, ignorant of the subject, have fallen. On the contrary, we are uncompromisingly opposed to such a system; as it has been well put, 'we desire to divorce church and state, that the state may marry religion'—John Alexander, in Christian Statesman.

Now what does this mean? Are not you gentlemen continually insisting that the remarriage of a divorced person is "adulterous"? And do you not say that the state is a person, and a moral person at that? Would you have a moral person commit adultery, and with religion, the "unspotted"? We are shocked!

Four Good Books for German Freethinkers.

We can supply, in the German language, the following four books which everyone knows to be good:

"The Mistakes of Moses," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

"Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen H. Gardener, 50 cents.

"The Gods," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 25 cents.

"Miracles and Miracle-Workers," by John Peck, 20 cents.

These are neatly printed, bound in paper covers, and are complete. Our German-reading friends should circulate these widely.

"Serve Jehovah with fear and rejoice with trembling. Kiss the son—recognize and bow before him and submit to his authority—lest he be angry and ye perish by the way when his wrath is kindled but a little." When a Senator was struck with death while battling for the lottery fiend, and another while doing the will of the disloyal Sunday new paper fraternity, one could but think of this fearful warning—'lest ye perish when his wrath is kindled but a little.'—J. H. Leiper, in Christian Statesman.

We must bow to King Christ or be murdered by Emperor Jehovah. That is the ultimatum of the government-by-God people. And what they think Jehovah will do to rebels they will do when they have the power if they cannot secure slavish obedience otherwise. History bears bloody witness to the validity of our inference.

The conservativ papers of France tried to make a point against the "godless" schools of the republic by pointing to Vaillant, who threw a bomb in the Chamber of Deputies, as one of their graduates. The London correspondent of the New York Times says that the charge has recoiled upon them in a most curious, unexpected, and disagreeable manner. They had argued in chorus that, as Vaillant was a product of the irreligious state schools, therefore the only way to fight against such men and the class they represent is "to restore the education of youth to the hands of the priests and religious orders. This theory was somewhat injured by the subsequent discovery that Vaillant spent all his school life with the Christian Brothers—first at Saint Remy, then in the higher studies at Mezieres. In both he was a prize pupil, and his poor old mother has a whole case full of books he won for piety, decorum, and scholastic ability. He was an acolyte at Mezieres and subject to religious ecstasies."

The New York Voice, very religious and fanatically prohibitive, is nevertheless in some degree amenable to reason and in a measure susceptible to the promptings of the spirit of justice. Referring to the persecution of the Adventists in Maryland and other Southern states, it says:

"These people are, we assume, sincere in their religious beliefs, and they are said to be unusually orderly and law-abiding. It is a serious question whether the Sunday law should not be flexible enough to grant such men, who conscientiously observe another day as the Sabbath, the right to engage in work in their own fields, where they disturb the religious devotion of nobody else."

It is a serious question indeed, but we wish to ask Rev. Mr. Funk whether those only who believe in some holy day have any rights on Sunday? If the Freethinker who engages in work in his own fields, where he "disturbs the religious devotion of nobody else," is to be fined or imprisoned, while for the Adventist, who takes Saturday for his holy day, the law is to be made "flexible enough" to secure him immunity if he works on Sunday, what becomes of the equality of citizens before the law? What becomes of religious liberty when one man's belief gives him opportunities which the lack of that belief denies to his neighbor? What has belief to do with work or play on Saturday, or Sunday, or Monday, except in so far as the individual has scruples which impel him to voluntarily abstain from either or both? What Constitutional right has law to make any inquiry regarding the religious belief of the American citizen? Will Mr. Funk answer these questions? One thing, at least, he should tell his readers, and that is that the Adventists have never asked for the suspension of the Sunday laws for their benefit because they keep Saturday. They demand their unconditional repeal, as being not only unjust but a factor of church and state union, and therefore unconstitutional.

The Christian Statesman gives the papacy some good advice, which perhaps could be profitably applied nearer home. Here is a sample:

"If you want to practice your religion in peace in this land, and persuade the people that you mean well for all, then you must, somehow, get your fingers out of the politics of the country, and do as other denominations of Christians are doing—attend to your own business, and not try to overturn the sacred institutions cemented with patriot blood and tears. We very much fear you are making trouble for yourself and for the country. It is with the utmost sincerity we give you this pointer and suggest that you stop and think."

Suppose, Doctors Crafts and McCrory, editors of the Christian Statesman and physicians in ordinary to his holiness the Pope, that you take a little of your excellent medicine yourselves. It is good medicine, we'll guarantee that, and you need not fear to administer big doses of it to the National Reform and Sabbath Observance associations. Begin the treatment right now; get your fingers out of the politics of the country, and do as only two denominations of Christians—the Adventists and Unitarians—are doing—attend to your own business, and not try to overturn the sacred secular institutions cemented with patriot blood and tears. We are sure you are making trouble for yourselves and for the country. It is with the utmost sincerity that we give you this pointer and suggest that you stop and think.

In the issue of this paper of December 9th, we referred to a story sent by a Shamokin, Pennsylvania, correspondent of the New York World telling how one James Starks, "an iron worker," had been stricken dumb for blasphemy! Our subscriber, J. Ward Diehl, lets in the light upon this "miracle" in a way that must dishearten good Christians (see page 810). But the Shamokin liar is still attending to business at the old stand. The New York Herald of December 17th has a lengthy dispatch from that Pennsylvania town which it "heads up" in this blood-curdling way.

Awful warning to blasphemers. John Simpkins suddenly stricken deaf and dumb after an outburst of profanity. Recovered through prayer. Foretold that he would again lose both speech and hearing, and so he did. Saw an angel in a vision.

We do not need to examine the dispatch closely; it is a rehash of the old story about James Stark, with some additional details and embellishments. Mr. Diehl states that there are no iron works in Shamokin, but this Christian miracle manufacturer says that "James Simpkins was one of the most faithful employes engaged in the large iron mills of Shamokin." It is not improbable that the yarn was spun by some stupid romancer who never saw Shamokin. Be that as it may, no Freethinker need be disturbed by such flights of fancy. They can effect only the most superstitious people, who would not join our ranks under any circumstances. But we should like to know how many readers of the Herald and World believe the ridiculous stuff.

Religion is one of the surest brain-turners, while obeying Bible commands is extra hazardous, in proof of which—if more proof is needed—read the accounts of four recent happenings:

"HOBOKEN, N. J., November 29th.—Workmen this morning began tearing down the house 121 Hudson street, preparatory to building a new engine house. The last occupant of the place was Hugh O'Neill, who kept a small store on the first floor, and lived alone. He refused to leave, saying that God had put him there, and he would not go away until God took him. Then he calmly set about cooking his breakfast, while the workmen began tearing down the building over his head. The chimney came down with a crash, burying O'Neill in the ruins, who was still preparing his breakfast. He was unconscious when taken out, and is not expected to live."

"BIRMINGHAM, ALA., November 24th.—Matilda Perkins, aged seventeen, is in the county jail to-night a raving maniac. She was a religious enthusiast, and on Wednesday attended the Sam Jones revival meeting. Sam's preaching enthused her so that she sprang up and began shouting. While standing on a bench in the presence of seven thousand people shouting she fell, and, striking on her head, injured it. She is perfectly well physically. It required three men to tie her and carry her to jail. She talks about Sam Jones all the time."

"RONDOUR, N. Y., November 14th.—Ira Krum, a fanatic, who for years has claimed to have revelations from God, died at his home in Snyder Hollow, among the Catskills, last night. His death is thought to have been caused by starvation. He announced some time ago that he had had a vision, in which he had been told that if he should fast for forty days he would be able to walk upon the water. He fasted the number of days, and then attempted to walk upon the water. He was nearly drowned. Not long after this he declared that he had had another vision, in which he had been commanded to fast twenty days more. He started on this fast, but became so broken down that neighbors compelled him to take nourishment, but the intervention came too late to save his life. Krum was extremely religious. In recent years he had many visions, in which, according to his story, he had intercourse with God."

"ELK RIVER, MINN., November 21st.—Theodore White, of Dayton, yesterday hacked off his right foot and right arm with an ax. It is not expected that White can recover. He recently tore out his eye, because 'If thine eye offend thee pluck it out' was the text he had found."

"Rational" Christians do not do this way. They know that the Bible is a book which must not be taken too seriously, so far as the affairs of this life are concerned. In theory they are believers, but doubters when it comes to practice.

Lectures and Meetings.

J. E. Remsburg will start on a tour through Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, and New England early in January.

The Brooklyn Philosophical Association holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of lectures for December:

December 31st.—Mr. Franklin Steiner.

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, meets in the Skerrett Building, Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock. Lectures for this month: December 26th.—Voltaire de Cleyre, "Economic Independence for Women—Reply to Professor Cope."

THE Manhattan Liberal Club meets every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, in German Masonic Hall, No. 220 East Fifteenth street, New York:

December 22d.—Walter S. Logan, "Arguments for an Eight Hour Law."

December 29th.—Ye Club Maketh Merrie. Program to be announced later.

THE Ohio Liberal Society meets in College Hall, 168½ Walnut street, Cincinnati, Sunday evenings at 7:45, prompt. Admission is free. Program:

December 24th.—C. O. Wilmot, "Do Christians Believe in Prayer?"

December 31st.—Judge R. W. McNeal, subject to be announced.

THE Pittsburg Secular Society meets in Curry University Hall, Sixth street, near Penn avenue, every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

THE First Secular Church of Portland, Ore., meets in Central Labor Council Hall, 170½ Second street near Yamhill, every Sunday at 7:30 p. m. Sunday-school in same place at 10:30 a. m.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Brooklyn Philosophical Association, Dec. 24th.
Boston, Ingersoll Secular Society, Jan. 7th, 14th.
Ohio Liberal Society, Cincinnati, Jan. 28th, 29th.
Delphos, O., Jan. 30th, 31st, and Feb. 1st.
Chicago, Ill., Feb. 18th, 25th.

Those who desire lectures at any points between New York and Chicago, and in the vicinity of Chicago during the month of February, will please write at once to Mr. Putnam, care of THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York.

COLONEL INGERSOLL gave his lecture on Lincoln in Philadelphia, Thursday night.

When Jesus was hung he invited a thief who was hung at the same time to take supper with the family in heaven. Thieves and rascals seem to have pretty generally accepted the protection of the church since that time.

If a man is very religious it is all right for him to get mad and curse loud enough to kill a fig-tree which does not belong to him.

Communications.

The Freethought Federation of America.

Since the inauguration of the Federation in September, 1892, its officers have been favored with valued advice from trustworthy friends, all of whom agree with us in the course we have adopted, and are equally desirous for a definite and national agitation, which shall place the ecclesiastical party upon the defensive, and, by giving a greater publicity to our principles, increase the number of our adherents. A desire for extended freedom for our citizens encourages us in our work. It is our desire, also, to rouse the friends of our cause from the dangerous indifference into which they have fallen. We are constantly engaged in the ordinary business of life; we have to depend upon our daily work for our daily bread, and supposed self-interest might lead us to remain quiescent, under the delusion that we have saved ourselves; but however others may feel, we find it impossible to remain silent while we see the stealthy march of superstition surely gaining upon us. We have waited and worked for the returning activity of our party, and "hope deferred maketh the heart sick," yet we shall continue our allegiance to the cause of humanity, and we ask your earnest support in the work we have undertaken.

I desire now to outline as briefly as possible the work we have before us for the coming year, in doing which we hope to be favored with a generous support.

I. A bill providing for state support of parochial schools has been drafted for presentation to the state legislature of New York during the coming session. This bill will be pushed vigorously by the Roman Catholic church, and will be supported by a petition, in which it is claimed that "religion is the true basis of all morality." Rome takes this step in order to cement the union of church and state, and to endow with public money her ecclesiastical hierarchy in America. The intention of its promoters is to ask for state aid in support of a particular church, as may be inferred from the language in which the petition is couched and the source from which it springs. It is our duty, and must be our task, to oppose any attempt to use state moneys for denominational schools or to further the interests of any religious organization. To vote public money for the assistance of a church school would be to "establish religion" by the state, sow the seeds of discord and ill-will—both of which the Protestant Bible in the common schools also does—and destroy the unity of our national system of education.

II. In Maryland, too, a circular, emanating from a Catholic source, has been printed and is to be distributed throughout the state for the purpose of feeling the pulse of public opinion concerning a scheme to put the parochial schools upon an equality with the public schools, so that they may receive a proportionate share of the state, county, and city appropriations for educational purposes.

In both these instances the Federation purposes to meet the issue by circulating literature adverse to such schemes, and by presenting a counter-petition to the legislatures of both states at the proper time. We must meet the enemy in the state capitals and use every possible means in our power to prevent the enactment of any such law.

Should they succeed in these attempts—which is not probable, though possible—it will be the signal for a national agitation along the same line. Bear in mind how similar influences corrupted Congress when the World's Fair Appropriation bill was pending, and secured for the church the fruits of victory while we were resting in self-satisfied contentment. We must not be caught napping this time; great interests are at stake here and a great principle involved. We must be ready, with the forces of freedom wheeled into line, to give real battle to the enemy.

It will be the work of the president or the secretary to conduct an active campaign upon these issues in both the states named. But take notice that we cannot do it without financial help. We must have sufficient money to carry on the fight. We must have the substantial assistance of our friends all over the country. It is the fight of all, for the success of the orthodox party in these states means an extension of the same policy all over the land. We must nip the evil in the bud, and so prevent the unholy liaison they wish to bring about.

Send in your subscriptions at once; let none delay; now is the time to "lend a hand" in earnest.

III. After this we shall be engaged in the prosecution of the suit against C. C. Bonney and his secretary for damages consequent upon their treatment of Betts. This case we mean to fight to the bitter end and show the orthodox world that in this republic Freethinkers have rights which must be respected.

IV. We wish to publish and distribute several documents of vast importance to our cause; documents which will educate the people to the point where they will demand their just rights and keep on the alert for the preservation of American institutions based on purely American principles.

If we fail now it will mean national degradation and national destruction. It is a question now whether we shall be "citizens of America" or "slaves of Rome." It is for you, Freethinkers, to say. There are enough of you to avert such a calamity. So step boldly forth, put your shoulders to the wheel of progress and liberty, and give it another turn. Smite the power that would turn back the hands of freedom's clock to the dark ages of Christian rule.

The orthodox party, emboldened by the actions of the last Congress, is now working harder than ever to obtain political power, that it may enjoy to the full its innate and ineradicable love of tyranny. We must prevent it. We must keep the sword of civil power out of the hand of the theologian.

Send your subscriptions in at once to 165 South Water street, Chicago, Ill.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH, Secretary.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, President.

God is Not Merciful.

I have often heard people say that God is merciful in saving ships, railroad trains, etc., from disaster. A preacher once said to me: "For what consideration and explanation will you become a believer of the Bible?" My reply was: "I will become a Christian and praying man just as soon as you show me one instance where prayer wrought anything, if by cursing God would not have brought about the same result." The good preacher thought he had a snap and told me he could point out hundreds of cases. When he came to point them out he found differently. He began telling me about a ship which God had a spite at I suppose, and by prayer it was saved from the angry billows.

"Were you ever aboard an ocean vessel?" said I.

"No sir," honestly replied the dear divine man.

"Well then, my dear sir, you have no right to speak for the vessel's crew. The men who generally have charge (I mean the men who do the work of climbing anywhere in a vessel) are not generally praying men. They know little of prayer and a good bit about swearing. I have been upon vessels when everything would have been lost had the crew knelt down and asked God to help them, instead of rushing about the vessel swearing and doing their duty. I want you to understand, my dear sir, that what I am saying is practical. I do not get my argument from some lying Sunday-school book or pamphlet as you do. Why don't your lying religious writers take a trip on some ocean steamer and write the truth about such affairs? Because it is not the truth you want the young mind to have. You want to scare them into believing."

"But," put in the preacher, "why is it that when these sailors get into a storm they are afraid of the wrath of God?"

"Kind sir, you were never upon a vessel so what knowledge you have is only from lying books written by men who know no more about such things than you do. I will be fair and frank with you. For every five praying soldiers, sailors, or railroad men you can find, I will pick you out ninety-five who swear."

"You are wild, you are unreasonable," put in the preacher.

"I am not; I am only telling you what you can find out yourself, and if you do not believe it just cut a rope for a sailor, turn the switch wrong for a railroader, or overload a gun for a soldier and have him shoot it off. Come back and tell me then whether they got down upon their knees and prayed for you or cursed you. Good-day."

Prayer is not a good thing at a fire, and swearing knocks it silly. Here is one instance: "Teams of horses were standing by. Railroad trains were rushing in, laden with firemen and fire apparatus from nearly all towns and cities within a radius of one hundred miles. Milton was being burned to the ground. Milton, beautiful Milton, with her five thousand people to be homeless, helpless. Churches were making just as hot fires as saloons. Preachers as well as other citizens were standing in the canal water up to their chins to keep from burning to death. It was 3:30 P.M. The fire had two hours' start. The whole northern portion of the town was on fire, and a just God was sending southward a terrible wind storm. The canal banks and river were lined with fire engines. The fire company I was with was taken to the extreme north of the fire, and the engine run down so near the river that the wheels were in the shallow water. We were near a lot of frame buildings. The fire was coming directly toward us. We could not hold the fort. Soon the frame buildings took fire. The fire became so hot and fierce that the engineer had to duck himself in the water to keep from burning up. Upon the bank of the river above us were a dozen or more men and women. Some of them had just made their exit from one of the burning houses. One woman had a Bible in her hands—the only article taken from the building. Men and women were praying. The fire had become so hot at the steamer that the engineer deserted her and waded out into the river away from the heat. The driver was attempting to get the team of horses to the engine, but they would not go within a hundred feet of it. Some of the firemen attempted to pull the engine by a rope. They could not move it. The engineer went and took hold of the rope without any result. He looked up the bank. The men and women were praying and pulling their hair. With a long string of oaths, the engineer wound up with: 'If you God-damned crazy idiots would come down here and help get this engine up the river it would do more good than your worthless praying.' They stumbled and tumbled down the bank and took hold. Everybody put their strength to the rope, and the engine was soon dragged to where the horses could be hitched to it, and it was drawn up the river. After the new location was reached, that very engine saved what was left of the upper end of the town, for, after she was given steam once more, she pumped water for twenty-four hours without stopping once."

Would some praying gentleman please tell me whether the prayers of those people or the swearing of the engineer won the day? What if all the firemen had got down upon their knees?

This is no Bible story, neither was it taken from a Sunday-school book. It was something that actually occurred.

I remember there was one little street urchin who had helped to pull the engine to the horses. The come-to-Jesus people began again asking God to save them and their property, when the street urchin blurted out: "I'd like to seed God yank that heavy engine like we did. He couldn't have done her."

Watson town, Pa.

J. WARD DIEHL.

Sparks From the Lecture Field.

My lecture in Boston before the Ingersoll Secular Society closed my engagements in Massachusetts. A visit to Boston on a mission of Freethought invariably causes my heart to swell with joy. A sight of old "Paine Hall" does me good, and fills me with greater zeal to continue the work of that "author hero," Thomas Paine. With Washburn in the editorial chair, and Mendum at the helm, the Investigator, which, for more than sixty years, has weathered the storms of adversity, still rides the waves.

I return again to New York, where I attend to the business of the Federation and prepare for my journey Westward. Philadelphia is my first halting place. I gave two lectures here, and the largest audiences I have ever been favored with greeted me. Imagine my surprise when on entering the hall my eyes fell upon Dr. Westbrook, who had taken a seat upon the platform. A cordial greeting took place between us.

The multitude of faces before me was inspiring, and whether my remarks were appreciated or not, one thing is certain, they brought out a good discussion. My topic was "Freethought as a Factor in Politics," and it afforded an opportunity for those holding diverse opinions to say something regarding their particular views. All reformers agree upon the necessity for a change, but opinions differ when methods for effecting it are discussed. The Socialist and the Anarchist unite upon the main proposition, but their methods are radically different. Between the two conflicting systems, the indifferent observer is left to form an opinion for himself; and this, I urged, is the very essence of Freethought; it is the forerunner of true Liberty and the only possible method by which human rights can be maintained. As a system Freethought does not necessarily endorse either, but, as individuals, Freethinkers may adhere to any system. Personally, I cannot agree with those who declare that the church and state are evils alike. The state is an aggregation of individuals. Each child born into the state becomes a part of the state. Is that child and its existence to be declared a part of the evil, inasmuch as it is a part of the state? We ourselves are part of the state, we help to make up the state, but who can honestly say that our existence is an evil? With the church it is an entirely different question; we are not born into the church, we are most assuredly born into the state. Wherever men live together in communities, there the state exists; where the state exists, there must be government; where there is government, there must be law, and where there is law measures must be adopted for its enforcement. Our purpose, then, should be to see that only good and beneficent laws are enacted; and, further, that all who make up the state shall be equal before these laws, regardless of color or sex. These were the views I urged in my lecture before the League.

In the evening the old hall was crowded. Every available seat was occupied before the lecture opened, and before I got through fully two hundred more came in and had to be content with "stand-up seats" at the rear of the hall. There must have been fully seven hundred people present. Boston, and Cincinnati, too, will have to guard their laurels. The three cities have splendid organizations, which are doing grand work for Freethought. George Longford is the backbone of the Quaker City League, and his labors for its success are deserving of the highest praise.

Monday morning, in response to an invitation from Dr. Westbrook, I pay him a friendly visit, and he takes me for a drive through Fairmount Park. We talked of old times; mutual explanations were made, affairs were fully discussed, and old scores were wiped out and forgotten. I was glad of an opportunity for this visit. One thing I can say with the utmost confidence, that however we may disagree with Dr. Westbrook, he is thoroughly sincere and honest in his personal convictions. That we do disagree with him upon methods of work and the proper course we should pursue as an organization of Freethinkers, is an undisputed fact; yet to disagree is a privilege we must cheerfully accord to all. The doctor has used that right, and has spoken accordingly. He is friendly to our cause, and expressed the greatest satisfaction at the progress we are making. We cannot agree with him in his views concerning the right of Congress to enact Sunday laws like the World's Fair Appropriation Bill; but again, I say it is his privilege to hold such opinions, and to utter them. It is quite another thing when the question is raised as to the practical indorsement of such opinions by the Freethinkers of America. Before I left Dr. Westbrook he presented me with a copy of each of his books, and we parted upon terms of friendship.

Tuesday evening I attend a meeting of the Woman's Liberal League, when Mrs. Kilgore, a lawyer of Philadelphia, gave a splendid lecture upon the "Parliament of Religions." It was short and sweet, and brought forth a long and lively discussion. In response to an invitation, I commenced the debate, being followed by Dr. Westbrook, Dr. Douset, and several others. The Woman's League is an adjunct of the Friendship League, and though a comparatively new organization, it has reached good proportions, and a splendid future is certainly before it.

The next morning I am off again. This time for Alliance, Ohio, where I gave two lectures.

The Smith family is still with the old ship, and they seem determined to stick to it until the last. A severe snow storm had set in just before my lectures, which made the roads so bad that many of our friends living in the country were prevented from being present, but the attendance was fair considering the inclemency of the weather. My first lecture was a reply to two thanksgiving sermons by different preachers in this town. I publicly challenged them to defend what they had said, in open debate, though this is about all that will come out of it. Old Alliance is feeling the strain of the present commercial depression; but the Freethinkers rallied to our call and gave all the assistance they could. Richard Smith and his wife entertained me while here, and his "big brother" tried his best to make things lively for me.

At Irwin, O., the Christians played us a mean trick, but that is nothing unusual with them. In this town there is a wooden structure used as a church, and known as the "Union church." It is let for minstrel shows, magic lantern exhibitions, political gatherings, etc., and our friends had secured the use of it for my lecture, even paying for janitor service in advance. The ranters prevented us from using the hall, but they did not stop the lecture by any means. They went to the janitor and commanded him to deliver up the keys, which he did. They then carried them several miles away, so that if we used the place at all, we would have to break in and render ourselves liable to prosecution. The howling Methodists have, by trickery, secured temporary control of the building, though never a red cent did they pay toward its construction, while the very people who built it, the Infidels, are now, by cunning, cheated out of its use. Had I been fortunate enough to get into this town two days earlier, I would have lectured in that hall in spite of them. Having paid a sum of money for its use, we were tenants, by the laws of the state, for the time specified, and I would have compelled these ignoramuses to bring back those keys and give us admittance under pain of arrest. As it was, I did not arrive there until about two hours before the time of commencing my lecture, so, as a last resort, we occupied the schoolhouse, where I spoke to a crowded audience. We had a good time despite the Christian attempts to shut us out.

The conduct of the church people has reflected most disastrously upon their own heads. They have done themselves more harm than good. Expressions of disapprobation of their actions were heard on all sides. The opinion seemed to be unanimous, that this one lecture made more converts to the cause of Freethought than all the preachers will be able to make during their contemplated protracted meetings for the coming winter season. And what is more, the churches gave me valuable assistance. The next morning, mine host, J. S. Van Ness, drove me over to Mechanicsburg, and this time I had a splendid audience in the town hall. Upon my arrival the churches speedily organized special meetings for the night. Prayer meetings, choir practices, gospel circles, etc., filled the little town with excitement. The church bells rang out on the air of night with discordant sounds, and I recalled the address given by Captain Adams at our late congress upon the subject. Truly, they seemed to say: "Hell and damnation," "no taxation," with emphasis for the occasion upon the former. Their efforts to keep the people away from the lecture were without fruit, for the body of the hall was well filled, and quite a few sat up in the gallery. The brothers Van Ness—George, Jake, and John—were on hand at each meeting. These old Infidels were in great glee. Mr. Munn had retained much of the enthusiasm which he derived from the Congress, and he was there, too. The young students from the high school were out in good force, and I was pleased to see them there. Our friends are talking now of organization, and in due time it will be effected here. Mechanicsburg has been run by preachers too long. A reaction has now set in and there is a falling off in clerical power. We only ask for a hearing, and we are willing to make a wager on the result, wherever Freethought can be heard against the doctrines of the church.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.

Truth the Messiah.

[SEE ISA. LIII.]

Who have believed what we have said?
To whom is TRUTH revealed?
For he to humble lot was wed,
In lowly garb concealed.

He marked with sign, but no one saw;
He spoke, but no one heard;
The eye was blinded to his law;
Ear deafened to his word.

There seemed no beauty in his face,
That men might him desire;
They looked for one of pompous grace,
In splendor of attire.

He went unnoticed through the year,
Locked out from honor's halls,
From human heart of hopes and fears
Shut out by stony walls.

But he has broke his prison chain
And pierced error's wall;
Out of obscurity and pain
He comes to conquer all.

Madison, Wis.

O. L. CALLECOT.

Churchly Purpose and Performance.

W. Johnson, member of Parliament and Orangeman, is a bitter opponent of the Home Rule bill, because, as he alleges, it would destroy religious liberty by handing the Protestants of Ireland over to the tender mercies of the Catholics. But when Mr. Manfield, Charles Bradlaugh's successor in the House of Commons, introduced a bill which, if adopted, will give civil and religious liberty to such persons as may desire to bequeath money to Freethought societies, Mr. Johnson at once placed himself in determined opposition, which shows that his love of religious liberty is a hollow sham, like that of the American Protestants who insist on keeping the Protestant Bible in the public schools, while they denounce as "un-American" and tyrannical the Catholics who want a part of the school money for their educational institutions. . . . The Duke of Grafton forbids his tenants to work in their plots on Sundays and Christmas and says that "each tenant and his family is expected to attend some place of worship on such days with regularity." . . . The London Freethinker lets in the light upon a very dark orb, the Christian Weekly Sun, which shows what pious fairness is worth: "Under the heading, 'A Bradlaugh Reminiscence,' it devotes a quarter of a column to the recent correspondence between Mrs. Bonner and the Rev. Allen Rees. Will it be believed that the Sun gives the story told by the reverend gentleman, and the full text of Sir Isaac Holden's interesting supplement, without a single word of Mrs. Bonner's refutation?

Nay, that it does not so much as hint that Mr. Bradlaugh's daughter regards the story as false? Really the Christian mind seems absolutely incurable in the matter of unveracity. It uses the suppressio veri and the suggestio falsi with equal ease, apparently thinking that all is fair against Infidelity." . . . After having served the state for thirty-six years the German ex-minister and teacher, J. Lovek, has been paid 1128 marks instead of being granted a yearly pension. The trouble was that he had stated he agreed with Max Nordau in his "Religious Lies." When he was suspended from his office the chief judge said: "You have exerted a great influence on your pupils, but you have made a great mistake; you could not keep your mouth shut." . . . The clerical party has been running Belgium for the last ten years. During this time it succeeded in abolishing government (public) schools, and substituting therefor a "free" school system, under which the church or the communes could establish and maintain schools if they pleased. The present ministry has now presented a report to the Belgian congress tabulating the outcome of ten years of clerical rule. Thirty-eight per cent. (2,400,000 people) can neither read nor write. In Flanders more than half of the population have never entered a school. Belgium has at present five thousand "free" schools, but it has also two thousand cloisters with 35,000 monks and nuns, and 100,000 saloons. . . . At the Upsala church celebration a Rev. Mr. Fehr moved that all who wished to and did leave the Swedish State Church should cease contributing to the same. The motion was promptly voted down, inasmuch as it would cut down the nominal church attendance and thus publish to the world the decline of Christianity in Sweden. . . . The Finnish Protestant mission at Ovamboland in Africa has worked hard for twelve years and has succeeded in converting six natives. The cost of the mission for each year has been $6,282. That is, the twelve years' mission work cost $75,384, or $12,566 for each convert. . . . When Pope Leo XIII held his jubilee he received from pilgrims, societies, and individuals, the sum of $1,812,000; of this Americans contributed $120,000. . . . Twelve churches in London, richly endowed, have an attendance, all told, of only two hundred and eighty persons. . . . Music and Drama, a New York paper, has been debarred from sale in Toronto. . . . Miss Willard quotes from the London Times of July 18, 1797: "On Friday a butcher exposed his wife for sale in Smithfield market with a strap about her waist which tied her to a railing. A drover was the purchaser at three guineas and a crown." That occurred, not in "Ingersollville," nor in Turkey, but in Christian England at about the time Freethinkers were rotting in her jails for the crime of selling Paine's "Rights of Man."

The Toronto Anti-Sunday Car Association is alive and aggressive, as its name implies. Of the friends of Sunday cars one of its members said: "The better people can destroy the influence of the bumper element and crush every man who opposes us." Another remarks that the Sunday car movement "is inspired by the devil," while a third characterizes the promoters of that movement as "secondhands." . . . An Adventist preacher and a member of his church were fined $50 each in Gainesville, Ga., Nov. 20th, for having worked on Sunday, although the charge was disorderly conduct. The case was appealed. As soon as they were out of jail they were required to give bond to answer to the charge of Sabbath-breaking. The usual fine for "disorderly conduct" is only $5 and costs. They were not allowed to show that others were working on Sunday, including men in the employ of the mayor, who imposed the fine. . . . The movement for the Sunday-closing of barber shops has reached Denver. . . . Samuel Pertak, a clerk in a Monroe street grocery store in this city was arrested for selling a loaf of bread on Sunday. He was held for trial. . . . At Plaquemine, La., more than seventy persons, indicted by the grand jury for violation of the Sunday law, pleaded guilty and were fined $25 each. The judge warned them that if they were brought before him again on a similar charge they must expect much more severe treatment. . . . The Sabbath-Sunday people are doing all they can to cripple the efforts of the promoters of the mid-winter Fair in San Francisco, by inducing those able to give financial aid to make their assistance conditional upon the Sunday-closing of the Fair. . . . On November 19th more than eighty arrests were made in Philadelphia for violation of the Sunday laws. . . . San Bernardino, Cal., has taken its place in the Sunday procession, an ordinance closing all places of business except bakeries, news stands and drug stores, having gone into effect on November 5th. . . . In Cincinnati the police made fifty-four arrests on November 19th, for violation of the Sunday ordinance and closed a hall where an exhibition of Spiritualism was being given, the latter because an admittance fee was charged. Of course a collection is never taken in church. . . . In Minneapolis the ministers are trying to run the city government, so far as Sunday work is concerned. Mayor Eustis seems to think that the preachers are not the only tradesmen who may rightfully keep their places of business open Sunday. . . . The West Virginia Sunday law exempts from its penalties those who conscientiously believe that the seventh day is the Sabbath and abstain from work thereon. This does not abstain the Adventist from persecution, however. The West Virginia Monitor's correspondent in Newark writes to the journal: "Not far from here a Seventh-day Adventist has been persecuted in many ways. Not long since they burned his wheat in the stack." . . . The law and Order League of Danbury, Conn., has set to work to enforce the Sunday laws in that city.

Orthodoxy is running amuck in Spain. Ex-artillery lieutenant Pascual Ravenza has been sentenced to three years and seven months' imprisonment besides a fine of two hundred and fifty francs and costs. Sr. Ravenza wrote in Las Dominicales an article on "The Life and Doings of St. Chrysostomus." The article, which we have read, contains no more than can be found in P  re Croisset's "Anne   Chreti  ne." But Croisset twangs the golden harp in the New Jerusalem, while his translator is left to philosophize among thieves and murderers on the beauty of Christian tolerance and love.

Freethought and Morality—Islam and Theosophy.

I lectured at Newark Sunday afternoon on "Freethought and Morality," defining first the foundation of morality—namely, the unity of life, which compels the recognition of equal rights, on which rights are founded duties, and without rights there are no duties. The slave cannot be a moral being.

Secondly. The standard of morality—namely, universal human happiness, than which there can be no better. If there is anything in any Bible or any religion that makes the world happier, we accept it; if not, we reject. Freethought as to the past life of the human race is selective and constructive, and not simply destructive. But it is destructive of all that makes unhappiness.

Christianity is a failure. It has existed for eighteen hundred years, and has certainly made the world no better—probably worse.

It is Freethought that will hereafter make for the improvement of humanity by cultivating, first of all, in every human being the sentiments of self-respect, of sympathy, and of reverence; reverence for life itself, and not for God.

It will educate humanity; unfold all its faculties, physical and mental. It will equip for this life, teach industry, citizenship, and the duties of parentage, than which there can be nothing more important. This world is for us the supreme world, the best world, and we can only make a grand hereafter by fulfilling the duties of the present time.

In the Newark Liberal League, as in the New York Liberal Club, the main criticism of my lecture was that I did not deal with economics. There is a certain class who can see nothing but economics. We all recognize the value of economics, but economics is only a branch. There must be education, ethics, science in its broadest field, and philosophy, art, and poetry. It is important to have wise and just economics; but this can never come without an intelligent people; and intelligence can only come by Freethought. Freethought is, therefore, fundamental and necessary in the settlement of every economical problem. The church has never undertaken to do anything in this way. It has always been a stumbling-block. But when the Infidel has won, then the church claims the credit.

In the evening, with Henry Bird, I went to hear Mohammed Alexander Russell Webb in the same hall, who gave a lecture on Islam. It was quite interesting, and showed the superiority of the religion of Mohammed to that of orthodox Christianity. Mohammedanism is not the true name of the religion, but Islam, which means resigned to God. It is pre-eminently a religion of God.

Mohammed never claimed to be anything but an ordinary man. Hence there are no miracles in his system, no immaculate birth, no total depravity, no vicarious atonement, no fall of man, no garden of Eden, and no rib or whale story. Although the Mohammedan prays five times a day, he expects no answer to his prayers, for God is unchangeable. The general impression among the intelligent Islamites is that prayer does a man no hurt, even if it does no good. It is a moral drill, like dress parade in the army. It preserves discipline and the esprit de corps. Mohammed understood human nature, and that prayer, if it did not effect the deity, was an excellent method of keeping man in trim.

There is no hiring priesthood in Islam, no ecclesiastical power as in Christianity. Those who lead in religious services are not "professionals." They are engaged in ordinary avocations. They may be butchers, or bakers, or candlestick makers. They occupy the position at the head of the services out of mere good-will and get no pay for it. There is no class in Islam like our preachers and priests.

Woman is the equal of man in Islam. She has a soul and goes to heaven like man. In marriage she has her private apartment and the husband cannot enter at any time without her permission. She is a separate individual, and her property rights have been respected for the last twelve hundred years.

The Christian missionaries have never converted a single intelligent Mohammedan. They will never discuss with an intelligent Islamite, for they know they will be beaten in philosophy, theology, and history every time. When they want converts they have to go to the slums and buy them.

It will thus be seen how much more civilized, respectable, and common-sensed Islam is than orthodox Christianity. It is in doctrine much like radical Unitarian Christianity.

So long as Webb is dealing with a Christian he can wipe the floor with him and knock him out every time. Islam is away ahead of Christianity. Mohammedanism is really a reformation of Christianity, and is greater, more far-reaching, and more moral than the Reformation of Luther. But when Webb gets into a Liberal club he finds it different sailing. He can't get along quite so victoriously. After the lecture room was open for discussion and President Bird began to probe the lecturer on the God question, Mr. Webb tried to dodge. He did not care to meet the issue; it was too big. It seems that while the ignorant Mussulman believes in a personal God, the intelligent Mussulman does not. God is impersonal, a spirit, the cause of all things, especially of the good, but also of the evil as a necessary contrast to the good. "But," says Bird, "what is the use of a God behind nature? Nature is all we want. If the partly intelligent Mussulman throws aside a personal God, will not a more intelligent Mussulman, a truly scientific one, throw aside God altogether, like Tyndall," etc? "No," says Webb, "we must go beyond science. Science—material science—will not give us God; but the good Mussulman will never give up the conception of God, however attenuated it may become. There is a mystical philosophy that explains the theory of a God, and that is the higher philosophy of the most advanced Mussulman. Not even an impersonal God was retained, but a very mysterious thing which could not be explained even in a day or year. It required an adept." It then dawned upon me that this "advanced Mohammedanism" was, after all, an old acquaintance—namely, Theosophy; and I inquired of Mohammed Webb if he was not a Theosophist. He did not deny the impeachment and admitted that he was a member of the Theosophical Society of India. So, after all, Webb is but a Mohammedan-Theosophist, and is really at heart no more of a Mussulman than Annie Besant. The one could just as well pose as a Mussulman as the other. And I do not suppose that Webb is any more of a representative of Islam than Savage is of Christianity. Suppose Savage, or Chadwick, or Lloyd Jones went to India as interpreters of Christianity. Honestly, would their hearers get a correct idea of real Christianity—of the real thing in human history? Such is Webb's interpretation of Islam. It is a Theosophical interpretation. It would probably be repudiated by ninety-nine out of a hundred of the real Mussulmans, as ninety-nine out of a hundred Christians would repudiate Savage's interpretation.

Theosophy is a very variable affair. It allows much latitude. One can be a Theosophist and be a Mussulman, a Buddhist, a Brahman, a Christian, a Spiritualist, and even a Liberal in a certain sense. It is not the universality of Theosophy that allows this association with different religions, but its mysticalness, its indefiniteness. No one has yet given a definition of Theosophy in which all Theosophists agree. I do not doubt the sincerity of Webb, but he is first of all a Theosophist, and then a Mussulman, as Mr. Savage is first of all a Rationalist, and then a Christian; and it is my opinion that Mr. Webb represents a sect of Mussulmans as Mr. Savage represents a sect of Christians.

Mohammed Webb is doing a fine thing in his anti-Christian crusade; but, when he comes to tackle scientific Atheism, he has more than his match, and must succumb and fall back on faith and mystery. He gives one superstition in place of another; a better superstition, indeed; but as we want no superstition, the improvement is of no avail. The only improvement is to destroy all superstition, all mystery, all faith, and stick to science and humanity.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

At the Front.

On my way to Correctionville, Ia., I met the Rev. Joseph Slattery, the ex-priest, who had just finished a course of anti-Catholic lectures in Des Moines. Mr. Slattery is very liberal, and a conversation with him upon religious topics was interesting and instructive. He paid his respects to the Protestant ministers by saying that they were the greatest set of cowards in the world, and, although they know the great danger that threatens us from the incursions of Romanism, they do not care to speak against it themselves nor to encourage others to do so.

After a day's journey I arrived in Correctionville, a prosperous village of one thousand inhabitants, situated in the Sioux Valley, in northwestern Iowa. A. H. Petty met me and conducted me to the local hotel, which is kept by himself. Mr. Petty is the leading Freethinker of the place. In his office may be found copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER and Freethought works.

At the opera house I lectured upon the subject, "Popular Evidences in Favor of Christianity Tested." About two years ago, when Mr. Jamieson was here, some Christian youth put forth the strongest Christian argument—eggs. When I finished and discussion was invited, the Rev. Mr. Powell, of the Congregational church, invited all present to attend his church on the following Sunday. He declined to say anything in public in reply to myself. After the meeting was over I was introduced to the reverend gentlemen and he invited me to take a sleigh ride with him the next day, which I did. While I was in his company we discussed the relations of Freethought and Christianity, and I found him much more reasonable than most ministers.

The following evening the audience was considerably larger. My subject was, "Morality Without Christianity." During part of the lecture beans were thrown against the windows of the hall. Christians resort to some very mean and small methods. No one this evening accepted my invitation to discuss.

On Saturday night, "the big time" came. My subject was "The Great Religious Conspiracy Against the Republic." The audience was not large when I began, but it doubled during the lecture. More Christians were out than at either of the previous meetings. They had determined to surprise me. Before I went to the hall, I saw some bills scattered over the town stating that the Rev. Mr. Zellhoefer would begin a series of revival meetings in the Baptist church Sunday morning. The reverend had been in town the day before, and unknown to me, was at my Friday night meeting taking notes. When I called for discussion, he arose. The Christians were jubilant. Soon they began to cheer him vociferously. At first he said that I had talked an hour and a half, and by the time he had talked an hour and a half, the audience would be ready to go home. But he didn't talk quite fifteen minutes. Half of his speech was a repetition of what he had said during the other half. He ended with an exhortation to all to come out and hear him preach. When he sat down the Rev. Mr. Powell arose, and stated that as his church was the largest he would invite his reverend brother to come to his church and preach. They took several minutes arranging for the meeting and in asking the people to come. If any class of men have cheek, and a superabundance of it, that class is the clergy. When I arose to reply I told the two ministers that they should credit me with the large amount of advertising that they had received for their churches by means of an Infidel meeting, although I had never seen such unlimited gall before. I reminded the reverend that he had called my arguments flimsy and unworthy of answer, yet he would reply to them in his church when he thought I was out of town. I also said that his Methodist brother differed from him concerning the effect of Freethought lectures, for he would not attend, and advised others not to come, for fear they might become Infidels. Would the gentleman himself advise his congregation to go? If he would he is different from most ministers.

The preacher is going to pitch into me from the pulpit, as he thinks I am going away. I am coming back, however, and he will again hear from me.

FRANKLIN STEINER.

The Heston Loan.

LIBERAL FRIENDS: As I promised, I will now make a statement of the money loaned me up to date, or rather up to about four weeks ago, for since that time none has been received.

L. G. Reed, New York city, $1; T. R. Burrows, Chatham, N. Y., $2; W. F. Jamieson, Mosca, Col., $1; A. B. Bennett, Norwalk, Conn., 50c; Louis Levine, Charleston, S. C., $5; W. L. Tanber, Gladdens, Pa., $2; Dr. E. B. Foote, New York City, $5; Ernst Platz and wife, Bridesburg, Pa., $2; Charles Gregg, Garnett, Kan., 50c; J. W. Gilbert, Friend, Neb., $5; A. T. McMillan, Wamego, Kan., $5; — New Britain, Conn., $5; C. Putnam, Gibbon, Neb., $2.50; H. C. Mosher, Gilman, Ill., $2; Francis and Ruth Brettell, Rochester, N. Y., $2; E. H. Ralston, Elmo, Mo., $2.50; M. J. Lamme, Elmo, Mo., $1; Frank Kidder, Elmo, Mo., $1; Prof. J. H. Cook, Columbus, Kan., 1; Gilbert Lincoln, Willimantic, Conn., $25; — Akson, Ia., $1; J. G. Hill, M. D., and J. Will Hudson, Elma, Wash., $4; Etta Marden, Pennacook, N. H., $1; B. Thorpe, Beaver Dam, Wis., $1; O. W. Brayton, Brayton, N. Y., $2. Total $80.

I most heartily appreciate the aid which these generous friends have given me in my time of need and shall repay them as soon as I can do so, but I am not yet out of my financial difficulties, and if I can raise a hundred and fifty or two hundred dollars more, I can get along, and it will be all I ask. I would be glad to borrow it of anyone on a year's time and pay six or even ten per cent interest if I could get it, for I must get help from somewhere or perhaps be compelled to stop this cartoon work, which I do not like to do. I once could give a mortgage as security for a loan, but now I have nothing but my word of honor to offer, which, I am glad to say, has never been questioned by those who know me. I do not feel like airing my own private troubles, to explain why I am now financially embarrassed, as it would take too long, but the shameless rascality of some parties whom I supposed were my friends, and the illness of my wife, have not only taken all I had, but left me in debt. The Truth Seeker Co. pay me for my work all they can afford to, and under ordinary circumstances we could get along well and save money, but bad luck overtakes the best of us at times. If any are so situated to make me any further loans, they can send money by any of the usual methods and address me at this place.

WATSON HESTON.

San Diego, Cal., Box 242.

Observations.

I read with admiration in THE TRUTH SEEKER of December the 9th Mr. S. P. Putnam's defense of his course in selecting Freethought as his special field of labor, to the exclusion of those reforms which embrace Socialism, Anarchism, road improvement, local autonomy, prohibition, the finance question, the social evil, and particularly the relations of capital and labor. I admired it so much that I was sorry I had not written it myself in order that my admiration might be unmixed with envy.

But if Putnam has shown by argument why the Liberal lecturer should stick to his text, like the shoemaker to his last or the postage stamp to its envelope, Mr. John R. Charlesworth has demonstrated that proposition by illustration. For my own part, I have perused no remarks on government that satisfied my longings like those of Thomas Paine, who maintained that the state was a necessary evil, like a jail for example, although he did not refer specifically to that kind of institution. Following out Paine's notion, I have been forced to conclude that we have as little reason to be proud of the state house where laws are enacted as of the state prison where they are executed; and that whereas the penitentiary is a blot on civilization, the aforesaid state house is equally so, and a still greater burden to the extent that it is not so near self-supporting. Furthermore, if empty jails are a matter over which we may congratulate ourselves, then empty and echoing halls of congress should likewise be the subject of general felicitation. But the prospect, as I say with regret, is that while the progress of enlightenment and the softening influences of humane teachings bid fair to reduce our criminal class, and while we may look forward to the depopulation of our jails, our state houses increase in size and the crop of legislators is multiplying. As Mr. Paine noted in his own day, the complexity of the state and the expense of maintaining it increase in about the proportion that they ought to diminish.

So when I see Freethought advocates exalt the state as Mr. Charlesworth does, or proposing to extend its functions and enlarge the evil under the system of Socialism, as Mr. Wakeman does, I feel like asking them to reread Mr. Putnam's defense and resolve to confine themselves to the fight against usurpations committed in the name of the church and the church-state. They will find all the strength necessary to this resolution if they will but consider what immense strides Freethought has enabled civilization to make and how little has been accomplished in that direction by labor agitation and legislative quackery. I turn Mr. Charlesworth over to the merciful severity of Mr. E. C. Walker and that other correcter of popular error, my Uncle Benjamin R. Tucker.

The recently elected Masterworkman Sovereign of the Knights of Labor declares himself to be an out-and-out free trader; that is, he believes that when an American citizen has paid the owner's price for an article in Europe or elsewhere, together with the cost of transportation to these shores, he has a right to bring his property home with him. I can not imagine how the opposit of this proposition can be defended by any one who ever heard of justice; nor can I understand how men who extort from such citizen in the name of tariff a percentage of the value of his property have escaped the penalty attached to piracy on the high seas.

Verdicts for damages, aggregating $13,537, have been returned against three New York daily papers, guilty of libel. Some time ago a man and woman of Toronto traveled in company from that city to this, where the woman met her husband. The papers called it an elopement, and were sued and mulcted as they ought to have been. The elopement of a man and a woman is a matter of taste, but malicious libel is a crime. A man and a woman, though both married to others, may elope with cleaner minds and have less criminal intent than the newspaper managers who publish the facts because they are supposed to be nasty.

There is a class of people who, when the devil fails to find other mischief for their idle hands to do, fall to criticising their betters. I am one of that class, and my present drive is at Otto Wettstein, who, as my conceit prompts me to say, is wasting time and occupying space vainly, jabbing away at the spirits. I would as soon think of barking at the moon, or of trying to bite a chunk out of it with my teeth, as to attempt to disprove the existence of spirits. The Spiritualists mind their own business better than I do, but I bear them no grudge on that account. They hold their public seances or their little private circles and commune with what Mr. B. F. Underwood used to call their subjectiv thought projected into objectivity. I have always believed they were victims of the old religious delusion about a future life, and that as the believers in gods attributed all mysterious things to various and sundry gods, so the Spiritualists refer them to spirits of various and sundry defunct persons. They mix a lot of new and unexplained facts with the ancient and unproved theory of continued existence, and there you have Spiritualism. Except for the said theory of continued existence, they would never have thought of spirits. They would have catalogued the facts with other natural facts, and would have been plain, unvarnished Materialists. But the Spiritualists have no clubs or laws, and ask from the state only the protection accorded to persons who believe otherwise; therefore, they are our friends, or at least not our enemies. May their tribe increase by continuing to deplete the ranks of the churchians.

I confess to inability to read Spiritualistic literature with patience greater than that with which I peruse theological sermons. The language of the average Spiritualist lecturer or writer is awful in its vacuity, like a bottomless chasm. It abounds in words of vague meaning, and its construction baffles grammatical analysis. We read about the entical, the phenomenal, the auditiv, the translucent, the psychologically apparent, the intuitively perceptive, the excarnate, the clairaudient, the ethereal, and the atmospherically diaphanous. The use of these terms may be compatible with profound thinking, but I believe that a balloon inflated with them would float.

The opponents of Spiritualism have the same fault. Speaking of "manifestations," Mr. Wettstein says that unless proof is forthcoming "all phenomena based upon such hypothesis must be relegated to the repertoire of the theurgist or vendor of legerdemain." Gaze on these words—"phenomena," "hypothesis," "relegated," "repertoire," "theurgist," "legerdemain!" Under such a blanket of Greek, Latin, and French it is no wonder the writer lost sight of his original idea, thought out, doubtless, in Anglo-Saxon. And that the idea is lost anyone who notes the positions in which "phenomena" and "hypothesis" are placed will see at once. Phenomena do not have a hypothesis for a base. Relatively, the hypothesis is on top. My observation convinces me that the consideration of Spiritual theories dissipates the moisture of the think-tank, and makes the brain rattle. Writing and talking persons far advanced in the study of the occult should return to the dewy grass and take a fresh start. They may without offense be misunderstood by others, but it is a more serious matter when their writing passes the comprehension of themselves.

At the old Koster and Bial theater, Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue, there are on exhibition about seven hundred specimens of the instruments of torture used on church and state offenders in the Middle Ages. A few days ago the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER detailed me to visit the exhibition and write a description of it for these columns. I did the visiting and inspecting with the idea that the result could be used as material for a paragraph in these Observations, and with that thought in my mind, I began the work of telling the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER what they would see for the admission price of fifty cents. I had read of these instruments of torture, and presumed that I knew what they were; but I now find that simple description could convey no notion of them. As the advertisers say, they must be seen to be appreciated; but as everybody cannot see them, the only recourse is to illustration, and the Editor has suggested the introduction of cuts. Furthermore, the exhibit is so large that my essay has grown to considerable length, and I have got permission to make a special article on the subject, which, with the cuts, is likely to occupy two or three pages of this paper, and I shall not complain if it is made into a pamphlet. It is a gruesome subject, not to be lightly treated. These old instruments of torture show how Christianity was propagated a few hundred years ago as plainly as old spinning-wheels and looms show how the manufacture of cloth was introduced. I am not bragging about my treatment of the case, but I wish that a million people could see the illustrations. As exhibiting the method by which the religion of love got followers, they cannot be equaled. GEO. E. MACDONALD.

On Sunday evening next, 24th, Dr. J. H. Duren Ward will give a free lecture under the auspices of the Science Sermons Society, in the lecture room of Rev. Robert Collyer's church, Park avenue, corner of 34th street. The subject will be "A Christmas Sermon, with the History of Christmas."

English Spelling Immoral.

In Mr. Putnam's notice of Colonel Smart's admirable lecture on schools before the Manhattan Liberal Club, given in THE TRUTH SEEKER for Dec. 16th, kindly mention was made of my few remarks on that occasion. I spoke of the need which existed for a thorough teaching of phonics in all grades of schools, and the necessity for a reform in spelling to lessen the time and labor now spent in learning to read and write. Colonel Smart's lecture was on "The Relation of State to the Schools," and he touched, though briefly, on the teaching of morality in schools, which he considered might be done without religious instruction. He said that when a child was taught that two and two are four it was a lesson in morality, because it was teaching a truth, and truth was the foundation of morality. To this ideal of moral teaching—namely, the presentation of truth alone to children—he thought that all instruction should conform, and that such instruction should be exemplified and enforced by the teacher's absolute truthfulness in all dealings with the children.

When I rose to express my hearty concurrence with the lecturer's views, it was my intention to have called special attention to Colonel Smart's declaration that truthfulness should be the basis of all instruction whether in history, science, or morals, and from it to deduce the conclusion that English spelling is one of the most immoral things that can be taught to children. But there was not time to elucidate the subject, and so I spared the audience, trusting to be allowed in THE TRUTH SEEKER an opportunity to substantiate the claim that English spelling is immoral because it is untruthful to the law of phonetics, upon which is based the representation of modern spoken languages; namely, that the letters of an alphabet are intended to represent the sounds which compose the words of its language.

Lord Lytton asks in his novel, "The Caxtons," "How can a system of education flourish that begins with so monstrous a falsehood, which the sense of hearing suffices to contradict?" The child is taught that b-o-n-e is pronounced bone, but that d-o-n-e is called dun; that t-o-e is toes, but that d-o-e-s sounds dus; that t-o-n-e is tone, but that g-o-n-e is gawn. The word leaf has ea to denote the sound of long e, while beef has ee for the same sound, and chief has ie. Each letter in the alphabet has from two to eight varying sounds, and nearly every sound of the language is denoted with from two to half a dozen different letters or combinations of letters, and there are no certain rules to guide the learner in the selection of either letters or sounds; so that the spelling and pronunciation of every word has to be learned as a separate lesson. In these respects our written and printed language resembles Chinese more than it does any modern tongue.

In September, 1885, the Popular Science Monthly published an article by Frederic A. Fernald, now editor of Our Language, entitled "How Spelling Damages the Mind?" All Liberals interested in education should read this essay. Mr. Fernald says: "Here is a chief source of the incapacity for thinking which academy and college students bring into the science laboratories. This irrational process, taken up when the child enters school, occupying a large share of his time, and continued for six or eight years, has a powerful influence in shaping his plastic mind. When at last he is allowed to take up the study of nature, at the wrong end of his school course, what wonder that he sits with folded hands, waiting to be told facts to commit to memory, that he cannot realize what a law is, and does not know how to use his reason in obtaining knowledge? Rational education will never flourish as it should till a reformation in the teaching of reading and spelling has been accomplished."

Furthermore, Mr. J. H. Gladstone, member of the school board for London, has computed the number of hours spent by children in learning to read and spell English to be 2,320, while, in gaining an equal knowledge of their native language, Italian children spend only 945 hours. The difference amounts to nearly two school years, and shows under what a disadvantage English-speaking children labor.

Note what the distinguished Max Muller says in reference to the anomalies of English spelling: "I know there are persons who can defend anything, and hold that it is due to this very discipline that the English character is what it is; that it retains respect for authority; that it does not require a reason for everything, and that it does not admit that what is inconceivable is therefore impossible. Even English orthodoxy has been traced back to that hidden source, because a child accustomed to believe that t-h-o-u-g-h is tho, and t-h-r-o-u-g-h is thr, would afterward believe anything. It may be so; still I doubt whether even such objects would justify such means."

The effect of this constant dependence on authority alone—of calling that correct spelling which is utterly repugnant to reason and common sense—works injury to the mental powers. It is calculated to dwarf the reason, to cripple the judgment, and to prepare young people for unhesitating credence in all the superstitions of the past and present age. Astrological and theological dogmas, which call for implicit faith in spite of reason, have the way prepared for their acceptance by the arbitrary decisions of the dictionary. The spelling of every word is, in fact, a miracle which the child is peremptorily called upon to believe; and when the young student is thoroughly convinced that although b-o-n-e spells bone, o-n-e sounds wun, he is prepared to believe that myths are facts, and that caprice and not law rules the universe. Such spelling is immoral, and should be especially obnoxious to Freethinkers. ELIZA B. BURNZ.

SPELLING REFORM ROOMS,
24 Clinton Place, New York.

WM. COOK the veteran Freethinker of Savannah, Mo., says: "I have read 'Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?' It is a grand effort, and shows a master workman."

DR. L. G. JAMES delivered a very brilliant lecture on "Cosmic Evolution as Related to Ethics," before the Brooklyn Philosophical Association last Sunday afternoon. He tried to show that Nature was just as moral as man, and that she taught just as many moral lessons as the life experience of man does. One critic said he did not owe nature anything, not even his existence, but the doctor soon showed him that he did. It was, as all agreed, one of the best lectures of the season.

Letters of Friends.

What a Sample Copy Did.

CROSBY, TEX., Dec. 9, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Send THE TRUTH SEEKER to the appended address. Find inclosed postal note for $3. There are several people in this county who would be Free-thinkers if they knew how. Some friend sent me a copy of your paper, which has been the means of my sending you this subscription.

J. C. HARVEY.

Well Pleased with Heston, of Course.

RED CANON, WYO., Dec. 2, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed money order for $3.50, for which send THE TRUTH SEEKER for one year, and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." If the times were not so hard I am sure I could get quite a good sized club here. We are all well pleased with Mr. Heston's cartoons. John Peck is a full bushel.

O. W. PURLEIGH.

A Subscriber for Twenty Years.

FORESTVILLE, N. Y., Dec. 6, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to say that I have taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for twenty years and more and I do not propose to do without it now, although I am in my eighty-third year. Please find inclosed $4, for which I want the paper another year, "Religion a Curse," "Crimes of Preachers," and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." MRS. J. W. BENNETT.

It Will Go All Right.

OXFORD, N. S., Dec. 6, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find post-office order for $3 to renew my subscription. Not long ago I owned a book entitled "The Bible Analyzed." One day a Christian friend of mine saw this book and wanted to read it. I let him have it, and he thought so much of it he wanted to keep it, so I made him a present of it. If you have another one for me, and think you can get it through the mails, send it along and I will remit the price.

E. H. SCHURMAN.

Has Little Faith in the Leading Parties.

BUCKLEY, WASH., Dec. 1, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Good, Brother Peck! keep on with your financial articles. There are many Liberals in this country who know nothing about finance, and at the same time think they know it all. I am afraid we will soon be in the soup if nothing is done with our money and banking system; but the question is, Can it be righted by voting for McKinleyism and Clevelandism? It is high time the Liberals of this land woke up and studied this important question.

Inclosed find Uncle Sam's order for $3 for the grand old TRUTH SEEKER.

Yours truly, MARTIN GRAW.

Talmage Believes the Bible.

STASBURG, ILL., Dec. 3, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, in his recent sermon on the "Ifs" of the Bible, asks his listeners, readers, and dupes: "If the boat of leaves made watertight, in which the infant Moses sailed the Nile, had sunk, who would have led Israel out of Egypt?" We refer the reverend to Numbers xx, 16, where Moses himself sent word to the king of Edom, saying: "And when we cried unto the Lord, he heard our voice, and sent an angel, and had brought us forth out of Egypt." The learned divine does not ask his dupes: "If Moses had not commanded his people to borrow from the Egyptians, where would have been the golden calf?" Nor does he tell them that "If" the boat had sunk, Moses could not have told of his birth, his death, and the whole creation story.

He says: "We have theological seminaries which spend most of their time and their learning and their genius in the manufacturing of 'Ifs.' With that weaponry are assailed the Pentateuch, and the miracles, and the divinity of Jesus Christ. Almost everybody is chewing on an 'If.' Mr. Talmage himself chews and rechews the same cud for half an hour, but we cannot know what part of the cud his mental stomach is able to digest, 'if' any. He seems to think himself called upon to chew and rechew and leave others to do the swallowing. 'If' the story of Jo 1 a and the whale is by Talmage sufficiently chewed and rechewed, some of his listeners may, to please him, try to swallow it, but many, like the whale, not being able to digest Jonah, vomit him forth. The learned reverend might, with much more propriety, put another "if," and ask: "If" the Lord had not opened the mouth of the ass and the eyes of Balaam, what would have been the consequence?" Or, "If you stop paying the preacher, would there be much preaching?" Not much!

H. BERNHARD.

Wants Paine's Eye Opener.

ASTORIA, ILL., Dec. 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find twenty-five cents, for Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason." I have heard quite a good deal about it and want to read it.

I was amused the other day, when looking through my brother's TRUTH SEEKER, to read the letter written by the man who saw so much superstition at the World's Fair on Sunday. I attended the Fair one Sunday and don't believe I ever thought of superstition once. My comrade and I took a boat ride in the morning, and when the church bells were ringing I remarked to him that this seemed less like Sunday to me than any other Sunday of all my life. How differently people see things in this world. I don't hold to any belief strictly and don't see anything so terrible about churches. If the man that gave Shenandoah, Ia., such a hard name will come to Astoria he will find a town with plenty of church people and as good as any for morality. I don't claim that the churches are responsible for our good little village, but we are certainly no worse off for having them. JAS. H. HORNER.

[The man who found the superstition at the World's Fair on Sunday had his mind's eye open and so knew that most of the exhibits were covered because superstition had the brains of the exhibitors in its grasp, making them believe the ridiculous nonsense that it is wrong to look on the productions of men and the beauties of nature on a particular day of the week. Mr. Horner also saw, but he did not ask why. Knowledge is necessary to enable us to make good use of the forces of nature. Money put into churches and preaching is wasted because it is used to instruct the people in regard to supermundane persons and places about which the teachers know no more than their pupils. Hence Astoria—and every other place where churches exist—is distinctly worse off because of their presence. And again—how long could our correspondent say that his Christian neighbors are "as good as any" if they put in practice the teachings of their sacred book?—ED. T. S.]

Mistaken Identity; or, a Plain Drunk Transformed to Religious Intoxication.

WATSONTOWN, PA., Dec. 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: The Shamokin, Pa., correspondent of the New York World will please stand up to hear me denounce him as a liar. I refer to the dispatch printed on page 773 of THE TRUTH SEEKER, Dec. 9, and taken from the New York World.

"James Starks, an iron-worker, was stricken dumb eight months ago for blasphemy."

Just think! an iron-worker in Shamokin! Who ever heard of iron works in Shamokin? The dispatch is dated November 23, and I was in Shamokin on November 17, and could find no works save coal mines. But then, I suppose, the iron works and iron workers got into Shamokin between the 17th and 23d of November. Only six days erecting iron works and getting iron workers!

But this did not happen in Shamokin, nor eight months ago. It happened at Milton, Pa., which is twenty-five miles from Shamokin. Yes, the man was stricken. It was probably over a year ago. At the time the Milton Standard, a paper owned and edited by a lot of temperance fanatics, gave out the news first. No sooner had it appeared in that paper than my friends made a rush on me with copies of the paper: "It would have a tendency to bring Mr. Diehl over to the fold, as we are in need of bright young men like him," said one of these moral suckers. But the flattery. Holy hump, what a bright young man! Gee whiz! But when the horrible agonies of this man Starks were all explained to Mr. Diehl he was reticent, but refused to believe the story until it was investigated. At his leisure Mr. Diehl investigated the case. Here is the result of the investigation:

Mr. Starks, iron-worker, drunk for one year. At times could not talk. Some religious friends got him sober long enough to go to church. When sober he could talk; when drunk he could not.

I most cordially invite the liar of the World to investigate the case and prove himself a liar and save me the trouble.

I want to give a tip to the telegraph editors of the metropolitan papers that this is a bad community to have such dispatches sent out from. Your humble servant reads every daily and weekly newspaper published in central Pennsylvania, and is personally acquainted with half the editors of the state.

The church, in this case, is to be congratulated for getting Mr. Starks sober long enough to give him a dose of religion, but when that wore off he again began to wet his whistle and could not talk or hear. Or, in the words of the closing paragraph of the dispatch: "When it [the vision] vanished, he was unable to speak or hear." The fact of the whole matter is it was a plain drunk such as we read of in the daily press every day.

Cross examination most respectfully solicited.

J. WARD DIEHL

A Stirring Eleemosynary Appeal.

BRONSON, MICH., Dec. 11, 1893.

COL. R. G. INGERSOLL, My Dear Sir: I cannot conscientiously longer postpone a sadly neglected duty, and therefore take the liberty of addressing you in regard to a matter that has at various times been uppermost in my mind only to be temporarily crowded out by something else requiring immediate attention.

Cannot something liberally generous be done to relieve the wants, so nearly approaching destitution, of our superannuated agitators, thinkers, and writers in the Freethought cause? Is it not a crying disgrace, a cankerous shame, that the brave, self-abnegating pioneers of "auld lang syne," who so grandly poured forth upon progression's altar their time, their talents, their money, and their strength, should be allowed to die by inches during the last few years of their lives, isolated, neglected, forsaken, and forgotten? Is there any other sect, clique, or clan in the world of civilization that thus treats its lifetime loyal evangelists?

It is enough to make one's heart bleed to listen to J. H. Cook's narration of how he is compelled to exist in a board shanty on fifty cents a week; and then to think that poor, courageous old Jeremiah Hacker is trying to be contentedly comfortable on an annuity of $100!

It was an inspiring sight to witness the exuberant joy of the venerable Dr. Cook as he bent forward to pick up the dollars that were showered at his feet during the late Chicago Freethought convention, and to hear his heartfelt exclamation of "Free silver! Free silver!" The episode is an indication (if any were needed) that Infidels are not without charitable impulses and that all that is lacking is a concerted movement to attract their attention to the imperative needs of their fellow-creatures.

The world owes you a debt of gratitude that it never can fully repay for your noble contribution of time, strength, and money, by which the rugged pathway to the grave of grand old Walt Whitman was smoothed down and made easier endurable. Like all prominent Humanitarians, you no doubt are in these dread days of financial depression met with frequent, ever-recurring draughts upon your fund for charity. Still, can you not in the near future find the leisure to devote the time and proceeds of at least one lecture to in like manner put beyond want for the balance of their not many remaining days a few more such worthy retired warriors in the field of rationalistic propagandism?

J. FRANCIS RUGGLES.

NOTE TO TRUTH SEEKER READERS.—In the meantime, while awaiting the satisfactory arrangement of some practical plan for the permanent amelioration and relief of the poor and aged veterans, who are impelled, by time's inroads on their vitality, to step down from active campaigning, why should not every peruser of this appeal take upon himself the self-imposed pleasure of at once remitting to J. Hacker, Vineland, N. J., and J. H. Cook, Columbus, Kan., also to any other known deserving parties similarly situated, a few dollars or dimes as a holiday present? Mr. Hacker will return copies of his breezy, rollicking rhymes, all of which are well worth reading. I have set the example myself by contributing in advance of the inditing of this effusion, all of which has been wholly unsolicited by any of the parties hoped to be benefited by its preparation and publication. J. F. R.

My Talk at a Funeral.

COLUMBUS, KAN., Sept. 22, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: My best friends and neighbors, who came here just after I did twenty-three years ago—Mr. and Mrs. Evans—are noble, kind, honest, industrious, genial, progressive Freethinkers. They took THE TRUTH SEEKER ten years. Their house has always been freely and gladly open to all Freethinkers and itinerant lecturers, who were made welcome and departed with happy and lasting impressions.

These parents have been very unfortunate in losing children, as well as in many other losses. On September 19th I was called upon to speak briefly at the funeral of their son, a promising, industrious, affectionate boy ten years old. He died so suddenly and unexpectedly—being sick but a few days—that the family were inexpressibly grieved, and only copious tears could relieve the pressure. The grief was sympathetically shared by all present, and it was a sorrowful audience, Christians and heretics mingling their tears. Mr. and Mrs. Evans, although Freethinkers, have many friends and few or no enemies.

Two nights before the funeral I came near dying myself, alone, in one of my states of "nervous exhaustion," and I was in poor physical condition to speak. There was no one else to represent the views or voice the sentiments of the parents. Most of those present were Christians. There were two Catholics and several "holiness people," whose religion is greatly emotional, based upon a blind faith, and who say they cannot sin!

This was the eighth time I had spoken in that house—at the funerals of six of their own children, one adopted child, and a brother of Mrs. Evans. Most of those who were there would not have come to hear anything from me they did not believe on any occasion but a funeral. Some of them were so full of ignorance and prejudice, that they did not want to hear a single word concerning the saving and human truth I told them. If a Christian preacher had said all I did, it would have been, at least much of it, "all right." What I said was to the living, not to or for the dead. I gave briefly my views of this life; its significance and how to make the most of it. I pointed out to them the fallacy of always going to be happy, but never getting to it; cheating ourselves out of life now and expecting to make it up in "mansions in the skies"; in some imaginary, improved, impossible "heaven above."

I briefly advocated cremation for sanitary and economical reasons. I cannot write all I said. Of course to some it was an awful funeral talk. A German Menonite preacher present said I did not "give much consolation." I suppose he thought I should have spoken of his Christ, the savior; of the Christian's airy-built heaven; of the dead boy's immortal soul, and said that his afflicted parents would meet him "beyond the river"; of all of which I knew nothing and neither does he. I closed by quoting "The world is my country, to do good my religion," from Thomas Paine, whom Christians hate. I said I wanted everybody to be healthy, long-lived, and happy; to be honest, just, and truthful; to live free, natural lives; to have all the products of their labor, and all their wants supplied. That, I said, is my religion. If any one here has anything better I will drop mine and accept it. One woman exclaimed, "I have," and I presume she felt so. When I had stopped talking, an ignorant, credulous, misled, emotional "holiness woman" knelt before Mrs. Evans and prayed for her "soul."

At the grave I sang two verses from Pope's "Universal Prayer," and thus ended one of the most pathetic and, to me, impressiv funerals I ever attended.

Like leaves on the trees the race of man is found:

Now falling off, now withering on the ground.

So generations in their course decay;
So flourish these when those have passed away.

J. H. COOK.

All About God's "Goodness and Mercy" to the American People.

DENVER, COL., Dec. 6, 1893.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND, Dear Sir: In concluding your inaugural address on March 4, 1893, you said: "Above all, I know there is a Supreme Being, who rules the affairs of men, and whose goodness and mercy have always followed the American people, and I know he will not turn from us now if we humbly and reverently seek his powerful aid."

Now, Mr. Cleveland, as you know there is a Supreme Being, you are just the man for whom I have been looking these many years. I have been offering $20,000 reward (and the offer is yet good) for proof of the existence of said Supreme Being, but I have never yet been able to get one iota of proof. How do you know there is such a being? Did you ever, or can you, see him? Did you ever, or can you, hear him? Did you ever, or can you, taste him? Did you ever, or can you, smell him? Did you ever, or can you, feel him? If you ever saw him, what does he look like? About how old is he? How tall is he? How much would his nibs weigh in his stocking feet and his right mind? What is his complexion? What is the color of his hair and eyes? Does he wear whiskers? What is his nationality? What are his politics and religion? How did you discover his sex? Is he, or was he, ever married? If so, where is Mrs. God? If you ever heard him, what does he sound like? Does he sing? Is his voice a bass, soprano, tenor, alto, baritone, or contralto? If you ever tasted him, what does he taste like? Does he taste cold or warm, bitter or sweet, acid or saline? If you ever smelled him, what does he smell like? If you ever felt him, what does he feel like? Does he feel hot or cold, hard or soft, smooth or rough, damp or dry? Where does he reside, and where is his place of business? You say he is a ruler—that he rules the affairs of men; well, then, if Mr. God rules the affairs of men, for what purpose did the American people elect you? Surely a supreme being would not require any assistance. But if you and he are going to form a partnership for the purpose of ruling us poor devils, I hope you, Grover, will see that he does not get drunk, as he used to, and swear and roar and ride on horses and asses and storms, and order pregnant women disemboweled with the sword, and make all the people drunk and raise hell generally. Also try to persuade him that it is decidedly outré to shave his feet and head with a razor any more, and that it is considered hic-hoc-jim-jamious by the 400 to appear at breakfast in full evening dress and a groggy tout ensemble. Also see that his majesty uses a saddle when he rides a storm, so that he won't ruin his clothes if the storm gets to sweating. You say he rules the affairs of men, but don't say anything about the women. Are we to presume that he is not man enough to rule the ladies, or have the fair ones got sense enough to rule themselves? You say his "goodness and mercy have always followed the American people." Where is his "goodness and mercy" in all of the thousands of fires, floods, diseases, famins, and disasters that annually cause the most intense suffering, and the destruction of thousands of the American people? Where is his "goodness and mercy to the American people" in making two-thirds of their country so internally frigid during half the time that thousands miserably perish with the cold every winter? Then when he lights the pleasant fires of spring in the great cook stove of summer, the heat thus produced, acting upon the surrounding coldness, so to speak, generates some more of his "goodness and mercy," in the form of the ring-tailed, rip-roaring, snorting, death-dealing, and hell-raising cyclone that playfully chaseth other thousands of the afore-said American people up the proverbial morning glory vine.

Then as soon as the dear American people have planted their crops, your God goes to work and cuts up what "goodness and mercy" he has left over from making snow, double-gear lightning, and bob-tailed cyclones, into smaller pieces (so that they will go farther) to each of which he attaches several pairs of legs and wings, a pair of eyes, and then, after injecting sleepless appetites, sends them forth in the shape of cut-worms, chintz-bugs, grasshoppers, etc., to destroy the crops of the farmers so that they will have no doubts that your partner's "goodness and mercy" are surely following them. Sometimes this omnipotent cuss gets recklessly generous and magnanimous toward the American people, and cuts his "goodness and mercy" up into strips from two to ten feet long, and puts a lot of rattles on one end of these strips and a pair of wicked and fascinating eyes, a forked tongue, a pair of sharp and poisoned fangs, and two self-filling-and-never-empty-sacs of deadly poison on the other end, and then sends these writhing and hissing pieces of "goodness and mercy" into the grass, the harvest fields, the orchards, the woods, by streams and waters, among the fruits and flowers, and in the paths and high-ways, so that the American people will have no trouble in finding them.

There are thousands upon thousands of the American people whose faces are all horrible pitted and scarred from having come into contact with some choice bits of your partner's "goodness and mercy," in the shape of small-pox. Oh, yes, Grover, there is no doubt but that God's "goodness and mercy" sleep with their clothes on so as to "always" be ready at a moment's notice to follow the American people. Why, I have known Old Man God's "goodness and mercy" to be so thick in places that one could cut it with a knife. Why, it accumulated to such an extent in Chicago, in 1871, that it burst forth in the form of flames and destroyed most of the city. And at Johnstown, Pa., his "goodness and mercy" accumulated to such an enormous extent that they "busted" the dam in order to follow the American people more closely, and then did follow them so closely and persistently for the next few days that thousands of them received dam-damp deaths as souvenirs of your almighty partner's "goodness and mercy." I suppose that your pal's "goodness and mercy" were "always" following the American people from 1861 to 1865, and got so infernally thick at Appomattox that the Confederacy was unable to wade through it any longer and was compelled to surrender?

I wonder how the good Southern Democrats will like to be told by you, Grover, at this late day, that their downfall and the liberation of their slaves was the result of God's "goodness and mercy" "always" following them? Grover, was God's "goodness and mercy" following the American people in 1888, when you were defeated, and that sniveling, pious hypocrit, Harrison, elected? I suppose the ten million of mortgages on the homes of the American people are but financial nom de plumes of God's "goodness and mercy" still following said American people? And doubtless all the penitentiaries, asylums, and prisons in the United States are but other forms of God's "goodness and mercy," dogging the footsteps of the American people. And I have no doubt, Grover, but what the half million of prostitutes in the United States and Canada are but God's "goodness and mercy" masquerading in dresses, so as to more effectually camp on the trail of the American people, especially, the male portion of the American people. It is a wonder to me, Grover, that you did not invite this Supreme High Cook-a-lorum into your cabinet, for he is well qualified for most any of the cabinet portfolios, especially the agricultural or war departments. As he orders and controls the weather, seasons, etc., and rides upon the storms, his nibs would certainly make a jim dandy secretary of agriculture. As "his eyes were as a flame of fire and his feet like fine brass, and a sharp, two-edged sword sticks out of his mouth" (Rev. i, 14, 15, 16); and "smoke comes out of his nostrils, and fire out of his mouth" (2 Sam. xxii, 9); and "horns coming out of his hands" (Hab. iii, 4, 5); and "his tongue is a devouring fire" (Isa. xxx, 27); and as he makes and controls the lightnings, cyclones, earthquakes, floods, pestilences, and can walk upon the sea, and can feed five thousand men with five small biscuits and two little sardines, and have twelve basketfuls left over after the men had all gorged themselves to their utmost capacity (St. John vi, 10-13), he would surely make the bangest kind of a bang-up secretary of war. There is not a nation on the face of the earth who would dare to tackle us for a finish fight or to even spar a limited number of rounds, if we had such a rip-snorting "heavy weight" at the head of our war department. We would not need to build any more expensive, steel armored ironclads, and decorate them with cannon. Krupp guns, torpedoes, and other Christian toys with which to "love our neighbors as ourselves;" all we would have to do to make our coast defense perfect would be to tie the American flag to his omnipotent tail, and then have him walk up and down the Atlantic and Pacific coasts every day on the water, so that his feet would not get hot from walking.

Now, my dear Grover, in conclusion I must again request you to send me the proofs of the existence of a supreme being who is always tagging around after the American people, and yet will not do a blame thing for them unless they pat him on the back and say "pretty please" to him. Send me the proof and I will pay you $50,000 cash for your trouble, and will also apologize for thinking you a demagog and fakir. The proof must be such as would be admitted in the supreme court of the United States, and as you are a lawyer, you know the rules governing evidence. What a pity we cannot elect a president who is intellectual and honest enough to make a patriotic and statesman-like speech on a great occasion without descending to lying and demagogery and resorting to the street fakir's tricks!

Respectfully yours, Dr. C. W. MAK.

Not for Parsons.

IMPORTANT news has broken on this dull world at last. The Lord is coming! He may be expected any moment. He is coming for the second time. He has not yet come for the first time. But he is apparently to come the second time, and then he can come for the first time afterwards, at his leisure. You must expect him to turn the natural order of things a little topsy turvy. "The Campbells Are Coming" is a tune now out of fashion. "The Lord is Coming" is its successor. Always something coming—the Campbells, the Colorado beetle, or the influenza; and now here is the Lord, the most appalling item of all. Since he left Palestine, nearly two thousand years ago, if he has been traveling ever since at the rate of a cannon ball, he has not, as yet, reached Sirius, the nearest of the fixed stars; and heaven is beyond that—at least, the telescope has shown us Sirius, and no heaven between here and it; so it is really awfully good of him to come so soon, before he has given himself time to have reached heaven at all. He has been in a hurry back. When here, somebody (the Jews got the blame) knocked nails into him. You would have thought that such usage would have made him reluctant to return to the planet of such hammer-and-tongs receptions. But apparently he would rather run the risk of having a pound of tennepenny nails knocked into him than go on flying through space forever, like a cricket-ball battered by Satan. He set Ahasuerus, the Wandering Jew, on his everlasting tramp, while he himself took his everlasting fly. They are a couple of Wandering Jews. The one is wandering over the earth under the curse he received at Jerusalem; the other is flying through space from the impetus of the jump skyward he gave from the top of Mount Olivet. A pretty couple verily: two tired dearies they must be! What Benedictine monk invented this divine comedy? He must have been a cracked cleric writing for a cracked world. Are there "truths" here to be discerned by our spiritual eye? I should say they appeal to our lunatic eye; and spiritual and lunatic are not, except with priestcraft, synonymous.

In plain English, the Lord had better stay where he is. Should he come here, his visit is likely to end in his getting hanged. If the record be true, he got crucified when he visited us before, and to come and get hanged now is a poor prospect. It is likely the fact of this prospect before his mind's eye keeps him away. In regard to the hanging of the Lord, the seer of Ecclefechan inclined to my opinion. One evening, at a small literary gathering at which Carlyle was present, writes a recent anecdotalist, a lady, who was somewhat noted for her "muslin theology," was bewailing the wickedness of the Jews in not receiving Christ, and ended her diatribe against them by expressing her regret that he had not appeared in our own time. "How delighted," said she, "we should all have been to throw our doors open to him and to listen to his divine precepts! Don't you think so, Mr. Carlyle?" "No, madam, I don't. I think that, had he come very fashionably dressed with plenty of money, and preaching doctrines palatable to the higher orders, I might have had the honor of receiving from you a card of invitation, on the back of which would be written, 'To meet our Savior;' but if he had come, uttering his sublime precepts, and denouncing the Pharisees, and associating with the publicans and lower orders, as he did, you would have treated him much as the Jews did, and have cried out, 'take him to Newgate, and hang him!'" Hugh Price Hughes might, as a business speculation, interview the Lord for the Methodist Times, and ask him his opinions of his (H. P. H.'s) celebrated "Converted Atheist Shoemaker." The Lord might bluntly remind H. P. H. that certain parties shall have their portion in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone. H. P. H. is a "superior person," and would not stand being spoken to in this fashion. He would pick up his hat and gloves and walk out, leaving the Lord to ruminate. Outside we can fancy H. P. H. meeting Holy Joe Parker. "Have you so soon quitted the presence of the Lord?" asks Parker, in devout astonishment. "Lord, indeed! A pretty Lord. Do you know that over that Atheist shoemaker story of mine he as good as called me a——?" "Oh, never mind that. Consider yourself highly honored in that he has taken any notice of you at all. Between you and me, Parker, I do not really mind so much his calling me a novelist over the 'Shoemaker' affair; but the unpardonable thing on his part is he proved I was one. If he were ten times the Lord, I would not stand this of him. I assured him that the 'Atheist Shoemaker' was invented for his glory." "Ah, Brother Hughes," sighs Holy Joe, "that is the worst of having the Lord too close at hand. 'Nearer, My God to Thee,' is all very well in a hymn; but, between you and me, the further off he is the better for gentlemen of your vocation and mine. We will have to get him bundled back to heaven, or anywhere but this planet. If he stay here a fortnight, he will ruin our business. The worst thing that can befall us is the 'Second Coming of the Lord;' the half-yearly coming of the devil would be as nothing to it." "I don't care, Parker; I've been insulted, grossly insulted. He has actually proved to my face——. Hang it all, I had rather he had made use of his favorite epithet and called me a 'viper,' or even 'a generation of vipers.' What shall I do, Parker? Go for him in the Methodist Times?" "Take my advice, Hughes, my boy, and leave him severely alone. I am, as you know, a business man. Do not give a line in the Methodist Times, unless he pay for it down on the nail. And he does seem to have twopence. I hope he will not turn up at the City Temple. His clothes smell and he has a doss-house appearance about him that would frighten the best-paying members of my congregation out of their pews. Not that I am a bigot. There is room in the City Temple for either the Lord or the devil—or both of them at once, if they like—only they must come respectably dressed, behave themselves decorously, and if they are to be welcome back again, they should put something handsome in the plate." "Just think of it, Brother Parker, he proved I was——." "Ah, well, be thankful it is no worse. Hark ye, we must get rid of him. I think I see my way to having him lodged in a lunatic asylum. As long as we have our bread to win, it will never do to let the multitude know that the Lord has actually come a second time. We must have him locked up, otherwise he will expose the swindle by which we make our living. We have got the New Testament; we do not want the Old Testament. We have got a book about him; we don't want him." "Quite so, Brother Parker, quite so. But just think of it. He——. No wonder they crucified him! I'm all of a shake. We have not our white chokers. We will not be recognized here. Let us go and have a brandy and a cigar. Except a long way off, no more of the Lord for me!" Exeunt.

—Saladin, in Agnostic Journal.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Doll.

It usually comes about Christmas time
When baby's asleep by half-past nine,
On its winkity, sleepy cot.
Sometimes it comes naked, with nothing to wear,
Sometimes dressed finely, with beautiful hair,
On its winkity, sleepy cot.
You can't make it eat, and you can't make it
dri k,
It some times can stand, and some times can wink,
On its winkity, sleepy cot.
You love it, caress it, talk it, and dress it,
Take it out riding, and come home and bless it,
On its winkity, sleepy cot.
There is nothing from the dear little thing to hide,
It will lie in the cradle, or perhaps by your side,
On its winkity, sleepy cot.
But though you talk mother-like, it won't answer
at all.
Well, how can the dumb thing, when it's only a doll,
On its winkity, sleepy cot? L. R.

Concerning Christmas.

Christmas is of pagan origin, as are some other holidays and observances. Originally, the season was celebrated and known as the festival of the winter solstice, and many beautiful recollections are interwoven with the ancient custom.

The old Druids performed their rites and ceremonies in the deep recesses of forests, and the fashion of decorating dwellings with evergreen and holly berries comes from the mystic shadows of the leafy temples wherein they were wont to assemble to worship at the shrine of Nature. The Druids supposed that the mistletoe was invested with strange and mysterious properties, and their high priest was accustomed to cut it with a sickle made of gold, and at the same time two snow-white bulls were tied under the branches of the old oaken tree and sacrificed. The Druids believed that the mistletoe was a shield from the harm that evil spirits might inflict and that one who wore it could never be susceptible to poison.

The old Scandinavians celebrated this season of the year and made great feasts in honor of their god Thor, for whom we find named one of our week days—Thursday, otherwise Thor's day. It was yuletide with them, and they always made sure to burn in their big fireplaces a log of wondrous size, which they called the yule log. While this old log was burning and crackling, and its cheerful blaze lighted the room, friends gathered from near and afar, stamping the snow from their feet and bringing in the little children all muffled up in warm furs and blankets, so that one could only catch a glimpse of a rosy cheek, or a dimpled chin, and a pair of bright and sparkling eyes.

In the presence of the burning log all old feuds were forgotten, they who had been enemies became friends, and, in the light of the dancing flames, old differences of opinion were put aside and the hatchets that had divided friends were buried too deep for resurrection.

Much merriment and jollity prevailed upon the occasion; there was feasting and fun, there was cracking of nuts and cracking of jokes and a general good time all around. It was the habit, which became an unwritten law, to save the remains of the log from year to year. They thought it spared them from epidemics, plagues, and drouth. Then, when the new log would be brought in, all stood back respectfully and silently lifted their hats, keeping them raised while the log was being put in position. If anyone happened in who had a squinting eye, or, what is termed crossed eyes, or should one come in with bare feet, before the wood was burned out, it was thought to be a very unfortunate omen. By the first of February the fire of the log must be out, and all the evergreen and holly be put away. If not, they had a superstition that a sprite or goblin would appear for every little twig or leaf left, and a death would be in the family before the year would be gone.

Folk-lore is full of fanciful stories, vagaries, and superstitions relating to this time of the year. Hence it is not wonderful at all that Christianity assumed that the birth of Christ was at this season. This is not true, however, since the date of his birth is quite unknown, and many scholars are in doubt as to the existence even of a being of that name, while the miraculous tales concerning him are regarded by all honest and unprejudiced investigators as entirely false. Therefore, such a being has no more to do with the origin of Christmas than you or your favorite kitten. Christianity, in investing several pagan holidays with its own peculiar significance, has brought and taught many superstitious tales. For instance, it is thought in some old countries that bread baked on Christmas eve could never get moldy. Reason teaches, however, that all bread will mold if kept long enough, or if subjected to a moist atmosphere.

In some parts of Wales the folks bake at Christmas eleven puddings, one for each of the apostles, except poor Judas, eating one a month, in order, as they think, to have good luck. In Devonshire, it is said that the people have a custom of dipping a hot cake in cider at Christmas, then, carrying it to the orchard, they fire guns and sing to the trees:

"Bear good apples and pears;
Barns full, bags full, sacks full."

They expect this will insure plenty of fruit the coming season. In Scotland, among the superstitious, they would not do any spinning on Christmas, fearing if they did that the sheep would get lame or run mad.

There is a story told that the inhabitants of Kronz, on the Moselle, at Christmas rig up a wheel in straw, set it on fire, and start it rolling down-hill. If it is still burning when it gets to the water, it is a sign of good luck for the year.

There is no such wizard, spook, fairy, or goblin as Santa Claus, or St. Nicholas. He is a myth, invented by the Germans, from whom we get the pretty fashion of giving gifts at this latter part of the year. It is our relatives and friends who bestow upon us good gifts, and perhaps it is sometimes amusing to invest the custom with a little mystery, which ought always to be satisfactorily explained afterward.

The Catholics and Episcopalians observe Christmas as a religious festival, and all Christian sects regard it with a religious superstition; but it has no claim for the ceremonies and rites performed upon that day and the eve preceding it.

As a general holiday, a gift season, a time for merry-making, a period of forgiveness, of renewals of friendships, of remembering the poor and unfortunate, of sharing our bounty with others, it is of value and significance.

In the British Museum there may be found the original copy of the following lines:

"If Christmas day on Monday be,
A great winter that year you'll see.
And full of winds, both loud and shrill;
But in the summer, truth to tell,
High winds there will be and strong,
Full of tempest, lasting long;
While battles they shall multiply,
And great plenty of beasts shall die,
They that be born that day, I ween,
They shall be strong each one and keen;
He shall be found who stealeth aught;
Tho' thou be sick thou diest not."

This year Christmas comes on Monday, and—we shall see what we shall see.

We wish all our friends, both great and small, a merry holiday, good health, much happiness, prosperity, usefulness, and long life. S. H. W.

Correspondence.

MAUSTON, WIS., Dec. 19, 1893.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. I am thirteen years of age. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for over twelve years and he likes it very much. Our school began the 20th of November. The town I live in has six churches. We live four miles from the city. There are a great many bluffs around. It snowed the 21st of November quite hard. Well, as my letter is getting quite long I guess I will close.

I remain, ALMA ROBINSON.

[Dear Alma, let not this letter be the last one.—Ed. C. C.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 5, 1893.
DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first attempt to write to the Children's Corner. I am nine years old. I go to school and study arithmetic, spelling, writing, and reading.
My grandpa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for many years.
I have "The Story Hour" and have read the story of little Susie.
Hoping to see this letter in print, I remain,
Your Liberal friend,
ESTELLE BOYD.

[Welcome to Estelle, and may we hear from her often.—Ed. C. C.]

FORT FAIRFIELD, Nov. 20, 1893.
DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my second letter to the Corner. Every week I read the Children's Corner, and never read a letter from this place. I think THE TRUTH SEEKER is one of the best papers in the world. My father takes it, and we all read it. We could not do without it. I think everybody ought to read it. Some of the Christians turn up their noses at it, but I don't. I don't go to church or Sunday school. My papa and mamma have joined the Liberal League, and as soon as I get old enough, I am going to join it. For fear my letter is getting too long, I will close. Hoping to see this printed, I remain one among your Liberal friends, ETHEL M. GRANT.

[Who will dare say that Ethel is not a true Freethinker? We certainly have the brightest and bravest children in the world in our Corner.—Ed. C. C.]

OUR NEWEST BOOKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? By John E. Remsburg. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
Pen-Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper, 25 cents.
Religion a Curse, a Lie, and a Disease. By Samuel P. Putnam. Paper, 25 cents.
Design Argument Fallacies. A Refutation of the Argument that Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being. By the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Paper, 15 cents.
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. By M. E. Billings. Paper, 25 cents.
Handbook of Freethought. By W. S. Bell. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
Pleasure and Progress: An Attempt to Prove that the Pursuit of Pleasure is the sine qua non of Intellectual, Moral, and Social Development, and that the Promotion of Pleasure is the Duty of Philanthropy and Statesmanship. By Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
The Creation of God. Tracing the God-Ide to Its Source. By Jacob Hartmann, M.D. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
Resurrection of Jesus. By Don Allen. Cloth, 75 cents; cloth, 40 cents.
Facts and Fictions of Life. By Helen H. Gardener. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Cloth, $2; leather, $3.

IN PRESS.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought. By Samuel P. Putnam. Subscription book, elegant binding, over one hundred portraits, $5.
Woman: Four Centuries of Progress. By Susan H. Wixon. Paper, 10 cents.
The Church and Freethought. By Franklin Steiner. Paper, 10 cents.
The Giant Delusion. One of Otto Wettstein's Friendly Arguments with the Spiritualists. Paper, 10 cents.
Bible Inquirer. By Andrew Jacobson. Paper, 25 cents.

Hard Knocks at Christianity.

By R. WHEELER.

This book is just what its title implies—thumping whacks at superstition. It deals with the effect of Christianity on the world, showing what Christians have done to advance their religion and impede the progress of man. It shows that Jesus was a false prophet, that the gospels are not authentic, and that Christianity is a borrowed system of religion. That the Bible is not in accord with Science, that the atonement scheme is futile and foolish, and that religion is not a real benefit to man.

Price, 20 cents, six for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE AGNOSTIC ANNUAL

—FOR—

1894.

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS:
The True History of the Bible. Prof. Edwin Johnson; A Practical View of Life. Charles Watts; The D-cadence of the Old Theology. Mrs. E. Lynn Linton; Inspiration in Extremis. Samuel Laing; The Gospel of Love. A Poem. Capt. W. B. McTaggart; Agnostic Types. R. Bithell, B.Sc. Ph.D.; On Spiritual Wickedness in High Places. Edward Clodd; A Pries of Nature. A Poem. Hon. C. K. Tuckerman; The Dream of Immortality. Frederick Millar; Is Immortality a Dream. W. Stewart Ross; (also); Practical Consequences of Agnosticism. F. J. Gould; The Religious Propensity. Furneaux Jordan, F.R.C.S.

Price, 25 Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. Paper, 50 cents.

Pushed by Unseen Hands. SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth $1. Paper, 50 cents.

A Thoughtless Yes.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place New York

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A Nineteenth Century Novel.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with a little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroine. The narrative is, in the main, a history of a working-girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business-men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrites. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

New Publications.

New Publications.

RELIGION A CURSE, RELIGION A DISEASE, RELIGION A LIE.

By Samuel P. Putnam.

Dedicated to the American Congress, of 1892, which for the sake of Religion, Stabbed Liberty to the Heart.

A work burning with indignation inspired by the Congressional act closing the World's Fair on Sunday—an act which practically united the government and the Christian church.

To which is added Mr. Putnam's address delivered before the Columbian Exposition Committee of the House of Representatives against Sunday closing.

Also the following Essays and Poems by Mr. Putnam, which have never before been put in book form: Orthodoxy; Freethought; Man, Not God (written for a Paine anniversary); The Statue of Liberty and Thomas Paine; a poem written for the opening exercises of the Silverton, Ore. Free-thought Hall; Death and Life; The Golden Age; Shut the Door (a poem on the closing of the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876).

The main essay in this work is one of the strongest arraignments ever made of the religion which cramps and fetters the minds of the people of this country. It should be distributed widely. It has been commended in the highest terms as it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER and we hope every reader will buy a copy to lend his neighbor and arouse thought.

Price 25 cents; Five copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS,

AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE AGNOSTIC

DESIGNED BY WATSON HESTON WITH PICTURES BY THE DESIGNER.

The Illustrations are classified as follows:

16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work
2 " The Church Robbing the People.	5 " Missionaries.
3 " Thank-giving.	1 " The Lord's Instruments.
6 " Sabbath Laws.	25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14 " Children and the Church.	1 " The Church and Slavery.
10 " Woman and the Church.	2 " Priests and Politics.
6 " The Church and Thomas Paine.	4 " Ireland and the Church.
4 " Studies in Natural History.	2 " Church's idea of civilization.
3 " The Bible and Science.	1 " The Uses of the Cross.
15 " The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4 " Unkind reflections on the Church.
1 " Pict in Our Penitentiaries.	9 " Persecutions of the Church.
4 " The Atonement Scheme.	12 " Some Allegories.
4 " The Lord and His Works.	3 " Heaven.
2 " Prayer.	6 " Hell.
10 " The Creeds.	7 " Miscellaneous.
1 " Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artst Heston as a portrait painter and designer is a wonderful success, and a judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.]

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of his volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of readable matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.]

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Just Out.—25 Cents.—Five Copies for $1.

A Liberal living in Michigan said once that he would give $25 a year to have the Crimes of Preachers recorded, as the frequent lapses of virtue of the ministers showed how little value Christianity possesses to make men moral.

We have just issued the Fourth Edition of the book doing this. The additions for this new edition of the

"Crimes of Preachers"

shows nearly 400 cases of ministerial conduct. While those in previous editions show that within a few years about

1300 MINISTERS HAVE BEEN GUILTY

of one kind or another of criminal conduct. Most of the crimes are against women, for the fair sex are at once the weakness and the strength of the church—"the church" meaning of course the clergy.

Notwithstanding the many additional pages, we have kept the price the same, 25 cents. Send for a copy, and confound the churchmen. Show them just what sort of scamps are the clergy who have closed the World's Fair on Sunday, because it is so holy a day that to look upon machinery or paintings in this period is "immoral."

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

PEN PICTURES OF THE WORLD'S FAIR.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

A Full Description of the Fair, Invaluable as a Guide-Book and still more Invaluable to those who cannot attend. It tells WHAT TO SEE and WHERE TO SEE IT; gives rates of admission to the various attractions of the Fair and cost of living in Chicago, with other useful information to the visitor.

It is, besides being a complete Guide-Book, the best description of the Fair yet given—poetic, beautiful, accurate. It describes the inauguration ceremonies, gives the director-general's address, the efforts to close the Fair Sundays and the triumph of the Sunday-openers; describes the various buildings and what they contain, and is, all in all, the very best picture of the Fair that can be painted with a pen.

ILLUSTRATED.

A MAP OF JACKSON PARK, enabling the visitor to make his way around, and the stay-at-home to see where he went.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE FAIR, enabling one to comprehend at a glance the magnitude of the Exposition, the greatest ever known to the present time.

PICTURES OF ALL THE PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS:

Woman's Building.	Art Palace.	Fisheries Building.
Administration Building.	Manufactures and Liberal	Agricultural Building.
Electrical Building.	Arts Building.	Transportation Building.
Machinery Hall.	Mines and Mining Building.	Horticultural Building.
	Forestry Building.

A visitor to the Fair says of this book—reading it in THE TRUTH SEEKER—that it is charming and to one who has seen the Fair vastly entertaining.

Single copy, 25 cents. Five copies for $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

FACTS AND FICTIONS OF LIFE.

CONTENTS.

Preface.	Sex in Brain.
The Fictions of Fiction.	Heredity in Its Relations to a Double Standard of Morals.
A Day in Court.	Divorce and the Proposed National Law.
Thrown in With the City's Dead.	Lawsuit or Legacy.
An Irresponsible Educated Class.	Common Sense in Surgery.
The Moral Responsibility of Woman in Heredity.
Woman as an Annex.

At the Woman's Congress at Chicago Helen Gardener delivered as an address one of the chapters of this book. The Chicago Times said of it and her: "But the last address, dealing with the most delicate of the problems of reform, clear, unhesitant, modest, but uncompromising, was listened to with breathless interest by the audience. It was 'Heredity in Its Relation to a Double Standard of Morals,' and it was delivered by the one woman of all others best qualified to speak upon that subject—Helen Gardener. Petite, graceful, eloquent with the burden of her thought, Miss Gardener enchaind every auditor, and when she had finished received a perfect ovation, which her courage and devotion had so worthily won. The evening session was highly interesting, but that of the morning will be set down on the tablet of the memory of those present as one of the distinctively great features of the week's congress."

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EVERY Woman Ought to Read It. Every LIBERAL Woman and Man Will Want It.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE.

By Matilda Joslyn Gage.

This is Mrs. Gage's latest and crowning work. It is THE book to show how the church has enslaved woman and kept and keeps her in an inferior position. A glance at its contents will show this:

The first chapter—the Matriarchate—shows that under the old civilizations woman had great freedom, but that the tendency of Christianity from the first was to restrict her liberty. In this chapter Mr. Gage claims that the Matriarchate—or Mother-rule—the world is indebted for its first conception of inherent rights.

Chapter II deals with the theological dogmas of original sin and celibacy. Woman, by the church, was not regarded as a human being; marriage was looked upon as vile; wives were sold as slaves; women driven to suicide; the influence of the church was unfavorable to virtue. The celibacy of the clergy produced degradation, sensuality, and woman was the victim of these brutes.

Chapter III is on the Canon Law, showing how the church controlled woman by making the legitimacy of marriage depend upon it; own control of the ceremony. Ancient civilization gave place to Christian barbarism, the clergy became a distinct body—at once a "holy" and an unholy caste. Learning was prohibited to women, husbands prohibited from leaving them more than one-third of their property; daughters could be disinherited; sons could not. The Reformation effected no change.

Chapter IV—Maquette—is on Feudalism and its degradation of women, the rights of "lords spiritual," the immorality of the heads of the church, baptism of nude women in the early Christian church. It also deals with some of the later-day abuses of females, like our Northwestern pineries, the English debarment, governmental crime-makers, etc.

Chapter V—Witchcraft. In the days of this phase of religious insanity Mrs. Gage shows how the possession of even a little learning was sufficient cause to suspect a woman of witchcraft, that to keep a pet was dangerous, so rapid was the clergy not to suffer a witch to live. This persecution for witchcraft was a continuation of the church's policy for obtaining universal domination over mankind. Women physicians of the Middle Ages were persecuted, and the "Pilgrim Fathers" continued it in America. The first synod convened in America was to try a woman for heresy, and others were stripped and whipped for not agreeing with the clergy.

The chapter on "Wives" shows how the disruption of the Roman empire was unfavorable to the personal and proprietary rights of woman—at the sale of daughters was practiced in England seven hundred years after it was Christianized—that the practice of buying wives was regulated by law—that women were not permitted to read the Bible—that they were not admitted as witnesses—that civil marriage was proposed by the church.

In Chapter VII is shown how polygamy was sustained by the Christian church, that the first synod of the Reformation convened to sanction this institution, that Luther and the other principal reformers favored it, as well as the American Board of Foreign Missions. The Mormon theocracy is shown to be similar to that of other Christian sects.

In the last three chapters Mrs. Gage treats of the opposition of the church to the amelioration of woman's sufferings as interfering with her "cause," of woman's degradation by the church to labor unfit for slaves, of woman's "inferiority," as taught by the church to-day, and of how little value Christianity has been and is to civilization.

The work is a burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It is also extremely valuable as history. No woman, it seems to us, can read it and remain a supporter of the religious institution which has crushed her individuality, her mentality, and degraded her person. To the woman's cause it opens an Age of Reason. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do.

In cloth, $2; in half-leather binding, $3. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A Rattling Book.

PLEASURE AND PROGRESS. An Attempt to Prove that the Pursuit of Pleasure is the Sine Qua Non of Intellectual, Moral, and Social Development, and that the Promotion of Pleasure is the Duty of Philanthropy and Statesmanship. By Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B. New York: The Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place. Price, 50 cents.

This is a spirited, rattling sort of a book that skates right along over the deepest subject without much thought whether the ice is thin or not. It answers the greatest question—What is the use, object, motive, purpose, and summum bonum of life, and the real cause and motive of progress?—by one word, PLEASURE! The real cause of progress, like the real cause of the fall of the Roman empire, has been about as hard to find as the source of the Nile or of life itself; but our author is sure that we have it now. In a blocky, chunky, most interesting style he takes history from Vico, Kant, Herder, Condorcet, Comte, Spencer, Draper, and Ward, and brings it to prove his conclusion in this memorable way:

"The tribes were united into nations. Civilization now diverged into two general directions. In one case the union consisted in subjection to a conqueror. In the other it consisted in a confederacy for offense and defense. The first form prevailed in Asia, the latter in Europe.

"Of course, subjection of the people to a despot involves submission. He extorts from them everything but absolute necessities. With his extortions he creates palaces, works, and institutions of unrivaled proportion and splendor. But as his magnificence advanced, the people's circumstances declined. They had never ceased to progress while industry was rewarded by enjoyment. When production ceased to afford enjoyment it ceased to exercise ingenuity. A state of unprogressiveness followed. As a river is unchanged by the waters that come and go, so Oriental civilization remained unchanged by the generations that lived and died.

"In Europe a union was more in the nature of a confederacy. The king was but the most influential chief. In time of war he engrossed much of the authority. In time of peace it lapsed to the different chiefs. The people were thus virtually governed by many rulers instead of one. Their tribute, as a rule, was fixed by custom instead of by absolutism. They yielded a definite service, a definite share, or a definite payment. In any case, additional diligence on their part received additional reward. They thus had an inducement to perseverance. They continually found new means of pleasure. They continually found more expeditious ways of production. There continued to be a slow but steady progress of manufacture and the arts.

"This condition of things was improved by gradual emancipation. As war declined the chief's authority waned. A decline of authority was usually equivalent to a release from subjection. Many freemen collected in cities. Their devotion to manufacture and commerce was rewarded with opulence. Not unseldom they expended their gains in purchasing the possessions of surrounding chiefs or lords. Such purchases redounded to the freedom of persons still enslaved. And as freedom became more general progress became more rapid.

"For a time, however, it was interrupted. In places, where war was frequent, the power of the kings became more formidable. At times they became almost as absolute and rapacious as oriental despots. But happily the people had learned to value liberty too well to relinquish it with willingness. Men who had become accustomed to freedom, chafed under restraint. Men who had worked to serve themselves were reluctant to pay a tribute that was not requited by a benefit. The king's unjust aggressions were met with indignant resistance. The conflict lasted for centuries. On the continent the people lost. In England they won. But when the people of England won freedom for themselves they won freedom for the world. They preserved the spirit of liberty from extinction. By them it was again communicated to the continent. Again the people rose in revolt. Again the issue hung in the balance. But justice this time triumphed. Kings were deposed or restrained. Where they retained their rank, it was by the people's sufferance and not by their own might. Parliaments performed their functions or directed them. Government ceased to be an instrument of oppression and became an instrument of protection.

"The abolition of tyranny was practically an abolition of restraint on enjoyment. When the right to enjoy their products became unquestioned the people's enterprise became unbounded. Civilization advanced with sudden strides. Science flourished with unheard-of vigor. The arts improved with marvelous pace. Inventions served man's wants and excited his amazement. When pleasure became the mainspring of action, prosperity became the normal condition. As men attached greater value to liberty, they showed greater willingness to concede it to others, and intolerance declined. As men hated oppression more, they became less disposed to practice it, and justice reigned. As their desire for enjoyment became more intense, their sympathy for suffering became more acute, and charity became common. Our civilization began when royal restraint on enjoyment ended. Our civilization, I say again, is due to the indulgence of our desires. Indulgence of desire is the inducement to industry."

Then, after showing that industry is the real cause and basis of civilization, the author proceeds:

"Instead of encouraging civilization, Christianity actually retards it. Religion consists in serving God. Religionists serve God as subjects serve kings. In both cases, means are sacrificed for the benefit of the superior. In both cases they rely for happiness on supplication. Now, is a person benefited by sacrifice? Is his character elevated by supplication? Is his disposition refined by fulsome flattery? Is his knowledge extended by credulity? On the contrary . . . poverty, meanness, illiteracy, debasement, and subjection are the natural and inevitable consequences.

"In truth, the prosperity of man is not the purpose of Christianity at all. All this is an after-thought. Modern man resolved that his duty is to serve himself. Then theologians asserted that man serves himself by serving God. But despite this claim they still ignore man's interest and constantly insist on God's interest. They place abnegation above acquisition, prayer above performance, and credulity above curiosity. A man who earns gratitude for his benevolence may receive hell for his irreligion."

We ask the reader's careful attention to this long passage, because we have no room for more, and because it is one of the most useful summaries of history ever made, especially in its contrast of the Asian and the European, and then of the Northern and Anglo-Saxon modes of government. This extract is a fair specimen of the author's remarkable style and logical power; and the next thing to do is to get hold of the book itself and see with what copious illustrations, arguments, defenses and conclusions his solution is sustained.

We ask the reader to do this, for we have not the time or space to add more than a few words to this pleasure or enjoyment theory of life as the cause of all progress.

In a certain short and first-hand way this joy-solution seems true and good.

But it is like the early explorers of the Nile giving us Lake Albert Nyanza as its source. True, its waters do come from that, but that is fed by the larger Victoria Nyanza, and other lakes, rivers, and creeks, until we find the real Nile source to be the whole southeastern water basin of Africa. The egoistic pleasure (Hedonism) of the first lake or supply of motives must be had by the larger and deeper lake of altruistic relations and motives, which, as Darwin shows, by natural selection, imposes duty as the main object of life and of progress in and of itself, as the main end of the individual and of the race. The pursuit of joy or pleasure may give a kind of happiness, but only short and unsatisfactory, even when life simmers out in the fat of its "agreeable consciousness." Evolutionary science shows that true joy and happiness is the harmonious hum of the well-oiled machinery of life in the performance of the duties which the family, society, the state, the race require of the individual. To reach that hum is more than happiness, for it is blessedness, which Goethe's Faust finally accepted, and which science accepts as the fulfillment of life.

All the great religions, philosophers, poets, statesmen, and scientists are not mistaken when they substantially agree that duty and not joy is the summum bonum, the greatest thing of all. Natural selection makes duty the mother and cause of love, progress, joy, happiness. As certain as our own poets hath said:

"Not enjoyment, and not sorrow
Is our destined end and way,
But to act that each to-morrow
Find us further than to-day."

As to the past, with its authority, Mr. Lorentz's jubilation of joy is good, but science requires him to give us a companion volume on duty as the altruistic source from which it must be fed under the voluntary and co-operative government and social relations of the future.

T. B. WAKEMAN.

Short Notes About Books.

A curious specimen of modern epicureanism in philosophy, from the Truth Seeker Company, New York, is "Pleasure and Progress," by Albert M. Lorentz, who sets himself to prove that human development, moral and social, is effected by the pursuit of pleasure. The argument is elaborate, but mostly leaves out the other half of human life under civilization, the pursuit of duty.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Samuel P. Putnam, well known as a lecturer on this coast, has issued through The Truth Seeker Company, New York, a pamphlet entitled "Pen Pictures of the World's Fair." Mr. Putnam can neither speak nor write without lugging in something against the Christian religion. So one finds lots of it scattered here and there in what would otherwise be an interesting lot of matter. Obtrusiveness of motives and beliefs are almost unpardonable in such cases.—Oregonian, Portland.

"Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian?" by John E. Remsburg, is the title of a book just published by the Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place, New York. "I have prosecuted these investigations," says the author, "not in the interest of any belief or creed, but in the interest of truth. . . . In proving Lincoln a disbeliever, I do not presume to prove Christianity false or Freethought true, but have shown that some Christians are not honest, and that an honest man may be a Freethinker." Those who are anxious for a decision of this question will here find much testimony for the negative side.—Open Court.

PRESENTS :: FOR THE :: HOLIDAYS.

In selecting Holiday Presents for their friends, Liberals should remember that good books make lasting impressions, and please as well every day in the year. A Liberal book in the right hands often changes the views of several persons.

We have quite a number of books appropriately bound for Holiday purchasers, and we will pack them carefully so they can go any distance in the mail, or by prepaid express. The following are all good books for the purpose:

The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book, in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $2.50. In plain boards, $2.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $1.50. In plain boards, $1.

Around the World, by D. M. Bennett, 4 volumes, red cloth covers, $6.50; leather, red edges, $9.50; morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers, 1,075 pages. 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Ingersoll's Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; tree calf, $9.

Ingersoll's Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals, 1,141 pages. In one volume, half calf, $5.

Life. A Prose Poem. By R. G. Ingersoll. In color, on boards, beveled, gilt edges, 50 cents.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28. inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll. 50 cents.

Apples of Gold, by Miss Susan H. Wixon. Gilt stamp. $1.25.

All in a Lifetime, by Miss Wixon. $1.

Voltaire's Romances, Profusely Illustrated. Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Darwin and After Darwin. By George J. Romanes. Silk cloth, gilt top, $2.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Conway's Life of Paine. Two large, handsome volumes. The best and only complete life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $5.

Parton's Life of Voltaire. Of which the same can be said as of Conway's Life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $6.

Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Leather, $3; cloth, gilt top, $2.

History of Christianity, Comprising all that relates to Christianity in the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $2.

Force and Matter. By Professor Ludwig Buchner, M.D. Half calf, $3; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind. By James B. Alexander. Cloth, $2.75.

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

Asleep and Awake. A new Liberal novel. By Raymond Russell. Cloth, side and back stamp, $1.

Cosmian Hymn Book. With music to all the songs. Edited by L. K. Washburn. Cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

For Other Books See the Advertisements, or Send to Us for a Free Catalogue.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Gems of Thought.

THE indications are multiplying 'on every hand, in the pulpit, at the bar, and in literature, that many so-called educated men have never learned to think exactly or to express their meaning with clearness and accuracy. And in this fact there is a hint for the colleges.—The Watchman.

"God will surely hear our prayers," said Georgina Barrett, a poor old lady of seventy, who, with her sister, had lived for weeks on bread and water, in dire poverty, under the eye of their Almighty Father in this Christian land. For two weeks they had but a pennyworth of coal to keep warmth in their bodies. But no help came, and she died at 80 York street, in the West-end of London, surrounded by wealth, gaiety, and fashion. What a triumph for Christianity that the last recorded utterance of a woman starved to death should be, "God will surely hear our prayers."—London Freethinker.

SUCH is the confirmation of Napoleon Bonaparte's discovery, uttered to one of his instruments in these words: "The people do not care about Liberty; what they want is equality. Those who care for Liberty are a few peculiar persons." In those words lay the secret of Napoleon's power. He was the one man able to read the revolutionary rune—"Liberty, Equality, Fraternity." He knew that Liberty could not coexist with social equality. That it was social—not merely legal—equality the revolutionists aimed at, was proved by its association with Fraternity. If people have liberty they may accord liberty to all others, but socially they will distinguish between equals and inferiors, and fraternize with those who can exchange advantages. This is true among all sorts and conditions of men, high and low. Social equality in a free community is visionary.—Moncure D. Conway.

BUT, for good or evil, the intellectual insurgeance that gathers in volume as this century declines, more and more forces from the temples and academic seats to the consciences of the educated laties the balance of right and wrong in every problem of moral import. There is danger to the poor and friendless in hospitals in the craze for renown by experiment; there is a grinning menace to the future of reasoned conduct in the legalization of the scientific shambles. The greatest good of mankind is morality, even without recompense—nay, with sacrifice of the material to the unseen good, because it is good, as our own souls acknowledge. When the balance of determination trembles let the doubt decide for mercy. Whosoever avows his diffidence to arrange evidence, yet willingly resigns his moral responsibility to a caste—perhaps not guiltless of sinister blots—is surely blindly following, instead of brightly leading.—Amos Waters, in Agnostic Journal.

SUPPOSE a mighty magnate would compel his subjects to prostrate themselves around him. One man, who desires to minister to the delight of his family, is constrained to expatiate on this autocrat's wisdom. Another, who desires to engage in philanthropic work, is coerced to deliver rhapsodies on this autocrat's goodness. Your vocabulary would have to equal an unabridged dictionary, before you could adequately express your indignation and contempt. An apologist for the autocrat would share the contempt. Yet a similar requirement of God is approved as wise and humane. A person who denounces such a demand is looked upon as a blasphemer, deserving eternal torments. I again expose myself to the charge of blasphemy. I again hurl the charge back into the teeth of the the accusers. I again ask who is the blasphemer—the religionist who imputes to God the vain-glory of a school-girl or I who repel the imputation?—Albert M. Lorentz.

ROMANISM: ITALY—SPAIN—IRELAND.

Where the waves whitely break upon the beach,
And swift receding leave the ribbed sands bare,
I saw two corpses. One had ebon hair,
And one had golden; and the hands of each
Were strained towards a goal they did not reach;
And both fair faces wore a white despair:
I greatly marvelled who these women were,
And what sad lesson might their dead lips preach.
Turning, I saw a younger maiden yet
Prone on the sands; with pleading, piteous eyes
She gazed across the waves, and never ceased
Struggling to rise; but, lo! a foot was set Upon her slender neck. I heard her sighs,
And saw o'erhead her bane, her curse—a priest.

—Donegal.

JOHN E. REMSBURG'S WORKS.

Abraham Lincoln: Was He A Christian?

For fifteen years Mr. Remsburg has been collecting material for his work. He presents an array of testimony that is irresistible and overwhelming, and which must put this question at rest forever. In addition to the testimony of twenty witnesses who claim that Lincoln was a Christian, and which is reviewed and refuted, he adduces the testimony of more than a hundred witnesses in proof of the claim that Lincoln was not a Christian. These witnesses include: his wife and other relatives; his three law partners; his private secretaries; members of his cabinet; his principal biographers, and scores of his most intimate friends.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged

As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents; singly, 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by

Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Slavery; Witchcraft; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiotcy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of the Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures:

Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the story of the Author-Hero's Life,

delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Choice extracts from "Common Sense," "American Crisis," "Rights of Man," and "Age of Reason," are given; also, tributes to Paine's character from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty.

An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1894. Price, 10 cents.

For all the above works address

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	20
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Remsburg.....	40
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Remsburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Remsburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of The World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.
Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.
Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABOOK, Price, 15 cents.

PATENT FOR SALE!

THE ROLLER SLED

FOR SUMMER COASTING.

Patented October 24, 1893, is a complete success. Any ten-year old boy or girl can guide it and stop it almost instantly, without touching the ground. It can be readily converted into a winter sled by removing the trucks. Its construction is simple and durable. It can be manufactured on very little investment. It is sure to be a great seller, North and South. The patent is for sale by state, or counties.
For particulars address A. R. AYRE, JR.,
2619 810 Broadway, Hannibal, Mo.

With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees.

A new edition of that splendid prose poem, "Life," by "the prince of orators," Col. R. G. Ingersoll. It is larger and better than the old edition, and can be framed or placed upon the table as an ornament. In the center of the card appear the portraits of the Colonel and the baby, surrounded by the prose poem, which has been truthfully described as, "one of the masterpieces of the orator and poet, who now, as far as we know, stands alone in the living world." It will make a delightful present, and will be a souvenir not only of intellectual greatness, but of artistic workmanship. It is printed on heavy board, gilt boveled edge. The size is 12x16 inches, and the price only 75 cents, post-paid.

The Freethinker's Badge-pin

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.
Will be sent for $4.50. The $2.75 Pin and The Truth Seeker one year for $5.

Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon

AND THE TRUTH SEEKER ONE YEAR.
Will be sent for $4.75. Sugar Spoons and Truth Seeker, $5. Either kind (Tea or Sugar) Spoon gilt bowl, 50c. more.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WANTED—500,000 Freethinkers to stop at Richter's Hotel, Cullman, Ala. 646

MAGIC LANTERNS

And STEREOPTICONS, all prices. Views illustrating every subject for PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS, etc.
A profitable business for a man with a small capital. Also, Lantarns for Home Amusement. 250 page Catalogue free.
McCALLISTER, Mfg. Optician, 49 Nassau St., N.Y. 1360w39

THE "Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position. Beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $28; hinged case, $38 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.
Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels $15. In finer cases, add as above.
Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.
All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons $3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.
The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more Etched (teas only):
"The Time to be Happy is Now."

50 cents extra.
The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30. Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.
OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

STRONG, HEALTHY MANHOOD

These Afflicted with Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting Discharges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility and who are desirous of being cured, a booklet will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and symptoms of the complaints, and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an "Outward Application"—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidence of success. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N.J.
I wish to say that I am an out-and-out LIBERAL, and I trust the Freethinkers of the land will give me their patronage and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors.—Dr. Fellows.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicereigns of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Nunnery, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents, cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER.

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ZEKE SEETH A GREAT ABOMINATION.

And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and, behold, at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the east; and they worshiped the sun toward the east. — Ezek. viii, 16.

Deutsche Freigeist-Bücher.

Wier haben folgende Bücher in Deutscher Sprache welche sehr berühmt sind.

„Die Irrthümer Moses,“

Eine kritische Beleuchtung des Pentateuch für Widerspruch zur modernen Weltanschauung und Götterbildung.
von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 50 Cents.

Das Weib und ihre Stellung zur Religion und Kirche am Ende des 19. Jahrhunderts.

von Helene S. Gardener, Preis 50 Cents.

„Moderne Götterdämmerung,“

von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 25 Cents.

„Wunder und Wunderthäter,“

von John Peck, Preis 20 Cents.

„Glaube und Vernunft,“

oder LE BON SENS.

des römisch-katholischen Priesters Jean Meslier. Nach dem französischen Original übersetzt von Fräulein Anna Knoop.

301 Seiten, Leinwand, $1.00, Papier, 50 Cts.

Diese Bücher sind in Papier Umschlag und klaren Druck. Unsere Deutschen Leser sollten es weit verbreiten.

Adresse, „The Truth Seeker,“

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, New York.

SURVEYORS, ATTENTION!

A rare chance is offered for a surveyor to get a

TRANSIT CHEAP.

We have one for sale, in good order, with Tripod, which cost $160. We will sell it for half-price—$80. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

$525

Agent's profits per month Will prove it or pay for it. New art cles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. CHIDESTER & SO., 26 Bond St., N. Y.

13746

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's

ARGUMENT

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial,

At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,

METROPOLITAN INFORMATION CONCERN ANSWERS ANY QUESTION

158 BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK. EXECUTES ORDERS 50c. & up. Scientific, Literary, Artistic, 50c. Commercial, Legal, Personal. SEND FOR PLAN & REFERENCES. Among these are Rev. Dr. Gotthell, Henry George, Gordon & Dilworth, New York; Edw. Osgood Brown, Chicago. EACH.

A SMALL Freethought Library,

ALL FOR $1.50.

- Evolution. By B. F. Underwood.....Price 6 cents
- The World's Parliament of Religions. By Tenney.....Price 10 cents
- The Gods. By Ingersoll (with likeness).....Price 20 cents
- Ingersoll Before The Unitarian Club.....Price 6 cents
- Myth of the Great Deluge. By McCann.....Price 15 cents
- Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank.....Price 25 cents
- The Bruno Monument in Rome.....Price 12 cents
- Church and State. By "Jefferson".....Price 10 cents
- Religion of Humanity. By Benwell.....Price 15 cents
- Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling.....Price 4 cents
- Dwight L. Moody. By Susan H. Wixon.....Price 5 cents
- Christian Religion. By an Old Farmer.....Price 15 cents
- God in the Constitution. By Ingersoll.....Price 10 cents
- Effacement of Christianity. By Holyoake.....Price 10 cents
- Life and Career of Bradlaugh. By Holyoake.....Price 15 cents
- Ingersoll's Address on Thomas Paine, Price 6 cents
- Standing Up for Jesus. By H. L. Green.....Price 4 cents
- Religion in the Republic. By M. A. Freeman.....Price 6 cents
- Never-Ending Life Assured by Science. By Tenney.....Price 6 cents
- Charles Darwin (Illustrated). By Flower & Wakeman.....Price 15 cents
- Jehovah Interviewed.....Price 6 cents
- Cosmology against Theology. By Vindex.....Price 15 cents

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

- Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.
- The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.
- The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's Praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.
- Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.
- Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.
- Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.
- Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.
- The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the word of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

BOOKS BY PROF. FELIX L. OSWALD.

- The Bible of Nature: A Contribution to the Religion of the Future. Cloth, $1.
- The Secret of the East; or, The Origin of the Christian Religion and the Significance of its Rise and Decline. Cloth, $1.
- Physical Education; or, The Health-Laws of Nature. Cloth, $1.
- Household Remedies for the Prevalent Disorders of the Human Organism. Cloth, $1.
- Zoological Sketches: A Contribution to the Outdoor study of Natural History. Illustrated by H. Faber. Cloth, $2.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

News of the Week.

CRISPI has succeeded in forming a new Italian ministry.

LAST week shocks of earthquake were felt in Indiana and Illinois.

IN Ohio efforts are being made to get a medical monopoly bill through the legislature.

BILLS admitting Utah and Arizona to statehood have been passed by the House of Representatives.

FIVE square miles of South Buffalo were inundated on December 15th by the overflow of Buffalo creek.

SAMUEL GOMPERS was reelected president of the Federation of Labor by a vote of 1,814 to 1,222 for John McBride.

JERRY SIMPSON denies that he favors a new party in the interest of silver alone. He stands with the Populists as before.

REV. H. T. COLT, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Mission of St. David's, Brooklyn, has become a convert to Catholicism.

FAR West newspapers seem inclined to boycott Eastern ink manufacturers because of the passage of the silver repeal bill.

IT does not seem probable that the German ministry will give effect to the vote of the Reichstag readmitting the Jesuits to the empire.

THE Wilson tariff bill is threatened by organized attack from Democratic representatives whose constituents' interests are not "protected" by the bill.

THE American Federation of Labor, in session in Chicago, adopted resolutions endorsing Governor Altgeld for his pardon of Fielden, Schwab, and Neebe.

IT is conceded that the bomb Vaillant threw into the French Chamber of Deputies defeated the bill, then pending, for the amnesty of political prisoners.

REPORTS of great destitution come from all the cities of the country and unusual efforts are being made to relieve the multitudes who are on the brink of destruction.

SIXTEEN vacancies in the Mississippi legislature were filled by election last week. Democratic representatives were selected in all, including strongly Populist counties.

CATHOLIC dignitaries and papers in New York are generally repudiating the Spelissy bill, which contemplates the division of the public school fund for the benefit of church schools.

Two spans of the bridge in course of construction across the Ohio river at Louisville collapsed December 15th. Twenty or more lives were lost and a number of workmen injured.

THE Provisional government of Hawaii seems to be determined to wage war against the nation [the United States] to which it wishes to annex Hawaii, if it does not get what it wants.

ADMIRAL DA GAMA has declared against the Peixoto government in Brazil and joined forces with Mello. The latter favors a republic, while Da Gama announces himself a monarchist.

"It is to be noticed that wherever a large vote was polled by women at the municipal elections [in Massachusetts] it was drawn out by religious or race antipathies," says the Boston Journal.

RUSSIA has declined the offer by France of a naval station in the Mediterranean, Admiral Avelan having reported that he could not guarantee the loyalty of the crews if they were permitted to visit French ports regularly.

WALTER DAMROSCH's symphony orchestra struck in Music Hall, New York, on December 17th. The cause of the trouble was the employment of a cellist not a member of the union, and he could not be a member because he had not been in this country six months.

THE Tories are blocking legislation in the British House of Commons by obstructive tactics in connection with the Parish Councils bill. It is their all but avowed intention to block Liberal legislation until Gladstone's death. A crisis, which may end the House of Lords, is imminent.

SUPREME COURT JUSTICE BARNARD of New York found John Y. McKane and four of his associates in the Gravesend election proceedings guilty of contempt of court and ordered each of them to be imprisoned for thirty days and pay a fine of $250, the highest penalties allowed by the law. They have asked for a stay. But McKane remains Sunday-school superintendent and otherwise has unimpaired standing in the Methodist church at Gravesend.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 52. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, December 30, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

"Wretched women, degraded and accursed, were driven to despair and suicide. Some of these victims of grief, unable to survive their shame, threw themselves into the flames. The brutal monkish writers exulted over their misfortunes, and the Church consigned their souls to everlasting woe!"

"LEAVE YOUR WIVES!
FORSAKE YOUR CHILDREN!
ABANDON YOUR HOMES!
MY CLERGY SHALL NOT MARRY!"
(GREGORY VII.)

"Secular priests and bishops had married and lived blamelessly with their families in the enjoyment of conjugal and filial love. They were suddenly declared by the thunderous decree of Rome to be polluted, and degraded. Children were declared illegitimate. Wives were torn from their husbands, and bishops branded with shame and ignominy!"
(see 'Champions of the Church'.)

"I PREFER A CLERGY DEVOTED TO CONCUBINAGE, SODOMY and INCEST.
RATHER THAN THOSE WHO MARRY!"—POPE GREGORY VII.—

A BIT OF HISTORY—THE TENDER MERCY OF POPERY.

TO NEW READERS OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

We send this issue of The Truth Seeker to a great many Liberals who are not subscribers, with an earnest invitation to them to become such, and thereby help along the Liberal cause.

We would also respectfully call their attention to the many points of excellence of the Paper.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is the Largest Freethought Journal in the World.

The Cartoons of Heston appear each week, and each picture is worth the cost of the paper a year to one who appreciates plain and telling arguments against ecclesiasticism.

THE TRUTH SEEKER constantly prints the most varied and entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal. Its Contributors are all the noted Liberals of the country. All that Col. R. G. Ingersoll gives to the Public can be found in THE TRUTH SEEKER, and that Poet of Freethought, Samuel P. Putnam, writes more for its columns than for any other. The Liberal speakers send us accounts of their journeys, and the best writers of Freethought freely devote their services to the cause of Liberalism through the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Charles Watts, perhaps the greatest Debater of our time, certainly the foremost Secular orator of England, will send us monthly letters from England with all the news of our movement there and such reflections and pertinent observations as will surely make every English Secularist living in this country and Canada want to read THE TRUTH SEEKER. George E. Macdonald, one of the rarest combinations of humorist, satirist, philosopher, logician, has been engaged to write regularly for our columns. As the "Man With the Badge Pin," he is known to nearly all the Liberals of the country, and we are willing to make him known to more.

THE TRUTH SEEKER gives all the news of Freethought, and is always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

The Sunday Question is now to the front all over the country. On that THE TRUTH SEEKER will voice the demands of the Liberal minded men and women of the country, and nowhere else will the rights of the people as against Puritanism be found so sturdily defended.

To sum it up, THE TRUTH SEEKER is the biggest, best, and bravest Freethought journal in the world, and if you are a Liberal or Freethinker, you want it and ought to take it. We appeal also to fair-minded Christians to hear our side and then decide. Bigots and fanatics, we suppose, wouldn't take it on any terms.

SEE OUR PREMIUM OFFER FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS on the second and third pages. Take advantage of one of these offers, or send $3 for a Year's subscription, or $1 for four months' trial. THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Most Magnificent Work Ever Published by the Freethought Press.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The object of this work is to present the Course of Freethought throughout the Civilized World for the last Four Centuries, from the time of Columbus and Bruno to the time of Ingersoll.

It will be a radical Historic Record of the Greatest Developments of the Human Race.

It will reveal Freethought as an Intellectual, Moral, Literary, Social, Industrial, and Political Movement.

It will show what Freethought is in itself and how manifold are its influences, and with what hope and promise we can hail its future triumph.

"Four Hundred Years of Freethought" will Embrace the most Illustrious Pages of Human History,

adorned with the brightest Genius, radiant with the most splendid Poetry, rich with the greatest Inventions and Discoveries and ennobled with Freedom's most shining advance.

Nothing Can be More Interesting,

more inspiring to the Pioneer Workers of to-day—to those who are still in the van for Human Rights and Progress. The struggle is not ended and what is already won must be carefully guarded. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty; and from the Past we must ever learn Great Lessons for the Future.

NO LIBERAL CAN AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT THIS BOOK.

It will contain the Greatest Thoughts and the Greatest Deeds of the Greatest Men

In One Harmonious and Magnificent Whole,

a vivid picture of man's sublimest evolution, with the added glory of

WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION

from the chains and slavery of a barbaric creed and church.

THE FIRST PART of the book will deal with Freethought as a Universal Power, as a Spirit, a Method, a prevailing but unorganized Influence in every Department of Human Growth.

THE SECOND PART will deal with Freethought as an Organized Movement, especially in America and Europe; and this history is of equal importance with the first, and should be justly understood and the Pioneers of our work recognized.

The first part will embrace the following Grand Departments:

Philosophy.	Science.	Education and Ethics.	Literature.	Government and Politics.	Woman's Emancipation.
Bruno.	Copernicus.	Bacon.	Boccaccio.	Voltaire.	Madame Roland.
Spinoza.	Galileo.	Comenius.	Rabelais.	Rousseau.	Mary Wollstonecraft.
Descartes.	Kepler.	Pestalozzi.	Cervantes.	French Salon.	Harriet Martineau.
Locke.	Da Vinci.	Fröbel.	Marlowe.	French Revolution.	Frances Wright.
Hume.	Newton.	Combe.	Shakspeare.	Parker.	Lucretia Mott.
Hobbs.	Humboldt.	Spencer.	Gibbon.	Thomas Paine.	Ernestine L. Rose.
Kant.	Lyell.	Owen.	Burns.	Jefferson.	Lydia Maria Child.
Hamilton.	Darwin.	Holyoake.	Shelley.	Mazzini.	Margaret Fuller.
Comte.	Tyndall.	Haeckel.	Byron.	Bentham.	Elizabeth Cady Stanton.
Büchner.	Huxley.	Girard.	Pushkin.	Mill.	Susan B. Anthony.
Feuerbach.		Lick.	Tcherny-chewsky.	Garibaldi.	Matilda Joselyn Gage.
				Heinzen.	Helen H. Gardener.
					Annie Besant.

THE PORTRAITS OF THESE ILLUSTRIOUS REFORMERS

in every domain of Human Thought and Progress will adorn the pages of this volume.

The Second Part of this volume will be devoted especially to organized Freethought and the Liberal Press in modern times. The Truth Seeker, Investigator, Ironclad Age, Secular Thought, Freethinkers' Magazine, Independent Pulpit, Lucifer, the Freethinker, Agnostic Journal, etc.

It will give a history of the

GREAT INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS

at Chicago, the Freethought Federation of America, the American Secular Union, the various state and local organizations, the Canadian Secular Union, the British Secular Union, and other Liberal associations throughout the world.

It will contain the portraits of those who, up to the present time, have been identified with Freethought work—editors, lecturers, officers of societies, and those who, as representative men, have won distinction in other fields of effort. There will be the portraits of

Horace Seaver,	George E. Macdonald,	Capt. R. C. Adams,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.,	Susan H. Wixon,
J. P. Mendum,	E. M. Macdonald,	John R. Charlesworth,	Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr.,	Mrs. Charles Watts,
D. M. Bennett,	L. K. Washburn,	Samuel P. Putnam,	Prof. J. H. Cook,	Mrs. Robert C. Adams,
Parker Pillsbury,	Ernest Mendum,	John E. Remsburg,	E. H. Heywood,	Mrs. M. A. Freeman,
Elizur Wright,	Charles Watts,	Franklin Steiner,	Otto Wettstein,	Katie Kehm Smith,
T. C. Leland,	G. W. Foote,	J. D. Shaw,	Stephen Pearl Andrews,	Lucy N. Colman,
T. B. Wakeman,	Saladin,	E. A. Stevens,	James Parton,	Lillian Leland,
Judge C. B. Waite,	J. R. Monroe,	H. L. Green,	Abner Kneeland,	Amy Post.

and other men and women who have contributed to the advancement of Freethought and whose names should be remembered throughout the Liberal ranks. There will also be about

ONE HUNDRED BIOGRAPHIES,

and in these will be given a picture of Freethought progress which will be most interesting and valuable, for it is in individuals that we find the best interpretations of the age.

The Price of This Superb Book is $5.00,

and not for the same amount of money can there be found such an array of facts, such a survey of history, and such a galaxy of Freethought.

Mr. Putnam is now devoting his whole time to this work and it will be published at the earliest possible moment.

The name of every Subscriber who sends five dollars before the work is on the press will be enrolled in this book. DON'T FAIL TO SUBSCRIBE AT ONCE.

This book will contain

Over Six Hundred Pages of Printed Matter and Over One Hundred Portraits.

It will be elegantly bound. It will be a book for the home and the fireside. It will be a book to give to your friends when they ask, What is Freethought—what has it done and what is it doing in the world?

This is the most universal presentation of Freethought ever given to the public, and no Freethinker can afford to be without it. It is a library in itself.

Address orders to

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

HOW TO GET FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT FREE

SPECIAL OFFER.

We have made arrangements with Mr. Putnam whereby we are enabled to make our friends a most generous offer.

We need more subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and every Freethinker needs "Four Hundred Years of Freethought." Not all are able to pay $5 for it, but everyone can do a little work to obtain a copy—congenial work, that will do great good all around. This is the offer:

Send us Four New Yearly Subscribers at regular rates ($12 in all), and we will send the Getter-up of the Club a copy of "FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT," FREE OF CHARGES.

And further, to aid our friends in getting this book for themselves, we will offer

To the New Subscribers as a Premium,

post free, a copy in boards of

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated

By WATSON HESION,

THE GREATEST BOOK OF ITS KIND EVER CONCEIVED.

Or, if preferred, a copy cloth-bound of
W. S. BELL'S

Handbook of Freethought.

With these Splendid Works as premiums there ought to be no difficulty in getting hundreds of clubs of subscribers.

Remember, to the Getter-up of The Club, FOUR HUNDRED YEARS OF FREETHOUGHT, free.

To each New Subscriber in the club, a premium of a Dollar Book—either "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought," in Cloth—all free by post or express.

This really brings the price of the paper down to $2 to each new subscriber, as they get THE TRUTH SEEKER one year and a dollar book for $3.

A Club of Four New Subscribers and $12 ($3 only from each) does this.

We want to extend our circulation, and we want to help our friends to help us.

It ought not to be difficult to get four New Subscribers in any town in the country, especially with these Splendid Premiums to assist.

Those who get up these Clubs will receive their copies of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" as soon as the book is issued.

Those who send a Club and Four New Subscribers and $12 before the book is printed, will have their names enrolled in its shining pages.

THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place,
NEW YORK.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 20. No. 52. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, December 30, 1893. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor and Manager.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

SATURDAY, - - - - DECEMBER 30, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription, in advance.....	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance.....	5 00
Two new subscribers.....	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.....	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance.....	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance.....	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance.....	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Money should be sent by express company's money order, postal order, draft on New York, or by registered letter. Address communications and make drafts, checks, post-office and express money orders payable to E. M. MACDONALD, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We shall be obliged to our readers if they will send us the name and address of any Freethinker who is not a regular subscriber.

SOME HANDSOME PREMIUMS.

To induce new subscriptions and prompt renewals on the part of our friends we make the following handsome premium offers:

For $6.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and S. P. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" ($5). By taking advantage of this or our Free offer of the book (see opposite page) there is no reason why every Freethinker in the country should not possess this splendid work.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Paine's Great Works Complete" ($3). This edition of Paine's works contains a picture of Paine, of the statue proposed to be erected in Chicago, and of his monument in New Rochelle.

For $5 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers" ($3). By D. M. Bennett.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and James B. Alexander's Dynamic Theory ($2.75). This is a splendid offer, for every one wants this book. It has over a thousand large pages and more than four hundred illustrations. It is a digest of Science, and every one who studies it cannot help but be well-informed in all scientific matters.

For $4.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth ($2.50).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" in boards ($2).

For $4 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in cloth covers ($1.50).

For $3.50 we will send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year ($3) and "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," in board covers ($1).

This is a splendid opportunity to obtain books which every Liberal desires to have, at an exceedingly low price. Old and new subscribers can avail themselves of it, and we shall be glad if our present readers will call the attention of their friends to the values offered.

"Applied Christianity."—IV.

What are the fruits of the thirty years' cultivation of the public mind by the National Reform Association? In the crusade which it has led for the subversion of the secular institutions established by the fathers, what victories has it won? Are the people more, or less, familiar with and favorable to the idea of a close union of religion and law than they were in 1863? Have the ministers, as ministers, and religious bodies, as such, greater, or less, influence in the halls of legislation than they had three decades ago? In answering these questions we shall quote somewhat at length from the Christian Statesman, the official organ of the National Reform Association, as we have done in the previous papers of this series, and also from the American Sentinel, the Second Adventist paper of this city, which is as distinctively representative of the Christian opposition to the theocratic movement as the Christian Statesman is of the Christian sentiment favorable thereto.

Our "Churchly Purpose and Performance" column gives some idea of the triumphs which the Sabbatharians are constantly achieving, although our record is manifestly, but unavoidably, incomplete. The enemies of the Free Sunday are forcing the fighting all along the line, and they are justified in feeling greatly encouraged. They are getting new ordinances and statutes in their favor, and old ones interpreted against liberty by administrative officials and enforced by peace officers. The courts have within a few years rendered many decisions upholding existing Sunday laws. Such a decision once handed down by a state supreme court places the people of that state at the mercy of bigots in and out of office. Every new statute enacted is so much clear gain for the first day worshipers. A multitude of laws are created with the utmost facility, but when it comes to repeal, no matter how unjust the law may be, the advocates of reform find themselves confronted with insurmountable obstacles.

Says H. H. George in the Christian Statesman:

"The same public sentiment that molded Congress into the making of the Sabbath regulation for the World's Fair, will speak again whenever called upon, will speak upon the same side it did before, and will speak more positively, more loudly, and more determinedly than it did before."

No doubt; and it will speak just as fraudulently as before, but we have no guarantee that Congress will not bow just as abjectly in the presence of the new forged petitions as it did in that of those demanding the closing of the World's Fair.

"Our Supreme Court in 1885 unanimously declared that labor's need of a rest day was justification enough for Sabbath laws, to which should be added as a basis for their defense a part of our Christian National Constitution, that other unanimous decision in 1892, 'This is a Christian nation.'"—Christian Statesman.

"Congress published a larger number of the hearings on the Sunday Rest bill (42,000) than it published of any other public document, except the Agricultural Reports."—Wilbur F. Crafts.

Editor William H. McKee, of the American Sentinel, sums up the situation in these few sentences:

"In every state there has been agitation for the enforcement of Sunday laws. Cases under the Sunday laws, in one form or another, have been brought before the courts of almost all the states. In several states these laws have been avowedly used for religious persecution. Although the religious statutes, under which this is done, contradict both the spirit and the terms of the bills of rights of the Constitutions of the different states, and of the United States, still they have been, without exception, thus far, sustained by the decisions of the higher state courts. The Supreme Court of the United States has, by concurring in Justice Brewer's opinion in the Trinity church case, February 29, 1892, that this is 'a Christian Nation,' given notice what position it will take on any case involving this question which it may be called on to decide. The Congress of the United States has realized this, and acted upon it in advance, in the legislation which it passed in reference to the Sunday closing of the World's Fair. The principle, then, that the church may employ the power of the state—that secular laws may enforce religious observances, and that the authority of church and state, combined, shall dominate the conscience, is settled in the affirmative in this country."

We are face to face, therefore, with an enemy intrenched in the rifle pits of state and federal legislation. Hereafter we must in the open do battle with a foe that, when hard pressed, may take refuge in the casements and bomb-proofs of jurisprudence. To be sure, we have the Constitution and many state bills of rights, but politicians, at the dictate of priests, have disregarded and trampled these before, disregard and trample them now, and will continue to disregard and trample them, until we show them—the politicians—that we can command more votes than the priests can and are determined to be free from clerical domination.

Referring to the source from which has sprung this polluting and death-dealing stream of church-stateism and calling attention to the tributary waters now pouring into the older current—the combined volume threatening to sweep away the remnants of every cherished edifice of liberty to which we yet cling—Mr. McKee says:

"Every statute and municipal ordinance in this country, enforcing or promoting religion and religious observances, has had its origin in the church and state laws of the original codes from which our system of jurisprudence is derived. The same spirit of church and state union which established these laws in the first place has retained them in our statute books. These dormant seeds of persecution, which have lain covered and uncultivated in the statute books now for three generations, have, within the last few years, been brought to the light with the promise of an immediate and rapid growth. A body of associated religious organizations, such as never before existed, has undertaken to foster and cherish the growing iniquity.

"That principle, which is the basis of papal policy, is now firmly fixed in the statutes and judicial precedents of the different states. The farther development of this destructive policy is being rapidly hastened, not only by the machinations of the Roman Catholic church itself, but, even in a much greater degree, by the mistaken course of Protestant denominations and the various other organizations, more or less avowedly religious in character. Some of these organizations are willing to join hands with the Roman Catholic church in securing strict legislation as to the observance of Sunday, and are, in fact, desirous that the Catholic power should join with them in obtaining a severe interpretation, and enforcement, of those laws by the courts. Other organizations believe themselves to be antagonizing Roman Catholicism, and even confessedly make that the main, and, in some instances, the only purpose of their existence, still they ignorantly serve the same ends by accomplishing the same thing, only under the name of Protestantism, instead of Catholicism."

The only thing that at present postpones the union of Catholic and Protestant against civil liberty for non-Christians is the fact that the Protestants control the public schools. Shut out their Bibles and prayers and songs and school-book selections and how long would it be before they would join hands with the Catholics in a division of the school fund for the support of church schools? No man would grow gray in the time they would spend in deliberating upon the question, you may be sure. How do we know they would do this? We know it because they insist upon keeping the Protestant Bible in the common schools. We know it because they insist upon forcing upon the children of non-Protestants religious ideas that are repugnant to those non-Protestants, who help support the schools which are thus perverted into nurseries of Protestantism. If they loved justice they would take their Bible out of the public schools. If they really believed in non-sectarian instruction they would voluntarily stop thrusting their religious notions into the minds of children not their own. They oppose a division of the school fund because it would benefit the Catholics, not because they are opposed to the principle involved in division. Put them in the position of the Catholics and they would demand what the less discreet Catholics are demanding. They are perfectly willing that public money shall be used for the purpose of propagating religion in the schools, because the religion so propagated is their religion. Take from them this monopoly and see how quickly they would lose their truly wonderful love for the public schools.

Catholic and Protestant are practically united in regard to all the other ligatures that connect church and state. They both believe in Sunday laws; both approve the appointment of chaplains in the military and civil service; both indorse the action of the president and of governors in issuing religious proclamations; both wish to have church property continue exempt from taxation; both defend the judicial oath; both stand for the "law of Christ" in regard to divorce; both believe that civil authority comes from God. They differ only as to the relation of the church to public education, and that only because one is without and the other within the charmed circle of state favoritism. We are glad they have this bone of contention to partly occupy their attention. Possibly the Protestants—that is, the more reasonable ones—will be taught something by the parochial school fight. They may get their eyes open enough to see that the only safety for themselves as well as for other minorities is to take and keep religion out of the public schools, and in all other ways secularize the state. To quote Mr. McKee once more:

"Those who are assisting to create a Protestant similitude to the papacy while ardently fighting Roman Catholicism, as they see it, are legion. The subtle deception under which these labor and the delusion which they throw around those whom they draw into their ranks is unique. Roman Catholicism may well cherish them as its dearest friends, the enemy. It is a frequent, though paradoxical, statement that the longest way round is the shortest way there—this is vividly exemplified in the case of those who are now antagonizing the progress of the papacy in this country by the use of papal methods. No quicker way of securing a papal-Protestant domination in civil affairs could possibly be devised than that which has been taken. The possibility of the Roman Catholic church, as now existing and organized in this country, obtaining the political ascendancy has aroused a selfish opposition which demands the same thing for itself, and proceeds to obtain it by means which are in themselves Romanizing, and will very shortly bring both parties into companionship in a mutual attack on the same fold."

This is wholly true. As we have said, the only thing—aside from doctrinal differences and inherited prejudices—that keeps them apart in their crusades against the secular state is their selfish scramble over the schools. Let the battle go on; we believe that it will have a great educational value; that it will bring tens of thousands of recruits to our ranks, and it may save the day for liberty. When the United States Supreme Court unanimously declared that "this is a Christian nation" the black flag was raised. That was the hour of destiny. After that any law in the interest of Christianity might be enacted, and there remains no authority to nullify it. The highest tribunal has said in advance that it is constitutional. To this complexion we have come at last. The Supreme Court has been known to reverse its own decisions, but, as regards the relations of church and state, there is no hope that, with its present personnel, it will do so unless we first raise the country to a white heat of protest. And then it might not, for such bodies move slowly. In all likelihood that decision will stand until a majority of new men sit upon the Supreme Court bench. And perhaps many a long year thereafter. While it remains a part of the law of the land we can never know peace and safety. The actual writers of that decision—the National Reform Association and its federated societies—will not scruple to use all the power it puts into their hands. They will apply Christianity in every way possible. In the name of "The King" they will destroy the republic if we do not defend ourselves. They will strangle religious liberty if we put our trust in "the spirit of the age." We might as well trust in God and die. Concentrate and fight. Teach the people. Meet the theocrats on the platform, in the press, in the school meeting, in educational conventions, at the bar of justice, in the state legislature and Congress. Stand squarely for our principles. Expose that fraud, the "Sunday rest" law. Be men and women. Preserve liberty in the land.

Woman and Christianity.

"What women are by nature it is presumptuous to assume, nature so far having had very little and custom and society having had a great deal to do with my sex. The feminine product evolved from six thousand years of absolute subjection—absolute at least until the advent of Christian civilization—does not look kindly on innovation."—Kate Field.

Kate Field is too well-informed a woman, too free from many common superstitions, and too independent in every way, to be the author of the statements contained in the foregoing sentences. How they could flow from her pen we do not see. We allude, of course, to her certification of the truth of the "six thousand years" delusion and her apparent concession of the validity of the unfounded Christian claim that to "Christian civilization" woman is indebted for her present comparative freedom. Anent the latter we respectfully suggest that she carefully read "Woman, Church, and State," by Matilda Joselyn Gage. Therefrom she would learn that, in the words of Sir Henry Maine, "The jurists had evidently at this time assumed the equality of the sexes as a principle of the law of equity. The situation of the Roman woman whether married or single became one of great personal and proprietary independence; but Christianity tended somewhat from the commencement to narrow this remarkable liberty. The prevailing state of religious sentiment may explain why modern jurisprudence has adopted these rules concerning the position of woman which belong to an imperfect civilization. No society which preserves any tincture of Christian institutions is likely to restore to married women the personal liberty conferred on them by the middle Roman law. Canon law has deeply injured civilization." See Maine's "Early History of Institutions," "Roman Law," and "Ancient Law" for further information on this point.

Under the canon law daughters could not inherit with brothers. In Rome it was different. Says Blackstone: "The preference of males over females in succession was totally unknown to the laws of Rome. Brothers and sisters were entitled to equal parts of the inheritance."

The Christian view of woman is well shown by this paragraph from Loredano's "Life of Adam" (published at Amsterdam in 1696):

"It was the effect of God's goodness to man that suffered him to sleep when Eve was formed, as Adam, being endowed with a spirit of prophecy, might foresee the evils which the production of Eve would cause to all mankind, so that God perhaps cast him into that sleep lest he should oppose the creation of his wife."

Of woman and the church Elizabeth Cady Stanton says: "As the Christian church grew stronger, woman's fate grew more helpless. Even the Reformation and Protestantism brought no relief." The old Christian view of woman survived to this century, to this generation, to this day, despite the humanizing, the enlightening, the liberating influence of rationalism and science. In 1843 the Hopkinson Association of Congregational Divines of New Hampshire adopted this rule to govern the conduct of women in their churches:

"But as to leading men, either in instruction or devotion, and as to any interruption or disorder in religious meetings, 'Let your women keep silence in the churches; not merely let them be silent, but let them keep or preserve silence. Not that they may not preach, or pray, or exhort merely, but they may not open their lips to utter any sounds audibly. Let not your women in promiscuous religious meetings preach or pray audibly, or exhort audibly, or sigh, or groan, or say Amen, or utter the precious words, 'Bless the Lord,' or the enchanting sounds, 'Glory! Glory!'"

While Miss Field has her mind directed to the "subjection" of woman, we will call her attention to the famous See case in New Jersey in 1876. Dr. See had admitted two women temperance speakers to his pulpit. He was put on trial for this offense, which Rev. Dr. Craven, the prosecutor, declared was "an indecency in the sight of Jehovah." For four hours Dr. Craven devoted himself to the task of proving from the Bible woman's subjection to man. And he proved it. He knew the Bible and Christianity better than do many of his brethren who have been partially civilized by Freethought. Here follow a few of his asseverations:

"I believe the subject involves the honor of my God. I believe the subject involves the headship and crown of Jesus. Woman was made for man and became first in the transgression. My argument is that subordination is natural, the subordination of sex. Dr. See has admitted marital subordination, but this is not enough; there exists a created subordination; a divinely arranged and appointed subordination of woman as woman, to man as man. Woman was made for man and became first in the transgression. The proper condition of the adult female is marriage; the general rule for ladies is marriage. Women without children, it might be said, could preach, but they are under the general rule of subordination. It is not allowed woman to speak in the church. Man's place is on the platform. It is positively base for a woman to speak in the pulpit; it is base in the sight of Jehovah. The whole question is one of subordination."

He was sustained by the Synod of New Jersey, which censured Dr. See for his anti-Christian liberality. An appeal was taken to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States, which confirmed the verdict of the Synod. Woman's subjection to superstition is brought into painful prominence by the fact that, in the face of this shameful Christian treatment of the sex by the Presbyterian Church of the United States, hundreds of thousands of women remain members of that church. The baleful influence of Christianity upon women could not be demonstrated more conclusively than by this slavish submission to the power that denies them equal rights as human beings.

Rev. H. H. Strong, president of the Rochester Theological Seminary (Baptist), said in 1878:

"She is subordinate to man in office, she is to be helper, not principal. Therefore man has precedence in the order of creation, woman is made of man, and to supply the felt need of man. The race, therefore, is called the race of man and not the race of woman. For this office of subordination, and whether they assert it or not, women are fitted by their very constitution, and in the very creation of mankind in the garden of beauty undefiled by the slimy track of the serpent as it was, God ordained the subordination of woman and the differences of nature that make her subordination inevitable."

Modern American lawmakers have removed many of the disabilities imposed upon woman by the spirit of Christianity, but there is still ample room for the work of repeal. Recently an elderly woman fell and injured herself upon some ice at Rome, New York. The ice had formed from the overflow of one of the tanks of the New York Central Railroad Company. She brought an action for damages and for compensation for loss of time. She was married, but her husband had not lived with her for twelve years, and she supported herself and children by cleaning and taking in washing. The company's lawyer asked the judge to charge that she was not entitled to recover for loss of time from household service, but that her husband, if anyone, might recover damages for all loss of household services occasioned by the accident. The trial judge said that he would not charge in that way in that case, as the husband was not living with his wife. The General Term, therefore, reversed the judgment for the plaintiff, and ordered a new trial. The decision of the General Term appears to be "good law." Such a manifest wrong shocks the sense of justice of even men and women who call themselves Christians, but it is merely a survival. When Christianity was supreme the canon law refused to recognize that a woman had any rights apart from her husband, and even questioned if she had a soul.

Wanted—New Subscribers.

We solicit the kind attention of our friends to the need which exists of increasing the subscription list of THE TRUTH SEEKER. There are several reasons for this, which our readers will readily see. First, It will do a world of good, by making more Liberals and by interesting those already liberal in the work of Freethought. The church is making great encroachments upon our liberties, and the people need to know about it, in order to defeat its tyranny. And those who read THE TRUTH SEEKER are a hundred times more interested and active than those who do not. Second, It is a duty we owe to our fellow-men to give them the light of reason we have obtained. Liberalism makes for true civilization, and freedom from fear of an angry God makes men happier and better. Every Liberal should do all he can to lift up his neighbors from the darkness of superstition to the glorious plain of mental liberty. And, as Mr. Wakeman says, referring to the resolution regarding the Liberal papers passed at the late International Congress: "They are the very life of the cause of intellectual and practical emancipation of the people. As such they are to be built up and sustained by constant care, payment, encouragement, and solicitation for subscribers for them." Third, An increase in the list will relieve the readers from the occasional "duns" we are compelled to send out in order to get money with which to pay bills. If we can obtain two or three thousand new subscribers, the increased revenue will make the business work of the paper easier, and we can continue to improve the paper without fear of financial embarrassments.

To reward those who will do a little for us in this matter we have arranged to take a large number of Mr. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought," and to every one who sends us four new yearly subscribers at the regular rates of $3 ($12 in all), we shall send a copy of that magnificent work free. Those who send the club before the book is on the press will be enrolled among the original subscribers and patrons in the book.

And to make it easy to get these four new subscribers we will offer them as a premium either of two splendid works—The "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," or W. S. Bell's "Handbook of Freethought" in cloth binding. Our readers know the value of these books, and that about every Liberal in the country would like a copy of one or the other. Either one of these, as may be chosen, will be given to the new subscribers obtained in these clubs of four, and a copy of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought" to the one who gets up the club and sends the money and names.

We cannot afford to make this premium to single subscribers, but to enable old subscribers and single new subscribers to obtain these and other desirable works at a great reduction, we have made a list of premiums in connection with subscriptions to the paper, to be found in the first column of the first editorial page of THE TRUTH SEEKER. We are willing to do our part toward making the obtaining of good Liberal works easy and cheap, and hope our readers will take advantage of the terms offered.

Once more we ask that a favorable eye be turned in our direction, and a helpful hand extended. As the resolutions of the International Congress expressed it, Boom the Liberal papers and you boom the Liberal cause.

Among the recent conspicuous answers to prayer was that given in the case of Mary Porter, of Pendlebury, England. She was kneeling at prayer when her nightdress became ignited. She died in the hospital. Her mother, in trying to save her, was so badly burned that no hope is entertained of her recovery. Respectfully referred for explanation to the ministers and the headline writers of the World and Herald.

Christian love and charity are much the same the world over. Here in New York they turn hundreds of women into the streets on the worst night of the winter, while down in Alabama and out in Nebraska they strip other women naked and whip them until the blood flows in streams. Parkhurstism and Whitecapism are respectively the legal and illegal outcroppings of the same spirit of self-righteous Christian moralism which has ever stood helpless in the face of social evils. It knows no cure but vengeance, and that for only the more helpless of the victims. Women are fined and sent to Blackwell's Island, but the men, their companions, are discharged.

The next issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER will contain an illustrated article entitled "Historic Means of Grace," being a description of the implements of torture and relics of the Inquisition belonging to the Nuremberg collection. These instruments, now on exhibition in New York, are not duplicates but the original products of Middle Age ingenuity in the framing of arguments for the confusion of heretics, and many of the numerous illustrations have been prepared especially for these columns. We have never seen so complete a description of the collection, and the cuts in most cases are the only ones in existence. The literary part of the work has been done by Geo. E. Macdonald.

We have received from C. P. Farrell a new edition of that splendid prose poem, "Life," by "the prince of orators," Col. R. G. Ingersoll. It is larger and better than the old edition, and can be framed or placed upon the table as an ornament. In the center of the card appear the portraits of the Colonel and the baby, surrounded by the prose poem, which has been truthfully described as "one of the masterpieces of the orator and poet, who now, as far as we know, stands alone in the living world." It is printed on heavy board, gilt beveled edge. The size is 12x16 inches, and the price only 75 cents, post paid. We would advise our friends to get this at once. The words alone are worth the money.

Wherever he may be found, the "ambassador of God" is sure that he has a commission to regulate the conduct of the people. At Bloomfield, N. J., Rev. J. M. Nardiello is running amuck against balls and sociables given by associations composed chiefly of members of his church. The other evening he intruded himself in a ball-room. The people there assembled were all dancing, but when they caught sight of the "holy father," they started for the exits. "Consternation" reigned; "everybody made a rush to escape," and young men jumped from the windows to the ground. It does not seem to have occurred to them to gently intimate to the man of the Lord that a walk would be good for his health. It must be real pleasant to be able to safely lash slaves or frighten them half to death.

Referring to Professor Tyndall's "prayer test" suggestion, the Nation remarks:

"In this he was substantially anticipated in Hawaii, where the natives, years before, had challenged the missionaries to a competitive test of the value of prayer and of heathen sacrifices as a means of stopping the dangerous flow of lava from Mauna Loa."

We may be thought feeble-minded, but nevertheless we must confess that we fail to discover any "substantial" resemblance between a competitive test of two kinds of prayer—one abstract and the other concrete, so to speak—and the scientific observation and tabulation of the results of the application of one kind of prayer. Be this as it may, however, it is not recorded that the missionaries accepted the challenge of the Hawaiians, which would indicate that they knew more but were less sincere than the "idolaters."

In logical sequence the state-built church follows the state-paid chaplain. Hence we need not be surprised that Senator Cullom, of Illinois, presented the other day in the United States Senate a petition signed by a large number of Chicago clergymen asking Congress to make an appropriation—Senator Cullom thought not to exceed $10,000—to build a small chapel in connection with the marine hospital in Chicago. This on the ground that it belongs to the government, and is in part occupied by the marine hospital. No doubt most of the ministers signing the petition have already made themselves more or less conspicuous in denouncing the Catholics because members of that church want a division of the public-school fund. How do they excuse their inconsistency? And if the government may rightfully appoint chaplains and build churches for them, why may it not prescribe what doctrines they shall preach? Stone upon stone and brick upon brick rises the state-church.

Some notable views were enunciated in the recent Congress of the Protestant Episcopal Church. The subject under discussion was "The Duty of the Churches of the Anglican Communion Towards Roman Catholic Countries." Revs. Hall Harrison and William Kirkers thought that "intrusion into a country heretofore exclusively Catholic was wrong and unwarranted." Also an impertinence. They did not state whether this rule held good in the case of Mohammedan and pagan countries. An explanation of the omission would make interesting reading. Mr. Kirkers also said that "Roman Catholics cannot be converted by external influences, and that deserters from the faith of Rome would make good infidels, but not devout Episcopalians." No; a man who reasons his way out of Catholicism is not likely to stop in any half-way house. Of course a few do, but most of those who leave Rome march straight into the Freethought camp.

A Miss Mercedes Plowes recently committed suicide at the Loretto convent, in Hamilton, Ontario. She had been a Protestant, but went from Chicago to Hamilton to enter the convent, having decided to accept the Catholic faith. The testimony given at the inquest showed that she had said to Sister Francis, when she confessed that she had taken poison: "I may never be so ready to die again, and I want to die when I feel sure of going to heaven." Now there was a keen-witted and consistent Christian for you! We have always thought that the Christian who was sure he was "saved" had better die at once; nothing could be more foolish than to run the risk of losing the way to heaven and dropping into hell just for the sake of a few uncertain years on earth. Nevertheless Miss Plowes seems to have had some peculiar notions about veracity. It was testified that she requested Sister Francis to tell her relatives that she had died of heart failure. It is plain that she thought God would forgive both the self-destruction and the lie she had commissioned Sister Francis to tell.

On a recent Sunday Rev. Dr. William S. Rainsford preached a sermon in the church of St. George, this city, upon the treatment of criminals and the education of children. He said some good and timely words and he also uttered some just the opposite. "You cannot teach duty to man except as it is based on duty to God." This was prefatory to saying that there must be religious instruction in the schools. "I do not advocate a division of the school funds," but . . . "I see no insuperable objection to having children taught by clergy of different Christian bodies to which their parents belong; taught at regular hours within the school buildings, I mean. In no other way can they be fitted for citizenship. If Protestant churches can not systematize their work so as to give this, then in God's name let the church that can supply it." Dr. Rainsford does not state what is to be done for the children of Freethinkers and for those of the great unchurched masses. His attitude is another evidence of the existence of an undercurrent of thought among Protestants favorable to union with the Catholics if it is not otherwise possible to control education in the interest of Christianity.

Four Good Books for German Freethinkers.

We can supply, in the German language, the following four books which everyone knows to be good:

"The Mistakes of Moses," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

"Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen H. Gardener, 50 cents.

"The Gods," by Col. R. G. Ingersoll, 25 cents.

"Miracles and Miracle-Workers," by John Peck 20 cents.

These are neatly printed, bound in paper covers and are complete. Our German-reading friends should circulate these widely.

Readers will aid the cause by forwarding names of their friends who might be interested in sample copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Communications.

Spiritualism Defended.

Otto Wettstein says some funny things in reply to my strictures to show to him that Idealism and Spiritualism are not one and the same; but in his reply he takes good care to drop the subject altogether, and does not pretend to defend the former statement. He makes many others, however, just as inconsistent with facts, which it were too tedious to attempt to contradict. He gets a man—out of whom the breath of life has fled—and attempts to show me how absurd it would be to hunt for a spirit in a dead man by dissecting him, and, after slashing away at this corpse, insists that if he had a spirit the dead man should squirm and kick at every thrust of the knife. Now this illustration is just about as reasonable as a Materialist can be. They are always hunting for something in a place where there is no likelihood of finding it, and reminds me of the farmer who wanted his boy to hunt for a calf; not finding it, the boy told his father that he had hunted every place where the calf would be likely to be. "Well now," said the father, "my son, please hunt where there is no likelihood of a calf being, and you may find it." Now, Mr. Wettstein no doubt thinks the most likely place to find a spirit would be in the body of a dead man; but, like all his kith and kin of philosophers Materialistic, he is looking in the wrong place. He should try to find it outside of the dead body, and it may be if he looked a little into outside phenomena he would find the spirit of the man.

He goes on to state what he believes. He believes "man is bred, born, lives, dies, and vanishes as such form." He believes "man's physical body is the cause, consciousness or mind, the effect." Then he states what Brother Perry believes. He says: "Perry believes and insists that the effect can continue when the cause has vanished." This, Perry believes only in a certain sense. A man can build a house or an engine, and the house and the engine will still exist, continue, when the man is dead and buried. Certainly it can, just as a spirit which was produced by the natural body can continue after the body from which it came has decayed. A mother produces a child and she dies, but it does not follow that the child must die because the mother who caused the child to live has died. If Brother Wettstein will only take time to look at it, he will see that his argument or inference is illogical.

There is no reason in the world why a spirit body may not be formed from the finer elements of the natural body and continue to live after the natural body is dead, just as a man lives after his mother dies. He says he "believes that consciousness, as manifest in monad or man, is generated from the vital electro-magnetic forces, engendered by means of the subtle and complex chemistry of the living animal organism." Here our friend bites off a bit that I fear is too big for him to chew, and I fear he will not be able to digest such scientific fodder. Please, Otto, explain what you mean by "the consciousness of a monad." You said in your article that "consciousness was the result of the organization of the body, and the result of food supplies," and now you speak of a "consciousness of a monad." If a monad manifests consciousness, I suppose an organism is not needed to produce it. How is that, and how can you prove that a monad has consciousness? Do you say so because Spinoza teaches of the life of a monad? Come now, Otto, before you know what you are about you will have a spirit entity or monadic life to build an organism on. Then again you are, I fear, striking out into deep water when you speak of "vital-electro-magnetic forces engendered by the complex chemistry of the living animal organism."

Don't you see by such talk that you are asserting an animal germ, a monad, the smallest atom of a living organism, an entity? Why, you are confirming my statement, that man is but the result of a monad, an entity. Take care, my friend, you are on a teeter when you place yourself on such a doubtful pinnacle.

Now, sir, if you can prove what you have stated above, you are proving that the essential life begins in a monad, the point in nature where life and matter first unite, where they start in the perfecting of organic life, and that smallest beginning is a germ, or life center, and that as it advances it takes on other life elements until it culminates in man. Here you stop by butting your head against the walls of Materiality, but I follow the same life still onward and find in Spiritualism the manifestations of the identical personality which resided in the body by means of such evidences as appeal to my reason and judgment, and the original conscious monad, improved, lives on.

The spirits have come to us, and by means found in their life and surroundings they come back and instruct us of a great and beautiful spirit world, and by such means as no mortal can do or imitate they assure us of an immortal life. They precipitate pictures of flowers, pictures, intelligent messages of love and wisdom, and refer in these tests to such things as identify themselves to us by addressing our senses and our memories of themselves, by writing and saying things which no other mortal or spirit could say, and by such incontrovertible proofs we are led to see that spirits have simply been born again, and have thrown aside the old body as a useless garment; and while all these grand truths are being given to the world, the Materialists are found cutting and dissecting the dead body, and saying that because it will not squirm there can be no such thing as a spirit. Pile on such reasoning! Mr. Wettstein is dogmatic, but not argumentative. He never meets an argument, he simply asserts his points. He says "man is an animal; as such subject to all conditions and laws governing the animal world." No one disputes this. Why put that in? Have I said that man is not an animal? Then because man's body dies and vanishes, he says "man is no more—this is self-evident." That is no argument to assert that a thing is self-evident which millions of learned people are disputing. A thing is not self-evident which admits of dispute; and you are simply begging the whole question when you make such statements. As many as twenty times you state things as self-evident which are the things in dispute, and one of your most self-evident statements is that "when a man is dead he is dead." Now, I deny that the real man died; the spirit, which is the real man, did not die, but simply changed conditions. There is no death for spirits, as their manifestations prove.

Your illustration of the dissection of a dead body is simply laughable in its absurdity; but, after you did all your cutting and mutilating of that poor body, at last you say: "And just then it occurred to us what a big fool we were to expect to hurt, wound, or kill an immortal spirit, who by virtue of his (miraculous) being is beyond injury from carving-knives, guns, or dynamite!" Now, just there you have spoken wiser than you intended, for no one versed in the subject of Spiritualism would be such a fool as to think of hunting for a spirit in a dead body; but then you immediately go on asserting things which you can't prove and are taking for granted. You say, "finding nothing outside of the body that has tangibility, weight, chemical attributes," etc.; "nothing that has color, taste, smell, solidity," etc.; "I insist, is it not amusing that sensible men and women believe their individuality can be perpetuated during all eternity with an airy nothing?"

How lame such an argument! You say there is nothing outside of that dead body. Now, I am sure you are off your base when you assert that there is nothing in this "airy nothing." The air contains all the chemicals, substances, forces, colors, solidities, and every other tangibility that can be found in nature. Millions of tons of water, gases, odors, and real substances exist all around us. The air is full even of germ life, and to say that a refined spirit body could not be where every other invisible thing exists, is making an assertion without proof, and we know it is false and unscientific to make such statements. There are millions of things in the air which chemistry can and does cognize, and has established to the reason of man, but which he cannot see, feel, taste, or smell. So much for your assumption and your self-evident statements. Where will you find your conscious monad, if not in your "airy nothing"? Where do you find all the forces of nature but in this "airy nothing?"

You assert that to be a spirit "it must be organic." Well, who says a spirit is not organic? My dear sir, you are beating the wind, like the man who fought the windmill of Spanish notoriety. Of course a spirit is organic. There are millions of germs that float in the air or live in water, and it may require a microscope of thousands of diameters of magnifying power to bring them up to our dull vision; yet they are organic. They have locomotion, they have legs, arms, and what corresponds to bones, muscles, tendons, fibers, and a perfect organization of animal life. They squirm, kick, dive, float, and move about, and exercise intelligence and apparent judgment. They live in races and associate like microscopic nationalities; move in groups and families as well as in pairs, and seem to perform all the offices of their animal lives which we can see. Now, why? Knowing these things to be so, although unseen by your naked eye, how can you with any show of consistency talk about the impossibility of a spirit organism outside of a dead body? What must be the fine and delicate mechanism of an organism which requires such a powerful instrument to reveal it to our eyes, and yet there it is, a perfect animal. And you no doubt will ask, "Why can't I see a spirit organism the size of a spirit man with that wonderful microscope?" I will tell you. The spirit body is still much finer even than any animal germ. It can be seen, but it requires the sensitive eyes of the clairvoyant, whose spiritual vision is keener than the best glass instrument, and even then it often happens that the spirit must attract to itself material substances of a coarser quality in order to manifest. But I have seen all parts of spirits, hands, feet, fingers, and parts of spirit bodies, as well as the whole form materialized so as to be readily seen. The human spirit, or man, is composed of three essential things. First, and most interior, is the soul or life element, which is the conscious monad that through animal organization is developed into a physical body from the human germ. This germ at conception entered into the ovum, and therein was nurtured and built up into a physical organism, taking on the form of the mother, and at the same time perfecting a spiritual and a physical body around it. During the period of foetal life, all the faculties pertaining to man and his bodily wants are supplied, all the senses established, such as sight for the eyes, the organ of sound, the ears, the whole nervous system, or feeling, and sensation, the part of which makes the organs of smell and taste, and these were perfected before being born into the life where they could be used, so that it is not light which made the eyeballs, or sight, it was not sound that developed the tympania, as no sound ever vibrated there. The taste of the tongue was made before the infant sucked its mother's milk. So of smell, and all the senses. Hence the spirit is born with the body and partakes both of the male and female progenitors, but the soul or monad takes upon itself the sex relation during gestation or foetal life. When the child is born into this life, the exercise of being develops consciousness of external life, and is retained as memory, being impressed upon the conscious monad or soul. At the death of the man, the soul, and the body of the soul, or what is termed the spirit, leaves the dead body and is immediately united into a spirit form, of the exact form and shape of the natural body, and the soul or conscious entity, retaining all its former knowledge and peculiarities of character, is started on the new life just as it was started on the physical plane when it entered this life. It has all the properties of substance suited to its new environments, and while it was a triune mortal, it is now a duality, having only two bodies or parts.

I will now refer to a quotation from Mr. Wettstein. He says: "But our good and, no doubt, earnest friend ingeniously refers to the unseen forces of nature, which are such potent factors in cosmic phenomena. But it avails him nothing to seek an analogy for spirit here. To be a spirit and all it implies, it must be organic. To be a husband, wife, daughter, son, to us in the 'sweet by and bye,' such spirits must be of organic form. This, again, implies anatomy, organs, circulating fluid, and heart, also brain, etc. Can the outline and functions exist without interior organism to create such outline and functions? Can such organs, fluids, chemistry, etc., exist without being manifest to our ordinary senses, or in the open court of science?" Again he says: "Can such organism resemble air, ether, electricity, or other organic forces of nature?" Now, I did not refer to these forces of nature to show that a spirit resembled any such forces, only so far as to establish that such forces were not tangible to the senses. On the contrary, I have been saying all along that a spirit is an organized entity, and can on that account be recognized by its form, size, color, and general appearance; also by the mental characteristics, its loves, affections, mental strength, or weaknesses, in all respects corresponding to its former self, while an inhabitant of this life, and the corner-stone in the temple of Spiritualism is made up of the evidence of identity through phenomena, and phenomena are identical with the occult forces of nature, and these forces are used by the spirits to manifest their intelligence to us, just as a wire and a battery are used by a telegraph operator to send a dispatch to a distant city and order a bill of goods for me, which the merchant, who knows me in my business relations, will recognize and honor by sending the goods. The spirit, the man, is not the wire, nor the poles on which it swings, nor the battery nor the electricity which vibrates, but the intelligence. And what we are after in the search of the spirit, is not slate, nor the writing or color of it, nor the painting, but we want to recognize the man or woman through the intelligence he or she sends us for recognition, and if Materialists were a little more in earnest in grasping the truth instead of parading their learned ignorance before the world, they might learn a thing or two occasionally. We are talking about matter, what it does and what it can't do, and in truth we are as ignorant as oxen about it. We can't tell what is in store for us or what things are contained within the confines of nature.

Talk about science and scientific facts and knowledge! Why, science is nothing but a record of facts, and facts are all found in nature, and one fact in nature is just as scientific as another. There are men writing about science who have no idea what it means, and most of them are using the word "science" to bend it to their own narrow dogmatic ideas of truth, when often what they suppose to be the whole truth is not within a mile of it. I admire a man who in humility is willing to study science, who takes account of all the facts, and tries to generalize them into a system of knowledge and philosophy; but the man who attempts to ignore one-half the facts of nature, and the most important part at that, will never astonish the world with his discoveries, and know only a trifle in the end.

Mr. Wettstein has been on the wrong scent; he is barking up the wrong tree. He seems to think I take a spirit to be made of electricity, ether, air, or something of the imponderables. Now, there is where he is all out of joint. I have always said a spirit has a body and parts—an organization. It is not made of nothing, it is made of something; has a body similar to the one it inhabited while a resident of this earth—in fact, may reside on this earth for a time as a spirit, or can come here at will and influence us to do things which we would not do had not such influence come. It has the power to make raps; move tables; operate electrical telegraphs and telephones; move furniture and objects about from place to place without human contact; can disintegrate one piece of matter and pass other matter through it; has the power to convey flowers, birds, fish, and other things, long distances and bring them to us; can materialize hands, feet, fingers, or its whole body, and, under good conditions, make a perfect likeness of its former self, so as to be recognized, and a hundred thousand other things whereby it proves the fact of spirit life, and this is all done by and through natural laws and forces, not by any particle of the miraculous. There is no such thing as a miracle in nature; what occurs in the world is all in accordance with natural law with an intelligent force behind it or within it. All the slate writings, precipitations, paintings with natural substantial paints, and phenomena which require materials to perform them, are abstracted directly from the atmosphere, which contains everything needed in the shape of matter.

All the parts, therefore, of Mr. Wettstein's article which refer to the idea of a spirit being a nothing have no weight and show plainly that he does not know what Spiritualists know or believe. They don't teach that a spirit is nothing, but a something. They don't say a spirit has no organism; on the contrary, they say it is an organized entity. They don't say it is electricity, magnetism, or made up of forces, but that it can use these things to act upon us and upon other substances to manifest its identity and individuality. So that when I teach such stuff as Mr. Wettstein has been trying to knock out, it will be time enough for him to argue the case. A spirit is substance, but so fine that most Materialists can't grasp it, no more than they can grasp an organism in nature which requires to be magnified a million of times its natural size to be seen by us.

J. R. PERRY.

Sunday Laws.

There seems to have arisen some difference of opinion as to whether we should have any state laws regarding Sunday, so I have carefully collated what several of our Secular societies have said on this subject.

I. The National Liberal League was formed during the Centennial Fair in Philadelphia, in 1876, and representatives from all sections of the United States were present. Among its specific objects set forth in due form it proposed: "The repeal of all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath." Mr. Francis Ellingwood Abbott, formulating what has been known as the Nine Demands, used precisely these words in stating the Seventh Demand.

II. Nine years afterward the name of the National Liberal League was changed to the American Secular Union, but no change was made in the "specific objects" or the "Seventh Demand."

III. At an annual Congress of the American Secular Union, held in Philadelphia, in 1889, upon lawful notice, the following amendment was unanimously adopted: "That the repeal of all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as a religious institution rather than an economic one justified by physiological and other secular reasons."

IV. At an annual Congress of the American Secular Union, held in Chicago, in 1892, an amendment was adopted for the repeal of all laws relating to Sunday. I have not a copy of the precise words. It is alleged that this so-called amendment was not adopted upon due notice "published one month previous to the meeting," and therefore has not been adopted.

V. The Canadian Secular Union states the Seventh Demand of Secularism in the following words: "We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday or the Sabbath shall be repealed." This society has adopted several explanations of its demands, and to show clearly its views on the Sunday question, has adopted the following explanation on the Seventh Demand:

"There appears to be a misconception in the minds of many persons as to the legitimate meaning of this demand. It is thought by some that it implies that, as Secularists, we desire to make Sunday an ordinary working day. This, however, is not so. We do not object to a day of rest; our objection is against a day being set apart and enforced by law for religious observance. So far from Secularists having a desire to compel men to work seven successive days, they would oppose to the last any such despotic attempt. Let it be distinctly understood, therefore, that Secularism does not seek to abolish Sunday as a day of cessation from labor, but only to divest it of its so-called sacred character, and thus leave its use (that is, the way in which it should be spent) to the judgment of the individual. Let it be a day of rest from the fatigue of bodily labor, refreshing to the poor man, and supplying him with the means of reinvigorating his body and informing his mind. Such a day Secularists would hail as a boon to mankind. Indeed, to those who choose to devote it to religious purposes, there can be no objection to their doing so, only they must not insist upon regulating the way in which others who differ from them are to spend the day." The undersigned may be a "tyrant" or a "despot at heart," and it may be that he ought to be read out of the Liberal ranks, and handed over to the Sabbatarians, but he nevertheless believes in Secular Sunday laws for the protection of labor from the grasping exactions of capital, and judging from the demands of our Secular societies as above presented, he finds himself in very good company, and the day is far distant when all Sunday laws will be repealed. R. B. WESTBROOK.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Dr. Westbrook does not seem to understand the point at issue. He thinks he has good company; but the good company are not with him. They are simply in favor of Sunday, but not "Sunday laws." I am heartily in accord with the statements above quoted. Not one of them is in favor of a compulsory Sunday, but a voluntary Sunday—a Sunday that people want, not one that is forced upon them. The Sunday is a good thing. Keep the Sunday for the improvement and civilization of the race. Dr. Westbrook and I thoroughly coincide as to the benefits of Sunday. That is not the question at issue. Let me try to state the issue, and see just the point of divergence:

Let it be understood that I have not as yet opposed any opinions of Dr. Westbrook. This is not a philosophical battle, but a political battle. Let it be granted for the sake of argument that Dr. Westbrook and myself have the same opinions. As a matter of fact, we do agree pretty well on opinions. The issue between us is one of method purely. For the enforcement of his opinions he desires to use force. I do not desire to use force, but simply reason and persuasion.

Let me illustrate: Dr. Westbrook and I are together on an island. We agree to rest from our labors on Sunday, not from any religious motive, but because we think it a common-sense thing to do. We are in perfect harmony on the question, and no disagreements arise. We work six days, and on Sunday rest. We are both Liberals in sentiment, free from superstition, etc., and we get on famously together. We talk science, philosophy, literature, and no quarrels occur.

Now, a third man enters the island. He is not settled upon the Sunday question. He doesn't know whether it is a good thing or not. At any rate, he will do as he has a mind to on the matter. But says Dr. Westbrook: "You shall not do as you have a mind to; you shall not exercise your choice in this. You are wrong. Putnam and I know a thing or two, and we do unanimously affirm that Sunday is a most beneficial institution, and as we are in the majority—two to one—we propose to bring the state to force you to rest on Sunday."

But here I chip in: "No, you don't, doctor; I agree with you fully as to the value of the Sunday. I think it would be better for this man to rest on Sunday; but I am not going to force him. I will reason with him, appeal to his good sense, and try to persuade, and if I convince, all right. But if I don't convince him, I must still let him do as he chooses."

Right here one sees the issue is radically changed. It is no longer, "Is the Sunday a good thing?" but, "Shall we force it upon this third individual?" Dr. Westbrook says: "Yes; reason and argue; but whether or no you convince, make him do as we do."

Is it not as plain as day that while I am with Dr. Westbrook as to the value of Sunday, and with him will make it a day of rest and recreation, and will join with him in trying to convince others that we are right; yet when it comes to the question: Shall we force another to conform? then I am radically opposed to him. However liberal Dr. Westbrook may be in his opinions, when he would compel men to adopt them, he is then orthodox, he is despotic, he is tyrannical. It is just as despotic and wrong to force Liberal opinions upon people as to force orthodox opinions.

Dr. Westbrook has not shown that Abbott and the Canadian Secular Union are in favor of using force. There is no desire to abolish Sunday as an institution; but to abolish its forcible observance. Dr. Westbrook will have to try again for his authorities. What he now brings forward are on the line of my own opinions. Let him bring his authorities for the use of force in this matter of Sunday observance.

Had Dr. Westbrook simply, on grounds of physiology, argued in favor of closing the World's Fair on Sunday, I should not have attacked him as I did. I did not attack for any opinion, pro or con. I did not declare him no Liberal because he wanted the World's Fair closed on Sunday, but because he wanted the World's Fair closed by an act of Congress. This latter clause contains the gist of the whole question, and that is why Dr. Westbrook is not a Liberal. He was in favor of using force; and this is the fundamental question of to-day—in regard to human belief and action, outside of crime—shall we use force, or shall we use reason? As long as Dr. Westbrook is in favor of knocking a man down for conscientious exercise of his right as to the observance of Sunday, I must place him where he belongs, with the party of persecution and tyranny.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Freethought Progress.

The Sunday-opening question has come up again in Chicago. The Art Institute was recently opened on the lake-front, and it has been decided to admit the public on the first day of the week as well as on the other six. Last Sunday was the first trial of the system, and between one and five o'clock in the afternoon nearly five thousand persons passed through the various halls, enjoying the paintings, statuary, and other collections. The great majority of the visitors were working people, and the Tribune reports that "they were orderly, well-behaved, delighted, and in many cases critical spectators. They had a pleasant and profitable afternoon, and when the door closed went home satisfied and happier for coming." Even the most fanatical Sabbatarian must hesitate, it would seem, before clamoring for the denial to the public of so elevating an influence.—N. Y. Evening Post.

The Bible in the schools question is to the front in Montana. Recently Martin Peel, of Ellis, wrote to Attorney-General Haskell complaining that the teacher in his district insisted on Bible reading and hymn singing in his school. He required the pupils to bring Bibles and hymn books. Mr. Peel said that the people of the district objected "to the expenditure of school moneys in attempting to convert their children to the Methodist faith." The attorney general was asked if the people could obtain any relief. In his reply the attorney general calls attention to the declaration of rights that no person shall be required to attend any place of worship, or support any religious denomination, against his consent, and that no privilege shall be given by law to any religious denomination or mode of worship; also to the second article of the state constitution, imposing on the legislature the duty to establish and maintain a general, uniform, and thorough system of public schools; and that no sectarian tenets shall be taught in any public institution of the state. He quotes from the school law of Montana, one section of which says that "no books, tracts, papers, catechisms, or other publications of a partisan, sectarian, or denominational character shall be used in any school, neither shall any political, sectarian, or denominational doctrine be taught therein." Evidently Attorney-General Haskell thinks that the Montana constitution contains these inhibitions of religious teachings in the schools because they were demanded by the foreign-born citizens of the state for their especial protection. He says: "Among the framers of the constitution of the state of Montana were Catholics, Jews, and adherents of many Protestant sects, who framed these positive prohibitions against permitting sectarian tenets to be taught in the public schools. The constitution was in this connection framed with the view of protecting those settlers and residents of Montana who came from countries in which a state religion is maintained and enforced, and who have suffered under the disabilities resulting from their rejection of the established religion." From which it would appear that Mr. Haskell thinks that native Americans do not know enough to guarantee religious liberty by forbidding sectarian instruction in the public schools. We will not say that he is wholly mistaken. The attorney-general closes a panegyric upon the Bible with these words: "But the reading of the same in the public schools is a religious exercise, and its use therein is in effect the adoption of it as a text-book of the common schools, which is not only inhibited by the constitution, but prohibited by the law."

After quoting several opinions in support of the position that a union of church and state is not recognized in this country, the attorney-general says: "The order made by the school-teacher commanding and requiring the pupils of her school, in school district No. 14, to bring their Bibles and hymn-books to school for use therein has all the force and effect of adopting the Bible and hymn-book as text-books in said public school; it therefore brings such books within the prohibition laid down in the constitution and the school laws of Montana. The constitution of the state of Montana prohibits all religious or partisan tests as a condition of admission into any public educational institution of the state, either as a teacher or student, and likewise prohibits the teaching of sectarian tenets therein. The legislature in executing these wise and beneficent provisions of the constitution definitely prescribes the text-books that shall be used therein for a period of six years commencing July, 1889."

"If the teacher of school district No. 14 may adopt the Bible as a text book in the public school, it means that sectarian tenets may be taught therein. If this be so, such teachings must be complete and accurate. Complete and accurate teaching of sectarian tenets to a Methodist is the teaching of Methodism; to an Episcopalian, of Episcopalianism; to a Catholic, of Catholicism; to a Presbyterian, of Presbyterianism; in the sense of Spinoza of Pantheism, of Hume of Deism, and to the Baptist mind it involves immersion. Each denomination, sect, or creed differs as to the correct version of the Bible, but as to God's omnipotence, there is no cavil, for it is seen in life, death, and the world's existence. An honest difference of opinion exists among these doctrinal denominations concerning the books that come within the purview and meaning of the term 'Holy Bible.' The Jew regards the Old Testament as alone inspired; the Catholic adds the Apocrypha and New Testament, while the Protestant repudiates the Apocrypha. Will the Catholic dispense with the Douay version of the Bible, which is the only one recognized by the Catholic church as correct, and accept the King James version of the Bible without the Apocrypha?"

"The provisions of the constitution inhibiting the teaching of sectarian tenets in the public schools are prohibitory and the declarations in the statutes providing a series of books are mandatory. As the Bible, the use of which in the public schools by the teacher has all the force and effect of adopting it as a text book therein, comes within the prohibitory provisions of the constitution and the mandatory provisions of the law, the reading thereof cannot be permitted in our public schools without violating the plain prohibitory terms of the former and the express mandatory provisions of the latter. The fact that the board of trustees refuse to order the teacher to desist from using the Bible in the public schools has the effect to establish a rule adopting it. 'Regulations adopted by persons in charge of a school are analogous to by-laws enacted by municipal authorities and other corporations, and both will be annulled by the courts when found to be unauthorized, against common right, or palpably unreasonable.' Another effect of the refusal of the school trustees to order the teacher to desist will be to cause this district to lose its portion of the school fund."

The opinion shuts Bible reading out of the Montana public schools, but it seemingly leaves the door open for the inculcation of Theism, the attorney-general claiming that "as to God's omnipotence there is no cavil, for it is seen in life, death and the world's existence." It may seriously be questioned if an officer of the state of Montana has rightful authority under the constitution of that state to officially approve any religious dogma, as Attorney-General Haskell has undoubtedly done in this instance. It is no part of his legal duty to pass upon the truth or falsity of religious tenets. As a man he has the same right to express his opinion that any other citizen has, but when he, as an officer of the state, affirms that there is or is not a God, he transcends his duties and violates his oath of office. However, the people of Montana are to be congratulated; they have much more to be proud of than most of the other states and they must guard their heritage of religious liberty.

The Cause in Oregon.

TO THE LIBERALS OF OREGON: It would seem that the knowledge you have of the aggressiveness of Christians in every part of our country would awaken you to a realization of the necessity of identifying yourself with an organization whose fundamental object is the separation of church and state, without repeated calls to do so from the officers of said organization.

Your indifference to the great cause of universal mental liberty makes an almost clear field for those who are putting forth every effort to enforce their Sunday laws, keep their Bible and religious songs and prayers in our public schools, and frighten politicians into obeying their commands.

You, who are readers of Liberal papers, are certainly acquainted with the numerous outrages committed on every side by Christian fanatics, yet what are you doing to counteract their influence? Have you read the proceedings of the fifth annual convention of the Oregon State Secular Union, and do you realize that we now have an organization which is endeavoring to combat all encroachments of Christians on our liberties, and will do it provided you, each one of you, identify yourselves with and work for that Union?

What do you think of work thus far accomplished, and what of the plans laid out? Let me call your attention especially to the organization of local unions, and putting a lecturer in charge who shall deliver regular addresses at regular times and places, organize Secular Sunday-schools, etc., just as the Christians do.

Are you not so situated that your town or city or neighborhood can be included in a circuit where a lecture can be given once a month? As fast as lecturers can be found, competent and worthy to be placed in charge of a circuit, they will be appointed and commissioned by the State Union and sent out to form auxiliaries and take charge of circuits.

It is the opinion of the executive board of the Oregon State Secular Union that the sure way to make auxiliaries live and flourish is to include them in a circuit, with a competent lecturer in charge, whose business it is to make them flourish, for it has been our experience that local unions cannot and will not thrive while they depend on the body of their members to furnish the entertainment. Our local unions heretofore had no head, and while enthusiasm kept the body alive during a few meetings, yet without exception these unions have died.

There is but one live local union in the state of Oregon to-day, and that one is the First Secular Church of Portland and its Secular Sunday-school. What is to hinder you from having a similar successful organization?

Anyone who can read, and who is willing to devote a little time to it, can conduct a Secular Sunday-school, with the paraphernalia used by our Portland friends.

Is it not far better to establish one permanent Secular church or union, where Sunday after Sunday you have an opportunity of listening to a scientific or Freethought lecture, than to have our lecturers roaming from place to place all over the state, lecturing in your locality at uncertain times, and leaving results which can hardly be called satisfactory, because they awaken but temporary enthusiasm, arouse the Christians to a special effort to overcome the good that has been done, and, when the lecturer has gone, by falsehood and slanders, frighten the timid from further investigation?

Instead of this just fancy how much good can be accomplished when a capable and honest man or woman each Sunday expounds the principles of Secularism; a man or woman whose conduct in the community would be sufficient to demonstrate the greatness of our teachings and would "always be on the spot," ready to debate with our opponents; to reply to their slanders; ready to organize Sunday-schools, officiate at funerals, solemnize marriages, visit the sick, and take the lead in all entertainments conducive to the pleasure of the congregation and the upbuilding of the organization.

It is incumbent on these commissioned lecturers to make regular reports to the state organization, and the state organization in turn must stand by the local unions.

Now what is your opinion of such a working system? What can you do to carry it into successful operation? You can at least give us your name and join us.

Do not put it off any longer. Write immediately for membership blank and join the state organization. Membership is free. What financial support you give it is voluntary. Oregon is full of Liberals.

We want the name and co-operation of every one of them. Do not forget that "united we stand, divided we fall."

Since last report, the following sums have been received by me: J. Henry Schroeder, Arago, $2; Emily Schroeder, Arago, $1; Wm. H. Schroeder, Arago, $2.

Twenty-six new members have been added since October 20th.

Henry Addis of Portland, well and favorably known as a Freethought lecturer, has been appointed and commissioned to lecture under the auspices of the Union.

The executive committee has authorized me to correspond with other lecturers with a view to having them take charge of circuits.

Whether you look with favor on this plan or not, let us hear from you. Do not let the few struggle and worry over that which would be so easily accomplished if all come forward and join us.

KATIE KEHM SMITH,
Sec. Oregon State Secular Union.

A. B. Williams, a noted lawyer of Washington, D. C., whose death occurred on the 25th ult., shortly before he died dedicated the following telegram to Colonel Ingersoll, then at New York: "I am dying to-day and want you to know that I died as I lived, an Infidel." Colonel Ingersoll immediately responded: "Just heard of your sickness to-day. My heart is with you. Cling to the willows and live. Give yourself my love."—Ironclad Age.

Four Hundred Years of Freethought.

William Emmette Coleman, of San Francisco, who has done so much for Freethought in the lines of Spiritual philosophy, sends me a cordial greeting from San Francisco and subscribes for "Four Hundred Years of Freethought," anticipating its great success and value. I am glad to hear from what is sometimes called the "other side of the line"—a "line" as to results, I suppose, but not as to spirit and method. Friend Coleman wants to know if I am going to include the great work of Spiritualism in my history. Of course I am. When Spiritualism has such representatives as Professor Denton and Mr. Coleman there must be something in it that is for Freethought and progress. I don't say that all of it is. In my judgment, there may be a new analysis and a new synthesis of this vast movement. I am an out-and-out Materialist and Atheist. I am built that way, but I hope that my philosophy will not blind me to anything that is true and beautiful and good in human history. I do not agree with Bruno or Spinoza, but I do not think that one who accepts their belief could value any more the greatness of their work. They are Freethinkers, whatever may be their results. In the list which I give are many with whom I differ radically on many points; but in that which constitutes their real life work they contribute to a true science and philosophy. My endeavor is to show just the very point where they thus aid human advancement, and so come into relation with Freethought, as factors of its triumph. In this manner I shall treat of Spiritualism. I shall endeavor to unfold its real deep meaning and to do honor to such noble representatives as Wallace, Denton, and others. It is sometimes considered that an Atheist and Materialist is narrow-minded; that he won't acknowledge the value of any system but his own. I hope that my book will demonstrate the opposite of this and that scientific Atheism is as inclusive as the universe. And not only shall I endeavor to do justice to Spiritualism, but also to Theosophy, and try, if possible, to unfold the progressive elements in this philosophy which so many intelligent people accept. And Unitarianism, even if it is but a half-way house, has been for Freethought. We are all on the same stream, and the stream of human progress is a mighty and manifold one. What I shall fight against, and hit whenever I can, is orthodoxy, which, in whatever shape it appears, is diabolical. It always was diabolical, is to-day, and ever will be. I shall make no compromise with that damnable power which has so blackened the pages of history, and there is no safety until it is utterly destroyed. That is the purpose of "Four Hundred Years of Freethought"—to express the glory of Freethought in every direction, and to strike the most powerful blow possible against all organized superstitions. I believe that Freethinkers of all opinions should work together, but I will never under any circumstances or for any purpose strike hands with orthodoxy. From beginning to end, and in every manifestation of it, it has been a curse to the human race.

Friend Stevens sends me the following cheerful note. There is always a good ring about what he says:

Inclosed find $8-$5 for your book and $3 for THE TRUTH SEEKER. I am delighted that George Macdonald is to become a constant contributor to THE TRUTH SEEKER, adding to its pre-eminent excellence the best thoughts of one of the brightest poets, humorists of this or any time. This galaxy makes THE TRUTH SEEKER the grandest Liberal paper in the world. Success to it.

I must say that I also rejoice that George, of the badge pin, has come back to the old camping-ground. We had a jolly tough time of it on the coast. We did our level best, but the fates were against us, but I don't regret that we went in as we did. We made splendid friends, and if we didn't make money, we got a lot of experience, and we propose still to keep up the fight, although in a different field. We have concentrated our forces, and the old flag floats. If we don't have any providence to help us, we can help ourselves, and make our way—if not at one point, then at another. So it is a pleasure to be shoulder to shoulder again, after, like Ulysses, we have wandered over sea and shore and become a bit gray, but not the less hopeful and equipped for battle. Ever since I started on "Four Hundred Years of Freethought," somehow everything has been favorable to its progress, the International Congress and all, and among the best of these fortunate coincidences is the revival of this old comradeship of the "Golden Gate," for if I want any help I know now where to get it, and feel perfectly sure, come what will, that fortune will await not only "Four Hundred Years of Freethought," but all the labors of the future; and I guess that is the feeling among all our friends. Therefore, we will have a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Observations.

There was formerly connected with one of the Freethought papers of England a gentleman of the name of Edward Aveling. I have not heard of him for several years, but a book that has just come to my notice recalls him picturesquely to mind. The book is No. 1066 of Lovell's Library and is entitled "An American Journey," from which book it may be judged that Dr. Aveling was not altogether pleased with us. New York manners, he says, are most extraordinary. For example, upon promenading the aristocratic quarters of the city, he was stared at by some of the population, while many persons actually giggled. Indeed, says he, "I have never suffered so many stares since I went up the Monument"—a pun thrown in to show that he has recovered his spirits. But Dr. Aveling should be informed that it was not himself that folks were attracted by. It was his clothes; for these were so striking, and so vociferous in their loudness, that the man inside of them was likely to escape attention. I have forgotten Dr. Aveling; but I remember his clothes; above all, his flamboyant necktie, which was red as the running-gear of an express wagon, and flowered in a gorgeous, Chinese way. It was tied in great bows, that spread outside his coat and flapped their square yard of drygoods like wings, as the doctor teetered along in his peculiar, dudish way. It would require a person of very striking appearance to attract more than casual notice in the presence of such a tie. The doctor was further obliterated by Mrs. Aveling, who wore a gown cut in the Mother Hubbard style, out of Dolly Varden material that harmonized in figure and color with her husband's cravat. Both had odd-looking hats on; and when this assorted couple, reminding me of a king and a queen from a deck of cards, blew into THE TRUTH SEEKER office, I will not deny that I uttered words like those attributed to a guardian of the peace when he saw Mrs. Aveling for the first time. Dr. Aveling avers that the policeman inquired of his relief: "Soy, what the hell is that?"

Mr. Aveling came to America to lecture to the laboring man on the iniquity of affluence, and his story of how difficult it was for him sometimes to get champagne in a prohibition town is really tear-starting; but he says his book is written to let Americans see "how they strike a stranger coming in their midst." It might be no more than fair for some American to write a book to let Englishmen see how they strike Americans. I am not competent to the task; for after having inspected Mr. Thomas Huxley, Mr. Richard A. Proctor, Mr. Charles Watts, Mr. Charlesworth, and some others whose names are better known in England than in America, I have to say that they struck me as being Americans until I found out their names. This mistake could not be made in the case of Dr. Aveling; neither would it occur in the case of Mr. Tug Wilson or of Mr. Charles Mitchell, who came to see how Americans would strike them and had the system illustrated by Mr. John L. Sullivan.

The New York Sun calls attention to the following statement of facts:

Here are the names and addresses of the leaders of the Ways and Means Committee:

Chairman Wilson, Charleston, W. Va., population, 2,287.

Benton McMillin, Carthage, Tenn., population, 478.

Henry G. Turner, Quitman, Ga., population, 1,868.

Clifton R. Breckinridge, Pine Bluffs, Ark., population, less than 1,000.

Alexander B. Montgomery, Elizabethtown, Ky., population, 2,260.

The Ways and Means Committee of the National House of Representatives passes upon matters affecting the industrial interests of the country; and yet there is upon that committee no one to represent the interests of Snohomish, Snohomish county, Wash., as the Sun should have hastened to remark. But the Sun is not thoroughly informed about Puget Sound affairs, as it showed the other day in speaking of an influential Indian of that country as a "grand sachem." Reference to the leader of the salmon-colored four hundred as a "sagamore" might have barred criticism, but the official title of a siwash chieftain is Hyas Tyee.

I attended last Thursday evening a meeting called by certain influential Democrats of New York city for the purpose of organizing the State Democracy. The State Democracy represents the Democrats out of office as opposed to Tammany Hall, which represents the Democrats in office. The Hon. Mr. Fairfield, one of President Cleveland's former secretaries, was chairman of the meeting, and revealed the inner lining of the organization when he stated that, no matter how much patronage a party might control, and no matter how offices and sinecures might be multiplied, there would always be enough left out in the cold to raise a protest.

The meeting was held in Cooper Union hall, to which I was conducted by my friend Counsellor Sherman, who had tickets. The tickets did not admit bearer to the very front seats, which were reserved for "special guests," but we got there equally, for Counsellor Sherman is a kicker. When he enters a place he pauses to glower upon all concerned in its management long enough to convince them that he is not to be trifled with. Then he heads for the most advantageous position, and holds it by any lawful means at his command. In the present instance, after we had been warned out of the seats we wanted, Sherman appealed to Mr. Quinlan, who had influence, and who told us to take the front row or a chair on the stage if we preferred. The opposition being ignominiously squelched, Mr. Sherman paralyzed the usher with a glance, and we sat down. Many speech-makers made speeches, including ex-Mayor Grace, who is supposed to be the power behind the platform, all agreeing that it was their duty to get the Democratic patronage out of the hands of Tammany hall and to control it themselves. One gentleman, dropping into metaphor, alluded to the hydra-headed monster with which the Tammany dragon had polluted the political atmosphere of the municipality. "The sink of iniquity," he said, "should be leveled to the ground, and the vultures, whose hands were ever extended for more, should be nipped in the bud." There was great applause. The secretary read a letter from the Hon. Mr. Coudert, whose name he pronounced "Kewdurt." As most of the audience knew the sound of the word was Coudair, they did not at first identify the writer, and the letter fell rather flat. Nevertheless, there was plenty of enthusiasm, and the State Democracy, as an organization, will doubtless flourish until Tammany gets ready to absorb it and give the leaders what they are after.

A man wearing a Freethought badge-pin that has been moistened by the spray of the Atlantic and by the mists from off the Pacific, besides reflecting the red sun of New Mexico and getting frosty in northern latitudes, occupied a seat, or a seat and a half, at the last meeting of the Liberal club. The audience which attended these meetings aforesaid was not present. It has been replaced by a younger and possibly more modish assemblage. Mr. Wakeman, of course, was in attendance, resembling as ever the pastor of a prosperous congregation, and it is presumed that he slept comfortably until it came his turn to discuss what had been said. Young Dr. Foote, who now wears spectacles and is precociously hard of hearing, had a place among the listeners. Likewise Moses Oppenheimer, with hair, whiskers, and voice in a superior state of cultivation. But the visitor saw no others of the old stand-bys. Mr. Shook and Dr. Eccles of Brooklyn were invisible, and a call for Cohen, Hunn, Langerfelt, or Vaughn would not have been responded to.

A woman president occupied the chair, while a swallow-tailed speaker addressed the audience on the subject of an eight-hour law. His name was Walter Logan and he advocated a statute making it a misdemeanor for any person employed in a manufactory or establishment hiring more than six other persons to work habitually over eight hours out of the twenty-four. The laissez-faire theory and the doctrine that the individual has rights which society may not abrogate, said Mr. Logan, are played out. The individual amounts to but little; he is a pebble in the conglomerate rock. Society must be put first, the individual afterwards. The speaker did not insist that the question was grave enough to justify a revolution.

Friday evening, the 29th, the club will have a social, when it will indulge in such festivities as may comport with the austere character of a society organized to debate grave issues.

GEO. E. MACDONALD.

Christian Maltreatment of the Jews in Siberia.

Agapius Honcharenko, proprietor and editor of the Russian political journal published in this city, received a letter last week in which it is stated that the Russian officials have hit upon a new plan to rob the unfortunate Jews in Siberia. Hitherto the plan has been to squeeze all they could out of the unfortunate people before they could escape from the country, but no effort was made to control the direction of their going.

So far all the Jews who have escaped have done so by way of Japan, but that road is blocked now. According to the letter, the wealthy Jews, who are the ones selected for prosecution, are now forbidden to have any communication with the Chinese frontier or the coast near Japan, and are forced to pass through eastern Siberia in order to reach the coast.

Here all transportation is by means of dog-sleighs in winter. The sufferings of the poor people thus forced to travel through the coldest and most barren part of that bleak country may be imagined. It is said that those who framed the new edict did so in order to force the exiles to remain in the country as long as possible, in order that there may be more chances to rob them.

Navigation on the Siberian coast is entirely suspended during the long winter months, and those who reach the coast during the winter will have to remain on Russian soil until April before ships will arrive to carry them out of the country. The letter places the number of Jews in Siberia affected by the edict at twenty-two thousand, and it says that not more than two-thirds of that number will survive the rigors of the climate and the cruelties of the Russian officials. According to the letters he has received from friends in Siberia, Honcharenko says not a single exile will be able to get out of the country with a dollar in his pocket. They will, accordingly, be thrown entirely on the mercies of those willing to assist them after they manage to get away from the land of the Czar.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Lectures and Meetings.

COLONEL INGERSOLL gave his lecture on Lincoln in Philadelphia, Thursday night.

COLONEL INGERSOLL will lecture at the Hoboken Theatre, Hoboken, N. J., Thursday night Dec. 28, 1893. Subject, "Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child."

COLONEL INGERSOLL will lecture in Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 8, 1894, at the New Park Theatre. Subject, "Abraham Lincoln."

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Boston, Ingersoll Secular Society, Jan. 7th, 14th.

Northport, L. I., Jan. 18, 19, 20.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 21.

Ohio Liberal Society, Cincinnati, Jan. 28th, 29th.

Delphos, O., Jan. 30th, 31st, and Feb. 1st.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 18th, 25th.

Those who desire lectures at any points between New York and Chicago, and in the vicinity of Chicago during the month of February, will please write at once to Mr. Putnam, care of THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York.

At the Manhattan Liberal Club Friday Dec. 29th. Subject of debate will be, "What's the matter with '93 and what's in store for '94?" five minute talks interspersed with music, singing, and recitations.

J. E. Remsburg will start on a tour through Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, and New England early in January.

THE Brooklyn Philosophical Association holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Long Island Business College, South Eighth street, between Bedford and Driggs avenues. Program of lectures for December:

December 31st.—Mr. Franklin Steiner.

THE WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE, of Philadelphia, meets in the Skerrett Building, Ridge avenue and Green street, Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock.

THE Ohio Liberal Society meets in College Hall, 168½ Walnut street, Cincinnati, Sunday evenings at 7:45, prompt. Admission is free. Program:

December 31st.—Judge R. W. McNeal, subject to be announced.

THE Pittsburg Secular Society meets in Curry University Hall, Sixth street, near Penn avenue, every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

THE First Secular Church of Portland, Ore., meets in Central Labor Council Hall, 170½ Second street near Yamhill, every Sunday at 7.30 p. m. Sunday-school in same place at 10.30 a. m.

The Lord, through our blessed savior via Paul, the sainted and beloved disciple, ordered women to keep silence in the church (which was the government), and he advised men not to marry (except when they had disgusting diseases). Nowadays women who never stop to reason or think will wring their hands and shed crocodile tears whenever the sufferings of these vile tramps are mentioned. For shame! Go and sew a button for your own husband, who would love you if you would let him.

"Honor the Lord with thy substance and with the first fruits of all thy increase." His ministers and priests have need for all they can get, and must live by the "sweat" of those who do not ask questions. Be sure and do not forget that questioners will be burnt in hell forevermore. Amen.

In picturing the joy of heaven be sure to remember the pleasure of reclining in Abraham's bosom. Never mind about the Hagar scandal and the little boy Ishmael who was forced out into the desert to die. That was only one of God's ways, and all things are possible with him.

Letters of Friends.

She Is Welcome.

WAGNER, OR., Dec. 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3 for another new subscriber to your good paper. Yours for the good cause,
G. N. WAGNER.

Plenty of These and The Truth Seeker Can Force the Fighting.

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find check for $6.50, my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER and S. P. Putnam's "Four Hundred Years of Freethought."

JAMES L. PARSHALL.

Wanted! Five Thousand Such Letters.

BISBEE, ARIZ., Nov. 27, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find money order for $5, for which send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year to two new subscribers, Ole Nielsen and John Erickson.

Yours ever truly, NEIL ERICKSON.
[The prosecution of the persons to whom your question refers was dropped.—Ed, T. S.]

Butter for Christ's Sake.

GALVESTON, TEX., Nov. 9, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3 for your paper, which was brought to my notice by a friend. In the course of a fifty years' sojourn on this sphere I have given toward sustaining and building two churches, yet cannot see the slightest good that has accrued from it. But "it's never too late to mend."

Here is a specimen of Christian charity: A poor miner out of work applied at the door of a Lake Charles (La.) preacher for something to eat. The reverend came out with a piece of dry bread and said: "My fellow, I do not believe in encouraging tramps, but give this for the Lord's sake." The man turned it over and, handing it back, said: "Please put some butter on for Christ's sake." A. J. PERKINS.

A Good Record—Go Others and Do Likewise.

GOLDEN POND, KY., Dec. 14, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find check for books ordered. Very hard times here; still we must ever remember to lend a helping hand to those who think and write for the great cause of Freethought. Five years ago there was only one Freethought paper delivered at this place. Now there are nine, and I think I can raise that list to fifteen in the next few months. We can see many people are not so afraid of Freethought literature now, as heretofore. We are pleased with the progress of the Oregon Liberals; wish I could attend their First Secular Church at Portland; would be glad to live where Liberals meet often; would like to correspond with some Liberal living in Oregon who can tell me something of the country, etc.

Yours truly, E. W. RODES.

Kansas Notes.

ATCHISON, KAN., Nov. 25, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: From the statistics it is evident that the Kansas penitentiary is the most religious institution in the state.

Here is the kind of philosophy the Effingham World pours out every week: "Some men, when they can do nothing else, go to preaching. Too many preachers go after the almighty dollar instead of the almighty sinner. The only honest word in some people's prayers is Amen."

Mr. Frank Oliphant, a bright young Kansan, proposes to enter the lecture field and devote his life to the cause of mental liberty. He is a young man who has the courage of his convictions, and gives promise of becoming a power in the ranks of Freethought. In introducing him to the public I ask for him only recognition and appreciation, and he will do his duty in his chosen field.

Henry Bender, one of the oldest settlers of Doniphan county, will devote the remainder of his life to Freethought work. Every week, after he has read his TRUTH SEEKER, he leaves it where he thinks it will do the most good. He has a copy of Watson Heston's "Bible Picture Book," which he constantly carries under his arm for ammunition. Mr. Bender is very aged, but his mind is still active, and he is a tireless worker. Another of the veteran Freethinkers of Kansas is Hon. R. A. Van Winkle, of Arrington. He is familiarly known as "Uncle Van." He is very pronounced in his Freethought views, and is noted for his fighting qualities. At a Fourth of July celebration held in his town a few years ago a preacher, who was the speaker of the occasion, undertook to ignore Paine's services in the revolution. This was more than "Uncle Van" could stand. He sprang to his feet, and in a fearless manner proceeded to defend his dead hero. The crowd hissed and jeered in bitter vituperation, and even the band struck up and tried to drown his voice, but all in vain. "Uncle Van" was equal to the occasion. His voice rose to its highest pitch, which even the thunder of cannons could not have subdued, and he finally retired with the consciousness of having vindicated the author-hero of the revolution. GEORGE J. REMSBURG.

How a Revivalist Does His Advertising—He Bids For the Mob.

MILFORD, MASS., Dec. 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: "It is an ill wind that blows good on nobody," and hard times are a godsend to revivalists. I send you a clipping to show what is in store for this town. Weber is advertised by sensational articles, the same as a prize-fight is. These are samples:

This man is a wonder. He does nothing as anybody else ever did it. Our ideals of propriety are completely shattered, and we wonder that such methods can accomplish any good; but Mr. Weber has been instrumental in leading many thousands to a better life. His early life was very wicked, and he knows the whole course of wickedness, and has a faculty of letting the whole truth right out in meeting. You may not always agree with him, but you will have no difficulty in understanding him, for he does not hesitate to use the most common talk of the streets to press home his points.

The old Scotchman said: "They are all honest only when well watched." I shall not attend a service to watch him, as I have faith in the sense of the conundrum, "Why are sermons like bagpipes? Because they sound the best when you don't hear them." Fraternally, CHARLES C. JOHNSON.

Work the Federation.

PIERSON, IA., Dec. 12, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: This little town has enjoyed a Liberal "awakening." We have just listened to three lectures by Mr. Franklin Steiner, of Des Moines, and the effect is most satisfactory.

Mr. Steiner is a very convincing orator. The weather was stormy and cold, so the attendance was somewhat reduced, but was yet good for a town of two hundred and fifty souls. Some Christian champions asserted that Steiner would not get three names to his "Infidel Federation," but what was their astonishment when, at the close of his last lecture, he unrolled the petition on his desk, and the Freethinkers swarmed round him in such numbers that a second petition had to be brought into requisition, and in less than twenty minutes thirty names went down. Neither of the two churches in this place can boast a larger membership, though they have expended thousands of dollars, and exhorted and "beseeched" for seven long years. And the end is not yet, for the major part of the Liberal friends are yet to be heard from. When they are all gathered into the Freethinkers' "happy family," no one will join a church in Pierston "to be in the swim."

Every Liberal community should secure a course of Mr. Steiner's lectures. He seems to be thoroughly equipped to meet the enemy, and his reduced prices are surely within the reach of the smallest community. He is a strong force on the Liberal platform, and should be kept busy every day in the year. S. F. BENSON.

Fell Asleep in Nature.

SHERMAN, MICH., Dec. 15, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: My wife died on the morning of July 31, 1893, at our home in Wexford. She was born in New Hampshire, and we were married in Centerville in the southern part of this state, and have lived together nearly half a century. We have four children and five grandchildren. She was sixty-eight. She lived in her own sphere, and was seldom out of it, and that was the family circle. She sacrificed her own comfort to promote mine and the enjoyment of her children. Her kindness was ever apparent among her friends. She had no thought of another state of existence. This world was all she cared for and she died without any regrets for the past or fears for the future. Her countenance appeared, when dead, as though she had fallen asleep and was enjoying pleasant dreams. It seemed to say to those around her: "Mourn not for me, but do right and be happy, as I am happy." She looked upon death as a long, quiet, and peaceful rest.

My wife died as she had lived, without faith in any of the religious doctrines of the day. She believed in known truths and not fictitious ideas. She believed that right, truth, and justice, accompanied by kindness, were the greatest sources of happiness, and without these no real happiness could be enjoyed. She believed that doing good to others should be the first object in life; that the belief that she had done some good and no harm would be a much greater consolation on a death-bed than all the hopes of an imaginary heaven. This she taught to her children. She had no patience with the piety teachers, and one of the greatest sorrows of her life was that these teachers had so much influence over her sex. She thought if they were emancipated from that slavery there would be much less hypocrisy in the world. The early teachings imparted to children would be more truthful and better, and consequently a much better state of society would result. She had often said she wanted no ceremonies over her remains and no fashionable mourning at her grave, so we had none. The hearse took the coffin from the house to the cemetery accompanied by the relatives and friends and there we quietly laid her in her last resting-place. DR. E. B. SOUTHWICK.

An Appeal That Should Be Promptly Heeded.

GARNETT, KAN., Dec. 14, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I am strongly impressed with the idea that we members of THE TRUTH SEEKER family are not doing our duty to our much-esteemed and deserving co-laborer, Watson Heston. He has served us faithfully as a cartoonist of the most masterful type—now some six or seven years—and has given the cause of Freethought a most wonderful push forward by his inimitable pictures of historic and comic interest. And his work is not only of an instructive and amusing character, but, in my estimation, has become a necessary adjunct to the successful promulgation of the cause that is nearest to all our hearts, "Universal Mental Liberty."

Now, I have found out "by the way of a slant" that Watson Heston is in needy circumstances; that the sickness of his wife, which is of long standing, and his own not very rugged constitution, together with misfortunes that have visited him of late years, have conspired to bring him to a low estate financially, so that it is perplexing him to know how he is even going to escape the shoals of destitution and want. I think it is a shame to let such a valuable helper of our cause as is Watson Heston even approach the plane of want, as long as we have fifty cents or a dollar that we can spare. He has surely edified each and every truth seeker far more than those sums represent, if edification is to be estimated in dollars and cents. Now, let us truth seekers help our own, and not let the bigots get the laugh on us and taint us with being picayunish and permitting our workers to suffer for the necessities of life. I have done what I could, and am willing to do more, as my means will admit.

Watson Heston's address is San Diego, Cal. CHARLES GREGG.

Beware of the Machinations of the Heirs of the Witch-Killers.

JEANNETTE, PA., Dec. 14, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Looking over the many letters from friends that appear from week to week, I fail to find any from this part of the country, and I am certain that your paper has a large number of readers here. Times have been hard with us, and lectures cannot be had for nothing. But I wish we could have one of those men of light and truth here once in a while.

Although the Infidel has suffered, so has the Christian, and the God of the latter seems to be in a starving condition also, for if his children ever needed bread they need it now. But it seems he cannot spare any of his heavenly manna or angel cake; surely his heart is not as big as those of his earthly children, for they will share with each other, while he and his agents have enough and lots to spare. The Bible is my informant about him. I see for myself what his makers are doing. While his poor dupes are starving his agents are living in luxury, plotting how best they can enslave the daring few who are bold enough to speak out their own opinions. The traitors have had a convention here in Pittsburg, and my blood boils with indignation when reading their traitorous speeches. What a life of freedom we would have if those fanatics could have their way, and what a good chance they have to do so with their millions of ignorant followers, who look upon them as their leaders and in whom they place entire confidence.

Friends, awake from your slumbers; if you want to be free you will have to fight for freedom, for bigots on all sides of you are organizing to bridle your tongues, to own you bodies and wills. If you want your liberty fight them with their own weapon, organization; for, although we have right on our side, they have might, and through the ages might has always proved to be right, by the force of numbers. In the old days swords ruled; in these, votes rule. We have as much to fear from the votes as our fathers had from the swords and fire. Good citizens must fear the law when bigots enact it. The votes elect the men who will make the law, and as the bigots have the numbers they can make laws to make us criminals. Now is the time to strike; we must organize to prevent, if possible, the success of these enemies of religious freedom. If we have no Christian laws we have no crime against God, for religious law makes fictitious crime. Even if we did not have anything to fear but the plotting of these rogues there are still hanging over our heads the old Puritan blue laws, which are liable to be put in full force at any time for the amusement of these worse than snakes. What can we expect of the agents when we see the example set by the boss, who said, "Suffer not a witch to live?" J. ADAMSON.

Of Such Is the Kingdom of Heaven.

KANSAS CITY, KAN.

MR. EDITOR: The twin cities of Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kan., comprise a population of about 175,000. There are 185 churches and religious societies here, most of which seem to be doing a flourishing business. The Protestant institutions number 161, the Catholic 21. There are 65 public schools and 20 parochial educational institutions. The public schools, especially in Kansas City, Kan., are thoroughly permeated by superstition and Bible reading; prayers and hymn singing are part of the daily program. The religious atmosphere in the two cities is dense, and the oft-resounding clang of the deep-toned church bells is a constant reminder that the erroneous past still wields a mighty influence among the unthinking and credulous mass of humanity called "the people."

The clergy here are somewhat impertinent, and have undertaken crusades against Sunday theaters, saloons, gambling houses, barber shops, etc.

Kansas City is a rich field for professional evangelists. During the last three years some great religious revivals have been held. One of the most novel and ridiculous of these was that presided over by two superstitious clowns calling themselves the "Morrill Twins." They were probably as nearly alike in mental as well as physical proportions as any two men on earth could be. Two of the specialties with which they amused their unfortunate audiences was the act of delivering the same sermon at the same time, and the taking of alternate sections of the same discourse. Musical concerts were a feature with the "twins," and they had no trouble, I am told, in gathering a bountiful harvest of gold, although they "saved" only a few "souls" on account of the mirthful and circus-like character of their performances.

The next exhorter of importance to appear upon the scene was Major Cole, an ex-banker of Ohio, who created a considerable furor in the religious ranks and made a round-up of fourteen hundred converts during a stay of two months. After receiving the insignificant sum of $1,200 for his services, he went his way rejoicing that salvation is free.

A few months ago a theological phonograph named Mills arrived. His coming was heralded far and wide and the newspapers gave him nearly a page a day during his sojourn. His work resulted in leading several hundred unsuspecting victims of ignorance into that vast procession which knows not reason and undoubtedly follows the jack-o'-lantern called the "light of Christ." It is understood that Mr. Mills was well pleased with the financial proceeds of his siege against Satan.

The latest and perhaps the most disreputable "whooper-up" who has loomed up in the superstitious fog which surrounds the God-houses is one Vernon, who claims to be a "converted Infidel." This fellow says he has lectured on the Infidel platform, and one of his methods of illustrating the absurdity of religion consisted in drawing cartoons of Jehovah and his son Jesus. He said he felt so "rocky" while following this business that he sometimes thought of quitting it and going to work; but one day he had a conversation with an old "granny woman," who put him on to some things about the Bible that had never attracted his attention before. He began to feel "curious," and in a day or two discovered that the Lord was "working on him." He soon surrendered to superstition, was immediately offered a job at preaching, and since that time he has enjoyed himself immensely. [Who ever heard of this "Liberal" lecturer, Vernon, before he became an evangelist?—Ed. T. S.] During the engagement of this mountebank he delivered an alleged lecture entitled, "Infidels and Infidelity," which was listened to by a large concourse of people, among whom were many Freethinkers. This lecture was announced as "the most scathing arraignment of Infidelity ever delivered from a Christian pulpit," and it was hoped by some that he would depart from the well-beaten track usually pursued by preachers in dealing with the subject of Infidelity and say something original, whether it was true or not. We were doomed to disappointment. Every utterance had the theological trade mark blown in the bottle. About the first thing he did was to rehearse the well-known and oft-exposed falsehoods concerning the deathbed experiences of Paine, Voltaire, and other great Infidels, to whom we are indebted, more than to all theologians that ever lived or ever will live, for light and liberty. Ingersoll, he said, is a feeble imitator of Voltaire, and is not so honorable nor useful a citizen as Corbett, the pugilist. Gibbon was only an inflated egotist. Darwin's theory is without foundation. Evolution is a three-legged stool. To talk of the laws of nature is nonsense. There are no laws but those of God. There is no knowledge that did not proceed from the vast fund of wisdom belonging to the almighty. There is no genuine morality, no love, no real sympathy, no honor, apart from the religion of Christ.

For one month's services at theological lying Mr. Vernon received the modest sum of $300. T. J. TANNER.

The Brother Giv's Us His Experience.

SEATTLE, WASH., Dec. 10, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I have just finished reading my TRUTH SEEKER of December 2d, and found, as I always do, very many interesting and valuable articles upon Freethought. I have wanted to write you my experience, but I am afraid it would be too long a tale and uninteresting to many. I am always amused with our friend Heston's work; his illustrated ideas prove him to be a Liberal in the fullest sense of the term. Our friend Dr. Murphy, of Kansas City, has got none the best of me at being blind. I was stone-blind for twenty-three years, and had no desire to see anything but orthodox religion. I prayed God earnestly for four years. The more I prayed, the more miserable I was, but after awhile I said: There is no happiness in living this way; I will investigate, and I did. I found superstition had got into my blood, and it needed a very powerful alternative to set me right. I tried "The Mistakes of Moses," and found I felt better. My next treatment was "Skulls," and then "Ghosts." By this time I was not afraid to read "Hell," by the same author, and when I had finished these I was as completely cured as though I had never been afflicted. I have since continued to read, study, and advance, and to-day I am as happy a man as the world contains. On the back of this sheet you will find two pictures, the originals of both of which I see as I sit at my table. One, the main point in the picture, is Mount Rainier, rearing its snow capped head 14,444 feet above the waters of Puget Sound, which, we see, is another principal feature of the scene. The Olympic mountains to the west (also snow-capped at this time of the year, but not perpetually) form a very beautiful picture, and as the sun strikes them early in the morning it makes an effect to gladden the heart of an artist.

The climate here is such as to make one forget it is almost mid-winter. This scene a few years ago would have made me miserable. I should have felt at once: Oh, if I were only sure of heaven, I should be happy. To-day it does make me happy, for I look upon this scene with a light heart and an untroubled mind, and I am glad it is my privilege to see nature in all her glorious aspects and beauty. I have had the amusement of mixing up in argument many of my old acquaintances, on the subject of the Bible and Freethought. I would not attack the old Christians, those who have not long enough to live in which to recover from the shock of finding their golden city and pearly gates all a dream, and they on the edge of eternity, bound they know not whither. But I do love to ask an intelligent man, who tries to believe the Bible, What would be the result of stopping the sun or turning it back ten degrees? He stands and thinks, and then answers me by saying: "Oh, but, Lincoln, all things are possible to God." It is my opinion that even a God has got to recognize some law; he has no license to violate laws he has already established and given to us as inexorable (if, indeed, he has had anything to do with it all). I wish I could express myself as to a general power at work through infinitesimal space. I am wholly unable to give it form, and yet I am inclined to think that it has brought us into existence, and will take care of what remains when our forms are changed by death, and we are ready for what comes next. I would like the ideas of the Editor and readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER. I am quite well aware that no definite answer can be given, but we must not forget what science teaches. A thing once created can never be destroyed; whence, then, is the thinking part, the better part of man, going? It exists, and since we can't destroy it, how shall we dispose of it?

Now, once more: I have a dog—a great Dane. He loves me and he is full of gratitude. He is big enough to eat a man up, and he would do it if one attempted to injure me. Why? Because I never spoke a cross word to him, nor abused him. I have aroused his gracious instinct, and he responds by loving me. What is to become of him when he dies? We cannot ignore the fact that the dog thinks; why, he lies here on the floor by me now, and rolls his eyes toward his master, showing how plainly he knows me and what he would do for me. He exhibits as much intelligence and more gratitude than nine men out of ten I meet every day. What shall be done with my dog? Is he not entitled to all I am entitled to? And why should the same virtues he revered more under one title than under another? I mean to say that "man" is no better than "dog," as far as the name goes; it is the principle and intelligence that count, and place us on a plane higher than the dog; and yet all men are classed together, when the only advantage some voters to-day have over my dog is that they can speak English; but they lack love, gratitude, and intelligence. Now, as a Freethinker, I am entitled to speak as I have; no one can deny the truth of what I have said. I want no answers founded on the Bible. I have just broken loose from that. I only want some one to give me his opinion. It does not call for much of an argument, for I am not addressing myself to Christians. I am talking to Freethinkers, who are willing to discuss the truth of any subject. The term Liberal does not apply to religion alone, but means liberality in everything—freedom, Freethought, and charity. ARTHUR LINCOLN.

The Six Alls.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 18, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: Sixty seven years ago and several years thereafter, a small band of brave men were working with all the knowledge and energy they possessed to create a public opinion, for the purpose of changing the law on the subject of labor. They were not trying to have the word God inserted in the Constitution, or to have Jesus Christ proclaimed the ruler of the nation in order that they might be his representatives, but they were pleading for thousands upon thousands of men, women and children, especially children, of whom I was then one; they were then engaged for years in trying to have ten hours made a legal day's work instead of twelve. One of them was a doctor, and in one of his lectures, which I read in a labor paper, he specified the injuries that were inflicted on the children, especially little girls, by the long hours, close confinement, and other things incidental to the conditions. I fairly shivered on reading that lecture to think of the evils that I and thousands of others like me had to suffer, with no possible means of helping ourselves. The reading of that lecture, with others of like character, made me a thinker, an investigator. I wanted to know why things should be so, and have never ceased wanting to know. At that time and for several years after I had to pass every day a tavern, over the door of which hung a peculiar sign, called the "Six Alls." At the top in the center the king was represented decked in his robes of state, and under was written, "I rule all." On the right-hand side, one beneath the other, stood the doctor and the lawyer; the one said, "I plead for all;" the other, "I cure all." On the left hand, the one beneath the other, were the preacher and the soldier; one said, "I pray for all;" the other, "I fight for all." At the bottom, in the center, stood the workman, dressed in his common garb, who said, "I pay for all;" and truer words were never spoken, as very slight examination will prove. The emperors of Russia and Germany are exhibitions of what the idea of the divine right of kings when carried out can produce; the productions are poverty, ignorance, crime, and war with all its attendant evils. The lawyer, doctor, and preacher are all collegians, and what do they produce? Nothing that we can eat, drink, wear, or be sheltered by. The soldier is the same in that respect, only that he hires himself to kill or be killed—thousands of men in the past few months have thus hired themselves, not from patriotism, but to save themselves from starvation. Now, there are thousands of good men in each of these professions, there can be no doubt. One of the physicians who stood at the head of his profession, Dr. Rush, said if there were fewer physicians there would be fewer deaths, as the practice was very much a matter of experiment. With reference to lawyers, if we attend court during a trial, especially if there is much money in the case, the twistings, turnings, and cross-questioning forcibly remind us of the circumlocution office, of how not to do it, and that men are sometimes hired to make the worse seem the better cause. It is lawyers who formulate our laws, but it is through the voters of the country, the men, that bad laws are allowed to remain on the statute books. The women are not in it; their skirts are clear of that matter. Now, the question to my mind is, What do the seventy thousand preachers produce? They live in fine houses, wear good clothes, have large club-houses to meet in on Sundays, for which they pay no taxes. The question is, What are their labors and the groundwork for their labors and for which some of them receive very large salaries? They say there is a God whom they are serving, that their business is to teach others to serve him; also they say their God has neither body, parts, nor passions—cannot either be seen or felt, yet created the world and all that is in it, man included. They say he is all-wise, yet because the first man and woman ate an apple, he became angry, turned them out of the garden, and cursed them and their descendants forever. A long time after that, although they say he is unchangeable, he changed his mind and became a trio, three in one, and one in three; being, so they say, father, son, and holy ghost; and he concluded that if his son, a part of himself, was killed, his anger would be appeased, and whoever after that believed in the doings of this trio, though their sins were as scarlet, should become white as snow; and whoever did not thus believe should be damned and go to a very warm place, which Dante and Milton have described in glowing colors. This is a ground which preachers have to work from, for which they receive high salaries and exemption from taxation. The soldier is taken from the ranks of the workers; he hires himself to kill, it may be his own father, mother, or friends, if so ordered by his superiors, and to take his chances of being killed. It matters not whether the cause is just or unjust, right or wrong, he has no choice or voice in the matter; he is a mere machine. The working man furnishes supplies for all the rest; he delves in the dirty ground, and from the deep and unhealthy mines brings forth the coal, iron, silver, gold, and minerals of all kinds; builds the palaces, ships, churches, and all other buildings. The tenements and hovels he is allowed to inhabit, if he can pay the rent. He produces by his labor everything which he and all the rest mentioned eat, drink, and wear, and are sheltered by, yet the mass of those whom he thus supplies look upon and speak of him as though he were the scum of the earth. Now, if men can go through college, get their diplomas, still believing the dogmas just mentioned, the fewer colleges we have the better. Instead of the teaching the clergy give, they should tell their congregations that during the past fifty years the inventors, brain workers, and handworkers had made so many improvements that if all men and women who are able produced something useful and beneficial, three hours labor per day would be sufficient to produce all the comforts and luxuries of life, leaving the rest of the time for recreation, rest, or improvement; that at the present time there are thousands of children born in tenement houses and slums of all our large cities who never know what it is to have sufficient food, clothing, or shelter, and for whom there is no adequate provision made for scholastic training; while, at the same time, we have in this country thirty-one thousand millionaires who have become such through the government having allowed them the monopoly of large areas of land, the exclusive possession of the coal, gold, silver, and other mines of all descriptions. These monopolies, with many others, taken in connection with the facilities for producing so much of everything in so little time, have been the means of throwing nearly two millions of workers out of employment, thus turning what should be useful men and willing workers into tramps, dangerous alike in city or country. Our country is at peace, yet, notwithstanding all this poverty and destitution among the producers of wealth, Mr. Herbert, the secretary of the navy, tells us for the year ending June 30, 1893, the expenses were $51,966,074.89. The appropriations for the fiscal year ending June, 1894, were $48,023,525.79. The estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, are $52,846,499.75. The war department is still more expensive, as any of you can certify for yourselves by reading the report of the secretary of war. War is barbarism unmitigated. We had better think deeply on existing evils, and I think we shall come to the same conclusion with the traveler from Altruria to whom Mr. W. D. Howells has introduced us in the Cosmopolitan, that society has arrived at such a condition that nothing but a thorough reconstruction can be of any service. For the future we will do all we can to bring about this desirable end.

MRS. RUTH BRETTELL.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fal River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Swing High and Swing Low.

Swing high and swing low
While the breezes they blow.
It's off for a sailor thy father would go,
And it's here in the harbor in sight of the sea
He hath left his wee babe with my song and with me.

Swing high and swing low
While the breezes they blow!

Swing high and swing low
While the breezes they blow.

It's oh for the waiting as weary days go!

And it's oh for the heartache that smiteth me
When

I sing my song over and over again:

"Swing high and swing low
While the breezes they blow!"

"Swing high and swing low," the sea singeth so.
And it waileth anon in its ebb and its flow,
And a sleeper sleeps on to that song of the sea,
Nor reckoneth he ever of mine or of me!

"Swing high and swing low
While the breezes they blow."

"Twas off for a sailor thy father would go!"

—Eugene Field in Chicago News-Record.

Letter to the Children.

DEAR YOUTHFUL CORRESPONDENTS OF THE CHILDREN'S CORNER: By Editor's permission I will address a letter to you, wishing to prove my kind regards for your endeavors to speak against old ideas which have corrupted the minds of the whole human family for many thousand years. I am a firm believer that youthful worker can do as much to aid the truth seeking cause as the scholarly, learned members who have so much to unlearn and undo, which old ideas and customs have fastened firmly upon them. By the perusal of each one of your letters I am able to learn the kind of influence which exists around you. The expression of your ideas makes me acquainted with you, your parents and teachers; thus your letters are of more than common interest to me. But before I proceed, I must sincerely ask your forgiveness for expressing my mind, October 9th, in a way which would give the impression that your letters were not of interest to me; they certainly are of double interest, or I should not have said I would write to you through the Children's Corner.

When you come to know me better, you will learn that I would not intentionally speak to you in such cruel, deprecating manner, for I know just how easily children's and mother's feelings are hurt. If it would not make so lengthy a letter, and crowd some of you out, I would now tell you a true story of two beautiful children as nature ever made; how they were ruined, one by receiving all the appreciation, and the other receiving none; but the one who did not receive any turned out much the best. The facts in regard to these children are something every mother and child ought to know as a lesson of fairness and equal respect towards children, to learn that no matter how great a difference there may be in children's gifts, each should be equally appreciated, making heaven for all. My hasty way of speaking about the usefulness of your letters brought the circumstances attending these children's lives so vividly before my mind that I will tell it to any of you taking the trouble to write directly to me. I did not intend Miss Wixon to allow what I wrote on a separate slip of paper to be printed; but, in my great haste to get my letter ready to post, and my great anxiety that it should escape the wastebasket, I forgot to tell Miss Wixon my wish.

There is a very good saying, that a miss is as good as a hit, because it brings out a greater power of reasoning. Another saying is that a bad beginning sometimes makes a good ending.

Can we not between us manage to make my mistake push us ahead in truth seeking instead of slackening zeal?

The reason I begged a place in your Corner is, I understand that entirely new ideas, which have not become popular among even a few, are always treated like a poor, sick, deformed little orphan child that no one can stop to notice or care for more than to say, "Poor little unfortunate, let those who have more time attend to you—wants."

Also, I had learned by the experience of twenty-one years that no man would be persuaded by my asking to print such unpopular conclusions as were contained in that letter. Now, I never can thank Miss Wixon enough for granting me the favor I wish all you dear ones would help me thank her by putting forth new energy to make every letter for the Corner speak louder for truth.

I have been a truth seeker for twenty-one years, discarding church ways of teaching, becoming an investigator, with a firm, unabating endeavor to understand cause and effect, arriving at conclusions which I never heard uttered by any human being but myself. This fact is sufficient to make every man, woman, and child hate me and the conclusions, because every set of ruling teachers forget that the greatest number of adherents to conclusions does not prove the conclusions true; as in the case of Galileo, who by careful observation found out that the world turned around every twenty-four hours; not that the sun went around the world as men believed by trusting to old Joshua's ideas. Then they ill-treated Galileo even to shutting him up in prison a great number of years to keep him from expressing his ideas among the people.

I have been ill-treated in every possible way according to this age to keep me from expressing new ideas. Had I room to tell you about it, you could see that I know how to sympathize with every man, woman, and child belonging to the truth seeking order who are real workers.

Dear little correspondents, if any of you have inquisitive natures you will say in your minds: "How did that woman come to form ideas differing in the main from all other people?" It was in this way: I and two others were left at an early age without our kind, loving parents' care, to be separated far from each other, nearly killing us with grief.

A minister and a deacon took charge of selling our estate, thinking it best to hustle business, as we were too young to see to anything; the deacon auctioned away farm and all at a low bid; the minister was the buyer, leaving us almost penniless, enriching themselves and educating their children in grand style, while we, poor orphans, must work early and late without being loved or cared for, only for our labor and our health to serve well. The people I lived with told me it was better for me not to covet education, as I was so poor and would have to work hard all my life. I was not allowed for my labor more than half price, though I was told that I did more work and as well as those having full price. I was often insulted by being told that because I was poor I must expect to have only the very common things, nothing like that which others enjoy. Life grew harder and harder until I became so stricken with grief that it actually spoiled my face and nearly spoiled my natural disposition of good will and confidence.

All this time the craving for knowledge grew stronger and stronger, until life to me seemed unendurable without it. I coveted books and time to read, that I might obtain knowledge from learned people; but I had no means to obtain books or the time to read. I then remembered the saying, "Where there's a will there's a way." Then, all at once, it dawned upon my benighted, crushed mind that I could study humanity and nature in spite of all the opposition of the whole world and yet do all the work demanded of my hands. In a very short space of time it seemed as if every door to knowledge was opened wide before me and as if I were in an entirely new world. Now, after twenty-one years of careful study of these things, I would not exchange what I have learned for the most polished popular education obtainable in the land.

When I begged Miss Wixon to allow my message to be printed in the Corner I had become so discouraged to think that every man, woman, and child's ideas could be represented but mine. I determined that if I failed that time I would beg of no one again; would give up taking THE TRUTH

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES.

THE OLD RELIABLE MARCHAL & SMITH PIANO CO.

Estab. 1859. NEW YORK. [Incor. 1877.]

PIANOS || ORGANS

$150 to $1500. $25 to $500.

WE send a Beautiful Catalogue Free to all who wish to buy. It gives full description of many elegant pianos and organs and tells you how you can in the quiet of your home select an instrument, make your own terms, and have it sent to you for trial with certainty of getting a handsome First-Class Piano or Organ.

You Pay no Agent's Commission, nor middle-man's profit, nor any other needless expense. Every Benefit is Given to You. You get an instrument famous for sweetness and power. Guaranteed for ten years. We were the first to sell on these terms, beginning thirty-four years ago, and we can save you from $50 to $200 if you want a piano or an organ. Send for our Catalogue.

THE MARCHAL & SMITH PIANO CO.,
235 EAST 21ST STREET, NEW YORK.

SEEKER, believing every organized body of teachers orthodox. I knew by experience, if I wrote ideas corresponding with those of the organized body, that in their time and order they would be printed. I never heard of THE TRUTH SEEKER until a little over a year since, then subscribed for it immediately, and on perusal believed I had found friends and an association of ideas. It truly has been a very great source of pleasure to me every week to examine each writer's ideas in regard to seeking truth, aiding me much in the study of human nature, causing me to see that each temperament has a fashion of reasoning befitting itself. In this way it leaves no place for deception or church style of gibbering like parrots and mocking birds, which are always repeating the things which have been taught them.

Dear little truth seekers, kindly let us help each other to come entirely out from church ways.

MRS. S. W. SMITH.

Correspondence.

WEST SUTTON, MASS., Dec. 3, 1893.

MISS WIXON, Dear Friend: As it has been some time since I last wrote to the Corner, I will again take the pleasure of occupying a short space within its columns.

I am sorry to say that there are but very few Freethinkers in this town. Some years ago the town of Sutton supported nine churches. Later one Methodist church was remodeled into a store and post-office, one Baptist church was sold and moved away, and a building in which the Universalists held their services was converted into a dwelling. If the future is judged by the past the churches that now exist will be put to better uses than places of worshiping an imaginary supreme being.

The Baptist church of this place has held what the members are pleased to call a revival for the past three or four weeks, aided by a band of Christian Crusaders with their tambourines. They assembled each evening at the church to pray, sing God's praises, convert the sinners, and revive the backsliders. Although "salvation is free," they took a free offering at each meeting, and their last night here they said the offering of the week had been very small and asked for a thanksgiving offering to the Lord. According to their report they saved about twenty persons from the burning. I suppose they have taken that number of sheep from the goats or transformed the goats into sheep.

During the day they visited the people, but entirely forgot our family. Their answers for many questions were: "Taste for yourself, then you will know." "After you are converted you will understand," and the like. Not very strong arguments. They had salvation song-books and copies of a weekly paper entitled the Herald of Salvation for sale. I will quote part of a letter written by one of the Third Michigan Crusade Band at Brant Center, Mich., concerning infidelity and the growth of the Bible, which was in the Herald of November 18th. In speaking of Chicago, he said:

"We find some here, as well as elsewhere, who try to destroy the Bible and its sacred teachings. 'In less than a hundred years,' said Voltaire, 'Christianity will be swept from the earth and have passed into history.' A century has passed away and Voltaire has passed into history, and not very respectable history either, and his old printing-press is now used to print the word of God, and his house is the headquarters of the Geneva Bible Society. Thomas Paine attacked the Bible with his logic, but, after he had crawled despairingly into a drunkard's grave in 1809, that much maligned book made greater progress than ever. Six million copies in thirty different languages were all that were issued till 1800. In 1880 the statistics of eighty societies with their numerous auxiliaries and agencies gave report of over one hundred and six translations. This does not include the Bibles printed and circulated by private companies.

"OLD SOLDIER (for the Band)."

The Crusaders are now at Manchaug, an adjoining village.

There is a mammoth chasm in the southeastern part of Sutton, called "Purgatory," which attracts visitors and picnic parties. This chasm is about eighty rods in length and the ledges are from thirty to forty feet wide and from five to seventy feet in height. Where the greatest depth is water issues forth from the crevices and hangs in icicles and solid ice in June, although the descent is toward the south. People may enter some rods under the ground, or rocks, and through the cracks drop pebbles, which are heard to fall into the water below. The only pulpit that I ever heard of Satan possessing is said to be situated in this chasm and is called the "Devil's pulpit."

About three years ago I read the New Testament through to my grandmother; she then wished me to read the Old, but, after reading several books, the cruel wars and sacrifices shocked her sensitive nature, and she requested me to desist reading it. I then read to her of Mr. George Bancroft, which seemed a pleasure, they being about the same age. It is now two years since she passed away at the age of ninety-one years and two months.

Among other books, I have read "All In a Lifetime," and "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" both of which I think attractive and lifelike. We have "A Thoughtless Yes" and "Pushed by Unseen Hands" in our Public Library. I am now reading "Bible Morals" and "Men, Women, and Gods," in which I am becoming interested. I am anticipating reading "Four Hundred Years of Freethought," for which I have subscribed.

I observed in Lucifer that Watson Heston is in cramped circumstances, and, in return for the aid he has given the Liberal cause, I hope the Liberals will hasten to relieve his embarrassment.

I have read "Woman: Four Centuries of Progress," which I highly esteem. I wish that all women might read it, for I believe it would do them much good.

I was seventeen years of age on the 17th ult. I shall endeavor to increase my knowledge much more during the next seventeen years that I may be able to lend a helping hand to the Freethought cause, and, according to my best judgment, do as nearly right as possible, not merely in fear of the hereafter, but because it is right to do right.

Ever your Liberal friend,

LUCY W. PHELPS.

[We are proud of such young ladies as Lucy, and pleased when they remember the Corner to which they were welcomed in childhood.—ED. C. C.]

What the Little Folks Are Saying.

A little girl of five years recently used the expression "postmortem judgment." Upon her brother's questioning her and insisting that she should define it, she said: "Well, if you do a thing and then afterward wish you had done another thing, that's postmortem judgment."—Journal of Education.

Boston mother: Tommy, if you don't keep quiet I shall be compelled to whip you very hard. Thomas (at six)—Mother! How illogical. Does it not occur to you that a severe castigation will only have the effect of increasing the volume of sound I may be producing.—Chicago Record.

New Publications.

New Publications.

Pleasure and Progress.

AN ATTEMPT TO PROVE THAT

The Pursuit of Pleasure is the Sine Qua Non of Intellectual, Moral, and Social Development, and that The Promotion of Pleasure is the Duty of Philanthropy and Statesmanship.

By Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.

CONTENTS:

- BOOK I.—PLEASURE: Chap. I.—Sources of Pleasure. Chap. II.—Material Pleasures. Chap. III.—Ideal Pleasures. Chap. IV.—Social Pleasures. Chap. V.—Pleasures of the Savage, the Barbarian and the Civilized. Chap. VI.—Genesis of religions. Chap. VII.—Christianity.
- BOOK II.—INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT: Chap. I.—Purpose of life. Chap. II.—Material Pleasures. Chap. III.—Ideal Pleasures: Knowledge. Chap. IV.—Ideal Pleasures: Reason. Chap. V.—Ideal Pleasures: Character. Chap. VI.—Social Pleasures. Chap. VII.—Pedagogical Despotism.
- BOOK III.—MORAL DEVELOPMENT: Chap. I.—Morality. Chap. II.—Material Pleasures: Prudence. Chap. III.—Material Pleasures: Refinement. Chap. IV.—Ideal Pleasures: Foresight. Chap. V.—Ideal Pleasures: Civilization. Chap. VI.—Social Pleasures. Chap. VII.—Vice Caused by Restraint.
- BOOK IV.—SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT: Chap. I.—Progress. Chap. II.—Protection, Capitalism, and Socialism: Respectively an Actual, an Imminent, and a Proposed Violation of Individual Sovereignty. Chap. III.—Condition of Agriculture. Chap. IV.—Public Schools, the Mene, Mene, Tekel of Socialism. Chap. V.—Province of Government. Chap. VI.—Our Social Disorder.

Here are some of the verdicts on this remarkable production which have been rendered by men who are in every way qualified as judges of books:

This is a spirited, rattling sort of a book that skates right along over the deepest subject without musingly thought whether the ice is thin or not. It answers the greatest question—What is the use, object, motive, purpose, and summum bonum of life, and the real cause and motive of progress?—by one word, Pleasure!—Thaddeus B. Wakeman.

He sharpens a task, also, modern methods of education, and in this he is most abundantly borne out by the facts, an indictment is practically unanswerable. His book is altogether a curious and suggestive one.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The man who wrote this book knows how to write a book, and knows what he is writing about. There is not a padded sentence in the volume, not an attempt to fill up with words for lack of knowledge. The author deals hard blows at shams and falsehoods, and hard blows for realities and truth. We do not see how anyone can read this book and disagree with the leading propositions. The work is good; every chapter is worth reading. It is a work of common-sense Socialism. The chapter on public schools ought to be put into a tract and sent to every teacher in the land. Thousands of sentences are worthy of being framed as political maxims and hung up all over the nation. The book deserves a wide reading, not only for its literary style, which is clear and incisive, but for its bold, honest sayings.—L. K. Washburn.

Here we have a philosophy up to date, the advance word of the progressive thinker; not a dry, abstruse discourse, but a common-sense essay in plain words upon the conduct of life, and illustrated with such an abundance of anecdotes and maxims as add real entertainment to solid instruction. This is an important book striking at superstition and unreason, able tradition, and upholding individual liberty in defiance of governmental law and social custom. After reading this book one feels that the author will never be able to write another, for he has put all his life and knowledge into his one. Every page bristles with points; there is no padding or filling in, no mere literary embellishment; but clean-cut apothegms abound, and every line is dictated by hard-headed common-sense.—Capt. Robt. C. Adams.

After you read this book you will be as enthusiastic in praise of it as are the eloquent editor of the Investigator and the gallant President of the Canadian Secular Union.

"Pleasure and Progress" has 398 pages, is splendidly printed from large, clear type, on excellent paper, and costs, bound in cloth, $1; paper covers, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Pl., New York N. Y.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS,

AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAITS OF THE DESIGNER.

The Illustrations are classified as follows:

- | | |
|---|--|
| 16 represent Uncle Sam and the Priests. | 2 represent Samples of Christianity's Work |
| 2 " The Church Robbing the People. | 5 " Missionaries. |
| 3 " Thank-giving. | 1 " The Lord's Instruments. |
| 6 " Sabbath Laws. | 25 " Bible Doctrines and Their Results. |
| 14 " Children and the Church. | 1 " The Church and Slavery. |
| 10 " Woman and the Church. | 2 " Priests and Politics. |
| 6 " The Church and Thomas Paine. | 4 " Ireland and the Church. |
| 4 " Studies in Natural History. | 2 " Church's Idea of Civilization. |
| 3 " The Bible and Science. | 1 " The Uses of the Cross. |
| 15 " The Clergy and Their Flocks. | 4 " Unkind reflections on the Church. |
| 1 " Pietism in Our Penitentiaries. | 9 " Persecutions of the Church. |
| 4 " The Atonement Scheme. | 12 " So-called Allegories. |
| 4 " The Lord and His Works. | 3 " Heaven. |
| 2 " Prayer. | 6 " Hell. |
| 10 " The Creeds. | 7 " Miscellaneous. |
| 1 " Christians and Mohammedans. | |

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Art is Heston as a portrait painter and designer is a wonderful success, and to judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of his volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter, the first of which are explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the truthfulness of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

New Publications.

New Publications.

PEN PICTURES OF THE WORLD'S FAIR.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

A Full Description of the Fair, Invaluable as a Guide-Book and still more Invaluable to those who cannot attend. It tells WHAT TO SEE and WHERE TO SEE IT; gives rates of admission to the various attractions of the Fair and cost of living in Chicago, with other useful information to the visitor.

It is, besides being a complete Guide-Book, the best description of the Fair yet given—poetic, beautiful, accurate. It describes the inauguration ceremonies, gives the director-general's address, the efforts to close the Fair Sundays and the triumph of the Sunday-openers; describes the various buildings and what they contain, and is, all in all, the very best picture of the Fair that can be painted with a pen.

ILLUSTRATED.

A MAP OF JACKSON PARK, enabling the visitor to make his way around, and the stay-at-home to see where he went.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE FAIR, enabling one to comprehend at a glance the magnitude of the Exposition, the greatest ever known to the present time.

PICTURES OF ALL THE PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS:

Woman's Building.	Art Palace.	Fisheries Building.
Administration Building.	Manufactures and Liberal	Agricultural Building.
Electrical Building.	Arts Building.	Transportation Building.
Machinery Hall.	Mines and Mining Building.	Horticultural Building.
	Forestry Building.

A visitor to the Fair says of this book—reading it in THE TRUTH SEEKER—that it is charming and to one who has seen the Fair vastly entertaining.

Single copy, 25 cents. Five copies for $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

FACTS AND FICTIONS OF LIFE.

CONTENTS.

Preface.	Sex in Brain.
The Fictions of Fiction.	Heredity in Its Relations to a Double Standard of
A Day in Court.	Morals.
Thrown in With the City's Dead.	Divorce and the Proposed National Law.
An Irresponsible Educated Class.	Lawsuit or Legacy.
The Moral Responsibility of Woman in Heredity.	Common Sense in Surgery.
Woman as an Annex.

At the Woman's Congress at Chicago Helen Gardener delivered as an address one of the chapters of this book. The Chicago Times said of it and her: "But the last address, dealing with the most delicate of the problems of reform, clear, unhesitant, modest, but uncompromising, was listened to with breathless interest by the audience. It was 'Heredity in Its Relation to a Double Standard of Morals,' and it was delivered by the one woman of all others best qualified to speak upon that subject—Helen Gardener. Petite, graceful, eloquent with the burden of her thought, Miss Gardener enchaind every auditor, and when she had finished received a perfect ovation, which her courage and devotion had so worthily won. The evening session was highly interesting, but that of the morning will be set down on the tablet of the memory of those present as one of the distinctively great features of the week's congress."

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EVERY Woman Ought to Read It. Every LIBERAL Woman and Man Will Want It.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE.

By Matilda Joselyn Gage.

This is Mrs. Gage's latest and crowning work. It is THE book to show how the church has enslaved woman and kept and keeps her in an inferior position. A glance at its contents will show this:

The first chapter—the Matriarchate—shows that under the old civilization woman had great freedom, but that the tendency of Christianity from the first was to restrict her liberty. In this chapter Mrs. Gage claims that to the Matriarchate—or Mother-rule—the world is indebted for its first conception of inherent rights.

Chapter II deals with the theological dogmas of original sin and celibacy. Woman, by the church, was not regarded as a human being; marriage was looked upon as vile; wives were sold as slaves; women driven to suicide; the influence of the church was unfavorable to virtue. The celibacy of the clergy produced degradation, sensuality, and woman was the victim of these brutes.

Chapter III is on The Canon Law, showing how the church controlled woman by making the legitimacy of marriage depend upon its own control of the ceremony. Ancient civilization gave place to Christian barbarism, the clergy became a distinct body—at once a "holy" and an unholy caste. Learning was prohibited to women, husbands prohibited from leaving them more than one-third of their property; daughters could be disinherited, sons could not. The Reformation effected no change.

Chapter IV—Marquet—is on Feudalism and its degradation of women, the rights of "lords spiritual," the immorality of the heads of the church, baptism of nude women in the early Christian church. It also deals with some of the later-day abuses of females, like our Northwestern pinneries, the English debaucheries, governmental crime-makers, etc.

Chapter V—Witchcraft. In the days of this phase of religious insanity Mrs. Gage shows how the possession of even a little learning was sufficient cause to suspect a woman of witchcraft, that to keep a pet was dangerous, so rabid were the clergy not to suffer a witch to live. This persecution for witchcraft was a continuance of the church's policy for obtaining universal dominion over mankind. Women physicians of the Middle Ages were persecuted, and the "Pilgrim Fathers" continued it in America. The first synod convened in America was to try a woman for heresy, and others were stripped and whipped for not agreeing with the clergy.

The chapter on "Wives" shows how the disruption of the Roman empire was unfavorable to the personal and proprietary rights of woman—at the sale of daughters was practiced in England seven hundred years after it was Christianized—that the practice of buying wives was regulated by law—that women were not permitted to read the Bible—that they were not admitted as witnesses—that civil marriage is opposed by the church.

In Chapter VII is shown how polygamy was sustained by the Christian church, that the first synod of the Reformation convened to sanction this institution, that Luther and the other "principal reformers" favored it, as well as the American Board of Foreign Missions. The Mormon theocracy is shown to be similar to that of other Christian sects.

In the last three chapters Mrs. Gage treats of the opposition of the church to the amelioration of woman's sufferings as interference with her "curse," of woman's degradation by the church to labor unfit for slaves, of woman's "inferiority," as taught by the church to-day, and of how little value Christianity has been and is to civilization.

The work is a burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It is also extremely valuable as history. No woman, it seems to us, can read it and remain a supporter of the religious institution which has crushed her individuality, her mentality, and degraded her person. To the woman's cause it opens an Age of Reason. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do.

In cloth, $5; in half-leather binding, $8. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity. As a book of reference and aid to all truth seekers it is invaluable. Its classification of subjects makes it a hand-book. As Ingersoll said of it in every village to "corner the parson." Its wide variety of subjects include all the disputed points between Christianity and Freethought. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

DESIGN ARGUMENT FALLACIES.

A Refutation of the Argument That Nature Exhibits Marks of Having Been Designed by an Intelligent Being.

SYNOPSIS:

- I. The Design Argument Vitiates Itself By Necessitating an Infinite Series of Designers
- II. If There Were a Designer He Could Not Be Beneficent.
- III. If There Were One He Could Not Be Wise, for
 - His Processes Are Egregiously Slow,
 - They Are Egregiously Wasteful,
 - They Often Serve No Use,
 - They Have Produced Faulty Mechanisms.
- IV. What Is Called Design Is Only Subserviency; and the Watch Argument Is Illegitimate.
- V. What Actually Did Cause So-Called Design.
- VI. Astronomy and Design
- VII. The Argument of a First Cause.

Embracing a Succinct Exposition of Evolution and a Sketch of Astronomy.

BY THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Price 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

Agents Wanted!

We believe that not only can good be done but money made by any Liberal who will canvass for our book "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." In fact we know one man who worked at it but a few hours weekly and so nearly fifty copies in a month. The price is low; everybody knows the Old Testament stories, and nearly everybody would like a book applying nineteenth-century wit and knowledge to them. People like to laugh. Reverence for the Old Testament tales has largely disappeared and jokes at the expense of Jonah and Joseph and Esau and Samson and David, and the other worthies of unsavory reputation, are keenly appreciated. It seems to us that the book will sell at sight. It does here in the store. Literals out of employment will find this a good way to make an honest dollar.

Terms to Agents Sent on Application.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BRAIN AND BIBLE; OR THE CONFLICT BETWEEN MENTAL SCIENCE AND THEOLOGY.

By EDGAR C. BEALL, M.D.,

with a preface by

R. G. INGERSOLL.

This is the only work of its kind in the literature of Freethought. Its arguments are based upon scientific phrenology, and appeal directly to the reader's sense of logic and love of justice. It is eloquent as well as convincing.

Price, cloth, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

COSMIAN HYMN-BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

FOR

Liberal and Ethical Societies
for Schools and
the Home.

—With Music Written to All the Songs.—

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.
Price, $1.50. For sale at THIS OFFICE.

Not for Parsons.

REV. DR. PRIMROSE: "That's a fine bird you hav." Uncle Rastus: "'Tis, sah; cun-sidderin' dat I picked him out in sech a hurry."—Judge.

"Lot journeyed wearily on," said the parson, "with the fate of his poor wife fresh in his memory." "How could that be," his little son asked him after the sermon, "when she was salt?"

"W'en yo' start on de slide toe perdition, bredder," said Uncle Moseby, "yo' 'll fin' de bo'nds greased; but yo' won't fin' dat anybody's took de pains toe shabe off de slibbers!"—Puck.

MERRITT: "How did you get square with the minister?" Brown: "He had been lecturing me about gambling all summer, so when I won a turkey at a raffle I invited him to dinner."—Judge.

DEACON HUMSTED: "I traded the old hoss I had last year off with Squire Keeler." Mr. Murray Hill: "Did the squire know the horse was blind?" Deacon Humsted: "Certainly, arter he'd had him awhile."

FIRST GREEN GOODS MAN: "How is it you hav so many more replies to your circulars than I?" Second Green Goods Man: "Oh, I and the religious newspapers swap mailing-lists regularly."—Kate Field's Washington.

THE Rev. Mr. Munhall, of Philadelphia, has been scoring the World's Fair by saying it was a "cursed thing" and had "done the devil's work." We suppose that was the good parson's way of saying it was a devil of a success.—Springfield (Ill.) Monitor.

In a town near Rose, in the Highlands, the bellman made the following proclamation: "O Yes, O Yes, O Yes, and that's three times! Ye'll all pre tak notis, that ther'll pre no Lord's-Day next Sabbath, because the Laird's wife wants ta Kirk ta dry her claes in! O Yes, O Yes, O Yes! Got safe ta Queen!"

At the American chapel at Lucerne, a Protestant Episcopal minister from America (Low Church) read the lessons with such naturalness of manner and propriety of emphasis as to elicit the admiration of a visitor, who afterward remarked: "How delightful to hear the scriptures read with such sense and feeling!" She was surprised to hear the sister of a (High Church) rector, American also, exclaim: "I can't agree with you. I think it almost blasphemous for a man by such stress and emphasis to impose his own interpretation on the word of God. The scriptures should be read in monotone."

SOME years ago a middle-aged agricultural laborer called upon the session clerk of Alloa and asked him what the charge was for publishing the "cries"—i. e., bans of marriage—three times on the same Sunday. "A pound," replied the clerk. "Aye," said the other, "an' what d'ye tak' when ye tak' two Sundays to doe't?" "Half a guinea," was the reply. "An' what d'ye charge when ye tak' three Sundays to't?" was the rustic's next query. "Seven and six," answered the clerk, with an amused air. "Aye, man," rejoined the querist, "I see the langer ye tak' to dae't the cheaper it gets. Just cry awa' till ye pay yersel'!" And he took his departure without more ado.

THIS is a Scotchman's prayer: "O Lord what are we in thy sicht this nicht? a wheen puir casieosies. Gie us a blessin' this ae time; its no' aften we bother you. Gie us a wee wark and big wages, an' a breed an' cheese like Ben Nevis and whusky like Loch Long. Gie us bull's pork, sheep's beef, an' calf's mutton, an' a new-born egg, till better meats be ready. Send a blessin' down the lum, an' bless the kail pat an' the Duke of Argyle, the Lord God of the Hielans; an' keep us frae a' the ghaists and wutches and lang-nebbed things that crawl among the heather. Build a big wa' between us an' the deil, an' a far bigger ane between us an' the wild Eerishmen, an' put broken bottles on't."

THE late Henry de Mille, who collaborated with David Belasco in a number of plays, used to tell this story: "I once had an opportunity in a play Dave and I had written, to make use of the third verse of Psalm xciv., 'Lord, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph?' The actor who had this to speak came to me at rehearsal, one day, and objected to the line, which he said he considered very weak. He concluded his objections by asking if I was 'stuck' on the line. I said I rather liked the line, but had no personal interest in it, as in this instance I was only an adapter, the line being David's. 'David's eh?' exclaimed the actor; 'that's just what I thought. Any one could spot that for some of Dave Belasco's bad English.'—Sun.

PRESENTS :: FOR THE :: HOLIDAYS.

In selecting Holiday Presents for their friends, Liberals should remember that good books make lasting impressions, and please as well every day in the year. A Liberal book in the right hands often changes the views of several persons.

We have quite a number of books appropriately bound for Holiday purchasers, and we will pack them carefully so they can go any distance in the mail, or by prepaid express. The following are all good books for the purpose:

The Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book, in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $2.50. In plain boards, $2.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated in cloth, with gold lettering and side stamp, for $1.50. In plain boards, $1.

Around the World, by D. M. Bennett, 4 volumes, red cloth covers, $6.50; leather, red edges, $9.50; morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers, 1,075 pages. 8vo. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3 per volume, or $5 for the two volumes; in leather, $7; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.

Ingersoll's Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; tree calf, $9.

Ingersoll's Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1,141 pages. In one volume, half calf, $5.

Life. A Prose Poem. By R. G. Ingersoll. In color, on boards, beveled, gilt edges, 50 cents.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50 cents.

Photograph Cabinet of R. G. Ingersoll. 50 cents.

Apples of Gold, by Miss Susan H. Wixon. Gilt stamp. $1.25.

All In A Lifetime, by Miss Wixon. $1.

Voltaire's Romances, Profusely Illustrated.

Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Darwin and After Darwin. By George J. Romanes. Silk cloth, gilt top, $2.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Conway's Life of Paine. Two large, handsome volumes. The best and only complete life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $5.

Part n's Life of Voltaire. Of which the same can be said as of Conway's Life of Paine. Half calf, $10; in cloth, $6.

Woman, Church, and State. By Matilda Joselyn Gage. Leather, $3; cloth, gilt top, $2.

History of Christianity, Comprising all that relates to Christianity in the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Half calf, $4; vellum cloth, $2.

Force and Matter. By Professor Ludwig Buchner, M.D. Half calf, $3; vellum cloth, $1.50.

Dynamic Theory of Life and Mind. By James B. Alexander. Cloth, $2.75.

Lessons From the World of Matter and the World of Man. By Theodore Parker. Cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

Asleep and Awake. A new Liberal novel. By Raymond Russell. Cloth, side and back stamp, $1.

Cosmian Hymn Book. With music to all the songs. Edited by L. K. Washburn. Cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

For Other Books See the Advertisements, or Send to Us for a Free Catalogue.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Gems of Thought.

THE love that is dumb until it speaks on a tombstone doesn't say much.—Ram's Horn.

POLITICS seem to have been designed for those who have no profitable business to attend to. It is the refuge for idlers.—Galveston News.

WHAT can we do? Open man to man—show that intentions may shake hands across the paltry objections of statistics and laws of party and church. Old axes are rusty—the edge is lost. Shall we covet new axes for fresh uses of spiritual headmen? Linger not near the block. Come into the open fields, away from the sophistications of ancestral myths.—Horace L. Traubel.

Jews have become the scapegoats of an offense that would be visited upon nine out of ten radical Freethinkers, if individuals could not more successfully escape the attention of bigot mobs than communities with regular and organized systems of worship. Unitarian synagog-members pay a penalty which isolated converts of David Strauss manage to evade, for the same reason that individual skeptics disregard the Sabbath laws with an impunity that is denied to a colony of Seventh-day Baptists.—Felix L. Oswald.

WHEN Mr. Noyes reaches Japan he will find that he is "carrying coals to Newcastle," for his enlightened theology already prevails in Japan. During the late Parliament of Religions I had the pleasure of meeting, at the house of a friend, some Buddhist bishops from Japan, and I spent some hours in conversation with them on matters of theology. To my delight I found that all of them entertained a "reasonable hope" that God has made some provision by which the Christians who die without any knowledge of Buddha may nevertheless be saved. And I met a Mohammedan who hoped in the same way.—M. M. Trumbull.

SHALL I ask the brave soldier who stood by my side
In the cause of mankind, if our creeds disagree?
Shall I give up the friend I have valued and tried,
If he kneel not before the same altar with me?
From the heretic girl of my soul shall I fly
And seek somewhere else a more orthodox kiss?
Perish the heart and the law that would try Truth, valor, and love by a standard like this!
—Thomas Moore.

In the beginning of the American War of Independence, the two men who above all others recognized the large principles involved, Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Paine, framed a new constitution for Pennsylvania, and thought they were securing absolute religious liberty when they provided religious equality for all who believed in a deity. Probably neither of them had ever met an Atheist, and considered the exception merely nominal. How far short of the supersacred rights of intellectual liberty they had fallen they discovered, no doubt, when they were presently in France meeting philosophers who regarded the King of kings as the figure-head of all royalism. "Who can understand his own errors? Cleanse thou me from my unconscious faults." That was a profound prayer of the old Hebrew. Many a liberal mind, having all the freedom of thought and utterance it requires, may still be sanctioning limitations on the liberty of others, engaged in other departments of thought and action.—Moncure D. Conway.

AND herein lies the true immortality—the immortality of thought, of work. Every true thought, every thorough act, in one way or another, seen or unseen, lives on, moulds the lives of those who come after us, fashions for them, by little or by great, the world in which they shall live. In so far as you have lived truly, in so far shall the heritage you leave behind be rich and noble and great, and in so far will you have helped to build higher the edifice of which in life you form a part. You have reaped where your ancestors have sown; you are the heir to all the literature and science and art, all the beauty and music and poetry of those who have gone, aye, and the heir also to the failings and weaknesses, the littlenesses and vices, of the dead yesterday. But you in your turn can help to lessen the evil heritage and augment the good, and so leave to the future a larger and freer and purer legacy than the past left to you. Surely here is an ideal to place before you; here something far more worthy of attainment than the empty heavens and hells of the creeds. Here is an ideal of beauty and of joy; here the inspiration of love. There you have the inspiration of the creeds—the incentive of selfishness, of salvation, and of hate.—Frederick Ryan.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

IT WILL MAKE YOU
LAUGH.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,

Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak
Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon.

Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excuse,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Published Monthly at $3 per Year.

ISSUES OF 1891.—$3.

	Price.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1891.....	$0 25
Men, Women, and Gods..... Helen H. Gardner.....	50
The Age of Reason. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	25
Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett.....	25
Christian Absurdities. John Peck.....	20
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire.....	10
The Crisis. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Sabbath Breaking. John E. Rensburg.....	25
Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason. Robert C. Adams.....	25
Strike of a Sex. George N. Miller.....	25
My Religious Experience. Samuel P. Putnam.....	25
The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore.....	50
ISSUES OF 1892.—$3.
Infidel Death-Beds. G. W. Foote.....	25
Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illustrated.....	40
Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.....	10
Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardner.....	10
Bible Morals. John E. Rensburg.....	25
Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk.....	50
Pocket Theology. Voltaire.....	25
Why Don't God Kill the Devil? M. Babcock.....	15
Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman, with Funeral Address. By Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	25
Six Lectures on Astronomy. Richard A. Proctor.....	15
Candle From Under the Bushel. Wm. A. Hart.....	40
The Holy Bible Abridged.....	30
False Claims of the Church. John E. Rensburg.....	10
ISSUES OF 1893.—$3.
Thomas Paine Vindicated. Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.....	15
The Creation of God. Dr. Jacob Hartmann.....	50
Crimes of Preachers in the United States. M. E. Billings.....	25
Resurrection of Jesus.....	40
Handbook of Freethought. W. S. Bell.....	50
Religion a Curse; Religion a Disease; Religion a Lie. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Design Argument Fallacies. By Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER.....	15
Abraham Lincoln: Was He a Christian? John E. Rensburg.....	50
Pen Pictures of the World's Fair. Illustrated. S. P. Putnam.....	25
Common Sense. Thomas Paine.....	15
Examination of Prophecies. Thos. Paine.....	15
Pleasure and Progress. Albert M. Lorentz, LL.B.....	50

During the year other standard Freethought works will be published and sent to subscribers as they appear.

Yearly subscribers at $3 receive all the numbers published in one year. In ordering please say which year is desired.

Single numbers sold at prices quoted.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

A new edition of that splendid prose poem, "Life," by "the prince of orators," Col. R. G. Ingersoll. It is larger and better than the old edition, and can be framed or placed upon the table as an ornament. In the center of the card appear the portraits of the Colonel and the baby, truthfully described as, "one of the masterpieces of the orator and poet, who now, as far as we know, stands alone in the living world." It will make a delightful present, and will be a souvenir not only of intellectus greatness, but of artistic workmanship. It is printed on heavy board, gilt boveled edge. The size is 12x16 inches, and the price only 75 cents, post-paid.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cents.

THE HOLY CROSS SERIES.

The Popes and Their Doings. Biographical sketches of the most noted of these vicars of Christ and vicegerents of God, showing what they have done, and what kind of men they were. It contains very plain statements, in very unvarnished language, and the unmasking is complete, proving them to have been cruel, intriguing, and licentious men. Considering the rapid growth of Catholicism in this country, this book cannot be too widely disseminated. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk, as exhibited in a narrative of her sufferings during her residence of five years as a novice, and two years as a black nun, in the Hotel Dieu Convent, at Montreal. Perhaps not any anti-Catholic book published has created more excitement, and had such a circulation as this work. To counteract its effects the Catholics circulated a story that Maria Monk was "no better than she should be," but investigation disclosed that her "child of shame" was none other than the child of her priest-seducer. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Popish Nunneries. By Wm. Hogan, for twenty-five years a confessing priest. A revelation of the licentious practices of the priests and nuns in these religious brothels. There is no question that Ex-priest Hogan knew the truth of the tales of vice, seduction, and infanticide he gives in this volume, and equally there is no question that if the people generally knew of them, Catholicism would not be given the vast amounts of money now allowed it by our various city governments. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Priest in Absolution. A Review of the system of auricular confession, including copious extracts from the "Confessional Unmasked," from the "Master Key to Popery," etc. The work is a protest against and an appeal to every American citizen to examine carefully and thoughtfully a religious system so invasive of privacy, so powerful for evil in licentious hands, so fraught with danger to female modesty, to the ingenuous openness of youth, and to the freedom of thought, speech, and action. Price, paper, 25 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed. A lecture by the Rev. Geo. Townsend Fox, of Durham, England. Revised American edition, showing the result in parishes of the Roman decree that priests shall not marry. Price, paper, 15 cents.

Sister Lucy and Her Awful Disclosures Respecting New Hall Convent, Boreham, Essex, England. Showing that convents are inimical to chastity, virtue, and freedom. Price, paper, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

All in a Nutshell.

By ASA AUGER.

A condensation of the fundamental arguments against Christianity.

A Very Good Little Missionary Work.

Price, 15 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA IDENTIFIED AS THE CHRISTIAN JESUS.

An important and remarkable revelation concerning the life and times of Apollonius of Tyana, the great sage and philosopher of the first century. It is here claimed that his life and teachings were appropriated and utilized by the formulators of the Christian religion in the interest of so-called Christianity. The plagiarism is made plain in this brief history of Apollonius, especially in view of the historical references and comments thereon. It is quite evident that to conceal the plagiarism, the name of Apollonius was suppressed.

Price, 15 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York City.

A NEW WORK

BY ARTHUR B. MOSS,

Author of "The Bible and Evolution."

ENTITLED

Christianity and Evolution.

With preface by J. M. WHEELER, Sub-editor of Freethinker.

Price, $1. Order at once.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

PATENTIS Terms Easy.
Thirty-five years' experience. Examinations and Reports free. Prompt attention. Send Drawing and description to L. RAGAN & Co. 414-416 Washington D.

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silver case, dust-proof cases, $17; 4-ounce coin silver, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $30 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silver case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11; ditto, 17 jewels $15. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $14; 11 jewels, $15.50; 15 jewels, $20; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries. Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons $3.60; knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for sets of 6. Solid silver spoons, $1.35 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more Etched (teas only):

"The Time to be Happy is Now."

50 cents extra.
The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2. $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $3, $4, $5, $15. Charms, $3, $4, $5, $8, $7.50, $9, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds. 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
P.S.—The "Ingersoll Souvenir Spoon" free with every $20 order. 5 with $100 order.

STRONG, HEALTHY MANHOOD

Those Afflicted with Early Decay, Loss of Manhood, Wasting of Strength, and all the various charges, Varicocele, Mental and Physical Debility and who are desirous of being cured, a booklet will be sent to their address for ten cents, sealed in a plain envelope, giving causes and symptoms of the complaints, and a description of the Doctor's important medical discovery—an Outward Application—a positive cure—the only remedy of the kind in existence—with evidences of success. Address,

DR. R. P. FELLOWS,
Say where you saw this ad.

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.
I wish to say that I am an out-and-out LIBERAL, and I trust the Freethinkers of the land will give me their patronage and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors.—Dr. Fellows.

SOME OF GOD'S SOLDIERS.

And, behold, six men came from the way of the higher gate, which lieth toward the north, and every man a slaughter weapon in his hand; and one man among them was clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn by his side: and they went in, and stood beside the brazen altar.—Ezek. ix, 2,

Deutsche Freigeist-Bücher.

Wier haben folgende Bücher in Deutscher Sprache welche sehr berühmt sind.

„Die Irrthümer Moses,“

Eine kritische Beleuchtung des Pentateuch für Widerspruch zur modernen Weltanschauung und Gesittung.

von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 50 Cents.

Das Weib und ihre Stellung zur Religion und Kirche am Ende des 19. Jahrhunderts.

von Helene S. Gardener, Preis 50 Cents.

„Moderne Götterdämmerung,“

von Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Preis 25 Cents.

„Wunder und Wunderthäter,“

von John Peck, Preis 20 Cents.

„Glaube und Vernunft,“

oder LE BON SENS.

des römisch-katholischen Priesters Jean Meslier. Nach dem französischen Original überfetzt von Fräulein Anna Knoop.

301 Seiten, Leinwand, $1.00, Papier, 50 Cts.

Diese Bücher sind in Papier Umschlag und klaren Druck. Unsere Deutschen Leser sollten es weit verbreiten.

Adresse, „The Truth Seeker,“

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, New York.

SURVEYORS, ATTENTION!

A rare chance is offered for a surveyor to get a

TRANSIT CHEAP.

We have one for sale, in good order, with Tripod, which cost $160. We will sell it for half-price—$80. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

$525

Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New articles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. C. A. D. & S. 26 Bond St., N. Y.

1846

Col. R. G. Ingersoll's ARGUMENT

Reynolds Blasphemy Trial, At Morristown, N. J.

This is the greatest argument ever made in a case of this kind, and will be a model for the Bar so long as the Christians use force to repress free speech. Its legal acumen is unsurpassed, its eloquence never equaled. Wherever Christian persecution is going on this argument should be freely circulated, read to the Christians, and expounded on every occasion.

In paper, 25 cents; in cloth, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

METROPOLITAN INFORMATION CONCERN ANSWERS ANY QUESTION

153 BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK. EXECUTES ORDERS 50c. & up. Scientific, Literary, Artistic, Commercial, Legal, Personal. 50c. SEND FOR PLAN & REFERENCES. Among these are Rev. Dr. Gottheil, Henry George, Gordon & Dilworth, New York; Edw. Osgood Brown, Chicago. EACH.

A SMALL Freethought Library, ALL FOR $1.50.

Evolution.

By B. F. Underwood.....Price 6 cents

The World's Parliament of Religions.

By Tenney.....Price 10 cents

The Gods.

By Ingersoll (with likeness).....Price 20 cents

Ingersoll Before The Unitarian Club.....Price 6 cents

Myth of the Great Deluge.

By McCann.....Price 15 cents

Evolution of the Devil.

By Henry Frank.....Price 25 cents

The Bruno Monument in Rome.....Price 12 cents

Church and State.

By "Jefferson".....Price 10 cents

Religion of Humanity.

By Benwell.....Price 15 cents

Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling.....Price 4 cents

Dwight L. Moody.

By Susan H. Wixon.....Price 5 cents

Christian Religion.

By an Old Farmer.....Price 15 cents

God in the Constitution.

By Ingersoll.....Price 10 cents

Effacement of Christianity.

By Holyoake.....Price 10 cents

Life and Career of Bradlaugh.

By Holyoake.....Price 15 cents

Ingersoll's Address on Thomas Paine, Price 6 cents

Standing Up for Jesus.

By H. L. Green.....Price 4 cents

Religion in the Republic.

By M. A. Freeman.....Price 6 cents

Never-Ending Life Assured by Science.

By Tenney.....Price 6 cents

Charles Darwin (Illustrated).

By Flower & Wakeman.....Price 15 cents

Jehovah Interviewed.....Price 6 cents

Cosmology against Theology.

By Vindex.....Price 15 cents

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents. Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents

FREE 16-page Illustrated Book OLD COINS giving date and prices paid for. Send postpaid. National Coin Co., 6ml Clerk 17, 832 Exchange Building, Boston, Mass.

Music Free to You.

We will send 16 Popular Songs, words and music, sentimental, pathetic, and comic, absolutely free if you send 10 cents or three months' subscription to American Nation, our charming illustrated magazine. This music includes Li ti Fisher Maiden, Tarara Boom de ay, I Wattle and Wait for Katie, After the Ball, C. m. rades, Old Madrigal, and 150 other. Bear in mind you shall have this immense quantity by sending 10c. silver. You will be delighted. Address, AMERICAN MUSIC CO., 325 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Darwin and After Darwin.

An Exposition of the Darwinian Theory.

By GEORGE J. ROMANES.

A systematic Exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin, and intended to be of service to the general reader rather than to professional naturalists.

Mr. Romanes is well known as one of the most interesting of English writers upon evolution, besides ranking with Professor Huxley in scientific knowledge and ability. And this is a part of his conclusion regarding the great subject of Design, to which the church so often refers:

"Thus whether we look to the facts of adaptation or to those of beauty, everywhere throughout organic nature we meet with abundant evidence of natural causation, while nowhere do we meet with any independent evidence of supernatural design. . . . Adaptation and beauty are alike receiving their explanation at the hands of a purely mechanical philosophy. . . . All nature has thus been transformed before the view of the present generation in a manner and to an extent that has never before been possible; and inasmuch as the change which has taken place has taken place in the direction of naturalism, and this to the extent of rendering the mechanical interpretation of nature universal, it is no wonder if the religious mind has suddenly awakened to a new and a terrible force in the words of its traditional enemy—Where is now thy God?"

Illustrated. Price, cloth, $2. Address. THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

News of the Week.

It is probable that western Australia will soon follow New Zealand in granting full suffrage to women.

A CAREFUL canvass of this city shows that there are at present here about eighty thousand unemployed men.

WAYNE MACVEAGH, of Pennsylvania, has been nominated and confirmed as ambassador to Italy, vice J. J. Van Alen, resigned.

At Newtown, L. I., the chapel of St. James Episcopal church was stripped of its furnishings by the deputy sheriff to satisfy a debt.

GLADSTONE has again led his party to victory by preventing a vote of censure in the Commons on the condition of the British navy.

EVICIONS for non-payment of rent are becoming quite common in New York. One family was put into the street at 9 o'clock at night.

At the special mayoralty election in Chicago J. P. Hopkins, Democrat, was elected to fill out the unexpired term of Carter H. Harrison.

The situation in Italy is very grave. In addition to other causes of anxiety, a Sicilian deputy declares that that island will pay no more taxes.

A PETITION, carrying the names of 150,000 signers who ask for a national road department, was presented in the United States Senate this week.

The movement in favor of the "Greater New York" is growing stronger. Annexation meetings are being held in Brooklyn, Long Island City, and other places.

PEDLERS in this city may not stop more than ten minutes in one place with their push-carts. As a rule, a thief has a better chance than a poor man who tries to earn his living.

At the by-election in the Acorington division of Lancashire Joseph Francis Leese, Gladstonian, was elected over Herman Hodge, Conservativ, by a vote of 5,822 to 5,564.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has submitted to the Senate and House a special message on the Hawaiian situation. It is a concise statement of the work of the present administration.

DR. HENRY C. F. MEYER, on trial in New York for alleged poisoning of Gustav Baum for insurance money, must be tried again. One of the jurors went insane near the close of the first trial.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Society of American Artists unanimously voted in favor of free art, demanding the removal of all duties on painting and sculpture. This is strong support for the Wilson tariff bill, which removes all such duties.

THE United States grand jury, sitting at Dubuque, has found twenty-eight indictments against Agent Van Leuven for accepting illegal pension fees and making false statements. Indictments are also found against Drs. Pegg and Kissell of the examining board at Ossian, Ia.

A SOCIETY antagonistic to the American Protective Association has been formed in Colorado. It is composed almost entirely of non-Catholics. Its membership is already large. No inquiry is made regarding any man's religious belief. On the contrary, it exists solely to make war on the American Protective Association because the latter makes religious belief a test for fitness for public office and private employment. The new association is called the "Society of Liberty and Loyalty."

In Paris, health is sometimes "protected" in peculiar ways. A dispatch to the Herald gives an instance: "A grand vaccination ceremony took place yesterday [December 20th] at the Ministry of the Interior. A heifer was brought into the courtyard, and the clerks, from the highest to the lowest grade, and all the servants, children, and porters were ordered to be inoculated. The weather was cold and damp, and therefore the exposing of arms until the vaccine took was a trying ordeal."

A BALTIMORE special to the World says: "Rev. D. B. Greigg, of the Twelfth Presbyterian church, who has had trouble with the elders on account of his qualified support of Dr. Briggs and because of his liberal views generally, called a meeting of his congregation together last night, in direct opposition to the command of the Presbytery, and made his defense before it. Resolutions were adopted indorsing the pastor and condemning the elders. If forced out of the church, Mr. Greigg will probably take two-thirds of the congregation with him."